From varied regions and backgrounds of the world, the students of Bowling Green State University gather into a distinct community each academic year. During those few months, they share experiences that define their common identity.

The bitter BG winds of winter . . . and the ritual springtime gathering on the Ad Building's fountain. Beer blasts . . . happy hours . . . the sound of passing trains . . . and the rousing rhythm of the marching band. Jokes about Poe Ditch . . . dorm food . . . drop/add . . . the smokestack . . . Parking Services. The strain of exam week . . . and the dizzy feeling when the last exam is finished.

Such are the reflections we carry from this time, when we've had the option to follow traditions or listen to the flip side. This book reflects the unique quality of those elements as a reminder of what we have been.

LIVING

Conklin

By Jane Musgrave

Walking into Conklin Hall is like entering a foreign land in more ways than one.

Not only is the dormitory "home" for 15 foreign students, but the physical appearance of the dormitory is foreign to anyone who has visited a male residence hall and formed a stereotyped image of what such dormitories look like.

There are no beer cans cluttering Conklin's hallways. The water fountains, exit signs and clocks have not been dismantled. Stereos are not being played at full volume and the trash is generally in the trash cans.

The dorm boasts the lowest damage report record of all University male residence halls, according to Doug Anderson, the dorm's hall director.

The fourth floor of the dormitory is known as the International Floor. Each of the foreign students has an American roommate.

Coupling the students this way helps the foreign students assimilate into American lifestyles more easily, Anderson said. It also gives American students the opportunity to learn about the cultures of other countries through first-hand experience.

For a freshman who's never been away from home, living with four strangers in one room can be frightening. Many residents of the dorms of Founders Quadrangle face that dilemma.

The Founders Community Council (FCC) helps new residents overcome the alienation they may feel at first.

Composed of student residents, the FCC acts as a liaison between staff and students. The group plans activities and sponsors programs on such topics as drug awareness and birth control.

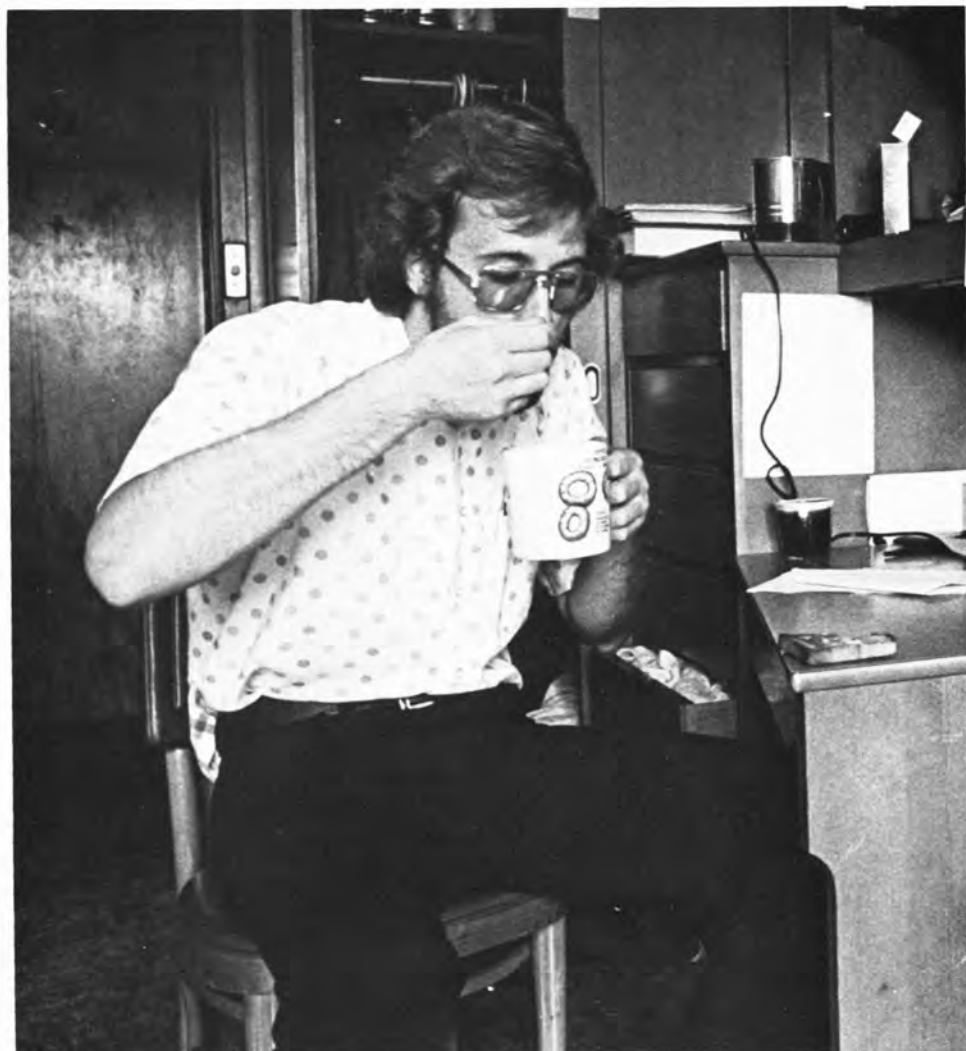

The programs are only part of the attraction of Founders Quad dorms.

"Founders is a fun, living-learning educational place to live," said Bev Baker, director of the quadrangle's Mooney Hall.

Residents of Founders find it's easy to make friends there, and for a freshman, that can be very important.

There's a special type of unity in Harshman Quadrangle.

Harshman, located halfway between Peregrine Pond and Wooster St., is a coed quad composed of male dorms Anderson and Bromfield, and female dorms Chapman and Dunbar.

"We definitely have a binding force of quad unity," said Jill Carr, hall director of Dunbar.

That binding force is the Quadrangle Programming Board, designed to bring together male and female residents through planned events. Activities include inter-dorm parties and educational programs with speakers who discuss topics from sports to sex.

Harshman residents are fortunate in another way: their quad houses two restaurants that are famous campus-wide.

The MidAm Room, a fast-food snack bar, is in the basement of Harshman. And the Strawberry Patch, a pancake house in Anderson Hall, is open to students and their guests every weekend.

They're part of the advantages that make Harshman Quadrangle a special place to live.

Hall Director Ted Nichols can't think of a single problem present in Kohl Hall, not even vandalism or excessive noise.

"I'm very pleased with the maturity of the students," Nichols said. Nichols believes there's a "self-selection process" that draws serious students to Kohl Hall.

The residents seem content, too.

"There are no hassles here," said resident Curt Kohl. "Not even minor raising of voices between hall members. It's a hall with soul!"

Dennis Robey has lived in Kohl Hall four years.

"There's a fun-loving, big-happy-family feeling here," Robey said.

Other residents said they chose Kohl Hall because the rooms are large and it's close to the center of campus. "And it's quiet at night," said resident Duane Pegler.

Kreischer Quad is to BGSU as a suburb is to a city. But Kreischer is not just a residential area on the outskirts of the academic community. Ashley, Batchelder, Compton and Darrow provide homes for close to 1,500 BGSU students.

Why would so many students choose to live in dorms located farther from main campus than any others?

Because they like the separation. Escaping from the classroom setting at the end of the day appeals to many residents of Kreischer.

Besides, Kreischer residents are close to the Ice Arena, tennis courts, Memorial Hall, grocery, McDonald's, library and Sam B's. Where else on campus can you find such convenience? And when the new student recreation center is completed in fall, 1978, Kreischer's desirability will no doubt increase even more.

What about the atmosphere within each of Kreischer's four dorms? Open doors and smiling faces are the rule, not the exception. This may be due, in part, to the large number of freshman residents who seem to have a reputation for candor and friendliness.

And Darrow, since most of its residents are male, adds a little spice to the otherwise female-dominated quad.

Because of the unique blend of programs and services available to its residents, McDonald Quadrangle may well be considered a coed's paradise

Housing 1,220 women, McDonald is formed of North, East and West halls.

If you have ever walked through the halls of McDonald North and smelled the appetizing aroma of fresh baked goods or a sizzling steak, you can rest assured that your longing for a good home-cooked meal has not made your imagination run wild. Many of the women of North Hall took advantage of the optional meal coupon plan by putting trust in their culinary skills and using the cooking facilities provided in the Hall.

An honors floor without a resident advisor was established for the first time in North Hall. The women who resided on this floor were individually selected on the basis of maturity and grade point and were given the responsibility of governing themselves.

Also unique to McDonald North is the international floor, which serves as a homestead and meeting ground for many of the University's foreign women.

The residents of East and West Halls consist mostly of freshmen who enjoy a wide variety of programs to introduce them to and get them involved with college life.

Between the Residence Life staff and the women serving on the West Hall Activities Board and Quad Council, a constant flow of social and cultural activities is provided for the enjoyment of McDonald Quadrangle residents.

Offenhauer

East & West

Dianne Headlee and Rick Hutchinson study in Offenhauer.

By Sue Hayward

Offenhauer Towers went coed for the first time this year. Men moved onto floors two and six in Offenhauer East, the women's side, and women became residents on floors two and six of West.

The sexes mingled at wine-and-cheese parties, a Halloween party, a Gong Show and a coffee house. Cartoons and movies provided an entertaining study break on Wednesday evenings, complete with free popcorn. A leather shop, photo lab, game room, library and exercise room were open for use.

It was mostly fun and games when residents weren't being studious. But no one was amused by the continuous run of false fire alarms pulled during the last week of October. Scores of people in bathrobes and blankets stumbled down long flights of stairs and huddled in the chilly night air, looking sleepy and very, very angry.

In that respect, coed living in Offenhauer provided its residents with a clear-cut look at the opposite sex unshaven or in curlers.

But as an experiment (tried previously in Prout Hall), grouping men and women together in Offenhauer was a huge success. Enthusiastic residents discussed the feasibility of further integrating the high-rise dorms by alternating rooms of men and women on the same floors.

Some BGSU students dine daily in Alice's Restaurant, a cafe of domestic cuisine located in a scenic corner of the Union's second floor.

That unique cafeteria was named by the residents of Alice Prout Hall, who take their meals there. A salad bar and a variety of soups are the specialty at Alice's.

Delicious repasts are only one advantage to living in Prout. It's a short walk from Prout to most main buildings on campus, and Prout's close proximity to the Union is convenient before and after Happy Hours.

Sound perfect? Well, nearly. But Prout has two disadvantages.

It's no longer coed. Originally a women's dorm when it was built in 1955, Prout became coed in 1971. And coming full circle, it's once again restricted to women. (Luckily, there's still 24-hour visitation.)

