Dear Reader,

In the future when you stop to reflect on your time spent at the University, you will find that your memories are no longer quite so clear and that one year seemingly blends into the others.

Sure, you'll remember that wild spring break trip and that professor who taught the 400 -level class you never thought you'd pass, but the memories of everyday life as a college student will fade - for better or worse.

So, whether your memories of the 1985-86 academic year be of those all-nighters, the Live Aid Concert, that great party you threw or the horror of the space shuttle Challenger's fatal mission, The Key has tried to capture those memories and bind them into this book - for now as you are flipping through the pages and the memories are fresh, as well as for later when the memories begin to fade.

NATIONAL

As is typical of any given year, the 1985-86 academic year had its ups and downs.

The year, in some respects, was one of tragedy. It was the worst year in history for commercial airline fatalities, the lives of seven astronauts were lost in the space shuttle Challenger accident and thousands were still dying of the lethal disease AIDS.

Terrorists perfected their craft and exported it throughout Eastern Europe, and fund-raising.
We saw our president recover from a bout with cancer, students rallied against apartheid in universities across the United States and the 30 -year-old pass laws in South Africa were repealed in the spring.

The fate of Nazi doctor Josef Mengele was learned when his bones were found and identified in Brazil.

In July, Bob Geldof had his dream realized as rock stars donated their time and appeared on stage in front of 162,000 fans in Philadelphia and London in the greatest rock concert ever - Live Aid. The concert was seen on television by a billion plus and $$ 70.5$ million was raised for Africa's starving.

spy scandals rocked West Germany, the Soviet Union and the United States. Natural disasters such as volcanoes and hurricanes killed thousands more.

And yet the year had its redeeming qualities: Rockers became responsible and raised millions for African famine relief in an all-day concert that spanned the globe. And everyone from fashion models to comedians were caught up in the spirit of giving in an unprecedented flood of charity

A summit meeting between Ronald Reagan and Mikhail Gorbachev resulted in hope and the promise of future meetings.

In May, 1985, the original Coke was deemed obsolete and New Coke made its debut in a move that left the executives of the Coca-Cola Company red-faced as cries of "Coke WAS it" resounded throughtout the United States. The original formula, under the name Classic Coke, and Cherry Coke were reintroduced later in the summer.
TWA Flight 847 was hijacked in Greece, taken to Beruit and 39 American passengers were held by Palestinians for 17 days in June. U.S. Navy Petty Officer Robert Stethem was killed in the attack.

In the same month, we also saw President Ronald Reagan recover from surgery to remove cancerous polyps.

Samantha Smith, the little girl who toured the Soviet Union after she wrote the Kremlin about her fears of nuclear war, died in a plane accident in August.

The Greenpeace ship Rainbow Warrior was blown up and a photographer was killed in an incident that ultimately rocked the French government when it was learned that Prime Minister Francois Mitterrand had knowledge of the bombing.

Early in August, a Detta jetliner crashed in Dallas and 137 people were killed.

Later in the month, Washington, D.C., was wrapped in a 15 -mile "ribbon" -25 ,000 banners which were part of an antinuclear protest. The peaceful protest was the dream of Justine Merritt.

The intelligence operation in West Germany was shaken when it was learned that Hans Joachim Tiedge, a top intelligence officer, had defected to the East after having been a counterspy for 19 years.

In September, the Rev. Benjamin Weir, a Presbyterian minister, was released fron his captures after 16 months of captivity in Lebanon.

Back in the United States, Willie Nelson gathered together some of the biggest names in country music for Farm Aid. The concert, held at the University of Illinois, attracted 78,000 fans and raised $$ 8$ million for American farmers.

Bruce Springsteen was wrapping up his ' 84 -' 85 tour that netted $$ 39$ million in 40 concerts.

In the same month, KGB agent Oleg Gordievsky defected to Great Britain and 25 were expelled from the country after Gordievsky charged that they were spies.

Natural disasters were plentiful as Hurricane Gloria's 150 mph winds ripped up the East Coast from Florida to Maine and an earthquake that measured 7.8 on the Richter scale shook Mexico.
In October, Shimon Peres, Israel's prime minister, ordered the bombing of PLO headquarters in Tunisia in retaliation for the murder of three Israeli men in Cyprus.
Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh, the guru famous for his commune in Oregon and 90 -plus Rolls-Royce automobiles, was arrested on immigration charges. The Bhagwan was deported and refused entry to Britain and, when last we heard, was seeking to purchase an island where he could make his own rules.
Members of the PLO hijacked the Achille Lauro cruise ship and murdered

Leon Klinghoffer. An Egyptian plane carrying the hijackers was intercepted by the United States and forced to land in Sicily. The hijackers were released.

Also in October, John Walker Jr., a Navy specialist, pleaded quilty to charges of espionage. Walker was accused of leading a spy ring which sold secrets to the Soviets for 17 years and included his brother and his son.
And Rock Hudson, the Hollywood film and television star, died of AIDS.
November held a royal visit from Prince Charles and his wife Diana, Princess of Wales. The couple visited the White House and then flew to Florida where His Royal Highness played a round of polo.

In Colombia, the volcano Nevado del Ruiz erupted killing thousands and the JAL Flight 123 crashed in Japan killing 250.

On a more encouraging note, Mikhail Gorbachev and Reagan met in Geneva for a meeting of the superpowers. Although no major agreements were reached in regards to the arms race, they did promise to meet again.

And finally, William Shroeder celebrated the one-year anniversary of the surgery which replaced his defective heart with a Jarvik-7, artificial heart.

In December, tragedy struck as 258 U.S. soldiers returning from the Middle East were killed when their plane crashed in Newfoundland.

The Gramm-Rudman-Hollings act, which calls for a balanced budget by the year 1991, was passed in December, and later in the month, terrorists struck at the airports in Rome and Vienna leaving 19 dead.

In January, attempted murder and assault charges against Bernhard Goetz were dropped, ending the year-long saga of the man who shot four youths on a New York subway.

Martin Luther King Jr. Day was celebrated as a national holiday for the first time, and Bishop Desmond Tutu traveled across the country for three weeks raising money for South African churches and speaking out against apartheid

On Jan. 28, the world watched in horror as the media replayed footage of the space shuttle Challenger disaster. Faulty O-rings, sub-freezing temperatures and poor judgment on the part of NASA officials resulted in the loss of seven lives. Christa McAuliffe, the woman chosen to be the first teacher in space, was one of those killed.

The February elections in the Philippines were declared fraudulent when Ferdinand Marcos claimed victory over Cory Aquino. Unrest followed and, ultimately, Marcos and his wife Imelda fled to a safe haven in Hawaii.
In March, "Comic Relief" was aired on HBO and pledges were taken to aid the hungry and homeless in the United States, while models such as Brooke Shields and Jerry Hall walked the runway for Fashion Aid - a fashion show for famine relief.
Clint Eastwood became an "Enforcer" of another kind when he was sworn in as the mayor of Carmel-by-the-Sea, Calf., after an overwhelming victory over the imcumbent mayor.
The stock market broke the 1,800 mark, a contra aid package of $$ 100$ million was defeated by the House of Representatives, and Halley's Comet, which made a less-than-spectacular return, was most visible in the Southern Hemisphere on April 11.
Yasser Arafat was replaced by Moammar Khadafy as the bad boy of the Middle East when he defied the rest of the world to cross his "line of death" in the Gulf of Sidra; the United States took the challenge and sunk a Libyan ship after exchanging fire with the Libyans. Days later, after Libya was linked to the bombing of a West Berlin disco, the United States used F-11 bombers from England to attack Tripoli and Benghazi.
The events set off a backlash of terrorist attacks in Britain reportedly in retaliation for the support Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher gave the United States during the attacks.

And at the end of the month, U.S. Intelligence sources reported a meltdown at the Chernobyl nuclear reactor. Soviet officials confirmed there had been an accident but provided no details.

As the school year came to an end, plans were underway for "Hands Across America," a human chain of six million people that was supposed to stretch from $\qquad$

New York City to Los Angeles. The event was scheduled for May 25 and organizers hoped to raise $$ 50$ million for the hungry and homeless in the United States.
The year also held some hellos and and many goodbyes.

The television show "Miami Vice" and its stars Don Johnson and Philip Michael Thomas said hello to 15 Emmy nominations, while Speaker of the House

Tip O'Neill said his goodbyes and said this would be his last term.

And the world said goodbye to actors Yul Brynner and James Cagney, author E.B. White, director Orson Wells, retired Justice Potter Stewart and designer Laura Ashley.

Story by Danielle Fischer

The University didn't get much larger in size during the 1985-86 academic year, but it undoubtably became more interesting.

The University celebrated it's 75th anniversary. Logos were created, lawns were decorated and students and faculty were invited to join the celebration that included alumni, birthday cake and a convocation.
The campus buzzed with the news of the terback, Brian McClure. During McClure's four years as the Falcon quarterback, he broken every passing record in the Mid-American Conference, and several NCAA records. In April, McClure was drafted by the Buffalo Bills in the 12 th round.

McClure wasn't the only football affliate who advanced his carrer this year. Head football coach Denny Stolz announced at the California Bowl that he would be resigning as the Falcon coach to become the head coach for San Diego State University. Stolz was replaced by former Univerity of Arizona football coach, Howard"Moe" Ankney.

Pride swept through the University as it reached new heights and great accomplishments. Perhaps this sense of pride was due to the football team. Its success measured not only because it had an undefeated season and won a ticket to the California Bowl, but also because of the highly-talented, nationally acclaimed quar-

Weinert also handed in his resignation and was replaced by former University of Virginia coach Jim Larranga.
The hockey team ended its season with a $28-14$ record, but its success could be measured not only for the team but for the four players in particular who saw their careers boosted. Gary Kruzich and Scott Paluch were both choosen to play for the USA Olympic hockey team. Brian Meharry, center, and Andy Gribble, right wing, became stars overnight when they auditioned and got parts in the movie "Youngblood."

But Meharry and Gribble weren't the only stars to come out of the Univerity this year. Ray Browne from the world-renowned Popular Culture department made his television debut on ABC's "20/20." Browne published the Journal of Popular Culture, which was featured on "20/20" and is a part of the Popular Culture Library.
Bowling Green's local television station, WBGU-TV, had a celebrity aboard this year. Director of learning services Patrick Fitzgerald was the proud recipient of the third annual Michael R. Ferrari Award.

Other prestigious awards were received by various faculty members. Robert Romans, associate professor of biological sciences, was the recipient of the University Alumni Association's $$ 1,000$ Master Teacher Award. The award is the highest honor given to a teaching faculty member at the University.
Michael Mott, from the English department, was the first recipient of the 1985 Paul and Ruth Olscamp Research Award. The $$ 1,000$ award was designed to recognize faculty research at the University. The award was presented to Mott in December. Mott is also noted for his widely acclaimed biography of Thomas Merton.
The faculty Member of the Year award was presented to Douglas Neckers. Neckers, chairman of the chemistry department and executive director of the newly opened center for photochemical sciences, received the award by the Omicron Delta Kappa National Leadership Honor Society.

William Bess, director of the University's department of public safety, received recognition fall semester from the federal Department of Defense for his support of the National Guard and Reserve.

A leader in the area of international programs, the University and Director of the program Douglas Daye announced that the University saw a 35 percent increase in foreign students. Across the United States, the average number of international students remains less than three percent. In the Minority Affairs office, Jack Taylor $u$ 'naugarated to the position of vice president of Minority Affairs.

The selection of Rush Miller to the position of dean of libraries and learning resources ended a nationwide search that began in July of 1985 when Dwight Burlingame, former dean, was named vice president for Academic Affairs. Miller had been the director of libraries at Sam Houston State University.

Still another newcomer to the University was Roger Bennet. Bennet, formerly from the University of Wisconsin, was selected as the new dean of education.

The Board of Trustees named faculty members Pietro Badia, from psychology, and Orlando Behling, from management, as University professors. Only seven other faculty members in the University's history have been so honored.

It's not many people who get the opportunity to swap ideas with two of the most powerful leaders in the world. This year, Reginald Noble, chairman of the biological sciences department, played a key role in the environmental agreement between President Reagan and General Secretary of the Communist Party, Mikhail Gorbachev. Noble, the project leader, met with the superpowers in Geneva to discuss Soviet-American cooperation on matters concerning environmental conservation. ## SPORTS

When sports buffs look back on the mid1980's they will undoubtedly call it one of the greatest eras in sports history.

Records that were thought to be immortal fell. Players thought to be tall or heavy were dwarfed by rookies. And players who were "too old" reached new heights.

Pete Rose, 44, eclipsed Ty Cobb's alltime hit record, a mark set before World War II that most thought was untouchable.

Some thought Wilt Chamberlin's scoring record was also unbeatable, but Kareem Abdul-Jabbar topped it and proceeded to break the playoff scoring record in the same season.

But Jabbar didn't make the biggest headlines in the NBA, 7-7 Manute Bol brought his 195 -pound frame to pro basketball and led the league in blocked shots.

Also gaining attention for his court antics was John "Hot Rod" Williams although the Tulane hoop star was in a court of law more than the basketball variety. Williams, drafted by the NBA's Cleveland Cavaliers, never played a pro game, spending time in front of a judge instead of a basketball hoop.

While college basketball would rather forget the Tulane point-shaving incident, no one was ashamed of Louisville winning the national title.

College athletics also sang the praises of Bo Jackson, the Heisman Trophy winner.

Meanwhile, pro football fell under the grip of the Chicago Bears, who danced the "Super Bowl Shuffle" to a world championship. William "the Refrigerator" Perry and his 300 -plus pounds brought new excitement to football by running and catching passes for touchdowns.

Phil Masturzo
Above: It's hats off to Pete Rose as he broke Ty Cobb's mark of 4,191 career hits. Right: Hulk Hogan had America in an "airplane spin" over the sport of professional wrestling. Hogan has held the World Wrestling Federation belt for the past two years. Left: Manute Bol towers above the nation's capital.

Sharing the spotlight with Perry was controversial quarterback Jim McMahon. After being told not to wear headbands with company names on it by NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle, McMahon sported a new headband reading "Rozelle."

Meanwhile, the Bears' Super Bowl opponent New England Patriots revealed that many of their players admitted drug use after Chicago won the world championship.

Auto racing's Bill Elliot made national news, earning a $$ 1$ million bonus by winning three of the top races of the year. Elliot also finished fourth in the Associated Press Athlete of the Year balloting.

Rose's accomplishment dominated baseball, but is was joined by the infamous Pittsburgh cocaine trial which saw many pro baseball players admit they used drugs, including Keith Hernandez, Dale Berra and Dave Parker.

New commissioner Pete Ueberoth instituted fines against select players and attempted to implement mandatory, random drug-testing.

Baseball also saw the mix of old and new. Second-year hurler Dwight Gooden baffled batters with his fastball en route to the Cy Young Award. Meanwhile, 47-year old graybeard Phil Niekro registered his 300th win.

The youth movement affected tennis as 17 -year old Boris Becker became the youngest person to win Wimbledon. But aging Larry Holmes failed in his attempt to tie Rocky Marciano's record for heavyweight title defenses. Young upstart Michael Spinks ended Holmes' hopes, gaining his first heavyweight title.

Although he challenged all contenders, no one could wrestle the heavyweight belt from Hulk Hogan. Hogan, the lead man in professional wrestling, carried pro wrestling into the national spotlight as wrestling stars found their way to television, toy stores and cartoons. Vince McMahon's (no relation to Jim) World Wrestling Federation pinned down millions of fans.

While wrestling was one of the year's success stories, Jerry Faust was one of the failures. In his first college post, Faust managed the worst record of any Notre Dame coach in history. Faust was fired, then hired by the University of Akron.

There are stories sadder than Faust's. Philadelphia Flyers' goalie Pelle Lindbergh died in a tragic car crash, shocking much of the National Hockey League who mourned the loss of the 26 -year old netminder.
With its ups and downs, the mid-1980's will be remembered as a memorable era in sports history.

YEAR'S BEST QUOTES/29

${ }^{\text {Charofte }}$ Starnes

Not only has she performed with such prestigious people as Duke Ellington, Diana Washington, Sarah Vaughn, Jackie Wilson and Redd Foxx, but she has also won a national award for her involvement in crime prevention.

Who is this wife, mother, professional singer and police officer? Sgt. Charlotte Starnes, coordinator of crime prevention and community relations for Campus Security at the University.
"I can honestly say I've enjoyed every phase of my life," said Starnes.

Born and raised in Rossford, Ohio, she attended Wilberforce University and studied semi-classical music at Julliard in New York.

Starnes began to sing professionally with her father at age 16. She eventually took her musical talents into supper clubs, including the Apollo Theater in New York.

Scarlet Starnes, as she was called, traveled throughout the United States and Canada. Her musical career took her on the road for 12 years, which kept her away from her family.
"After I was married, I didn't have much of a home life. I had to make a decision between my family and my career," she said. She fulfilled her remaining contracts and decided that her home life was more important.

After ending her singing career Starnes went back to school to become a social worker. While in school she became acquainted with many police officers who told her about the need for new officers.
"At that time a woman in police work was very rare, but I accepted it as another challenge in my life and it has been one that I have really enjoyed," she said.

Starnes has been a police officer for nearly 17 years.

This year Starnes won a national award for being an outstanding police woman. Every year the National Association of Women Police picks exceptional women police officers from around the country. Starnes said she believes she won the award because of her close communications with students and her total dedication to crime prevention.

"It was so exciting to receive the award," she added. "When people let you know that what you're doing has merit, then it makes you work that much harder."

Starnes is a member of the Ohio

Crime Prevention Association and of the National and International Women's Police Associations.
In her spare time Starnes enjoys sewing. She used to write short plays and poetry and would eventually like to continue her writing. "In this kind of work you are concentrating on one thing and you don't have time to really relax enough to get back into writing, but that is something that I'm really looking forward to," she said. ## kennet Kiple

"I began to realize that blacks died of different diseases than whites did. Blacks could withstand the diseases of the tropics better than the whites and I found that interesting. If I simply asked 'Why?' and did nothing, then I wouldn't be doing anything today."

Most of his professional career, Kenneth Kiple has spent many hours researching black-related malnutrition and diseases.

Kiple's extensive research has led him to archives in such exotic places as Spain, Portugal, Barbados, Jamaica, Puerto Rico, Dominican Republic, England, Haiti, Brazil and the Bahamas. He has also visited over 30 archives and libraries in the United States in search of information.

Kiple, a University professor of history, published the results of some of his research in his first book, "Blacks in Colonial Cuba," in 1976. Since then, Kiple has been at work on a trilogy of books and has completed two entitled, "Another Dimension to the Black Diaspora - Diet, Disease, and Racism," and "The Caribbean Slave - A Biological History." The third book, which will cover the biological history of slaves in Brazil, is in the writing stages and Kiple hopes to have it completed in less than a year.
"It's beginning to look like a threeyear thing from the time one starts research to the time one is finished writing. When I am done with the last book I will have covered the black biological history of the hemisphere," he said.

Kiple, who received his undergraduate degree in history from the University of Southern Florida at Gainesville, came to the University in 1970. He now teaches History of the Caribbean, History of Latin America, History of Spain and Portugal and the History of slavery.

Kiple, who has received grants for his studies of black history, received a National Endowment for the Humanities Fellowship in 1983 for research on the third text of his series. Support also comes from the Social Society Research Council, the American Council of Learned Societies and he was awarded one of the first two grants ever given by the Faculty Research Committee.

Kiple was recently appointed editor of a major reference work to be entitled, "The Cambridge History and Geography of Human Disease." He is excited about the adventure and hopes that it will be completed by 1989 .

${ }^{\text {Aexs }}$ Nucklos

"If you don't know were you're going in life, any road will get you there," said Alexis Nucklos, Miss Bronze 1986.

Nucklos is taking the road to a gospel singing career. "I want to pursue music and that's gone pretty well for me now. I feel I'm really on my way," she said.

Moving the audience is one of the challenges of a gospel singer. Nucklos, singing "I am Love" by Jennifer Holiday, was able to move the audience, April 12, in her winning performance. Nucklos had the members of the audience on their feet and encouraged them to sing with her.
"I was not in there for basically winning. I wanted to have a good time, that's just me," said Nucklos. The Miss Bronze pagent provided a challenge for her, she said. "I wanted to prove to myself that I can do a little more than sing."

Nucklos began singing in the church when she was little. "My grandfather (a pastor) would call me up to the front of the church and have me sing. It's been like that all my life," she said.

Nucklos enjoys music and says that singing is mainly a way to express herself. "I never sing songs that I don't believe in, and I figure that I could convey that to the audience," said Nucklos.

In the past few years Nucklos has been able to meet the members of the Winans, two-time grammy winners, and their song writer.

While pursuing a gospel singing career, Nucklos, a freshman psychology major, is also pursuing a masters in psychology. "I feel that when I talk to people, I can get them to open up. I think I have a knack for that, so why not use it to help someone," she said.

Liz Allen

Nucklos said, everything she does is centered around music. When she isn't pursuing her two careers, Nucklos enjoys going to Broadway musicals. "I love to see people sing and express themselves," she said. Her favorite musical is West Side Story. Nucklos said she would not get involved in musicals but preferred to perform in concerts. "In concerts you can change what you do, the way you want," she said.

Being Miss Bronze, Nucklos hopes to change things that she believes need to be changed in hopes of making it better. "If there is something I don't like, I am going to speak up; that's just the way I am - Miss Bronze or no Miss Bronze."

McKnight

"I don't work to express my feelings, but to find out what I feel," said creative photographer and visiting instructer, Russ McKnight.

Looking at the many strikinglybeautiful prints of English beaches hanging on walls of his office, one can clearly see what he felt when shooting them.

Unlike some photographers, McKnight doesn't determine which pictures to shoot based solely on subject matter. A set of conditions, such as time period or the equipment used, make up the visual characteristics, he said. When in England two summers ago, he walked the beaches every day and photographed what he saw.
"I live in the middle of a bean field," said McKnight.

He takes walks in the country with a hand-held camera and photographs everything of interest.
"A good picture is one that surprises me," he said.

While growing up in Boston, McKnight mainly photographed birds and insects, planning to major in biology in college. However, once at the University of Maine, he became an art major. He obtained a Master of Fine Arts in creative photography from the University of Michigan and worked as a photojournalist for The Associated Press, magazines and newspapers.

McKnight sees photography art as being more self-motivated and not as a time-pressured activity. "I sometimes take up to two years to work on a project," he said.

As a visiting instructor in the University's Art Department, McKnight originally was supposed to be here for only one year. However, the University administration was pleased with his work and asked him to continue teaching. He is now in his fourth year as a University instructor.

McKnight has designed and implemented a new degree program at the University, the Bachelor of Fine Arts in Photography. His own work is displayed once a year in the faculty exhibition. He also had his own showing in McFall Center in 1983 and exhibited at the Owens-Illinois Building last March.

This year will be McKnight's last in Bowling Green.

Although he would like to return to teaching someday, he plans to devote his time to his own work. He said eventually he would like to print a book of a series of photos of unique church signs from across the country.

Until then, McKnight will be working his way to the West, stopping to photograph, as he so aptly put it,"anything curious."

"I don't really consider myself a disc jockey. I really consider myself to be dealing in communication more than anything else," said Steve (Mason) Macionsky, radio host of the 6 a.m. to 10 a.m. morning show on WRQN, a Toledo station.

