Ribeau to host holiday open house

□ This Wednesday will provide students a chance for a real look at the top University officials.

By IVY CHIN
The BG News

Many students probably have never seen Sidney Ribeau, president of the University, even after being at the University for several years. Now, there is a chance for those students who want to meet the president and are curious about where the president works.

President Ribeau is hosting a Holiday Open House Wednesday from 3 to 5 p.m. on the second floor of McFall Center Gallery. He invites all members of the campus community to join him in celebrating the holiday season with cookies and punch.

"Everyone is invited and welcome," said Deb Magrum, administrator assistant to the president.

According to Magrum, the president will be at the gallery during the two hours. This will be a good opportunity for the student body, faculty and staff to meet with the president.

"All offices on the 2nd and 3rd floor of the McFall Center — including those of the president, provost, senior vice president for finance and their staff — will be open for the campus community to visit during that time," Magrum said. "This is a great and easy way for those who want to see the offices and say hi to the president."

Magrum said that this event has been held for three consecutive years, and they received big successes from the last couple years. Hundreds of people came to the event, Magrum explained.

"This open house idea keeps in tune and goes along with his philosophy of students first and the University as a premium learning community," Magrum said.

She said that Ribeau likes to interact and share some time with the students. Magrum also explained they decided on the last week of classes because it is the time that a lot of students heading off and graduating, and students will be very busy during the finals week as well.

"We have the picnic at the beginning of the semester, and we would like to have this open house before the semester ends," Magrum said.

Tina Hovan, senior elementary and special education major, said that this is something very

Bring me a dream

□ Short temper and irritability are two symptoms of sleep deprived students as they go through cognitive and psychological changes without it.

By JENNIFER LULEY and SARAH WILLIAMS
The BG News

The clock reads 3:37 a.m. Your body, still mad at you for going to your 8 a.m. class on only four hours of sleep, screams that you should be enjoying the pleasures of dreamland. Instead, you sluggishly turn back to the five-page paper you just started. You won't be getting any sleep tonight.

If foregoing sleep for studies or a social life sounds familiar to you, you may be one of the many college students nationwide who are sleep deprived.

According to Dr. Pietro Badia, BGSU psychology professor and director of BGSU's sleep laboratory, scientists aren't exactly sure why sleep is so essential to our well-being.

"But we do know that being awake induces chemical changes in the brain and the only way to reverse these changes is through sleep," Badia said. "Also, sleepiness can only be reversed by sleep itself; resting will not do it. The brain needs sleep to recover."

Cognitive and psychological changes are the most noticeable effects of sleep deprivation, Badia said.

"Initially, (the psychological) effects of sleep deprivation result in enhanced mood," he said. "In fact, sleep deprivation has been used to treat depression. However, as sleep deprivation increases, one becomes short-tempered, irritable, etc. In contrast, cognitive changes occur more quickly and are more apparent. As the deprivation period gets longer, cognitive deterioration gets greater."

Jennifer Kinser, a sophomore secondary education major, said she notices some of these effects when she doesn't get enough sleep.

"I don't smile as much, and I get short with people," she said.

Darin Hohman, a sophomore telecommunications major, said he was experiencing the effects of sleep deprivation at the

BGPD steps up ticketing for lack of seat belts

□ A national campaign urges enforcement of seat belt laws.

By WENDY SUTO
The BG News

Police will be diligent in enforcing seat belt and child restraint laws during the increased holiday traffic.

"Operation ABC Mobilization: America Buckles Up Children" is a national campaign which included over 5,000 law enforcement agencies from around the country. It is organized by the Air Bag and Seat Belt Safety Campaign in cooperation with the U.S. Department of Transportation and the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

From Nov. 23 to 29, the Bowling Green Police Department stepped up the enforcement of Ohio's child passenger safety laws. They paid more attention to drivers who were not wearing a seat belt, and who were not buckling up their children.

Mark McDonough, BGPD sergeant, said this campaign was put into effect because there are more motorists on the road.

"(Traffic accidents) are not necessarily more prevalent during the holidays," McDonough said. "The potential for accidents of course increases."

Tom Votava, BGPD chief, said officers stopped vehicles and looked for child passenger safety violations. They also used Operation ABC Mobilization to increase enforcement of adult

Lack of green BG irritates vegetarians

□ Dining Services offers some vegetarian options, but students say it's not enough.

By CAROLYN STECKEL
The BG News

When students go to the Union to get something to eat, the choices facing them are hamburgers, steak sandwiches, chicken fingers, chicken teriyaki sandwiches and grilled cheese.

The one thing that four out of five of these items have in common is that they involve meat, which for vegetarians poses a problem.

To students who choose to live a vegan lifestyle, which eliminates all animal products, the grilled cheese is eliminated as well.

So what is left for the student to choose from?

There are many different types of vegetarianism which dictate what can and cannot be eaten.

