USG serving students' interests

By Christy Jenkins
USG REPORTER

The semester has just started, but the senators of the Undergraduate Student Government are already hard at work.

"The primary goals of USG this year are to continue serving as the student voice to the administration and to keep facilitating communication among students to accurately advocate the needs of students," USG President Josh Kontak said. He also said that the entire USG is excited about student interests and about increasing the assessment of student opinions so that USG better represents the student body.

During last night's meeting on Monday evening, the USG senators opened by hearing from members of the Latino Student Union, a student trustee at the University, and a fellow senator.

Miguelina Muniz, the president of the Latino Student Union, asked USG to consider adding voting senate positions to any interested student organization. She said that having representatives from campus organizations, like LSU, will help USG better serve the needs of all students.

Matt Clever, student trustee, addressed the issue of budget cuts to higher education and encouraged USG members to write state congressmen and work with the Board of Trustees on this issue.

Off Campus Senator Jeff Nolis also spoke during open forum. He proposed the integration of students and administration to increase communication among both groups.

USG members also addressed the Flexfunds issue and are working on setting up a committee for further discussion of this issue.

Any undergraduate student with a concern or issue for USG to address can speak during the open forum section of USG meetings. To speak at the meeting, a student must contact the Speaker of the Senate, Chris Pearty.

USG meets Monday nights at 7:30 p.m. in 113 Olscamp Hall. The meetings are also broadcast live on WBGU. To get involved with USG, contact either Josh Kontak or Chris Pearty at the USG office: 372-8116.

WANT TO GET INVOLVED WITH USG?

USG will soon be looking for residence hall liaisons. Liaisons would be responsible for attending all USG meetings and bringing concerns from their hall to the Senate. For more information contact either the USG office or your hall council.

