Bloodmobile visits BGSU this week

□ Students are encouraged to donate blood to the ARC in the Union this week.

By CAROLYN STECKEL
The BG News

If dressing as a drop of blood is going to help to recruit blood donors, then the American Red Cross (ARC) has got it covered.

That droplet of blood will help drum up some donors today through Friday. The ARC will be holding a blood drive in the Lenhart Grand Ballroom in the Union.

According to Ann Duffy, a registered nurse who is helping at the drive, donating blood is a good way for students to give something back to the community.

"Blood is an essential and a very much needed item," Duffy said.

About 275 bags of blood a day are needed for the ARC to fulfill day to day operations, Duffy said.

She said that college drives help their supply tremendously.

"We would like to get anywhere from 200 to 250 bags per day," Duffy said. "Depending on the day we usually get about 100 to 200 bags per day."

According to Duffy, the University has been fairly successful in the past.

"The donating process itself is not that bad," she said. "It takes about an hour and may cause a little irritation. It is relatively pain free."

James Liu donates in the blood drive on Monday.

Students who donate should feel good about having helped others, Duffy said.

Laura Waligorski, freshman music performance major, said helping people is one of the reasons.

ELECTION '98

Race for open house senate seat

By AMYJO L. BROWN
The BG News

As John Glenn prepares for his flight into space, he leaves behind the seat he held for the Ohio House Senate. Fighting to sit in his place are Democrat Mary Boyle and Republican Governor George Voinovich.

Boyle is a former member of the Ohio House of Representatives where she served as majority whip. She also served three terms as County Commissioner in Cuyahoga.

Voinovich is currently the state governor, but before reaching that position he was assistant attorney general for Ohio, served in the Ohio House of Representatives, and was lieutenant governor. He was elected governor in 1990 and re-elected in 1994.

"Voinovich will make a good senator because of his experience as governor," said Zachary Bernardo, University President of the College Republicans. "He will be more focused on our needs. I know that under his leadership, Ohio has increased dramatically funding for schools."

Boyle is running her campaign on the idea that much more needs to be done for education. She wants to expand grants that students can receive for college, and she wants to create lower interest rates for federal loans.

"Ohio is one of the most expensive states to go to college in," she said.

Refuting Boyle's claim, Voinovich said, "We (Ohio) were 45th in supporting education, and now we're 41st."

Both candidates emphasize higher education and creating a better life for low-income families.

While increasing state support for programs that help children and families, Voinovich kept Ohio's budget at its lowest rate in 40 years.

Asserting her support of the family unit, Boyle said if elected to Senate she would fight for families rather than businesses.

In addition, Boyle supports increasing health care and minimum wage. However, she does feel that the social security system is in no need of any radical changes, and should therefore continue operating as is.

The debates over the issues will continue until next Tuesday night when the people will decide what issues are more important to them.

An in-depth look at Athletics funding

Football scores with general fees

□ Part 2: I'm Taking my football and I'm going home.

By MIKE WENDLING
The BG News

In the world of Falcon athletics, football is the 800-ton gorilla. The team spends about 22 percent of the department's budget, while bringing in 9 percent of total revenue.

The difference is made up for mainly through student-paid General Fees, not by other, profitable sports.

According to University statistics compiled according to the Equity in Athletics Disclosure Act, a federal law requiring school athletic departments to compile key financial information, the football team spent $1.7 million in 1996-97. That figure represents 22.4 percent of the total University athletic budget.

Even though the football team spends more money than any other team at BG, they also make more. The team brings in 9.2 percent of athletic revenues, or about $700,000. Thus, the Falcon football team has an operating deficit of just under $1 million.

Losing money on football happens more often than not among Division I athletic programs. According to National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) figures, less than 40 percent of the 230 Division I colleges with football teams make money on the sport. Division I includes the biggest and most well-known college sports programs in the country.

Because the money is pulled in by a relatively small number of big-time football programs, however, Division I football is, overall, a profitable enterprise.

In the 1995-96 school year, the average Division I football team brought in 23 percent of athletic department revenues (an average of $2.2 million) while accounting for 20 percent of total expenditures ($1.45 million).

Almost as much is spent on the Falcon football team as on all other men's sports combined, and $100,000 more is spent on the football team than on all women's teams combined.

Associate professor of sociology Tim Jurkovic, who teaches a course on the sociology of sport, attributed football's costs to the high number of scholarships needed to support the team.

"The biggest cash cow is football," he said. "This is reflected in the number of Today marks the second of a three-part series investigating athletic funding at the University. The first story looked into the break-up of the general fee dollars. Today, the story looks into the funding of individual sports. Wednesday the series will end with a story examining gender equity.

Scholarships — football takes up 85 scholarships versus 12 for the basketball team. MAC (Mid-American Conference) schools don't make much revenue on football."