Macionsky considers his show, "Mason in the Morning" to be information oriented. "I pass along so many facts in the course of a morning, that I know if I keep passing along facts that eventually somebody's going to hear something that interests them," he said.

Not only does Macionsky host the morning show, he handles the station's promotions and ticket giveaways and is one of WRQN's sale representatives.

Macionsky was not your average kid. "I was concerned with working on building a career, and I was not concerned with the things some kids are normally concerned with."

At the age of 14 he began working for a Christian radio station selling advertising for the three sportcasts that he did from his bedroom each afternoon. After three years at that radio station, Macionsky worked at Toledo 11 and WFOB-AM,FM (Bowling Green, Fostoria station) briefly before moving on to WRQN.

Besides all of his responsibilities at WRQN and being a full time student, Macionsky, a junior radio-televisionfilm major, is also the president of the Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity. He said he chose Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity because "there were a lot of different people with a lot of different interests."
"Being the president of this fraternity has been one of the toughest, eyeopening, decision making experiences I've had," he said.

Macionsky is also involved in the Interfraternity Council, Honor Student Association and Undergraduate Alumni Association.

Phil Masturzo
When Macionsky takes time out for himself, he enjoys going to the movies. Two of his all-time favorite movies are The Big Chill and Ordinary People. Macionsky also enjoys writing fiction when he has the chance.

His plan of action for the future includes going to California and becoming a radio disc jockey in Los Angeles. Macionsky would like to attend graduate school in Southern California and pursue the area of film. Hosting a television talk show and film directing are two areas in which he is interested.

Macionsky says that to get work in the competitive field of radio broadcasting "you have to have so much confidence in yourself that no matter what anybody says, you won't quit." Story by Julieanne Bell

${ }^{\text {Mhe }}$ McGreevey

"It's a neat feeling to be able to be president. Yet, I'm on the same level as the students and I represent them in all facets," said Michael McGreevey, president of Undergraduate Student Government.

McGreevey devotes over 25 hours a week to his USG post. He feels the position as president has been a great learning experience. "It has helped to build my self confidence," he said. "It has also helped to define some of my skills such as working with and relating to people. I've also learned leadership roles and conflict management," he said.

McGreevey has met Gov. Richard Celeste and several state senators through his USG involvement.

Besides USG, McGreevey has also been a member of the Delta Tau Delta Fraternity for four years. He has been involved in the University Activities Organization, American Marketing Association and has helped with orientation and preregistration. McGreevey was also a resident adviser in Kohl Hall for two years.
"It was one of the neatest experiences that I've had to actually relate to people in their day to day lives," he said of his time spent as an RA.

McGreevey's other achievements include being named to a greek honorary, The Honor of Omega, being inducted into the Who's Who of American College Students and speaking at the 75th Anniversary Convocation.

McGreevey had to learn to budget his time for his various activities. "I think what keeps me sane and what keeps everything in perspective is the people around me." he said. "They make the experiences of being in Undergraduate Student Government and in a fraternity something that's worth it. Something that's not a job or responsibility, but that's fun and means a lot to me."

In his spare time McGreevey plays raquetball, skis and loves to travel.

Vince Walter

McGreevey said everyone should "make the most of the college experience, get involved in activities that interest you and get to know lots of people."
"By getting to know other people, you'll understand yourself better," he said.

McGreevey, a senior Interpersonal and Public Communications major, hopes to get a job in public relations, management or the personnel and development field after graduation.
McGreevey believes college has been a great experience that has helped him to grow closer to his family. His parents, his younger brother and two sisters have been very supportive, he said.
"I hope to look back and know that I made myself known at Bowling Green and hopefully I had an effect on the people around me," he said. Story by Lisa Lattimore

${ }^{\text {larn }}$ Weiss

It takes a special type of person to hold the positions of assistant vice president, director, advisor, chairman, father and husband simultaneously. Larry Weiss manages these responsibilities with an admirable amount of patience and enthusiasm. His official position at the University is director of Alumni Affairs and assistant vice president for University Relations; however, he also contributes his time and energy to a number of additional programs and events.
"I always thought I could do my job more effectively, and make my job more enjoyable to me, but also be of assistance to the University by being involved in things other than just my job," Weiss said.

Weiss is the advisor to the secret spirit group on campus, Sic Sic. In its 40th year, Sic Sic, a group of six males students who dress in special outfits, paint signs and stir up spirit for campus events.

In addition, Weiss supervises "Finals Week Survival Kits," and is the coordinator of the "Senior Challenge" class gift program. Weiss is also supervisor to the University Hosts and Hostesses organization. This group of 30 students host various entertainment and social events on campus.

Weiss is chair of the University's 75th Anniversary Committee. When asked to head this committee, Weiss responded, "I will, and the reason I will is because there are so many great people, a lot of committed people and people who really want to make this thing go."
Weiss aids in selecting and presenting Alumni Affairs' four most distinctive honors. Those awards include: the Distinguished Alumnus Award, presented for service to the University; the Alumni Community Award, presented for volunteer activities within the community; and the Honorary Alumnus Award, presented to a non-graduate for contributions to the University. Weiss also presents the Master Teacher Award. The honor is given to a professor whose objective is to "recognize, honor, and encourage excellence in the classroom,"said Weiss.

Weiss said that he believes that one of his most important duties is organinzing alumni chapters around the country to keep in contact with University graduates. Social functions and fundraising are some of the activities that result from this communication.

Weiss, a University alumnus himself, is in his 13th year as a University employee. Weiss graduated with a Bachelor of Science degree in Journalism, specializing in public relations. Weiss believes that his degree along with many speech courses have well prepared him for his position.
"When you're in alumni work, you're in public relations work. I think the two main qualifications for this job would be writing ability and speaking ability," Weiss said.

Outside of work, Weiss enjoys playing raquetball and basketball at the Student Recreation Center. He also belongs to three summer baseball leagues.

Why does Weiss get involved in so many things at the University? The answer comes easily to Weiss. "I enjoy being involved and I enjoy being around the students."

Evans

Sara Evans, junior human resource management major from Van Wert, Ohio, said self-confidence and friendship are two of her reasons for entering the Miss BGSU Scholarship Pageant. That self-confidence and a lot of self-discipline proved to be strong points as Evans was crowned Miss BGSU 1986 on Feb. 15.

This was the second time around for Evans. She competed in the pageant last year, winning the non-finalist talent award for singing. This year, aside from winning the title, Evans also received the preliminary poise and appearance award; the preliminary evening gown award; and the preliminary talent award by dazzling the crowd with "Home," a musical selection from "The Wiz."
"I was so excited when I heard my name called. My heart was beating so fast and I couldn't stop crying," Evans said. "I was so relieved that it was all over and that my hard work had finally paid off."

As winner of the pageant, Evans received a $$ 300$ scholarship, a crown, a silver platter and a bouquet of roses. "Last year I entered the pageant strickly for fun,"she said. "I didn't realize just how full-scale a production it is and all the work it entailed."

Evans entered the pageant this year with more self-confidence and a specific goal. "When I competed last year, I didn't make the top 10 finalists. My goal this year was to make it to the top 10," Evans said. "After I won the preliminary talent awards and was named to the top 10 , my expectations shot up a bit, but I didn't want to assume anything. I just wanted to do my best for the moment."

Although Evans has never had any formal voice lessons, singing is not new to her. She has performed in the "Country Gold Show" at Cedar Point and toured the country last summer with the University A Cappella Choir on its Intercontinental Summer Tour.

Vince Walter
Evans loves meeting people and said that since the contestants spent a lot of time together it was very easy to form friendships. "The pageant was a very good experience as far as meeting many types of people," she said. "I loved it."

Evans believes she has benefited from participating in the pageant. "I got so much out of it," she said. "It's incredible the amount of selfconfidence you gain. This has been the neatest thing I've ever done and winning was the greatest feeling I've ever had," she said, "Once you've been in a pageant and then win one, it's a non-duplicable experience."

Evans, who will be competing in the Miss Ohio pageant in June, admits that she is a bit nervous for the contest.
"I am nervous for the competition, but once again I am not going to assume anything. I am just going to do my very best. Because no matter what happens, the sun will come up and tomorrow will be a brighter day." Story by Jenny Davis

${ }^{\text {rammon }}$ Tucker

Raymond Tucker, chair of the Interpersonal/Public Communications department, tries to leave his personal mark and a positive impression on the students in his assertiveness class.

Tucker said of IPCO 406 "the best of every positive event in my life is in this course. No frills, no testimonials, no visual aids, no overheads - just R. K. Tucker talking."

Tucker seems to have made his mark. As evidence of this, Tucker has seen the enrollment for his class skyrocket from 20 students, when the class was first offered, to over 230 students vying for seats today.
Tucker's educational background is impressive. He completed his undergraduate work at the University of Denver, majoring in communications and social psychology. Tucker then attended Northwestern University where he received both his master's and doctorate degree. He completed his advanced, post-doctoral study at Harvard University.

Before coming to the University in 1968, Tucker taught at Western Illinois University for two years, where he won the Master Teacher Award.

Tucker, a dynamic and energetic speaker, is a communications consultant, a business consultant, a conference director and a writer on communication and organizational behavior. He leads seminars on topics such as assertiveness, difficult people, risk-taking, relationships and self-esteem. Tucker also delivers key note addresses and motivational speeches throughout the United States and the world. Outside of the University, Tucker estimates that 350,000 people have heard him speak. His seminars are usually directed toward management personnel, and he has spoken to such industries as U.S. Steel, United Airlines and Bell Telephone.

Tucker made the decision to come to Bowling Green because of its fine reputation. "Bowling Green is as great as any university anywhere. I had a chance to write my own ticket here and I took it. And IPCO is a fantastic field with a great staff. They have a great level of competency. It's great to be the chairman."

Tucker has received many awards during his professional career, including the first Master Teacher Award presented by the University in 1981. He also received an award from Continuing Education for "Outstanding Teaching in Presentations." Aside from this, Tucker made his television debut on the "CBS Evening News" earlier this year in a segment dealing with the rights of older americans. He is currently involved in a television media blitz promoting the University.
"It's amazing what you can get if you only ask for it," he said.
He possesses a positive attitude toward life and believes the students here do also. "I love the students at Bowling Green. If you are positive, they are positive in their response. I like them."

And what does Tucker wish to be doing 10 years from now?
"Well, if they ask me to be director of the world. . ."

${ }^{c a n}$ Strawman

You see it on cups, napkins, flowers and tee shirts. It's the logo for the University's 75th Anniversary and Carla Strawman designed it.

Strawman, a senior graphic design major from Fostoria, has received quite a bit of attention this year as this popular logo has become the symbol of the University celebration.

It all began last year when Strawman read about the logo contest in the BG News and became interested. She kept the clipping and almost waited too long to enter. Not expecting to win, she entered her first idea among the other 52 entries and kept her fingers crossed. Her main goal was to design a logo that was simple and easy to read, she said.

The glory that came with winning and of course the $$ 250$ prize money has made the experience memorable for Strawman. "Last year there wasn't a big deal made of it," Strawman said. "Only those directly involved knew much about it." She had no idea that anything big would come of it.

Needless to say this year, Strawman was pleasantly surprised by how often the logo has been used. The logo was used on the cover of the University phone book, which was thrilling for Strawman.
"I was one of the people in the 75 ," she said. "I missed two classes, but I got to be in it."

Over the year Strawman has gained a collection of most of the items displaying her logo. She said that winning the contest "is the best thing that has happened . . . so far" in her college career.

Along with the publicity has come career help. Strawman said, "Winning has made me feel more self-confident about art. I've done something that's gotten published,"

Liz Allen

Strawman sees the logo as a strong supplement to her portfolio. After graduating, she would like to work for an advertising firm in Ohio. "My long term goal is to work with a company like Hallmark as a designer,", Strawman said.
"No matter what comes of my career, I will never forget my first printed artwork, the logo."

An Environment for Excellence

It was clearly an event. Long before the 75th Anniversary Convocation began, people milled around Anderson Arena busily preparing their share of the presentation. Members of the Men's and Women's Chorus, the A Cappella Choir and the Collegiate Chorale mixed together to rehearse their combined salute to the University: Beethoven's "Hallelujah." Overhead, part of the video production team set up a television news desk on the second level of the arena. Meanwhile, University hosts and hostesses sorted through piles of silver bound programs as members of the University Band set up for their prelude. It was the official kick-off of a yearlong birthday party and every part of the University seemed to be involved.

The faculty and officers of the University set a formal tone as they processed in caps and gowns. The University showed off its "crown jewels" from the new orchestral fanfare in its honor to the official University mace.

Among the honored guests was State

Representative Robert Brown, who presented a joint General Assembly resolution honoring the anniversary to University President Paul Olscamp. In addition to Brown, several other speakers including Bruce Bellard, mayor of Bowling Green, and William T. Jerome, a former University president, who remarked on the anniversary and its theme "An Environment for Excellence."

The speakers reviewed the University's history, yet called for an eye to the future.
"The more you talk about the past, the more you live in it," said Jerome. "This is not a time to live in the past."

Charles Perry, 1959 alumnus and the keynote speaker, also stressed looking toward the future of the University, but said he believes that much can be gained by looking at the past.
"You can't look to the future without an appreciation for the past," said Perry. "The people of BGSU can help set that future agenda."

Though the University passed a milestone, the celebrants did not dwell too long on its past accomplishments. Each called for continued growth through and for the people of the University. As Jerome said, "This University has a green thumb for growing people." Story by Christine Turner

Remember

In 1910, the state legislature passed the Lowry Bill which authorized the building of Bowling Green Normal College. BGNC was one of two teacher's colleges that the bill authorized; the other was Kent State University.

People in northern Ohio had long argued as to the need for teacher's colleges in this region. At that time the other three state teacher's colleges were in the middle or southern portion of the state, at Ohio State, Miami and Ohio University.

The site chosen for the normal school was where City Park was located. The site was accepted by the legislative search commission in November of that year, but it wasn't until 1912 that the first college president, Homer Williams, was hired.

When?

Williams had been the superintendent of Sandusky City Schools.

The first classes were held in the fall of 1914 and, because there were no buildings completed, the first classes met in the BG Armory. The college's library was located in the basement of the Methodist Church that was adjacent to the Armory. There were 10 original faculty members.

The first building completed was the women's dormitory which was quickly christened Williams Hall by its residents in honor of the president. From its beginning until 1939 Bowling Green experienced a slow gradual growth in faculty and student population and the number of campus buildings. These years of gradual growth coincided with the years of William's presidency

During these 29 years the number of faculty rose from 10 to 85 , the number of students increased from 304 to 1,600 and the number of campus buildings went from 4 to 15 .

Students were taught the skills and techniques of managing dairy cows in the basement of Moseley Hall in 1920.

Above: The original entrance to the University, as seen in 1936, led off Thurstin Avenue where the Administration Building stands today. The oval drive was removed during the 1958-59 school year.

During the years of William's presidency, academic societies and organizations began at the college, as well as top-flight athletic teams.

The college's first intercollegiate athletic team was the men's basketball team of 1916. This sport's team was followed by baseball being established in 1918 and football in 1919 1919 is also the year the college became affiliated with its first athletic conference, the Northwestern Ohio Intercollegiate Athletic Association, which our athletic director, Fred Beyerman, helped found and became its first president.

More importantly, in 1929 Bowling Green expanded its curriculum and went from a two-year to a four-year college. This occurred when the state legislature authorized a name change to Bowling Green State College and the Board of Trustees approved the creation of the College of Liberal Arts; the original college became the College of Education.

Six years later, in 1935, the legislature allowed the college to become Bowling Green State University and authorized the creation of a College of Business and a limited master's program.

President Williams was asked to step down by the Board of Trustees in 1937 after being president for 25 years and Roy Offenhauer became president. Offenhauer was only president 16 months when he died in an automobile accident. Upon his death, Williams was again asked to be president until a replacement could be found. The third University president was Frank Prout, a former president of the Board of Trustees. He assumed office in 1939.

Prout presided over the University through the 1940 s. Because of World War II, the student population fluctuated greatly during the decade. Although population was at an alltime high in 1941, that population was cut in half and reached a level of 848 in 1943, which was the lowest it had been since the mid-1920s. There were only 63 men attending school.

Homer B. Williams 1912-1937, 1938-1939

However, during the war, the placement of the Navy's V-5 Program brought more men to the University. The program offered instruction to Navy men in the classroom and flight instruction to recruits at the University's airport, now the Wood County Airport, which was acquired for the purpose of instruction.

Following the war, enrollment took off. In 1946 the male population increased from 344 to 2,313 . To meet the housing shortage, some nearby buildings and houses were purchased. This was not enough however, and 50 trailers and many barracks were either built or brought in from Camp Perry to serve as temporary residences and classrooms. Enrollment peaked at 4,648 in 1949.

The increase in enrollment, however, brought the need for an increase in staff. Coupled together, this meant that the new staff was not as qualified after the war as before. In 1914, none of the staff held doctorates; in 1941, 65 percent held doctorates; but by 1951, only 21 percent of the staff held doctorates. This was to change under the fourth president of the University, Ralph McDonald, who was chosen when McDonald's policy was to fire those professors who didn't have or weren't willing to get a doctorate. Instructors who left were replaced almost entirely by teachers with doctoral degrees. By 1961, McDonald's final year, 60 percent of the faculty held doctorates.

In 1951, enrollment had leveled off to about 4,000 students. By 1961, this figure had reached about 7,000 Of this figure, 850 attended four branch campuses (in Fremont, Fostoria, Bryan and Sandusky) and 13 extension centers that McDonald set up.
To make room for the new students, more campus buildings were built. Between 1955 (the year of McDonald's first building addition) and 1963 (the year the final building McDonald secured funds for was completed), 13 buildings were added at a cost of $$ 22$ million. Only $$ 6.5$ million of this figure came from state tax funds, with the remaining money supplied by self-liquidating revenue bonds sold on the open market.
During McDonald's tenure, student housing problems were brought under control with the addition of six dormitories.

With success and growth came dissension. Growing out of mild student protest were major faculty protests over what they perceived to be heavy-handed tactics by McDonald. Despite raising faculty salaries from the lowest to the highest for state institutions of higher learning between 1951 and 1961, McDonald resigned under fire in the latter year

Ralph Harshman became president, retiring two years later. The Harshman administration served as a healing period for the University, but hard feelings were still present for many years.

In 1963, William T. Jerome be. came fifth president of the University. During his first two years, the coaching careers of two of the finest Falcon coaches, Harold Anderson and Doyt Perry, came to an end.

Anderson became the athletic director and basketball coach in 1942. During the next 21 years, Anderson led six teams to the NIT tournament and three to the NCAA tournament. He also developed eight all-Americans before he stepped down as basketball coach in 1963. In 1985 he was inducted into the Basketball Hall of Fame in Springfield, Mass.

Perry replaced Anderson in 1965 as the University's athletic director, stepping down as football coach.

Anderson had hired Perry to coach football in 1955. During the next 10 years, Perry compiled the best coaching record in University history and also had the the most wins among his football-coaching contemporaries.

In 1959, Perry's team won the college division national championship with a 9.0 season. It remains the only undefeated and untied University football team, although its regular season record was bettered by this year's team and its 11-0 record.
The rioting at the beginning of the 1960s was not an isolated incident during that decade. Another dispute is attributable to the general restlessness caused by the Vietnam War and involved a disruption of the ROTC Review in 1968. Tensions remained high for more than a year.

In May 1970, the Kent State shootings occurred but, because of Jerome, faculty and students, disruptive disturbances were averted Instead, more than 7,000 students and townspeople marched in a candlelight vigil. The University is one of few state institutions where violence did not occur.

During the 1960s there were 12 buildings built during the greatest single period of growth at the University. While about 7,000 students were attending the University in 1961, by 1971, during the first year of Hollis Moore's administration, enrollment had peaked at 15,000 . This figure became the University's federally mandated enrollment limit.

One other change in the 1960s was the creation of the doctoral program and an increasing number of graduate students.

In the 1970s two more colleges were created - Musical Arts and Health and Community Services - and the Student Recreation Center and the Moore Musical Arts buildings were built.

Also instituted in the 1970s was a sex-blind admissions policy, by which the University admitted the first suitable persons applying for admission . most turned out to be women.

Since Paul Olscamp became the University's eighth president in 1982 , perhaps the University's greatest sporting accomplishment has been achieved, as the hockey team won the University's first Division 1 national championship in 1984.

Olscamp's major academic accomplishment has been the reconfiguration of the University that occured in July 1985.

With that, the College of Technology was created from the School of Technology; and a School of Mass Communication, Department of Theater and Department of Interpersonal/Public Communications were created.

A Symbol of Modermization BGSU Seals

Students walking across campus between the Administration Building and University Hall pass a circular pedestal, often unaware of the fact that what they have just passed is a part of University history.

On the top of the cement pedestal is a facsimile of the official University seal.

The original seal was adopted in 1929 when the University was called Bowling Green Normal College. And although the seal has undergone four minor changes in the 75 years of the University, the basic design and concept of the original seal still remain.

The original seal was designed by Leon Winslow of the Industrial Arts Department with the state seal of Ohio in mind.

In a letter dated Dec. 1, 1922, Winslow wrote, "Today, most manufacturers believe that it pays to have a trademark. Likewise institutions of learning have their marks or emblems by which they are known. These marks of individuality in use by colleges and universities though insignificant in one sense, are yet vital to the fostering of team play and of college spirit."

Like the state seal, the center of the University seal contains a shield divided into four sections. In the upper half of the shield, hills and a river are located in the left corner, and the rising sun is located in the right. In both sections of the lower half, there is a sheaf of wheat. "Bowling Green Normal College, $1910^{\prime \prime}$ is inscribed around the shield and three buckeyes are situated around the year.

A motor and book, attached to the top of the seal, symbolize "industry, progress and the concrete application of the knowledge of learning." The open book depicts the knowledge of learning, science, literature and agriculture. The sheaves of wheat were intended to symbolize agriculture and the sun signifies truth and power. The hills suggest there is "something beyond towards which to strive."

On the second seal, the motor and book were removed and the inscription was changed to "Bowling Green State University, 1910." The book and motor were removed because they were unrecognizable when the size of the seal was reduced for use on items such as letterheads and envelopes. The sheaf of wheat in the bottom left of the shield was replaced with arrows, symbolizing the habitation of Ohio by Indians. The buckeyes remained on the left and right of the year, 1910.

The third seal had a decorative border added around the inscription and the buckeyes were removed from the shield. The hills and sun in the shield were changed in design and simplified.

The elements in shield of the fourth version of the seal are more detailed. The set of buckeyes to the left of the year, 1910, was removed and two carnations were put in its place. Another buckeye was added to the right side of the year. The plain border of the previous seal was also replaced by a wavy line.

Today, the University often uses a logo designed by Jerry Fisher, a former publications director of the University, in place of the seal. The logo is a highly-modernized version of the orignal seal in which the inscription, buckeyes and carnation around the shield are removed. The mountain, sun and sheaths of wheat are draw with tubular, geometric lines and figures.

Story by William Rockwood

It all began as a means of covering bodies. First for protection, then religious symbolization and finally for decoration and establishment of social status. Fashion influences, and is influenced by people, history and events.
Through centuries of change, fashion transformed from long to short, from wide to narrow and back again. It was frivolous, serious and ridiculous. Many times it reflected the social and political climate of the period. Often enough we find a "new look" and at the same time resort back to an old style with an added twist to express modern attitudes.

The celebration of the University's 75 th anniversary brings back memories for its alumni, current students and even some faculty. Fashion is part of that memory. In the eight decades since 1910, University styles followed those of a nation beginning a new century.