Attempts being made to revamp Pub

By Allison Halco
CAMPUS NEWS EDITOR

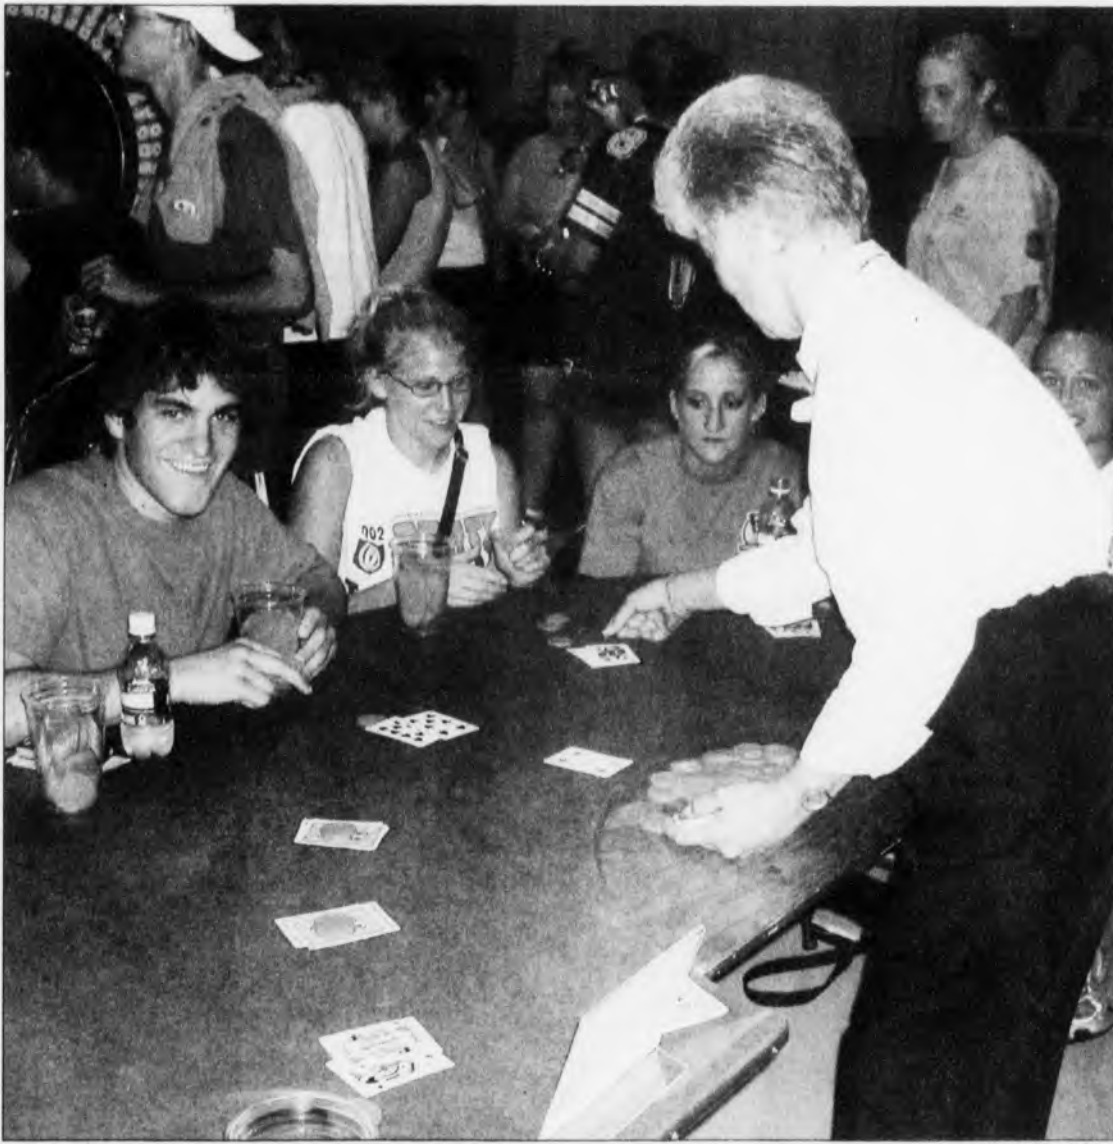

We've all heard the rumors that the Black Swamp Pub is closing and being replaced by a different restaurant or a new coffee shop, and many a student has passed an empty, yet open, Pub in the Bowen-Thompson Student Union.

However, according to Michelle East, Pub manager, these signs of the apparent demise of the Pub are misleading. Instead of closing the Pub, new efforts are being made to increase the Pub's popularity among students.

Extended hours are part of an effort to increase business at the Pub. The Pub will now stay open later on Monday night for football games and will be open on weekends beginning Saturday, September 6, according to Lisa Edginton, who bartends at the Pub.

On weekdays, the Pub will be open not only from 4:00 p.m. until 9:00 p.m., as it has been in the past, but it will also open earlier in the day, from 11:30 a.m. until 1:30 p.m. During this time, a soup and salad bar, previously available at the Bowling Greenery and similar to the soup

Courts able to block posting secrets

By David Kravets
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — In a closely watched case that pitted free speech against the protection of trade secrets, the California Supreme Court ruled yesterday that courts may be able to block computer users from posting on the Internet a code for illegally copying DVD movies.

The justices did not resolve whether the code was, in fact, a trade secret, leaving that for a lower court to determine. They did rule, however, that they would not tolerate the posting of legitimate trade secrets online, and reversed a lower court that said disseminating trade secrets is protected by the First Amendment right to freedom of speech.

The case centered on San Francisco computer programmer Andrew Bunner, who in 1999 posted the code to crack an encryption program that is supposed to prevent unauthorized copying of movies.

The DVD Copy Control Association, an arm of Hollywood studios, sued Bunner and others under the Uniform Trade Secrets Act, a California law designed to protect trade secrets.

A state judge in San Jose ordered Bunner to remove the code-cracking program from the Internet. But an appeals court in San Jose lifted that injunction, saying that protecting trade secrets is not as important as freedom of speech.

A unanimous Supreme Court, however, ruled otherwise Monday.

Traditions and rituals big for Binder

By Carrie Whitaker
MANAGING EDITOR

For Ron Binder, the new associate director of Residence Life for Greek Affairs, ritual and tradition are important parts of Greek life.

"What separates fraternities and sororities from other organizations on campus is the fact that they have rituals," Binder said. "We have a book that contains our values and these values are what our founders said we should be about."

Greek groups on campus should believe in these values and live by them, Binder said.

Fifteen years ago Binder was a student at the University working on his master's degree. He said he is excited to be back in Ohio after working as a Greek advisor at the University of Georgia and the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

"I know (Bowling Green's) campus, but I don't. A lot has changed over the years," Binder said. "But one thing that intrigued me is that this is a nationally recognized Greek community."

And Binder should know; he

said he prides himself on being a curious person. He is involved in Greek life on a national level, gives speeches at other college campuses and attends many conferences each year.

"When I am out on other campuses and at conferences I am always looking for that one idea I can bring back that will work," Binder said. "The key is that it must be able to work."

Goals are also important to Binder. He has four goals for the 2003-04 school year.

- Get to know the system
- Build a community among all Greeks
- Advise the National Pan-Hellenic Council and the Interfraternal Council

• Work on academics.

The Greek community is built on four principles, Binder said—scholarship, leadership, service and brotherhood/sisterhood.

One specific goal Binder has set for the future is to win the Mid American Conference Greek Award that is given out every year. The award is a scholarship award for grade point average.

"We need to work on scholarship," Binder said. "But in order to qualify, the Greek GPA must be higher than the non-Greek GPA,

The Station owners must pay fine for not carrying workers' compensation

By Brooke Donald
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — A judge yesterday refused to postpone collection of a $1 million fine imposed on the owners of The Station nightclub for failing to carry workers' compensation insurance before February's deadly fire.

Lawyers for Jeffrey and Michael Derderian were denied requests to stay the penalty while the case is on appeal. The Feb. 20 blaze killed 100 people, including four club employees, and injured nearly 200 others.