Ed Whipple, dean of student affairs, said that besides student fees, sports such as basketball and football — where ticket sales are significant, and larger crowds provide a draw for advertisers — are the main athletic money-makers.

"We are dependent on spectator sports," Whipple said.

The $700,000 brought in by the football team in 1996-97 was about half of the total revenue generated by all men's sports.

The athletic department's major revenue source is student General Fees, which con-

United Way Penny Drive working for change

□ University Ambassadors sponsor many events to help less fortunate.

By BRANDI BARHITE
BG News

She volunteered at local soup kitchens, worked with homeless people and helped low income families. She said she saw the difference a penny or a little donation could make.

"I think whatever anyone can do, can make a difference. Just being there and having resources available helps," said Sara Bishop, St. Thomas More Church outreach coordinator.

Bishop said she saw the difference donations can make in people's lives when she worked at a homeless shelter/soup kitchen.

The University is also striving to make a difference as the United Way Penny Drive kicks into full gear this week.

The penny drive sponsored by the University Ambassadors is a University wide effort to raise money for the various charities United Way supports. The drive is in the Union Foyer today, Nov. 2 and Nov. 3 10 a.m. - 2 p.m. The final collection will be Nov. 6 on the Education building steps.

Shawn Grime, University Ambassador's community service chair said that besides the donation table in the Union foyer, several dorms, sororities and fraternities, and the Honors Student Association have set up areas to collect money.

He also said University Ambassadors is selling food donated by Easy Street Cafe every Monday night at Easy Street upstairs. He said they plan to continue to sell chicken wings throughout the football season to raise money for United Way.

United Way raises money for 69 agencies. They depend upon the donations collected during their annual drive to provide a variety of services for northwest Ohio.

Grime said the University Ambassadors has set a goal to Donate a pint of blood, help others

"The blood warmed me. I felt it beating in my veins. . . I felt strong beyond all imagining." The Vampire Lestat by Anne Rice

I love vampires. Maybe that's why blood fascinates me. Maybe that's why rich, deep, dark red is my favorite color. But that's not the point of this column, as timely as it would be with Halloween approaching and all. Well, that's a half-truth; blood, not vampires, is my point. The Red Cross Bloodmobile is on campus this week, Monday through Thursday, 11-5, in the Lenhart Grand Ballroom in the Student Union.

I have had a tendency to condemn people who have never donated blood before, never even tried. I want to grab their shoulders and shake them and scream, "Wimps! What's wrong with you?! Do you think I like needles?" (I don't, by the way. They make me very nervous). And I know that there are people who can't donate. My dad can't. My sister hasn't donated for a while because she's an athlete, and you're not supposed to do any heavy lifting or exercise for a few days afterwards.

I know some people who don't weigh 110 pounds (the minimum weight you have to be to donate). My best friend had a cold the first time she wanted to donate and they told her to come back and try again in a week or so when she was better.

Columnist

I remember my first time donating blood; I was a junior in high school and I was so scared. The bloodmobile was at my high school. Kids used to donate to miss a class or two, and sometimes there were kids who'd give right away in the morning, and then say they didn't feel well afterwards so that they could go home. It was so crowded, so warm in the gym, and I felt it acutely because I kept getting more nervous. I felt like the biggest wimp afterwards, because it had only pinched. I mean, I've had worse pain inflicted on me from really minor fights with my sister. And even though I felt like such a wimp after that first time, that didn't stop me from bringing a stuffed animal (Aladdin's monkey Abu, I think it was) with me the next year.

Now, nine pints later, I don't need stuffed animals and I can almost watch them put the needle in. (Almost). I've had people tell me that the finger prick for the hemoglobin test is the worst part, and I've had people tell me that the anticipation is what's nerve-wracking for the amateurs. I'll agree with the anticipation thing, but I kind of like the finger prick (I know, I'm a very weird person).

But the volunteers at the blood drives that I've been to were all wonderful. They'll stand there and talk to you and keep your mind off of what's going on; they'll even hold your hand and sing Christmas carols with you even though it's not Halloween yet. I've had nurses that could put a needle in without feeling a thing. And I've had my bad experiences. I can't lie and say that I haven't. But it's never stopped me from going back.

Did you know that up to four people can benefit from one blood donation? That's only one pint of blood. Donated blood is used to help accident victims, hemophiliacs, people undergoing major surgeries, et cetera. The Red Cross conducts eight tests for infectious diseases, including AIDS, hepatitis, syphilis and leukemia. All blood donation needles are sterile and thrown away after they're used.

If you don't go donate, whatever your reason (and I trust it's a legit one), I don't want you to feel bad or defensive. That's not what I'm going for. But I've gone to the bloodmobiles at the end of the week to donate before, and their turnouts haven't been all that great. I mean, a campus doesn't even get one-tenth of its students willing to donate! I think it's sad that people miss this opportunity to do something for other people. And if you choose not to donate, you miss a rare opportunity to let yourself feel good about something you did, like helping to save the life of a little girl or a parent of three little boys. Happy Halloween, all! Hope you found some great costumes!