According to the University Dining Service's Guide to Vegetarian Dining, the most popular type of vegetarianism worldwide is lacto vegetarianism. Lacto vegetarians consume dairy foods, but no meat or eggs.

Lacto-ovo vegetarians consume eggs and dairy foods, but will not eat animal flesh.

Veganism is the most extreme form of vegetarianism, accounting for about four percent of all vegetarians. Semivegetarians, on the other hand, simply reduce their intake of meat and while some choose to eat fish and poultry, semi-vegetarians do not eat red meat.

According to Amy Hoops, assistant director for dining services, it is very easy for vegetarians of every kind to eat on campus.

"We have an a la carte program which means you can pick your own food," Hoops said.

She said that the meals offered at the dining halls include recipes that are suitable for vegetarians.

"The salad bars, pasta bars, and wok all lend to a vegetarian lifestyle," Hoops said.

A majority of what vegetarians are missing as a result of Bowling Green State University.

The last time I checked, that was the name that was printed somewhere in the return address portion of any number of envelopes that came to my house. Bowling Green State University. We are all a part of it whether we like it or not and we (faculty, staff and students) are the people that make it happen here. We work together, play together and learn together. We argue, we laugh and we make ourselves better here. We are teachers, students and planners for the better of our community... OUR campus community.

It seems like that is forgotten. OUR community. I find constant frustration on the blame that is placed from one organization or department to another. Why is that we can't work together or at least attempt to help one another be better? The opportunities for organizations to make a difference on this campus are equal. We owe it to one another and ourselves to make this community a great place to be.

OUR community should be somewhere that we recognize needs and differences and we embrace them. We should embrace change and be kind to our fellow beings. Instead of complaining about what others aren't doing, we should pick up the phone, give them a call and say "hey... I have some great ideas, can I be a part of your organization?" We should be wonderful followers and even better leaders by allowing ourselves the right to make mistakes and learn from them. Someone once said to me "it's all part of the process," she was right, but, let's make the process even better!

Stop placing blame and be a part of the change.

Web euchre, chatting should be decreased

Okay, guys and gals, it's that time of year again: Christmas shopping, final week of classes, and then final exams coming up in a week. Yikes, right? I mean, if your professors are anything like the ones I've had, they've let everything slip until the last minute (that is, you're nowhere near where your syllabus says you're supposed to be). Now you're expected to write three or four papers and complete a project or two and they're all due in the same 48 hour period. Just thinking about what some people are looking forward to this week makes me cringe and feel their stress.

When you go to write two of those papers, which are due in two and three hours consecutively and there's this huge line in the computer lab. I mean, there are six or eight people waiting in line, all for the same type of computer, all with papers to write. And you don't have a choice. You have to get those papers done and you know that finding a free computer in any on-campus lab is about as likely as finding a five-hundred dollar bill on the street.

So you have to stand in line and wait, and you try to put the paper together in your head, but that doesn't work. The sounds of fingers hitting the keyboards is too distracting, because your fingers should be making those sounds. You stand there and shift the weight of your bookbag from shoulder to shoulder, hand to hand, and maybe even set it on the floor and kick it a few times. People who are trying to work as quickly as possible on their papers glance up at the line apologetically as if to say, "I'm sorry, but I'm working as fast as I can."

Someone stands up and slings his bookbag on his shoulder, and the whole line of waiting students straightens up. The student stops to murmur something to the lab attendant and then takes a place at the front of the line. The attendant takes a piece of paper and tapes it to the monitor: "OUT OF ORDER." Murmured expletives from the line of students who are growing more and more impatient. Finally someone leaves a computer and walks by the line, grabbing whatever he printed just before practically running out the door. You're back to where you began in line.

That's when you start to notice what everyone's working on: history, British and American Lit, computer projects... and some people don't even have books open in front of them; they're just staring intently at the computer screen. Wait a minute, they haven't even looked up since you walked in, like everyone with the books has. What are they doing?

You crane your neck and see an e-mail window and a Netscape window on their screen that keeps updating itself. Egads! They're chatting! There are five people waiting in line and they're chatting! You glance around the rest of the lab. Nearly everyone is working on a paper or project of some sort. You can count the number of people chatting or otherwise on one hand. This one guy is sitting right at the end computer playing euchre through some website. You (I'll assume you're not a naturally violent person) would like nothing better than to yank him out of his chair and bash him over the head with your unwieldy ton of books.

And so I address those people who use the computers on campus to entertain themselves. I know we all do sometimes. I love building my own webpage and playing the occasional game of euchre with people I've never met. I am addicted to checking my e-mail and occasionally I like to chat.

But at the end of the semester (or any other time when people are waiting in line), I try to refrain. I check my e-mail and then leave the computer to someone who needs it more than I do, for papers and projects and all that stuff that's required for class. It's a common courtesy, which should be enforced. If you are playing web euchre or chatting, everyone should have the right to kick you off to work on assignments.

