The latest project of Information Technology Services, to install a network "backbone," was approved at the Board of Trustees meeting Wednesday, Sept. 1.

This will be the most expensive project in this history of the University, costing $33.6 million, yet those presiding over the project said that it cannot be delayed any longer. The project will improve computer network speed, and quickening upload and download speeds.

"It will help ensure that we reach our aspiration to be the premier learning community in Ohio and one of the best in the nation," said University President Sidney Ribeau in a letter to the Board of Trustees.

According to Henry A. Garrity, chair of the Romance Languages department, the methods for raising the money needed for the project might include the raising of fees, the selling of bonds or the reallocation of funds presently undedicated or dedicated to other projects.

"Despite the large cost, the intent is to make this project as painless as possible to the students of BGSU," Garrity said.

Some of the fee increases proposed include raising the technology fee, the cost of on-campus residency and the general fee among others.

The University has budgeted

$7.8 million for cable and wire. This will be financed for 10 years at 5.5 percent. The network and its accessories are predicted to cost $14.8 million. It will be financed for seven years at 5.2 percent. Also budgeted is $13.97 million for the public works required for the installation of this network. In total, this project is expected to consume 2.24 percent of the University's annual budget.

Linda Dobb, interim provost and vice president, made mention that the University of Cincinnati was prepared to spend as much as $28 million on wiring alone for fewer buildings than the number expected to be wired at BGSU. Furthermore, the University has also budgeted for digging.

Among the possible delays is that in the future IBM/Lucent, the vendor behind this project, will charge more than they do presently.

Those boosting the project believe that improving the network will attract better faculty, staff and students. This will, in turn, result in more grant opportunities. It is also predicted that the project will result in a more academic environment and increase productivity levels.

USG at large, a group that chose to speak for Undergraduate Student Government, but not necessarily for the whole of USG, expressed some concerns about this project.

"We want desperately to avoid another Lotus Notes or Remote Access situation. Our concern is that there are signs present that indicate that the same thing might happen. Once again, the students are not being given a voice in these critical proceedings," the mysterious organization said.

USG at large said they will "work with the administration to make sure that faculty and students are included in the rest of this project."

Some concern was also voiced concerning the large construction fees when there are already extensive tunnels running underneath the campus. Some are concerned that these pre-existing resources are being ignored.

Jeff Bakunas, a first year graduate student in education, believes that the most important thing in the undertaking of this project is that "the money be used appropriately for the benefit of the majority of the students."

He said this project may allow him to do research more quickly, but wished the University had made this project more visible to the students.

While dates have not yet been set for the initialization of the project, it is hoped that it will be completed by Nov. of 2001.

Students take academic vacation

Before the autumn breeze arrives and the leaves begin to fall, The News is going to revisit the summer every Friday in September through stories about summer programs, experiences and internships.

By CRAIG GIFFORD
The BG News

When summer hits, many college students are faced with the decision of either going on vacations or taking classes in order to receive credit hours. They typically do not have the time to do both.

Yet this past summer, the University offered students the opportunity to both take a vacation and enhance their academic lives through a summer program in Mexico.

The program, headed by Rolando Andrade, professor of ethnic studies, included 13 students and four faculty members from the University. The program has been offered for seven years.

The historical pyramids, the Sun and the Moon, in Mexico City were among the highlights of the students' visit.

"I went to learn more about my culture," said Alexis Deanda, a junior social work major.

Amy Delugach, an early childhood education major shared similar sentiments.

The program was not totally comprised of classes, though. The members of the group had plenty of opportunities for sightseeing and entertainment.

U. to improve phone line access

By SARA EATON
The BG News

With the start of classes, students living on campus often have trouble calling outside of the University.

"It's always busy, I can't get a line," said junior elementary education major Sabrina Schutz. "It's driving me nuts."

Executive Director of Information Technology Services Toby Singer said this is an annual problem. "It is a bit worse this year because of enrollment," he said. Student Telephone Services Customer Service Representative JoAnn Huber said several students have been calling concerned about getting a line to dial off campus.

However, she explained STS cannot help students because the office is simply the long-distance carrier based out of Phoenix for on-campus students, not the local carrier.

While Schutz and Huber know several people having trouble calling off campus, not all students feel there is a problem.