A hands on approach to understanding homosexuality

Before I proceed with writing this proposal, I feel compelled to say that my views in no way reflect those of any group or organization that I may belong to. I am not writing this as an employee of any business. My views do not represent that of any religious, political or social group that I may or may not belong to. Heaven knows that I would never want another person to have to live with the consequences that my words may have.

Often times I find that it is difficult for a person such as myself to find his place in society. In the past this question would not have been difficult. I could have been anything: a doctor, a lawyer, an astronaut, an accountant.

Whatever. Now, however, I find myself in the most compromising of circumstances. I have realized in the past few years that myself and those like me have become the most contemptible members of society. We are the lowest of the low. We are shunned by our families, rejected by our one-time friends. Often times we face harsh criticism from our own kind.

If you have not guessed what it is that makes me so bad, I suppose I should enlighten you. I am John Haynik. I am a white, middle-class, Christian, heterosexual, conservative, non-disabled, educated male.

Having introduced myself, I will now introduce you to a problem that has plagued me over the past few days. As most of you are aware, there has been a raging debate in the recent past about a certain topic: homosexuality.

Guest Columnist

I must admit that in the past I have not been the most sympathetic person where the plight of the American Homosexual is concerned. It could even be said that I was homophobic. That is not to say that I was afraid of homosexuals or homosexuality as the word might imply. However, as the word has come to mean a person that does not approve of homosexuality, I fit the bill.

Being the contemplative soul that I am, I have in the last few days taken to the habit of meditating on a solution to the "problem" of homosexuality in our society. After days of introspection, I have come up with a solution which I will, using this forum, propose to you with the utmost modesty.

I believe that the reason people such as myself are so intolerant of homosexuality is that we simply do not understand it.

Therefore, the university could institute a few programs that would facilitate better understanding between homosexuals and students such as myself:

1) Campus Cunnilingus Day. On this day, all females, both straight and homosexual, would be encouraged to find another female with which they are comfortable and perform oral sex on that person.

2) Fellatio for Friends Day. On this day, male students, both homo- and heterosexual, could gather a friend or two and then they could perform oral sex on each other.

3) Toys for Tenants Day. The Hall staffs for the various dorms could distribute sex toys to their residents and instruct them in their use on other people. Residents would then be encouraged to form groups of the same sex and practice their newfound skills with their sex toys.

4) Sodomy for Students Day. On this day, students would be encouraged to find a member of the same sex and practice any sexual act that is, by definition, sodomy.

All of these programs and more could be useful for people in my situation. Homosexuals must realize that people in my position are not just cruel haters. We just do not understand. These programs would facilitate our better understanding of those people that we shun.

Furthermore, I think it would be a great thing for the University as a whole if these programs were made mandatory. That way our students would be assured of a diverse experience. The University would finally fulfill its goal of forcing diversity on the students. By use of these mandatory programs we could all be a little more politically correct, and apparently that is what we all relay want. Isn't it?

On the other hand, there is another solution. We could just allow people to have their own opinions and not be hypocritical and attack them for their unique ideas. It was not too long ago that homosexuality was a unique idea that was attacked by the majority. Now that being openly opposed to homosexuality is a marginalized idea, it has become shunned. If those of us that are, by our mere being, politically incorrect continue to be pushed to the side, one can only expect for us to push back.

After all, we were born this way.

DEATHS

3 killed in apparent homicide-suicide

SIDNEY, Ohio (AP) — Three people were shot and killed Monday in what police called an apparent double homicide-suicide.

Police identified the victims as Henry Wilson, 61, Marjorie Wilson, 57, and Patrick Barber, 45, all of Sidney. They were shot in a house on the west side of the city about 35 miles north of Dayton.

Police Chief Steven Wearly said a person inside the home called police at 4:04 a.m. and reported a shooting. Police recovered a revolver.

Wearly said investigators had not determined who shot whom or a motive.

He said the Wilsons had been divorced for several years, and Ms. Wilson was living in the home with Barber. Henry Wilson lived a few blocks from the home.

POISONING

Great-grandmother poisoned by 8 year-old

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Charges were dismissed Monday against an 8-year-old girl accused of trying to kill her great-grandmother by poisoning the woman's soft drink.

Franklin County Juvenile Court Judge Yvette McGee Brown said psychiatrists had concluded Karen Martocchio of Columbus was not competent to stand trial and could not adequately assist in her defense because of her age.

"She doesn't understand the nature of the charges or the seriousness of them," she said.

The girl was charged in February with a delinquency charge of attempted murder. A delinquency count of felonious assault was later added.

Police said the girl and her great-grandmother, Virginia Dozier, did not get along.

Ms. Dozier was hospitalized but later released after drinking a glass of Mountain Dew that authorities say contained wintergreen oil.