America in the year 1900 was confident and optimistic. Style was copied from French designers and the Far East. Females contorted their bodies into an Sshaped figure, a Classical Gibson Girl look with narrow hobble skirts and flaring tunics over top. During wartime in 1914, tight skirts were abandoned for short skirts and understated clothes. Decoration was left to only collars and cuffs for dresses and suits. Men still relied on formal suits of the past with slight changes in widths of lapels and lengths of suit coats.

The end of World War I brought about the "Roaring Twenties." Prohibition couldn't stop the carnival atmosphere in which dancing and flirting were a favorite pastime. Women dared to roll down the stockings and hike up the dresses. High fashion was at its best, with the young flapper in bobbed hair, dark lipstick and gaudy, fringed jewelry and apparel. The silhouette was boyish, with the waist moved down to the hips, and the bustline non-existent. College boys and men flocked to the scene of a flapper in less formal wear. Suits were mismatched and covered with raccoon coats, while trousers became Oxford bags. The style reached its peak in 1926 and continued until the market crash in 1929.

The Depression marked the beginning of a more serious decade especially on college campuses. In the 1930s the "girl-next-door" look was more appealing than the flapper, and her hand-medown clothes were all the rage. Skirt items went down again. Tailored suits and classic shirtwaist dresses dominated daywear, while the evening was filled with bias cut, backless dresses that were draped like a second skin. Boxy short jackets with wider lapels were popular for men, while sportswear also made an appearance for both sexes.

The first nylons in 1940 spoiled the women until the beginning of World War II when fashion again was restricted. Suits were updated with shoulder pads . a favorite Hollywood look. The feminine figure was back with the skirt and sweater look for all ages. Men dressed in narrow trousers and buttoned their jackets a little higher. Surprisingly, blue jeans first became a trend in the 1940s. The 1950s and the end of World War II brought about conservative, but financially secure times. Boys were boys, and girls were girls. Fashion emphasized the full feminine figure with small waists and tight strapless bodices. Crinolines and petticoats added flare to longer skirts, ponytails, pearls and princes in loafers. Leather jackets were "in" and created an image of the younger generation.

The psychedelic 60 s were an active time of protest, experiment and youth. Hippies found their own style of dress, while high fashion promoted micro skirts, patterned stockings and exotic knits. Pants and pant suits were popular for women. Midi skirts and culottes made appearances later in the decade.

Right: Coke was it in the 50 s as teens stood around the juke box listening to tunes and sipping on soda.

Men's clothing even began to relax, just in time for the 1970s. Polyester and perma-press clothes made life easier. The 70 s sported styles that started among the poor and was copied by the rich. Gypsy gowns, granny dresses, hiphuggers and hot pants were only the beginning. The ultraconservative businessmen remained in gray flannel and pinstripes, but others enjoyed a new.
found freedom of color and inventiveness. Leisure suits, platform shoes and flared pants are examples of the casual 70 s decade.

It is difficult to list all the fashions of the past 80 years, but the the 1980 s can set a good example. From early 80 s East Coast preppy, to the West Coast beach wear, we have given way to an "anything goes" attitude of 1986. Students parade across campus in the vintage styles of our grandparents while others exhibit the trendy floral patterns of everything from jeans to skirts to shoes. Knits are popular in body-conscious figures, and layering seems to have found its place in history. No matter what the look is, we can almost guarantee it will be a reflection of personalities, the attitudes, people and events of the era. Story by Carrie Covington

Eva Marie Saint

"Before coming to college, I always felt in the shadow of my older sister. She was so so much more dynamic than myself, who was always considered quite shy."
That is what Eva Marie Saint, motion picture star and 1946 graduate of the University, said when she was asked to describe what she was like before coming to college.

Saint was brought up in Albany, New York. It was there, when Saint was very young, that she discovered the excitment of the stage. When she finally decided she was ready for her first performance she auditioned for the senior play. Saint said she still clearly remembers the director's response to her audition. "The woman looked me right in the face and told me I had absolutely no acting talent. She did however predict a very successful future for my older sister, Adeline," Saint said.
Saint came to the University with intentions of becoming a teacher. "I was shy and thought being a teacher was safe and more accepted than being an actress," she said.
But on a dare from a friend, Saint tried out for a role in the campus play. Saint said, "Performing in the play rekindled my interest and selfconfidence in theater. It was after that, that I decided to change my major to speech and pursue a career in theater."

Since leaving college, Saint has had an outstanding acting career that has spanned nearly 40 years. She won an Oscar for best supporting actress in her 1954 film debut opposite Marlon Brando in "On the Waterfront."

The University was so proud of Saint's accomplishments that they awarded her the first Distinguished Alumni Award in June, 1960.
Today, Saint resides in Los Angeles with her husband of nearly 35 years, actor and director, Jeffrey Hayden. Saint is still very active and continues to perform in various television and movie productions.

Saint established an endowed scholarship at the University that she hopes will encourage young actors and actresses to pursue their dreams of a theatrical career. Saint said, "I received so much tender loving care from the University, I am just happy that I can give it something in return." The Eva Marie Saint Scholarship, as it is called, is intended to attract students to the University's theater program.

In looking back on her experience of going to a small, Mid-western university so far away from her home, Saint said, "The University was the perfect place for me, giving me the opportunity to blossom and develop my talent. I hope others have the same experience here too."

Virginia Platt

She celebrated with the students in the 1950 s , marched with them in the 1960s and helped them rebuild in the 1970s. Virginia Platt, Board of Trustees member and former professor of history, has seen the University students go through many changes and has been with them the whole way.

Platt came to the University with her husband, Glover, in 1946, both as professors of history. And since then, said Platt, the students have changed.
"Back in the 1940s, the students were very determined to have a better life than their parents who had to survive the depression," she said. These students, Platt said, wanted to get the most from their education. "Many of the students were G.I.s who were both sophisticated and traumatized from the war," said Platt.

But these days, Platt speculated, things have changed because they had to keep up with the times. "There has never been one certain type of students. They change every year, but that does not mean they are better or worse, just different," she said.
Platt believes that things have changed, especially for the women pursuing an education. "For women now there is a lot of uncertainty that there wasn't 10 years ago," she said. "Unlike when I went to college, women must look in terms of their own futures, they no longer can depend on any one person to support them.'

Since her appointment to the Board of Trustees in 1982, Platt has looked upon her position as an honor and as an opportunity to get closer to the University students again since her retirement in 1975. "I am able to give the University a lot more time and support. I enjoy watching them grow and develop their own ideas and styles," she said.

Although Platt keeps very busy with the board, she always makes time for the things she enjoys the most, such as gardening and bird watching. But her favorite pastime is traveling, and Platt encourages all students to travel and to develop to their potential before settling down.
"Traveling offers wonderful opportunities for growth and maturity, not to mention it's fun," she said.

Platt continues to stand by the students, "I have so much respect for students who use their physical vitality to prepare themselves for personal growth and knowledge."

Nick Mileti

Who would have thought that Nick Mileti, class of '53 and a pre-law graduate from the Univeristy, would eventually own a television and film producing business - Mileti Enterprises - in California?

It may sound surprising to some, but actually, it's not much of a surprise to the people who knew this determined and highly motivated man.

Reflecting on his years at the University, Mileti said, "The four greatest years of my life were spent at Bowling Green. I was grateful to get into the University. And further, the people involved were wonderful - especially the professors and administrators."

It was for these reasons that Mileti has become so devoted to the University.

Mileti has contributed immensely to aid in the progress, growth and development of this institution and has received many awards of recognition. The honors include: the Alumni Community Award (1968), the Distinguished Alumnus Award (1971), an Honorary Doctorate in 1975 and the Brith Emeth "Sportsman of the Year" Award.

Upon graduating from the University, Mileti has enhanced our "environment for excellence." The Mileti Alumni Center is credited to his name. Presently, Mileti is a member of the University Board of Trustees and remains actively involved with the Alumni Center.

Mileti said being appointed to a nine-yearm term on the University Board of Trustees was "the greatest honor" in his life.

As an alumnus, he was a prominent member of the Alumni Board of Trustees from $1960-64$ and joined the President Club in 1968 with a cash gift, while designating a variety of gifts to the Falcon Club, Athletic Department and Alumni Association.

Born in Cleveland, Mileti has given the University over three acres of land near downtown Cleveland and the scoreboard from the old Cleveland Arena.

Mileti's employment history is unique. After all, not many people acquire an NBA franchise (which later evolved in to the Cleveland Cavaliers), become the owner of the Cleveland Indians and acquire a World Hockey Association franchise.

In 1979, Mileti was plagued by health problems and decided to head west to California for warmer weather and, of course, the motion picture business. The mild climate has helped Mileti to recover from three hip replacements operations.
"People make the difference - that's the bottom line of Bowling Green."

Mileti is a talented, enthusiastic individual who has clearly joined the ranks of the people who have made a difference at the University.

Mickey Cocfirane

Mickey Cochrane has a love for sports deeper than imaginable, and is still, as a retiree, making magniffcent contributions to the University.

As the head coach for both the lacrosse and soccer teams, Cochrane had very successful seasons. His teams played across the country and, at one time, were ranked sixth in the nation.

Cochrane said it is because of what he calls "luck" that Cochrane Field was named after him. "Yeah, it's been a great career, but I think it's just because l've always been in the right place at the right time," he said.

Cochrane came to the University in 1964. He was asked by Sam Cooper to join forces with the athletes in Bowling Green to coach men's soccer in the fall and men's lacrosse in the spring. He said, "One year I was even asked to fill in and coach the women's lacrosse team, which I really enjoyed."

Cochrane had come from John Hopkins University where he had coached soccer for 11 years, but he said, "There were no classroom physical education programs, the kids only took gym classes."

After 11 years of coaching lacrosse and 14 years of soccer at the University, Cochrane decided to return to the classrooms and teach.

In 1985, Cochrane decided to take the early retirement package offered by the University. "It's a great deal for those eligible," he said.

The package allows Cochrane to teach one semester a year for the next five years. "It's a great way to taper people out of their jobs," he said.

Recently, Cochrane took on an archival project with fellow retiree, Don Cunningham. Together, they have begun to organize the athletic archives. "The athletic archives are a collection of athletic paraphernalia located in Memorial Hall," he said. Cochrane says that the project has been done in conjunction with the University archives and with the help of Ann Bowers. "It has been fun getting the museum set up. Many of the artifacts have been around for a long time but never organized," he said.

Some of the artifacts found date back to 1919 and include a pair of football pants from the the original football team, playing cards from the 1940 s and sport programs from the 1930s. Plans are already being made to expand the museum to accommodate all the items Cochrane and Cunningham have accumulated.

Cochrane believes his entire life has been interrelated. His love for sports extends back to high school when he participated in football, track, cheerleading, swimming and where he met Sam Cooper. At Oberlin College, Cochrane received his undergraduate degree in physical education and then returned home and attended the University of Maryland to get his master's degree in physical education. Cochrane said, "It was there where I received my graduate assistantship and discovered how much I enjoyed teaching."

His responsibilities as the historian to the National Soccer Association and as a member of the Athletic Hall of Fame Selection Committee are evidence of his continuing love for sports.

Cochrane said, "I've always had an interest in the history of sports and, lucky for me, I was in the right place at the right time for this historian deal."

> Two million fruit flies are bred and maintained in Woodruff's genetic zoo

Fruit Fly

When the doors of the Life Sciences Building are closed and locked for the night, there are still over two million inhabitants on the fourth floor.

The Mid-America Drosophila Stock Center is housed on the floor and, albeit they are small, there are millions of Drosophila melanogaster common fruit flies - eating and mating in thousands of glass vials on shelves in the center.
"The stock center is kind of like the zoo. We're just the caretakers," said Ron Woodruff, director of the center and professor of biology.

Wooodruff's genetic zoo, one of only two, houses the largest collection of Drosophila melanogaster and is the largest supplier of fruit flies for research in the world.

The other melanogaster stock center, a much smaller center, is at the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena.

Funded by the National Science Foundation, the Mid-America Drosophila Stock Center sends fruit flies free-of-charge to researchers who

"I get requests for 5,000 stocks a year from all over the world," Woodruff said. "We ship them out as adults - put them in a styrofoam box with cotton and stick 'em in the mail."

Woodruff said fruit flies are used for genetic research and teaching purposes because they are higher organisms with large chromosomes and are relatively small. They are also rapid breeders with a life cycle of 10 to 12 days, which means researchers can examine two or three generations in one month.

"One of the misconceptions is people think fruit flies were used in ancient, turn-of-the-century research, and that's not true. They're widely used today," Woodruff said.
"There's been work on the fruit fly since the early 1900s and we probably know more about it than any other higher organism," he said.

The Mid-America Drosophila Stock Center carries over 4,000 stocks of Drosophila melanogaster species. In addition, the National Drosophila Species Resource Center, on the first floor of the building, is directed by Jong Sik Yoon and carries over 400 species of fruit flies. The resource center is the only one in the world.
"A stock is a type, a variant," said Woodruff. "A stock is a constant turnover of adults and progeny."
"In humans, blue eyes and brown eyes make up stocks," he said.

Another misconception people have is that the common fruit fly is harmful to crops. Woodruff said this is usually because they confuse Drosophila melanogaster with the Mediterranean Fruit Fly, a crop-destructive fly that has gained media attention in past years.
"They (Drosophila melanogaster) aren't really eating the fruit. In nature, they eat the bacteria and yeast on rotting fruit," he said.

In the stock center, the flies are constantly fed a mixture of "goop" that resembles chocolate chip cookie dough. Not quite a cookie-lover's dream, the goop is made of cornmeal, molasses, agar and brewer's yeast. Agar is a food product made from seaweed.

Woodruff said the majority of the flies would not survive if they were released in Bowling Green because they are fed and sheltered from the elements; they lead a relatively easy life in the stock center.

The flies lead an easy life, that is, until a lab technician anesthetizes them with ether, transfers them to a glass vial and sends them out to researchers who study the insects.

Of course, with millions of flies in the MidAmerica Drosophila Stock Center, Woodruff takes advantage of the close proximity of the

In the center, Woodruff has injected the flies with chemicals and looked for mutations in the genes. He has also studied the DNA in the chromosomes of Drosophila for jumping genes. DNA, deoxyribonucleic acid, is an essential component of all living matter and the basic chromosomal material transmitting the hereditary pattern.
"There are large pieces of DNA that move around from one location to another in chromosomes," Woodruff said. "We study the mechanisms of movement in Drosophila - it's frequency and distribution - and have experimented to modify the rate of movement. We also ask questions about how other genes and conditions modify this rate of movement."

Woodruff said he enjoys the research he does with Drosophila melanogaster.
"The flies get loose a lot of the time. If you look around the window, you'll see 1,000 dead bodies," he said. "That's one of the nice things about working with flies - nobody cares that you smash and squash them."

Woodruff, who is in his eighth year at the University, also said that having complete control over the research makes his job more enjoyable.

"I think that the interesting thing about research is . . . that you have complete control over what you're doing. The ideas that you work on are your own from the very beginning to the very end. It's all your's. In a lot of jobs that's not true," he said.
"We don't pretend to make too much of what we're doing," Woodruff said. "By itself, it isn't that important. But maybe over a large amount of small lab-done research, it does become important. I don't know."

One right after another they came in green fatigues, combat boots, amd short hair, rappelling down an inside wall of Memorial Hall. Those who had completed the task cheered on each new person to the rope. Occasionally, figures in green fatigues, combat boots, and ponytails came down the rope, but they were given no extra help or no less encouragement. The only female who didn't successfully complete the excercise stood by on crutches stating to anyone who would listen, "I didn't break it doing this!"
"We expect the women to do everything the men do," said Col. John Debay, chairman of the Military Science department. "The women are often surprised at things they can do. Many times you can't tell the women from the men until they take their caps off."

This ability to build self-confidence may be one reason why the Army Reserve Officer Training Corp (ROTC) program at the University continues to draw more women each year. About 33 percent of the University's ROTC students are female, compared to the national average of 23 percent. According to Debay, women have a history of success with the program. Approximately 60 percent of all ROTC scholarships go to women.

Below: Cadets are drilled in the physical aspects of military training on an obstacle course at the FTX camp in the spring.

Scholarship money was the initial draw for one senior nursing major, Becky Bertsch. She received a three and a half year tuition scholarship as well as a book scholarship and a monthly stipend. As a result, she will serve four years in an Army hospital after graduation. Non-scholarship students are required to serve only three years.

According to Bertsch, there are many other advantages to being involved with the ROTC. The Army provides the opportunity to travel, teaches management skills, and has a guaranteed job after four years.

In addition to their major programs, ROTC cadets take Military Science classes and go to leadership labs twice a week. The labs offer instruction in drills and ceremonies, tactical subjects like radio operation and land navigation, and physical training. The emphasis is on not only doing but leading the activity, as cadets will be in charge of military units after leaving college.

Students are also taught survival techniques and learn to handle themselves in combat situations. Cadets learn to handle a variety of weapons. "At first it took some time to get used to working with guns. I think men take to it easier because they grow up playing with tanks and guns. I'm sure I wouldn't like shooting people, but I do like shooting practice," said Bertsch.

The training during the first three years prepares students for advanced camp at Camp Perry, which takes place the summer before their fourth year. Most cadets spend five weeks in field training, while nursing students spend eight days in the field and five weeks working in an Army hospital. Teams compete in a simulated combat environment to prepare for potential war situations.

Women and men work together in these excerrcises and are expected to complete the same duties. "I remember one hike when we all had to carry the same heavy packs all day," said the petite Bertsch, who stands at 5 feet 1 inch tall. "At the end of the day, a big football player in my gorup came up to me and said, 'Girl, l've got to hand it to you .. I've been carrying that pack around all day and my back hurts, and you've carried it all day and never complained.' I think that's one place that we earn a lot of respect from the guys."

All cadets are required to learn how to defend themselves and command their units in a combat situation. Females are not sent into direct combat, but can be located near battles in MASH units. "The women have to know how to do as much as the men," said Bertsch. "I know I could do it (fight in a combat situation) if I had to. If a MASH unit is attacked, you can't just sit around and wait for somebody else to defend you."

"Sometimes it's scary to know that we are always training for war, but I guess I'm patriotic. I wouldn't want to live anywhere else, and I think it's my duty to fight to maintain this country," said Bertsch.
According to Bertsch, ROTC cadets are sometimes teased and ridiculed by classmates. "When we are in uniform, there are always some people who call us 'killers' and say that all we care about is shooting people," said Bertsch, "but I take a lot of pride in my uniform. I think 'Hey, maybe I'll save your butt in the long run, buddy."
Though the program requires much time and work, Bertsch claims the rewards are worth the effort. "Sometimes when I get really bogged down with school, I think, 'God! I'm in the Army!"" said Bertsch. "I never planned to be in ROTC, but I like this way of life and I've gotten a lot of support from my family and friends."

The Army has been a frontrunner in equal opportunity employment, according to Debay. Women are consistantly offered the same opportunity as men to attain high ranking positions in the Army.
"There are some things that men do better, but then there are things that women do better, too. We get the chance to do everything," said Bertsch.

West Side story

The success of the University theater department's "West Side Story" production was inevitable. Back in January during tryouts, nearly 200 students auditioned for the 32 -member cast - each hoping for a role in the classic musical that parallels Shakespeares' "Romeo and Juliet."

The competition was unfortunate for most of the students who tried out. But for the audience, the selectivity that director Allen White was able to employ turned out to be just the ticket for a harmonious blend of drama, song and dance.

The closing production for the theater season on April 17-19 and 24-26, "West Side Story" uses the beautiful lyrics of Stephen Sondheim and music by Leonard Bernstein. Set in New York City in the late 1950s, it is a story of racial and class conflicts that cannot be conquered - even by love.

Two rival gangs, the Sharks and the Jets, are shown contemplating each other's downfall in such brillianty choreographed numbers as "Cool" and "The Rumble."

Meanwhile, Caroline Lee Daniel as Maria and Kyle Marrero as Tony are overcome by love at first sight. Their romance, unaccepted because of prejudice, leads to more good songs like "Maria" and "One Hand, One Heart." Both Daniel and Marrero were excellent in the lead roles; their voices were exact.

Noted choreographer Janyce Hyatt came from Pittsburgh and molded some amateurs into pretty good dancers. The song and dance number performed by Action (Bruce Graves) and the Jets called "Gee, Officer Krupke" was worth the price of admission. Their comic performance was full of energy, and the audience showed its appreciation with a thunderous round of applause.

The number was a timely executed contrast to the play's tragic ending. When Tony is murdered in the finale, the drama reaches its peak. Daniel's sobbing Maria was so convincing that most of the people leaving the Main Auditorium did so without dry eyes.

Although there were a few minor technical problems, the actors molded their characters well. "West Side Story" made an excellent season clincher for the University Theater Department.

Oak Grove Cemetery

A veritable who's who of Bowling Green's founding fathers and mothers

If you stop and look carefully, you see the names - Lehman, Manville, Thurstin, Reed, Palmer, Clough, Wooster and a host of others.
No, you're not looking at a map of the streets of Bowling Green, but at the tombstones in Oak Grove Cemetery - a veritable who's who of the city's founding fathers and mothers.

Established in about 1840, the cityowned cemetery was originally located on land west of its present location, where the Ridge Street Elementary School sits now. The bodies and tombstones there were moved about 40 years later to their present location.

Christoph Lehman, a Bowling Green butcher who died in 1899 is buried there, as are Andrew Manville, a post-Civil War physician; Alfred Thurstin, an early land owner; Norton Reed, a banker; members of the Palmer family; George Wooster; and members of the Clough family who resided here in the last half of the 19th century.

The cemetery is testimony to the fact that the founders of Bowling Green State Normal College did not believe the University would grow beyond the area encompassed by University, Hanna and Moseley Hall. It was impossible to know at the time that the University's 100 buildings and 1,040 acres would encompass the cemetery 100 years later. Oak Grove Cemetery, located on Ridge Street between Overman Hall and the Student Health Center, is now in the middle of campus.
Former faculty members of the University are also at rest in Oak Grove. Buried in plots are Hollis A. Moore, the seventh president of the University; Edwin Lincoln Moseley, one of 10 original faculty members when classes began in Septmeber, 1914 and a professor of science; Homer B. Williams, the first president of the University; and Myrna Bell Hanna, one of the coauthors of the bill that made the school a college and the woman for whom Hanna Hall was named.

The cemetery's original lots were layed out in a circular pattern because of a highcenter mound in the middle of the property. Lots consisting of 8 individual burial plots were sold originally because families were larger and less mobile than the average family of 1986.

Oak Grove Cemetery is still active that is to say that people are still being buried there, and Bowling Green city workers maintain the 17-acre cemetery. In fact, there are still about 60 burials annually. About 2,400 plots remain and the mausoleum which lies to the west of the cemetery was recently acquired by the city.

Bowling Green residents can purchase individual plots in the cemetery for $$ 150$. Nonresidents can purchase plots for $$ 250$. Story by Danielle Fischer

"The mosque attempts to accommodate all the needs of the Moslem community," said Imam Abdelmoneim Khattab, the director of the mosque.

A culture shock. A flash of the Middle East along Interstate 75. It's the Islamic Center of Toledo and its obscure design and solemn strength has represented a mystery to many; to others it's a house of prayer where members can join with the rest of the Moslem community to pray, socialize and be educated.