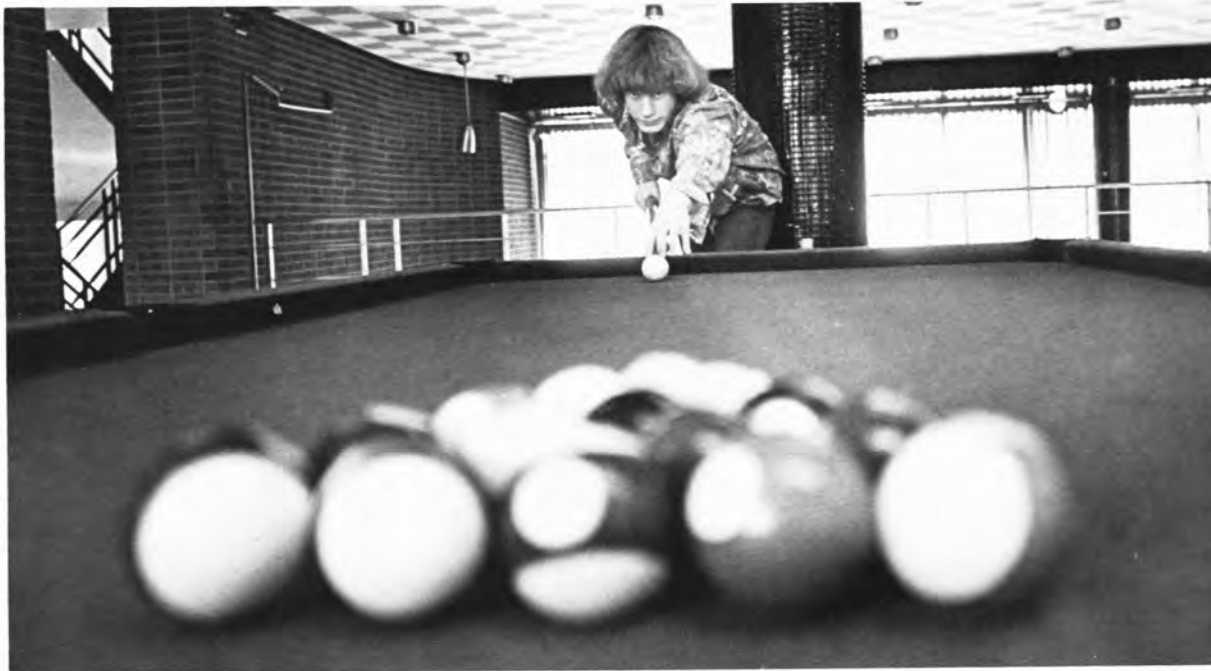

And as necessary as men, are clothes dryers. But Prout has only five dryers for 250 women.

Oh, stop complaining! At least the food's good.

"It's a friendly place — that's a Rodgers trademark," said Forrest Wandel, a second-year resident advisor in Rodgers Quad.

Wait a minute! Is he really talking about Rodgers? Isn't Rodgers called "The Zoo?"

Alas, the heyday of "The Zoo" is over.

"It's mellowed down a bit this year," said Tom Singer, another Rodgers RA.

Why? Singer explained that there are quiet hours after 7 p.m. now, and they're enforced. He said this year's freshmen, a large percentage of the population of Rodgers, are quieter than previous classes.

Wandel had another explanation.

"It was rowdier when we had three guys in each room two years ago."

Those were the days when the University admitted more students than it had housing for, he added.

"My roommate liked Rodgers enough to request it again this year," said David Weissman, Rodgers resident. And that's really the most important thing someone can say about his dorm.

Mark and Marykay find a quiet moment among their plants.

By Lonnie Pomerantz

"I knew a man Bojangles and he danced for me . . ." Marykay Murphy sings while her husband, Mark, harmonizes and accompanies her on the piano. They're the entertainment at Delta Gamma's nightclub rush party, and they're also the sorority's houseparents.

Mark and Marykay Murphy, both 24 years old and married for four years, are graduate students at BGSU. Mark, a biology major, and Marykay, majoring in College Student Personnel, decided to become houseparents to fulfill an internship requirement for the CSP program.

They occupy a small two-room apartment in the sorority house. It's filled with their own furniture and decorated with tropical plants, a whale baleen (the filter from a whale's jaw), and a wooden plow bar.

Before moving into the DG house, neither of them had been involved in greek organizations, or lived on campus.

"Now we're seeing the other side of college life, a part that neither of us have experienced before," Mark said.

Although they anticipated a great change in their lifestyles, they had no problems adjusting to sorority living.

"I didn't know what to expect, but every one made it so easy and comfortable for us," said Marykay. "I like the caring that I see here, the concern for other people."

According to Marykay, the responsibilities of being a houseparent are both administrative (lots of paperwork) and social (interacting with the girls). Although there is little difference between their ages and those of the girls, Mark and Marykay's authority has not been challenged.

"No one has given me the least bit of a hard time. I'm not rigid so I don't have many problems," said Marykay. "The respect we have for the girls is generated back towards us. I respect and trust the girls, and I think they know that."

"Having both a housemother and a housefather has created a more family-like atmosphere in our house," said Toby Ann Weber, a member of Delta Gamma. "Not only are Mark and Marykay available for advice and counseling, but they also enjoy just sitting around and having a good time with the sisters."

Eggs Benedict for breakfast. Rubeen sandwiches for lunch. Chicken Cacciatore for supper. Undoubtedly such a diet would fill the stomach, but would you believe that the planning, preparation and eating of such taste treats also fulfills a course requirement?

On the surface, the four-credit-hour course, which is required for all home economics majors, sounds not only easy but enjoyable. The requirements are simple: take up residence in the Home Management House for five weeks and perform the duties generally associated with homemaking.

But among the students who have fulfilled this requirement, the general consensus of opinion seems to be that it's no piece of cake.

The house, at 705 Urschel Drive, can house nine students, according to Joyce Riegelmayr, director of the house. Students pay $100 for their five week stay at the house. If they live on campus they can have the money transferred from the amount they pay for room and board.

Of the seven students who lived in the house the first five weeks of winter quarter, all agreed that the work was very time consuming.

"When it was my turn to cook, I spent at least three hours planning the menu," Lillian Stack said.

She emphasized the word 'planning.' This time expenditure did not include going to the store, buying the ingredients, preparing the food or filling out the numerous financial report forms proving the meals did not exceed certain budget limitations.

The cook is responsible for all these duties in addition to taking a normal load of classes. Jobs are rotated every four days. Before the end of the five weeks, each student has served as a cook, an assistant cook, a waitress, a host, and a hostess.

As with the job assignments, the students also rotate back and forth between different income brackets.

This year, two students at a time operated on a moderate income budget, while the remaining students enjoy high income living standards. On a moderate income budget, each student was allotted $2.30 per day for food. Those in the high income bracket could eat up to $2.90 worth of food a day.

In addition to merely applying home management skills, living in the house is also an experience in learning to live with others, Riegelmayr said.

"Most of the students don't know each other before living in the house and those who do often discover it's a lot different being friends with someone and living together," she said.

A Cooperative Experience

Roommates Chris Bugg, Chris Burrows, Mark Nicholls and Randy Schell.

By Mary Reinbolt

They are brothers neither in blood nor through fraternity ties, but seniors Chris Bugg, Mark Nicholls, Randy Schell and junior Chris Burrows all share equally in a friendship that resembles a relationship brothers might have.

The four University students live together in an apartment in Bowling Green. They've made sacrifices for each other and have little trouble deciding who will take care of domestic duties. But most important, the young men have made apartment A-6, 818 Second St., their home.

"The apartment itself is just like hundreds of others in Bowling Green — nothing structurally unique," said Burrows, a biology major. "It's the diversity of our personalities that makes this place special."

Schell, a human resources management major, said the four seldom go out anywhere as a group. But he said, "We get along great, and sometimes we let out our frustrations by getting crazy together here at home."

They each have a nickname given by the group, as well as little idiosyncrasies that the others poke fun at constantly.

"We call Mark 'the Nick' or 'Mr. Neat,'" said Bugg. "He's always taking out the garbage, covering the bathroom with cleanser, washing dishes or straightening up the apartment."

"Well, I have a strong need for organization," said Nicholls, "and besides, I don't recall my doing all the work around here ever upsetting anyone."

"Of course we all contribute something to the cause," said Randy "Schell Man," smiling. "Burrows and I are calm, the stabilizers in times of stress."

Bugg said he recognizes there are probably many things each of them does that bother the others.

"We do sit down together and talk things out. It's just not as often as Nick would like it to be," he said.

"Yeah, the Nick is big on those kinds of sessions," said Schell, explaining that Nicholls often applies some of the psychology from his human resources management major to problems they might be having in the apartment.

"You don't want to react to every little thing that bothers you, because you can go to unreasonable extremes," said Nicholls.

"School is enough hassle as it is," said Burrows. "I'm glad I don't have to worry about hassles at home, too."

Privacy and less noise are two of the advantages Bugg feels apartments offer over dormitories.

"I don't fool around all the time like I did when I lived with Burrows in the dorm," said Bugg. "I definitely think my study habits have improved."

The four agreed that being a considerate person isn't always easy. But they've shown that with a little effort, four very different people can look out for each other while still looking out for themselves.

Burrows takes his turn at vacuuming.

At Home on Crim Street

By Karen Borchers

You know that unique people live there when you walk up to the front door of the house and see "Papilly", "Keed", "Bird", and "Mom" written on the four wooden plaques hanging there. Unique they are.

Juniors Kris Bergman, Diana Gannelli, Dianne Talarico and Mara Tolhurst share a three-bedroom house located at 255 Crim Street. The names on the plaques, handmade by Bergman, are nicknames the roommates received during their freshman years, when all four lived in Compton. They have been together ever since.

"The difference between living here and in Compton," Talarico said, "is there's more space, more privacy, and the food is better."

"It's also cheaper," Bergman said. "Last quarter we saved about 50% on groceries."

Bergman said that they have no written schedule for household duties, although she said she does most of the cooking and Gannelli does most of the cleaning.

"When something needs doing, we do it," Bergman said. "Two of us will usually go to the laundromat while the other two go to the grocery store."

Besides the advantages of living in a house, the roommates said they have also experienced disadvantages.

"Sometimes there's not enough hot water for showers," Gannelli said. "Once I was in the middle of washing my hair when the water turned cold. I still had soap in my hair so I had to stay under the cold water, and after that I had to use creme rinse!"

The four women said they like living in the house because they can have dinner together every night.

"I consider this place my home," Gannelli said, "and it's something to look back on. After graduation I can come back here and say, 'I used to live in that house'."

EDUCATION

DR. ANN MARIE LANCASTER
Assistant Professor of Computer Science

By Roger Lowe

Dr. Ann Marie Lancaster, assistant professor of computer science, has lived all over the country. Before coming to Bowling Green in June, 1976, Lancaster lived in California, Wyoming, Florida, Illinois and Montana.

She teaches courses in theoretical computer science, programming languages, systems programming and mini-computers, and Lancaster is proud of the University's computer science department.

"Its undergraduate program can't be beat," she said.

Besides teaching, Lancaster does some independent consulting work for people in industry. This consulting work allows her to keep up with new developments in the computer science field and keeps the industries in contact with the University, she said. Many of these contacts offer jobs to University students, she added.

Lancaster, who was married in December, 1977, said she likes the small-town atmosphere of Bowling Green, and prefers the cooler weather to that of sunny California.

Dr. David Weinberg is interested in communities, professionally and personally. Weinberg, assistant professor of history, recently completed a book on the Jewish community in Paris on the eve of the Holocaust in Europe.

His book, A Community on Trial: The Jews of Paris in the 1930's, was published first in France in 1974 and later in the U.S. in 1977. The book is a study of the community in which Jewish immigrants from Eastern Europe and native French Jews lived together.

The other community Weinberg finds interest in is the Jewish Student Group at BGSU, for which he is faculty adviser.

"This is the only Jewish organization in Bowling Green," he said. "We're not large, so it's important that we act together as a community. The group of six or seven regular students who attend the functions are very close-knit."

"Communities are important — especially with any minority — to ensure cohesiveness," Weinberg said.