Ms. Dozier was watching television at their home Feb. 18 when Karen brought her the drink, police said.

Wintergreen oil is commonly used in small amounts as flavoring in foods. It is primarily made of methyl salicylate, which is highly poisonous.

DISBANDED

No case after fraternity disbanded itself

BOSTON (AP) — The manslaughter case against an MIT fraternity in the drinking death of a freshman effectively ended Monday because the frat has disbanded and there is no one to answer the charges.

Last month, prosecutors took the extraordinary step of bringing manslaughter charges against Phi Gamma Delta — the organization, not its members — in the case of 18-year-old Scott Krueger, who drank himself into a coma at a party and died.

Since no individual members were named in the indictment, the case quickly unraveled when the fraternity disbanded.

On Monday, the Superior Court magistrate who had issued a warrant against Phi Gamma Delta filed it away in case the fraternity tries to reorganize at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Pamela Wechsler, assistant district attorney, conceded the case is over for now but said it wasn't all for naught: The charges drove the fraternity off campus and prompted MIT to change its alcohol and disciplinary policies.

"A lot of things have happened as a result of the investigation and indictment," she said.

Glenn arrives at launch site

□ John Glenn will return to space Thursday.

The Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — John Glenn, Payload Specialist No. 2, arrived for his launch countdown Monday — about an hour late because of airplane problems that left one crewmate temporarily stranded across the state.

He and his six fellow astronauts left Houston earlier in the day in five T-38 training jets and stopped for refueling at Tyndall Air Force Base in the Florida Panhandle. A battery problem with one of the jets left astronaut Scott Parazynski waiting for a lift at Tyndall.

The rest of the crew took off for Kennedy Space Center and a televised gala welcome without him.

At the Cape, Commander Curtis Brown Jr. thanked the crowd of about 150 reporters for waiting and then invited each astronaut to make brief remarks.

When Glenn's turn came, he introduced himself as "PS2 on this flight," a reference to his position as the bottom man on Discovery's crew, and said he was "very glad to be here."

"One word on this whole thing," said the 77-year-old Glenn from New Concord, Ohio. "I have been pleasantly surprised at the outpouring of interest in this flight, and it's really gratifying to see people get so fired up about the space program again."

It is Glenn's participation in Thursday's launch that has created a level of media attention not seen at the Cape in more than a decade. About 3,500 journalists have been accredited for the launch.

As soon as the photo session was over, Glenn strode straight to his wife, Annie, and hugged her hard.

Glenn, who was the first American to orbit the Earth back in 1962, was given a sendoff from Houston along with his crewmates by Defense Secretary William Cohen.

"We can say with confidence, 'Houston, we have no problems,'" Cohen said. "To the crew, let me say: Godspeed, Discovery."

Glenn will be the oldest person in space by 16 years when Discovery takes off. Story Musgrave, who is no longer an astronaut, was 61 when he last flew two years ago.

Altogether, 83 experiments are planned for the nine-day flight.

Tobacco companies try to boost image through media

□ Philip Morris discussed buying media outlet to boost tobacco's image.

The Associated Press

ST. PAUL, Minn. — The nation's largest cigarette maker considered buying a media outlet such as Knight Ridder or United Press International to influence tobacco policy, a document shows.

The proposal is in a document found among 33 million pages of private tobacco company papers released during Minnesota's lawsuit against tobacco companies. It was publicized today by the organizers of the National Conference on Tobacco and Health, an event bringing together various groups favoring stronger tobacco regulation.

Minnesota's lawsuit was settled May 8 for $6.6 billion as the state and Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Minnesota were about to present their closing argument.

The March 20, 1990, internal document produced by Philip Morris was titled "Top Secret Operation Rainmaker."

The author, who was not identified, posed the question, "What are we trying to accomplish?" then answers, "Prevent further deterioration of overall social, legislative and regulatory climate, and ultimately actually improve the climate for the marketing and use of tobacco products."

The memo says if Philip Morris is to influence public policy and public information about tobacco products, "we must be part of it. The only way to do this is to own a major media outlet. If we are not willing to take this step, then we are not serious about really wanting to change the atmosphere."

Philip Morris spokeswoman Peggy Roberts referred to the document as "some stray piece of paper" and noted that it had never been implemented.

"There's no way to tell who wrote this, what it was written for, whether it was a joke or what," Roberts said. "Anybody would love to own AP (The Associated Press), but if I suggested such a thing I'd be laughed right out of this building."

The author also suggested the need to have a science publication such as Omni so the company could control scientific issues surrounding tobacco.

"It is important to remember that the AARP has the largest magazine in the United States," the memo said.

sons she donates blood. "I was surprised to see how much security they (ARC) have," Waligorski said. "They check the identities of the donors and they follow procedures closely."

According to Duffy, the blood can be divided into four different parts and can be used in a number of ways.

The red blood cells are used to aid trauma victims, she said. The platelets are the part of the blood that helps clotting and are given primarily to leukemia patients.