"I haven't had any problems dialing off campus," said freshman physical education major T. J. Taylor. "I had trouble with long distance the first week."

While this may not affect everyone, the University is purchasing 20 new phone lines from GTE to help alleviate the problem, according to Singer.

Not only is the increase in enrollment affecting phone

Coaster accidents not scaring local riders

By BRANDI BARHITE
The BG News

Even after hearing the news of two roller coaster-related deaths in Ocean City, N.J., Niki Sams will still be in line for the roller coasters during her next trip to Cedar Point, an amusement park in Sandusky, Ohio.

"Accidents can happen anywhere," said Sams, a freshman mathematics major. "I'm still going to ride roller coasters because I love the excitement."

And her view seems to be common among other thrill-seekers.

According to Janise Lifke of the Cedar Point public relations office, riders at Cedar Point seem undaunted by the recent roller coaster related deaths.

"People are still riding like usual, yet we are aware internally and encouraging employees to stress safety," she said.

Though the odds of being killed on an amusement park ride are 1 in 250 million, last month there were four ride-related deaths. In the past 12 years, the federal government reports 47 amusement-ride deaths, 13 of those were roller coaster related.

The most recent was Saturday when a 39-year-old woman

A Salute to SUMMER

"The main purpose of the trip was to introduce the students to the Mexican culture, so they could see it, feel it, touch it, smell it and in the process, destroy stereotypes that are very prevalent in American culture," Andrade said.

Those who went on the trip enjoyed four weeks in Guadalajara, followed by two weeks in because I have a minor in Spanish," Delugach said.

The visit to Guadalajara included two courses of study, which included ethnic studies and popular culture. Students attended these classes, taught by University professors, Andrade and Dave Hawkins, professor of English, at the Number of vehicles towed remains consistent

By GRETA HALE
THE BG NEWS

Between University Parking Services and the Campus Police Department, 21 cars have been towed from campus since Aug. 18.

According to Stacie Enriquez, director of Parking and Traffic, this number is consistent with previous years.

Enriquez said that parking in a handicap space, fire lane or reserved space are the most common reasons for towing. Also, an illegally parked car can be towed immediately.

According to Enriquez, cars are towed by several area towing companies, including K&G Marathon, Wright Tire and Auto Center and Randy Coe's Auto Shop.

Cars are normally not towed for parking on the grass, she said. However, two cars parked in the grass were towed for obstructing the view of the entering and exiting cars to the parking lot.

Another reason students are getting towed is because they cannot find a space on campus and are opting to park off-campus in reserved spots.

Ginger Bihn, a graduate student, had her car towed the first day of class. There were no spaces left in Lot 4 at 11 a.m. She instead parked in a space along a strip by Campus Polyleyes.

According to Bihn, the space was reserved, but she did not see the sign that indicated that. Her car was towed shortly after noon by K&G Marathon. Bihn paid $65 for her car to be released.

"As a graduate student I don't have much money to begin with, so it was a major financial frustration," she said.

The space Bihn parked in is not owned by the University, and towing from these spaces occurs all day long.

"The truck driver said he makes 27 trips a day to and from the same spaces," Bihn said.

To reclaim cars towed from campus, students must first go to Parking Services and obtain a release form. Next, they must go to the towing company to reclaim their car. Depending on the towing company, students can expect to pay anywhere from $48 to $85 to get their car back.

Since students have moved to campus this fall, K&G Marathon has towed six cars from campus. According to Kris Nicholson, an employee at K&G, they charge a towing fee of $55 plus a storage fee of $10 a day. According to Rich Ballez, of Wright Tire and Auto, they have towed 10 cars from campus and charge $60 for towing and $8 a day for storage.

Brian Coe, of Randy Coe's Auto Shop, said they have towed two cars from campus since Aug. 18 and charge a towing fee of $50 plus $8 for outside storage and $12 for indoor storage.

The rates of all of the companies' towing services may be higher if a dolly has to be used during towing.

Common fallacies made fun

I know right now that many of you are wondering, "Does he have the guts to write about the Simpsons after being thrashed for doing as such in the past?" The answer is yes.

Even though some might not understand that using fictional situations in attempts to prove serious points is valid argumentation (it's called using heuristic devices), and even though some might find that it sucks the fun out of cartoons, I find that it actually sucks some fun into what might otherwise become dry material.