DR. RICHARD L. WEAVER
Associate Professor of Speech

By Sue Hayward

When Dr. Richard L. Weaver came to BGSU four years ago, there were about five students majoring in Interpersonal Communications. Now there are almost 400.

Weaver, associate professor of speech, has helped revitalize his department. His latest contribution is a textbook used in Speech 102. Entitled Understanding Interpersonal Communications, the text was published in January, 1978. Weaver hopes the book will give students a better idea of what the speech field involves.

"It's important to make a distinction between 'speech' and 'communication,'" Weaver said. "People think of 'speech' as having to get up on your feet and talk. But Speech 102 involves interpersonal communication, small group communication and public speaking."

Generating interest in speech courses comes easily for Weaver, who says he has taught almost 15,000 students since he came here.

"My whole purpose is communicating," he said.

Micheline Ghibaudo, associate professor of romance languages, says it is important that students studying French learn more than how to speak the language. They should begin to feel and love the French culture.

As faculty adviser to the French Club, director of the French House and teacher of French conversation, composition, business and civilization, Ghibaudo, a native of France, plans activities which bring the country closer to her students.

"There is no monkey business with me," Ghibaudo said. "I just want the students to learn and work, and as long as they work, I will do anything to help them."

Ghibaudo has been an active fund-raiser and planner for La Maison Française, a facility where seventeen students live and learn French. Ghibaudo is instrumental in organizing the annual scholarship benefit dinner for active French majors, and she solicits funds for the Wurzburger Memorial Scholarships, in honor of the most benevolent donor to the French House. The Wurzburger Scholarships help students study in France.

With all these contributions to the University, Ghibaudo is always looking for more ways to help her students.

"It seems I could always teach and give more," she said.

JULIA A. WOODS
Acting Director of University Library

By Mary Reinbolt

Presiding over nine departments, 175 employees, 2,000,000 pieces of library material and the annual dispensation of $1.7 million is a tremendous responsibility. Julia A. Woods, acting Director of the University Library, has been overseeing the smooth operation of that eight-story resource building since 1976.

She likes her work, in spite of budget worries, illegal borrowing and the worry of misplaced or destroyed books and periodicals. Woods complimented her personnel for their assistance in helping her with those responsibilities.

"I think the staff here is of a very high caliber," she said.

Woods is not a newcomer to the library administration field. After receiving a bachelor's degree in history, she studied library science in graduate school. Woods held various library jobs in Nebraska, Washington, Texas, Chicago and Florida.

"The students and staff at BGSU are very friendly," Woods said. "And that, for me, is one of the delightful things about working on this campus."

Dr. John C. Lavezzi, assistant professor of art, spends his time in the University art classrooms nine months of the year and in Corinth, Greece, during the remaining three months.

That's how he keeps up with his two major interests. One of those interests is keeping his students awake by making his survey course of ancient and medieval art an adventure of sorts. The other interest is digging for, sorting, reconstructing and dating prehistoric pottery at the Corinth excavations in Greece each summer.

"We have a good, hard-working team over there," Lavezzi said, "and we manage to have some fun, too."

But you won't find Lavezzi dabbling in sculpture, sketching or painting anywhere in the Fine Arts Building.

"I don't have time for such frivolities," he said.

With degrees in history, classical archaeology and art, Lavezzi has the knowledge and practical experience that makes his classes rewarding.

Dr. Kathleen Merriam teaches one of her political science courses on a topic of growing importance: the Middle East. Enrollment was up 50% for her Politics of the Middle East class in Fall, 1977.

Born in Cairo, Egypt, Merriam came to the U.S. in 1964 to do research with her husband, Dr. John Merriam, who is also a professor of political science at BGSU. During another return visit in 1975, she had a 2½-hour interview with Jehan Sadat, wife of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

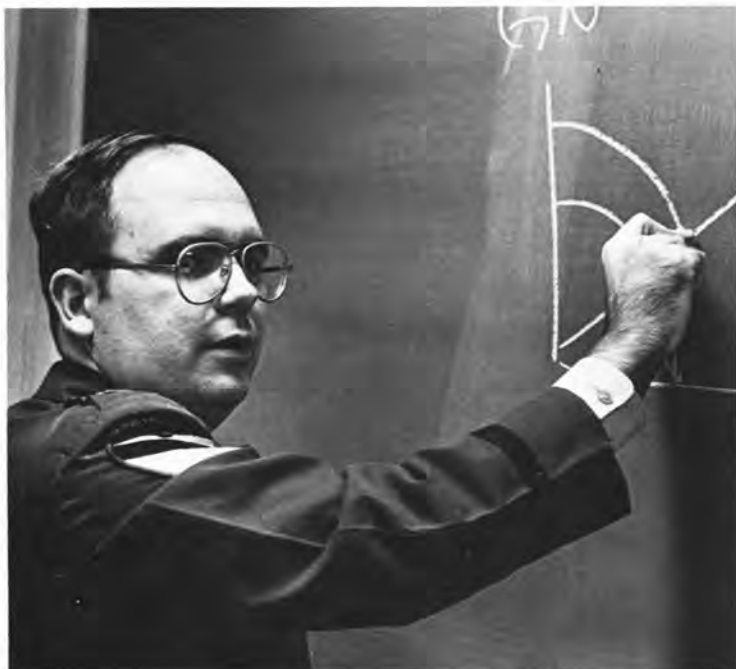

With her main interest in the changing role of women in the Mid East, Merriam is near completing a book entitled The Modern Egyptian Professional Woman.

"Several factors have contributed to the changing role of women there," Merriam said. "Women simply have to work to maintain a middle-class existence, and wars have taken men out of jobs they used to dominate."

As further changes take place in the Mideast, Merriam will be a vital source of information for many political science students interested in the Middle East.

CAPTAIN CARLTON SCHWAN
Instructor of Military Science

By Lonnie Pomerantz

Underneath Hayes Hall, a scattering of garbage bags and dust covered toilet seats conceal the entrance to two rooms which few students ever see.

"I'm being polite when I refer to it as the rifle range," said Captain Carlton "Fred" Schwan, describing the place where he spends an average of six hours a week. "It's a dump, but it's home," said Schwan, instructor of military science for the Army ROTC Department, and BGSU rifle team coach.

Schwan has coached the rifle team for four successful seasons, in which their dual match record has climbed to 18-3.

"I'm a jack-of-all-trades, and a master at none," joked Schwan. But a dozen or more trophies and empty champagne bottles fill his bookshelves, and awards decorate his walls.

A 1969 graduate of BGSU with a B.S. in Industrial Education, Schwan received a commission in the U.S. Army through the ROTC program. After serving a tour in Vietnam, he returned to Bowling Green to complete his master's degree. Schwan was then added to the faculty of the ROTC Department, where he has been teaching for four years.

DR. REGINALD NOBLE
Associate Professor of Biology

By Jane Musgrave

What do faculty members gain from their interaction with students? Quite a bit, according to Dr. Reginald Noble, associate professor of biology.

In his ninth year at the University, Noble credits many of his students with contributing to his personal and professional growth. His current research with the effect of sulfur dioxide on photosynthesis is due largely to the inspiration of one of his former graduate students. After the student kept urging Noble to begin the research, the project began.

Since then, Noble's research has generated much attention in the scientific community. Noble is operating on a three-year $12,750 grant he received in 1976 from the United States Department of Agriculture Forestry Service. He hopes to assess the long-term impact of increasing levels of sulfur dioxide on crop and forest plants.

Noble's dual role as researcher and professor is also a boon to his students. In constant interaction with other biologists, Noble has far more to offer his students than assignments from a textbook.

MARY SADDLEMIRE
KEY Secretary

By Karen Borchers

"There is never a typical day in the KEY office," said Mrs. Mary Saddle mire, secretary, bookkeeper and 'mother-confessor' for the KEY.

"I have a really fun job," Saddle mire said, "and it's exciting to work as the only 'mature' staff member among young people from such varied backgrounds. It has been an education in itself!"

Saddle mire, a mother of four, began her 9:30 a.m.-2 p.m. job at the KEY in 1969. Even now, after nine years, many of the past staff keep in touch with her. Every spring, Saddle mire and her husband Gerald, chairman of the BGSU College Student Personnel Graduate Program, have a picnic at their home for past and present KEY staffers. It's just one of the many things Saddle mire does for the staff which makes her so special and long-remembered by them.

"The KEY staff has made me aware of what the present generation is all about, and I think it's great," Saddle mire said. "In fact, I hate to have to be away from the office for fear of what I might miss!"

Dr. Peggy Hurst, professor of chemistry, encounters many students who feel lost if they can't decide on a specific career.

"I try to explain to the students that there is more than one way to be successful," said Hurst, who acts as an undergraduate adviser. "I don't believe there is, particularly for most people, one specific place or way for them to make their contributions."

Hurst worked four summers as an industrial chemist during her undergraduate years and during her first year in graduate school. After receiving her master's degree, she could have become a full-time industrial chemist. Instead, she accepted a teaching position at BGSU in 1955. Hurst said she is happy teaching, but doesn't think she would have been unhappy in industry.

Hurst tries to convey that attitude to her students. She tells them to take their time in choosing a career, and although they may make some false starts, she said, they should follow their efforts through.

"I think people are important, and I believe every individual has something worthwhile to contribute," she said.

DR. JOE SPINELLI
Chairman of the Geography Department

By Jim Flick

Dr. Joe Spinelli is a globe-trotter. And as chairman of the geography department, it's only natural that he travels extensively. His experiences, he says, help him teach more effectively.

Spinelli's area of specialization is Latin America. There are only seven countries of Central and South America he hasn't visited yet, and he may get to those soon. Spinelli has also traveled to the U.S.S.R., Poland and much of Communist Eastern Europe. In October, 1977, he traveled to Cuba for a week as part of a group of educators who toured Havana and other parts of the island.

Spinelli travels with his students in mind.

"I take slides of things I think students would like to see," he said. He uses the slides to aid his lectures.

This summer, Spinelli plans to travel to China with Dr. Stephen Chang, another BGSU geography professor.

"The more you get away, the more you appreciate the United States," Spinelli said.

ANNA BELLE BOGNAR
Coordinator of College Group Piano

By Kim Fleming

Anna Belle Bognar's office is in Johnston Hall, where the sounds of harps and clarinets mingle in the air. With her life devoted to music, she's constantly surrounded by it.

As coordinator of College Group Piano at BGSU, Bognar teaches piano classes that are in constant demand. She teaches ten students on ten pianos — simultaneously — in a usual class. And she enjoys her work.

"We are a good college," Bognar said. "We're not perfect, but we try very hard. The faculty is very involved."

Bognar supplements her teaching with outside activities in the field of music. She is the author of a booklet on keyboard requirements and is a member of both the Music Teachers National Association and the Music Educators National Conference. Bognar has appeared at local, state and national clinics and workshops on group piano teaching. Locally, she is the recipient of a Young Woman of the Year Award.

"If you try to advise but don't spend time in the classroom," said Dr. Donald Ragusa, "you are advising in a vacuum."

Ragusa, formerly a full-time instructor in the psychology department, still teaches classes in that department. But these days most of his time is spent conferring with students as an associate dean of Degree Program Advising in the College of Arts and Sciences.

"Take the change from a devil-may-care attitude about grades among students to a very deep concern for grades," Ragusa said. "I could see it coming because I taught all the time. This warning gave us enough time to institute a better grade review system."

Ragusa said he likes to stay in the classroom as much as possible, but his duties as an adviser don't permit him to teach as much as he'd like.

