Vandals strike cars in lot 9

□ Several cars parked in University lot 9 were broken into and stereo equipment was stolen.

By BRANDI BARHITE
The BG News

Broken glass and missing stereo equipment brought some students out of bed early Thursday morning. Three University students reported their cars were broken into and several items were reported stolen in Parking Lot 9.

Dick Gullufsen, University police information officer, said all three cars had shattered windows and had items missing. He said three cassette players and two sets of speakers were stolen from the cars.

"This may not be the end of it, so people should watch out," Gullufsen said.

Eric Matz, senior telecommunications major said, "This morning about 11:30 my resident adviser told me (the cars) were vandalized. I went to check and mine was one of them."

Matz said his windows were broken out and his stereo and radio equipment were stolen. He said he noticed between eight and ten cars broken into.

He said he does not believe the car break-ins had anything to do with the recent problems with parking, yet noted the suspects knew what they were doing.

"I felt that the lot was safe because it was in a high-traffic area. It makes me wonder why no one saw or heard anything," Matz said.

Gullufsen said the crime was committed between 12 a.m. and 11 a.m. He said these types of crimes are typically committed between 2 a.m. to 3 a.m. and it is difficult to catch the perpetrators. There are no suspects yet.

"It is hard to find these people. All of the lots are patrolled, but people can see us before we can see them," Gullufsen

Details on the changes

• Company is based in Phoenix, Ariz.

• It will handle the entire BG Call Card Program.

• Billing will go through the company.

• Students will have a $100 credit limit on long distance. After that amount, the card will be deactivated.

Phone service contracted out

□ Student long distance service has been contracted out to Telesoft, Inc.

By MIKE WENDLING
The BG News

You may not have even noticed, but BGSU's long distance telephone service has been contracted out to a private company.

The University has hired Tele-soft, Inc., a company based in Phoenix, Ariz., to handle the BG Call Card program. Student Telephone Services, while sounding like a University department, is actually a branch of Telesoft with offices in University Hall.

Anne-Marie Lancaster, vice provost for technology and chief information officer, pointed out two of the benefits of the new contract.

"This will improve the services and the range of services that can be offered to students, and it also makes the system available to off-campus students," Lancaster said. "We believe it will be more cost effective."

Some hardware has been added, but otherwise the basic University infrastructure has remained unchanged, according to Lancaster. Local and on-campus calling is still handled by the University.

Students now have a $100 credit limit on their long distance bills.

"After they go over that amount, the card will be deactivated," said Amanda Cook, Student Telephone Service customer service representative.

Cook said another reason for the new service was that student phone bills were too much for the University Bursar's office to handle.

The switch to the new system happened in early August.

Telesoft has two full-time employees based in the office at 214 University Hall. Students with the BG Call Card can use it on any on-campus phone, or on any touch-tone phone in the continental U.S., using a special 800

Oak Grove mausoleum destroyed for safety, cost factors

Walking by the southwest corner of the Oak Grove Cemetery, one cannot miss the sights and sounds of construction recently.

For the past six years, the city of Bowling Green has been attempting to tear down the 89-year-old mausoleum. It is finally in the process of being demolished.

Before the mausoleum came under city jurisdiction, it was privately owned. After declining an offer for its donation, the city was court-ordered to take over maintenance of the building, said Colleen Smith, the for-

Heavy flooding prompts rental agency response

□ As a result of the heavy rains, many students are fighting rental agencies about flooding in the apartments.

By CAROLYN STECKEL
The BG News

Last week, many students were faced with water in their apartments as a result of heavy downpours.

While some building managers brought in fans and vacuums to help clear the water from their basements, for some, nothing was said or done about potential damages to personal belongings.

Chris Ross, senior music education major, lives in the row of Campbell Hill apartments where the sump pump failed to turn on.

According to Ross, when they called about the water in their basement, no one from management came to check on them. The pump was simply turned back on, he said.

Residents in that area report having four inches of water in their basements.

"No one has called since the apartments flooded," Ross said.

According to Helen Hernandez, financial director for Newlove rentals, if something similar had happened in Newlove apartments, the students would be responsible for any damages.

"It's in your lease that you have renter's insurance," Hernandez said.

However, according to Chris Ostlawski, leasing agent at Winthrop Terrace Apartments, renter's insurance is only recommended there if you have a water bed on the second floor.

"In the event of damages from a flood, Winthrop Terrace's insurance would cover it," said Ostlawski.

According to Rodney Fleming, managing attorney for student legal services, renter's insurance is a policy much like a home owner's policy.

The insurance is there to protect you from certain problems, Fleming said.

"In the case of the apartments that got flooded, for the residents to get paid for damages by the management would depend upon the negligence of the landlord," Fleming said. "If the landlord did not know that the switch was broken, then he is not at fault. That is where the renter's insurance would come in."

According to Fleming, the policy can be obtained through the parent's home owners policy.

"Most cover students while they are still dependents," he said.

Otherwise, said Fleming, you can contact an insurance agent and get them pretty inexpensively.

"I encourage every student to get renter's insurance," Fleming said.

True freedom means having compassion

I would like to, over the course of several articles, begin an intense meditation about the beliefs and values that we hold in our society. I welcome all responses about what is discussed.

My last article stated that a citizen must hold compassion for suffering. Let's look at the world as it is; through the rubble of bombed buildings, through the blood spray of school children assassinated by their peers, and through the cowardice stench of chemical weapons.

Let's examine the scientific capitalism that thrives off political ignorance and Manifest Destiny. Do we know that our culture is the only one that has turned death into a money making commodity? Do we see that we elect leaders, hoist our own sins upon their shoulders, and then crucify them in the media so that we can feel innocent? Do we agree that unborn children are slaughtered by the thousands because the means to provide stable security is available to only a small percentage of the population? Do we really comprehend that the human mind is limited and because our understanding of this is fragmented, we have created a society of chaos? Recognizing all this, is it possible to have a relationship that is based on compassion?

I don't think we realize how tremendously important it is to have a right relationship. Relationship means to be related to. What are we related to? Obviously we are related to life. Life includes everything known to the mind. This means your family, your school, your county, your state, your country, your God, and even you. All these things have been put together by the mind through time and experience, and they all compose what we call life.

The idea of nationalism is an image put together by thought. Look at a satellite map of the world. There are no divisions there; just land! We create the divisions and live according to them.

The idea of a proper religion is an image. Obviously every person has an idea of a god that is different from every other persons'. That idea is just a further projection of the self. There are a billion Christians, but no two hold the same image of Christ.

