USG impeachment charges dropped

BY JEFF ARNETI

The BG News

The Internal Affairs committee of Undergraduate Student Government acquitted the USG executive board of impeachment charges yesterday.

The committee said they found no grounds to remove them from office. The charges alleged that the executive board unethically spent approximately $90 at Kaufman's Steakhouse last semester.

According to Ashley Elder, a member of the internal affairs committee, said they decided to

"We have to sit down as a committee and decide how we want to word the letter of information."

Ashley Elder

a member of the internal affairs committee

send a letter of information. He said a letter of information represents a decision by the committee that there are no grounds for expulsion. Elder said executive board members may or may not have violated rules, but due to the ambiguity of the situation, no concrete decision could be made.

The Internal Affairs committee could have acted in two other ways regarding the charges. The most severe decision would have been to send a letter of intent, which would signify that grounds for expulsion from USG had been found, and that an impeachment would proceed. Another decision would have been to send a letter of reprimand, which signifies that wrongs were committed. It serves as a warning to the charged that future violations could result in impeachment proceedings.

The committee's decision regarding the impeachment charges, to send a letter of information, is the equivalent of a verdict of not guilty. Elder said that the committee may still make recommendations for the future actions of the accused, but the committee has not sent or written the actual letters of information yet.

"We have to sit down as a committee and decide how we want to word the letter of information," Elder said.

He added that the letters would be sent and received by Friday.

Even though the charges have been essentially dismissed, USG

Trustees vote to renovate Offenhauer West Tower

By BRANDI BARHITE The BG News

The Board of Trustees voted 8-0, with one trustee missing, yesterday to spend $2.2 million to renovate Offenhauer West.

The passage of this proposal will allow for internal improvements to be made to Offenhauer West, including the installment of new carpet in hallways and residence rooms. The lounges will also be remodeled to allow room to provide space for carpet, paint and microwaves.

Steve Bryan, chairman of the financial affairs and facilities committee, said the renovation will not be structural, yet will focus on bringing Offenhauer West up to standard.

He said the project will also involve painting the corridors, the stairways and resident rooms. Additionally, it will involve upgrading lighting and plumbing improvements.

The Offenhauer West project is the first part of University President Sidney Ribeau's proposal to spend $30 million on renovating the residence halls. The two other parts of Ribeau's proposal include the construction of a new student union and improving University technology.

"Offenhauer was chosen to be renovated because it was the one that was felt to be the least up to standard," he said.

Bryan added that over the past several years, the

Photojournalists seek alternative programs Students looking to expand career in photos find few options

By IRENE SHARON SCOTT

The BG News

Five years ago the photojournalism sequence was eliminated and in May the last remaining photojournalism student will graduate.

Jason Suggs, a senior photojournalism major and a BG News photographer, said despite the elimination of the photojournalism sequence, the University has been able to offer him alternatives.

In order to fulfill the requirements for his photojournalism degree, Suggs did an independent study which was designed by Dennis Hale, acting chairman of the journalism department, and Tim Gleason, a mass communication graduate student.

If individuals are really serious about photojournalism, Suggs advises them to participate in independent study.

"Independent study is great because you are working one-onone with an expert," he said. "It dents can benefit from the visual communication technology (VCT) department.

"They don't do journalism but they know a lot about cameras they know a lot about cameras and visual communication," said Suggs. "The two go hand-inhand with journalism." According to Hale, the photo-

According to Hale, the photojournalism sequence was suspended because of low enrollment and because of not having a regular faculty member teaching the photography classes.

"There were no more than three or four students involved," he said. "There were more students who were outside the sequence taking the [photography] class. A good number of them were sport management majors."

Despite the lack of photojournalism majors, Suggs emphasized the importance of having a photojournalism sequence within a journalism program.

"Photos are the integral part of the newspaper," he said. "A good photo can really benefit a story because that is the first thing people see. Photos are just as important as the copy."

Furthermore, it is important that people know how to take good photos, he said.

Matt Webb, academic counselor of the arts and sciences college, advises students who are interested in photojournalism to choose a major closely related. He suggests majoring in journalism, if the student wants to make photography a career. He said other alternatives include majoring in visual communication and technology education (VCTE) or majoring in fine arts.

Webb believes students could still get adequate experience without an official photography class.

"Students who want to become a photographer can develop skills outside the classroom, such as at the newspaper," he said. "The University offers enough basic classes."

Hale, believes students who major in VCTE or fine arts still get efficient teaching photography-wise. The type of photos taken do overlap in some areas. In journalism, photos taken are a focus that goes with a news situation. For instance, a photo of a speaker, buildings and meetings.

Art photography is more an artistic expression, abstract and landscape. However, they do

Series focuses on leadership skills

By AMYJO L. BROWN

The BG News

Tonight will be the start of a series which will bring community leaders to the campus to speak with students.

The Presidential Lecture Series will be held in 101 Olscamp Hall at 7 p.m. and will focus on Leadership in the 21st century. The series will honor those students who have exhibited leadership skills, and will bring one University graduate back to talk to the students.

Edward Reiter, senior chairman of Sky Financial Group, will be the keynote speaker at the reception.

"My message is to enjoy a happier and better life," Reiter

Reiter began to work for the Sky Financial Group before its named changed from the Mid American National Bank and Trust Co. in 1966 — 34 years ago. He worked his way from a partime teller to senior chairman of the company. He does not attribute his success, though, to any great ambition.

"It happened because I did good work along the way," he said. He suggested that students just do their best everyday.

He stressed the importance of a leader, someone who serves others. From his own experience of being a leader at his company, he said it is important to take care of the employees.

"Your job is to expand people's dreams," he said. "Their values come into the company. The greater opportunity they have to be a part of it, the more productive they will be."