Many are familiar with the scene in "Monty Python and the Holy Grail" in which Sir Bedemir is holding a trial in which it is to be determined whether a certain woman is a witch. In this scene several logical fallacies are committed.

The scene proceeds as follows:

BEDEMIR: Quiet, quiet. Quiet! There are ways of telling whether she is a witch... Tell me, what do you do with witches?

CROWD: Burn, burn them up!

BEDEMIR: And what do you burn apart from witches?

VILLAGER #1: More witches!

VILLAGER #2: Wood!

BEDEMIR: So, why do witches burn? [pause]

VILLAGER #3: B--- 'cause they're made of wood...?

This is the first fallacy of the scene. He argues wood burns and witches burn ergo witches are wood. What he does not realize is that universal statements, such as "all wood burns," can only be partially converted. All that can be said is that some burnable things are witches. He converts the statement fully. As such, his reasoning bears its first flaw.

Columnist

BEDEMIR: Does wood sink in water?

VILLAGER #1: No, no. It floats!

CROWD: The pond!

Here the crowd reasons that if all witches are wood and all wood floats then all witches float. This is good reasoning, but the first premise is, obviously, untrue. Further, the course of action recommended by the crowd is not followed by Sir Bedemir.

BEDEMIR: What also floats in water?

VILLAGER #1: Bread!

VILLAGER #3: Very small rocks!

VILLAGER #2: Churches -- churches!

ARTHUR: A duck.

CROWD: Oooh.

BEDEMIR: Exactly! So, logically...

VILLAGER #1: If... she... weighs the same as a duck, she's made of wood.

This is, once again a fallacy. The villager assumes that all floatable objects must be of the same weight. There are some missing premises here. That is, namely, if only one weight is capable of floating then all things that float are of equal weight. The problem is that this premise is false. Things, as many now know, float in virtue of their own density relative to the density of a surrounding fluid.

BEDEMIR: And therefore--?

CROWD: A witch! A witch! A witch!

BEDEMIR: We shall use my largest scales!

I believe that a similar feat may be accomplished by making reference to the Simpsons episode which opens with a scene of a bear wandering down through Springfield, thereby eliciting a demand for protection from further bears. As such, the town was speedily endowed with a "Bear Patrol."

Homer Simpson, pleased with this development, proceeds to engage Lisa, his daughter, in a dialogue:

HOMER: Not a bear in sight. The Bear Patrol must be working like a charm.

LISA: That's spacious reasoning, Dad.

HOMER: Thank you, dear.

LISA: By your logic I could claim that this rock keeps tigers away.

HOMER: Oh, how does it work?

LISA: It doesn't work.

HOMER: Uh-huh.

LISA: It's just a stupid rock.

HOMER: Uh-huh.
LISA: But I don't see any tigers around, do you?

HOMER: [thinks of this, then pulls out some money] Lisa, I want to buy your rock.

What Lisa has attempted to point out to Homer is that he has committed a post hoc ergo propter hoc fallacy. Roughly this means that one has reasoned "after this therefore because of this. In this situation it will be called the post rock ergo propter rock fallacy. No tigers were to be found after the rock, therefore no tigers were to be found because of the rock.

This sort of fallacy is common throughout scientific and political discourse. If crime were to drop after the instatement of a given law some might attribute the drop to the law. Such an assumption would not be justified as demonstrated by Lisa's rock. Similarly if a drop in crime did not appear one would be equally unjustified in immediately assuming that the policy has no salutary affect.

In closing, I hope that I have intertwined some fun into that which might otherwise leave us bereft of said indulgence. If not, then at least beware of the sort of thinking that led Homer to believe post rock ergo propter rock. Such thinking leads to silly and sometimes dangerous mistakes.

"Homophobic televangelist seeks business partner for U.S. telephone and Internet banking venture. Must recognize the dangers posed by Halloween, the National Organization for Women and atheist educators. Pentecostals and '700 Club' viewers preferred, insults hurled at other faiths a plus."

With a personal ad like that (prepared by yours truly and not endorsed by the Christian Coalition), it's no wonder it didn't work out the Bank of Scotland's relationship with Pat Robertson (initiated this past March) appears to be coming to an end. The Christian Broadcasting Network mogul described Scotland as a "rather dark land" whose moral fabric had been weakened by its tolerance of homosexuals. When customers began closing accounts in protest, Bank of Scotland's share price fell 4 percent, and the bigwigs took note - walking papers were prepared. "Pat, I'd really like for us to be friends."