You can always find something else to do, like socialize. And when was the last time you read a book that wasn't for class? So do all the stressed-out people a favor and get off the computer.

Temperatures still high as winter comes □ Christmas tree searching is made easier this winter as the weather is unusually warm.

The Associated Press

BOSTON — Thanksgiving leftovers are long gone and Christmas trees are going up, but Monday's temperatures across the East made it feel more like Easter. Or May Day.

Boston hit 74 degrees and Concord, N.H., reached 73, the warmest December readings on record for both cities. Dozens of other cities also posted records in the East and the South.

"We're supposed to be in the anatomy lab," said Sip Siperstein, 32, of Cambridge, who sat on a bench at lunchtime on Boston Common with classmates from Tufts Veterinary School. "This is better than cranial nerves."

And it put a new wrinkle in the holiday season.

"It's a lot easier to look for a Christmas tree when you don't have to shovel snow and clear off your car and you don't have to do it wearing your coat and gloves," Jo-Anne Barker said in Clay, N.Y., where some customers were wearing shorts. "I just hope we have snow for Christmas."

The warm weather won't last, of course.

INVESTIGATION

Reno declares Clinton/Gore funding O.K.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Janet Reno declined Monday to order an independent counsel investigation of President Clinton over 1996 campaign financing. She concluded there is "clear and convincing evidence" that he and Vice President Al Gore lacked criminal intent to violate federal spending limits.

Following a 90-day preliminary investigation, Reno advised a special court that "there are no reasonable grounds to believe that further investigation is warranted" into the involvement of Clinton and Gore in Democratic Party-financed issue advertisements run during the 1996 election.

"I find by clear and convincing evidence a lack of knowing and willful criminal intent required for criminal prosecution," Reno wrote. She based that on the fact that Clinton and Gore were advised by legal counsel that the advertising campaign complied with the law.

RUSSIA

Recovering Yeltsin fires top aides

MOSCOW (AP) — Boris Yeltsin roused himself from his sickbed for three hours Monday, fired several of his top aides and then returned to a Kremlin hospital where he is recuperating from pneumonia.

It was a classic performance from the ailing Russian president, who rarely seems so energized as when he is firing someone. The dismissed aides included officials who had commented recently on the president's poor health.

"You can see how vigorous I am," Yeltsin told his staff as he delivered the news, according to presidential spokesman Dmitry Yakushkin.

Among those fired was Presidential Chief of Staff Valentin Yumashev, one of Yeltsin's closest and most loyal aides. A former journalist who was the ghost-writer of Yeltsin's memoirs, Yumashev had served as chief of staff for nearly two years — an eternity in Yeltsin's Kremlin.

extremely unusual. Within a couple days or a week, it could change dramatically," said Frank Keimig, manager of the Climate System Research Center at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst.

In fact, that's exactly what happened in Burlington, Vt., where the temperature peaked at 67 at 8:45 a.m., then dropped to 46 by 11 a.m.

That cooling trend was expected to spread across much of the Northern states Tuesday.

While the Northeast basked, the Southwest shivered.

In the Los Angeles area, Burbank chilled to a record-tying low of 33 on Monday and snow festooned some of the mountains framing the Los Angeles Basin. Grand Canyon, Ariz., iced down to 10 below zero.

Phoenix and Las Vegas, Nev., both picked up their first measurable snowfalls in several years Sunday. Ski areas in around Lake Tahoe in the Sierra Nevada picked up 5 feet of snow over the past week.

Meanwhile, upstate New York, normally one of the snowiest places in the East, has yet to record its first half inch of snow.

Astronaut's begin building international space station

□ Spacewalking electricians go out to wire together space station parts.

The Associated Press

SPACE CENTER, Houston — Two astronauts floated out into the vacuum of space Monday to hook up 40 electrical connections between the first two pieces of the international space station.

It was the hardest and most important job of their careers.

The work called for Jerry Ross, NASA's most experienced spacewalker, and James Newman to clamp together the connectors for power and data flow. The spacewalk, the first of three scheduled for this week, was expected to last 6 1/2 hours.

On Sunday, Endeavour's crew used the shuttle's robot arm and thruster rockets to snap together the Russian-made piece, Zarya, and the American-built component, Unity, forming a seven-story, 35-ton tower in Endeavour's cargo bay.

Construction of the space station hinges on making the hookups, warned NASA's lead flight director, Bob Castle. Unity, a connecting passageway, needs the solar power generated by the Zarya control module to survive.

Working 240 miles above Earth, Ross and Newman had 135 tools at their disposal and a horde of engineers standing by in two countries to offer advice.

Once all the connectors were joined, flight controllers planned to turn on the power inside the fledgling station.