We even have images of other people. If I have an image of my girlfriend and she doesn't act according to it, then my own self image is damaged. So we also have images about ourselves that have been constructed through time and experience.

A right relationship is based on the present. Anything in the the past has no basis in the present moment. Here is the crucial question: When we have an image of another person and act through our own self image, can we truly be connecting? Or is it just the interaction between two images?

Most of the time when we discuss freedom, we mean some half-assed ideal sold to us by historical government propaganda meant to keep people from actually thinking. True freedom means to be free of the image. Being free from the image, relationship might come alive and be a creative force that creates a society of order.

Most people aren't concerned with true freedom. They just want a cage and someone to clean it, and wash and feed them. Those people reading this should go back to bed and dream while the world burns in the pyre of human ignorance. Those of you that are serious about understanding why our world is chaos, do me a favor? Don't blow up buildings. Don't single out a particular group and blame them for the ills of society. Rather, step back, breathe, and take a look at yourself. Take a deep, long look at your relationship with the people in your life. Are there images preventing a true communion?

Examine what it means to be free. Is your understanding of freedom just another idea that was slipped to you during feeding time so you'd forget the walls of the cage were there? When true freedom exists (if it exists), is there a spark of compassion that changes the world completely? Find out for yourself.

High Schoolers not ready for college

They're everywhere! High school students taking college classes, that is.

The program is called post secondary options (PSEOP), and there are 110 students currently on campus. Yes, only 110. These high school students come from the area high schools, and this year they're coming from every-grade level, 9-12.

In the previous years, only high school juniors and seniors could take advantage of this opportunity. The state covered everything but parking passes, ID fees, and extra supplies (if you were taking a theater make-up class, they would not buy the make-up). The state even paid for the books. The students got full college credits, and high school credits (if applicable).

This year, though, a change has been made. Now the full range of high school students who meet the requirements are able to take college classes.

Freshmen, sophomores, juniors, and seniors. From high school. In your classes. Now, I can't be anti-PSEOP; as a former PSEOP student, I know that it's a great program and I commend (and thank) whoever thought it up. I don't object to having high school upperclassmen in my classes. If they're there, they're smart enough to succeed (or they'll fail, pay for the classes and books, and not return the next semester). But besides that, I think it makes the transition from high school to college that much easier.

I was completely comfortable (and more than a little bored) with my freshman registration the summer before I entered BGSU as a full-time student.

However, I have a problem with the idea of having high school freshmen and sophomores in a class with me. Not because they couldn't handle the academics; I'm sure that if they take the right classes, they'll pass with flying colors. (That's kinda sad, isn't it? That high school freshmen could pass introductory courses here with no problems, and maybe even with better grades than the full-time college students?) My problem is that high school is a place to grow up. I remember my sophomore Human Biology teacher telling my class that of all the grade levels he sees (9-12), the one that changes and matures the most (in the sense of mentality) from the beginning of the year to the end is tenth grade.

I also remember what it was like to be an underclassman in high school.

I had my circles of friends, all of them strange in some aspect and inspiring (which was important to a blooming novelist). We laughed at absolutely anything that had to do with sex. In fact, someone in my ninth grade English class asked what "erotic" meant, and that sent everyone who knew the word into peals of laughter. Even the people who didn't know it laughed, because I know not everyone knew the word, and everyone was laughing. (I will admit that I thought I knew what the word meant, but I did go home and look it up, just to make sure; and, yes, I was correct.)

Fitting in and acceptance was a big deal, too. It takes an awfully confident soul to stray from the conformity of junior high and early high school. Trying to blend in with the crowds in high school (at least in my little high school) is much easier than trying to blend in with a university population's variety of styles. There's never one precise crowd to follow. I knew very few people in high school that were daring enough to go their own way, and they were persecuted.

There is a reason that college is separate from high school, and there's a reason that it takes a few years of high school to move beyond, to college or a job in the real world. High school underclassmen are not ready for the type of interactions that go on at the college level. They don't think ideas through. Even now, as a junior, I don't think everything through as critically as I should, and there's no way I thought as much in high school as I do now. I don't even think I was capable of deeper thinking; I was still learning the basics. So why invite high school underclassmen who haven't finished the fundamentals of a high school education to overwhelm themselves on university courses? These kids aren't even old enough to drive.

PREACHER ON DRUGS

Preacher admits to trading drugs for sex

NORWALK, Ohio (AP) — A minister who admitted to trading crack cocaine for sex has pleaded guilty to drug charges.

Robert Barnett, 74, pleaded guilty to trafficking in cocaine, possession of cocaine and misdemeanor assault. Huron County Common Pleas Judge Earl McGimpsey accepted the pleas Monday and plans to sentence Barnett next month.

Barnett was pastor of the 30-member Bellevue Revival Center until July 23 when he told the church's board he needed a leave of absence.

Shortly after that meeting ended, he went to Fremont to buy crack cocaine, police said. When he returned home, police and sheriff's deputies arrested him. Police said undercover officers had twice bought crack from Barnett.

Barnett said he gave crack to a woman in exchange for sex for as many as eight years. He said he began smoking crack with her about a month before his arrest.

Barnett remained free on bond. He could not be reached Wednesday. There was no telephone listing for him in the northwest Ohio area.

SETTLEMENT

City agrees to pay $600,000 in girl's death

TOLEDO (AP) — The City Council has agreed to a $600,000 settlement with the parents of a 9-year-old girl killed in a crash with a speeding police patrol car.

The council approved the settlement in the death of Shannon Incorvaia on Tuesday night.

Officer Brian Lewandowski, who was chasing a stolen car, ran a red light at 60 mph in a 35-mph zone and his patrol car collided with another July 6, 1995.

Incorvaia, who was a front-seat passenger in the other car, died of severe head injuries.

A departmental investigation concluded that Lewandowski, now 35, failed to make sure that the intersection was clear before running the red light, a violation of police policy. The department suspended Lewandowski for three days.

The occupants of the stolen car were driving on a street parallel to Lewandowski, who was attempting to cut them off.

In response to the girl's death, the department this year adopted a new policy that bars officers from exceeding the speed limit during so-called "parallel pursuits."

Swissair jet crashes off Nova Scotia

A jetliner headed to Geneva crashed killing 229 people.

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Minute by agonizing minute, the scene played itself out as the unthinkable happened again: A jetliner carrying more than 200 people crashed after taking off from Kennedy International Airport.

