

Visions in Leisure and Business

Volume 1 | Number 3

Article 19

1982

Example Organization Introduction

Visions Editors

Follow this and additional works at: <https://scholarworks.bgsu.edu/visions>

Recommended Citation

Visions Editors (1982) "Example Organization Introduction," Visions in Leisure and Business: Vol. 1 : No. 3 , Article 19.

Available at: <https://scholarworks.bgsu.edu/visions/vol1/iss3/19>

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the Journals at ScholarWorks@BGSU. It has been accepted for inclusion in Visions in Leisure and Business by an authorized editor of ScholarWorks@BGSU.

EXAMPLE ORGANIZATION

INTRODUCTION

The following section is devoted to the RCRA. This is an organization that has exemplified, in its formation, the type of spirit that will be needed to better develop the profession in the future. It is one of cooperation and improvement of standards. Even with the basic dimension of cooperation, the essential ingredient that went into the formation of this organization was risk. Risk in this case is one of the essential ingredients in change. Many individuals in the profession would like to maintain the status quo but the key word to change is risk and the ability to know when to take a chance and the probabilities of success. The history and the formation of this organization are one that is a balance of risk and cooperation which are two essential ingredients that will be needed for the success of the profession. This does not suggest that competitive structures are not in place and operating because each of the members of this profession are providing or competing for clients to increase their business but they recognize that a cooperative effort is needed to improve the overall quality of the profession and are acting accordingly in a consolidated effort to make such improvements.