Don't worry about Pat, though. His plan to test-market a telephone bank on 55 million followers (born-again sheep -- same cognitive level as the docile farm animal?) might not have come to fruition, but his love will be consummated elsewhere. Perhaps in his Liberian gold-mining venture, his search for diamonds in the Congo or some other chance for exploitation.

"The feminist agenda... is a political movement that encourages women to leave their husbands, kill their children, practice witchcraft, destroy capitalism and become lesbians."

The spiritual imperialist will find peace in prosperity.

"But he's been delivered a setback! Businesses will better screen those who represent them and respect our wishes -- we've made our point!" Hogwash. The partnership drew criticism from the very beginning and the deal remained intact -- Robertson had to do something outrageous to make bank officials re-evaluate their position; something which would cut into earnings.

If the Bank of Scotland had done its homework, say a thorough background check, ties to Robertson would have been severed the moment he stuck his pointy little neck up its kilt. Everything from his past seems to indicate that this was coming an ocean away.

"The feminist agenda is not about equal rights for women," Robertson said in a 1992 fundraising letter. "It is about a socialist, anti-family political movement that encourages women to leave their husbands, kill their children, practice witchcraft, destroy capitalism and become lesbians."

Now that's a man I want to bank with! Perhaps he could supply me with a special scripture edition ATM card, one with a Bible passage to support an otherwise inconceivable political platform. An ATM card which combats Satan in all its forms:

"I think we ought to close Halloween down," Robertson once said on the "700 Club," "Do you want your children to dress up as witches? The Druids used to dress up like this when they were doing human sacrifice."

People applying for minimum wage, service sector jobs have to answer the question, "Have you ever been arrested?" You would expect the other party in a $48 business deal to ask Robertson, "Have you ever publicly embarrassed a business partner with extremist rhetoric bashing Hindus, Muslims, Planned Parenthood ... did I forget anything?"

Well, the box has been checked after the fact, references discredited. The Bank of Scotland has learned a lesson in tough love -- when you're ashamed of your significant other, you're really not meant to be together. Pat will look to his sheep for strength and let's hope that it doesn't lead to bestiality.

Football faces Pitt in Opener

By G. MICHAEL GRAHAM

The BG News

The Bowling Green football team is hoping its 1999 trip to Pennsylvania is more pleasant than the 1998 version.

Coach Gary Blackney smiles a bit when it comes to mind, but many Falcon followers know the Falcons were Joe Paterno's 300th win in 1998. There will be some history in the air in BG's game at Pittsburgh tomorrow at 3:30 p.m.

This time though, it has to do with a stadium. The Panthers are playing their final season at Pittsburgh Stadium. Pittsburgh Stadium has been the Panther home since 1925. Also, unlike Joe Paterno, who has been at Penn State for 34 years as head coach, Walt Harris is entering just his third year, trying to revive the once-proud Big East program. Harris was the quarterbacks coach at Ohio State before taking the Pitt job.

Like he has said all preseason, Blackney and company want to continue the momentum built from last season when BG finished with four wins in the last five contests.

"The attitude has been excellent," Blackney said. "Beyond that, I think the chemistry has been outstanding. When you look at three things for a winning football team that are sometimes intangible — attitude, chemistry and the morale of the team. In that area, I would give us good grades at this point."

The Panthers are coming off a 2-9 1998 stint after qualifying for the AXA/Equitable Liberty Bowl against Southern Miss. in 1997. Pitt was 6-6 that year.

Offensively, Pittsburgh returns seven starters. The Panthers averaged 21.3 points and 321.8 yards per game in 1998. Unlike the Bowling Green offense, Pitt has many areas of concern. Wide receiver is not one of them. BG corner Will Sullivan will have his first test in All-Big East junior flanker Latef Grim. He had 60 catches for 906 yards and nine touchdowns.

"This week, they moved me to field corner because they want me to be more involved in the defensive scheme and make plays," Sullivan said. "Anytime I see him a single receiver on my side, I'm jamming up. That's the way I like to get started. You have to give him respect. He is one of the best receivers in the nation so I'll back off him a couple times (line up 10 yards away from him). At the same time, I'm going to get his best and I'll give him my best."