While rescuers searched the cold waters of Nova Scotia through the night for survivors of Geneva-bound Swissair Flight 111, friends and family began arriving at the airport in early morning blackness to begin a desperate vigil, hoping against hope to hear that their loved ones were alive.

Swissair said there were no survivors.

The jetliner with 229 people aboard crashed off the coast of the southeastern Canadian province late Wednesday, about an hour into the flight. The pilot had reported smoke in the cockpit and attempted an emergency landing at Halifax International Airport.

Rabbi Edgar Gluck, a Port Authority police chaplain, said six or seven families gathered at an airport hotel.

"Right now they're still in denial because that's the normal reaction," he said. He described them as in subdued shock, trying to make sense of what happened. Michelle Auster, a spokeswoman for the Red Cross, similarly described the families: "They're in a state of shock."

The rabbi said he counseled relatives to "hold themselves together."

When they first arrived at the airport early this morning, friends and relatives of those on board watched news of the crash trickle in on televisions Delta Air Lines set up for them in its first-class lounge. Delta, which sold some tickets on the flight under an agreement with Swissair, also sent crisis counselors.

"There appears to be a tragedy unfolding off the coast of Nova Scotia," Manuel Sager, deputy consul general for the Swiss Consulate in New York, said as he arrived at the airport today.

Mayor Rudolph Giuliani told reporters that he met with three people who lost loved ones in the crash, including a friend of his whose brother was on Flight 111.

"He's very distraught, obviously," Giuliani said from a command center set up at a Ramada Inn hotel near the airport.

The scene at Kennedy was reminiscent of another summer night two years ago. Paris-bound TWA Flight 800 crashed into the Atlantic minutes after takeoff from Kennedy on July 17, 1996. All 230 people aboard died.

Government officials were going over the manifest with airline officials and notifying families early today, said Inspector Anthony Infante of the Port Authority Police Department. No names were released. The Port Authority of New York and New Jersey operates the airport.

Red Cross workers also were standing by to help families that were gathering in the Delta lounge. The city Department of Mental Health and Delta also sent counselors.

for the Red Cross of Greater New York, cited the lessons of Flight 800 in handling the tragedy.

"Something we learned with (TWA) Flight 800, these people are overwhelmed when they come in," he said. "These are people, all of whom have lost somebody. They all react differently."

Early reports said most of the passengers were believed to be Swiss, but Philippe Bruggisser, chief executive officer of Swis-sair's parent group, said later that 137 Americans were killed — 136 passengers and one crew member.

Delta said Flight 111 was carrying 53 passengers who got their tickets through Delta and a Delta flight attendant.

As the night wore on, a distraught gray-haired man in a white T-shirt and blue jeans pushed his way through about 70 reporters. The man would not give his name but told reporters, "I know somebody on this flight" before police escorted him inside the terminal.

A middle-aged man wearing a gray suit told reporters he had put his wife and two daughters on the plane. As reporters flocked around him asking questions, police escorted him into a police car and drove him behind the terminal, out of view.

Gullfusen said the University is a tempting spot for car crimes because of the large number of vehicles in a central location. He said it could have been a high school student or an out-of-town visitor looking for some quick cash.

The perpetrators are usually after stereo equipment and will sell it at a cheap price. They also know how to avoid the police. Car break-ins generally occur in cycles and students need to take precautions, Gullfusen said.

"People can protect themselves by removing all valuables from their cars or putting them in their trunk," Gullfusen said.

He also advised not to leave car titles in the car and he recommends reporting any suspicious behavior in the parking lot. He said cars without decals or cars that are driving slowly could be suspicious.

David Kowaleski, junior psychology major, said he no longer thinks the parking lots are a safe place to park. He said his windows were broken out and everything valuable was removed.

"This was planned. They had time to do it," Kowaleski said.

According to Mike Katz, Telesoft employee, the revenues from the long distance system will go to the University; to Telesoft, which charges the University a flat fee; and to AT&T, which subcontracted the BGSU system to Telesoft.

The company handles long distance services for about 80 schools and colleges, according to Dan Hayden, a company employee who handles the BGSU service.

Students may have had occasional problems accessing an outside line last week. Lancaster said that those problems are not due to Telesoft; rather, the large number of students, especially those calling home, is probably to blame.

"We will watch the situation carefully to see if some new lines need to be added," she said.

Students with questions about the new service should call 372-9505.

MAUSOLEUM

mer city municipal administrator.

Aware of its poor structural condition, the city hired an expert on mausoleums to appraise the cost of repairs, Smith said. The result was an estimated cost of over $1 million for renovation.

"The city felt money for repairs would be a poor use of the citizens' tax dollars," said John Fawcett, city municipal administrator.

Wesley Hoffman, mayor of Bowling Green, said it was a difficult decision but the building was too expensive to remodel.

Fawcett said another factor in the decision to tear down the mausoleum was the safety of University students. He said the city was concerned with parts of the building falling and injuring students.

Both Fawcett and Hoffman said the city had to contact and ask permission from the families who had relatives buried there. They said it was a difficult task because not all families still had members in the area.

"We tried our best to make the process easy on the heirs," Hoffman said.

Fawcett said over 300 bodies were removed from the mausoleum this summer. He said the bodies were taken out in the same order as they were placed in the mausoleum. He said they will be buried in the Oak Grove Cemetery in the same order as they had entered the mausoleum. Because the original marble slabs in the mausoleum were deteriorating, the city will resurrect new monuments with each grave, Smith said.

The building is being torn down in sections and it should be demolished soon, Fawcett said. He said by doing this they will ensure the safety of students passing by the construction site.

Barricades have also been constructed to prevent students from wandering through the area.

The mausoleum property will remain part of the cemetery. The black fence that borders the cemetery will be extended to include the extra land.

Students nationwide search for housing in tight market

Across the United States, college students are competing to find a place to live.

BOSTON — Before she even cracked a book for graduate school, Jennifer Jensen was handed one of the toughest assignments in Boston: competing with 67,000 other students in finding a place to live.

Ms. Jensen arrived in this college-rich city only to learn she was homeless. An apartment she found had been rented out from under her, a result of the tightest housing crunch in years.

The story is the same in cities across the country. Slim vacancy rates and anti-student attitudes are forcing young scholars to share apartments, to seek dormitory rooms and even camp out on campus.

Housing is so tight at the University of California, Berkeley that one student rolled out a sleeping bag in a Bay Area Rapid Transit district station. Another lived in a van. At Stanford University, some students pitched tents on campus to protest rental rates.