Located in Perrysburg at the junction of Interstate 475 and I75 , the mosque is many things to many people. According to Imam Abdelmoneim Khattab, the director of the Islamic Center, "The mosque represents all their walks of life, serving the community by helping with problems with the family, performing their marriages, funeral services and educating their children by providing schools. Every need is accommodated."
The Moslems in the community didn't always have a place to gather. The first Moslem immigrants to Toledo came at the turn of the century from Lebanon and Syria. But it wasn't until 1954 that Toledo's first Islamic Center was established. The first mosque was very small but was able to fulfill all of the needs of a small but growing community. And it wasn't long before the influx of many more Moslems to Toledo made it necessary for the community to seek out a new location that could accommodate the increase in growth and demands.

Dreams of finding the funds and property were in the planning for more than a decade. And in September of 1982 they found the location of their new Islamic Center and broke ground. Within a year of the start of construction, the mosque was completed and prepared to rejoin the Moslem community.

The mosque was built according to the style of classic Islamic (Indo-Turkish) architecture and happens to be the only building of its kind in North America. Designed by the noted turkish architect, the late Talat Itil of Toledo, the Islamic Center is equipped with 30 rooms, including an octagonal, carpeted prayer area that can accommodate up to 1,000 worshipers. There are eight full-sized classrooms and 72 individually designed faceted stained-glass windows. The windows in the prayer room pay tribute to God in Arabic calligraphy.
 the mosque encompasses one-third of an acre. All together, the Moslem community purchased 50 acres of land to complete the project.

Right: It is customary for the men and women to pray on separate sides of the prayer room.

Below: A Moslem woman dressed in tradi tional robes prays to Mecca, the Moslem holy land.

The prayer room faces west in the direction of Mecca, the holy land, where all Moslems bow to pray to God, Allah.

Since its debut in August of 1983, this "Isle of Islam," as it has been called, has aroused quite a bit of interest. Therefore, the women's council began organizing tours welcoming visitors from all religions and organizations. The tours include an ethnic meal, a lecture from the Imam followed by a question and answer session and a tour of the mosque.

The success of these tours is evident as more than 1,000 guests visit the mosque every month. Overall an estimated 30 , 000 people have visited the mosque since its opening in 1983.

Educating the Moslem youth plays a major role in the operations of the Islamic Center. Arabic and religion classes are offered to 250 registered students. The students meet every Sunday and, in addition to the classes, the mosque offers an intensive two-week summer school program.

The Islamic Center is just the beginning of a project with many long-term goals. Some of these plans include construction of a full-time school for all ages, housing for the elderly, a fullscale recreation center and a complete community center.

The Islamic Center of Toledo is the culmination of the dreams and aspirations of a handful of Moslems who migrated to this part of the United States 75 years ago. Today, 22 nationalities are represented at the mosque. According to Imam Khattab, "The mosque provides an important bridge of understanding between its members and the community around us."

Imam Khattab believes it is important that people understand they are welcome to visit the mosque anytime and that in God's eyes people are not separated into groups by religion. He said, "To our Christian brothers, our doors are always open. Every Moslem is a Christian, we worship the same God, and we are all part of the human family as a whole."

Their names - Meyer, Tunnacliffe, and Huff are not household words, and neither is the vocabulary of the sport they play scrum, ruck, and prop. Together, though, they make up what is easily one of the most successful sports on this campus.

Toiling at its College Park field in relative obscurity, the Bowling Green State University rugby team has nonetheless made its name synonymous with winning. With a motto of "nulli secundus" (second to none), the Falcon ruggers have rather methodically mowed over some of the biggest names in collegiate sports. The Falcons are undefeated in matches against Notre Dame, Tennessee, Kentucky, and Illinois, and have a thirty-three game win streak against Ohio State.

Rugby is often described as soccer with tackling and football without pads. To the casual observer, the game and rules seem as incomprehensible as those of an Australian Rules game on ESPN. To the player, it is a game that leads many into a lifelong association with the sport; some as referees, some as coaches. For others, it is a game that, while appearing brutal to the spectators, is in reality one that embodies a code of conduct that will allow them to play well into their fifties.

Called the "winningest college team in America" by the publishers of the Rugby Football Scoreboard, Bowling Green compiled its thirty-seventh consecutive winning season this year with an overall record of $51-6-3$ to go along with it's fifth consecutive Mid-American Conference championship. More importantly, the Falcons joined a very select group of Bowling Green teams that have vied for a national championship. They also became the first BGSU rugby team to be prominantly featured in Sports Illustrated.

Ending a six-year quest, Bowling Green defeated the University of Wisconsin, 7-6, in the finals of the Midwest Regional. The victory put Bowling Green in the final four of the National Collegiate Championship at Pebble Beach, California in early May. Leading BG in the forwards were senior lock and two-time All-American Chuck Tunnacliffe and senior hooker and threeyear captain Dave Meyer. In the backfield, the Falcons featured a passing-catching combination as good as anything in pro football. Scrum half Mark Lambier, cousin to Detroit Pistons center Bill Lambier, did the pitching while fly half Scott Huff did the receiving. Together they lead an offense that scored a record 680 points this spring, outscoring opponents seven-to-one while shutting out eleven opponents on defense. The (un)luck of the draw put Bowling Green up against five-time national champion University of California-Berkley. Tries by Huff and wing Jeff Weemhoff and a pair of penalty kicks by Lambier put the Falcons on top 14-6 at the half. Cal-Berkley's experience at the championship level was apparent in the second half as the Golden Bears regrouped to win the match and thier sixth national title by a score of 31-14. In the consolation game, BG lost to Air Force 13-9 but still wound up number four in the nation.

Parting Shots

"In 1982 when I began teaching at BGSU, I wasn't much older than my students. We had much in common. Over the past four years I have photographed my students in moments on leisure, on field trips, at parties, in bars, and at their homes. I like my students. Having had access to their non-academic lives has helped me to sort out what is important about teaching.

Graduation Tre Beginning 䟮 End

It appeared to be like any normal spring day in Bowling Green. The wind blew hard as many walked the downtown streets clutching their hats and shopping bags. But this wasn't a typical day for the 2,100 graduating seniors, for them the day represented much more.

This was graduation day. A day that for many was both anticipated and dreaded. An event which many can't wait for until it gets there when they say, "I can't believe it's over...I'm not ready yet!" It meant saying good-bye to best friends, homework and the carefree life associated with college.

But even with all the mixed feelings, the day was certainly a success. President Paul Olscamp said, "It is impossible not to be pleased at an occassion where 22,000 people are smiling happily throughout the ceremony."From early on, however, it looked as if there might be some trouble. When President Paul Olscamp announced that students would be required to sit in alphabetical order, the students were outraged. If they were going to boo him before, they were certainly going to do it in alphabetical order, they said. Thus, there was the big question, "are you going to sit in alphabetical order or are you going to sit with your friends?"

As it turned out, a few sat in their assigned seats...and most did not.

Graduates fought the persistant winds and held tightly to their caps, trying to locate family and friends while at the same time listening to commencment speaker, Sydney Harris. Harris, the nationally syndicated newspaper columist, noted especially for his "Strickly Personal" column, gave an amusing speech on how no one listens to commencement speakers. His light-hearted style kept everyone interested and ironically enough, listening.

Executive Assistant to the President

"When I am doing repertoire or performing in a play it puts me in a totally different arena, it's like taking a vacation far away from everything that goes on during the day."

Sounds like perhaps the words of a Broadway star or a Shakespearian player. Actually it is how Phillip Mason, the executive assistant to Paul Olscamp, feels about his favorite pastime, the theater.

Mason said he has always had a taste for the theater. "Ever since elementary school I have been performing in plays," he said. But he admits that during college he lost interest until he met the woman who eventually became his wife. His wife, Karen is a graduate of New York University where she got her master's degree in theater.
"Karen," he said, "Takes her theater very seriously. She rekindled my desire for the stage. Now I enjoy being a spectator to the theater as well as performing in plays."

As for the type of theater Mason enjoys, he said he prefers repertoire over abstract. He also enjoys participating in community plays. Mason said, "Acting, in any place or form is a tremendously healthy and positive diversion to a stressful work atmosphere."

Mason's other interests include football, basketball, baseball and hockey. He considers himself a loyal Falcon fan but admits that his interests for these sports began long before he came to Bowling Green. In high school, Mason was a four-year letterman in all the previous sports except hockey. A great advocate of staying in shape, Mason remains active.

Mason, the second youngest of 12 children was brought up in a small Virginian town where his father was a teacher and a farmer. Mason said that as a child he was expected to do his share of the hard work on the family farm, but he added that he wouldn't trade his childhood for the world because it instilled a strong work ethic in him that has served as a strength.

Mason aspires to someday serve as the president of a university but he feels strongly that the students and faculty understand that he does not sit behind a closed door. He said, "I want to be perceived as someone approachable, it's important to me."

Vice President for Academic Affairs

Eloise Clark's interest in academics doesn't end when she leaves her university office.

To escape the hectic nature of her busy schedule, she always finds time for one of her favorite activities . reading.
"I've enjoyed reading since I was small," she said.

And while she reads books on a variety of topics, Clark's favorite topic is modern history.
"I like books dealing with changes in society," Clark said. "I enjoy reading about social conditions and public and current policies."

Clark also admits to reading trendy works every now and then.
"When Dune was popular not long ago, I read that," she said. "I like reading science fiction and other books that are 'in' once in a while."

To keep up with current world issues, Clark expands her literary tastes beyond books. The Washington Post is a regular part of her Sunday reading.

Listening to music is another of Clark's favorite activities, and she finds great pleasure in combining music and reading.
"I like to have music in the background," Clark said. "I especially like the public radio station and jazz."

When she isn't reading or listening to music, Clark participates in various sports. Her favorite physical activity is a childhood favorite, horseback riding. Tennis and skiing are also among her favorite sports.

Vice President for Operations

What makes Karl Vogt, vice president of Operations, have an active interest in trains and railroading?

Vogt says that this interest developed when he was a child.

- His family lived near a railroad station, and "it was always an exciting experience to see these big passenger and freight trains with their steam locomotives - the energy and the dynamics," said Vogt. He also traveled by train when he visited his grandparents. "Basically, it was the proximity of a railroad and railroad traveling . . . that got me interested," said Vogt.

To keep this hobby alive, Vogt subscribes to a number of railroad and model magazines and also collects timetables. He has been collecting timetables, railroad publications and magazines for 40 years.

Vogt also takes interest in making and collecting locomotive models, cars and equipment.

It's a hobby that never gets boring, Vogt said."I just keep reading some timetables that are 60 years old there's that fun to go back and kind of fantasize what it was like."

Vogt compared his hobby to an opera or a symphony, saying, "when reviewing old magazines, publications or timetables, there's always something that you didn't see the first time around. Like a symphony, there's always something there that you didn't hear."

Originally from Massachusetts, Vogt graduated from Holy Cross with a Bachelor of Science degree in Industrial Relations.

Besides railroading, Vogt enjoys sports, and thinks of himself as "the Monday morning quarterback." H $\epsilon$ likes to play golf, and supports intercollegiate athletics at the University.

Vogt came to the University in

Liz Allen

1967 as assistant to the president, then became dean of the College of Business. Four years ago, he took the position of vice president for Operations. Vogt also teaches a course at least once a year in the College of Business and Management. Vogt said his job as vice president for Operations is interesting because with each new day comes a new problem to solve.
"As long as you think that you can make some contributions to the solution of the problem, that's a motivator - keeps you going. If there are not new opportunities and new challenges, it just gets kind of tiresome; you lose out in your motivation," he said.
Though neither his wife nor any of his three children share in his railroading hobby, Vogt remains faithful to the activity. He keeps his interest peaked at all times, from handling maintainance or custodial problems to "conducting" his favorite pastime.

Vice President for Planning & Budgeting

Richard Eakin, vice president of Budgeting and Planning is very dedicated in serving both academics and athletics.

Eakin is an avid supporter of the University's basketball team. He has always had an interest in athletics and played intercollegiately for Geneva College and for various city and church teams. Now that Eakin has chosen spectating over the actual play, he seldom misses a Univeristy game.

For the past 22 years, Eakin has resided in Bowling Green with his wife, Joann, and two children, Matthew and Maridy. His son Matthew is a freshman at the University and Maridy is a junior high school student.

In addition to his interests at the University, Eakin lends his talents in finance to two non-profit organizations. He is the chairman of the Wood County Mental Health Board. His work on the board includes many of the same budgeting and planning tasks he performs for the University. Eakin explained that it is refreshing to do similar work outside of the educational setting.

Eakin is also the chairman of the board for The National Hemophilia Foundation. Most of the meetings are Phil Masturzo through conference calls since the board members are scattered all over the country. Eakin said, "It's rewarding to work with people from throughout the United States." He also added that many health care facilities and non-profit organizations could not function without dedicated volunteers.

Eakin related his motivation for being so involved, "I really believe in volunteerism. People should seek to give back to the community."

Eakin's national, local and university involvement illustrates his committment to giving.

Vice President for Student Affairs

Many people go to college or choose a career in hopes of becoming a well-rounded person. And, often, the hardest part of achieving that goal is juggling various activities and schedules while still leaving some time for yourself. Mary Edmonds, vice president of Student Affairs, is one person who has met this challenge.

Edmonds, a four-year resident of Bowling Green, keeps a full schedule as her responsibilities include the supervision of resident life, student services and activities and inter-collegiate athletics. However, she still maintains time for personal hobbies.
"They (hobbies) reduce stress they help me express some creativity. They allow me to enjoy my own space, which is something I value because I have very little of it," Edmonds said.

She has several hobbies, but especially enjoys picture framing.
"I love art, especially pictures," Edmonds said. "I believe that framing is an important part of the artistic expression. So I either frame my own or take considerable time with a professional framer before deciding how best to display a work."
Edmonds also has an active interest in music. Though once very interested in the violin, she now relaxes by playing the piano and singing.
In addition, Edmonds has one daughter, Jacque, who is an MBA student at Harvard.
Well-rounded may be a good way to describe Dr. Edmonds because she is involved with so many things; however, it might be better to say she's in touch - with her job, her community and herself.

Vice President for University Relations

After a few minutes in Dwight Burlingame's office, the realization strikes that this man knows and appreciates the finer things in life. This is the vice president for University Relations, a man who collects books on bridge, opera and Sinclair Lewis. The latter, interestingly enough, used to bounce on Burlingame's grandmother's knee back in Sauk Centre, Minn.

A position as the Director of University Libraries brought Burlingame to Bowling Green from Minnesota eight years ago. The University library, which was "suffering" 10 years ago, is now nationally recognized in several areas. He said the library underwent a "philosophical change" in that it became an instructional agency and more accessible to students.

As vice President for Univeristy Relations, Burlingame is responsible for many more areas than the libraries. He oversees alumni affairs and works to develop more donors. He serves a public relations position by working with university and student publications, Channel 57 TV and relations with the community.

One of his more timely accomplishments is the creation of the Seventyfifth Anniversary Fund. The fund is designed to provide money for scholarships and to keep a competitive edge over other universities by attracting the best professors.

A favorite hobby of Burlingame's is traveling. Two years ago, he and his wife toured the Soviet Union. He had the opportunity to visit Soviet libraries, although they are closed to the public and he needed a pass for admission. He found them very different from American libraries and discovered that the Soviets cut out the editorial sections and advertisements of all American publications. The library officials claimed this is done to save space.

A trip to China proved interesting and beneficial to Burlingame and the University.
"The people were more outgoing and there was an excitement in the air in China," said Burlingame. Exchanges were arranged with Chinese music professors coming to Bowling Green, while University professors teach in China. Next year, the English Department will host three Chinese professors as it participates in a similar exchange.

Burlingame believes that interaction with students is important for a university administrator. He is a guest professor at the University of Michigan, teaching courses in library science. "Just as teachers experience burn-out and need leaves of absence from the classroom, a reverse leave is just as important for administrators," said Burlingame.

Kendall Baker has what he's always wanted: a Porsche. His favorite hobby, working on sports cars, is centered around his Porsche.
"The Porsche, to me, is the epitome of the sports car," he said.

Baker, the dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, said his interest in sports cars began when he was less than 10 years old; he was fascinated by the sporty autos that some of his parents' friends drove. He started driving a variety of sports cars at age 15, but Baker has always had a love for the Porsche.
"When I first started driving sports cars, I was driving Triumphs and MGs - cars like that. To me, the best sports car was a Porsche," said Baker.

Baker's wife and children take an active interest in his hobby. He and his wife drive the Porsche, and his children wash and polish it.
"All of my kids and my wife have sweatshirts with Porsche emblems on them, which say 'Baker Racing Team' on the back," he said. Baker also keeps one of the sweatshirts in his office.

Baker has had five or six Porsches in the 20 years he has been driving this type of car. One of his Porsches won first place for "Overall Appearance" in a local concur competition, thanks to his children, who prepared the car. "The Porsche has really become a family hobby, everything has Porsche emblems on it," he said.

Another hobby that Baker enjoys is woodworking. He builds furniture, which he finds very relaxing. "You can go outside and work on a Saturday or Sunday, and you can start and finish it. It's nice to see it when it's done." explained Baker.

Baker, originaily irom Clearwater, Fla., traveled around the world when he was young, because his father was a military officer. He received his undergraduate degree from the University of Maryland, and spent his first two years in Munich, Germany. He then received his doctorate from Georgetown University.

In his role as dean, Baker assumes many responsibilities. Three major areas in which he deals are personnel, curriculum and budget.

Baker is committed to the College of Arts & Sciences. He has a strong confidence in the value of a liberal education.
"The primary benefit is in terms of the breadth of the education. Liberal arts students are exposed to a wide variety of different kinds of course work, experiences and skill development opportunities," he said.

Dean, College of Business Administration

Some people who are born and raised in a small town often aspire to venture off to large cities, but this wasn't the case for Robert Patton, dean of the College of Business Administration.
Patton, a native of the small farm town of Pacific Junction, Iowa, came to Bowling Green in 1967 directly after receiving his master's degree.
"I really liked the University and the opportunities it presented at that point. I thought it would be a great place to start a career," he said.

As a child, Patton found deciding what he wanted to do with his life a difficult decision.
"I didn't have any preconceived ideas of what I wanted to be," he said. "I went through the process like lots of young people do. At one time I wanted to be a medical doctor. At one time I wanted to be a lawyer and even join the service."

But instead, Patton went on to get his undergraduate degree from Tarkio College in Missouri, where he majored in mathematics and education. Even then, he was still unsure about what he wanted for his future.
"I thought about high school coaching and teaching quite a bit. Even at the time I graduated from college I was seriously considering it," he said.

However, after completing graduate school at the University of Missouri, Patton realized that he preferred teaching over coaching.

Besides his many duties as dean, Patton teaches statistics and operations research. "I thoroughly enjoy being in the classroom," he said. "The biggest satisfaction is working with people and accomplishing something."

Today, Patton still feels Bowling Green is a great place to work. "I really think this is a fine university with lots of fine people. And people are what make a university," he said.

In his leisure time Patton enjoys golf, reading, movies, and watching sports on television.

Patton's wife is the assistant superintendent of Findlay Schools. They they have fifteen year old son who wants to attend college after graduation.

Patton's advice to his son or any student is "to work hard and love what you're doing. There's no doubt to me that's a big key to success. Give it all your heart and soul and you'll be rewarded."

Interim Dean, College of Education

It's not unusual to see professors and students riding bicycles on a college campus, and the University is no exception. It's also not unusual to see people who view bicycling as more than just an inexpensive mode of transportation.
Gerald L. Saddlemire, interim Dean of Education, is one of those who treat bicycling as more than just a casual hobby.

Saddlemire participates in bicycle touring and logs many miles on his bike each year. He said biking is an easy way to release tension and a fun way to stay in shape.
"I got into touring for the exercise because I don't like to jog," said Saddlemire. "Also, when you're on a bike, your rate of speed allows you to see more things than you can riding in a car."

He said he first became interested in bicycle touring while teaching at New York State University. Though touring was popular there, it was different from the touring in Bowling Green due to the hilly country of northeastern New York.

Saddlemire said bicycle touring is popular in northwestern Ohio because of the flat terrain.
"There are a lot of people in this area involved in touring. There are tours leaving every weekend from Bowling Green or Sylvania High School. Also, the BG bike club is becoming more active," Saddlemire said.
The tours can range from shorter 20 to 30 mile local trips to the 210 mile Tour of the Scioto River Valley, he said.

Saddlemire has led some short trips around the Bowling Green area for American Youth Hostels, a group which organizes such tours.

Saddlemire says that touring allows him to sightsee in a unique way. "I really enjoy touring. You learn to appreciate the ride a good bike can give you,"'he said.

Dean, College of Health & Human Services

Phil Masturzo

It's sometimes thought that the job description for the dean of a college should include the words "spare time hard to come by." Clyde Willis, Dean of Health and Human Services, uses some of his rare spare time to keep in shape and blow off steam by playing handball.
"Handball is an excellent workout and at my age I need it," joked Willis. "With my kind of job, it's great because it's a quick way to work out."

Willis' "kind of job" involves the management of 15 degree programs. The nature of the sport fits well with his career - it doesn't take much time and it keeps him in shape.

Willis said that keeping in shape is important to him as Dean of Health and Human Services. "Without question, it's a way of practicing what I preach."

According to Willis, there aren't a lot of handball enthusiasts. "I first got into handball at the University of Oklahoma about 1,000 years ago," said Willis. "It's really not a popular sport anywhere. There seems to be a 'handball underground.' Within the first couple weeks of relocating, you can usually find a handful of people who like to play."
Handball is similar to racquetball except that there is no racquet and it is played bilaterally with both hands.
"Many racquetball players find that handball is a more difficult game because there are no racquets. I actually find it relieving that there are no racquets flying around the court," he said.

With so little spare time available, handball fits nicely into a job description which encourages health.

Dean, College of Musical Arts

On and off the job, music is an important part of Robert Thayer's life.

Because of his responsibilities as dean of the College of Musical Arts, Thayer, a French horn player since the fifth grade, said he has not been able to perform as much as he would like, but enjoys listening to music in his spare time.
"Like most musicians, I enjoyed performing and listening to music. I found it to be an added dimension to my life that no other activity can do," Thayer said.

Thayer enjoys listening to classical, bluegrass and jazz music. And although he is satisfied with his carrer as a University dean, he said he will always regret not becoming a jazz performer.

Thayer is also an avid skier. He said he cross country skis in Bowling Green and often ventures out of town to hit the slopes.
Besides listening to music and skiing, Thayer also enjoys traveling. Recently, Thayer traveled to the Shaanxi Province of China at the invitation of the director of Xian Conservatory to discuss exchange programs in which the University and conservatories in Xian are engaged. While in China, Thayer visited three conservatories in three cities.

While visiting these conservatories, Thayer noticed that the students are disciplined and very dedicated to their work as musicians and that they have a high level of performance. One major difference among colleges between the two countries is that in China music students are guaranteed employment after graduation - something we all wish for.

Going to China was a rare opportunity for Thayer because his responsibilities as dean usually keep him in Bowling Green. As dean, Thayer is involved with the overall coordination of programs and their affect on students, faculty, curriculum, budget and the public.

Before becoming dean in July 1978, Thayer was dean of the Musical Arts College at the State University of New York in Potsdam.

Thayer said that he enjoys being dean because of the challenge "of trying to make the programs that we offer and services we provide influence things."