Newman had the more unwieldy job, Ross the more hand-intensive.

The plan called for Newman to unclamp each power cable and hand it to Ross to link to its mate on the other side. With each electrical connector attached to 20- to 30-foot cables, it was going to be like handling "an octopus and depending upon how cold those cables are going to be it could be" a relatively stiff octopus," Ross predicted before the flight.

Before locking the connectors together, Ross had to inspect each end to make sure the tiny pins inside were not bent or caked with debris.

Each man's spacesuit was equipped with a mini jetpack in case their safety lines to the shuttle broke. Endeavour is so loaded that it would be difficult for it to dash after a runaway spacewalker.

NASA deliberately picked two pros for the job and, even then, had both men go through 200 hours of training underwater, the closest approximation to weightlessness on Earth.

Microsoft finds Y2K bugs in Windows 98

□ Nine out of 10 personal computers will be affected by the 2000 bug.

The Associated Press

REDMOND, Wash. — Several minor Year 2000 bugs have been found in Windows 98, one of the most heavily tested software products ever, Microsoft said Monday.

None of the problems poses any risk of data loss or damage to computers, and they are so obscure that most users would be unlikely ever to spot them, said Don Jones, Microsoft product manager for Year 2000.

"If I were talking to my father, I would tell him not to worry about any of these issues whatsoever," Jones said.

Jones said the Y2K bugs were found during continuing company tests, and none were reported by customers.

"If I were talking to my father, I would tell him not to worry about any of these issues whatsoever."

Don Jones

Microsoft product manager for Year 2000

Windows '98 already had been tested by tens of thousands of people and companies before its release in June, in addition to in-house testing by Microsoft.

Microsoft posted a software update Monday on its Web site to correct the problems. It previously issued corrections to Windows 98 to fix other bugs — or "issues," as Microsoft prefers to call them.

Windows is the operating system for nine out of 10 personal computers, and Microsoft has gone to great lengths to reassure customers that it and other products won't be affected by the date change at the end of the millennium.

Some programs, especially older ones, may fail when the date changes to 2000 because they were written to recognize only the last two digits of a year. Such programs could read the digits "00" as 1900, instead of 2000.

Among the Y2K problems with Windows 98:

—If a computer is started at the precise fraction of a second when the date changes, the computer's system clock could display the wrong time or date.

—A particular technique for resetting a date to Feb. 29 for a leap year could result in Feb. 29 being displayed for other years. This is only a display problem, meaning it cannot be applied to stored data.

seat belt laws, and passed on information on air bag safety and the importance of restraining children twelve years old and under in the back seat, especially in a vehicle equipped with air bags.

In Bowling Green, McDonough said, there are several citations issued pertaining to motorists not having their seat belts on, including children who are not buckled up and front-seat passengers and drivers failing to follow the law.

"I don't know if it is laziness or habit for them," McDonough said. "It is habit after a while to put the seat belt on, but it is also habit to not put that seat belt on."

He said national statistics show that of those who did not grow up with parents who made them wear their seat belt, one-third will not put a seat belt on themselves as adults.

He feels that both college students and city residents get a fair amount of citations for not wearing their seat belts.

Linda McCool, BSGPD lieutenant, feels the city probably has fewer traffic accidents during the holidays because the college students are not around. Over the Thanksgiving holiday, only five seat belt operator citations and one passenger citation were given out. McCool said this is a marked increase from last year though. Only a total of three citations were given out during the Thanksgiving holiday last year.

McDonough said that people should be aware of an increased number of drivers on the road during the holiday season.

"Drive more defensively knowing that things may happen," McDonough said. "People will have their minds elsewhere because there will be more family in the car."

McCool said that since people are more in a hurry during the holidays, they may not think about putting on a seat belt due to having several things on their minds already.

"They may think they do not need to put on their seat belts because it is just a short trip across town," McCool said. "When everyone has this attitude, that is when there could be more problems."

McCool said it is important to get into a habit of buckling up.

"Least of all, you might get a warning, McCool said. "Most of all, you could get killed."

SLEEP

time of this interview.

"You lose your sanity, you get more headaches and you don't say what you mean," Hohman said, adding that he needs at least five hours of sleep a night to prevent these effects.

Kinser, however, said she can endure one night without much sleep as long as she gets at least eight hours of sleep the following night.

"I can handle one night without much sleep," she said. "But after that, it's just not good."

Badia said this difference in sleep time is normal.

"The amount of sleep one needs is an individual requirement," he said. "Some folks can do with a few hours of sleep, others need 10 to 12 hours of sleep. What percentage of time they would need to be deprived is unknown."

David Reed, a registered nurse who works for Toledo Edison, said age also plays a major factor in the amount of sleep we need.

"A lot depends on age," Reed said. "Old-timers like me don't need as much sleep as college students and people younger than college students need still more. There are also a lot of differences within age groups."