Boston's 3 percent vacancy rate, the lowest in almost 15 years, has students scrambling for housing before the semester begins.

"Loans for school are $22,000 a year and I'm gonna have debts for the rest of my life," Ms. Jensen said. "I just didn't realize it would be so hard to find somewhere to live."

Some students are clamoring to live in dorms. But Boston's 32 area colleges and universities cannot offer the same guarantee as small liberal arts schools, such as William College, which provide four years of campus housing.

And students who opt out of Boston University's housing system their sophomore year — maybe for a cheaper apartment a few blocks away — have no way back in.

Nationally, rents rose 3.2 percent between June 1997 and June 1998, according to a National Multi Housing Council report based on data from the Department of Labor.

In cities with large student populations, rents rose even faster.

In Berkeley, the average monthly rent now for a one-bedroom apartment is $763, according to college housing officials. Rents in the Boston area, where students pay from $800 to $1,400 for a one-bedroom home, increased an average of 4.3 percent during the year ending in June. In San Francisco — the nation's second-most expensive real estate market, according to some surveys — rents went up 8.3 percent in the same period.

Even in small cities, students face a crunch.

Landlords in Burlington, Vt. — where the vacancy rate is only 1 percent and a one-bedroom place averages about $660 — say it's not uncommon to receive 50 phone calls the first day an apartment is advertised.

Missouri more prepared this time around

□ BG needs to stop Corby Jones in order to beat Missouri.

By TOD McCLOSKEY
The BG News

The Tigers still haven't forgotten the loss to Bowling Green in 1995.

In that game, BG was down 10 points at the half and came back to win it, 17-10.

This Saturday at Memorial Stadium in Missouri, the Tigers will be ready and waiting for the Falcons.

BG needs to be prepared to handle an experienced Missouri team, much different than the one that finished the '95 season 3-8. And the Tigers, preranked 16th in the Sports Illustrated poll, are expected to improve on their best season since '83.

In '97 Missouri had a whirlwind 7-5 year that included a trip to the Holiday Bowl. This year the expectations have risen, but Falcon coach Gary Blackney knows what his team is up against.

"I would classify them as primarily an option power-type team," Blackney said. "Jones will handle the ball, but he's probably 50 percent of their offense — maybe more this year."

Missouri's senior quarterback Corby Jones threw for 1,658 yards and 12 scores last year. But Jones can also run. Last year he had 887 yards on the ground, including 14 scores.

If the Falcons are able to stop Missouri, they have to stop Jones.

"If there's a way to slow down Corby Jones — he's the key to everything," Blackney said.

In order to stop Jones, the Falcons are counting on the veteran defensive front. Led by seniors Letoskey Carey, Willie Watson and Dana Johnson, the defensive linemen will have the job of trying to contain Jones.

And junior linebacker Joe O'Neill will lead the linebacking core with the new 4-3 defensive formation.

But, the BG defense needs to hold its ground, in order to give the offense a chance.

And for the Falcons offensive line, Blackney expects great things out of them.

"We expect those guys to come together and just produce," Blackney said. "If they do, I think we have a chance to move the ball on offense."

The line is anchored by junior Chad McCarthy, junior Mark Katzman and sophomore Rob Fehrman. It's their job to open holes for tailback Robbie Hollis. Hollis is the Falcons top returning back, last year he rushed for 492 yards and three scores.

"We'll do okay against Missouri," Katzman said. "We've Ninety minutes.

It's the length of a soccer game, and no doubt it's a phrase that the Bowling Green men's soccer team will hear a lot about in practice.

Coach Mel Mahler wants his team to work toward staying mentally sharp for the entire game although he admitted that it's tough to do.

The Detroit goal in BG's 2-1 win Tuesday was a result of complacency. The Falcons know they can't afford those small letdowns this weekend in the Ohio State Classic.

"Overall, I felt we played well defensively," Mahler said. "The guys did a good job of applying pressure to the ball. But there's always room for improvement."

Falcon sophomore Fred Degand feels that the ball possession will get better as the season goes along and that the team will straighten out the minor complacency detail.

"We showed improvement," Degand said. "We have to get used to each other. For some reason (in the last part of the Detroit game), we tried to possess the ball passing it back and forth. That was a negative on our part."

BG will battle Furman today at 3 p.m. and Evansville Sunday at 2:30 p.m. Those two have better-rounded squads than Detroit, according to Mahler, making for tougher competition. The Titans had four starters ineligible and had no preseason scrimmages, unlike the Falcons who scrimmaged Wright State Saturday.

"This is going to be a real test for us," Mahler said. "Early on in the year, it's important to play teams of this caliber just to get a feel as to where we're at as a team. They're going to be two better teams. They've got better personnel. This is a high-profile tournament."

The Paladins are from Greenville, S.C. It is the first meeting between the two schools. Doug Allison enters his fourth season coaching the Southern Conference team.

The Purple Aces are battling the Falcons for the first time since 1988. However, Evansville leads the all-time series 8-1. The Purple Aces are coached by Fred Schmaltz.

"They're definitely going to be a lot stronger," Falcon sophomore Adam Erhard said. "It's going to be a quicker game. Our intensity level will be up for sure."

BG will not face Ohio State this weekend, but will travel back to Columbus on Sunday, Sept. 13 to face the Buckeyes in a non-conference game.

The Paladins and Purple Aces both won their season openers. Furman downed Alabama-Birmingham 1-0, while Evansville blanked Denver 3-0.

On the whole, Mahler is pleased with his team's progress.

"We played 18 players yesterday (Tuesday)," Mahler said. "At this point in time, our focus is to play a lot of people. We're still trying to find out what our best 11 will be. We're still moving guys around and giving guys opportunities to compete for those positions."

Ohio CC Relays a warmup for the Falcons

The BG women's cross country season kicks off this weekend looking to reclaim their MAC throne.

Last season, the Falcons came up just short in the Mid-American Conference Championship, coming in second to Ohio. The Bobcats denied BG what would have been their third straight title.

"I feel we can win the MAC and get into the NCAA's," Price said.

Last year, the team also placed fourth in the District IV Championships in Bloomington, Ind., first at the All Ohio Championships, first in the Notre Dame Invitational and first in the Ohio Relays.

BG begins their season against those same Ohio Bobcats at the Ohio relays in Athens. Marshall will also participate from the MAC.

"It's a significant meet and we plan on winning it," said BG coach Steve Price. "For the last ten years it's either been BG or OU."

