This Presentation is brought to you for free and open access by the University Libraries at ScholarWorks@BGSU. It has been accepted for inclusion in ScholarWorks@BGSU Documents by an authorized administrator of ScholarWorks@BGSU.

How do I get started?

From the libraries home page, go to 'Libraries & Collections' then click ScholarWorks@BGSU, or go to <http://scholarworks.bgsu.edu>.

Email any post-prints you have available, along with your CV, to scholarworks@bgsu.edu.

What else can ScholarWorks@BGSU be used for?

- Hosting peer-reviewed journals, including the review process as well as the publishing process
- Event/Conference hosting, including registration, submissions and publication of proceedings
- E-textbook publishing
- Undergraduate/Graduate research

I still have questions. Who can I contact?

University Libraries has established an email account for ScholarWorks@BGSU activity that is actively monitored by our ScholarWorks team (scholarworks@bgsu.edu). If you prefer an individual, you may contact Associate Dean, Colleen Boff (cboff@bgsu.edu / 419.372.7899) or Collections Coordinator, Linda Brown (lbrown@bgsu.edu / 372-7894).

Where Scholarship Meets Access

What is ScholarWorks?

ScholarWorks@BGSU is an open access institutional repository for hosting, preserving, and providing access to scholarly work created at Bowling Green State University. This service was created and is managed by the Bowling Green State University Libraries. Members of the Bowling Green State University academic community are invited to contribute items for long-term preservation and worldwide electronic accessibility.

Copyright for Published Articles

Some publishers allow the final, published version of an article to go into an institutional repository, but most only the post-print.

What is a 'Post-Print'?

A post-print is the version of the article after changes made by the peer review process, but before the publisher has made adjustments to the formatting. Essentially, copyright law states that the publisher owns the final design elements of the paper (the way the text is aligned in columns, the selection of font etc.) but the actual intellectual content is still the property of the author.

Sending any of your post-prints along with your CV means that ScholarWorks staff will be able to upload those documents immediately, and then look through your CV for any publishers which allow the final, published versions of articles to be included in an online repository. ScholarWorks staff will look for these online, and then add them to ScholarWorks.