"I like the University," Ragusa said, "and except for a few hassles now and then, I enjoy the students."

Care and Feeding of a Greenhouse

By Carol Groves

Many people have fallen victim to the plant craze of the 70's, and Tim Morris, student worker in the biology greenhouse, is no exception.

A sophomore business major, Morris first became interested in plants while in high school and decided to take a course on greenhouses.

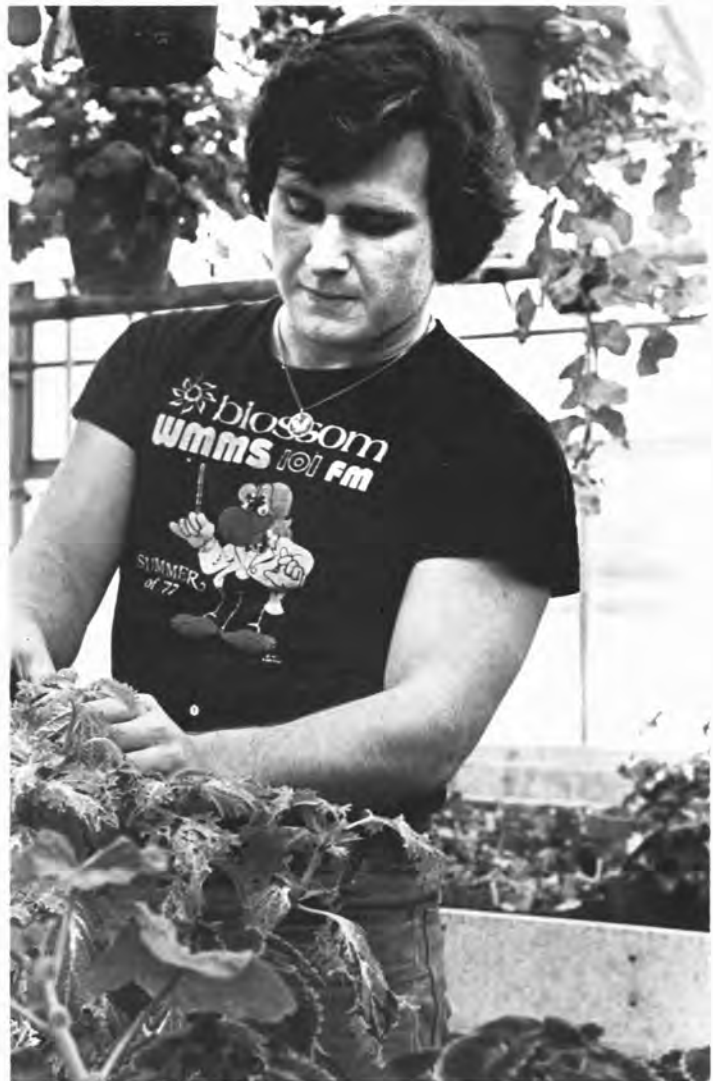

"I didn't know anything about plants before that time," Morris said. "When I came here I was interested in working in the greenhouse, located behind the IET building, so I asked people about it. Half of them had never heard about it," he added.

Morris was hired in the fall of '76 and has become increasingly interested in plants and related fields ever since.

"You appreciate plants more when you are able to see how they adapt, and watch them while they're flowering," Morris explained.

Morris' duties include washing pots, re-planting pot-bound plants, cutting plants back and sterilizing fertilizer.

"I'd like to do some landscaping in Florida someday," Morris said. "I've learned a little about it here and am starting to pick up more. There's a chance that someday I'll own a commercial greenhouse," he added. "I would definitely like that."

Lindy Feldman — resident advisor

By Kathy Borchers

"As an RA, you learn a lot about yourself and you learn a lot about other people," said Lindy Feldman, resident advisor (RA) for the 60 women of third floor McDonald East.

Feldman was chosen to be an RA during spring quarter, 1976, after completing a series of interviews and a 10-week training course. She liked being an RA well enough to re-apply for the position this year.

One of 120 RA's on Bowling Green's campus, Feldman has a wide range of responsibilities. Her duties began the week before fall quarter when she attended meetings and refresher courses that explained dormitory rules and policies. Some of her time was spent making signs and door decorations for the residents of her floor.

Feldman said she tried to greet all of the residents the first day they arrived on campus.

"One of the big duties of an RA is trying to get everybody comfortable with everybody else," she said. To do this, Feldman has floor meetings to discuss problems or to plan parties with the residents.

Another responsibility of Feldman's is being on duty several days a week. During this time, she deals with "whatever comes up", and that includes working at the desk, sorting mail and handing out lock-out keys.

"On the average, I put in anywhere between 25-30 hours a week," Feldman said.

"Sure it's frustrating at times, but any job can be like that," she said.

"I personally find this job very rewarding."

Evanoff maneuvers a Zamboni machine.

By Tom Wolf

Working inside a building where the temperature is kept barely above 40 degrees is not the kind of job that most people prefer to have. But George Evanoff, a 19-year-old freshman from Toledo, works on weekends in BGSU's Ice Arena, and he says he really likes his job.

“You would have to admit,” said Evanoff, “it’s a lot cooler in here than in the place I worked last summer.”

Evanoff, an Industrial and Labor Relations major, had a job last summer with the Interlake Iron Company, located on Front Street in Toledo. He worked in a furnace plant where the temperatures frequently reached the sweltering 200-degree mark.

“We even had to wear special platforms on the bottoms of our shoes,” explained Evanoff, “in order to prevent our soles from melting.”

At the Ice Arena, Evanoff wears a jacket like the other ice arena workers. His job is to help clean and maintain the icy surfaces of the curling, skating, and hockey rinks.

Occasionally, Evanoff operates the Arena’s $22,000 Zamboni ice cleaning machine.

“A lot of people on campus would love to drive the Zamboni,” said Evanoff. “To me, it’s the best job on campus!”

The Art of Posing

By Kathy Kruse

Many students pursuing art careers will expose themselves to at least one life-drawing course while at the University. No doubt they leave such classes affected by these encounters with nudity.

But what is the perspective of the model quietly posing just beyond the sketch pads?

Since September, 1977, Sue Hann, an aspiring fashion designer, has spent about 18 hours a week modeling in the nude.

"People think it's ironic that a person interested in clothes design is a nude model," she said. "Really, the two are connected. Having a further knowledge about the human frame helps you understand how clothes fit people; where contours and stress points are located."

Although she describes herself as somewhat shy, Sue said she has a spark of adventurousness which led her to inquire about modeling late last summer.

"I had read a book about artists and their models, and these women had Renaissance figures: they were small on the top and big on the bottom, and they had long, flowing hair like me," she said. "I guess I'm beautiful classically, but not fashionably."

While she was rewarded with handsome wages of $4.50 an hour, Sue said she worried last fall about being too inhibited.

"The first time, I didn't have the courage to look around the classroom, but I soon came to realize that the students aren't judging me as a woman, but they're looking at me artistically."

Sue said she has learned self discipline and is more comfortable with her body because of her experience.

"It doesn't take 'that kind of girl' to be a nude model," she said. "It's really given me a healthier attitude about a lot of things. I recommend that everybody try it. It can help get rid of all kinds of hang-ups people have about their bodies."

. . . And That's a Fact!

By Sue Hayward

"Hi! Fact Line Phil. Would you hold, please?"

Fact Line Phil?

"Yes, it's just an endearing term we use," said Phil Meyer, student coordinator of BGSU's general information service.

Meyer, a senior who will graduate in March, 1978, has worked at Fact Line for almost two years. His training began with 15 hours of acquainting himself with the vast information resources available to Fact Line operators. From then on, it's been on-the-job training for Meyer, a theatre major.

In an office with walls resembling huge bulletin boards, Meyer is surrounded by schedules, newspaper articles and computer data sheets. A bookcase against one wall holds almanacs, books of statistics and reference books. In a few seconds, Meyer can find an answer to almost any question a caller can ask.

"It's surprising," Meyer said. "Each time I work, I find out there's more information here than I thought. But with the phone ringing constantly, sometimes my head is going on one thing while I'm answering another question, and I get confused."

That's not surprising, since Meyer receives an average of 180 calls during a few hours. Most of the time, one caller is on hold while another caller is being helped.

"Hi! Fact Line Phil!"

"Hi. Could you give me the zip code for Geneva, Ohio?" the caller asked.

"That's 44041," Meyer said quickly. And another student in distress found help from Fact Line Phil.

"I want us to be busy every minute giving help to every person who needs it," said Debbie Silver, a junior management major and manager of the Health Center's Transportation Service.

The transportation service consists of Silver, five other students and a green station wagon that averages about 300 runs per month. More than half the runs involve transporting students to and from the Health Center. Although Silver described the service as one "students really need," she said she'd like to see it expanded.

"If you're sick and the weather's bad, it's a long way out to the Health Center," she said. "But I'd like to see the Health Center offer students more than just a glorified taxi service."

Before transferring here from Kent State University last spring, Silver was a member of Kent's volunteer ambulance service.

Silver is certified by the State of Ohio as an Emergency Medical Technician for Ambulances (EMT-A), but according to BGSU policies, she can't use her skills on the job.

Now, efficient operation of BGSU's service keeps Silver busy. She is responsible for all paperwork, such as keeping monthly logs of ambulance runs. And Silver has written a standard operating procedures manual and a constitution explaining what the service is and why it's needed.

"It's a valuable service," Silver said, "one that students need and are entitled to have."

BG NEWS: Campus Informer

By Roger Lowe and Dick Kaverman

The BG News combines practical experience in business and writing with a learning atmosphere.

But the paper is not an ordinary school newspaper under strict control of the administration. The BG News enjoys all the rights and privileges of ordinary newspapers.

"The editor is as much an editor of a paper as an editor of the N.Y. Times in terms of the First Amendment guarantees of freedom of speech and the press," said Emil Dansker, assistant professor of journalism and adviser of the paper.

Dansker also said he thinks the newspaper is as independent a college newspaper as there is in the country and says administration recognizes it's in the University's best interest to leave the paper alone.

Dansker, who receives one-fourth of his salary from the newspaper's budget, has no prior censorship on stories that appear in the paper.

"I don't read anything that goes in beforehand unless I'm asked," he said.

The business part of the News plays a large part in its operation. Advertising provides 55 to 60 percent of the News' $200,000 budget. The remainder of the budget comes from general fee allocations, but if the advertising staff doesn't sell enough ads, the number of pages in that day's paper is cut.

The importance of the business operation is recognized by the University's Publication Committee, which chooses the paper's editor and business manager. They, in turn, choose the rest of the staff, filling the 23 editorial and eight business positions.

And competition for editorial positions is tough.

"We have more people on the staff with more professional experience than ever before," said BG News Editor Patti Thomas. "We have stringers who write for the Associated Press, The Blade, The Plain Dealer, and The Sentinel-Tribune."

Thomas said that type of experience shows through in the quality job the paper is doing in covering University and local news.

The BG News does much of its own production work having purchased the necessary typesetting equipment about two years ago.

Columns printed by the typesetting machine are pasted up and the completed pages are taken to Wauseon, 41 miles away, to be printed. The papers are brought back early in the morning to be distributed in dormitories and other buildings around campus.

This process takes a lot of time and hard work, but the end product is worth the effort. The BG News staff won All-American status for its first quarter's work.

Editor Thomas thinks it was well deserved.

"For a college newspaper with almost 20,000 circulation, we're one of the best in the country," she said.