According to recent estimates, Americans get between one and two hours less sleep each night than Americans did at the turn of the century, Reed said this has a lot to do with the way our society spends their free time.

"There are a lot more things to do and activities after dark than before," Reed said. "Having electricity also plays a big part, and not as many people are performing hard physical labor in their jobs or around the house."

However, both Reed and Badia agree there are ways to prevent sleep deprivation and counter its effects. For example, Badia recommends a 20-30 minute nap for students who are sleep deprived.

"Naps help greatly," he said. "Most students are sleep deprived, and a 20-30 minute nap would be very helpful to them — especially to those students who fall asleep in class. Falling asleep in class occurs basically because students are sleep deprived."

Over-the-counter caffeine tablets are also a method many students use to counteract sleepiness. However, neither Badia nor Reed recommends them.

"(Caffeine tablets) can help you be more alert up to a point," Badia said. "However, getting the proper amount of sleep would be better, or supplementing your nighttime sleep with a daytime nap. I should also note that caffeine tablets have side effects for some students. Among other things, they can upset your stomach and also result in a racing heart beat."

If nothing else, Reed said he hopes the affects of sleep deprivation will encourage college students to get a good night's sleep.

"You can get sick quicker and have more stress," he said. "Lack of sleep makes you anxious and this can become stress. It can all lead to poor grades."

their eating habits is protein.

"Items like roasted soybeans and sunflower add protein to a salad," Hoops said.

Also, the mix of lettuces is another way that vegetarians can substitute protein in their diets.

"At the Union there is an iceberg and romaine mix of lettuce," Hoops said. "We do not have room to put the lettuces in individual containers, so we mix them."

Dark green leaves, like romaine lettuce, provide more protein than iceberg lettuce, which provides no nutrients at all.

However, according to Jennifer Hopton, sophomore music education major, she hardly ever sees the dark leafy greens which vegetarians need.

Hopton, who is a semi-vegetarian, said that she thinks it is difficult for vegetarians to eat on campus.

"The vegetarian-type choices that are offered around campus and in dining halls leave much to be desired," Hopton said.

She said that the salad is usually filled with brown lettuce, and the pasta is usually over-cooked and the sauce watery.

"You can only take so much of one thing," Hopton said. "Perhaps if they created a potato bar, or expanded upon the current salad bar by adding more vegetables, things may be a little easier."

According to Tonya Hefner, nutrition educator, she has heard that it is difficult to eat as a vegetarian on campus.

"It is a matter of knowing what you can and cannot eat," Hefner said.

She said that though she does not eat on campus very often, she believes it is difficult, but possible.

"If students are not picky, then they will do fine," Hefner said. "It helps to combine items from on campus and supplement them with products from the grocery store."

Though it can be difficult for students to find the foods that provide the necessary nutrients, Hefner said that students need to ask the right questions.

"If you don't ask, then you are not going to know what is there for you to eat," she said.

interesting, and she is planning on going.

"A lot of us don't know what the president actually does and how his office looks," Hovan said. "This is a good idea and great opportunity to find it out."

She continued that the open house lets people know that the president has responsibilities and actually spends time on campus and has contact with people.

"It reminds us that President Ribeau is also a normal guy, who has an office and works in the office," Hovan said. "He is not just a figure head."

She encouraged students to attend the open house and meet with the president. She also hopes that the president should keep this tradition every year.

In addition, some organization groups have planned to attend the open house as well. For instance, some Springboard members are looking forward to being at the president's reception, said Ellie McCreery, director of Springboard.

She said Springboard made sure all students received the invitation. Springboard bouncers and coaches will also go to the reception individually, but not in a group, McCreery explained.

"Springboarders seek enriching experiences," McCreery said. "They will enjoy talking with President Ribeau, Provost Middleton, the vice provost, and people from all over BGSU, and some will get a kick out of seeing the offices of the president and other University leaders."

She also said that Ribeau's invitation is terrific.

"It exemplifies that, at BGSU, students are indeed important, that they are 'first,'" McCreery said.

Memorial remembers Pearl Harbor attack

□ 57 years later, a special ceremony honored minority soldiers for the first time.

The Associated Press

PEARL HARBOR, Hawaii — All went silent at 7:55 a.m. Monday, the exact moment 57 years ago that the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor and dragged the United States into World War II.

Then a long blast from the USS Russell honored the 2,388 soldiers and civilians killed on that "date which will live in infamy" at Pearl Harbor and nearby military bases and civilian sites.

Through the mist, Hawaii Air National Guard F-15s roared over the harbor in the "missing man" formation. They were matched by a flock of five seabirds skimming over the surface of the water.

Survivors, relatives, state and military officials gathered at the USS Arizona Memorial, directly over the wreckage, to pay tribute in a somber ceremony.