Dean, College of Technology

Jerry Streichler is up and jogging at a time when many college students are straggling in from after-hours parties.
Streichler, dean of the College of Technology, usually rises at 5 a.m. and is well into his five-kilometer run by $5: 30$ a.m. He runs on alternate days, whether it be on the track in Eppler South in the winter or on the streets of Bowling Green when the temperature rises in the spring.
"Aside from jogging and exercising, I don't have a hobby per se," Streichler said. "I devote my free time - my recreating time - to a number of different things."
Streichler says exercise keeps him mentally as well as physically fit.
"A high kicks in - usually - and my secretaries told me that they can tell when I have jogged," he said.
In addition to his devotion to fitness, Streichler is devoted to the arts.

He and his wife are season ticket owners to the performances of the Toledo Symphony, enjoy the Festival Series here at the University and regularly travel to Ann Harbor, Mich., for classical music concerts. They also attend campus theater productions and frequently drive to the Masonic Auditorium in Toledo to see plays performed by national companies that visit the city.

Interested in foreign travel, Streichler and his wife have vacationed in Great Britain, France and other parts of Eastern Europe. He said he is also interested in the culture of China and would like to visit the communist country.

Streichler need travel only in his mind to enjoy another one of his favorite diversions - reading.

Streichler said he reads a mixture of everything from Robert Ludlum espionage novels to James A. Michener historical novels to humorous and philosophical works by Isaac Bashevis Singer and Elie Weisel.

Streichler, who has been at the University for 19 years, has a wall hanging in his office that quotes a rabbi and reads, "If I am not for myself, who will be for me? And if I am only for myself, what am I? And if not now, when?"
"It has to do with people taking a position in life," he said. "I try to have my behavior guided somewhat by that."

Acting Dean, Libraries and Learning Resources

When William Miller came to the University in 1984, he expected to serve as the assistant dean of libraries. To his surprise, however, he found the dean's position vacated and himself in the dual role of assistant dean and acting dean. But, being a busy "one man team" does not keep Miller from his two loves - his family and rock-n-roll.

Miller enjoys spending time with his wife and daughter. He especially enjoys being able to share in the upbringing of his 17 -month-old daughter, Jessica.
"Jessica," he said, "is a delight." Jessica loves to be read to which would make any acting dean of libraries very happy.

Miller's other hobbies include caring for tropical fish and listening to popular music, especially rock. This is a hobby that he has enjoyed for many years. Miller has even developed the ability to identify obscure groups by their music alone.

People often are amazed that the acting dean of the libraries listens to rock music, and Miller is amused by this reaction.

Miller said he believes his love for music is a result of his involvement in the hippie movement of the 1960 s.

Pleased with the friendly atmosphere of Bowling Green, Miller said it was "a good move to come here" and that he hopes the students and others using the library feel the same way.

Dean, Continuing Education & Summer Programs

Ramona Cormier, dean of continuing education and summer programs, is going to revamp her backyard. She's going to fence in the yard, put a garden in along the fence, move her herb garden to the patio and move the vegetable garden to the backyard.

She said it might take her two or more summers to complete the project because she is so busy, but that doesn't seem to bother her. In fact, she's looking forward to it.
"You have to have those projects. That's what makes life interesting, you see," said Cormier.
If the number of projects in which a person is involved is an indicator of an interesting life, then Cormier must lead an extremely interesting life.

In addition to gardening, Cormier devotes her spare time to reading, jogging, swimming, traveling, furniture building and researching and writing.
A self-proclaimed "career person," who never married or had children, it seems Cormier's only complaint with life is that there just isn't enough time to accomplish all that she would like to accomplish.
"I used to do a fair amount of research and writing, but I do little of that now. It's too time consuming," she said. "There's less and less time to do it and do it well."

Much of her free time is spent reading. Cormier said she reads at least 20 to 25 journals or magazines a month, murder mysteries and "any and everything that is worth reading."

In her 21st year at the University, Cormier uses her vacations to travel. She has been to Greece, France, Italy, Spain, England, the Orient, West Africa and the Amazon.
" I 'm interested in culture, interested in art. I visit as many museums as I can," she said. "I like to sample the food, wine and general culture."

Cormier has brought her interest in different cultures into her home by building a Queen Anne's cabinet and a desk from mail-ordered, furniturebuilding kits.

Cormier, who received her bachelor's degree in music from Southeastern Louisiana University and her doctorate in philosophy from Tulane University, plays the clarinet, violin and saxophone.
Believing a fit mind should have a fit body, Cormier has been jogging $11 / 2$ miles three days a week for the last seven years. She also likes to swim.
"I go (jogging) for my body. I do it for health reasons and to relieve tension and tune up my body," she said. "When you start to compete with yourself, it defeats the purpose of jogging."

11-0 Season Sparks

Like any football team, Bowling Green had expectations for the 1985 season. Many picked the Falcons to win the Mid-American Conference title.

BG did win the league crown, but that may have been the only expectation they met. The way they went about it was far from what anyone may have expected.

Going into the season, everyone praised the high-powered Falcon offense led by Brian McClure and his chase of Doug Flutie's NCAA career passing yardage record. Bernard White was coming off only the third 1,000 yard rushing - 50 reception year in NCAA history and was counted on for a repeat performance.

But it took only one game for the Falcons to start their surprises. The highly touted offense went dormant against Ball State and coach Denny Stolz had to depend on his underrated defense.

The response was loud and clear. Melvin Marshall returned two interceptions for touchdowns and linebacker Erik Johnson pounced on a fumble in the end zone to pace a 31-6 BG win.

Kentucky, a member of the powerful Southeastern Conference, was supposed to contend for their league title, beginning with a warm up against the Falcons.

Never sticking to the script, Stolz gained his 100th win as a last-minute drive ended with a leaping Greg Meehan snaring a McClure pass for the winning touchdown. The Falcons overcame four penalties on that drive and McClure connected with Gerald Bayless on a fourth and eight to keep the drive alive.
"This win would have to rank right near the top because it's my 100th win and it came against a team like Kentucky," Stolz said.

The victory may have been Stolz's biggest, but it would be far from his last.

would give the Falcons their third straight victory over the Redskins. Their hopes were left unfullfilled.

McClure left the game in the second quarter with a knee injury and fifth year senior Rick Neiman stepped in. BG fans began filling out of the stadium, expecting the first loss of the season.

But the course for the season had been set and BG left the expected behind. Neiman led a Falcon comeback that included a 29 -yard scoring strike from Neiman to Hunter, a successful onside kick and a seven yard touchdown run by Neiman with less than a minute remaining.
By now, the remaining fans were resting assured of a BG win. But Miami marched 68 yards and had one last chance to score with five seconds left. Linebacker Paul Schweitzer deflected the pass and the Falcons were 3-0.
"What a game, we go down and score and they almost come back and take it," Stolz commented. "But our defense hung in there."

The surprises continued on Parent's Day with Akron. Many expected BG to crush the Division I-AA Zips with McClure throwing for 500 or more yards. But Falcons threw in another twist, squeaking past the Zips, 27-22.

McClure tossed five interceptions and tailback White was called to shoulder the offensive burden, churning out 148 yards. McClure wound up the day 28 of 38 for 252 yards and two touchdowns, but his five errant aerials stuck out like a sore thumb.

After two close calls at home, BG traveled to Western Michigan to face the nation's best pass defense. A tough defensive struggle seemed in the works.

Predictably unpredictable, McClure led a Falcon blitzkreig that registered 28 first half points en route to a 48-7 pasting of the Broncos. In the first quarter alone, McClure tossed for 123 yards and two touchdowns, piling up 252 yards before leaving in the third quarter.

Eastern Michigan learned from WMU, keeping the ball away from the Falcon offense. The Hurons held BG to a 14-14 tie and opened the second half with a 6:54 drive that ended in a field goal.

With momentum on EMU's side, it would have been easy for BG to roll over and play dead for a Huron homecoming victory. But the Falcons retaliated with a 78 -yard McClure to Meehan scoring strike that set the tempo for the rest of the game. BG rolled to 42-24 win.

McClure's aerial show continued throughout the game, ending the day 22 of 37 for 320 yards. But Harkema's charges ended the game on a high note, a flanker reverse pass for a 56 -yard score.
"That razzle-dazzle, 70-yard pass just isn't supposed to happen," Stolz said.

There was little razzle-dazzle to be found when the MAC's two perfect teams, BG and Central Michigan clashed on Doyt L. Perry Field. The two teams struggled in the cold, wet, and mud but BG prevailed 23.18 to take command of the MAC race.
"It was a semi-MAC championship game and now we've got the advantage toward claiming the crown," Stolz said.
The game was in limbo until midway through the fourth quarter with BG leading $16-12$. McClure spearheaded an 11 -play, 69 -yard drive, ending on a oneyard White plunge.

The Falcons held on, making a late goal line stand to up their record to $7 \cdot 0$, 5.0 in the MAC.

But before the Falcons had a chance to set over-confident, Kent State fought BG tooth and nail. Two missed Flash field goals and sloppy KSU punting enabled BG to pull out a $26-14$ homecoming win in a game many expected the Falcons to dominate.

Both teams brought in explosive offenses, but the potential fireworks display turned into a defensive battle and a struggle for field position.

While the KSU offense might have worried Stolz, much of the talk concerning the BG-Northern Illinois game surrounded two points - the grueling six hour trip and NIU's two year tradition of spoiling the record of the

MAC's division leador.

Leading 10-7, the Falcons exploded for 24 unanswered points to squelch the Huskies' "Health Club" on defense and their oddball veer offense.
"We were in the game, but we just couldn't hold Bowling Green down," NIU coach Jerry Pettibone said.

By the time Stolz's charges enjoyed an open weekend and Toledo came to BG for the annual $1-75$ rivalry, the MAC title was all but wrapped up. A McClure-led team had never beaten the Rockets, but after a first quarter interception, it quickly became apparent that the UT jinx would come to an end.

McClure connected with Hunter on a 22 -yard scoring strike, followed by senior end Chris Hartman's interception return for a touchdown. What followed was 30 minutes of BG sitting on the football.
"We could've scored more, but I respect (UT coach) Dan (Simrell) too much for that," Stolz said.

Stolz showed little respect for Ohio University. With the MAC title clinched, most may have expected Stolz to play it safe and just do enough to win the game. It was only fitting that BG did exactly the opposite.

McClure riddled the Bobcat secondary for 476 yards (a MAC record) as the Falcons crushed OU 38-17.

After the game, Stolz, who reserved judgment and comparison during the year, finally made his feelings known.
"This is the best team the Mid-American Conference has ever known," he stated. "No other team in the conference has done what this team has."

The Falcons were the first undefeated MAC team since Miami in 1973 and the only MAC school to win nine league games.

McClure became the only two time winner of the conference's MVP award, capturing the Jefferson trophy. BG placed six players on the first team allMAC team and 11 on the second unit. Gerald Bayless received honorable mention.

OV  ERFalcon's throttled by Fresno State 51-7

FRESNO, Calif. - The dense mist which engulfed Bulldog Stadium all morning lifted an hour before game time.

Nevertheless, Bowling Green played as if it was in a fog all afternoon.

On Saturday Dec. 14, Fresno State throttled the Falcons 51-7 before 32,500 fans at California Bowl V. It was the biggest margin of victory in Cal Bowl history.

From the moment they lined up at the wrong end of the field for the opening kickoff, until the last of their eight turnovers, the Falcons never appeared to be in the game.
"I don't know what happened," BG head coach Denny Stolz said. "We had a super regular season, but we sure didn't put it together today."

BG needed 11 straight wins to convince the national media it deserved to be taken seriously. Yet at times against FSU, the Falcons' performance came right out of a slapstick routine.
The interception Brian McClure threw in the third period, which was tipped by seven players including himself, proved to be the ultimate rib tickler in the comedy of errors

Entering the contest, BG fumbled just five times all season - it matched that total against FSU
"It got away from us early and we never recovered," Stolz said. "When things go wrong, everything breaks down."
Three days prior to the game, Stolz accepted the head coaching position at San Diego State University. Several seniors promised to Stolz's going away present would be a victory in the Cal Bowl.

However, Stolz would've probably settled for a sweater. At least if he didn't like the sweater he could've returned it.

Instead, Stolz was stuck with the 51-7 mauling.
"I don't think anyone could've expected this outcome," Stolz said.
The annual match-up between the champions of the Pacific Coast Athletic Association and the Mid-American Conference was forcasted as "to close to call," by Las Vegas odds makers.
The game pitted two unbeaten, nationally ranked teams.
Fresno's thrilling 29-28 win over BG in Cal Bowl II only served to enhance the possibility of another great game.
But the rematch turned into a mismatch.

Fresno struck for the game's first touchdown on its second possession. Stephen Baker's 43 -yard punt return ignited the scoring drive.

The Bulldogs marched 44 yards in six plays and capped the drive with a 10-yard run by tailback James Williams. The All-American honorable mention rushed for 94 yards on 18 carries.

The Falcons, however, countered with a 16 play, 72 -yard drive of their own. And when McClure hit flanker Greg Meehan with a 18 -yard pass to put BG on FSU's eight, it looked like the Falcons would draw even.

But two plays later, BG committed its first and most costly turnover. From the twoyardline, taliback Bernard White swept right, but fumbled the ball into the endzone. FSU safety Rod Webster pounced on the ball for a touchback.
"That was the single, biggest play of the game," Stolz said. "It could've been 7-7. It swept the momentum in their favor."

The muffed scoring attempt would be BG's last serious threat until late in the game.

For the most of the afternoon, Fresno's defense swarmed McClure, sacking him five times and forcing the quarterback to hurry many passes. In his final game, McClure completed 22 of 42 passes for 256 yards and three interceptions.
"We knew they were gonna pressure us," McClure said. "We just didn't react well to some of the blitzs."

FSU defensive end Greg Ramsey recorded the biggest sack of the contest midway through the second quarter.

From BG's 19-yardline, McClure rolled left and was blindsided by Ramsey. The ball squirted loose, and the Bulldogs recovered on BG's three-yardline.

Tailback Anthony Mosely scored two plays later on a one-yard run and FSU led 14-0 with 8:01 left in the half.

The opportunistic Fresno' offense converted six of the Falcons' turnovers into TD's.

A minute after the second touchdown, the Bulldogs transformed a Falcon' fumble into another tally.

Quarterback Kevin Sweeney connected on a 33-yard TD pass to flanker Gene Taylor to give FSU a 21-0 lead.

In Cal Bowl II, FSU rallied to score all 29 points in the second half. Saturday, BG had no such luck.
"We tried to come back, but we didn't get the breaks," Meehan said. "The ball just didn't bounce our way."

Two plays in the opening minutes of the third quarter perfectly illustrated Meehan's statement.

BG drove the ball to FSU's 25-yardline on its first drive of the second half. McClure then threw a pass which was batted into the air and tipped by seven players before Webster grabbed the ball and returned it to the Bulldog's 44-yardline.
"That was the zaniest play I've ever seen," Webster said. "I think that play kind of wrapped up the whole day for Bowling Green."

Not quite.

On the following possession, Sweeney fired a pass which was thrown well behind his intended receiver, Taylor. Unfortunately, linebacker Erik Johnson deflected the aeriel right to Taylor who scampered into the end zone.

Sweeney completed nine of 19 passes for 185 yards and three TD's.

The Bulldogs ran the score to $37-0$ before the Falcons answered. Reserve tailback Jeff Davis broke a tackle and gallopped 18 yards for BG's lone tally with 14:28 remaining.

At 6-6, lanky Brian McClure looks like an athlete who should play on a team which shoots field goals, not kicks them.

He was a star basketball player at Rootstown High School in Ravenna. The sport was always his first love.

But in his junior year, McClure needed to decide whether he was going to devote himself to basketball or football - baskteball just didn't size-up.
"White $6-6$ basketball players are a dime a dozen," McClure said. "But, 6-6 quarterbacks aren't."

At Bowling Green, he was the tallest quarterback in college football. But McClure was head-and-shoulders above the rest in respects other than stature.

McClure finished his career 299 yards shy of breaking Doug Flutie's NCAA passing mark of 10,579 yards. He owns NCCA records for most completions and 200-yard games.

"Almost every coach has one super athlete; Brian was mine," former Falcon head coach Denny Stolz said. "I've coached for a long time at BG and Michigan State and I've never seen anyone better than him."

The Mid-American Conference record book reads like a McClure autobiography.

The author penned the last chapter after his final regular-season contest in which he shattered the single-game passing mark by throwing for 485 yards in a 38-17 win over Ohio University in Athens.

While McClure is probably the premier athlete in the University's history, you would probably never guess it by observing his lifestyle.

There are no signs of greatness at 222 North Enterprise - just a delapadated two-story yellow house. There is no Porsche of Ferrari with "MVP 18," license plates parked in the driveway - just a beatup Dodge Colt.

McClure's room is not wallpapered with his accomplishments; just a picture of his girlfriend and assorted posters. If you didn't know any better, McClure sounds like your average BG student.

McClure had opposing defenses perplexed, particularly Eastern Michigan where he led the Falcon's to a 42-24 victory.

"I'm no different, I put my pants on just like everyone else," McClure said. "I'm not one who really values material wealth, I guess. My parents probably taught me to be that way."

Unlike other athletic prima donnas, McClure is humble, never discussing his own conquests without mentioning his teammates.
"I hope people remember me as a good team player and a leader," he said.

Anything less would be an injustice.

As a freshman, McClure led the Falcons to a MAC title. In 1983, he set an NCAA record for most yards passing by a sophomore -3,264.

During his junior year, McClure won the Jefferson Award - the league's MVP guided BG to an 8-3 mark.

In his final year, McClure played a pivotal role in BG's 11-0 regular season and also competed in the East-West Shrine Game.

The highlight of the perfect season was BG's thrilling 30-26 victory over Kentucky. McClure was brilliant, firing two touchdowns, passing for 308 yards and engineering an 80 -yard scoring drive in the final minute.

While he felled every foe excecpt Fresno State on the field, maybe his toughest battle was mentally adjusting to all the media recognition.

Throughout the season the national press followed McClure's quest to eclipse Flutie's record. His accomplishments were featured everywhere from CBS to Sports Illustrated.

Obviously, the pressure to produce was enormous.
McClure needed to average about 285 yards per game at the outset of the season to break the record. But that figure rose rapidly as he burrowed through a slow start. McClure threw for just 217 in the opening game against Ball State.

He rebounded against Kentucky; but a knee injury against Miami forced him to leave in the first half after passing for just 82 yards. McClure returned to play Akron, but only threw for 252 yards.
The record was quickly slipping away and the critics began questioning his abilities. Answering to the media was no longer a pleasure, but a chore.
"I liked the attention at first, but it got to be a strain," McClure said. "There was all the tremendous hoopla, I felt as though I had to live up to all the billing. Sometimes, trying to live up to it got us in trouble."

This point was perfectly illustrated when he threw five interceptions against Akron.
McClure rallied however, he threw for 280 yards in three quarters in the 49-7 dismantling of Western Michigan, and posted a 320 -yard outing versus Eastern Michigan the following week.
Entering the final week, McClure needed an insurmountable 784 yards to set the record. But at halftime, McClure had already compiled 300 yards. Though the miracle never materialized, another dream did come true on the gridiron of OU.

On the final play of the game, McClure completed a pass to his brother Bill. It was the first and last McClure-to-McClure pass play.
"Brian really wanted to throw a pass to his brother badly," Stolz said. "It's the only request he's made in four years."

McClure said the future scares him, but added he is ready to accept any challenge the NFL offers.
"I know a lot of people think I may just be a second-string quarterback," he said. "But if given the opportunity I know I can prove myself."

Growing

Bowling Green's soccer team had its worst season in eight years under the tutelege of Gary Palmisano, but the coach hopes his young squad learned from the experience.

With as many as 10 freshmen seeing action and just two seniors on the squad this season, the Falcons struggled to a 4 -$11-4$ record.
"It's something that nobody is pleased with or satisfied with," Palmisano said. "I just hope the players learned from it and they make the adjustments for next fall."

Palmisano said the 1985 season was a season of peaks and valleys.

Among the peaks was the first ever Toledo Trust/BGSU Soccer Cup which took place Sept. 7-8 in Doyt L. Perry Stadium. BG, which finished second in the tourney, hosted three other college teams and 16 local youth teams.
"I'm extremely excited as is everybody else with the Soccer Cup," Palmisano said. "It's a great opportunity for our program to sponsor such an event. I hope it becomes a trademark for BG soccer."

The Falcons also traveled to Las Vegas and played against two of the top teams in the nation - The University of NevadaLas Vegas and San Diego State. Palmisano said the trip was an invaluable experience for his squad.

BG, even though it was a disappointing season, tied Akron $0-0$ and Indiana, the defending national champs two of the last three years, 3-3.
"Knowing that when we came off the field that we could have won both of those games, was a tremendous confidencebuilder," Palmisano said.

With a losing season, the valleys are sure to outnumber the peaks and this was no exception for the Falcons.

In the same week, BG faced Evansville, the number one ranked team in the nation and Ohio State, a traditional intrastate rival on the road. The Falcons were beaten by the superior Aces, 4-0 and lost to a much weaker Buckeye squad 3-2.

However, the lowest point of the season was reached when BG was killed by Western Michigan 5-1 on Mickey Cochrane Field late in the season.
"We should never lose to Western Michigan no matter how bad our season is going," Palmisano said.

Palmisano said good things can come from a season like this if the players take the poor season to heart and do something about it.

Individually, the Falcons were led by senior co-captain Mark Jackson who scored 14 goals and two assists for a team-high 30 points. Jackson broke BG's career goal-scoring mark of 37 by Neil Ridgway when he netted his 38th goal of the season against Notre Dame in a 1-1 tie. He finished his career with 42 goals.

Junior Nan Chul Shin and sophomore Steve Aleric finished the seaon with 14 and 13 points respectively.

With 10 freshmen seeing action this season, led by walk-on

Phil Masturzo
Tom Kasten with seven points and Kevin McGrath with five points, the future is bright for the booters. Jon Felton started all 19 games in the defensive backfield and Rin Haines and Brian Cook alson saw considerable time on defense.

Freshman goalkeeper Jeff Vincent had a 2-8-3record with a 2.12 goals against average. He also had three of the Falcons' four shutouts.
"The freshmen held their own this season," Palmisano said. "Now them, along with the sophomores and juniors, have to take the next step and realize what needs to be done."

Palmisano is already looking forward to next season.
"I'm very excited as are the players. We can't wait for next fall," he said. "We want ot put BG soccer back on the map."

Pains

Some people will look at the Bowling Green's soccer roster next season and notice the Falcons lost just two seniors to graduation, but what they won't know is how much Mark Jackson and Drew Dawson meant to the young squad.

Co-captains Jackson and Dawson had very successful seasons, but arrived at the results in different manners.

For Jackson, it was a record-breaking year as the 5 -foot-11, 160 lb . forward broke Neil Ridgway's career goal-scoring record of 37 goals when he netted his 38th against Notre Dame in a 2-1 loss on Oct. 2. He finished his career with 42 goals.
"It felt great to break the record, but I would have liked to win the game also," Jackson said. "The loss sort of took something away from the record."

The Dayton native ended the season as BG's leading scorer with 14 goals and two assists for 30 points. Jackson earned second team all-Mideast honors in the National Soccer Coaches Association of America Division I rankings. He was also a NSCAA second team all-Ohio selection.