Workers' Compensation Court Judge Bruce Morin said his court didn't have the authority to stay the penalty, and only the state Supreme Court could take such action. Jeff Pine, who represents Jeffrey Derderian, said the club owners planned to ask the Supreme Court to step in.

The fine levied on the brothers and their company, Derco LLC, is the maximum allowed under state law — $1.07 million, or $1,000 for each day the Derderians failed to carry workers' compensation insurance from March 2000, when they bought the club, until it was destroyed.

The Derderians' lawyers say the fine is out of line with previous penalties imposed by the Department of Labor and Training, Pine said collecting the fine would cause "irreparable harm" to the Derderians and would not help the victims. The money goes into a general fund to uphold compensation laws for all workers, officials have said.

Last week, the club's owners and the band Great White, whose pyrotechnic display set off the blaze, were fined a total of nearly $100,000 by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, the agency that regulates workplace safety.

"We wanted to try something different," East said of the new soup and salad bar.

In addition to these changes, the Pub will now feature a full bar including mixed drinks, instead of the beer and bottled alcoholic beverages previously offered. The Pub may also begin to offer personal pizzas from Zza's to its evening customers, Edginton said.

"They're really trying to pick up business here," Edginton said.

we are not yet eligible."

In order to motivate the Greek community, Binder has created a report letting the different Greek groups see their numbers and how they compare with each other. As of spring semester 2003, the average non-Greek GPA was 2.89 and the average Greek GPA was 2.83.

With a passion for Greek life, Binder's first goal this year is to get to know the different Greek groups on campus.

"I want to make sure we have a sense of Greek community," Binder said. "At a lot of other schools the only thing the Greek groups have in common is the fact they are at the same university. We need to have meaningful interaction between all groups."

For Binder, it all goes back to ritual and tradition.

"We are not just a collection of guys or girls who live together, but we should be a collection of people brought together by values."

Industry relieved with court's decision

0 vote, said an order to remove the program "does not violate the free speech clauses of the United States and California Constitutions."

The justices ruled that neither Bunner nor others have a free-speech right to post trade secrets. The high court ordered the San Jose-based appeals court to analyze whether the code is still a protected trade secret given its widespread exposure.

The DVD association hailed yesterday's decision.

"This opinion has wide applications to trade secret law," said association attorney Robert G. Sugerman. "Owners of trade secrets can now protect those trade secrets through injunctive relief, which is clearly now available."

The industry had argued that trade secrets would be plundered if computer users were free to post them. Companies such as Boeing, Ford and AOL-Time Warner urged the justices to side with the DVD association, arguing that trade-secret protections trump First Amendment speech protections.

Bunner did not devise the encryption code but posted it on one of his Web sites. The Norwegian teen who cracked the code, Jon Johansen, was acquitted in January of charges he stole trade secrets.

Bunner, 26, said he has removed any reference to the program from the Internet and is fighting the case to stand up for free speech rights.

Students turn to Internet to ease freshman worries

By Stephen Manning
ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

BETHESDA, Md. — When Amy Anenberg got her roommate assignment from Northwestern University this summer, the first thing she did was head to the family computer.

The Illinois school didn't provide much information, just a name. So Anenberg did what many anxious freshmen heading off to college this fall have done — she Googled her roommate-to-be.

"When you first get your name, everyone is so hyped up about getting a roommate," said Anenberg, a graduate of Walt Whitman High School in Bethesda. "You want to immediately know something about them."

Among the freshmen streaming onto campuses in the next few weeks for their first taste of college, many have dispensed with awkward introductions or anxiety over what the stranger they'll share a cramped dorm with will be like.

Gone are the days where a stilted phone call was the only way to talk to roommates about who should bring the mini-fridge and who had the best stereo. Incoming freshmen have an array of Web-based tools available to research their classmates before they reach campus, and they go beyond the initial Google or other Internet searches. Colleges and universities facilitate online introductions with orientation Web sites that allow a freshman to view photos and profiles of classmates, see pictures of their future dorm room, and use a private chat room for roommates only.

The result, administrators say, is students who are much more comfortable with their surroundings and classmates when they arrive on campus.

"They move in and start off like they've been here for years," said Marcus Robinson, who developed University of Dayton's online orientation site.

It's not.

Do not forget your work ethics

Well folks, can you believe it? The first day of school has come and gone. Hopefully, this editorial finds you without stress and ready to face the next day of first classes. It's hard to believe that summer is over. However, it is time to get down to some serious school work. At least for some people it is.

If you are a freshman, you may have gone to bed last night with questions swimming through your head. Could one of those questions have possibly been, "How do I prepare for college level courses?" Even if it wasn't, we are giving you the answer anyway.

Some instructors don't take attendance and some take attendance and assign points for simply attending class. Here is our advice to everyone: attend every class.