"This is something I feel I owe to the people that are out there," said Ansil "Sandy" Saunders, 80, of New York and Hawaii, who was serving on the USS Raleigh during the attack. "I saw the ship go down. It's a thing of respect and duty I feel I should perform."

About 900 crewmen aboard the Arizona at the time of the attack remain entombed there. Another dozen survivors have been interred there since 1988.

Rear Adm. William Sutton, commander of the Pearl Harbor Naval Base, said his message for the day was "we remember."

"Even 57 years later, we remember the heroism, the valor, the sacrifice and are thankful for the legacy they left for us — a legacy which continues to thrive in today's Navy," Sutton said.

For the first time, a special ceremony was held honoring the 63 minority soldiers — black, Filipino, Guamanian — killed during the three-hour bombardment. The ceremony was organized by the Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Holiday Coalition and the Coalition for Human Rights Education, in cooperation with the National Park Service.

The ceremony was held 50 years after the integration of the U.S. armed services by President Harry S. Truman on July 26, 1948.

"War is a great equalizer," said Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, who was wounded in World War II. "The blood that gushes from all is equally red. There is no black blood, white blood, brown blood or yellow blood."

The military has honored only one black sailor for his actions during the Japanese attack and more minority servicemen should have been honored, said Marsha Rose Joyner, president of the King Holiday Coalition. Messman Doris Miller was awarded the Navy Cross, a Purple Heart, four other medals and two bronze stars for shooting down five Japanese planes.

The Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor early on Dec. 7, 1941 brought the U.S. into war. Veterans remembered the day, Monday, at the Arizona Memorial as it's docked at Pearl Harbor.

Falcons battle new division I team

After a huge road win on Saturday, the Men's Basketball team hopes to gather another victory against Oakland.

By PETE STELLA
The BG News

Buzzer beater one game to a new division I team the next game; now that's transition.

The Golden Grizzlies of Oakland University invade Anderson Arena today for an 8 p.m. non conference game with the Falcons.

With the last-second win over Eastern Michigan Saturday, the Falcons up their record to 3-2 overall and 1-1 in the MAC. There next three games will all be out of conference.

Saturday, the Falcon seniors were forced to step it up and show their strong leadership in the nail biting victory over Eastern. Senior forward Tony Reid, guard DeMar Moore and center Kirk Cowan all ended the game in double figures. Moore lead the pack with 17 points, Reid followed with 15 and Cowan chipped in 10.

"Saturday was a huge win for this team," coach Dan Dakich said. "I hope that we have the attitude where we are hungry to get on a winning roll."

Oakland University is a part of the Mid-Continent Conference and a new member of Division I basketball, in which so far they have racked up a 2-5 overall record. The Golden Grizzlies are coached by Greg Kampe, who was a two sport athlete at Bowling Green in the late 1970's. Kampe returns for his 15th season as the head coach.

Oakland also returns four letter-winners in junior forward Myke Thom, junior guard Steve Reynolds, and sophomore twin forwards Dan and Jon Champagne. The Grizzlies also will have several underclassman that will be seeing adequate playing time.

"Oakland is a funny team," Dakich said. "They are in their 1st year of Division I college basketball and they have played a great schedule so far."

After their one game home-stand, the Falcons travel to Indiana University for a weekend tournament. BG will face Grambling University on Friday and then face the winner of the Boise State/Indiana game on Saturday.

"I hope that we play well this weekend," Dakich said. "I want us to represent the school well because it is a tough place to play and the teams we will be playing will be good."

They may have taken fifth place out of eight teams but they left the Eastern Michigan pool as confident as ever.

"We did an awesome job," assistant coach Kendra Akers said. "The season has been kind of rough, but I really believe what we've been doing has been good."

Many times improved as the Bowling Green men's swimming and diving teams had probably their best meet of the season even though it might not have shown in the final standings.

The Falcons had 356.50 points for fifth place behind host Eastern Michigan (1,066.5), Denison (852.5), Oakland (712) and Kalamazoo (407.5). Michigan took eighth but brought its divers only as Brett Wilmot took both the 3-meter and 1-meter diving platforms.

Fast is what they wanted, and fast is what they got.

The Bowling Green women's swim team went into the Eastern Michigan Invitational with one main goal-- to swim faster than they have all year. The Falcon's did exactly that with 50 in season personal best times for the Falcons.

The Falcon's finished fourth out of eight teams with 642.50 points. BG finished just behind Oakland (668.50) and Eastern Michigan (697). Division III swimming powerhouse Denison blew out the competition with 1013.50 points.

"We all suprised ourselves in the way that we swam," captain Tina Sullivan said. "Everyone swam well. This was a big confidence booster and will help us toward the future as we get ready for the MAC championship meet."