Lee Hawthorne, a graduate intern who helped organize the project, said leaders aren't always the ones in office.

"Leaders come in many forms," she said. "Leadership can come in a silent form also, such as in academics."

Hawthorne helped University President Sidney Ribeau and Eileen Sullivan, co-coordinator of the series, prepare the Presidential Lecture Series.

The series was established, she said, to bring quality speakers and dialogue about higher education and the world we live in to the students and communi-

Before tonight's reception, members of the Presidential Leadership Academy will meet with Reiter at Sky Financial and will have a small group session.

"He will be directly involved with students," Hawthorne said.

ELE HERRADOR DUMAN

Recently, I've run into quite a few people who are having problems with their advisors and the advice they're being given, or not being given.

A friend of mine, who's graduating in May, received news just' last week that she needs a class credit yet - for a class that hasn't been offered in at least two semesters. She's not worried about getting the class waived, but she's a little upset that she can't arrange a time to meet with her advisor. Her advisor's office hours are the hours she's scheduled to work or in class, and her advisor doesn't seem to be willing to cooperate to establish an appointment. My friend was told he was ineligible for methods, (the methods block is the group of classes usually taken together the semester before student teaching) because he is lacking two math courses. The department told him he should have checked

> his checklist, even though he went in to see his advisor about which classes he still needed. They don't even have a record that he saw his advisor.

> He quit a full time job to come back to school. His job paid for his classes until he quit; if he had been told that he still needed those two math classes, he could have remained employed for another six months and had those classes paid for, too. His advisor should have informed him that he still needed those classes. What's their job, if that's

> Who are these people who call themselves advisors? Are they really advising? Or are they just making it up as they go?

I asked some people who have fairly high opinions of their advisor what was so great about her, and the general response was that she (they were all referring to the same advisor) knew how to help if you knew what to

That seems to be the brunt of the problem. Sure, advisors may be able to help out if you walk in and say, "I need to know specifically this." But what if you don't know what to ask? Most people, go to their advisors to either make sure they're on track, or as a last resort when they're at their wit's end about what comes

THE CONSTITUTION? OH, IT

WAS GETTING ALL YELLOW WITH

I asked another friend of mine what she thinks of her advisor. She said that she hadn't had any problems with her. Then, upon reflecting, she said, "Well, I have actually never met my advisor. Every time I have personally set up a meeting with her, I go to meet her and she is out for a conference or something of the sort, so I end up having to meet with some guy ... The guy has always been helpful, but I think it would be nice to actually meet my advisor. She is supposed to be there to help me and it is pretty sad

Yet another friend of mine says that her Latin advisor is wonderful.

He took her majors (she had a double major at the time) and planned the next year for her according to all of her require-ments. Don't you wish all advisors would look that far ahead and do so much? Students have to look ahead. We have to plan everything so that we can get out of school and on with our careers. Most of us want to sit down no later than our junior year and say, "OK, I still need this and this and I can graduate May that year." Our advisors look to the next semester, and rarely beyond that.

Advisors are here to help us; to make scheduling and planning a little easier. Cheryl, a sophomore, says that she doesn't really like to see her advisor, because she's made to feel like she's wasting his time. But that is their job! They are here to serve the students under their guidance, to keep them on track and help them make it through college as painlessly as possible,

Students shouldn't be worried that meeting with an advisor will leave us wrongfully informed or registered for class-es that we don't need, or switched to a program that we didn't really want in the first place. We shouldn't walk out of a meeting feeling that we haven't been told the whole truth, or that there was a whole block of information they didn't want to tell us, or that we're just wasting their time.

Jena likes to know she's not alone when bad stuff like being wrongly advised happens to her; e-mail her at

This weekend, several events occured that drove home the fact that Black History Month may be a relic of time: the production of Flyin' West and the Cotton Club recreation.

High-quality events and productions like these (the affirmative action debate two weeks ago, Mike Dyson's speech on rap and spirituality) should not be restricted to just one month of the year. The same goes for events like Latinopalooza.

We recognize that the time and effort required to put forth just one of these events is quite sizable, but the expectation shouldn't come from simply groups like LSU, BSU, NAACP and others. It should come from as high up as the administrative level and as low down as the average student. Black history, Latino history, women's history, Asian history, every single ethnic, gender and sexual orientation group has a place in American history. Obviously, the initial reason for having to make months for the purpose of recognizing these groups was that they weren't being recognized at all. But in our society and at our University, where we supposedly have a real and true commitment to diversity and recognition of the various contributors to our history, taking only one month to hang up posters telling us what contributions black men and women have made to American history just doesn't seem right.

Everyone at this University and in this community would benefit from having events like what we've seen this month each and every month. But we need the support from all campus organizations and administration to accomplish such a thing. Imagine what a "premier learning community" BGSU would truly be if that were to happen.

What do you think about months like Black History Month, Latino History Month, etc? Does the University properly recognize them? Do we recognize them too much, too little? Tell us what you think at bgnews@bgnet.bgsu.edu.

A nice piece of fiction, perhaps, but not suitable for a newspaper. Although Gill gave us all a convincing story, it really didn't have much of a point, ironic or otherwise. The column wasn't suitable for a newspaper. I'm not going to dwell on this Both Gill and Opinion Editor Brian Taylor have apologized for printing the column, and I will throw my apologies into the mix. We made a mistake, we'll admit it, we'll move on.

Opinions about Brian Taylor's column on Feb. 15 is a bit less clear. In "Masturbation shouldn't be shameful," Taylor set out to address a topic not usually written about in newspapers.

A lot of readers, I am sure, had a knee-jerk reaction when reading the headline. Masturbation, after all, is a taboo subject in our society. And that's part of might rub people the wrong way or (gasp) make people think.