Before Bowling Green won their consecutive titles in 1995 and 1996, Ohio was the MAC's top dog. Under coach Elmore Banton, the Bobcats have won seven titles in ten years.

However, Price said that OU has been hit hard by graduation and transfers and is not as good a team as they were last year. The coach's poll that picked them second may not have taken that into consideration.

The runners will be split up into two person teams. The runners run a mile at a time, trading off. The race is a total of six miles, with each runner running three.

The Falcons are returning many of their top runners from last year.

Seniors Jessica LaFene and Wendy Licht-Ordaway earned All-MAC honors last year. Laura Deneau, also a senior, was second-team All-MAC.

Christine Thompson, Angie Michael and Hanane Sabri are also expected to play important roles.

Sabri is from Strasbourg, France. Price said that she came in ninth in the French national championships. She will be unable to run in the Mel Brodt Invitational Sept. 12 due to commitments for the French National team.

Nikki Monroe, Lisa Marica and Libby Mitchell may also play minor roles.

Last year BG won its first road tournament. The Falcons beat Marquette, Valparaiso and Western Michigan to win the Western Michigan Invitational.

The Bowling Green volleyball team will try to continue their winning ways this weekend on the road in Chicago.

The Falcons will compete in the Kaepa Invitational Tournament at the Gentile Center. They will face four opponents on September 5 and 6. BG will do battle with Loyola, (Ill.), Cal State Northridge, Boston College and Marquette.

The Falcons, coming off a strong victory over Toledo, will have their hands full this weekend.

"With four teams it becomes a little bit of a marathon," commented assistant coach Tom Hanna. "We're not gonna have a lot of turn around time between matches."

Along with the marathon schedule, Hanna commented on a couple of areas of improvement.

"We talked about working on our passing and serving," Hanna said. "Our passing at the beginning of the Toledo match was a little shaky."

The Falcons have posted a record of 2-1-0 against the Ramblers of Loyola, (Ill.). The Ramblers went 18-14 last season finishing third in the Midwestern Collegiate Conference with a 10-5 record.

The Falcons second opponent will be the Cal State Northridge. This will be BG's first meeting ever against the Matadors.

On Sunday the Falcons will play the Eagles of Boston College. BC was 7-24 in 1997, including a subpar record of 1-10 in Big East play. This will be the first time the Falcons have ever stepped on the court against Boston College.

BG has only played their final Kaepa Invitational opponent once before. The Falcons beat the Marquette Golden Eagles last season in the Western Michigan Invitational Tournament. Marquette is coming off an 18-16 record.

The beginning of September can only mean one thing at Forest Creason golf course - another season of women's golf is just around the corner.

The Falcons open the season Saturday with the Redbird Classic at Illinois State University.

Last year BG finished eight of 12 teams at the tournament.

This year the Falcons are composed of a mix of experience and youth. The team features two senior captains, three juniors, a sophomore and two freshman. Each figures in to the season plan.

Filling the void left from the departure of last year's captain Amy Miller are seniors Heidi Hansen and Lindsey Casterline.

"They've done a great job of stepping up and leading this team so far," coach Kurt Thomas said.

Casterline will not be at in Illinois due to personal reasons.

Thomas also expects juniors Kate Kolesnik, Missy Hinds and Shannon Sharp to make an impact this season.

"All three should play a big part in the success of this team," Thomas said.

Last season, Kolesnik averaged a team best 83 strokes per 18 holes. She also won the Oakland Spring invitational with a combined score of 164 for two rounds. Last year Hinds and Sharp averaged 89 and 86, respectively.

The other returning player is sophomore Jennifer Stiff. Stiff averaged 91 last year in only two tournaments.

"Jennifer is not far off from being a regular contributor," Thomas said.

Thomas also hopes that two freshman, Angel Garrett and Shannon Smith, will have an immediate impact.

"We expect them to come in and play well for us," Thomas said. "And help us achieve our goals this year."

The goals that Thomas speaks of have much to do with the inaugural season of women's golf in the Mid-American Conference.

"Our ultimate goal this year is to win the MAC championship," Thomas said. "But with tough teams like Toledo and Northern Illinois in the league it won't be easy."

Thomas lists the Spartan Invitational at Michigan State and the Wolverine Invitational at the University of Michigan as the team's toughest competition. Thomas believes the Falcons are ready for a solid year.

Rice highest-paid receiver in NFL

By Associated Press

SANTA CLARA, Calif. - On the field and off, everything is in place for Jerry Rice's return.

The San Francisco 49ers signed him Wednesday to a six-year, $36 million contract in a restructuring that made him the league's highest-paid receiver and gave the team some salary cap relief.

In addition, Rice says he's regained his physical edge after virtually non-stop rehabilitation through two serious injuries to his left knee that sidelined him for all but two games in 1997.

"I'm excited. I'm nervous. I feel like all the hard work has paid off for me," said Rice, set to resume his injury-interrupted career in Sunday's opener against the New York Jets.

It will mark his first heavy contact of the year. He was held out of San Francisco's five pre-season games as a precaution.

"Of course, you think about the injury, but I also feel I have done everything possible to get myself back on the field," Rice said. "I feel I'm more explosive now than when I first came in in 1985. We just have to wait and see what happens. But I feel healthy now and I feel everything will work out for the best."

The new deal for Rice runs through the 2003 season and included an immediate return in the form of a $4 million signing bonus.

Metaphors be damned

I had a realization in the last couple weeks as I was hauling my furniture, clothes and other crap up to Bowling Green for another semester.

Not only is this my last year at the University, it's the last time I'll ever be in an atmosphere quite like this again (unless I decide to go to grad school...)

What I realized was that I'm actually going to miss it, which is something I never thought I'd admit. When I arrived in Bowling Green three years ago as a cynical freshman, I viewed the city and everything in it as boring, small-town and substandard in comparison to my booming hometown metropolis of Dayton (ha ha). Slowly I realized that there were cool things to do, I just had to seek them out.

I mean, Bowling Green is no New York City. The winters are Midwestern and brutal, the land is flat and boring and the school is always in the process of being improved upon (i.e. constant construction). On an everyday basis, however, B.G. offers the same things anywhere else does.

I won't go into any cheesy metaphors about how your time here is only as good as you make it, or how I have all the answers because I'm a senior, but I do want to stress a few things.

The more you want to do, the more there will be to do. And I don't just mean that in a "community involvement"-type way. It's all about being persistent and taking advantage of the opportunities presented to you.