Kenneth Rothe

By Kathy Kruse

University Provost Kenneth W. Rothe will resign June 30 after a five-year term as the institution's chief director of academic programs, staffing and operations. In a memorandum to University President Hollis A. Moore, Jr., Rothe said the University is in excellent academic condition and the future seems optimistic.

The memo said Rothe would rather return to teaching, writing and research activities than continue in his present capacity.

According to the memo, Rothe thinks the University should replace him with a person who has "a freshness of outlook which will further enhance our (the University's) forward momentum." Rothe said he had considered leaving office since he began to prepare an 18-page self-assessment in January.

"But, of course, I was aware in September that this is the last year I had planned for," Rothe said in explaining that job effectiveness should be gauged by five-year intervals.

"For any position, I think that within a five-year period 85 percent of anything you're trying to accomplish will be done and the other 15 percent is probably going to be impossible," Rothe said, adding that it's true of the goals he set originally in 1973.

Rothe said he's especially proud of two accomplishments noted in his self-evaluation.

"The way we're dealing with the quality of faculty is of present and long-term viability," Rothe said, emphasizing tenure, salary and merit increments in areas in which lasting improvements have been made.

Second, Rothe said there has been an amplification of quality throughout the University's academic programs. "We've dealt with grade inflation and established ways to improve writing skills, and we've succeeded in trying to get students more interested in academics in general, I think," Rothe said. "That's really very positive, in my point of view. After all, that's what a university is all about."

Although Rothe will not serve the University as an administrator next year, he will continue as a physics professor here.

"Teaching is probably my first love," Rothe said. "You can teach from many positions, however. In the last few years I've found that even as provost, I've had the opportunity to teach."

Rothe said in addition to teaching he has many interests he hopes to pursue later, including the completion of a book.

Sheldon Halpern

By Sue Hayward

When University Provost Kenneth Rothe retires from his post in June, Sheldon Halpern will leave his office of Vice Provost for Faculty Affairs.

"Most of what I do — the most visible things I do — are done in very close coordination with the Provost," Halpern said. "Most of what we could have done together we've done. It's very much a team activity." Halpern added that the new provost will probably want to build his own staff.

While active in Faculty Senate, Halpern helped devise and implement a formal procedure for faculty grievances. In the past, Halpern said, there was a great deal of individual judgment on the part of various University departments. That procedure was seen as beneficial to the departments as a whole, but was not always fair to individual faculty members, Halpern said. Now if problems arise, faculty can resolve disputes through Faculty Senate hearings.

Halpern said another of his accomplishments in office was "to bring the use of instructional materials a little closer to the state of the art." Directors of University resource centers (the library, Instructional Media Center) worked closely with Halpern to activate better faculty use of educational media.

Halpern has served as Vice Provost for Faculty Affairs since July, 1974. After retiring from his position, he said he plans to return to teaching English at the University.

The Commuter Center is in Moseley Hall.

Quiet is the word.

Home

By Jane Musgrave

Since its inception in 1966, BGSU's Commuter Center has been billed as a "dorm" for students who don't live on campus.

The center does provide many dorm-type functions. Located in the basement of Moseley Hall, the center contains a T.V. lounge, two study lounges and a lunchroom. Class schedules, student directories, the BG News and Green-sheets are available there, as well as other information. Lectures, films and other educational programs are presented at the center regularly.

But until this year, the center failed to fulfill one of the basic requirements of a dorm: people didn't spend the night there continually. This year, the forces of nature turned the Commuter Center into a dorm when the center provided accommodations for more than 30 people stranded because of the January 26th blizzard.

Sleeping bags borrowed from UAO and the community residents covered the floors and couches. Center Director Hazel Smith said it's not the first time the center has served this purpose.

"This year has been a real nightmare," Smith said. "Between City Hall and nature, I'd almost resigned myself to having to write the whole year off entirely. But the kids keep coming."

By "City Hall," Smith was referring to the center's forced evacuation from Moseley to the Alumni Reading Room on the second floor of the Union. The move was made while new windows were installed in Moseley, and moving caused problems. For the first three weeks of the quarter, for example, the center didn't even have a telephone.

At the start of winter quarter, the center held a grand re-opening to attract students back. Card tournaments, a magic show, a potluck supper, a mock "Gong Show" and a dance were among the week-long events.

"The kids came back like mad," Director Smith said.

What they returned to is a commuter center rated as one of the top commuter programs in the nation. Smith said there is only one other university in the nation that has a commuter center.

"Many colleges and universities have commuter programs," Smith said, "but a commuter center is really unique."

As for the future, Smith said she foresees no major change in the center.

"We'll continue to try to provide as many services as possible and do the kind of programming that allows everyone a chance to become part of the University community."

Donors keep Red Cross nurses busy collecting pints.

Karen Bajorek uses the time well.

Three times a year, a little white truck with a red cross painted on its side pulls up in front of the University Union. It leaves with a precious cargo of blood — the “gift of life.”

The blood in the Red Cross truck is donated by BGSU students and faculty. Up in the Grand Ballroom, they roll up their sleeves, answer questions, have their temperatures taken and sign release forms. Then their blood is collected in special little plastic bags, a procedure which takes about ten minutes.

An average of 600 pints is collected each quarter at BGSU. During Fall and Winter blood drives of 1977-78, the Red Cross received a total of 1,245 pints of blood at the University.

Freshman Kathy Starks gave her first pint of blood Winter quarter, and she intends to keep on giving.

“It doesn’t take that much time,” Starks said. “I’ve worked in a hospital before, and I’ve seen how people need blood. If the Red Cross will take it, I’ll give it.”

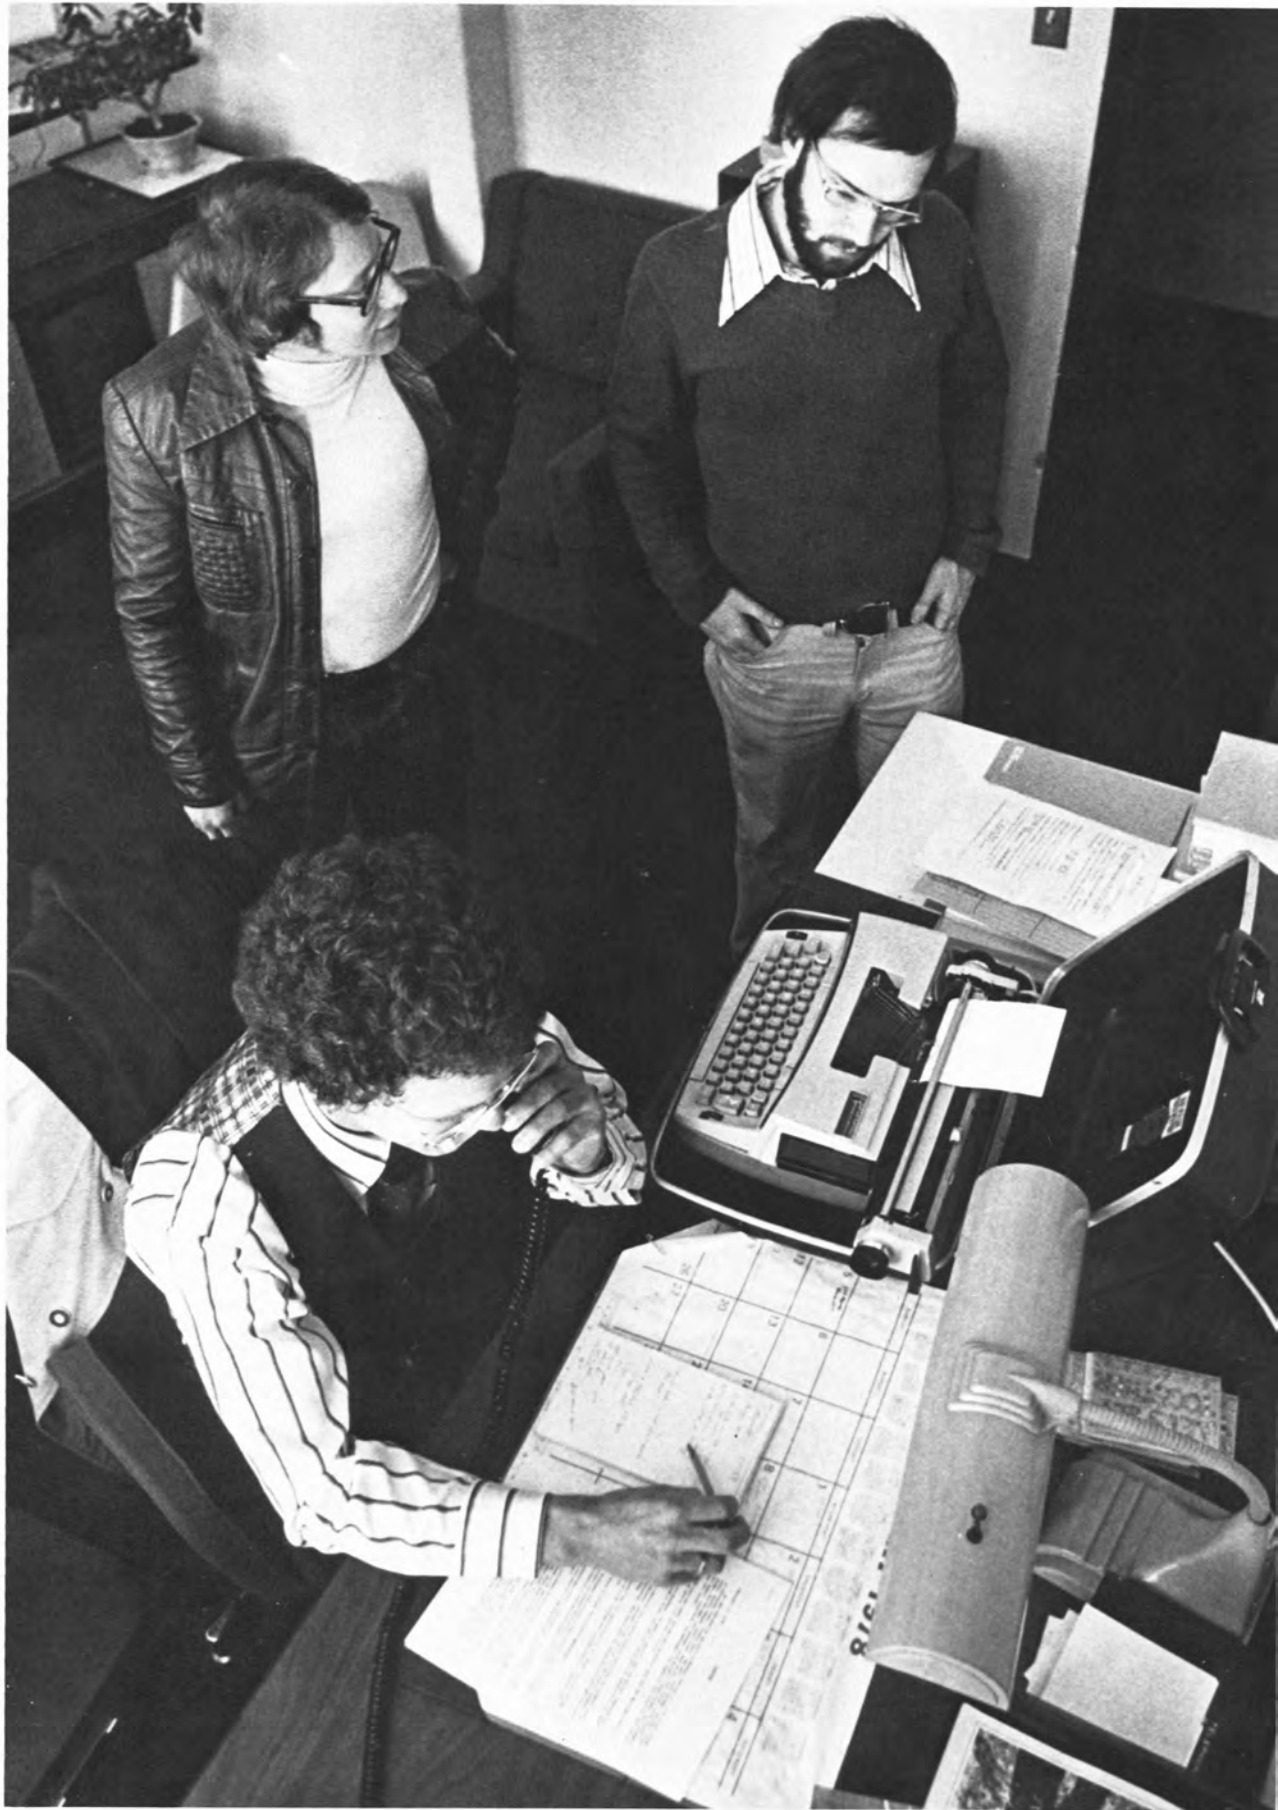

Sophomore Ed Powell helps coordinate University blood drives. With four other students, Powell publicizes drives, makes appointments for donations and helps Red Cross nurses and workers set up their equipment.