Looking at Taylor's column objectively, as a reader rather than an editor, I might take issue with some of his language. He could have written the column without phrases like "spunk" and "circle jerk."

Overall, however, it is a very well-thought-out, well-written piece on a subject that is of some importance in our society even if it is not written about in the USA Today.

This also gets back to the philosophy behind a newspaper. While our audience is diverse, and includes faculty members, Bowling Green residents and "outsiders," most of our readers are students.

We must write for students. Even on Presidents Day.

A student newspaper should print stories about sex, because students talk about sex. It should also print stories about alcohol, drugs and yes, masturbation. This year, there has been or will be stories on these and many other topics that you might not find in the Toledo Blade or The

New York Times. Hopefully, we can handle these subjects in a mature and thoughtful manner, like Taylor's column on Monday. If a little humor in an opinion column helps to drive the point home, so much the better.

To those who think that Monday's page two might have hurt the University's recruiting drive, I would take issues with your Suppose a prospective student were to read the headline 'Masturbation shouldn't be shameful," and from that alone, determine that BGSU was filled with perverts who talk about disgusting things.

That is not the kind of student that I want next to me in class.

Alternatively, wouldn't a University want to attract students who are open minded and will ing to look at diverse views on diverse issues?

My guess is yes, and from a conversation I had last week with President Ribeau, I know that he is in agreement with me.

Thus I return to a key point of my own philosophy, and, I believe, a philosophy of The News as a whole: that we should be responsive and reflective to students and the BGSU community. That we should err on the side of freedom of expression rather than bite our tongues cortcerning sensitive issues. That our paper, and especially page two, should be a place for open, honest discussion.

That's the way it is, and that's the way it should be.

Females Only - How To Get Along Without The 'Only One'

By Ginny Dalton March 3, 1943

The Bee Gee News

Editor's note: the following article [headline included!] is reprinted exactly from an old issue of the BG News back when it was spelled differently and only came out once a week. The "man-shortage" due to war recruitment puts the gender ratio on our campus today (43 percent male to 57 percent semale) in perspective. Of course, the 'coeds' seem to have had a more difficult time dealing with the situation back in '43. Thankfully, times have changed ...

Design for living, - without a man. (Boring, isn't it?) No doubt, gals, the rapid decrease of males about the campus has come to your reluctant notice, as it has to ours. Obviously, though we hate to admit it, we remaining femmes will soon be stu-

University - for Women! And with spring poking it's nose around the corner, that ain't good! However, like they keep telling us, there must be a bright side to even this, so let's look about and view the possibilities.

First on the list, we find the "escape" angle, by means of hibernation, but that sounds unpatriotic, and besides you might miss something. Then there's the old, but usually satisfactorily occupation known as "wolfing"; however, with no prospects, the percentage on that drops to zero. So, amid such discouragements, it seems we will have to unearth something a bit more practical to take up this "time on our hands."

To begin with, there's the little chore (oh, but pleasant task!) of writing to your fella, or fellas, as the case may be, in the service. Who knows, you may be a potential Walter Winchell-ess! And by the way, think of the dents of Bowling Green State money you save, not buying a new sweater, with nail polish and lipstick to match for every dance that comes along. The increase in budget is amazing, 'tis said

> Come spring, outdoor sports again stagger into the picture, and you can always whisk away the hours playing tennis, - or something. Women are better opponents than men anyway, cause you don't have to exert as much energy. As a last resort, one jump ahead of utter boredom, it isn't hard to find some sadly neglected lessons that could use a polishing; in fact we predict a distinct zoom upward in grades as the male population gradually declines.

So here we have a few basic suggestions which, in their own little way, should help to keep Bee Gee's feminine stag line busy, too busy to think about the headache Sadie Hawkins' Week is undoubtedly going to

Eye on Trial reveals new information

Pathologist testifies James Byrd Jr. was alive when dragged to death would expose the white early morning hours of June 7

JASPER, Texas — Dragged along a bumpy road by a chain around his ankles, James Byrd Jr. desperately shifted from side to side to ease the excruciating pain and was alive until his head was torn off by a concrete drainage duct, a pathologist testified Mon-

Dr. Tommy Brown took the stand at the trial of John William King, one of the three white men accused of killing Byrd last June because he was black.

Prosecutors, who wrapped up their case against King after 43 witnesses, need to prove Byrd was alive when he was dragged in order to prove kidnapping and murder, which together supremacist to the death penalty.

'It's my opinion, while being dragged, Mr. Byrd was conscious and was attempting to relieve the pain and injuries he was receiving," said Brown, who explained how Byrd's heels were ground to the bone.

"I think we all know how much brush burn abrasions, like if you fall and slide on a surface with your hands - that's very painful - and this would have been very painful to him. He would probably swap one portion of his body for the other, trying to get relief as he was being dragged.'

Brown said Byrd's fatal wound occurred about two miles into the grisly journey in the when his head slammed into a concrete slab covering the gutter at the foot of a driveway.

The pathologist said there was no way to determine whether Byrd was still conscious when his head hit the culvert. King's father and a female relative left the courtroom even before the pathologist testified. Some family members who stayed cried. Hours later, the defense rested after calling three witnesses who testified for less than a hour. King did not take the stand.

Closing arguments are scheduled for Tuesday.

The defense witnesses included a convicted burglar and sexual offender, John Mosley, who made some of the tattoos on King's body that prosecutors say are evidence of his seething racial hatred. Mosley said the tattoos "looked cool, that's all."

Another defense witness, Dennis Symmack, who hired King for construction work, said King was well-educated about the Klan and didn't like blacks.

Before defense attorneys began their side of the case, the jury watched an 11-minute video authorities made the day after Byrd's body was found. The video retraced the nearly threemile dragging route.