Do you like coffee? Try Cosmos or Grounds for Thought. Like music? Go to Madhatter's or Finder's. Live music or theater? Kobacker Hall, Joe E. Brown Theater, and a host of other venues feature live bands and drama weekly and nightly. Movies? The Gish Film Theater or Clazel should suit you fine.

I haven't even begun to scratch the surface of the entertainment possibilities for this town and campus, but suffice to say that there's as much culture and variety in B.G. as there is in any other medium-sized town.

The atmosphere in a college town is like no other. There are few permanent residents. People are constantly moving from one house or apartment to another. Everything is transient, which helps keep it fresh and interesting. Once you graduate (which will probably take longer than

'Titanic' sails into video stores

By TOD McCLOSKEY
The BG News

The gargantuan display glitters under the fluorescent lights at Bowling Green's Wal-Mart.

Stacks and stacks of video cassettes lie waiting to be a precious addition to someone's movie collection.

It is a day many young teenage girls and movie-goers have been waiting for; the release of "Titanic" on video cassette. For many college students, "Titanic" may be the biggest movie of Generation X.

Winner of 11 Academy Awards, (including Best Picture), "Titanic" has been a money-making machine producing over $600 million dollars in North American box offices only. But the merchandising, such as posters, books, soundtracks (there are two already) and international box-office figures may not compare to what is anticipated in video buying and rental sales. Paramount is expecting $3 billion in video sales.

And in Bowling Green, only a small Ohio town, we've already seen how big "Titanic" really is.

After being released for only four days, Wal-Mart has sold over half of the movies it received, a little over 1,000 copies. But 1,000 copies can't compare to the Toledo Sam's Club, which received 8,000 copies.

Today in Wal-Mart, empty slots fill the once full Titanic display. And this doesn't include the preorders at Wal-Mart made by over 200 people.

"We've sold around 750 copies since we got it in," four-year Wal-Mart electronics manager Scott Helbing said. "This is the first movie ever, since I've worked at Wal-Mart, that we've made a reserve list."

Video Connection, on South Main, one of the most popular video stores since Late Nite Video's closing, had seen all 60 rental copies taken out of the store at one time. Yesterday, only a few remained. Video Connection also had multiple preorders. "We had 240 people sign up to buy it," Video Connection employee Jason Gookins said. "And still we had 140 of those people actually come in to buy it."

Fans patiently wait in line at Video Connection for the midnight release of "Titanic" on video cassette.

Even with a full market of stores selling the movie, copies are still disappearing off the shelves. Along with the four BG video stores, grocery stores Kroger and Foodtown have copies available too.

"Everybody is selling them. K-Mart, Wal-Mart, even grocery stores like Kroger are selling them. They're available everywhere," Gookins said. "I'm surprised this many people actually showed up."

This is what Paramount expected to see come the beginning of September: dollars.

"Titanic's" company has spent over $50 million in a marketing effort for the movie. In the largest Paramount campaign ever, advertising is expected to reach 95 percent of adults ages 18-49 over 26 times in an 11 week period. Paramount's bombardment of advertising has worked. But all the attention "Titanic" is getting is making some people sea sick.

"It's making me ill," Gookins said. "It's unreal to me."

Similar sentiments from other video store employees (like Blockbuster) reinforce the fact that "Titanic" is reaching, and to some has surpassed, its saturation point.

"It's been blown out of proportion," Helbing said. "There are better movies out there."

One thing is for sure: "Titanic" is going to set new records for rentals across the country.

Croce follows in father's footsteps

The Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — As a kid, A.J. Croce learned Chuck Berry's guitar licks on the piano. He considered it rock 'n' roll.

He'd tried playing guitar, trumpet and drums — with fairly unmusical results. Then he tried the piano. Now, when he tours, it's with a 7-foot Steinway grand piano.

Croce, 26, is the son of the late Jim Croce, whose early 1970s hits included "You Don't Mess Around With Jim," "Time in a Bottle," "Bad, Bad Leroy Brown," "I Got a Name" and "I'll Have to Say I Love You in a Song."

Although Croce's full name is Adrian James Croce, he's been called A.J. since he was in the first grade. He was 2 when his father was killed in a plane crash in Louisiana in 1973.

He doesn't remember his father and he's never performed his songs. Croce can only guess what impact his father's career has had on him. "I think maybe there's a naiveite in thinking that anyone can do it, if your parents do it. I think there's less fear involved."

When he was 12, Frank Sinatra invited him to a concert in Los Angeles. Sinatra was performing "Bad, Bad Leroy Brown." Says Croce: "I think that would have been a highlight of my father's life. An Italian-American having Frank Sinatra record and sing one of his songs is about as good as it gets."

"Fit to Serve" (Ruf Records) is Croce's new bluesy CD. Stating that blues is a basis for jazz and popular music, he says: "I suppose there's a lot of blues influence in the record. I don't think there's any way not to include that, as a piano player. I never thought of myself as a blues musician, though."

When Croce started playing rock 'n' roll, he became interested in its origins — which started him on a study of piano styles back to the turn of the century. "The evolution of piano really stalled out in the late 1950s when the guitar took over as the melodic lead," he says. But that didn't put him off playing piano.

Croce is also a singer and composer.

"I was making stuff up from the time I was a little kid. I don't think I got any confidence until I was 17 or 18. I went to Nashville for the first time there, looking for a record deal. I hooked up with songwriters and started writing with them. I love writing in different styles.

"I've gone to Nashville at least once a year since then. I like the fact when you go in to write with someone in Nashville, you're going to get a song. That can't be guaranteed when I sit down at home," Croce says.

He's played a couple of shows with Willie Nelson, and he's written a song for him. "I don't record country, but I love country music and love writing it." He put "Texas Ruby," a song he co-wrote in Nashville, on his new album. "It's a real story song. It's fun to perform."

Croce was hired for his first job in music when he was 12.

"Some people paid me to come and sing at a bat mitzvah for the sister of a girl I went to school with. I did a couple of my songs and a Ray Charles song and a Little Richard song. It gave me the confidence I needed to

The popular TV show "Sabrina, The Teenage Witch" has spawned a soundtrack which will be released October 27. The series, which stars Melissa Joan Hart ("Clarissa Explains It All"), features loads of trendy music in its episodes. MTV-friendly bands such as The Backstreet Boys, Spice Girls, Sugar Ray, Chumbawumba, Ben Folds Five and Robyn will feature previously released, new and remixed versions of their songs.