A person who attends class has the opportunity to listen to an intelligent person lecture in a lecture hall. In the small-classroom environment, you will get invaluable personal attention from the instructor. Also, we have yet to encounter a teacher who refuses to answer questions about the assigned readings or the lecture. This brings us to another piece of advice: read all of the assigned readings.

The readings will compliment the lectures and vice versa so read every page. Don't be afraid to use a highlighter to point out the main points of the reading. This will help you further establish a connection with the main point. Bookstores pay the same price for a book that is covered in highlighter as one that is in perfect condition.

Some of you may not like to read. Nonetheless, skipping the reading entirely should be out of the question. At minimum, read the first paragraph under each main heading and the summary at the end of the chapter if it has one. This way you, at the very least, know what is being talked about in class and then ask questions to try and clarify the material. We have come to another piece of advice: participate in class.

Come to class ready to ask questions. It is important that you take the opportunity to clear up as much confusion as possible in class because the next class will be built on the class before. If you are still struggling with the basics, it will be difficult to comprehend the more advanced material.

So, go to every class, read the books and participate. Most students here are now paying $13,000 a year to attend University classes and live on campus. It would a terrible waste of money to skip classes and assignments. We have come to the final piece of advice: take our advice.

Proficient English a must for profs

LENIE ADOLPHSON

U-wire Columnist

There is a major occurrence in institutions of higher learning. This issue is professors' lack of oral proficiency in the English language. This is a controversial subject because those who raise the issue are often accused of racism and ethnocentrism. Yet, it has to be addressed. There are many components to this problem, and all of them are serious.

First, when teaching at an American college or university, all professors and lecturers should be required to speak fluent English. Purportedly, it is the policy of most American universities to hire instructors who adeptly can speak English.

Nevertheless, the reality is that there are classrooms in which students struggle because of a professor's inability to speak fluent English. It is not sufficient for the instructor to comprehend English; the instructor must be able to convey the material in a manner that is clear and concise.

The second component to this pressing issue is the response to the problem by department heads. Many students believe — and with good reason — that this problem will not be addressed or solved. Many students state that it's pointless to complain.

A friend who suffered through an entire semester of confusion stated that when he talked to a department head about the fact that he and many other students had difficulty understanding the professor, the response was, "What do you want me to do about it?"

The third component to the problem is the fact that many Americans are not majoring in math or technical fields. Thus, such classes are increasingly being taught by someone who is not skilled in the English language.

I am not opposed to professors from other countries. I support and welcome diversity. I am opposed to professors who are incompetent whether they are American or foreign. It is incompetent to stand in front of a classroom full of students and speak so incoherently that students fail the class.

The disgrace is that the failing grade that students receive due to the language barrier is not their failure. The grade should be placed squarely on the shoulders of the incoherent instructor and the F should stand for fired.

Failing grades cost dearly in terms of the ability to get scholarships, getting accepted into other universities, receiving financial aid and, of course, the failure to learn the material. Therefore, this problem must be solved.

Millions of students are in classrooms around America reading syllabi and being informed as to what they need to do to pass the class. However, some of those students will be handicapped because they will not be able to comprehend the material.

Students and parents are paying hefty tuition bills to receive a major service. Despite the lofty sentiments regarding the glory of education, the bottom line is that education is a business, and students are customers who deserve quality service.

The fourth and last component to the problem begins at the hiring stage. An applicant who is barely understandable during the interviewing and selection process should be automatically disqualified.

The state of Michigan passed a law that required all foreign teaching assistants and professors to pass an English oral proficiency test. This law needs to be expanded to include the entire country.

What it means to be a liberal politician

KEITH POWELL
Opinion Columnist

When exactly was it that liberal became such a dirty word? My guess would be that this occurred right around the time people started attaching the descriptor "bed-wetting" to the word. As in: "Hi, my name is Johnny Politician and I'm a bed-wetting liberal." Let's take this opportunity to set the record straight. Despite what you might have heard, we liberals are not weak, treasonous, soft on crime, a propaganda machine, a bunch of bleeding hearts nor are we systematically dismantling all that is good and "moral" in the country.

However, you would never know that by the way politicians talk.

To call a politician a liberal in this country is to insinuate that he or she is weak and someone hell-bent (for whatever reason) on destroying the country from the inside out. The politicians who are obviously liberal do nothing to dispel this illusion. To call one of them a liberal is the equivalent of lighting a bag of excrement on fire and throwing it at his or her door. The only solution is to stomp out the flames quickly and without thought: "Me, a liberal? Heavens no! Why, I'm a moderate."

Presidential hopeful Howard Dean is a perfect example of this phenomenon.

Dean is perhaps not a liberal through and through, but he is certainly a liberal when viewed in the context of those who are likewise seeking his party's nomination. Dean has been quite vocal in his opposition to the war in Iraq. He has likewise been extremely critical of Bush's tax cut, which he claims overwhelmingly favors the richest 2 percent of the population while leaving Middle America behind.