The jury of 11 whites and one black studied most intently 14 crime-scene photographs, delivered to them individually in black folders.

Lady in Senate race could add spice

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - New York Mayor Rudolph Giuliani says a decision by Hillary Rodham Clinton to run for the Senate from New York would only add to his desire to enter the race.

Other Republicans also gave notice that the first lady would face a rough-and-tumble battle for the seat. It's the kind of race that lovers of politics "kind of salivate over," former Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., said Sunday.

A growing number of Democrats are urging Mrs. Clinton to run for the Senate seat that opens up next year when Sen. Daniel Moynihan, D-N.Y., retires. She has said she is giving serious thought to the idea, and President Clinton has said he would support her if she decides Recent polls put her ahead of Giuliani, who also has yet to formally enter the race, but both sides agree it would be a bruising affair where Mrs. Clinton would have to sacrifice her privacy and face attacks over Whitewater, her support for liberal causes and her statement last year in favor of a Palestinian

"I can tell you it's no walk in the park," former Democratic Rep. Geraldine Ferraro, who twice lost bids for a New York Senate seat, said in an interview with Time magazine. "The tabloids try to eat you alive every day. Much worse, they go after your family.

Giuliani said he would be more inclined to run if Mrs. Clinton is his opponent. "It would be the most focused-on race in the country," he said on CNN's "Late Edition." "Starting off from the underdog position would probably be a good thing from my point of view."

D'Amato, who lost his seat last November after a bitter battle with Democrat Charles Schumer, said on "Fox News Sunday" that trying again next year was "certainly very tempting." He said there were at least two other attractive Republican moderates who could run successfully against Mrs. Clinton -Reps. Jack Quinn and Rick Lazio.

Mrs. Clinton would be formidable but "this is not a laydown," D'Amato said. He speculated that the longer she waits to make her decision, the more likely it was that she will run. Republicans "are actually relishing the battle," he said.

One Democrat who thinks she shouldn't is former White House aide George Stephanopoulos, who, in an open memo to the first lady in this week's Newsweek, wrote that "Whitewater, billing records, cattle futures, the travel office and Castle Grande (real estate development) will all be back. ... Do you really want to spend your last year in the White House reliving the most painful episodes of your tenure?'

But Rep. Nita Lowey, D-N.Y., who has expressed her interest in the Senate seat, said she would gladly give up her plans to run if Mrs. Clinton enters the race.

"If she decides to run I will support her enthusiastically," she said on Fox, adding that "it's just a week after the impeachment is over and she deserves the time she needs" to make that decision.

Time also quoted Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., who is urging the first lady to run, as saying he discussed the matter with Clinton when he joined him on an Air Force One flight to Mexico

"He was more excited than I've ever seen him about anything," Rangel said.

No one on the Sunday news programs, including the Republicans, made much of the fact that Mrs. Clinton, raised in Illinois and a longtime resident of Arkansas and Washington, has not lived in New York.

portrait as well. Portrait photos often correspond with something a photojournalist would do, Hale said.

According to Larry Hatch, chairman of the visual communication and technology education department, the VCTE program is a slightly different from of photojournalism. The VCTE program is geared towards business and industrial work. Students can specialize any of the mediums offered. The mediums are photography, digital media, print and multi-media. Basically, their focus is on taking care of communication-related prob-

Jill Wesolowski, a sophomore scientific and technical communication major, said VCTE photography classes are both journalistic and artistic.

"VCT photography classes focus on a blend of artistic and journalistic values," Wesolowski said. "VCT photography class teaches the students how to use photo shop and other available software to manipulate photos. This process can turn a mediocre photo into a work of art, or a clearer portrait or reality, or both."

Webb believes that either a major in VCTE or fine arts, along with a minor in journalism can provide advantages.

"Art photography skills are more of a vocational component with an emphasis on artistic expression," he said. "VCTE gives students a solid set of skills because they are most likely to be working with various forms of technology which expose them to current technology."

Gleason believes there is a difference in classes offered by the photojournalism sequence versus a VCTE and Fine Art.

"The training is different," he said. "They all have the same mental spot but takes different directions.

VCTE is more commercial oriented and art is more self-creation and something that will be used for an exhibit, said Gleason.

The original photojournalism sequence was comprised of journalism core classes and three courses that specialized in photography. The areas that were covered in this sequence were beginner's photography, photo editing and color.

For now, journalism is comprised of three sequences print, broadcasting and public relations. However, the University still offers basic photography classes. These includes basic photography, advanced photography and visual editing, Hale

Despite the elimination of the photojournalism sequence, it was successful when in existence, Hale said.

There is no question that the BGSU journalism program has graduated some outstanding photojournalism people in the past, particularly under the direction of Jim Gordon, who is in the BG photo book and is the current editor of News Photographer magazine, " he said.

Hale said some University graduates now work at the Cleveland Plain Dealer, New York Times and at National Geo-

Webb disagreed. He does not think that the lack of a photojournalism sequence effects the University's publications of yearbooks and newspapers.

"A lot of the photography students come to the University, with strong talents and experience from high schools and other places," he said.

Whether the University has a photojournalism, sequence or not, one of the goals of the journalism department is to have help for photojournalism students.

"It would be nice to have as faculty member who is experienced in photography and graphics," he said.

In closing, Gleason believes that colleges eliminating photojournalism sequences is becoming a trend

exas governor George Bush gains suppor

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Texas Gov. George W. Bush is a hot commodity at the National Governors' Association meeting, with many of the 30 other Republican state executives urging him to enter the 2000 presidential race.

Bush, who was joining his fellow governors at the White House today for a roundtable meeting with President Clinton, says he'll announce next month whether he'll seek the office once held by his father. But many governors believe a bid by Bush, who leads the GOP field in early polling, is imminent.