One of the keys is not allowing him to earn a big touchdown, according to Blackney. He knows Grim is good enough that he might have seven, eight or nine catches.

However, quarterback is a concern. For the third straight season, the Panthers will have a new quarterback, which could play into the favor of BG's revamped defense. It will be sophomore David Priestley, an Ohio State transfer from California.

"We're going to try to shut down the run and force them in a passing situation," Blackney said. "Then, depending on how the game goes, we hope to put pressure on the young quarterback."

Another OSU transfer, Dublin native Nick Goings, will start in the backfield. Goings hopes to lead a resurgence in the Pitt running game. The Panthers also want improved play along the offensive line, especially with the new quarterback.

"To my eyes in preseason, I was most surprised by our defense," Blackney said. "I think the scheme has a lot to do with it. I think there's a lot of confidence in the coaches by the players. They're enjoying more of an attacking-type defense. They're excited and they're playing with a lot of excitement."

The Panther defense is led by senior Hank Poteat, who had six interceptions last year. Poteat also returns punts and kickoffs. Another key to the game according to Blackney is keeping him under wraps.

Despite returning seven starters, Pittsburgh graduated two key players, defensive end Marline Young and linebacker Phil Clarke. The defense ranked third in the Big East and ninth nationally at one point in 1998. There are concerns along the defensive line and in the secondary, which again could play in BG's favor.

Pitt will run a multiple formation to use a lot of personnel. They like to motion a lot of men to keep teams off-balance. Blackney also said they put eight or nine men in the box (area 10 yards off the ball) to defend against the run so BG might be forced to open up

Women's soccer takes on Georgia, East Carolina

By PETE STELLA

The BG News

After a successful opening of the regular season, the BG women's soccer team heads down south for two big out of conference games.

The Falcons face the Georgia Bulldogs today at 7 p.m. and the East Carolina Pirates Sunday at noon.

"We have our sights set on these upcoming games," BG coach Tom Piccirillo said. "Georgia will be the toughest game that we have faced as a program but it will be a good learning experience for us as a team."

Last weekend, the Falcons opened the regular season on a positive note by going 2-0-0 against two non-conference teams. BG defeated Michigan State 3-2 in overtime and Valparaiso 5-1, both at Cochrane field.

"I was very pleased with the way we played," Piccirillo said. "Our offense came up big in both games and our defense is still improving game by game."

Freshman Jill Conover had two assists in each match last weekend and sophomore Desiree Erb topped her scoring total, of five, from last season by contributing with six points over both games.

"College soccer has been a big transition for me coming from high school," Conover said. "I was pleased with the way we played against a Big Ten team and we are hoping to come out on top this weekend, despite the tough competition."

Both East Carolina and Georgia had successful opening weekends, with the Bulldogs going 1-0-1 and the Pirates netting a 1-0-0 record. Georgia advanced to the Sweet 16 last season and looks like a tough team.

"Georgia will play very physical and that is something we need to recognize early," Piccirillo said. "We need to speed up our decision making process on the field and our speed of play. We must play good, smart soccer against a team of Georgia's caliber."

After their trip to Georgia, the Falcons host Niagara Sunday, September 12 at 1 p.m. This weekend will prove a lot to the Falcons freshmen and veterans.

"We are very close as a team and our communication on the field is great," Conover said. "Georgia is a very good team but we are all optimistic that we will be able to run with them."

Volleyball opens season

By NICK HURM

The BG News

The Duquesne Invitational in Pittsburgh is the first stop of the season for the Bowling Green volleyball team.

This afternoon the Falcons will christen their new season with a match against Colgate. Later that day, the orange and brown will battle Loyola (Md.). BG will play two more Saturdays against St. Francis at 1:00 p.m. and will take on the host team Duquesne at 7:00 p.m.

The Falcons started the season hot last year winning five of their first six games, but slid rapidly toward the end of the season. BG finished last year with an overall record of 11-21.

This year the Falcons have experience though. Eleven netters are returning including four seniors. The seniors-Heather Greig, Lori Kemerer, Melissa Lewis, and Kris Pesorda have all lettered in every year with the team. Assistant coach Tom Hanna believes experience will pay off for BG.