In addition, the plasma contains protein, vitamins and minerals that are used to fight disease and is used to aid burn and shock victims, Duffy said. She said the cryoprecipitate is also used in clotting and is given to hemophilia patients.

According to Duffy, in addition to registered nurses and medical assistants helping in the blood drive, students are also taking part.

Vicki Cramer, freshman education major, and Emilie Carles, freshman social work major, are both volunteering by transporting the blood and escorting patients to the cantina, an area where donors are given food and liquid to boost their energy.

Both Cramer and Carles are using the experience to gain service hours for Kappa Phi and the 4-H club.

"I wanted to volunteer because I thought it would be fun," Cramer said. "I'm planning on donating blood today."

raise $1000 this year. They raised $800 last year.

The response has been decent, but a lot of students will just walk by the donation table Grime said. He said more students seem to participate through the organizations they are affiliated with.

Paul Pawlaczyk, University Ambassador advisor said students and faculty need to realize that a small donation can make a big difference when everyone works together.

Pawlaczyk said if each organization raises $20 the $1000 goal will be met. He said the fundraising efforts are going pretty well, especially at Easy Street Cafe.

"A little penny and nickel can put clothes on a child's back and educate a battered woman," Pawlaczyk said.

He also said this is a easy way for students and faculty to donate to a good cause because everyone always has change.

"This is a good cause to donate to. Everyone always has change in their pocket collecting dust," Pawlaczyk said. "It is a small gesture that can go a long way."

Hurricane Mitch quickly swirls into Honduras

Forecasters are predicting the hurricane may be the worst in Central America in 10 years.

The Associated Press

LA CEIBA, Honduras — People fled their coastal homes and the Honduran government sent air force planes to pluck residents off remote Caribbean islands Monday in the face of the most powerful hurricane in a decade to threaten Central America.

Hurricane Mitch became a Category 5 hurricane — the strongest category there is — on Monday with winds of 180 mph. At 7 p.m. EST, Mitch's center was over Honduras' Swan Island and was moving northwest at 8 mph.

"Mitch is expected to remain a very dangerous hurricane capable of causing catastrophic damage," the U.S. National Weather Service said in a statement from its National Hurricane Center in Miami.

Hurricane Mitch posed no immediate threat to the United States. The storm was expected to remain in the northwest Caribbean for the next five days, the center said.

Jerry Jarrell, the center's director, said Mitch was the strongest hurricane to strike the Caribbean since Gilbert in 1988. Gilbert killed more than 300 people and ravaged Mexico, Jamaica, Haiti and the Dominican Republic when it blasted across the western Caribbean and part of the Gulf of Mexico, including the Florida Keys, the Florida Straits and Cuba.

The government of Belize closed schools Monday and sent its employees who work along the coast home early to prepare for the storm. Mexico mobilized troops and emergency workers on the Caribbean coast of the Yucatan peninsula.

Honduran President Carlos Flores Facusse declared a state of alert and told coastal residents to leave their homes for safer ground farther inland.

"Where can I go if I leave my house? The government hasn't opened a single shelter," asked Pedro Martinez, an electrician in the city of San Pedro Sula, 100 miles north of the Honduran capital Tegucigalpa.

Authorities in San Pedro Sula said they might set up shelters in public schools.

In La Ceiba, on Honduras' western coast, people stood in long lines at filling stations to buy gasoline under a steady rain.

Maria Gonzalez said she needed the gas to cook with in case her firewood gets wet.

"I have six children, and we live in a riverbed," she said. "If it gets real bad, we'll go to the church and see what the architect of the world has in store for us."

The president ordered all air force planes and helicopters to evacuate people from the Bay islands, a string of small islands off the central coast.

Swinwick Jackson, a fisherman on one of the islands, said he had tied up his boats and was planning to take his family to stay with a relative on higher ground. Speaking by telephone from Utila, 20 miles north of La Ceiba, he said most tourists had left the island Sunday but that some were stranded and that hotels were moving them to houses in the mountains.

"Mitch is closing in, and God help us in the coming hours," said Utila Mayor Monterrey Cardenas.

Police spokesman Ivan Mejia said three rivers — the Coco, Segovia and Cruta — all overflowed their banks Monday along the eastern Honduran coast.

In El Progreso, 100 miles north of Tegucigalpa, the army evacuated more than 5,000 people from low-lying banana plantations along the Ulua River, said resident Nolly Soliman.

Before bearing down on Honduras, Mitch swept past Jamaica and the Cayman Islands. Rain squalls flooded streets in the Jamaican capital, Kingston, and government offices and schools closed in the Caymans, a British colony of 28,000 people.

Heavy rains began to fall along the Honduran coast Sunday night, and the hurricane's outer winds were expected to lash the area on Monday and Tuesday.

Forecasters said they don't expect Mitch to be a Category 5 hurricane by the time it makes landfall.