"I believe he should (run) because the support is there; therefore, I believe he will," Michigan Gov. John Engler, who has been buttonholing governors on Bush's behalf, said Sunday.

Connecticut Gov. John Rowland predicted that more than two-thirds of the GOP governors would rally swiftly to Bush's side if he enters the race. "He is our best candidate, undoubtedly," Rowland said. A senior Bush political adviser, speaking on condition of anonymity, concurred with the two-thirds esti-

Mindful of the large pool of Republican White House hopefuls, some say it's premature to issue endorsements.

"Right now, I've got a senator in Arizona that's running and a former vice president in Arizona that's running. And I'm staying neutral," said Arizona Gov. Jane Hull, referring to Sen. John McCain and former Vice President Dan Quayle.

Two governors, Mike Huckabee of Arkansas and Don Sundquist of Tennessee, are working for former Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander, who ran for president in 1996 and will try again. And Wisconsin Gov. Tommy Thompson hasn't ruled out his own bid.

Others are jumping enthusiastically into Bush's corner.

I just know that in my heart, of all these very fine candidates, George is the best of the best," said Oklahoma Gov. Frank Keating, chairman of the Republican Governors Association.

Bush, who allowed last week that he is "warming to the task" of running, said he is gratified by the support. But, he added: "The fact-gathering of one weekend is a part of a decision-making process that's going to take awhile to come to final resolu-

At a news conference with Texas reporters, Bush said he is sticking to a timetable that calls for him to make his announcement next month.

"This decision is one of the heart and one of the head. And in the heart, as I've made it clear the last couple of months, I'm reconciling what this decision means with my family," said Bush, whose 17-year-old twin daughters have expressed reluctance about being exposed to the national spotlight.

Personal scrutiny appears chafing at times to Bush himself.

He said Sunday that he will not expand on his earlier refusal to discuss whether he has ever used drugs, but added: "I will say that the rumors I'm hearing around here are totally ridiculous, and I would hope that the Washington press corps would be careful about gossip and Engler said no formal endorsements are expected at the governors' meeting, which concludes Tuesday after today's White House meeting and a dinner for Clinton. The president played host to the governors Sunday night.

Bush and Engler advisers said the Michigan governor, who talked strategy with Bush over breakfast Saturday, is laying the groundwork for endorsements and campaign help if Bush takes the plunge. That help would be invaluable, Oklahoma's Keating said. "The Republican governors are the leaders of their parties in their states. I think it would be an enormous advantage."

Bush met Saturday with potential presidential campaign donors, part of his camp's effort to build a fund-raising base that can be triggered the day he announces his intentions.

With the Texas Legislature in session, Bush said he won't be traveling to New Hampshire, Iowa or other states with early primaries or caucuses. In a sign of his popularity, however, delegations from other states have traveled to Austin to pay homage. He already has welcomed elected officials from Iowa, New Jersey and South Carolina, and more are coming.

Swimmers survive rough waters

By NICK HURM

The BG News

Senior swim captains Katie Rosinsky and Tina Sullivan are examples of two swimmers who withstood the test of time

There was a time when Rosinsky and Sullivan thought they would quit. Nine of their classmates had already done so, but Katie and Tina

"I couldn't quit on a bad note," Sullivan said, "I couldn't let it end that way. After swimming my whole life, I couldn't let my last memories be that I wish I hadn't done it that way.

"It was definitely a rough time," Rosinsky said. "There were times when I didn't think there was going to be a senior class at all. It seemed like every time you got close to someone they would quit. It was nice that we always still had each other."

The two senior swimmers came from very different scenarios. Rosinsky is originally from New York, but moved to California. She used to play around in her backyard pool in the sunny climate. Her family then moved to Pittsburgh. She found out quickly that Pittsburgh doesn't have the ideal weather for an outdoor pool.

Rosinsky was bummed that she couldn't swim, so her mom told her to go join the high school swim team. She wasn't the best, but was team captain her junior and senior years'. The teammates she graduated with ended up swimming for premiere swim schools like Clemson, Florida and Princeton. Rosinsky was originally going to attend Ohio Northern until she decided to change her major from sports medicine to sports marketing.

"I came here to visit a friend and loved it," Rosinsky said. "I went me if I could get through the practices then I could walk on the team."

The rest is history.

Sullivan was born in Flint, Mich. Her big sister is one of the main reasons she started swimming. Though her sister is two years older, Tina says they were very competitive with each other throughout high school and even into college. Sullivan had a very decorated high school career. She helped her high school to four straight conference championships. Originally Sullivan was going to attend Ball State, but she headed to BG for one final trip and changed her mind.

"I came to BG and I had a lot of fun with the team," Sullivan said. "It felt like a family. It felt like my high school team a lot. They Things didn't click right away for Sullivan. "My first year here I was really homesick," Sullivan said. "After my first semester, I had papers to transfer to Michigan State and I didn't want to swim anymore. When it came around Mid-American Conference (championship) time everyone got closer and I ended up Rosinsky has seen her times improve drastically. Her freshman year she would always be sure to be in the back of the pack in her freestyle events. By her junior year, Rosinsky started seeing some major results. She said that coaches Randy Julian and Kendra Lowe encouraged her and told her that she was finally there with the rest of the pack and now it was time to excel.

Sullivan on the other hand, had her best year her freshman year. At the MAC championship she made it to the preliminaries finishing 16th in the 100-meter backstroke and 14th in the 200-meter backstroke. Sullivan is finally seeing times this year that are better than her freshman year times.