"We are past the learning stage," Hanna said. "We expect to be competitive right out of the gate. We have every expectation of going 4-0 in the tournament."

None of BG's opponents had a winning record last year. Colgate finished the season with a 14-15 record. The Red Flash of St. Francis ended the season at a 13-18 mark, and both Loyola and Duquesne won only eight games.

For the Falcons to have success they are going to need good passing on the court. Last year streaky passing both haunted and helped BG.

"Our passing is going to be important," Hanna said. "If we can pass the ball we are going to be in very good shape. Wednesday in practice we were passing the ball so I felt pretty good coming out of it."

The Falcons have many different weapons to choose from this year. The 15 woman roster is the biggest in Van De Walle's 17 seasons at BG. Some BG netters may see their first action in a Falcon uniform. The list includes transfers Shyann Robinson, Caty Rommeck, and Kate Yeo. Red shirt freshman Kristin Gamby and newcomer Laura Twyman will also look to hit the court for the first time in their collegiate careers.

"Hopefully we will be able to move the lineup around a little bit," Hanna said. "It will not be out of need, but just out of opportunity. We want to be able to move the lineup hopefully if we are doing things well and have a good handle on the scoreboard."

If the Falcons go undefeated over the weekend it would not only be a positive start, but it would also ensure coach Denise Van De Walle her 300th career victory.

Notebook: The Falcons have a new assistant coach and former player. Wendy (Watkins) Teaman is a former setter for BG. She will now assist with coaching on the other side of the court.

The BG Men's soccer team host the Falcon invitational this weekend. They hope to build on their Wednesday win against Dayton by playing Western Kentucky and Depaul.

Men's Soccer plays at home this weekend in Falcon Classic

By DAVE TRUMAN

The BG News

It isn't exactly a trek into the great unknown, but the Bowling Green men's soccer team will host two teams it knows next to nothing about this weekend in the Falcon Classic at Cochrane Field.

Western Kentucky (1-0) will take on the Falcons (1-0) Saturday at 3 p.m. and Depaul will play BG Sunday at the same time. Detroit will face both teams at 1 p.m. on the opposite day but will not play the Falcons.

The Falcons expect Western Kentucky to be a physical team and have marked two or three players to be wary of, according to BG assistant coach Rob Martella. The book on Depaul doesn't even exist since the Blue Demons haven't played a game yet this season. Martella said the Falcons will get a valuable look at their opponents from Chicago when they watch them play Detroit Saturday. Their main concern is improving their own level of play from Wednesday's 3-1 win against Dayton.

"Fitness is an ongoing battle for us," Martella said. "A lot of

Perry dies of cancer

The BG News

University alumnus and former employee, Charles E. Perry, died Mon., Aug. 30 in his Rockwall, Texas home after a four year battle with cancer.

Perry, highly respected by the University, was honored in 1998 when the Charles E. Perry Field House was named in his honor. Perry was a kicker for the football team from 1956-58.

Perry earned his undergraduate degrees in English, history and political science from the University. He also received his master's degree in sociology from the University.

Perry later worked in the University's admissions office and held various other positions that included director of admissions, director of development and assistant to the president under William Jerome.

In 1967, Perry left the University for a post as vice chancellor of the state university system in Florida.

Among Perry's other accomplishments is his 1964 recommendation that led to the formation of the Falcon Club, which helps support the athletic program.

In 1975, he received BGSU's Distinguished Alumnus Award and was inducted into the Athletic Hall of Fame in 1987.

He is survived by his wife, Betty, son, Tom, daughter, Lynn and a granddaughter.

Former Pittsburgh Pirate, Stargell, hospitalized, has blood tests, dialysis

By ALAN ROBINSON

AP Sports Writer
PITTSBURGH — Hall of Famer Willie Stargell is undergoing treatment for an undisclosed serious health problem with one of his organs.

Pittsburgh Pirates officials have refused comment about Stargell, one their greatest players ever and an assistant to general manager Cam Bonifay.

But former teammates and friends have become increasingly concerned about the 58-year-old Stargell, who has had health problems for about 10 years.

Stargell was admitted to a Pittsburgh hospital under an assumed name for tests about three weeks ago, according to three sources close to the Pirates.