In addition, he supports affirmative action, women's rights and same-sex marriages. All of these seem to lay the groundwork for a liberal platform and yet, when questioned, Dean claimed he is more of a "centrist" because he favors gun owners' rights.

Who can really blame a liberal for wanting to be identified as a moderate though? Thanks to conservatives, to call oneself a liberal is to run the risk of alienating voters who are uninformed about what it really means to be a liberal. One of the best-selling books this past summer was Ann Coulter's "Treason," which, in no uncertain terms, implies that all liberals are stupid and hate America.

Coulter also accuses liberals of undermining the efforts of Joseph McCarthy, who she describes as an American hero. She neglects the fact that it was the Republican congress, Prescott Bush among them, who turned against McCarthy and his witch-hunt. This is, of course, the logic one would expect from a person who, after 9/11, wrote the following about the Muslim world: "We should invade their countries, kill their leaders and convert them to Christianity." She also had this to say about Oklahoma City bomber Timothy McVeigh, "My only regret with Timothy McVeigh is he did not go to the New York Times building." I hope the irony of Coulter titling her previous book "Slander" is not lost on her.

The biggest problem with attaching such a stigma to the word liberal is it fails to acknowledge that the United States became the most prosperous, most powerful, most free country the world has ever known because of liberal politicians and the policies they implemented. Even conservatives must admit that a large part of modern-day America was built on FDR's New Deal and LBJ's Great Society.

Thanks to liberals, we in the United States enjoy a right to safety at the workplace, a living wage, the right for all children to attend school, the benefits of overtime, Social Security and above all, an integrated society. What have conservatives given the country aside from Iran-Contra, an overwhelming deficit, the destruction of the United Nations and the current AIDS epidemic?

"My expectations for this season with both teams is to improve on our MAC finishes."

CAMI WELLS, CROSS COUNTRY COACH

Harriers look to improve finishes in MAC

By Elliott Schreiner
SPORTS REPORTER

The cross country season is right around the corner for Bowling Green and there is one major goal the team is looking to reach this season.

"My expectations for this season with both teams is to improve on our MAC finishes," coach Cami Wells said.

The men's team is looking to be more competitive both within the team and against their opposition.

"We have 13 athletes on the men's roster at the present time," Wells said. "This will make it much more competitive to make the travel squad this year."

Mario Rothmund is the top returnee with a personal best of 24:37 in the 8K. The only problem is his eligibility as he has applied for medical hardship.

He will be joined by teammates Patrick Maynard and Kris Lachowski, who have personal bests of 26:50 and 26:17 in the 8K.

The women's squad will rely on a steady mix of young and old and Wells is excited about working in youth and experience together.

"The women's squad is a nice mix of experienced upperclassmen and freshmen athletes," she said. "This will give us a strong group of about 10 runners all fighting for the top five spots."

The women's squad will be led into battle by their team captain Amber Culp who returns with personal bests of 17:38 in the 5K and 22:23 in the 6K runs.

She will be closely followed by teammates Melissa Krueger, Elise Gould and Niki Suito. This triple threat following Culp will only be made stronger when they add in Leslie Carden, who has a personal best time of 17:56 in the 5K.

Just having these runners is not the only thing necessary for the Falcons to reach their goals this season. They will also need lots of practice and determination in order to move up the Mid American Conference ladder.

"The athletes are in a period of tough training right now," Wells said. "So they will be a little tired going into the meet this week."

Students line sidewalks for Ohio State vs. BG tickets

Anticipation for game against national champ runs rampant at Anderson

By Zach Baker and Elliott Schreiner
BG NEWS SPORTS STAFF

Everyone knew that the game was going to be important to BG students, but it is unclear if anyone knew how important.

The Bowling Green football team will square off with national champion Ohio State on Sept. 20, the first time it has made the trip to Columbus since 1997. This year's meeting will also be only the third time the teams have ever faced.

And BG fans want to be there to see it.

A line of students stretching from the ticket office at Anderson Arena to the sidewalks beyond the building had formed by 8 a.m. yesterday to purchase $47 tickets.

Some students arrived even before that.

"My roommate was here probably at 11 p.m. [Sunday]," said Sam Popa, a senior who was standing in line yesterday. "He camped out with about eight other people until this morning."

Popa said he helped make the camping trip a little easier for his roommate by bringing him coffee yesterday morning.

"There was a few more people," Popa said. "Everybody just wants to get tickets for the OSU game."

Popa said that the fact that OSU is defending a title had a great deal to do with the turnout.

"OSU's national champs, and they're a big school," Popa said. "Most people that live in Ohio are OSU fans...so it's a cool game to go to."

Scot Bressler, who has been director of ticket operations for all three BG-OSU football games, said that while all of the games were important to the students, facing the national champs has increased the intensity of the matchup.

"The first game [in 1992] was huge...for the second one, OSU wasn't too powerful," Bressler said. "But it was still exciting, and now they are national champs, so it's really exciting."

The students in line appeared to share Bressler's enthusiasm.