"These are two great examples of two young women who have endured a career that had good, difficult, and exciting times," Julian said. "They have been through the grind. When things were tough, they were part of the solution. When things were excellent they were Rosinsky and Sullivan have followed the role as past captains have. They keep up the swim traditions that have been around BG way before their time. The two have also been a pair to look up to by the underclassmen. The fact in how much our teammates believe in us has made our whole four years here worth it," Rosinsky said.

Teammates and coaches have the same attitude about the departure of their senior swimmers. "I'm truly going to miss the two of them," Lowe said. "They have been a great assets to the team. They are a big part of this program that will be hard to replace because of their heart and spirit.

Rosinsky and Sullivan have simple messages they want to leave

You're going to have good days, and you're going to have bad days," Sullivan said. "If you dwell on the bad days you will not get anywhere.

"I want people to learn from me that you don't always have to be the best," Rosinsky said. "To excel you can set goals within your range. As long as you put your heart into it you will get what you

A person often hears about coming up empty after a trip to Las Vegas.

That was the case for the Bowling Green softball team when it traveled to Las Vegas to play in the UNLV classic. BG opened the season winless in five tries.

In all five games, BG could not plate more than three runs or nine hits and committed at least three errors per contest.

The Falcons opened play Friday against 25th-ranked Oregon and 28th-ranked Pacific. BG lost both contests 6-0 and 6-3 respectively. Against the Ducks, the Falcons managed just three hits including a double by Angie Domschot Against Pacific, BG flirted

G women take third

Muncie, Ind. and Ypsilanti, Mich. were the settings for two track meets which the Falcon women were taking part in Sat-

Ball State hosted a triangular meet where most of the women's track team went. Eastern Michigan held a meet of their own. Hanane Sabri and Laura Deneau travelled to Ypsilanti with their sights set on NCAA qualifying performances.

With the Mid-American Conference Championship just a week away, coach Steve Price and his athletes treated the Ball State meet as a chance to improve their seeds for the MAC meet and simply stay in shape.

Ball State won the meet with 115.5 points while Miami took second with 94.5. BG settled for third in the absence of some of its top performers.

Along with missing Sabri and Deneau, All-American long and triple jumper Huina Han sat out the meet resting an injured knee. She was healthy enough to compete but is looking forward to a healthy MAC meet The Falcons finished with four individual winners Senior Tracy Hill won the 400-meter run setting a school record along the way. Her time was 56.33 seconds. This also broke the Ball State Fieldhouse record.

In the shotput, Falcon Lori Williams set a personal best. She heaved the shot 44 feet 5 1/2 inches winning the event.

For the fourth straight meet, junior Lisa Keegan had a record setting performance in the 20pound weight throw. Her toss of 57 feet 3 inches proved good enough to win the event giving her the Ball State fieldhouse BG's fourth winner was Libby Mitchell. She ran the 800 in 2:11.94.

The Falcons achieved their goal of improving MAC seeding at the meet.

"A lot of people really improved their times," Price said. "For example, Hill had been ranked seventh in the conference. Now she's third. By improving, she will be in the fast heat at the championship giving her a better chance at winning the title."

In Ypsilanti, Sabri managed second place in the mile while Deneau won the 3,000-meter Sabri's second place finish proved good enough to break the 14-year old BG school record. Her conference best time of 4:46.63 broke Laura Murphy's mark of 4:48.42 set in 1985. She also achieved her goal of an NCAA qualifier though it is just a provisional.

Following two weeks full of sickness and injuries, coach Sterling Martin sent only 14 of 32 track and field athletes to the Eastern Michigan Classic for the final meet before the Mid-American Conference Championship.

Rest and preparation for the all important meet set the tone for

"It remains to be seen if it pays off," Martin said. "It was a definite plus to rest them and give them another week to get healthy before the most important meet of the season."

Among the few athletes who made the trip, Jimmy Weckesser achieved the only finish in the top five in an event. The senior took fourth in the mile with a time of 4:19. 15.

Freshman Mark Newton set a personal record with a high jump of 6 feet 8 3/4 inches taking sixth in the event.

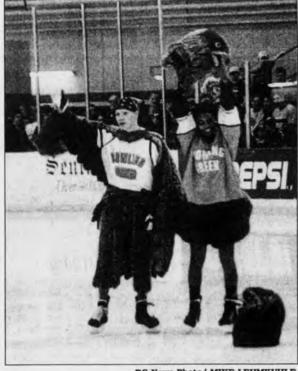

"That was a big improvement for him," Martin added.

Junior Kreg Hatfield managed an eighth place finish in the 3,000-meter run, 8:49.02, while Dave Anderson had the only other top ten finish for BG with a ninth in the 800-meter run, 1:56.50.

The rest should help BG at the MAC meet, but there are still some sore hamstrings which will hurt.

"We'll be hurting in sprints," Martin said. "Eric Holmes is still questionable. Chaz Price still has high hamstring problems. (Ricco) Oglesby and Eric Peterson should be able to compete and that will

Bearcats back to winning

The Associated Press

CINCINNATI - They've pulled out of their three-game losing streak by winning at home a couple of times. Does that mean the ninth-ranked Cincinnati Bearcats have gotten their act together?

Two road games this week will tell.

There were a lot of encouraging signs and numerous reminders that all's not entirely well yet during victories over UNC Charlotte and Louisville in the past five days.

They're not playing as well as they did when they opened the season 15-0 and rose to No. 3 in the country, but there's a glimmer of hope that they're headed in that direction.

"We've still got work to do," point guard Steve Logan said. 'We're not all the way back to where we were at the beginning of the season."

After losing on the road to DePaul, Marquette and Saint Louis - all middle-of-the-pack teams - the Bearcats (23-4) returned home at a crossroads.

Only two other teams during coach Bob Huggins' 10 seasons have lost three in a row. One more loss would give them four in February, matching the most ever under Huggins.