Red Hot & Rhapsody tribute to Gershwin

George and Ira Gershwin will be honored on "Red Hot & Rhapsody," an album from the Red Hot Organization (AIDS benefit series). Such musicians as David Bowie, Natalie Merchant, Sinead O'Conner and Luscious Jackson will take a stab at Gershwin tunes. Money Mark remixing Peter Sellers singing George Gershwin? Sounds interesting...

ekoostik Hookah:
Where the Fields Grow Green

1998 - Acoustic Recordings

The Ohio-based ekoostik Hookah manages to keep the spirit of their concerts alive with their fourth record "Where the Fields Grow Green."

The group, who has made a name for themselves with their statewide travelling show, is well-known for their party-perfect tunes. Composed of five extremely talented musicians (all but one are from Ohio), ekoostik Hookah combine jazz, blues, folk and rock to form a musical style similar to that of the Grateful Dead or Phish. The result is an eclectic CD suitable for the listener's every mood.

The thing that makes their music really work is the pervading sense of friendship. The members, Dave Katz, Eric Lanese, Ed McGee, Cliff Starbuck and Steve Sweeney, not only share the vocal and songwriting duties, but they also seem to have a deep, familial bond among them. Those who follow Hookah and have been to their shows will know what I'm talking about. Their music has something to offer everyone.

"Where the Fields Grow Green" is like having a Hookah show right in front of you (almost). The first track, "Hookahville," sums up what ekoostik Hookah is all about. It's a call to all those searching for a place to unwind. Although most of the songs are upbeat and party-friendly, there are also a couple of mellow tunes. Particularly good is the short guitar ballad "It Fell Into the Ebb There."

There's no doubt that everyone who listens to this record will find at least one song they'll want to hear over and over again.

- Natalie Plickinger

Elliott Smith: XO

1998 - Dreamworks

Elliott Smith describes, in his quiet art of songwriting, what he does and doesn't want to be dependent on.

"Cut this picture into you and me/Burn it backwards, kill this history," he sings on "Sweet Adeline," the opening song on "XO."

Dependence on alcohol, other people and everything else that saddens him, is Elliott Smith's specialty. Characterized as depressing, beautiful, slight and intense, Smith's music relies on spare rhythms and muted guitar chords to elicit emotion. Arguably one of the best songwriters of our generation, the breathlessly-voiced Smith recently signed a solo deal with Dreamworks in 1998. "XO" is his first offering since then.

"Sweet Adeline" opens the record with a humming lull and Smith's theme of dilapidated love. However, the depressing quality of this theme is masked by an almost happy ballad. Keeping his guitar sniping away, Smith adds piano and strings to fulfill to the barroom sound of "XO."

The fourth track, "Baby Britain," is almost poppy as Smith sings of seas of vodka and alcoholism. Tracks like this make "XO" seem like the long lost sequel to the Beatles "Revolver" (specifically since the track sounds like "Getting Better All the Time.")

Probably the strongest piece on "XO" is the title track "Waltz #2 (XO)." It's a poignant hymn for anyone who's been in love, then watched it all fall apart. Written about his relationship with his mother, "Waltz #2" builds like a flood to the epiphany, as Smith cuts his guitar and hums, "X.O., Mom." Somehow Smith is able to describe that feeling that resides in so many, but can only be expressed by few in the lines, "I'm never gonna know you now/but I'm gonna love you anyhow."

Elliott Smith is great for people who find themselves falling in love with the wrong things.

On "Everybody Cares, Everybody Understands," and "Bottle Up and Explode" Smith begins to tackle the fame that was bestowed on him after being nominated for a Grammy last year (see article, left).

"XO" was produced by Tom Rothrock and Rob Schnapf of Bong Load Custom Records. They have produced albums for the likes of Beck, Mary Lou Lord, and the Foo Fighters. When listening to the whole work through, the fourteen songs begin to play as a single breath, and the record becomes one sound.

Listening to "XO" is like opening up a window in a sauna. There's so much in the album that when it's played it exudes energy. All the while, Smith hides his words amongst orchestral strings and jangly piano bars. The music puts you in a moving vehicle, and when you close your eyes you can feel every curve of the road.

Each song on "XO" is sung with honesty and sincerity. Elliott Smith is the elixir for the headache caused by dependence.

Whether it be fame, alcoholism or the evil boy/girl that broke your heart, Smith provides cathartic lullabies for the sensitive ear. "XO" was released on Aug. 25 and can be picked up at Madhatter Music Co. or at Funder's in downtown Bowling Green.

With 'XO,' Elliott Smith finally finds an audience

By MICHAEL PLANICKA

The BG News

Critics have likened Elliott Smith's music to that of R.E.M. This is mostly because, like R.E.M., Smith's first hit happened nearly five albums into his career.

During last year's Grammy awards, Smith was seen holding hands with Celine Dion after singing his Grammy-nominated song "Ms. Misery," a far cry from his relative obscurity less than a year earlier.

Gus Van Sant, director of "Good Will Hunting," had been a fan of Smith since hearing his first solo record "Roman Candle." He eventually approached Smith to write a song for "Good Will Hunting."

The album that sparked Gus Van Sant's interest was also Smith's first solo project and was released by Cavity Search Records in 1994. This followed three albums that Smith recorded with the band Heatmiser in the early 90's.

After "Roman Candle," Smith released his self-titled album in 1995. This was his first release on the powerful independent label Kill Rock Stars, whose roster includes Sleater Kinney, Unwound, and the late Bikini Kill. Elliott Smith was a definite departure for Kill Rock Stars' lineup, but his two solo albums on their label secured him a spot as a strong independent artist.

In 1997 he released "either/or" also on Kill Rock Stars, which spawned most of the tracks for the "Good Will Hunting" soundtrack.

When he's not on the road, Smith lives in Brooklyn, NY. Most of the songs he writes are conceived at his favorite local bar. He's been variously described as soft and sweet, but he's been through his share of bad times.

The song "Needle in the Hay" off of his self-titled album describes his bout with heroin. Numerous other references to heroin and drug use run through most of the album. For example, the song "St. Ides Heaven" (with backing vocals by Rebecca Gates of the Spinanes) features the line "High on amphetamines, the moon is light globe breaking."

Smith's "either/or" was a pivotal album in that it was his fist depressing, but according to Smith it's simply telling the truth.

Songs like "2:45 a.m." and "Say Yes" from "either/or" provide the words to match the feeling of a broken heart. In "Say Yes" he intones, "I'm in love with the world, through the eyes of a girl/who's still around the morning after."