Many BG students are also Ohio State fans, drawing their allegiances for this game into question, but the students asked said they would remain loyal to their school.

Senior Cheryl Dieter said she would be there to support the Falcons.

"One-hundred percent BG," Dieter said. "And I'm going to paint my face."

Bressler said he was optimistic that BG students would remain behind the team.

"Who will people root for? Hopefully BG," Bressler said. "As far as season ticket holders, they should definitely root for BG."

By 4 p.m. yesterday, Bressler said some tickets still remained for the game, but that tickets were going quickly.

BG last played a national

Zach Baker BG News

WAITING: University students wait in line outside of the Anderson Arena ticket office for tickets to the Ohio State-Bowling Green game to be held Sept. 20 in Columbus. This is easily the Falcons' most-anticipated game since their season-opening loss to Michigan in Ann Arbor in 2000.

champion in 1987, when they traveled to Penn State and were defeated, 45-19.

"Sales [for that game] weren't nearly as high," Bressler said.

Location could have had something to do with the game's ticket demand. With the two schools only separated by 120 miles, students can make the trip without much trouble.

"A two-hour drive to see the national champs is worth it," Bressler said.

The Falcons' recent success in football could also have been a factor in the demand. When BG played Penn State, they had a record of 5-6 the previous season. Last season, the Falcons were 9-3.

Clarett likely out for six games

The Ohio State sophomore phenom will likely be out of the BG-OSU contest.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ARLINGTON, Va. — Ohio State star Maurice Clarett's father told USA Today the school plans to inform the NCAA that it will suspend the running back for six games.

"It will be a total of six games, but he could've lost everything," Myke Clarett said Sunday. "We're relieved that it's finally over and that he was able to maintain his college eligibility and his scholarship. That was the goal."

Myke Clarett said a source on the university's board of trustees told him his son would miss three games for violating NCAA rules for driving a borrowed car from a dealership and three more for academic reasons.

In announcing the suspension Friday, the school said the running back would sit out "multiple games" for his role in an exaggerated car theft report.

Coach Jim Tressel and athletic director Andy Geiger have declined to be specific about the length of the suspension.

U.S. Open sees plenty of action on first day

By Howard Fendrich
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The opening day of a Grand Slam tournament is a carnival of tennis, with more than 100 top men and women playing all across the grounds.

Storylines abound on such occasions, and yesterday at the U.S. Open was no different:

- 1998 champion Lindsay Davenport tested her injured left foot and won easily;

- Highly seeded players were upset (No. 8 Chanda Rubin, No. 9 Sebastien Grosjean);

- Up-and-comers looked good (Ashley Harkleroad, Marty Fish);
- Former contenders continued their fades (Greg Rusedski, Iva Majoli).

And yet, without even lifting a racket, one man commanded most of the attention: Pete Sampras.

The owner of a record 14 Grand Slam singles titles, including five at the U.S. Open, Sampras formally announced his retirement Monday evening, and the U.S. Tennis Association organized a ceremony to honor him at Arthur Ashe Stadium between the two night matches.

"The process is now over. I'm 100 percent retired," Sampras said, his voice cracking. "I'm at peace with it. It's time to call it a career."

Sampras, who's 32 and became a father in November, leaves with 64 singles titles, including seven at Wimbledon, five at the U.S. Open, and two at the Australian Open.

"I will never sit here and say I'm the greatest ever. I've done what I've done in the game. I've won a number of majors — I think that's kind of the answer to everything," he said. "I don't know if there's one best player of all time. I feel my game will match up to just about anybody. I played perfect tennis at times, in my mind."

He hasn't played at all since beating Andre Agassi to win the 2002 U.S. Open, but he never said he was quitting.

Without Sampras or the injured Serena Williams, the Open is being contested without either of the previous year's champions for the first time in more than 30 years. It's lent an air of anyone-can-win to both draws, and the third-seeded Davenport, for one, figures to be among the women who could take advantage.

"It's been awesome here, getting to play at home. But now I have the chance to get into a division race."

BRIAN ANDERSON, K.C. ROYALS PITCHER

Anderson dealt from Tribe to Kansas City

By Tom Withers
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CLEVELAND — Brian Anderson deserved a break this season, and he got one yesterday.

Anderson was acquired for the pennant race by the Kansas City Royals, who sent the Cleveland Indians two minor leaguers and agreed to pay some of the left-hander's bonuses for 2003.

The 31-year-old Anderson went 9-10 with a 3.71 ERA for Cleveland, which signed him to a one-year free agent contract in December and may go after him again this winter.

Anderson has had a solid season in his second stint with the Indians, but has been unlucky in many of his 24 starts. Cleveland has given up a major league high 27 unearned runs behind him.

He's hoping that trend changes with the Royals, who will start him tonight against Texas. Kansas City is one game behind first-place Chicago in the AL Central.

"He's had some success against the clubs we're going to be playing," Royals general manager Allard Baird said. "He has playoff experience and World Series experience."