However, Jackson would trade all the records and honors for a winning season. Last season, the Falcons finished 4-11-4, the worst record under coach Gary Palmisano in seven seasons.
"It was a tough season," Jackson said. "I wish we would have had a better year. But I did get to know what it felt like to win in my first three years here."

The season was particularly hard on the seniors because of the great success BG has had in the past under Palmisano. In 1983, the Falcons had a 16-3-1 record and a place in the national Top 20.
"I think it was tough for Mark and Drew," Palmisano said. "They were used to winning. And with such a young squad, they had a lot of responsibility."

For Dawson, though, just stepping on the field for the first game was a major achievement.

After suffering a knee injury two sum-mmers ago, he was forced to sit out what would have been his senior year. Following his redshirt year, which included plenty of rehabilitation and watching, Dawson came back with vengence last season.
"Well, it was hard for me to sit and watch the guys who I had come in with as freshmen, and not play," Dawson said. "The one thing I thought of during my rehabilitation was coming back. I wanted the team to have a successful season."

In his first game back, Dawson centered a perfect pass to Jackson in the Children's Hospital Classic at Akron which Jackson slammed past the goalkeeper. The two seniors were both named to the all-tournament team.

The Akron native started the season as a midfielder, but when freshman sweeper Joey Petzker was felled by an injury, Dawson took over for him. In fact, Dawson wasn't told about the change until they had arrived in Milwaukee to face Marquette.
"I wasn't aware of the change until right before the game," Dawson said. "It was like learning a new position right on the job."

But after tying national powerhouses Akron (0-0) and Indiana (3-3), Dawson earned his stripes at sweeper. Against Indiana, he scored a goal when he booted a cannon shot from about 30 yards out.
"You couldn't tell that Drew had never played the position before," Petzker said. "He was a great sweeper; I was very impressed by his play."

After his move to defense, Dawson's scoring went down a bit, but he still managed two goals and five assists for nine points. But the one thing you noticed about Dawson, was his desire to win.
"I hate to lose," he said. "I'm not a bastard or anything, but I'll do anything to win."

Palmisano can only hope his future booters have the desire to win which Dawson and Jackson possessed.

Momentum Swings

In no other sport can momentum change sides quicker and more often than in the game of volleyball.

Even when everything appears to be going perfect, something bad can be expected to take place eventually.

Bowling Green's spikers not only reflected this "volleyball law" in their individual matches, but also in their entire season. Although the Falcons managed several hot streaks through out the 1985 campaign, BG finished the season with a $12-14$ overall record and disappointing 6-12 mark in the Mid-American Conference.

The swings in momentum definitely worked as a disadvantage for the young Falcons despite BG head coach Denise Van de Walle's constant urging for stronger team consistency.
"We kept talking about consistency as being one of the key factors in winning a match," Van de Walle said. "It not only affected the outcome of the matches, but also, the whole season."
But the final chapter of the ' 85 term turned a story of disaster into one of hope and aspiration for the burnt orange and seal brown.

The Falcons rebounded to win six of their final ten matches and salvage a year that culminated falling short of pre-season expectations.
Van de Walle's goal for the '85 season was to break into one of the top four slots in the MAC. Her expectations appeared to have a solid base as the three-year coach had improved from $11-22$ in her first year to $14-16$ in 1984.
But inexperience plagued the Falcons in their quest for success as they had to settle for seventh place.

Three sophomores, Barb Baker, Jo Lynn Williamson and Lynne Nibert and freshman Kelley Ellett were pressed into major roles on the Falcons' starting six.

Baker, the only Falcon to play in all 92 games, was highly successful in her first year as a regular. The setter broke the BG season record for most assists with 844 at the pivot position.

Williamson, an outside hitter, shattered BG's season record for kills, notching 270 in 86 games.

Nibert, winner of the Falcons' Most Improved Player Award, and Ellett performed admirably in the frontcourt where they were forced to pick up extra slack because of injuries to the team's leading blocker, junior Lisa Berardinelli.

Taking the spotlight, though, was senior Debbie Hopkins. Ms. Volleyball at BG, the Falcons' captain left the school with her name next to nearly every record in the book and Van de Walle with a gaping hole to fill.

Van de Walle doesn't need to say anything about BG's Most Valuable Player. Hopkins' statistics speak loud and clear.

The 5-6, outside hitter led BG with 46 service aces and 337 digs, both BG season records, and also posted a team-leading .288 hitting percentage. She holds Falcons' career records with 783 kills, 131 service aces, and 971 digs.

Although BG's hopes of success on the court fell short, Van de Walle's four D's, desire, determination, dedication and disatisfaction, were evident throughout the year.
"The four D's were accomplished," the coach said. "The public saw a losing season. But team moral, unity and the hard work ethic are now a part of this program.
"The win/loss column didn't show it, but these are the building blocks of a good program."

BERARDINE11

If fellow Sports Management students spotted Lisa Berardinelli gazing into a looking glass, they would simply see a bright, beautiful girl.

That is saying a lot for anyone. However, it's only a "mere image," of the complete person.

Berardinelli is not just a student, but also a college volleyball player, a model and the girlfriend of another recognizable BG personality - Brian McClure.
"People that are athletes recognize me as Brian McClure's girlfriend, but Sports Management students probably don't know about it at all," Berardinelli said. "But that's good because I don't want to be known as another person's character."

While the junior takes pride in being one of Bowling Green's most popular students, Berardinelli still considers herself just an "everyday" person.
"Every person has their trials and tribulations of their personalities," Berardinelli said. "I don't see myself as being different from anyone else. I put those demands on myself."

Despite being so involved, Berardinelli does not contain herself to one specific clique as can be the case with popular individuals.
"There isn't one standard group of people that I associate with," Berardinelli said. "I have different types of friends and Ilike that. You try not to get tied down."

The transition from high school to college can be a hectic time for any freshman, but for Berardinelli, the rookie year proved even more turbulent.

Although the Sports Management major had always been socially active while growing up, the ever-present attention she currently receives on campus is quite different from her precollege days when she revelled in swimming and basketball besides volleyball.

Although the Berardinelli/McClure relationship appears to be stolen from a Hollywood script, the hoopla expected from the dynamic duo is not essential for the couple's happiness.
"I am very proud of him now, but it wouldn't matter if he wasn't a quarterback," Berardinelli said. "At the time I met him, I didn't know he was a quarterback on the football team."

Even with all the activities Berardinelli is encircled in, she found out popularity does not breed invincibility, especially during the 1985 volleyball season.

A sprained ankle suffered midway through the year and a reccuring back injury sustained earlier in the spring combined to hamper Berardinelli's play, which had been outstanding in the Falcons' first half of the ' 85 campaign.
"I kind of dwindled off towards the end of the year. I don't know if it was the injury or more of a mental thing, though," Berardinelli said. "If you're not confident in your physical ability, it is going to affect your mental abilities."

The Euclid native has started at middle blocker for the Falcons since her freshman year, which was also Denise Van de Walle's first season as the coach for BG. Berardinelli said her improved play is a credit to Van de Walle, who goes out of her way to help with any problems which may arise.

"I am the kind of person who has the ability to do well if 1 am coached right," Berardinelli said. "My high school coach didn't teach some things that can help me like Denise has. She is dedicated to helping you."

Berardinelli may find herself on the other side of the fence after graduation. She plans to aid others by opening a clinical rehibilitation center or a health spa and may also further her education, possibly in the field of sports medicine.

Modeling, which occupied many of Berardinelli's high school moments, has not gone completely out of the picture, though. The 6-0, brunette would like to continue in the glamorous profession.
"It's something I would like to do after a career in sports," Berardinelli said. "It's like a fantasy to me; someone taking your picture with you in different poses. You get to see yourself in different moods and characters."

Regardless of what she finally decides on in the future, Berardinelli is not going to sit down and wait for life to serve her.
"You have to take risks because you'll never know how good you can be," Berardinelli said.

It's all down hill

It began as a snowball about the size of a fist, gently rolling down a steep mountain. As this snowball continued its downward trek, however, it gained momentum, grew in size and strength, thus changing its appearance totally.

This "snowball effect" is comparable to the performance of Bowling Green's men's cross country team during the 1985 season.

During the early portion of the season, Sid Sink, in his first year as head coach of the men's squad, witnessed BG struggle for a solid performance.

As the season continued, however, the strength of the Falcon squad intensified like the snowball.
"The men progressed really well from the start of the season," Sink said. "We ended up doing quite well after we got going."

The harriers snowball almost melted in a season-opening trimeet when the Falcons, along with opponents Toledo and Sweating profusely, Clark Strugill (second from right) leads a small pack of runners up a hill. Other BG runners include: Jacob Rice (far left), Jeff Parrish (second from left), Scott Mercer (third from left), Ted Nelson (third from right) and Jay Yuhas (far right).

Ohio State, had to run in 90 degree heat. BG finished a close second to the Buckeyes, but the sweltering temperature made it difficult to judge their first outing.

After a 2-5 record during the month of September, which included four setbacks decided by only a few points, the Falcon men appeared to be headed for a long and frustating season.

One bright spot for the Falcons during this rough period was the performances of freshmen John Hickman and Mike McKennna, who earned the Most Valuable Freshman award.

While the two youngsters were busy making a name for themselves, senior captain Tom Franek was turning in one solid outing after another.

Behind Franek's leadership, the harriers shifted into high gear for the rest of the season. The Notre Dame Invitational, which sports a traditionally strong field, was the Falcons turning point of the season.

With a fifth-place finish out of 16 squads, BG was headed in the right direction. After the meet, Sink sensed a new beginning for the men.

After placing fourth at the Ohio Intercollegiates the following week, Sink's prophecy came true. . .and at just the right time.

With Franek, who earned the BG's Most Valuable Runner award, and junior Dave Mora leading the rejuvenated harriers, BG was ready to challenge for the Mid-American Conference Championship.

Mckenna, sophomore Todd Nichols, and freshman, Fred Henderson, were also doing quite well. Together, these Falcons were ready to surprise a few MAC foes.

When the MAC meet was over, BG had accomplished its task by trailing only Miami and Eastern Michigan in the final standings. The harriers were led by Franek and Nichols, who placed seventh and 12 th respectively, thus earning All-MAC honors.

The BG harriers season concluded with a ninth-place finish at the NCAA District Four Qualifier.

Expectations

Imagine a finely tuned Porshe cruising through winding curves, accelerating up mountainous terrain, and shifting into high gear down the straightaways.

To envision this pictorial might be the best way to describe the performance of Bowling Green's 1985 women's cross country team.

The Falcon harriers displayed both finesse and raw speed, much like a high performance sports car, in running a variety of courses this year. The power and grace of the BG women allowed them to have a very prosperous season.
"The women had a lot of success throughout the season," BG coach Sid Sink said. "We looked especially strong in the early part of the season."

BG began the season by soundly defeating Toledo and Ohio Univesity in dual meets, followed by a second place finish at the Miami Invitational, and a win at the Eastern Michigan Invitational.

Nothing could seemingly stop the well-oiled machine that operated under the surname of "BG Women's Cross-Country". Even the loss to the host Redskins at Oxford, by a mere four points, was seemingly excusable.
"Two of our top runners, Lori Grey and Suzie Dieters, were very ill early in the week," Sink said. "They ran well for us, bui obviously they were not at full strength."

After finishing fifth out of 19 teams at the Indiana Invitational, BG had proven the strength of their squad. The Falcons faced a field of nearly 190 runners belonging to powerful squads from the Southeastern Conference, Big 10, and Big Eight, not to mention the MidAmerican Conference.
"This was a very good meet for the women," Sink said. "We did very well in our first meet of the year with national caliber teams."
Other impressive outings for the harriers included a first place finish at the BG Invitaional and a win at the prestigious Ohio Intercollegiates. The title captured at the Ohio Intercollegiates, which the women defended for the third consecutive year, was the best outing of the year, according to Sink.
"Any time you win an All-Ohio it's a great accomplishment," Sink commented. "It's not an easy thing to do, especially to repeat as champs."

This was also the meet BG's Sara Collas finally broke senior teammate Joann Weigert's school record with a time of 17:12.6 for 5,000 meters.

As the MAC championships approached, the outcome looked very promising for the Falcon women. Sink, however, was aware this meet is the main goal of all 10 MAC schools and the competition would be fierce.

The Falcon women, who were expected to be in a two-team race with Western Michigan for the MAC title, ended up placing third. Eastern Michigan, the "surprise team" of the meet, edged the Falcon women out of second place.

While Collas, chosen the team's Most Valuable Runner, was obviously a big part of the harriers success this year, there were others who contributed greatly to the team. Juniors Jill Soster and Rachelle Curran ran very well until late in the season when they were hindered by illnesses.

Grey and Dieters emerged as two of BG's best runners and shared the team's Most Improved Runner Award.

The women narriers season ended with Collas barely missing qualifying for the NCAA Championships at the NCAA District Four meet with an eighth place finish, one place from qualifying.

At the beginning of each new cross country season, Bowling Green coach Sid Sink tells an extraordinary tale to his young freshmen.

His remarkarble narrative is about a young lady, struggling as a collegiate runner, who increases her self-confidence to suddenly solve all of her past problems in competition. The story unfolds into a beautiful conclusion in which the runner develops into one of the school's finest, if not the best.

But wait, this is no myth... no fairy tale... not even a stretch of the Falcon coach's imagination. This is the true story of BG's Sara Collas.
"I tell her story because it shows what a big part confidence plays in sports," Sink said.

After struggling through her freshman year of cross country and track at Bowling Green, Collas returned home for the summer. During that three-month span, Collas' running future was altered dramatically.
"I told myself that I wasn't doing as well as I could," the senior tri-captain said. "I knew I had potential so I simply increased my self-confidence.
"People don't realize that running is 90 percent mental."

When Collas returned for the harriers 1983 season-opener, her sophomore year, she displayed what this precious attribute could help her accomplish.

The dual meet, which Collas labeled the highlight of her career, ended with her crossing the tape in a first-place tie. The move from the number 20 runner on the squad to the top spot left Collas with a moment she will always remember.
"I'll never forget the feeling of finally getting over the barrier of believing in myself," the Cleveland Heights native said.

Collas credits much of her new-found success to Sink, whose program aided greatly, but more importantly, his faith in her.
"Sid saw me run well in a road race that summer and told me he expected me to be in the front that year," Collas said. "Just those few words meant a lot to me."

This fantastic turnaround, according to Collas, wouldn't have occurred if it weren't for her identical twin, Nora. Her sister, who isn't wicked in the story by the way, is an outstanding runner at the University of Houston.
"Nora urged me to keep training and kept telling me that I was better than I thought," Collas said. "Also, I figured that she was my identical twin so I should be able to do better."

In her final campaign as a Falcon harrier, Collas was always the first BG runner to cross the finish line. From the time the gun sounded in the opening meet of the season, Collas was simply awesome from start to finish.

Collas' individual wins included early meets against Toledo and Ohio University, along with a victory at the Miami Invitational where she broke the course record by an amazing 50 seconds.

Other impressive Collas outings included a first-place finish at the BG Invitational, second-place at the Eastern Michigan Invitational and the Mid-Amercan Conference Championships, and a fifth at the Indiana Invitational.

It seemed that Collas seemed to be chasing something, however, rather than ## someone.

"Breaking the school record was one of my goals," Collas said. "And I was expecting to get it."

Collas finally chased down the BG record for 5,000 meters in her victory at the Ohio Intercollegiates. Collas' winning time of $17: 12.6$, shattered the old record held by senior teammate, Joann Weigert.

With this record, and a tremendous senior season completed, Sink will have one final page to add to his story recounting Collas' accomplishments.

But wait, this drama is far from over.
"I'm not ready to put running and the competition away," Collas said. "I'm only just beginning."

Denies Falcons an NCAA Bid

When Philadelphia's Broad Street Bullies of the mid-70's won the Stanley Cup, they didn't win it with goal scorers, defense, or goaltending. They did it with intimidation and muscle.

Bowling Green didn't duplicate the Flyers' lead to perfection, but they did toughen up their image last year. But in their bid for the national championship, they came up short.

The Falcons (28-14), who broke the NCAA Division I West Region record for team penalty minutes in a season, lost to Western Michigan University $4-3$ in triple overtime in the semi-finals of the Central Collegiate Hockey Association playoffs.

The loss ended BG's hopes for an NCAA tourney bid, and head coach Jerry York said it was a tough way to end the national title chase.
"It's the kind of game neither team should lose," he said. "In October, we said our goal was to win the national championship and a win in triple overtime would have sent us to nationals; that's how close we came."

The loss continued the infamous Joe Louis Jinx, as the Falcons have never won a tournament in Detroit. In fact, BG has won only three of 10 games there, including a 3-0 win over Lake Superior State College in the consolation game.

The victory was an empty won according to York.
"Neither team wanted to play this game," he said. "Both of us wanted to be in the championship game."

The Falcons may not have won the NCAA title, but they didn't go down without a fight, or at least a good check or two, or three. . .

BG racked up 1055 penalty minutes over their 42 game schedule, an average of more than 25 penalty minutes per game. The figure outdistances the old record, set by Ohio State in 1980-81, by Rob Urban (without helmet) informs a Michigan State player of the Falcons' new "get tough" policy.

York said the figure was an after affect from the previous year's 21-21 season.
"Last year, a lot of teams thought they could intimidate us and maybe they were right, because we were so young," he said. "We're mostly a speed and skill team and other teams tend to play aggressively against that style.
"This year, we were able to stand up to them and not be intimidated or run out of the building."

Leading the Falcons to their record setting penalty total were junior tri-captain

Iain Duncan ( 50 penalties, 124 minutes) and second team all-conference defenseman Brian McKee ( 52 penalties for 120 minutes). But the two "enforcers" contributed to the team in other ways.

Duncan netted the second most goals on the team and was third leading scorer while McKee set a BG record for goals in a season by a defenseman.

McKee missed most of the 84-85 season with a knee injury, but came back better than every, according to York.
"He's becoming one of the dominating players in the league," York said. "His knee has responded very well and he's one of our team leaders."

Incredibly, goalie Gary Kruzich did his part to bolster the Falcons' tough guy image with 10 penalties of his own. Kruzich won 23 games against 11 losses while earning all conference honors.
"Our goalie Gary Kruzich had a great season," York said.

But Kruzich wasn't the only one to earn praise from the Falcon head coach. The defense, spearheaded by Todd Flichel who was third on the team penalty list with 38 infractions for 84 minutes, also improved, according to York.
"The defense showed signs of becoming solid over the course of the season," York said. "Brent Regan, Brian McKee, Alan Leggett and Todd Flichel all played well down the stretch and they got support from Thad Rusiecki and Tom Pratt."

Early in the year, the defense, and everything else, was running smoothly for the Falcons. They jumped out to a huge lead in the CCHA and seemed a shoo-in for the regular season title.

The second half of the season was a different story for BG, however. Their seemingly insurmountable lead was being whittled away and they hit a late season six-game losing streak.

"Our home-away schedule favored us at the beginning of the season," York said. "At the end of the season, we lost four league games, three on the road. The first half of the season, we had those at home and won.
"The schedule had us going uphill in the second half and it explains the difference between the first and second half.'

Although the Falcons ended the season on a down note, Jamie Wansbrough added some positive factors. The lone senior broke the CCHA career record for goals and led the team with 33 goals while being named first team all-league.
Sophomore Paul Ysebaert, rookie of the year in 84-85, earned second team conference honors for his 22 goal, 45 assist, 67 point year.

WANSBROUGH

When he was 18, nobody in the National Hockey League wanted Jamie Wansbrough.

At 22, almost every NHL team is ready to give the Bowling Green senior a chance to play pro hockey.

When he was eligible for the 1982 draft, all the NHL teams overlooked Wansbrough, making him a free agent. At first, Wansbrough was dissappointed, but, four years later, realizes there was a silver lining in not being drafted.
"At the time, a lot of my friends were drafted and it's presitigious to get drafted, so I was a little dissappointed," he said. "But it worked out better in the long run."
"Usually, if you're not drafted in the first few rounds, you won't get a good contract, on the average. As a free agent, you have a chance for a better contract."

Before Wansbrough could demand a pro contract, he had to prove NHL teams had made a mistake in not drafting him. He decided to prove his ability at BG, which is probably more widely known in Toronto than Indiana.
"I played with (former Falcons Mike) David and (Mike) Pikul back at home and played junior B before coming here," he said.

Other BG sports may have trouble gaining the attention of pro sports, but Wansbrough's credentials have caught the eye of the NHL. Ex-Boston Bruin great Peter McNab called Wansbrough, "the most natural goal scorer" he's seen in quite a while.

This year, Wansbrough led the team with 33 goals and 76 points while his 43 assists were second. The Toronto native ended his career as the Central Collegiate Hockey Association's all-time leading goal scorer with 125 . His 110 assists are seventh on the BG all-time list and he is the fifth most prolific scorer.

But Wansbrough doesn't want to be known strictly as a goal scorer. He said other parts of his game are just as strong as his ability to put the puck in the net.
"This year, I think I've proven that I'm more than a goal scorer, I'm being more of a playmaker and getting the puck to the other guys," Wansbrough said. "I think people are seeing both sides of my game and enjoy the whole game, defense, passing - the whole game."

Wansbrough gets plenty of time on the ice, working with the special teams in addition to his regular shifts. He skated with the penalty killing and power play units most of the year. And since BG broke an NCAA regional record for penalty minutes, the penalty killing unit got more than its share of work.

Another of the CCHA's finest scorers, Ray Stasziak, received a multi-million dollar contract, but wound up in the minor leagues. Wansbrough said Stasziak's failure could prove a hindrance.
"I think it hurt the free agent market and he may be a bit overpaid," he said. "Give him some time, though, he'll be back up in a year or so."

Joe Phelan

Like Stasziak, Wansbrough's numbers speak for themselves, but he said BG's efforts fell short of the team goal -a national championship. He said he would have traded the records for a second NCAA title.
"I would have liked to win another national championship, records are secondary to team goals," he said. "I hope to become a free agent, but with whom and when, only time will tell. That's something I really don't have much control over."

Once overlooked, NHL scouts are now realizing Wansbrough's all around talents. But according to Wansbrough, the scouts didn't make a mistake in not drafting him.
"I was a late bloomer, I've developed at college with the help of our super coaching staff," Wansbrough said. "I've become more mature and stronger with four years of experience."

Frustrating

7-20 season is worst in Weinert's 24 years of coaching

Given one word to describe Bowling Green's 1985-86 basketball season, coach John Weinert could think of many, but one stood out.

Frustrating.

The Falcons finished the year at 7-20 and last in the Mid-American Conference, failing to make the seven-team MAC tourney.

It also marked an end to Weinert's 10 year BG coaching career and 24 years of college coaching. The veteran mentor resigned on Feb. 6.
"This was a very frustrating season," Weinert said. "It's the only team I coached in 24 years that didn't improve from the beginning of the season to the end. We were making the same mistakes at the end of the season we made in the beginning of the season"

But, there are some reasons for the Falcons' demise. In a game where all cards are needed, Weinert was dealt a severe blow at the beginning of the season.
Injuries racked the young team. The loss of 6-9 senior center Avon Davy to a foot injury during pre-season and 6-7 junior Mike Maleske to a knee injury seriously depleted BG's inside game.

However, the biggest loss may have been 6-2 guard and co-captain Frank Booker. Booker was ruled academically ineligible midway through the season.
"Losing three key players with experience really hurt," Weinert said. "It made our young squad younger."

With those three out, it left senior Brian Miller and junior Bob Nass as the only players with experience.