Cincinnati was turning the ball over too often, blowing second-half leads routinely and playing like it simply didn't care at times

During an 82-69 victory over UNC Charlotte on Wednesday and a 91-78 win over Louisville on Sunday, the Bearcats had many of the same problems. They turned the ball over 17 times against UNC Charlotte and 20 times against Louisville.

In both games, they built a big lead and let most of it slip away in the second half - the pattern they've followed much of the season. A 17-point lead against UNC Charlotte was trimmed to one, and Louisville cut a 17-point deficit with 5:52 left to 82-77 before fading.

When Cincinnati gets a lead, it still tends to selfdestruct.

"It's ugly a lot of times," forward Ryan Fletcher said. "It's just concentration. We've just take it personal." got to go back to concentrating, making sure we take care of the ball and not make mistakes with

The Bearcats' turnovers were the main reason they got knocked out of the NCAA tournament in the second round last year. Turnover-prone point guard Michael Horton has become a backup in the last two games while Logan - a freshman - runs the offense.

Horton is a better defensive player and runs the fast break better, but is a poor free-throw shooter and has not made a 3pointer in his two seasons at Cincinnati. Logan is a much better scorer but doesn't push the ball up the floor as well and tends to get caught out of place when teams press.

turnovers in 23 minutes on Sunday, but took the blame for a lot more because he was out of of how far they've come.

"I think it was my fault on most of them," he said. "I didn't go get the ball or I was supposed to have the ball in my hands. I

Huggins has returned to his customary methods to get his team turned around. He has received technical fouls in two of the last three games for sideline tirades and has been quick to bench a player for not working hard enough in practice or making a mistake during a

He thinks his players went soft as they won so much at the beginning of the year and he's determined to get them back to winning through physical defense, rebounding and taking care of the ball.

"They bought into it early. We won a lot of games and they didn't buy into it as much," Huggins said. "They're going to have to buy into it more."

Games this week at South Logan had only two Florida and Memphis leading up to the Conference USA tournament will be a better measure

latzenmoyer speaks out against critics

The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS - In his first interview in four months, Andy Katzenmoyer talked of maturing, of the pressure of playing linebacker at Ohio State, of getting ridiculed for an easy class schedule and of looking ahead to life in the NFL.

"College was a fun time for me," he said at the National Scouting Combine over the weekend. "Three years of learning. It really helped me a lot, getting to know the ins and outs of football."

"Coming in out of high school, I thought I knew as much as I possibly could, but I didn't. I have lifelong friends, I've learned a great deal about football and life. Not only that, I grew closer to my family. Overall, it was a great experience."

Katzenmoyer, who felt he had been burned by the media, did not speak with reporters for most of his junior season. He was blasted, and not just by the media, for a summer course load of music, AIDS awareness and golf. He was able to pass those courses in order to be eligible for his final year at Ohio

After becoming the first full-time defensive player to be named the Associated Press "Mr. Football" in Ohio as a senior in high school, the Westerville native asked for and received the No. 45 jersey at Ohio State that hadn't been worn since two-time Heisman Trophy winner Archie Griffin left the school 20 years earlier.

"It was my number since seventh grade, so I didn't see the big deal," he said. "Plus, nobody had it, so why couldn't I wear it?"

Many believed he did not live up to his hype after a glittering freshman season with the Buckeyes.

His freshman season, he had 23 tackles behind the line of scrimmage including 12 sacks. He also intercepted four passes. But his numbers were down in each of the next two seasons. He won the Butkus Award as a sophomore but did not capture it or any other major awards as a junior - including falling to second-team All-Big Ten in balloting by the conference coaches.

But Katzenmover said he didn't feel the public perception would hurt him in the draft.

"Coaches watch films, they don't read the papers," he said.

Many called into question his quickness and his desire. He was trying to prove himself and improve his draft stature at the combine - a test site set up for potential draftees where they are prodded, poked, timed, tested and measured by scouts.

Katzenmoyer said he felt boycotting the media hurt him.

"Because I didn't talk to the media, they had their own free will to write whatever they wanted instead of my word and my opinion. So in a way, it hurt me more than anything," he said. The 6-foot-4, 255-pounder poked fun at himself over his course load. "The AIDS class was pretty difficult," he said, then added, "Naw, the hardest thing was getting up at 7:30 in the morning. Golf was easy.

He said his final season was his best at Ohio State. Forgoing his senior season did not take much deliberation.

"I sat down with my parents, talked it over and in a matter of 10 minutes made my decision," he said.

Although he was carefree about where he will be taken and by whom in the April draft, he said he would love to join another former Ohio State linebacker, Chris Spielman, with the Cleveland Browns.

Spielman sat out the last NFL season while recuperating from an injury and helping his wife through cancer treatments. Now living in suburban Columbus, Spielman spent a lot of time with the Buckeyes as an unofficial volunteer

Rodman, Lakers closer to agreemen

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. There were tears. There was talk of sex. There were obscenities. There was flamboyant fashion.

Just another Dennis Rodman news conference.

And for all the commotion during Monday's latest installment of "As The Worm Turns," all that happened was this: Rodman moved closer to playing for the Los Angeles Lakers.

The team hopes to have the seven-time rebounding champion in uniform "sometime very soon." And Rodman, at one point in tears, said he hoped to sign a contract before Monday was through.

Thus ended an uncertain three weeks since the Lakers first made clear their desire to sign the 37-year-old tattoed forward, a member of five championship teams, including the last three with the Chicago Bulls.

Dressed conservatively - for him - except for a wide, multicolored hat and dark glasses, Rodman arrived 30 minutes late for his news conference. He was accompanied by his wife, actress Carmen Electra, agent Steve Chasman and sister Debra. But nobody from the Lakers.

Dennis Rodman wipes his tears at a news conference Monday.