Powell said the blood donated at the University is used by the Red Cross blood bank in Toledo, which uses about 200 pints per day in serving 10 area counties. He noted that BGSU students had to be turned away at the door during the last day of donations Winter quarter. There were just too many people there for the unit to handle, he said.

That’s indicative of donor enthusiasm at the University. There’s no wishy-washy ambivalence about whether they should give or not. They know why they give.

“I’m against selling blood,” grad student Suzannah Patterson said about commercial blood collection operations. “Other places don’t do the testing of blood the Red Cross does, such as testing for hepatitis. And if you give to the Red Cross, members of your family can get blood when they need it. I’m very much for the volunteer system, and I support it by donating to the Red Cross.”

SGA: Working for Students

Bob Wolf and two senators work on a project in the SGA office.

By Kathy Kruse

Remember the enviable status that student council officers and representatives enjoyed in high school?

The University sponsors a similar liaison body — Student Government Association (SGA) — but according to this year's SGA President, Bob Wolf, its members do not receive such a widespread notoriety.

"Average students just don't know SGA exists," Wolf said. "The one thing I wish we could do more of is increase awareness among the students to let them know who we are and what we do."

SGA serves a dual purpose, in Wolf's opinion.

"It's here to represent the student body, to allow the students to be represented in various administrative and community decisions which would affect the University," he explained. "Also, we have a purpose of relaying community and administrative views to the student body, and I think this side function is just as important."

SGA's five officers are elected each spring, as are its 16 student district representatives.

This 16-member Senate is, according to SGA's newly-revised constitution, "the official legislative body of the entire undergraduate student body . . . and shall have the authority — and the responsibility — to act in that manner . . ."

The Senate exercises its power through resolutions and position statements which, according to Wolf, can encompass a wide variety of student-related issues.

This year, SGA lobbied against state higher education budget cuts and comprehensive final examinations, and helped to pass a motion tabling consideration of the University's return to a semester calendar.

"Some of the other things we've done include Senate projects to install campus mailboxes for commuters, and we've got a snow removal program set up," Wolf said.

Also, a number of campus activities boards are responsible to SGA, Wolf said, adding that "although students don't always see the direct affect SGA has upon their lives here, it is gaining some credibility. But we still have a long way to go until each student knows who his senator is."

People said it couldn't be done, but they under-estimated the determination of Nancy Hamilton and her students.

Hamilton, associate professor of journalism, arranged for 35 BGSU journalism students to staff the Third Annual Publishing Conference and Exposition sponsored by Folio Magazine. The world's largest publishing convention was scheduled for November, 1977 in New York.

The students were told about the trip in April, 1977, and there was money to be raised in those seven months. So they sponsored car washes, bake sales, beer blasts, and a garage sale. They mowed lawns, painted houses, sold carnations and took typing jobs.

Their work didn't net quite enough to reach their goal, but donations came from the Bowling Green Sentinel-Tribune, the Toledo Blade, the College of Business Administration and Reader's Digest. Folio subsidized the rest.

Finally, on the cold morning of November 13, a Greyhound Bus pulled up outside the Centrex Building and carried the conference assistants to the Big Apple.

From the 15th to the 17th, the students covered seminars on publishing trends. They later incorporated the reports into final editorial coverage of the conference for Folio and Book Production Industry. Joe Hanson and Howard Ravis, editor and publisher of Folio, said the students were the hardest-working assistants they ever had.

It was exhausting work, but the students didn't waste their free time in the city. Hamilton arranged for the students to tour Time, Inc., Harcourt Brace Jovanovich Publishers and other professional journalism companies. And at night they saw Broadway shows, Greenwich Village, the World Trade Center, and Chinatown.

The week was over too quickly. In a few days, the 35 assistants had talked and worked with professionals in their field, and had gained experience far beyond the limits of a classroom.

It was the chance of a lifetime . . .

Annual salary for medical technologists in Northwest Ohio ranges from $10,000 to $18,000.

"I don't think I could ever tell someone they were going to die," said Mary DeLeonardis, a 22-year-old senior in the Medical Technology Program at Bowling Green State University. "So, I changed my goals from being a doctor to working in a medical laboratory."

"There are so many things you can learn from one sample of blood," Mary said. "It's amazing!"

Mary's interest in medicine began eight years ago, after an automobile accident in which she suffered a crushed pelvis. Mary was in the hospital for six weeks and had to relearn to walk.

"Everyone was so helpful and patient with me. Since then, I've wanted to help everyone else," Mary said. During her first three years at BGSU, Mary had a regular class schedule. Her fourth year, fall quarter, involved three months of lectures and labs seven hours a day, four days a week. In January, Mary worked in a "real" lab at St. Vincent Hospital and Medical Center in Toledo, and will take her registry test in August.

While most BG students were on quarterly breaks, Mary and the other Med Tech students were working in the lab or at St. Vincent's.

"Spring break is going to kill me because I always go away," Mary said. "Last year I went to the Bahamas. I realize now how much this program involves."

"I got thrown into my first air shift by a lucky break," said Bob Bishop. "I found out two minutes before air time that I was going on, when the program director dropped a stack of records in my lap, said 'good luck,' and left."

That happened during Bishop's junior year in high school while he was working at station WQIO in Canton as an office boy. That hooked him on radio.

But that first shift wasn't so easy. "I got flustered at the end of the shift, and didn't even say my name right," Bishop said.

When he came to the University, he knew what he wanted to do. With his experience — and his FCC license — they couldn't keep him off the air from the day he stepped on campus.

First he did a rock shift at WFAL, then basketball play-by-play that winter. Sports came naturally to him.

"Being from Canton, where the Football Hall of Fame is," he said, "I'm naturally a football fan. I got interested in other sports from that."

Bishop stuck with sportscasting and a regular rock shift until he got another lucky break: the WFAL sports director quit, and Bishop moved into the job during the winter of his sophomore year.

The next quarter he reached the top of the ladder at WFAL when the program director abruptly quit, leaving his job to Bishop.

"We now have the youngest general staff ever at WFAL," he said proudly.

Bishop is most noted, however, for hosting WFAL's sometimes-controversial, always-zany Wednesday night talk show. Students call in with gripes, questions and comedy bits while Bishop moderates the show and cuts off obscene callers.

He sometimes asks guests to share the spotlight with him. John Weinert, BGSU's basketball coach, was one guest. A U.S. Army recruiter was on the air one night, and on the eve of the Student Government Association (SGA) presidential election, the candidates debated on the air.

But mostly it's just students — Bishop included — blowing off steam in the middle of the week.

Bishop is with the students when they're letting off steam at the end of the week during Happy Hours at the Union, too. He runs the sound system and his afternoon rock shift there.

"I just play music there," he said. "Nobody wants to hear me talk then, they just want to dance and drink beer."

"My goal," Bishop said, "is to be either a program director in a major-market radio station or a play-by-play announcer for a pro team."

Whatever he ends up doing, you can bet it won't take a lucky break to get him on the air again.

Nanette Schoenrock

By Kathy Borchers

The move from the Fine Arts Building to the second floor of the Health Center proved to be a healthy decision for the design department, according to Nanette Schoenrock. "There's more space for the design students to work now," she said.

Schoenrock is a senior majoring in three-dimensional design, including product and rendering design and model building. Her specialty is chalk and pencil sketches.

A drawing course at Toledo University stimulated Schoenrock's interest in art enough that she switched majors from education to design. Schoenrock also decided to transfer to BGSU her junior year because of BGSU's superior art department.

"Design here was so much nicer that I really became interested in it. I enjoy working with the people here too," she said.

Fall quarter, Schoenrock worked with 10 other students on a project for Wood County Health Service. They designed a mobile health testing unit, complete with blueprints, renderings of the interior and exterior, and a model of the unit. The project may influence a decision on requested grant money, she said.

Schoenrock spends much of her free time working on design projects. She shares a Health Center studio with several other students, and often works there evenings and weekends. She said it's convenient having a studio because it eliminates bringing materials to campus every day.

When Schoenrock isn't working on her design projects, she enjoys sewing, racquet ball and water-skiing. For the past four or five summers, she has travelled to Oregon and Idaho to visit relatives.

Schoenrock said she would like to move West after graduation to work in a product design studio. Wherever she does settle, Schoenrock has the skill and attitude necessary to be successful. As she put it: "I really enjoy working!"

Gary Burkholder

By Jane Musgrave

On Monday night, Kojak is threatened by a psychopathic killer. On Tuesday, Columbo narrowly escapes death at the hands of an ex-convict with a grudge. On Wednesday, we watch spellbound as Police Woman Angie Dickinson's life is endangered when she is held for ransom by the leaders of a crime syndicate.

Such programs provide interesting, entertaining television viewing fare, but Gary Burkholder, a December graduate in the University's Criminal Justice Program, discovered first-hand that such shows are far removed from reality.

As part of his graduation requirements, Burkholder, who graduated in the law enforcement segment of the Criminal Justice Program, had internships with the Allen County Sheriff's Department, the Toledo Police Department and the Metropolitan Toledo Drug Unit. In total he spent 300 hours observing police work.

"It's not all the exciting action you think it is," Burkholder said. "I remember one day in Toledo when we only had three calls in eight hours."

Burkholder said that as an intern he had no police power. He merely observed police officers in action. The only time Burkholder recalled having any real physical contact with a suspect occurred while he was working at the Allen County Sheriff's Department. The suspect tried to slit his wrists, Burkholder explained. In order to restrain the man, the officers decided to handcuff the prisoner and Burkholder together.

"There was no real danger involved," Burkholder explained. "It was just kind of funny."

One of the arresting officers had kiddingly warned him that if the prisoner decided to make a run for it they might have to shoot Burkholder as well as the suspect.

Throughout his college career, Burkholder said he tried to get as much experience in jobs related to his criminal justice interests as possible.

For example, he worked two quarters during his freshman year in parking services.