"We do forecast it to decrease in strength over the next 72 hours," said Jeremy Pennington a meteorologist at the National Hurricane Center.

That didn't stop Flores Facusse from ordering the closure of all public offices on the Caribbean coast by noon Monday. He also closed all schools there.

"We're ready for whatever situation occurs," said Vice President Billy Handal. "I ask God to be benevolent with Hondurans."

The strongest hurricane to hit Honduras in recent memory was Fifi, which ravaged Honduras in 1974 and killed at least 2,000 people.

ATHLETICS

tribute $5 million to the total University athletic budget of just over $8 million.

The large amount of funds needed to support the football team presents particular problems because of Title IX, a federal law which provides for gender equity in education and athletic programs.

One indicator of compliance with Title IX is proportion of male athletes to female athletes.

Bob Holmes, assistant professor of law and a member of the Intercollegiate Athletics Committee, an advisory panel to athletics director Ron Zwierlein, noted that when compiling statistics, football teams will always boost the number of male athletes, and thus put universities out of compliance with Title IX.

"The statistical analysis used is creating problems," Holmes said. "As long as there is a football program the numbers are totally out of whack."

Holmes advocates a different method of determining compliance, such as comparing the percentage high school athletes who are female to the percentage of college athletes who are female. He also suggested adding a women's football team as a possible solution to Title IX compliance.

Nancy Spencer, an assistant professor of human movement, sports and leisure studies, said that some schools are adding women's crew teams to balance the large numbers of male football athletes.

At BGSU, women's soccer was added as a varsity sport last year, and in the Equity in Athletics report, the athletic department cited this as one of several ways it is pursuing Title IX compliance.

Title IX has not only put pressure on universities to add women's sports, but has also affected men's sports as well.

"The focus is on keeping football programs intact...so schools are either eliminating other male sports or not complying," Jurkovic said. "Male nonrevenue programs are being cut, even if they are successful."

"The only real solution for Title IX compliance is to cut men's programs," Holmes said. "That's not acceptable. It creates a backlash."

Despite the measures already taken, the University is still struggling to comply with Title IX.

Last June, National Women's Law Center filed a complaint with the Department of Education, placing BGSU on its list of 25 universities nationwide that are in violation of Title IX.

Tod McCloskey contributed to this report.

Tomorrow: Title IX — Is the University in compliance with federal law?

Default rate falls below 10 percent

□ Student loan default rate declines for the first time.

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The default rate on student loans fell into single digits for the first time, the Education Department reported Monday, citing an agency and congressional crackdown as well as an improved economy.

The drop to a 9.6 percent default rate for fiscal year 1996 was the sixth annual decline since rates peaked at 22.4 percent in 1990.

Congress passed legislation in 1990 and 1992 to crack down on borrowers and trade schools such as beauty colleges and truck-driving schools that promised more job training than they delivered. And the country began to pull out of a recession in early 1991.

"The student loan program is now a shining example of government providing opportunity with accountability," President Clinton said in a statement.

Stricter government controls have eliminated more than 1,000 schools from the program, while a better economy means "there are jobs for those who finish college, so they can pay off their loans," Clinton said.

The department noted that the default rate has declined even though the volume of loans has risen dramatically, from about $14 billion in 1992 to $38 billion in the 1998 fiscal year. Because of the volume, actual dollar savings aren't as dramatic as they could have been.

In 1991, for example, the department had to repay $3.6 billion in default claims to lenders.

In fiscal 1998, the department had to repay $2.8 billion.

The department was still compiling information on how much money it was able to collect from students who had defaulted, but preliminary estimates show an increase from $900 million last year to $980 million this year.

A new higher education bill approved by Congress will further streamline the program and make it more accountable, said Rep. Bill Goodling, R-Pa., chairman of the Education and Workforce Committee.

"Less time and money spent on delinquent loans means more time and money to help needy students receive financial assistance," Goodling said.

Education Secretary Richard Riley said current borrowers can lessen the chance of default by consolidating loans under a new rate of 7.46 percent, made possible under the newly enacted Higher Education Amendments of 1998. The deadline for doing so is Jan. 31, 1999.

In its report Monday, the department said 197,000 borrowers at 7,500 schools had defaulted on their loans. The highest default rates were at the trade schools, with an average of 18.2

percent. The lowest default rates were at four-year colleges and universities, at about 7 percent.

Even though the rate was the highest at the 2,900 trade schools, it was lower than in previous years.

Although critical of using default rates to judge schools, Omer E. Waddles, president of the Career College Association, the organization for trade schools, said "our schools are doing everything they can to make sure that they reduce the default rates and provide the very best education they can to the students."

Annual Halloween celebration downsized

□ Students plan to protest Halloween party restrictions.

The Associated Press

ATHENS, Ohio — Ohio University students planned to rally Tuesday to protest university-imposed restrictions on the city's annual uptown Halloween bash.