Baird said the trade was not a reaction to Sunday's game, in which right-hander Kevin Appier left his start against Minnesota with tightness in his elbow.

"We tried to make this deal prior to the trade deadline, but it just did not work out," Baird said.

Appier, who has been pitching with a partial tear all season, is scheduled to see a doctor Tuesday.

A native of Geneva, Ohio, Anderson said he had mixed emotions about leaving the Indians.

"It's been awesome here, getting to play at home," Anderson said. "But now I have the chance to get into a division race. I'm sure those [mixed] feelings will go away, but it's five weeks, and it's meaningful baseball."

For Anderson, who won a World Series title with Arizona, the Indians got first baseman-outfielder Trey Dyson and right-hander Kieran Mattison and cash considerations from the Royals.

"There was a lot of creativity with all three parties — the player and the two ballclubs," Baird said.

Indians general manager Mark Shapiro said those considerations were the Royals' willingness to pay bonuses Anderson was due if he made a certain number of starts this season.

Shapiro said Anderson drew interest from two teams before the July 31 trading deadline, and three more teams were aggressive in trying to sign Anderson

Buccaneers confident as defending champs

By Dave Goldberg
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Michael Vick is hyped as the next John Elway or more. He was supposed to carry the Atlanta Falcons past the Tampa Bay Buccaneers in the NFC South this season and, perhaps, on to the Super Bowl.

Then Vick did what comes naturally, scrambling in a meaningless exhibition game against Baltimore.

"Nothing was open and I had to do something to make a play," he said. "It wasn't looking good at the time and I just tried to get something going."

Instead, he got something stopped: the Falcons' momentum. He was hit from behind and went down with a broken leg that will keep him out for the first four regular-season games and perhaps more.

Not a good thing in a division that had three teams with winning records and a fourth, Carolina, which made a major push upward last season.

Vick's injury solidifies Tampa Bay's position as the favorite to win the division again. The most significant loss from last year's team is free safety Dexter Jackson, the Super Bowl MVP, who went to Arizona as a free agent.

But Jackson wasn't one of the stars of a dynamic defense and his replacement, former nickel back Dwight Smith, could have been the MVP himself with two interception returns for touchdowns in the Super Bowl.

The heart of the team remains that defense, although the three mainstays — defensive tackle Warren Sapp, linebacker Derrick Brooks and strong safety John Lynch — have a few miles on them.

Still, none seems to have slowed and defensive tackle Anthony McFarland, who missed the postseason and Super Bowl with a foot injury, just signed a rich new contract. He will team with Sapp as perhaps the best inside tandem in the league.

As usual with Tampa, offense is more problematic. The offensive line and running game are so-so and there's no real deep threat at wide receiver.

Brad Johnson is a capable quarterback as long as he stays healthy, which he hasn't in most seasons. The backups are Jim Miller, Shaun King and rookie Chris Simms, who has looked sharp in exhibitions under the tutelage of coach Jon Gruden and is probably the QB of the future.

The top three receivers all are 6-foot-plus: Keyshawn Johnson, Keenan McCardell and Joe Jurevicius, who shined in the postseason. Thomas Jones was obtained from Arizona as insurance at running back behind Michael Pittman, who has legal problems that put his status in doubt. Mike Allstot remains the power back and a force near the goal line.

But since Pittsburgh ended its run of four titles in six years after the 1979 season, only three teams have won repeat championships: San Francisco (1988-89), Dallas ('92-93) and Denver ('97-98). Their quarterbacks were Joe Montana, Troy Aikman and Elway, all a lot better than Johnson.

Still, the Bucs believe.

"I think it's going to be the hardest thing we ever try to do in our lives," Sapp says. "But I think this team is up for the challenge."

Atlanta might be the biggest challenge if Vick is his old self when he returns. Philadelphia's Donovan McNabb had a similar injury last year, and his relative lack of mobility hurt in the playoffs.

Meanwhile, Doug Johnson will be at quarterback and he's not bad — he was 19-of-25 for 257 yards in a road victory against the Giants, a playoff team, in his only start last season, although New York played that game without both starting cornerbacks.

"Doug's a very fiery guy," says middle linebacker Keith Brooking, the Falcons' best defensive player. "He's told me, 'I like it when the D-lineman hits me as I'm throwing the ball. I like to pick myself up in front of him. That feels good to me.' Hey, not many quarterbacks are going to say that."

Greene and Dragila see World reigns end

By Rob Gloster
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAINT-DENIS, France — Maurice Greene's six-year reign as 100-meter world champion ended in pain yesterday when he hobbled across the finish line next-to-last in his semifinal heat.

Also dethroned was U.S. compatriot Stacy Dragila, who had won the only two previous world crowns in the women's pole vault but failed to win a medal this time.

In yet another disappointment for the American team at the World Championships, Raasin McIntosh fell on the eighth of the 10 hurdles in the women's 400-meter hurdles and didn't finish. She had to be helped off the track.