Miller, BG's captain, ended his career with a stellar season. The 6-1 guard provided leadership to the young squad, leading by example. He finished the year as the Falcons' leading scorer with a 15.7 points per game average.

Phil Masturzo

He also led the team in assists. For his efforts, Miller was named to the MAC's second team.
"It's nice to be named to the second team, but that isn't what matters," Miller said. "What matters is how the team did, not how I did individually. I wanted the team to get to the tournament."

Another bright spot for the Falcons was the performance of sophomore center Steve Martenet. The 6-6 Martenet, who almost always faced opposing centers bigger then himself, had an outstanding season.

Martenet averaged nearly 10 points a game while leading the MAC in field goal accuracy, shooting 59.7 percent from the floor.

Phil Masturzo
"I feel that academics and athletics go hand-in-hand," Martenet said. "Athletics give me the discipline to work hard on my studies. If I don't feel like studying after practice, I know I have to and I do it."

Jim Smith, a 6-5 tranfer from Wiscon$\sin$, stepped right into the starting lineup and finished second to Miller in scoring. The junior forward averaged over 15
"Steve just improved so much," Weinert said. "It was remarkable to see the change in him from the beginning of the year to the end."
Not only did Martenet excell on the court, but also in the classroom. He had a 4.0 grade point average during the basketball season and was named to MAC's allacademic team.
"If my first season would have been like this I might have gone into something easier - like become an atom bomb tester."

points a game.

Smith also had the season-high scoring effort with a 31 -point outburst against Morehead State in a 74-71 defeat early in the season. He led the team in scoring 10 times this season.

In a game of streaks, the Falcons began the season going 1-9 and ended the season with eight consecutive defeats. The team had a three-game winning streak in January, with wins over Central Michigan, Ohio University and Eastern Michigan.

Weinert said by far that winning streak was the highlight of the season.
"Easily that's the brightest part of our year," he said. "We suddenly became a part of the race again."

But as quickly as the gun sounded, the Falcons came up lame and were out of the race.
"I would have liked to gone out on a winning note," Weinert said. "But I lost the first game I coached, so I guess I ended how I began.

"In my 24 years of coaching, this has been my worst season ever," he said. "If my first season would have been like this, I might have gone into something easier like become an atom bomb tester."

But on a more sentimental note, Weinert said he'll miss everything involved with the game. He'll assume a postion in the athletic department effective in June.
"I think what I'll miss most is being called 'coach'," Weinert said. "But you can bet I'll be in the first row rooting for the Falcons next season."

On March 18, the athletic department named University of Virginia assistant Jim Larranaga, 36, to succeed Weinert.
"Jim's career has been blessed with nothing but success," athletic director Jack Gregory said. "He's been associated with fine basketball people throughout his career. He's ackowledged as one of the best recruiters in the country.
"His background is strong in all phases of the game."

Throughout Bowling Green's recordsetting football season, a certain Brian M. dominated headlines. He was the talk of the Mid-American Conference.

However, during the Falcons' basketball season, another Brian M. began grabbing his share of publicity.

Brian Miller's outstanding senior year seems to have been lost in BG's disastrous $7-20$ season. But unquestionably, Miller was one of the few bright spots for the Falcons.
"Brian had a very good senior season," BG coach John Weinert said. "He carried us by himself at times during the season. But you have to judge him over the whole season."

Miller led the team in scoring, averaging 15.7 points a game, starting 23 of 27 games. He led the Falcons with 90 assists. He earned second-team All-Mid-American Conference honors.

However, despite his individual success, the season was very frustrating for Miller.
"I think I played pretty well this season, but that doesn't matter," he said. "I don't worry how I do personally, I just want the team to win.
"I wish we would have had a better record and made the MAC tournament."

The Falcons started the year going 1-9, but the highlight of the season was a ninegame stretch when the team went 6-3. Miller flourished during the streak, averaging over 22 points a game and getting a game-winning basket over Eastern Michigan.

BG's captain the last two seasons, Miller wasn't even sure he was going to be playing coming into his senior season. He averaged 8.6 points a game his junior year, but a disagreement with Weinert put Miller on the bench the latter half of the season.
"Coming into this season all I wanted was the chance to prove I could still play," the 6-1 guard said. "I knew I could play. I worked hard over the summmer."

Miller spent the summer playing in a Toledo league against current college playes and professionals. He said it helped his game tremendously.
"I played all summer with great players," he said. "And during critical parts of the game, they weren't afraid to give me the ball. I wanted to establish the same kind of respect here. I wanted the ball during crunch time."

Weinert said he knew Miller was dedicated, but didn't know how dedicated he was.
"Brian worked extremely hard over the summer and it showed," Weinert said.

MILLER

"We told him what he had to do to play and he did it. He came back from the summer a complete ballplayer."

After a stellar career at Toledo's St. John's High School, Miller came to BG and saw limited action his freshman year. But his sophomore year, Miller averaged 7.9 points a game and led the MAC in assists.

While Miller's exploits on the court have been well chronicled, it's his performance in the classroom which is even more impressive.

The marketing/sales management major had a 3.2 grade average during the 1985-86 basketball season and has been better than a 3.0 student over his college days.
"Brian's accomplishment's in the classroom really stand out," Weinert said. "He has been an asset to Bowling Green both on and off the court."

While the job market may be beckoning for Miller, he isn't sure if he's ready to give up basketball.
"I may try to play ball in Europe," Miller said. "I hope my playing days aren't over just yet."

One Step Closer Women Gain Respect With 18-10 Season

Bowling Green's women's basketball team cut a few records during the 1985-86 season, but fell from the charts at the MidAmerican Conference tournament.

The 67-64 loss to Central Michigan finished BG's season at $18-10$, tying the school record for victories in a season.

The Falcons also went down as the most accurate shooting team in BG history, shooting .482 from the field and .683 from the free-throw line this season.

Under second-year head coach Fran Voll, the Falcons finished in a secondplace tie in the MAC regular season with CMU. In four previous seasons of MAC competition, BG had finished fifth on three occassions and tied for fourth on the other.
"Any team would like to win its conference," Voll said. "But I thought we did a good job of making a run at it week in and week out."

Voll and his cagers brought respect back to the BG women's basketball program, as the team and individual records continued to pile up.

The Falcons led the MAC in team defense, allowing 66.3 points per game.

While the team managed a few records, some individual players shared the limelight throughout the season.

The biggest story came from one of the smallest cities in Ohio. Jackie Motycka lit up the scoreboard as well as a few faces in Anderson Arena, on her way to swiping MAC freshman of the year honors.
"Jackie improved at a faster rate in this league than we anticipated," Voll said. "We knew she'd be a good one. She had an outstanding season."

The Convoy native scored a school record 472 points during the season, and finished just 14 points shy of the conference record for points in a season by a freshman.

Motycka hit double figures in 26 of 28 games, setting a school record for points in a game with 32 against Ball State on January 29.

The 6-0 forward also set a school record for field goals in a season with 186.

The only thing she didn't set was the table.

Motycka was rewarded for her '85-86 performance, when she became just the second freshman ever to be named to the all-MAC first team.

Onward and upward to Joelyn Shoup - with the emphasis falling on the latter.

The BG captain missed a few games with an ankle injury, but still managed to grab the school record for rebounds in a career with 923.

Shoup led the MAC in rebounds, snaring 10 a game. She also owns the BG record for rebounds in a game with 24 against Northern Illinois last season, as well as the record for rebounds in a season with 339.

The 6-0 center said the season had a bittersweet ending for her.
"It was great to make it to the tournament after trying so hard the past four years," Shoup said. "But losing the first game was very disappointing. We didn't anticipate losing it."
However, Shoup and Rhonda Moore are the only graduating seniors on the squad.
"We will be losing two fine players who had great careers here," Voll said. "I hope the young people who saw action this year will step forward and have a bigger impact next year."

When the '85-86 season came to an end, BG had set a school record for most wins ever in the conference with 13.

VOLL

Success seems to follow Fran Voll wherever he goes, but you won't get Bowling Green's women's basketball coach to admit it.

Instead, his record speaks for itself.
Before becoming the Falcons' mentor, Voll coached Delphos St. Johns High School (Ohio) for nine years, posting a 208-17 record. According to USA TODAY, Voll's winning percentage of .924 is the best ever for high school coaches.

In his first season at BG's helm, 1984, Voll led the Falcons to a 12-13 overall record and a 9-9 Mid-American Conference mark. This year, Voll and BG improved to $18-10$ overall and $13-5$ in the MAC, tying a school-record for conference wins in a season.
"Fran Voll is Mr. Women's basketball to Bowling Green," athletic director Jack Gregory said. "He has done an excellent job developing our program as one of the best in the MAC.
"I forsee in a short time that he will have this program nationally ranked."

But when Voll took over, he never set any unreachable goals or promised anything.
"I try not to set any goals that may be too unrealistice to be met or disrupting if not met," Voll said. "I really just wanted to build a solid foundation from which to work from."

It only took a year for Voll and the Falcons to reach the MAC tournament, the first time BG has ever qualified for the tourney. Despite an opening-game loss, the program has advanced in leaps and bounds.
"From a coaching standpoint, I'm very satisfied," he said. "I'm even more happy for the four girls who have graduated in the two years I've been here."

But once you have a formula for success, you don't tinker with things that much. Voll said he's the same coach he was in high school.
"I've tried to keep the two jobs seperate," he said. "I'm still doing a lot of the same things. I haven't changed as a coach. It's not fair to myself to try and look back and compare. They are two different worlds."

However, Voll did say treating the players is a key.
"As coaches, we are still educators," the veteran coach said. "Most players will respond if the coach is forthright. But you have to get to know each player, they are all different.
"Some you can yell at, some you can't. You have to show concern for your people."

And when dealing with players and recruiting Voll always tries to remember to be himelf.
"That's the number one thing," Voll said. "Because kids can see right through you."

In the future, Voll definitely would like to win the MAC and possibly more.
"I would like to win the conference and then the tournament," he said. "If we keep our noses to the grindstone I think that is realistic.
"You have to take the good and the bad, but never be satisfied. I don't like to sit back and say what if."

And although, he's already proven to be successful in BG and will most likely go down as one of its best women basketball coaches ever, Voll won't forget where he came from.
"I always say you're happy in the spot your'e in," he said. "And I am. "I have great memories of my high school teams. That can never be taken away from me."

Lackluster Season  Injuries plague defending champs

The toughest battle for the 1986 edition of Bowling Green's gymnastics team was the fight against a series of injuries to key performers.

The Falcons, however, overcame this obstacle just in time to conclude the season with a strong third-place finish in the MidAmerican Conference championships.
"We hau more than our share of injuries for one season," BG coach Charles Simpson said. "It was an uphill battle all year, but the girls just kept plugging away and everyone always gave 110 percent."

Before the season even got under way, things began to turn sour for the Falcons.

Sophomores Gretchen VanHaitsma and Maria Dechiara, key members who helped BG win last year's MAC crown, were lost to season-ending knee injuries.

The misfortune did not stop there, however. The Falcon tumblers would soon find the road to success blocked with many more obstacles.

BG senior Shelley Staley, juniors Tiffany Kosmerl and Ellen Dicola, sophomore Lisa Shulman, and freshman Cathy Benson also had their problems staying healthy during the year.

Added to the list of Falcon's woes was the loss of sophomore Gayle Bolek who transferred to another school early in the season.

After a season-opening loss to Kent State, Simpson said his BG squad "needed a little push to get us going."

Not surprisingly, it was Falcon Shelley Staley who provided the boost her team needed by placing second in the all-around competition. Who better than the team's lone senior and captain to come through in a time of need?

While others might loathe the pressure Staley faced this year, she seemed excitedwith the challenge.
"Being the only senior and captain, of course, meant a lot of pressure," she said. "But I felt it was an honor to be in such a position."

After a lopsided win over Valparaiso, the Falcons regressed to their losing ways. The win over the Crusaders was followed by losses to Missouri, Illinois, Ball State, Pittsburgh, Eastern Michigan, Michigan, Northern Michigan, and Michigan State.

But in the last loss, there was a glimmer of hope.
When just about everyone had counted the Falcons out in the MAC meet the following week, Simpson saw new life in his team.

"The MSU meet was our best performance of the year (BG scored a 174.9)," he said. "It proved to the girls they can do well.
"We still have a chance at the MAC. We're not down the drain yet."

Simpson's prophetic statements proved true as the Falcons, winners of the crown three of the last five years, surprised everyone by scoring a 178.45 to finish third.

This meet also qualified the Falcons for the NCAA Northeast

Staley led the charge on the MAC opposition with a season team-high of 36.1 in the all-around to capture fourth. Staley and teammate Kosmerl also had an identical score of 9.3 on the floor exercise to finish third.

Kosmerl alsc tallied a 9.3 on the balance beam to finish second. Both gymnasts were named to the All-MAC team for the second consecutive year.

Other key contributors, who helped fight to overcome BG's problems, were Shulman and Kris Byerly who were consistently the team's top all-arounders.
"We relied heavily on some of our younger and more inexperienced gymnasts this year," Simpson said. "They reponded very well under some pressure situations and did a fine job for us."

Many people say success and a true champion is not measured in wins and losses, but in the character of the team.

If this is true, the Falcons more than proved their worth by never giving up even when the situation looked bleakest.

Respectability

In the 1985-86 season, head coach Rich Draper continued to lead the Bowling Green men's swimming team toward respectablity. After numerous consecutive years in the lower half of the eight team conference, the Falcons finished fourth for the second year in a row. Their 341.5 points left them just behind Ohio University with 356.6 .

The Falcons had only one diver, but Deny Morlino was diving for the first time ever. As a result, the swimmers were constantly forced to make up 14 points in their dual meets.

BG was 2-3 in MAC dual meets and 4-6 overall. They also competed in the Illinois Invitational and finished second of five in the Mini-MAC.

In the conference meet, the tankers swamped eight former school records. Dan Ersely set a new standard in the 500-yard freestyle and Les Szekely broke the old 200 individual medley record. Bob Walker swam a school best in the 100 butterfly while placing second. And Dean Shaw now holds the Falcon mark in the 1650 freestyle. Also, Tim Wagner set a new record in the 200 backstroke preliminaries only to have Chris Birnbrich break it in the finals.

Dane Burton, Tom Griga, Walker and Birnbrich teamed to set a new mark in the 400 freestyle. Burton, Birnbrich, Griga and Pete Szekely sent the Falcon record books to the press with a blue chip performance in the 800 freestyle relay.

The tankers nearly overcame the fact they did not have any competing divers. OU received over 25 points in the diving. Draper was pleased with the tanker's performance.
"Sure, it's disappointing to miss by 15 points, but look at all the good things," he said. "We broke eight school records, numerous personal lifetime bests and, especially on the third night of competition, the guys swam better than ever before."

Birnbrich, Les and Pete Szekely, Tom McGannon, Dave Pershing, Greg Charbeneau and Rick Reynolds will be graduating. But Draper is optimistic about next year.
"Our seniors swam well and we'll miss them, but freshmen Wagner, Griga, (Jim) Jensen and (Greg) Wolff will give us a strong nucleus next year," Draper said. "And we've got a few guys who didn't make the traveling team who are going to be strong. We're also talking to some fine recruits."

Everything points to a continued improvement in the tankers' performance. A breath of fresh air for Falcon Swimming.

Still Second to One

With a strong balance of youth and experience, the 1985-86 Bowling Green women's swimming team looked to have a good chance of ending the Miami Redskins' four year dominance of the MidAmerican Conference.

The lady tankers looked strong as the season began. Their most impressive performance came at the Illinois Invitational at the University of Illinois in Champaign. There, the Falcons paced a field which included several Big Ten teams and the ever-powerful Redskins.

However, the optimism began to sour in February when BG traveled to Oxford to challenge the dreaded Red Wave. The Falcons fell prey to a hungry Miami team as the Redskins dunked coach Rich Draper's squad to the tune of a 90-50 score.

BG finished the regular season with an impressive 8-2 mark. Their only other loss came at the hands and feet of a strong University of Cincinnati team.

Draper and the Falcons approached the MAC meet at Ohio University as an opportunity to vindicate themselves. Unfortunately, it was not to be as BG finished as the bridesmaid for the fifth straight year.
"We had nine or ten girls just swim great, but the others didn't rise to the occasion," Draper said. "Some of the girls were just negatively affected by those red swim suits."

Andrea Szekely broke four school and three individual MAC records at the meet. She also combined with Dawn Grant, Pam Reinhart, and Beth Ricketts to set a school record in the 400-yard medley relay. Next she combined with Maureen Kelly, Sheila Westendorf and Ricketts to set a school record in the 800 freestyle relay. Finally, she combined with Kelly, Ricketts and Annette Agee to set a school record in the freestyle relay.

Although they didn't win the meet, the lady tankers swept the individual awards.

Beth Ricketts was named the MAC's Outstanding Senior Swimmer, Szekely was named Outstanding Swimmer and Mary Pfeiffer was named Diver of the Year.

Pfeifer, a sophomore, set conference marks in the one and three-meter events while winning both at the MAC. She also qualified for the NCAA championships in the one-meter competition.

Phil Masturzo

Draper said the team will begin next year with a strong contingent of returning freshmen led by Szekely, Kelly and Suzanne Church. However, the Falcons lost seven seniors. It will take a strong recruiting year for BG to scalp the Redskins next year as Miami lost only three.

Right: Junior Paula Holmes is a model of concentration on her way to a victory in the backstroke.

Top right: Senior Kristen Greene bobs out of the water as she competes in the butterfly.

Andrea Szekely is the fourth and mostrecent Bowling Green swimmer to come from the same family.

However, the freshman sensation isn't riding anyone's shirttails; she has made a name for herself. And she has brought national attention to herself and BG in the process.

Twins Les and Pete Szekely just recently finished their Mid-American Conference swimming careers. Brother Alex will be a senior next year. With a combined 11 seasons of MAC experience under their belts, the Szekely brothers have established a legend no Falcon swimming fan will soon forget.

Their younger sister is establishing a legend of her own.

In her first college dual meet this season, she broke two school records. In the MAC championships, she set school records in the 100-yard butterfly, the 200 butterfly, the 200 individual medley and the 200 freestyle. Three were MAC records.

Andrea's time in the 100 butterfly was good enough to qualify her for the NCAA championships in Fayetteville, Ark. She and BG diver Mary Pfeiffer were the only two women to represent the MAC.

Also, earlier in the season, she set a school record in the 500 freestyle. She swam on three relay teams which set school marks at the conference meet. For her efforts, Andrea was named MAC Swimmer of the Year.

She has been at home in the water for nearly 10 years.
"I started swimming when I was seven or eight. I've been swimming year round since I was $10, "$ the education major said. "All my brothers were competing and I had to be just like them."

There is a difference between Andrea and most swimmers.
"She was obviously born with natural talent and she works very hard," Les said. "She is a great competitor. Some people fold under pressure, she peaks under pressure."

Although she was recruited by swimming powers like Auburn, Southern Illinois and Alabama, the BG native decided there's no place like home.
"The coaching is really good; I like (head coach) Rich (Draper) and Don (Luikart). Plus, I'm an education major and BG's really good for that," the Falcon freshman said.

"All the other big schools were so far away and we have a pretty close family. Every MAC school wrote and I decided if I was going to stay in the MAC, I would stay in Bowling Green."

Draper is glad she did.
"Having a swimmer with her talent will help recruit other quality swimmers," the former lowa assistant said. "She's also given our program a bigger name by qualifying for the NCAA's."

Andrea is no stranger to national competition. Last year, she competed in the United States Senior Nationals and she has competed in the junior nationals four times.
"It helps to have been there (national meet) before, but it's my first time at the NCAA's and I'll be a little nervous," she said. "I remember the junior nationals in 1984. I was seeded first in the 100 fly and it was outdoors."
"There was a storm coming and the wind was blowing. I was real nervous, but I got everything under control and won."

Andrea has some business to take care of before she leaves BG.
"I want to be in the top eight (in the NCAA) in the 200 fly and the top three in the 100 fly. I also want to qualify in the 200 freestyle," she said. "And I want to beat Miami in the MAC. The Olympics are always in the back of my mind."

Andrea said she despises getting up at 5:30 a.m. to train, and she often gets tired of working so hard. But with an attitude like her's, it's tough to lose.
"It's all worth it in the end. If you work real hard during the season, it will pay off," she said. "And if you don't win, as long as you gave it your best shot it's worth it."

Subpar Season

Bowling Green's men's golf team started slow, gained some impressive finishes, and then hit into a sand trap to end the season.

After placing in the middle of the pack in the first five meets, the Falcons finished second in the Kent State Invitational and Barney Francis Memorial. But second place seemed a mile away for BG in its final three matches.

At the Mid-American Invitational and the Northern Intercollegiate the Falcons finished 20 out of 21 teams. In the MAC championships, they were dead last.

Bowling Green's scoring leader was Rob Barsantee with a 76.8 average. Guy Newton averaged 78.5 for second-best on the team.

Other strong contributors for Greg Nye's team was Greg Wallace, Mike Clark, Dan Conner and Pat Bryan.

Linksters in the Rough

After a strong fall season, the women's golf team ended the spring on a sour note.
In the fall, Bowling Green had two third-place finishes and a pair of fifthplace showings. But in the spring they managed a fourth in the 10 -team Lady Lion Invitational and were last in the seven-team Lady Buckeye Invitational.

Co-captain Claire Batista had the top showing in the fall for the Falcons with a 54-hole total of 229 in the Michigan State Spartan Invitational. She also recorded a 236 in the fall. Geralyn Repasky had the third-best score for the season with 238.

Batista led BG at the Lady Lion with a 36 -hole total of 160 . But in the Lady Buckeye, junior Jenny Hjalmquist had a 54-total of 261.

First-year coach Greg Nye had a full season under his belt and will be returning five of the top seven golfers.

Batista and fellow co-captain TerryGruner will be the only two seniors lost from the squad, which is mainly made up of juniors.

Amed andigerous

At the start of the season, Bowling Green softball coach Gail Davenport said the Falcons had the potential to win the Mid-American Conference title.

But when it came down to it, the Falcons didn't have the luck to pull off the championship.

Central Michigan won the regular-season title with a 16-2 record and won the tournament with a 5-1 win over Ohio University.

However, BG finished second in the MAC with a 10-6 record and was 28-21-1 overall. The Falcons were eliminated in the semi-finals of the MAC tournament by OU 3-2.

It was BG's best overall record and MAC record since Daveport took over the team in 1984.

Phil Masturzo
BG was in the top four in the conference in batting (.240), fielding (.949) and earned run average (1.27).

The Falcons also placed a league-leading six players on the All-MAC softball team. Freshman pitcher Vicki Miwa, senior catcher Kathy Fisher, senior shortstop Sandy Krebs, senior third baseman Laura Silverstein, sophomore outfielder Amy Lienhardt, and junior designated hitter Mary Kay Bryan were selected to the team.

Miwa finished the year with a 15-8 record, with 136 strikeouts and a stellar 0.69 earned run average. She allowed just 90 hits in 171 innings.

Fisher repeated as All-MAC after batting .349 with 10 doubles and 23 runs batted in. Krebs closed out her career by leading the Falcons with a .351 average.

Silverstein finished fourth in the league with four triples and provided outstanding defense at the "hot corner" for the Falcons.

Lienhardt finished fifth in the MAC with a .346 batting average and led the conference in runs scored (32) and stolen bases (23). She said she gained a lot of confidence after her freshman year.
"I came back for my sophomore year ready to play," Lienhardt said. "I had a year of college fastpitch softball under my belt which made it much easier this year."