A meter maid?

"A parking officer!" Burkholder said quickly.

"I learned a lot about myself and a lot about others," he said. "It's easy to start stereotyping people. Once one person gives you a hard time you expect that everyone is going to hassle you. I learned you have to deal with everyone as an individual."

In his sophomore year, Burkholder worked as a night guard supervisor. It was his responsibility to visit all the dormitories and check with the night guards to make sure everything was all right.

But the most rewarding job Burkholder said he had on campus was working as a student administrative assistant in the Criminal Justice Office.

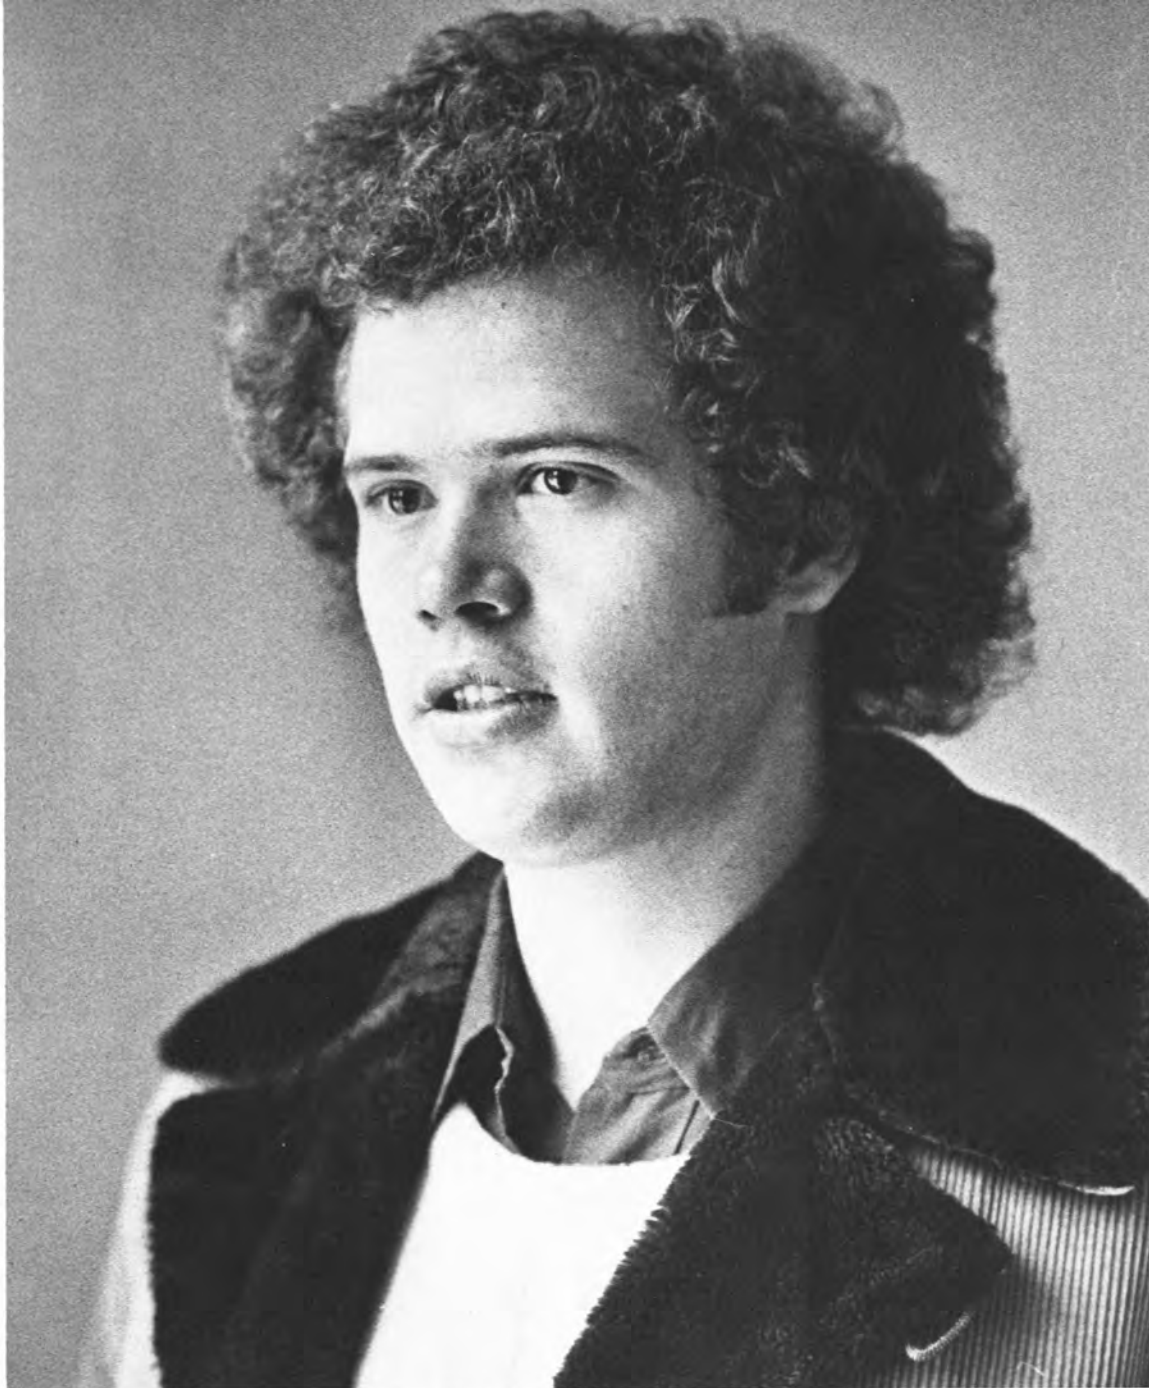

As far as his future is concerned, Burkholder said he's fairly sure he wants to work somewhere in the criminal justice system. He admitted to wishing he had more concrete plans, but he said he's not really worried. After all, indecision about one's future is not unusual. And as far as Burkholder knows, it's certainly not a crime.

Bobbie Little

Her hometown is Columbus, Ohio.

By Yu Kwan Lee

"Being a woman athlete does not necessarily mean that you must lose your femininity," said Roberta Little.

"Bobbie" is a senior physical education major.

While Bobbie competes as hard as any male on the court, she is aware of her femininity off the court. "You will practically never see me wearing blue jeans. Nobody has ever called me a jock. Even in high school I was conscious of my femininity.

"I always wear eye make-up when I am in competition. This isn't because I'm insecure," she explained. "It is because I like women in sports to be women, instead of the stereotyping of women athletes as being big, bulky, muscular types."

Bobbie is the first woman athlete in BGSU's history to become captain of two varsity sports in the same year. She was thrilled to receive the honors in volleyball and basketball this year but said that her main goal was to be a leader.

"Being captain does not necessarily mean that I would be the leader. However, I feel I have succeeded in both the leadership and captain roles."

Although Bobbie doesn't feel that women should compete with men professionally, she enjoys playing against men for fun.

"When I'm playing against men, I'm a lot more aggressive. I'm a lot more physical just because they're more physical. I have to hold my own ground."

Practicing one of her favorite sports.

Anthony Harris

Harris on his way to class in the Education Building.

By Sue Hayward

Anthony Harris might have done the student teaching required for his degree and left it at that. And he might have taught at a comfortable suburban high school. But Harris doesn't settle for "just enough."

Prior to doing his regular student teaching, Harris became involved in Project Interaction. The program offers BGSU education majors an opportunity for field experience in Toledo's inner city, and Harris began teaching at Libbey High School.

"There are more problems there than in other areas, and I thought it would help me be better equipped for the field," Harris said.

But Harris was in for a few surprises.

"The majority of my students can't read," he said. "They're juniors in high school, and they can't read! At first I thought they were putting me on, but I saw later that there was a big problem."

"Attendance is one of the main problems. We have one student who hasn't been to school for two months. They're just not interested in school. I'm going to try to help those students in particular," Harris said.

A three-year member of Residence Life Association.

Harris teaches three classes in American History in the morning and attends classes at the University in the afternoon. He is working on a comprehensive major of history, political science and sociology, so he will be equipped to teach all three. He plans to go to graduate school, also.

Harris has served three years in Residence Life Association (RLA) — one year on the executive council — and was one of five BGSU representatives to the 1977 RLA Conference at Oklahoma State University.

He also serves on the Student Advisory Board, and is working presently with Dr. Richard Eakin, vice provost of student affairs, to revise the General Bulletin.

In his spare time ("I don't really have any 'spare time'," said Harris), he is a member of Active Christians Today and the BGSU Black Student Union. He plays platform tennis, raises plants and reads extensively.

Preparing for the future is one thing, but why does Harris involve himself in so many activities?

"Since I was in junior high I knew this is what I wanted to do," Harris said, smiling. "It's a challenge."

Iona Evans

By Kim Fleming

"Forensics is a great thing to go into for thinking on your feet, doing research on a wide range of topics and learning to make commitments." For Iona Evans, forensics is one of the most interesting and important aspects of her years at BGSU.

Evans, who transferred from Ohio University her sophomore year to participate in the American Studies Program here, has participated in over 15 debate tournaments with three different partners. She won a third place in a junior varsity tournament, and she and her partner, Carol Garringer, won first at Appalachia.

Evans is planning a career in law. She has already scored a 711 out of 800 on her LSAT exam, which puts her near the top in the nation. She plans to attend law school at either Georgetown or the University of Virginia.

At Bowling Green, she has garnered an achievement scholarship and is a member of the honoraries Pi Kappa Delta and Epsilon Sigma Alpha.

But debate is not Evan's entire life. She is the owner of a comic book collection worth over $200, and is a member of the Doc Savage Fan Club.

To keep herself in school, Evans has had many summer jobs. She has worked on an assembly line and was custodian in the BGSU Library.

With such experience, Evans has a head start in a law career. She cares enough to work, to do well and to be different.

Nick Greco

Nick Greco, IET design major.

By Roger Lowe

Nick Greco, a junior in the Industrial Education and Technology (IET) department, is a good example of the Student Builders Organization's general theme.

The organization's theme is to get students involved in building trends out in the "real world." Last summer, Greco became involved with the construction of five new shops near his home in Parma. A friend of his was a general contractor for the firm and asked Greco to work with him. Greco agreed, and helped in constructing the shops over the summer.

"It all fell together this summer," he said.

Things worked out so well that he considered dropping out of school and forming a partnership with his friend. But Greco decided to get his degree in design and enter the partnership later.

He still is involved with the project and worked on it over Christmas break.

"Any time I have free time, I'm usually at home doing that," he said.

When he is on campus, he sometimes works with the IET department policy committee as the student representative. The main function of the policy committee is to handle grade appeals, he said, adding that one of the first appeals he heard concerned one of his friends.

Greco has time for other interests these days, as well. After two years of life in Conklin Hall, he leased an apartment. Greco said it has enabled him to expand his fish collection, something he couldn't do while in the dormitory.

"I've always liked fish, but never had the opportunity to set up tanks," he said.

Greco said he also enjoys hobbies in which he can use his hands, and has made some furniture. That's not surprising, since creativity comes naturally to someone as devoted to construction as Nick Greco.

Karen Altman

Taking a break in the Falcon's Nest.

Karen enjoys working with people.

By Mary Woods

Some people think psychology and business just don't mix, but Karen Altman thinks they go quite well together.