Last month, President Robert Glidden announced at a meeting with student leaders that students living on campus will be allowed just one visitor and no campus parking permits will be issued to visitors.

Last year, when visitation was unlimited, 30,000 people crammed streets and 199 were arrested.

The goal is to make Halloween safer, not end the traditional street party, said Student Senate President Darien Moss.

"The intention was never to get rid of Halloween, the intention was just to scale it down," Moss said. "The difference between one guest and two guests can be 5,000 students. That makes a huge difference in residence halls."

Moss said students were upset that guests staying in dormitories have to be preregistered with Residence Life and present identification wristbands, she said.

They are also angry that less than half of the 26 students that met with Glidden lived on campus, she said.

Brian McNulty, assistant vice president for university relations, said the cutting the number of visitors would help even though most students live off-campus.

Ohio University has an enrollment of 19,100, with about 6,900 students living on campus.

Senator to hold hearings on CIA's new Middle East role □ CIA expands monitoring role for anti-terrorist measures.

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate intelligence committee will hold hearings on the CIA's mediating and monitoring role in the Middle East land-for-security accord to determine the cost of tracking Palestinian anti-terror efforts and whether American agents are at risk.

Sen. Richard Shelby, R-Ala.,

the committee's chairman, said Sunday he is troubled because the CIA, under the agreement, would play "a visible role."

"What is the role of the CIA? Is it to enforce a policy? Is it to be an arbitrator? Is it to be bodyguards? I think not," Shelby said on "Fox News Sunday." "I think we have to look at this."

But Secretary of State Madeleine Albright said the agency is no stranger to providing on-the-ground intelligence support to diplomacy.

"The CIA has played roles previously in terms of monitoring and verifying other agreements ... in the region," Albright said on CBS's "Face the Nation." She said the CIA has been fighting terrorism there since the 1996 anti-terrorism conference at Sharm el-Sheikh, Egypt.

Meanwhile, White House spokesman Barry Toiv said President Clinton telephoned King Hassan of Morocco, Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt and Crown Prince Abdullah of Saudi Arabia on Sunday while on a political fund-raising trip to California.

He said Clinton "explained the benefits of the agreement to both sides and he talked with them to build on the agreement and on the partnership between the Israelis and the Palestinians by the Wye talks to create a new atmosphere not only between the two parties but also between Israel and the wider Arab world."

The three Arab leaders were "overwhelmingly positive" in their support, the spokesman said.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, a member of the intelligence committee, disagreed with Shelby's apprehensions about expanding the CIA's role. On CNN's "Late Edition," Hatch said the spy agency can play "a constructive role in making sure that these two sides get along and live up to these agreements."

Under the U.S.-brokered agreement concluded Friday between Israel and the Palestinians, the CIA would keep track of Palestinian efforts to arrest and punish terrorists as a way of assuaging Israeli security concerns. The deal would create a three-party mediation system in which Palestinian and Israeli security officials could present disputes to a CIA arbiter.

Finding new ways to provide prenatal care

□ A "mom van" is touring around poorer neighborhoods, offering prenatal care to women.

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In a large truck parked in one of the nation's poorer neighborhoods, Angel Brooks gazes ahead while a nurse prods her belly in search of tiny heartbeats.

The examining room is cramped. Posters urging safe sex, good nutrition and responsible parenting crowd the walls. On the other side of a folding door, other health workers are counseling a new mother.

It's a "mom van," a prenatal care truck that visits communities with high infant mortality rates to offer pregnant women free basic health screenings, counseling and encouragement.

The people at Healthy Start, part of the federal government, figured that if women weren't getting early prenatal care, then prenatal care would come to them.

The national infant mortality rate continues to drop, according to preliminary 1997 statistics from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. It is now at 7.1 infant deaths per 1,000 live births, a 3 percent decline from 1996.

But the black infant mortality rate was almost twice that at 13.7, although still a 7 percent drop from 1996.

And in the predominantly black neighborhood where Brooks lives, where poverty and teen-age pregnancy are common, it's even higher — 17.4 in 1996.

Even that is an improvement from 22.2 deaths per 1,000 births in 1991, when Healthy Start first came to Washington and 14 other cities as an experimental new program to lower the infant mortality rate where it was highest.

Healthy Start has now expanded to include over 70 local programs across the United States and has $105 million in federal grants for 1999, administered by the Department of Health and Human Services. Local and private money also help support the programs.

"Even though our infant mortality rates are going down, the disparity may suggest that we are not meeting the needs of certain members of our community," said Dr. Thurma McCann Goldman, national director of Healthy Start.

Falcons content with split

□ The Falcons forget about 7-1 loss to the Spartans.

By WILLIAM R. SANDERSON
The BG News

While the score of BG's 7-1 loss to Michigan State looks pretty brutal the team seems to be happy enough with bouncing back against Ferris State the next night.

Powers described the team's overall mood to be a good one this week.