At the same time, track and field's world governing body ordered U.S. team officials to punish sprinter Jon Drummond for his tantrum in Sunday's 100 quarterfinals by Tuesday night.

And, adding insult to injury, some fans in the Stade de France crowd whistled in derision as "The Star-Spangled Banner" was played during the gold-medal ceremony for women's 100 champion Kelli White.

Greene's absence from the 100 final later Monday wiped out a long-anticipated showdown with world-record holder Tim Montgomery, who sped into the final by finishing second to U.S. champion Bernard Williams in their semifinal heat.

Greene, who entered the world meet as a three-time defending champion, got off to a great start but slowed midway through the race. His face contorted in pain, and he fell far behind the leaders of the heat.

Greene grabbed his left leg as soon as he crossed the finish line.

"I got a great start and from my start I just felt my quad muscle pop," Greene said. "I just kept trying to go through it, but it just kept getting worse and worse as I went down the track."

Greene had not competed in a sprint race for six weeks until the world championships, and has not won a race since June. He has struggled with injuries since winning his third straight world championship in August 2001 in Edmonton.

Greene said he does not expect to run on the U.S. 400-meter relay team at the World Championships.

Indians acquire minor-leaguers from Royals before Aug. 31 when teams must have players on their roster to have them eligible for the post-season.

"The Royals wanted this player badly," Shapiro said. "They were the most persistent and willing to do the most to get him."

Anderson has playoff experience with Cleveland and Arizona. As a reliever, he made three appearances in the 1997 ALCS with the Indians and pitched in three World Series games against Florida.

He was the Diamondbacks' starter for Game 3 of the 2001 World Series against the New York Yankees.

Anderson waived a $600,000 bonus he was due if he got traded so the Indians and Royals could complete the deal. He will be a free agent again this winter, and Anderson would prefer to return to Cleveland.

Shapiro said he would like to have Anderson back.

"I would still like to have one veteran in our rotation to provide us with stability," he said.

Kansas City needs wins. And after pitching against the Royals, Anderson is now eager to help the AL's surprise team cap their improbable season with a playoff appearance.

"They've stayed right in it," he said. "Everybody was waiting to see if they were for real and now they're doing that. It's going to be a fight until the end."

Dyson, 23, has spent this season in Wilmington of the Class A Carolina League, where he batted .275 with 14 homers and 72 RBIs in 128 games.

Mattison, 23, went 8-5 with a 2.50 ERA in 17 starts for Burlington of the Class A Midwest League.

Shapiro said both players will report to the Indians' Kinston (A) affiliate.

U.S. sprinters out of action due to injuries

Also missing from the final will be Drummond, who was disqualified for a false start in Sunday's quarterfinals and then threw a tantrum that forced a 45-minute delay in the running of his heat.

Drummond sprawled on the track, preventing the heat from resuming. Then he returned to the starting line, even after being red-carded. He finally left, and wept on a practice track as the heat was rerun.

Yesterday, the International Association of Athletics Federations ruled Drummond's

"behavior was improper, unsporting and has brought the sport of athletics into disrepute."

The IAAF gave USA Track & Field chief executive Craig Masback until 8 p.m. tonight to carry out an investigation, give Drummond a hearing and announce a sanction.

"There must be some disciplinary action," IAAF general secretary Istvan Gyulai told The Associated Press. "This is unsportsmanlike and damaging behavior and should not happen again."

USATF spokeswoman Jill Geer said the federation would study its bylaws to determine "the proper disciplinary procedure under an expedited circumstance."

Before the IAAF announced its decision, Masback said not all the facts were known.

"I think more information will come out," he told the AP. "It's in everybody's interests that the dust settles."

Drummond was not available Monday for comment.

If the IAAF is not satisfied with the U.S. action, the world body can impose its own sanctions against Drummond, including suspending him from the rest of the championships, Gyulai said.

"If we believe what he did is so significant, we can immediately exclude him from any other event," Gyulai said.

Drummond is scheduled to compete in the 400-meter relay this weekend.

The IAAF also found that USATF administrative officer Michael Cain, who went onto the track and advised Drummond not to accept the disqualification, was guilty of improper and unsporting behavior detrimental to the sport.

After talking with Cain, Drummond returned to the starting blocks in an unsuccessful attempt to get back into the race.

The meet Wells is talking about is the EMU Open, which she sees as a perfect opportunity for the team to see if their hard work is paying off.

"This is a nice meet to start the season off with," she said. "It gives us a chance to see where we are as far as racing shape."

When scouting the Falcons, one needs to look no further than Culp, who is ever the optimist when it comes to her final season.

"I am excited about the upcoming season," she said. "I believe that it will be one of our strongest we've seen thus far."

The Falcons' first action will be this Saturday in Ann Arbor, Mich. at the EMU Open.

When Gilligan's Island first aired on TV, people actually called the National Coast Guard to warn them that there were 7 cast aways stuck ashore.