Nancy Simpson left the competition drowning in her wake. The Junior from Yorktown, Va. captured two first place victories in the 100 and 200 Back. In the 100 Back Simpson beat her personal best for the year by over a second while in the 200 she beat it by over three. Junior Sarah Abell also swam a personal best for the year finishing fifth in the 200 and fourth in the 100 Back.

"Everything was clicking," Simpson said. "I got a lot of confidence after I won the 200 (Back). It helped me win the 100 (Back)."

The Falcons were also impressive in the relays. BG captured thirds in both the 200 and 800 Free relays. In the 200, Alis-

Women's basketball splits two on long road trip

Placing third in the Cougar Shootout over the weekend repeats Seton Hall Tournament outcome.

The BG News

Different tournament, different competition and different coast--same results.

The Bowling Green women's basketball team traveled west, not east this time to compete in the Cougar Shootout hosted by Washington State University. The Falcons split this weekend, losing to WSU before taking third place with a 13 point victory over American University.

The Cougar Shootout marks the second straight time in the last two weeks that BG has finished third in an in-season tournament with the first third place finish happening earlier and the Seton Hall Tournament on the east coast.

Washington State 71, BGSU 63

The Brown and Orange made their runs to defeat WSU, but clutch free throw shooting at the end of the game by the Cougars suffocated BG. With 11:26 left to play in regulation, the Falcons were down 51-37 to WSU. Led by Sherry Kahle, who scored a team high 17 points, the Falcons make a 16-4 run to bring the game within two.

Host WSU, then opened the game back up to seven until the next run by BG. Netta Smith hit a pair of free throws with just 1:15 left to put the Falcons up 62-61, only their second lead of the game.

During the last 32 seconds the Cougars drained 7-of-8 free throws to advance to the title game.

BGSU 90, American 77

BG cracked down defensively as they never let the Eagles of American University take the lead. The Falcons held American's leading scorer, Kate Miller to 2-of-17 shooting in the game.

"In the second game our defense really picked up and we were more focused on winning," BG's Francine Miller said.

The Falcons never trailed in the game thanks not only to the defense but also to the offensive explosion by senior Jill DeFosse. She scored a career high 24 points, 15 of them coming in the first half.

"Jill DeFosse came up with some big baskets when American was trying to get back into the game," coach Keanne Knoblauch. "She carried us in the first half."

DeFosse was the only Falcon selected to the all-tournament team. She had 34 points, while snagging 14 rebounds for the tournament.

With the split, BG is now 4-3 overall on the year and will face Big Ten foe Michigan at home, Wednesday.

The Falcon hockey team looks to increase mental toughness after Michigan loss.

By WILLIAM R. SANDERSON
The BG News

While BG did lose to Michigan 5-2 Saturday, they did do something right. They just could not finish the job.

In playing the defending national champions, the Falcons did go into the second intermission with a 2-2 tie. It was in the third period that Michigan scored three consecutive goals on their way to the win.

"The idea is to use this game to make ourselves better," BG coach Buddy Powers said. "The talent differential isn't very great. (Michigan) has got an edge to their game and a confidence."

Buddy Powers

The loss dropped BG to 6-7-1 overall and is 5-6-1 in the Central Collegiate Hockey Association. They are seventh in the league. Three points behind Michigan State and Northern Michigan.

Michigan, on the other hand, is 9-1-1 and sits in first place after wins against BG and Miami.

NFL is rethinking use of instant replay in playoffs

Several recently disputed calls have challenged the 'replay' rule.

The Associated Press
NEW YORK — After two weeks of well-publicized officiating gaffes, instant replay is almost sure to return to the NFL. And perhaps sooner rather than later. That might have been assured Monday when commissioner Paul Tagliabue picked up his morning newspapers. On the front page of all three New York dailies was a picture of Vinny Testaverde lying on the ground a foot short of the end zone. Still, the play was ruled a touchdown and the Jets beat Seattle 32-31 Sunday. The call in the game's closing seconds kept the Jets tied with Miami in the AFC East and in effect knocked the Seahawks from playoff contention. Now there's a possibility some form of replay could be instituted for the rest of the regular season and the playoffs. The technology is in place because of replay experiments during exhibition games. All that's needed is a phone vote by the owners. "There is one objective — get the calls right," Jets coach Bill Parcells said Monday. "Not some of the calls, not the calls in the second half or the last quarter or only in the end zone. It's to get the calls right." That seems to be the feeling around the league after what many owners view as two weeks of embarrassment, starting with the "heads-tails" flap in Detroit on Thanksgiving and continuing through the end of New England's last-second win over Buffalo the following Sunday. Last March, the return of replay was defeated by two votes — it got 21 of 23 necessary to pass. Now the replay proponents have their two votes — from Buffalo's feisty Ralph Wilson and Detroit's William Clay Ford, who hardly ever says anything publicly. Both were vocal enough a week ago to risk $50,000 fines with complaints about officiating and both said they would change their "no" votes to "yes." The system that's been tried in exhibitions involves giving coaches challenges on calls — perhaps two a half or two a game — with the referee making the final decision after viewing the play on a sideline monitor. That would help end the objections to the system that was in effect from 1986 to 1991, which used a replay official in a booth and was filled with endless challenges and endless delays, some lasting longer than five minutes. The objections to the challenge system came mainly from the coaches, who have been split among a number of proposals. Some wonder what would happen, in a situation like the Jets-Seahawks game, if a coach had exhausted his challenges before a game-turning play at the finish. However, the proposal under study by the NFL is a liberal version that would allow a coach an additional challenge on a game-deciding play, such as the one that cost the Seahawks on Sunday. Few pretend that replay solves everything. Dan Rooney, president of the Steelers, said last week he thinks officials are overly managed already, leading to indecision. The Seahawks-Jets game is an example. Phil Luckett, the referee in Powers feels the team still needs to develop mental toughness for games against the big teams. "When you have mental toughness, a team has to make a real good play against you to score a goal," BG coach Buddy Powers said. "They didn't make really good plays to score goals. We just broke down defensively and they hacked the puck into the net for the third goal. Then we turned it over on the break out." Despite the obvious disappointment, team captain Dan Price thought good things came out of the game. "We were down by a goal twice and we came back," Price said. "We played forty strong minutes and they're the fourth ranked team in the nation. It's just too bad we couldn't finish the team off."