During his hospital stay, the former Pirates star underwent blood tests and dialysis, a source said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The sources did not disclose Stargell's specific ailment. But a former teammate, who did not want to be identified, said Stargell has undergone kidney dialysis for several years.

Stargell was moved recently from the Pittsburgh hospital to another medical care facility to undergo additional treatment and care, the sources said.

It was not immediately known if Stargell was still in the Pittsburgh area or had been moved to a facility near his home in Wilmington, N.C., where he lives with his wife, Margaret.

Pirates managing general partner Kevin McClatchy, who hired Stargell in 1997, has ordered team officials not to comment about Stargell.

Stargell has not been seen in the owner's box at Three Rivers Stadium, where he often watched games, for about a month. But such absences were not uncommon as Stargell often left town to watch minor league games, attend baseball card shows to sign autographs or to return to his home.

Mo Vaughn not in Angel dugout during brawl with Indians

The Associated Press

CLEVELAND — Mo Vaughn said he didn't join his Angels' teammates in a bench-clearing brawl with the Cleveland Indians because he wasn't in the dugout when the altercation started.

"I've been in brawls all my career," Vaughn said before Anaheim's 8-1 loss Wednesday to Cleveland. "If I was down on the bench, I would have been in the brawl. But I was in the clubhouse watching the game on TV."

The brawl took place after Angels reliever Troy Percival gave up a three-run homer in the eighth inning Tuesday to Richie Sexson, capping a 10-run rally by the Indians, who won the game 14-12.

Percival then hit David Justice, igniting the fight as both benches and bullpens emptied. Both Percival and Justice were ejected.

After the fight, Percival suggested that not all of his teammates were willing to join him in the brawl. When asked to be specific, he said "Look at the tape."

A television camera showed Vaughn, who was the designated hitter and wasn't on the field for the fight, watching as order was restored from the corner of the Anaheim dugout.

Vaughn not only defended himself but criticized Percival for hitting Justice. "Be like a man," he said. "You get rapped around, don't throw at a guy. Get the next guy out and get out of the inning."

Batting instructor Rod Carew brought Vaughn and Percival together for a short meeting that seemed to bring the matter to a close.

"Mo and I are fine, there's no problem there," Percival said. "To me, it's a non-issue."

Neither Vaughn nor Percival played Wednesday.

our guys had to work awfully hard against Dayton. You don't really want to play your way into shape because you run the risk of playing someone who is already conditioned and then you're in trouble."

Martella said the organization of the team could also use work.

"We need to be more compact so that when the opposing team is building out of its backfield we don't give them room to play," Martella said. "Our back line did well and Ty did a great job with some big saves but there were aspects of our organization that could have been better. Late in the game we got stretched out and Dayton made some runs at us. That was what happened on their goal late in the game."

According to Martella, playing teams who are unfamiliar does not bring on a fear of the unknown. He knows Western Kentucky and DePaul will come in excited with something to prove. He feels it is important to respect your opponent, but to never fear them.

Another reason for confidence is that BG will be playing its second and third straight games at home to open the season.

offensively.

"We want it to be Bowling Green football — running the ball," senior tight end Kevin Steinke said. "If they try to put many guys in the box, we have no hesitation to throw the ball. We know that if we play as a team, we can play with anybody. What we want to do this year is get the ball moving."

Same colors, same helmets; Browns are reborn in Cleveland

By TOM WITHERS
AP Sports Writer

CLEVELAND — Three long years, 21 if you're counting in Dawg years.

Life without the NFL was tough on Cleveland. Sundays weren't the same here. Neither were Mondays, Tuesdays or Wednesdays.

Heck, even hating the Pittsburgh Steelers wasn't the same. The Baltimore Ravens became the new enemy.

"It was as if you'd lost your best friend," said John Thompson, a k a Big Dawg, the leader of a 10,000-member pack of rabid fans known as the Dawg Pound.

"But now he's coming home."

In the Year of the Retirement, finally a stirring comeback. One of the most storied names in American sports, the Cleveland Browns, are returning after being forced into retirement when former owner Art Modell took his team to Baltimore in 1996.

You remember the Browns. Orange helmets with white stripes and no logos. White home jerseys. Paul Brown. Otto Graham. Jim Brown. Bernie Kosar. Dreary old Cleveland Stadium.