Before he signed to Dreamworks in 1998, Smith had three solo albums and most of a soundtrack to draw from for inspiration. Apart from his past releases, "XO" stands alone in its groundbreaking instrumentation and combination of Smith's slight voice with smooth guitars.

There is still a hint of the lo-fi,

Elliott Smith's "either/or" (above) and self-titled albums (below) real exposure to a wider audience. Since his initial solo album, he has created a healthy following of devoted indie-rock fans. His music has been described as four-track aesthetic in his newest record, but "XO" proves Smith is constantly moving forward in terms of both songwriting and production quality.

Talk show premiers this month

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES (AP) — There is, at this moment, an oddly endearing quality to Roseanne, who is settled on a sofa in a studio office talking about her new daytime program.

This is an actress known for her brash comedy and brazen life, a woman labeled combative and worse, a woman who takes no lip from anyone. So where's this vulnerable aura coming from?

Maybe it's the allergy-induced sniffles. Maybe it's the plain, off-camera look of unstyled hair, no make-up and denim print outfit. Maybe it's the way her voice lifts to a faint question mark on some statements, as if seeking agreement.

Or maybe it's her near-evangelical conviction that a talk show, specifically her daytime talk show, can improve the world. And be entertaining. And compete with reigning chat queens Oprah Winfrey and Rosie O'Donnell.

There is little doubt Roseanne honestly believes she can make a difference. Here is someone who has traveled a long road, personally and professionally, and says she has learned something along the way.

She wants to share her experiences with viewers through "The Roseanne Show," her first major TV project since her hit ABC sitcom "Roseanne" ended its nine-year run in May 1997. The syndicated program begins Sept. 14, carried in most of the country by 150-plus stations.

"It's like everything you've seen and it's like nothing you've seen," Roseanne says. "Everybody wants to get some kind of name for it to tidy it up, but I don't know how to help there. It's just really fun."

It's also meant to be inspiring and spiritually uplifting for her target flock — women and young people whom she deems a "lost generation."

"In order to change your life, in order to better yourself, you need information. We have this show that acts like a beacon of information. I just feel like it's good for the world and I feel people are ready for it," she says.

"It's not really about me," Roseanne adds. "It's about the forum I can provide for people who have healing and good things to say."

Corgan: 'No middle ground in music'

The Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — At 24, Billy Corgan was drawing inspiration from the streets and hooking up with the mind-set of young people. "Knowing what they were thinking, what drugs they were doing ... that's easy," he says.

Seven years later, the towering lead singer of The Smashing Pumpkins isn't pretending to be in touch with his baggy-clothed, baseball cap-wearing fans. Instead, he's pushing their buttons, aiming to hit different feelings — from aggressiveness to beauty and spontaneity.

To promote "Adore," the band's latest record, Corgan, guitarist James Iha and bassist D'arcy launched a 14-city charity tour earlier this summer. The tour has raised more than $2.5 million, according to the band's publicist.

Organizations benefiting from the tour include the Make-A-Wish Foundation of Northern Illinois; HAVEN, a domestic and sexual abuse counseling and referral center based in Pontiac, Mich.; the Boston Medical Center's Children's AIDS Program; and The Hale House in the Harlem section of New York.

After performing before a capacity audience at Radio City Music Hall Aug. 2, the band returned to the stage and presented Dr. Lorraine E. Hale, co-founder of Hale House, with a check for slightly more than $419,000, one of the largest donations in the center's 29-year history.

"There's always going to be the Mariah Careys, the Spice Girls, the Celine Dions, that's a part of it," says Corgan. "But there also has to be a lot of Radioheads and Smashing Pumpkins."

"There has to be integrity at some level or the whole thing just spins out of control," he says.

For Corgan, there is no middle ground in music. "You either do it or you don't. But if you don't, you can't really expect much because the process is geared completely to those who do."

1. What do you find most challenging?

Corgan: Reinvention. I think that's part of what we do that doesn't get enough credit. We've attempted to reinvent ourselves on every album.

2. If "Mellon Collie and the Infinite Sadness" was grunge music's swan song, what is "Adore" the beginning of?

Corgan: A transition into greater songwriting and more experimentation. It's attempting to synthesize traditional songwriting and futuristic production. If you really get down to it, it's a roots album from a band who grew up listening to folk records and The Cure.

3. What's key to achieving success in this industry?

Corgan: It's about energy, and if you can't generate the maximum amount of energy then you don't belong in the game.

4. You've accomplished most everything you set out to do. What's next?

Corgan: There's a line in the song, "To Sheila," that a lot of people miss where I sing, "It meant the world to hold a bruising faith but now it's just a matter of grace." ... If you have the confidence to get what you want out of life with grace, I think you walk away a little cleaner and a little happier.

5. Is there anything that remains unfulfilled for you?

Corgan: I wouldn't mind having a top 10 single. I think I've written some, I just wrote them in the wrong year. ... As much as I talk about integrity, I'm just as much a sucker for a Boston hit as anybody. ... In music, big songs are like immortality. It's like trying to get a star from the heavens. Seriously, I think I've achieved every other goal.

really practice and continue to do it."

He played music five or six nights a week in high school until he dropped out. He later took a test and entered the University of California at San Diego. Then B.B. King heard him play in New York and asked him to be his opening act. "Three months later, I was opening for him in Seattle and Vancouver," Croce says. "It was great. At that point I decided this is what I was going to do."

Croce is married and the father of two young children. He lives in San Diego. He enjoys performing but dislikes being away from his family. He has taught seminars about the history of American music, especially piano music. He'd like to write film scores.

Croce often composes on the guitar because he doesn't play it as well as the piano. "It forces me to simplify. It is rare that complicated songs work."

"But I like the idea of keeping at it until I write a 2 1/2- or 3-minute song. Mark Twain said he was writing a long letter to a friend because he didn't have time to write a short one."

Some of the most exciting scientific theories, political ideas and types of music are born and thrive on college campuses. This and the fact that you're constantly learning about new ideas makes the university atmosphere unrivaled for dynamism and vitality.

This is what I'm going to miss.

I'm not looking forward to having to get up early for a real job, or to saying goodbye to all my friends, or to being financially independent, but at least I'll have a greater understanding of the way the world works. I'll have a unique perspective on our culture that can only be gained by hours of reading, research and lecture. I'll have a social identity heavily informed by a variety of people that I may not have met had I never attended college.

Oh yeah, and a diploma too.