Then came a series of bizarre and conflicting statements. And the news conference ended abruptly after some 20 minutes with a tearful Rodman being asked if he had been selfish by not announcing a decision earli-

Rodman began by saying he wanted to sign with the Lakers, but matters were incomplete. When angrily questioned why he called the news conference if he had no announcement to make, Rodman snapped: "You don't have to be here." Shortly thereafter he said he hoped to sign Monday night.

"Hopefully, I'll be playing this week, and, hopefully, the Lakers and the people of California will accept me for who I am and what I do," he said. "If not, I'll move

Rodman said he had spoken with Lakers owner Jerry Buss several times and hoped to sign a two- or three-year deal with the team. He insists he is in good shape and could immediately play 30 to 35 minutes a game.

He also said he would be reliable, pointing out he played 80 of a possible 82 regular-season games for the Bulls last season.

"You can count on me, you can count on me going to practice," he said.

Rodman said the Lakers weren't a championship team now and must change its approach.

"All the guys want to be superstars," he said. "Everybody has to play a role. This team doesn't understand that right

He also said he wasn't returning because of money.

"I'm not happy at all," he said, referring to the fact that the Lakers could offer him only a $1 million veterans' minimum, which would be prorated to under $500,000 because of the shortened season and the games he has missed.

'What will make me happy is if I can bring this city a ring just like I did in Chicago," he said. "I'm here just because I want to make people happy. I miss entertaining. I miss entertaining for the people. I play for the people, I give the people what they want.

It had been reported Rodman would receive an extra $3 million as part of his contract with Converse if he played in New York, Chicago or Los Angeles this season. But he said he was going to have to "fight them in court to get that money.

At times, the news conference resembled an episode of "The Jerry Springer Show" although there was no fighting, Rodman used plenty of four-letter words and made sexual references about his wife.

Finally, when asked about being selfish, Rodman started crying and said, "I'm never going to win, no matter what I do for this league, for the game of basketball, I'm never going to Then, opening a piece of paper, he said, "I've got 10 chari$10,000 to. Even with this here, I'm still not going to win. You tell me if that's selfish.

His sister interjected, "He doesn't have any money."

Rodman then waved off reporters and left the microphone a bit later.

Lakers great Magic Johnson, a part-owner and vice president of he team, expressed relief that Rodman had made a decision.

"I was tired of it dragging on because it was doing nothing but being a distraction for our players, the coach, as well as our franchise," Johnson said Monday in Indianapolis. "We were just hoping this day would finally come, either tell us you're coming or tell us you're not coming.

"I'm just happy it's all over with. We know he's coming. Now coach (Del) Harris can get him in there, get him learning the plays in the system, try to get him in shape as well."

Johnson had criticized Rodman on David Letterman's show Thursday night, saying he was causing a distraction and he hoped the Lakers would "just

Baseball cracks down o

The Associated Press

NEW YORK - Baseball is promising to crack down on differing interpretations of the strike zone, telling teams the official definition "will be more strictly enforced" by umpires this year.

"deplorable" by the head of the umpires' union.

In one of the first moves of the restructured commissioner's office under Bud Selig - and one that could provoke anger among umpires - the decision was made by Sandy Alderson, the new executive director of baseball operations.

The move appears designed to get umpires to call "high strikes." In recent years, umpires rarely called any pitch above the belt a strike.

"I don't see how anyone could say we're going to more strictly enforce a rule," umpires' union head Richie Phillips said. "The umpires enforce all of the rules. That's been their job for more an 100 years. It is deplorable for the commissioner's office; to indicate that the umpires have not strictly enforced all of the rules."

EASTERN CONFERENCE

BASKETBALL Women travel to Nothern Illinois

The Bowling Green women's basketball team will be traveling to DeKab, Ill. to face Northern Illinios who is 9-16 and 6-9 in conference play, in the final regular season contest.

BG, currently stands at 13-12 overall and 9-6 in the Mid-American Conference. The Falcons need a win and an Akron loss to attain a first round playoff game at home.

With an Akron win or a BG loss, BG will have to travel for the first round of the playoffs which can be a big disavantage.

Reds pitcher Bere improves

The Associated Press

SARASOTA, Fla. - The Cincinnati Reds are hoping that Jason Bere is the next successful reclamation project of pitching coach Don Gullett.

So far in spring training, Gullett is impressed with how Bere improved during the off-season. The Reds rescued the former Chicago White Sox starter from baseball's scrap heap last year by claiming him off waivers in July.

"Look at the arm speed, the arm action, the arm strength. What a difference," Gullett said after watching the right-hander throw to hitters in camp.

"If he continues on the road he's presently on, I look for great things from Jason Bere this year," Gullett said. "He proved last year that he can win with just a fastball and a changeup because he knows how to pitch. This life on the ball.

year, he'll be adding a curve, so there's no telling what kind of potential he has.

Bere, 27, went 24-7 in his first two seasons with the White Sox, in 1993 and 1994. But then elbow problems began. He underwent elbow surgery on Sept. 13, 1996. The Reds were encouraged that Bere finished strongly at the end of last season, going 2-0 with a 1.17 earned run average in his final two starts. Still, he had to rely then on a subpar fastball, a changeup and pitching know-how. He was throwing his fastball at between 84 and 87 mph in September. Now, he is reaching 92-93 mph. The ball is back jumping out of my hand," he said. "I don't have to force it any more to get

Vizquel has arrived at training camp

The Associated Press

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. - He never asked for a trade. He never said he wouldn't report to training camp. He's a happy camper. Let's play ball.

That was the message from Omar Vizquel as he arrived at the Cleveland Indians training camp Monday, following an offseason in which the six-time Gold Glove shortstop had voiced unhappiness with his contract.