Well, the Browns are back as an expansion team in 1999. They'll look pretty much the same as they always did, but these aren't your dad's Browns.

They've got a new owner, a sparkling new $283 million stadium — built on the same spot as the old place — a front office with a Super Bowl blueprint, rookie quarterback Tim Couch and a proud city so pumped to have football back that 30,000 fans showed up for the new Browns first practice in their new home.

"We're back," Big Dawg said. "It's exciting. It's almost like the resurrection. It's not like an expansion team. It's like the same team is coming back with new life. And look at Cleveland, we're not the Mistake on the Lake anymore."

Cleveland has changed dramatically. One of the country's great industrial cities, it became a national joke in the 1970s when the polluted Cuyahoga River caught fire and the Indians averaged 100 losses a year.

But the city has undergone a remarkable renaissance. The Rock n' Roll Hall of Fame has brought in tourists, who dine in the renovated Warehouse District, and if they can get a ticket, catch the Indians in sold out Jacobs Field.

All that had been missing were the Browns, who for years were the best thing about the town. Cleveland was always Browns Town, the unofficial capital of football-crazy Ohio.

"It's in our blood," said linebacker Chris Spielman, an Ohio native forced to retire two weeks before the Browns opener because of a neck injury. "Like Louisiana has gumbo, we have football."

That changed on Nov. 6, 1995, when Modell, upset with city the family. It was like a family member had been murdered. It wasn't just a loss, it was a cruel and unfair loss."

Cleveland, though, wasn't about to let its heart get ripped out without a fight. And with Mayor Michael White leading the effort, Browns fans bombarded the NFL with faxes and marched on owners meetings trying to persuade the league to restore, not replace, their beloved team.

officials' refusal to build him a stadium as they had for the Indians and Cavaliers and unwilling to sell his team, announced from Baltimore he was moving the team there.

Back in Ohio, grown men raised on Browns football, wept openly.

"I can't tell you how much that hurt," brick layer Richard Holloway said during the summer after putting in a tough day helping build the Cleveland Browns Stadium. "Talk about shock."

Shock and pain. A deep, deep pain. And a feeling of betrayal.

"It was as though they'd been cheated," said Browns president Carmen Policy, who got five Super Bowl rings working for the San Francisco 49ers. "People refer to it like a death in the family. But it wasn't just a death in Big Dawg went to Washington, and broke down crying in front of a congressional committee as he tried to explain the injustice of it all.

Save Our Browns became Cleveland's campaign and war cry.

The sense of loss hit home with NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue, who remembered the heartbreak he felt when his Dodgers moved from Brooklyn.

Tagliabue wanted to put football back in one of the league's signature cities quickly, and less than two months after the Browns played their final game in Cleveland Stadium, NFL owners approved a deal that allowed Modell to leave.

Cleveland, in turn, got to keep its nickname, colors and history.

"It couldn't be any other way," said billionaire banker Al

Lerner, who bought the team for $530 million last September. "This town wouldn't stand for anything else."

The NFL has been trumpeting the Browns' return and scheduled their home opener for Sunday night of opening weekend on national TV against the Steelers.

From the time the league awarded Lerner ownership, the Browns had just 11 months to put the team in place before their first exhibition game.

By contrast, Carolina and Jacksonville had two years to get ready.

"When I took the job in January," Browns coach Chris Palmer said, "I walked into my office and I didn't have a secretary, there were boxes all over the place. I thought, 'Hey, what did I get myself into?'"

Lerner put the team's future in the hands of Policy, who in turn put the Browns' football operations in the hands of Dwight Clark, famous for making "The Catch" in San Francisco.

In January, the Browns' coaching search seemed to be going nowhere when Mike Holmgren, then Steve Mariucci and finally Brian Billick all slipped away.

But the Browns found their man in Palmer, Jacksonville's offensive coordinator who now seems as if he were destined to lead the Browns into a new football era.

Friendly with boundless energy, Palmer comes across as an English teacher in looks and daily preparation. Everything the Browns have done during the preseason has been planned out to the second by Palmer, much the way Cleveland coach Paul Brown worked during his days as an NFL coach.

And before they took the field on the first day of training camp, the new Browns got a history lesson as Palmer showed them a highlight film on the old Browns.

"I wanted them to understand what it means to put that helmet on every day," Palmer said.