SPECIAL TEAMS

The Falcon powerplay had a rough time of it against Josh Blackburn and Michigan. In a penalty filled game, BG went one for ten with the man advantage. "We had opportunities on the power play to get back into the game, and our powerplay didn't respond," Powers said. "We were stagnant on the powerplay during the third period. It was almost like we weren't quite sure we could get it done on the powerplay." Despite their trouble against the Wolverines, BG still has the second best power play in the league. The Falcons have been connecting on 17.3% of their chances. The Falcon penalty kill gave up two Michigan power-play goals on nine chances.

PRICE CONTINUES SCORING LEAD

With a goal and an assist against Michigan, Price continues to hold a slim lead over center Adam Edinger for the team lead in scoring. Price has totaled seven goals and 13 assists for 20 points. With that he is tied for fifth in the CCHA's overall scoring list. Edinger picked up a pair of assists against the Wolverines and stands at eight goals and one assist.

ATTENDANCE REPORT

Bowling Green had their best crowd of the season for the Michigan game. The official attendance was 4,870 or about 130 shy of a sellout. So far this season BG is averaging 2,840.

Williams' effort leads to award

□ Texas' Ricky Williams wins first AP player of year honor.

The Associated Press
NEW YORK — Ricky Williams returned for his final year at Texas with modest goals: Win games and have fun. Mission accomplished, and he still gets to play in the Cotton Bowl.
On Monday, Williams won The Associated Press' first College Player of the Year Award in balloting by AP member newspapers, TV and radio stations. "Anytime you are considered the best it's flattering," Williams said, "and to be picked the top player in college football by the reporters who watch the games so closely is truly an honor." Williams provided college football fans with an extra special season. While running for 2,214 yards and 27 touchdowns — he also had a TD reception — Williams became major college football's career rushing leader and carried his team to an 8-3 record and a Cotton Bowl matchup against Mississippi State on Jan. 1.

"If I was to tell someone before the season that we were going to win eight games, they would have told me I was crazy," Williams said. "For us to come together as a team and surprise so many people with how we played was extra special."
Williams received 76 of the 143 votes in the AP balloting, easily outdistancing Kansas State quarterback Michael Bishop, who had 17 votes. Kentucky quarterback Tim Couch was third with 15 votes.

On Saturday, Williams will be the overwhelming favorite to win the Heisman Trophy, given each year to college football's most outstanding player.
Watching Williams play turned into lots of fun for everyone except the Longhorns' opponents. Just ask Texas A&M.
When he ripped off a 60-yard touchdown run against the Aggies on Nov. 27, he broke Tony Dorsett's career rushing record and started the Longhorns on their way to a 26-24 upset. He finished the game with 259 yards, giving him a career total of 6,279 yards to Dorsett's 6,082 from 1973-76.
The record-setting run was typical. Needing 11 yards to pass

Dorsett's 22-year-old mark, Williams shed a tackler near the line of scrimmage, ran nearly 60 yards and then carried an Aggie defensive back into the end zone.
Williams owns 15 other NCAA records, including most career touchdowns (75), points (452) and all-purpose yards (7,206). He also averaged a record 6.22 yards per carry.
Couch, who owns his share of records, recently said Williams was the best player in the country.
"As many times as he carries the ball, he's just as strong in the fourth quarter as he is in the first quarter," Couch said.
Helping his team turn into a winner again under a new coach was another reason he returned to Austin instead of bolting to the NFL.