"I reviewed the tapes (of the Ferris game) and thought we dominated the game," Powers said. "We did a good job breaking their counter attack and forecheck and did the things we need to do. After the game was tied we responded. All those things are good signs."

The team is now 3-2-1 overall and 2-1-1 in the Central Collegiate Hockey Association.

In Michigan State the Falcons faced one of the nation's best teams. Even after tying Ohio State on Saturday, MSU remained in fifth place in both the U.S. College Hockey On-line poll and the USA Today/American Hockey Magazine poll.

Powers chalked the game up to bad breaks.

"Things just broke bad for Shawn (Timm)." Powers said. "The game is on the line and we are on the power play. We score and it doesn't count and on the same play they score. You just move on."

Savard continues to look good

Although Powers has refused to name a starting goaltender yet, Senior Mike Savard is making a strong case for himself.

Savard played solidly in the 2-1 win over Ferris. He made 24 saves on 25 shots.

The only goal scored against Savard was the product of a two-one that he had no chance on.

Savard split the game against Michigan State. Timm started and was 11 for 15. Savard was 11 for 14.

Savard's record is now 2-0. That includes a win against Northeastern two weeks ago.

Valentine leads the scoring

In a week where BG was held to three goals. Sophomore forward Curtis Valentine has taken over the lead in scoring for the Falcons.

His goal in the Michigan State game has increased his totals to three goals and four assists.

Dan Price is second on the team with three goals and three assists.

Doug Schueller scored his team leading fourth goal against Michigan State. Adam Edinger remains the top assist man with five.

Four solid lines

The forward lines that played together this past weekend are likely to be together for the foreseeable future.

The top line consists of right wing Dan Price and left wing Craig Desjarlais centered by Freshman Greg Day.

The second line has Valentine and Chris Bonvie centered by Ryan Murphy.

Adam Edinger, Dennis Williams and Zach Ham make up the third line.

Of the lines, the fourth line is the least certain. Against Ferris State, sophomore Stewart Nowosad and freshmen Austin DeLuis and Ryan Wetterberg accounted for the game winning goal.

Bowling Green sophomore defenseman Ashley Enser sprints toward the ball, hoping to reach it before her opponent does. The Falcons only have one Mid-American Conference game remaining. BG (7-8-1, 4-4-1 MAC) plays Miami on Friday that will determine its spot in the MAC playoffs.

Playoffs are looming for BG

□ The Bowling Green women's soccer team is looking to improve play and record with only two games remaining before the playoffs.

By PETE STELLA
The BG News

With the playoff season less than a week away, the Bowling Green women's soccer team faces Detroit Tuesday and Mid-American Conference foe Miami Friday to end the regular season.

The Falcons have already clinched a MAC playoff berth, but one or two wins this week would help them in the final standings. To finish in fourth place, BG needs to defeat Miami on Friday and hope that Kent earns no more than two points in its final two games.

The Falcons record stands at 4-4-1 in the MAC and 7-8-1 overall after the loss to Michigan State last week. BG is confident it can finish the season on a positive note despite the loss.

Tom Piccirillo

"The loss had no effect on the playoffs and our hunt for a great finish," coach Tom Piccirillo said. "We need to get our confidence and momentum up for these games because they are very important to us."

Two wins would also give the Falcons the confidence that it showed at the beginning of the season.

"We have had a great season and I hope we can finish it like we began it," freshman forward Tracy Gleixner said.

Junior forward/goalkeeper Michelle Lisy made the start in goal against Michigan State and stopped nine shots for the Falcons. Lisy should get the start in goal Tuesday and will continue to help out the struggling defense and goalkeeping.

Ashley Enser

"Lisy did a great job for us in goal even though we lost," Piccirillo said. "If something is working well, why change it?"

However, the loss to MSU was only the beginning of the bad news. Sophomore defenseman Ashley Enser and freshmen defenders Cari Combs and Leslie Hepfinger -- all Falcon starters -- left the game due to injury and are questionable for this week's games.

"We definitely need those girls healthy for this week," Piccirillo said. "They are great play-makers for us and help bring the team around when we need it."

MAC tournament play begins Tues., Nov. 3 and the game sights will be decided after this week's play.

Williams nears title

The Associated Press
AUSTIN, Texas — Ricky Williams needs to run for 444 yards in his remaining four games to break Tony Dorsett's NCAA Division I career rushing record. "I don't play for records," the Texas running back said Monday. "I don't think about them when I play. But if I have a big game and break records, that is something I can celebrate after the game." Dorsett ran for 6,082 yards while playing for Pittsburgh from 1973-1976, averaging 5.66 yards a carry. Williams, a senior and leading Heisman Trophy candidate, has rushed for 5,639 yards, averaging 6.43 yards a carry. He already has nine NCAA records, including career rushing touchdowns (69), career total TDs (71) and career points scored by nonkickers (428). Williams has had 24 100-yard games.