Bryan doubled as a pitcher for the Falcons and finished the year with the second-best record on the team to Miwa. She also was second on the team in runs batted in.

While the MAC season was a highlight for BG, a 1-0 win over nationally-ranked Creighton University at the Northern Iowa Tournament ranked right up there for the Falcons.
"That was a big win for us," Davenport said. "But I wish we would have went farther in the tournanment."

BG finished its first round with a 5-0 mark, but was eliminated in the second round, 5-4 by Mankato State.

Towards the end of the season the Falcons beat the University of Akron 4-0 and tied 2-2. Last season, Akron went to the national championships.

BG will be losing a good portion of its infield to graduation, but pitchers Miwa, Byran and Edith Campbell will be a solid nucleus for Davenport to build upon.

When a Canadian athlete, complete with glove and mask, comes to Bowling Green, fans expect to see them perform in the Ice Arena

But Kathy Fisher carries a bat not a hockey stick.

For four years, the Grimsby, Ont. native has anchored the Falcon softball team. Her duties mostly involved catching, but she was not always home behind the plate.
"We were in the Ontarios, which are like state playoffs, and I was playing second base," Fisher said. "My mind started to wander and I was looking at some birds; then someone hit a ball right by me. The next game, coach put me at catcher to keep my mind in the game."

The move turned out to be a profitable one. Fisher played well enough to earn an athletic scholarship at BG and also earned a spot on Team Canada.

She said coming "over the border" for college was something she's never regretted.
"I loved coming to school in the States, there's a good emphasis on the studentathlete," Fisher said. "It's not all sports, you had to get good grades, too.
"There's so much enthusiasm in college in the States, you just don't find that back home, it's much more oriented to academics, there are no scholarships."

Fisher has earned her keep at BG. In four years, she has played 170 games, hit .300 with 67 RBI. She also earned first team all-MAC honors as a junior and senior. Fisher even dabbled in pitching, amassing a 8-8 record and a 3.34 ERA.

But when she arrived at BG, Fisher's timidness almost convinced former coach Sandy Haines she wasn't going to be productive. But Fisher proved her worth.
"I didn't want to work to hard and make everybody think I was a hot shot kid who knew everything," Fisher said. "But (roommate Sandy) Krebs told her to give me a chance. So coach put me in at designated hitter and in my first game I hit the scoreboard (for a homerun).
"When I came here, I figured I wouldn't play but I found my experience was more than some of the other players."

Those same fears plagued Fisher when trying out for Team Canada. In fact, her lack of confidence wouldn't let her believe she was actually asked to the try out camp.
"I came home early from work and (Team Canada coach) Chick Kennedy called and asked me to come to the try out camp," Fisher said. "I thought it was a prank; he said he would mail me a plane ticket and some information and I didn't believe him. But three days later, it came."

That wasn't the end of the odyssey, however. She only took enough clothes to last her the stay in New Jersey and making the team caught her by surprise.

After camp broke, the team flew to Los Angeles for the Women's International Cup. During a layover in Toronto, she had to call home to have more clothes sent out. Fisher played with Team Canada in Los Angeles and New Zealand and is preparing for the Pan Am games in Indianapolis this year. She may even end up in the Olympics in 1988.

"I never thought of myself as being one of the best in the country, it's a gift," Fisher said.

After four years at BG, Fisher said she has plenty of memories to take with her after graduation.
"It was a great academic and athletic experience," she said. "I tried to make as much of it as I could, it was great to play with friends. You only get as much out of it as you put into it."

Falcon netters gain respect; finish three games above . 500

Going into the season, Bowling Green's men's tennis coach Bob Gill and his netters had two things in mind to gain respect, and learn a few lessons.
After being picked to finish near at the bottom of the Mid-American Conference, the team finished the season 14-11 overall and 2-5 in the MAC. However, the Falcon netters still finished seventh.

But on the bright side, BG will only be losing senior captain Mark Tinnemeyer. Tinnemeyer finished the year at 14-11. The rest of the lineup will remain intact.

Junior Rick Boysen had a stellar year at first singles, finishing the year with a 13-9 record. He teamed with fellow junior Mike Cansfield at first doubles to compile an 8-10 mark.

Perhaps the biggest surprise for Gill was the play of sophomore Ken Bruce. Playing at sixth singles, Bruce finished the year with an outstanding 18-6 mark.

Also contributing were freshmen Andy Salle and Peter Ellsworth. Sallee had a 12-11 record while Ellsworth compiled a 12-13 mark. Sallee also was 4-0 in doubles action.

With a strong returning cast, Gill won't have to worry about gaining respect from opponents, he'll just have to add up the victories.

MAC Championship - 7th of 8

Injuries Plague Women Netters

Bowling Green's women's tennis coach June Stack should change her title to doctor because last season she dealt with more injuries than an emergency room on a good day.

Due to numerous injuries, the netters finished the season with a 5-17 mark overall and an 0-7 Mid-American Conference record. The Falcons finished dead last at the MAC championships.

A bright spot for BG was the play of senior co-captian Lyn Brooks. Brooks teamed with junior co-captain Korey Kerscher at first doubles as consolation winners at the MAC tournament. Brooks was named to the All-MAC team for her efforts.

The Falcons started the season by winning their first three matches of the season, but then the deluge of injuries caused the netters to drop 17 of their next 19 matches.
Freshman Sarah Jo Griffith led the team with a 4-10 record, including a 4-7 mark at fifth singles.

At times during the season, it appeared the Falcons were going to have trouble fielding a squad due to the injuries. Many times, players had to play injured.
The key for the squad in the future will be a clean bill of health. With only one senior graduating, the materials are there for a comeback.

In the meantime, the Falcons will have to lick their wounds from a disappointing and injury-filled season.

False-Start Falcons

After an outstanding dual meet season, it appeared Bowling Green's men's track team was ready to challenge for the top spot in the Mid-American Conference.

But at the MAC meet, the Falcons finished a disappointing seventh. Eastern Michigan ran away with the title capturing 195 points.

BG had beaten Ball State, Miami, Toledo, and Kent State in dual meets. The only loss was to EMU.
The Falcons' best finish at the MAC meet was pole vaulter Jim Kovatch's third-place. Long jumper Kenny Rankin also took third, as did the 400-meter relay team.

Chris Plescia finished fourth in the discus as did John Austin in the 100 dash. Scott Wargo and Dave Mora grabbed fifth place in the distance runs.

At the first invitational meet of the year, BG finished first out of seven teams at the Marshall Early Bird Relays.

However, coach Tom Wright's Falcons failed to qualify anyone to go to the NCAA championships.

Austin had team bests in the 100, 200, and 400 dashes. Randy Schmidt also was tops on the team in three events the 110 high hurdles, the 400 intermediate hurdles and the javelin.

Willie Gault, Ron Brown, Renaldo Nehemiah . . it seems the list of ex- track stars who have jumped to football is endless. Add Bowling Green's Kenny Rankin to the list.

But for Rankin, competing in two sports is old hat. In fact, the sophomore, multitalented athlete would be lost without sports.
"I did both in high school and also played basketball," Rankin said. "But it is a lot more different here than in high school."

The biggest difference would be the presence of spring football, and Rankin couldn't do a vanishing act from the gridiron in March.

With a new coach and a somewhat new offense to learn with rookie quarterbacks, the speedy wide receiver couldn't miss spring football. But in the process, Rankin missed a few weeks of track practice.

Rankin will play a more prominent role for the football team with the graduation of wide receivers Stan Hunter, Greg Meehan and Joe Boxley. Rankin is the only returning letterman at wide receiver.
"If there was no coaching change I probably wouldn't have had to participate in spring ball," Rankin said. "But coach Ankney understood because he had some guys run track at Arizona. I'm a projected starter so I wanted to be at spring ball."

But in the meantime, he still found a way to stay sharp in the long jump. In a dual meet he jumped 24-71/2 after virtually no practice. At the prestigous Jesse Owens Classic at Ohio State University, Rankin finished third with a jump of 25-71/2 against national competition.
"I really don't find a lot of problems in track," he said. "I'm a natural jumper in track. I really don't need that much practice.
"But in football, I find my rhythm is off if I don't practice," Rankin said. "At times I found I couldn't catch a cold let alone a football."

The 5 -foot-11, 165 -pounder has 4.3 speed in the 40-yard dash, but he said he wouldn't be that fast if it wasn't for track.
"As a frosh I came in running a 4.6 and now I consistently run a 4.3 ," he said. "It comes from running and working out with the track team."

Since he is on a partial scholarship for both sports, he can't really give one up.
"I'm obligated to fulfill my duties to both sports, but it is something I love to do," he said. "I would find it hard to give either one up."

And while competing in both sports, he also makes time for grades. The interpersonal communications major is a 3.0 plus student, something he takes great pride in.
"The sports are for me, but the grades are for me and my parents," Rankin said. "They look forward to me getting good grades. If I don't play sports after I graduate, I'll always have my degree."

Rankin said his participation in sports helps discipline him for the classroom.
"I find myself doing better in classes here than when I was in high school," he said.
"Sports really has disciplined me for homework. Some way or another it all fits in. I have a lot of late nights. I want people to believe that there is such a thing as a student-athlete."

And just like any other person, Rankin has his dreams.
"I hope to possibly play in the National Football League some day," Rankin said. "What are dreams for? You try to make them come true."

But he also is realistic in his goals and why he has had so much success.
"I attribute all my success to a power greater than the earth," he said. "I'm blessed with talent from God. God gives me the motivation. I can take no credit."

Marginal Improvement

A goal of any team from year to year is to improve. Even if that means bettering on a first-place record or moving up from last place.

Last spring, the women's track team didn't cause buildings to crumble, but they improved, if ever so slightly.

After finishing fifth in the Mid-American Conference the year before, Bowling Green moved up a notch last spring.

Freshman Melissa Cole placed second in the 100 -meter dash and Alaine Emens grabbed a second in the high jump.

Sara Collas, Karen Centolo, Cole, and the 400 and 1,600 relays captured third place for the Falcons.

Throughout the season, though, it was Collas who was grabbing all the headlines. She had a six-week string of breaking school records. Collas led the team in the $3,000,5,000$ and 10,000 runs.

The diminutive senior qualified for the NCAA championships in the very first meet of the year. She also qualified in cross country.

The squad finished first out of seven teams in the Marshall Early Bird Relays and ninth out of 19 teams in the Becky Boone Relays. They had a 1-1 dualmeet record.

Kerry Bostelman also set a school record in the triple jump with a 34 -foot$111 / 2$ effort.

Pi Beta Phi The New Greek on the Block

Being the newest addition to the 17 sororities already established on campus, Pi Beta Phi hopes to be an important part of the greek system. "We want to be an important part of campus and contribute as much as we can," said Kathy Vollmer, advisor of the Pi Beta Phis.
In January, Pi Beta Phi was a colony with 95 pledges. When these 95 pledges became actives in April, Pi Beta Phi was installed as a chapter and admitted into the greek council.

The first nationally established fraternity for women, Pi Beta Phi, formerly I.C. Sorosis, was founded at Monmouth College in Monmouth, Ill., on April 28, 1867. Nancy Black Wallace, one of the 12 founders, chose the greek words Pi Beta Phi in 1888. The meaning behind the greek words Pi Beta Phi is one of the many secrets of the sorority.
Being the new sorority on campus, Pi Beta Phi offers its 95 pledges an opportunity to develop an image that suits them, said Vollmer. "The girls could make it what they want."

Pi Beta Phi is composed of a well-rounded group of women
(freshmen, sophomore and juniors) with many different interests. "These girls were chosen because they seemed hardworking and committed which is important for a new chapter on campus," Vollmer said.

The arrow, Pi Beta Phi's official symbol; their motto, I.C. Sorosis; their colors, wine and blue; and their flower, wine carnation, all have special meanings to the women of Pi Beta Phi, but the meanings remain a secret that only they share.

Pi Beta Phi's unofficial symbol, the angel, became popular in the late 1930s when songs and skits depicting Pi Phis as angels were used during rush.

Pi Beta Phi was the first sorority to have its own philanthropic project. The Pi Beta Phis national philanthropy project includes the Settlement School, Arrowcraft and Arrowmont in Gatlinburg, Tenn.

Pi Beta Phi established The Settlement School in the Appalachian Mountains to honor the founders and because it was one area that needed assistance, Vollmer said. The Settlement

School is an elementary school and high school for children who live in the Appalachian Mountains.

Also located in the Appalachian Mountains is The Arrowcraft shop which is the largest cottage weaving industry in the United States. The sale of native crafts through the shop provides an income for the impoverished mountain crafts people.

Arrowmont, which refers to the Arrowmont School of Arts and Crafts, was established to secure and use the trademarks from the articles sold at the the Arrowcraft Shop. Arrowmont attracts people from all over the world to study crafts skills and to increase their own craft techniques on a college level.

The Pi Phis will co-sponsor the Mud Tug with the Sig Eps in the Fall to raise money for Sigma Phi Epsilon's local philanthropy, Vollmer said.
"One of the goals of the Pi Phis is to become a cohesive group in the Panhel Council," said Vollmer.
Phi Beta Phi rush took place at the Kappa Kappa Gamma house and in the Union. Alumni from Toledo and Michigan, Pi Beta Phi's Grand Council and some of their national directors were here to help organize the rush.

The Alpha Gamma Delta sorority is consistently strong in athletic events on campus, winning the Beta 500 three years in a row and the Sigma Phi Epsilon Mud Tug.

In addition to selling Cookie Grams for Valentines day, the Alpha Gamma Deltas began a new project this year, "Jam with the Gams," to support both their philanthropies, the Juvenile Diabetes Foundation and Woodlane Schools.
This year, the sorority sponsored a pledge picnic in conjunction with Delta Tau Delta fraternity. The event took place during Greek Week and allowed both sorority and fraternity pledges a chance to get acquainted.

The Alpha Phis encourage individuality and are active in many campus activities. The Alpha Phis have many firsts to boost, among them are the fact that they were the first sorority house on campus and operate the largest philanthropy. Their philanthropy, Florida Fling, is a campus wide raffle and beer blast done in conjunction with the Alpha Sigma Phi fraternity. This year the Florida Fling raised $$ 3,900$ for the Heart Fund.

Academics play an important role for the Alpha Phis. This year their hard work paid off at the the 1985 fall Panhellenic scholarship desserts when the Alpha Phis received three outstanding awards: The highest active grade point average, the most improved chapter and the highest overall grade point average.

The Alpha Phis also sponsor International Christmas, a faculty and administration reception, and a Halloween party for Woodlane School.

Alpha Sigma Phi

Alpha Sigma Phi seeks to aid in the development of individuals, as is seen in their motto, "To Better the Man."

The Alpha Sigs take part in two philanthropy projects. The Florida Fling, the largest philanthropy on campus, is a raffle and beer blast they co-sponsor with the Alpha Phis. The proceeds from the Florida Fling go to the Heart Fund.

They also spend a day with the orphans from St. Anthony's Villa.

Alpha Sigma Phi Little Sis'

The Alpha Sigma Phi Little Sisters aid the Alpha Sigma Phi fraternity with all of their philanthropic projects, including bringing children from the Maumee Valley Orphanage and the Sunshine Home to the campus for a day of fun.

The little sisters also participate in the other philanthropic events on campus on their own. This fall, they won the Phi Kappa Si Bathtub Races.

Beta Theta Pi

Beta Theta Pi sponsors the annual Beta 500. The event is one of the most popular Greek events, raising money for different charities each year. This year the proceeds went to the Statue of Liberty Fund. A celebrity host is invited each year to host the event.

Delta Tau Delta

Delta Tau Delta has many projects for philanthropy and community service. Along with their particiation in "Clean Up B.G. Day," the Delts shovel snow for elderly residents during the winter. To benefit the Arthritis Foundation, the fraternity sponsors the Delta Tau Delta Annual Football Tourney and co-sponsors the "Show off your tan party" with Alpha Xi Delta.

Delta Tau Deltas have been the all-sports champs three of the last five years. They were also the first runner-up for the Most Outstanding Chapter in 1984.

Kappa Delta

The Kappa Deltas continue to work for their national philanthropies, the Children's Home in Richmond, Va., and the National Prevention for Child Abuse.
The sorority also received the Panhellenic Scholarship for the most improved chapter fall of 1985 .

Pi Kappa Phi

Pi Kappa Phi is proud of its nationally founded philanthropic project, P.U.S.H (Play Units for the Severely Handicapped). The project is a week-long variety of events including a 100 -hour wheelchair P.U.S.H.-A-Thon. During this week, the Pi Kapps raised over $$ 3,700$ while increasing public awareness of the handicapped.

In the spring of $1985, \mathrm{Pi}$ Kapa Phi received the Hollis A. Moore Service Award for out standing campus and community service.

The Falcon Rugby Team finished their 36th consecutive winning season in the Fall with a 25-2-2 record. This gave them a 1985 record of 47-5-4. Their high-powered offense scored a record 671 points, while their defense had 21 shutouts. Rob Clark set a single season scoring record with 11 points and Mark Laimbeer tied the single game point record with 21 points. The Rugby Team finished the year ranked fourth in the nation, second in the Midwest and first in Ohio.

Student Athletic Board

The Student Athletic Board represents the student body and its concerns to the Athletic Department. Likewise, the SAB has helped transmit back to the students the Athletic Department responses to these concerns.
The board works to research and/or define issues and problems that reflect the concerns of the general student body. The SAB also helps raise the visibility of non-revenue sports to the student body by distributing announcements, programs at contests and flyers promoting these sports on campus, as well as attending these sports as a group encouraging the Falcon spirit.

Student Consumer Union

The Student Consumer Union was formed to maximize the well-being of University students concerning issues of consumer affairs which affect them in the Bowling Green Community and surrounding areas.

They help out hundreds of students each year with their mediating service between landlord and tenant problems. They also have complaint files on various landlords and apartments so students are better iniormed when they decided to move off campus.

Volunteers In Progress is designed to provide students with the opportunity to volunteer their time and gain meaningful experience through interaction with the community. There are five programs: Adopt-A-Grandparent, Campus Sisters, Campus Brothers, Campus Friends, Sunshine Children's Home and the Friendly Service Program.

Who's Who

The members of Who's Who are those students who have demonstrated outstanding qualities, been involved in campus and community activities and shown above-average academic achievements.

Once these students have been nominated by the University, their names and achievements are sent to national headquarters where potential members are examined and selected by a panel of judges.

Women's Soccer

Womens Soccer is a university club sport open to all those interested in the sport.

Their schedule this year included 10 games against universities in Ohio and Michigan. They took third place in a tournament at Ohio State last fall.

Coach Dimitri Lourbas led them to a $6-4$ record this year. Kim Heckler and Ann Dewitt were co-captain of this year's team.

BACK TO THE FUTURE

Phil Masturzo

The 1986 KEY Staff

Front Row: Janet Stuckey, Julieanne Bell, Danielle Fischer (who is making her third appearance at Howard's Club-H in as many years; honest Mom!), Liz Allen, Phil Masturzo (in his home away from home; oh, well, Mom.), Diane Youssef (who has never felt more at home; sorry, Mom!), Donna Wennerstrom, and Vince "Odie" Walter . Back Row: Key Volunteer Staff.

Murphy's Law

he entire reign as yearbook editor seemed to revolve around the famous law devised by Murphy-"If anything can go wrong, it will." And it did!

From day one, Murphy's law hovered over 28 West Hall like a mushroom cloud over a nuclear explosion. After four senior portrait photographers, three sports editors, three photo lab technicians, two business editors, and two scheduling editors, I was beginning to feel like New York Yankee owner George Steinbrenner.

In spite of all of these obstacles, there were exceptions to the law. The KEY still managed to meet every deadline to the printer ahead of schedule. It was through the hard work and dediication of a few staff members and friends that the book managed to be successful. I will always be in debt to those who stood out as the exceptional. They are the ones who have made this year truely meaningful to me.

To sum it all up, there was an important job to be done and Everybody was asked to do it. Everybody was sure Somebody would do it. Anybody could have done it but Nobody did it. Somebody got angry about that because it was Everybody's job. Everybody thought Anybody could do it, but Nobody realized that Everybody wouldn't do it. It ended up that Everybody blamed Somebody when actually Nobody asked Anybody.

Danielle Fischer - You are an editor's dream. Without you, the KEY MVP, there wouldn't be a 1986 KEY, at least not until 1996. Thanks for all of your hard work and efforts and for keeping me in line all year. I will always be in debt to you. Oh, by the way, "don't worry, 'Ill handle it."

Vince 'Odie' Walter - You are the 1986 KEY Rookie of the Year. Don't ever lose your great attitude, as that will be the key to success no matter what you endeavor. Thanks for staying until the very end. It saved me a great deal of work. Good luck.

Julie Bell - You are a hard worker and always did more than I asked you to do. I would still be typing the copy if you hadn't done it. I'm sure you will be a big help with the 1987 KEY.

Janet Stucky - We shattered last year's sales by leaps and bounds. To me, that is a direct reflection of all of the hard work that you put into promotions. Thank you.

Donna Wennerstrom - After two previous years of great senior sections, I didn't have a worry in the world with you in charge. Best of luck always.

Ron Fritz - You are the ROLAIDS relief sports editor of the year. You definitely came through in the clutch. Thanks for comming back to finish the spring sports.

Tracy Parker - Thanks for scheduling and rescheduling and rescheduling and scheduling the greeks and groups. You did a great job.

Chris Schowalter - I think that you were in the office almost as much as I was. Judy and I appreciate all of the work that you did for the KEY. It didn't go unnoticed.

Judy Miller - I could always count you to rescue me from my moodiness with your cheerful attitude. Thanks for all of your help.

Volunteer staff - The 1986 KEY would have been impossible without all of the countless hours you spent in the office. Thank you.

Bob Bortel - I don't know how to thank you for all of your help, guidance and friendship. Thanks for always being there when I needed to regain my sanity.

Bill Brown - You are the busiest guy I know next to Jim Gordon, yet you always had time to lend me a hand or do me a favor. You always dropped what you were doing and got what I needed. You are a great friend.

Jim Gordon - You are the busiest guy I know! No matter how busy or the time of day, you always had time to get me out of a jam. I will never be able to repay you for all that you have given me over the last four years. You probably could have claimed me as an exemption. My success is a direct reflection of all you have done for me. Thank you.

Tom Reed and Karl Smith - I'll never forget all of the road trips to Muncie (shift! shift!), Dekalb (via Hammond, Indiana), Lexington (The Post), Fresno (hook me up), and El Segundo. Karl, good luck on the book next year. I'm sure that you will do a great job.

Marc Delph - You had the toughest job of anyone, being my roommate. Thanks for listening to all of my problems when I brought them home. "And the hangovers hurt more than they used to ..." Boy do I have a Quinnache! Diiiiiii... Oh, FN!

My parents - For the past 22 years you have given me love, support, and understanding. Even though we will be apart, I will always be grateful for everything you have done. Thanks for always being there when I needed you. I love you both.

Mel Parker - It's finally finished. The BOOK.
Phil Masturzo, Editor

As the 1986 KEY comes to a close and my senior year at Bowling Green is at an end, I would like to leave you with one last parting shot. This photo of 7 -year-old Kenny Hough watching the North Brentwood, Md., parade is one of my favorite photos. It is the last frame of endless rolls of film exposed while here at BGSU. - Phil Masturzo, Editor