Karen is contemplating a career in management someday, where her education in marketing and psychology will somehow mesh.

Her immediate objective, though, is to graduate sometime in the next year.

"Since I have a major in two different colleges, I may have to stick around a few extra quarters to finish up all of the requirements," she said.

She entered BGSU intent on majoring in business, "because that's where it was at — the money that is."

But after taking one or two psychology courses, she found she also liked that and was good at it.

"I liked the idea of diverting from the practical field of business and exploring other regions of existence," she said.

To supplement both majors, Karen has taken on two diverse extracurricular activities. She is a member of Women in Business and also works at The Link, the Wood County Crisis Intervention Center.

As a member of Women in Business, Karen was elected to act as the student representative to the Dean's Advisory Council in the College of Business Administration. She acts as a liaison between the student organization and the dean of the college in an attempt to accurately express student views.

At The Link, Karen listens to other people's views on life. She began working there in the fall of 1977 and hopes to have attained counselor status by spring of 1978.

"Right now I am just training with another counselor and learning how to work with others," she said.

Karen is also a member of the Union Activities Organization, where she works on the News and Views Committee and ushers at speaking events.

And like all other college students, Karen says she "never has any time to study."

Listening to music at home is a favorite pastime.

Football

By Dave Smercina

The cover of the press guide says "1977 Bowling Green Football, A New Look...". The Falcons had a new coach, Denny Stolz, and a new system, a new offense.

But the results of the 1977 campaign resembled those of prior years: A good first half of the season followed by hopes of a Mid-American Conference championship and quarterback Mark Miller having another excellent year. But then — the annual loss to arch-rival Miami, and then, whatever you want to call it; the breakdown following the loss to the Redskins.

But unfortunately, there was something different about the year's results: a losing season. BG finished with a 5-7 mark, only the second time in 24 years that the Falcons have dipped below the .500 level.

The conference results were a little more encouraging, 4-3, good enough for fourth place.

But the record isn't a good indication of the entire season. Three of the losses saw the opponent triumph in last minute comebacks. And the Bowling Green offense was one of the best in the league.

Senior quarterback Mark Miller is the one who led that offense. And he almost single-handedly rewrote the BG record books. Miller now holds 14 single-game, season and career school records. Among them are: 6,329 yards in total offense, which is the 11th best mark in NCAA major-college history; 5,919 passing yards, second best in the MAC; 33 touchdown passes; 2,103 yards passing in one season (1977), total offense one season, 2,133 (1977) and 320 yards in total offense in one game (Tennessee-Chattanooga, 1977).

The Canton, Ohio native was also named MAC player of the week, and an honorable mention all-American by Football News during the year.

But there were others leading the BG offensive attack. Flanker Jeff Groth's 39 catches put him in the top five in the MAC, and his 17.8 yards per catch was tops. The junior also led the Falcons in scoring with nine touchdowns and 54 points.

Leading the way with post-season honors was tackle Mark Wichman. The senior was named to the National Football Federation Academic all-American team. The accounting major boasts a 3.66 grade point average, as well as his starting position.

Other post season honors were missing. No one from Bowling Green was selected to the all-MAC first team. But that seemed to typify the year for Bowling Green football, and has for so long. The team is good, but just not good enough — the post season honors are missing still.

The Falcon soccer team returned to winning ways in 1977, posting an 8-6 record. BG played almost the same schedule as in 1976, which was the boosters' first losing season in six years.

"One of our constant goals is improvement," head coach Mickey Cochrane said.

The coach, who chalked up his 100th career soccer victory this year, saw improvement from the beginning of the season.

He cited constant offensive pressure as the biggest improvement for the Falcons. In most of the games, even in three of the losses, the BG team outshot its opponents.

But putting the ball into the goal was a problem for the Falcons, as they were shut out in all six of their losses.

Bowling Green did get to dominate and score at times, grabbing an 8-0 win over Toledo and then a 6-0 triumph over Ohio University.

Senior Ken Hendershott enjoyed field days in those two contests, scoring four, and then three goals. He finished the year with nine goals and two assists to lead the team.

The second leading scorer was link Dieter Wimmer, who scored both the first and last BG goals of the year, the latter being the deciding margin in a 1-0 victory over Ball State.

But balance is what Cochrane said was his team's strength. He said the backs, links and strikers all would apply offensive pressure. Cochrane added that he was pleased with the goaltending of Bob Alarcon, who tied a school record with five shutouts.

Men's Cross Country

By Dave Smercina

When you're near the top, it's tough to move higher. The Bowling Green men's cross country team ran into that problem this season as the harriers duplicated last year's second place finish in the Mid-American Conference Championships.

The team posted a 4-1 dual meet record, the fourth winning season in a row for BG cross country teams. The single loss, a 28-27 decision to Toledo, snapped a ten-meet winning streak.

"The year's results came up pretty much as expected," said coach Mel Brodt. "But it would have been a little nicer to move up one place in the conference."

Bob Lunn, who was named team Most Valuable Player for the second year in a row, led the way throughout the season. The junior was fifth in the MAC Championships, and placed 12th in the NCAA District Four Championships, thus qualifying for the national finals. But ten degree temperatures and a side cramp prevented Lunn from finishing.

"I felt all along that Bob was capable of getting to nationals," coach Brodt said. "I was just a little disappointed with the results."

Kevin Ryan, who also qualified for the NCAA finals in the mile run last spring, ran second man for the harriers. After a slow start he came back to make the top ten in the MAC.

Returning lettermen Steve Housley, Jeff Jefferson, Gary Little, Pete Murtaugh, Alfonzo Faison, and Jeff Martin composed the rest of the BG team.

Martin was named the Outstanding Freshman, and Housley was presented with the Most Improved award.

This year's group makes looking into the future very easy. Six of the top seven runners will be back next year, and two of those runners were in the Conference top ten.

They were billed as the "Miracle Machine." And even though the name caused much commotion, it almost seemed to fit the Falcon basketball team.

But Bowling Green began the season miserably. At different times it could 'boast' records of 2-9 and 3-11. And when things looked bad, it looked as if they were going to get worse. The team was struck with three injuries in three days.

This situation forced BG coach John Weinert to experiment with some people. Senior Ron Hammye was switched from starter to sixth man. George Marshall, Mitch Kopystynsky and Rosie Barnes began to get more and more playing time. The experiment was a success.

Duane Gray and Joe Faine, starters all year, worked well with the new arrangement. Then the Falcons began putting marks in the win column. Four straight conference wins sent the Falcons from last place in the MAC to a position of contenders.

In fact, the Falcons were hosting league leader Miami with a chance of gaining a tie for the conference lead with a win.

But it was not to be the year for the Falcons. The Redskins prevailed, and BG wound up having to settle for fourth place in the tight MAC race, with a 10-6 ledger in the league and 12-15 overall.

Gray wound up leading the team in scoring for the year with a 13.9 point average, his best effort coming against Southern Florida when he scored 27 points. Hammye was next in scoring for the year at 13.5 points. The center also led the team in rebounds, with 229 for the season.

Hockey: it has been Bowling Green's most successful men's sport over the years. And this year was no exception.

After 34 games, this year's team had a 27-7 record, a Central Collegiate Conference regular season championship and a 20 home-game winning streak.

Chances for a Central Collegiate Hockey Association Championship — as well as a bid to play in the NCAA Championships — are good. But as of publishing date, the CCHA play-offs were not completed, and national bids have not been sent out.

But going into this year, things were unsure for the Falcons. The top goalie tandem in collegiate history, Mike Luit and Al Sarachman graduated. That left the nets a big question mark. But enter freshman Brain Stankiewicz. This season, 'Stanke' has a goal against average of 1.83 in league play, which is better than Luit or Sarachman ever had.

But to win you have to score. And the Falcons have done that. This year, to date, BG has outscored its opponents 172 to 93.

And the surprising scoring leader has been left winger John Markell, who has 31 goals and 20 assists for 51 points. Right behind him is senior Mike Hartman, with 29 goals and 13 assists. Hartman has moved into second place in the all-time scoring parade, and with a very highly-productive CCHA play-off series and NCAA series, he could become Number One.

Men's Swimming

Average: that sums up the season for the Bowling Green men's swim team. The tankers finished with a 3-5 dual meet mark, and finished seventh in the Mid-American Conference Championship meet.

That's pretty much the same as last year's record, no movement down, but no advancement. But as with almost any other sport, there were those athletes who had above-average years.

Senior Don Luikhart set a school record in the 400-yard individual medley, while placing sixth in the MAC meet. Sophomore Jeff Wolf had the best Falcon finish when he placed third in the 50-yard freestyle. He added a seventh in the 100-yard freestyle and was on three relay teams that placed.

The other pleasant surprise of the meet was the diving of Kurt Seibenick and Reagan Minser. The duo placed sixth and tenth in one-meter event, and fourth and eighth off of the three-meter board. Seibenick's efforts in the three meter set a school record.

There were two other BG records set at the conference championships, which annually produces the best times of the year. Craig Casten placed ninth in the 100-yard butterfly with a 53.21 second time, and Dave Koenig was seventh in the 100-yard backstroke, finishing in 54.99 seconds.

But next year looks better for the swimmers, since they will move from the old sub-standard facility in the Natatorium to the new one located in the Rec Center.

By Dave Smercina

First-year coach Pete Riesen had a rebuilding program when he took over as head wrestling coach at Bowling Green.

He still does.

Last season the grapplers finished last in the Mid-American Conference Championships. This year they were last again.

The success of the wrestling team was limited mainly to Junior Jay Liles and non-league competition.

Liles finished the season with an 18-2 record. He was the only Bowling Green performer to place in the league championships when he took second place in his 118-pound weight class. His 18 wins set a BG record for most wins in one season, and put him in third place on the all-time career win list.

But the rest of the team seemed to enjoy Liles' success when it went out of the MAC. There, the team posted a 6-1 record, defeating smaller schools such as Defiance, Muskingum and Malone.

In the MAC, the dual meet results were 0 wins and 6 losses. That put a 6-7 season in the record books, which was only the third losing season in the last 24 years.

But Liles wasn't the only winning wrestler. Freshman Larry Anzvine and sophomores Tom Mitchell and Matt White all had winning seasons. And numerous other underclassmen gained valuable experience, which leads to an optimistic outlook that the Falcons can climb out of the league cellar next year.

In only its second season, both the men's and women's fencing teams struggled through losing seasons.

The women finished with a 4-10 record, while their male counterparts were 3-12. The problem the Falcons faced was inexperience. The Falcons' opponents, armed with more years of team experience, were a tough challenge.

There were some good fencers in Bowling Green, but there just weren't enough.

Kim Larkins led the women with an individual mark of 22-23. She was followed by Lori Holdren at 19-26.

Curt Lambert led the men. He compiled a 26-19 record in the sabre event, for the only individual winning record. Gary Stone was tops in the epee at 15-30, while Bob Turner was 11-32 with the foil.

Women's Volleyball

By Kathy Kruse

There's no doubt about it: The women spikers left behind a legacy this year that won't easily be forgotten by regional volleyball giants.

If seventh-year coach Pat Peterson's half dozen bombshells were unable to generate a victory, their infectious spirit kept them charging ahead with fresh determination.

But it was rare for the varsity squad to walk away from a match with its character tested by an embarrassingly unfavorable score. In fact, during its 18-7 season, the team was throttled severely only once.

BG continually posed a tough challenge for perennial powers Mt. Saint Joseph, Cleveland State, and OSU, but were not able to gain the advantage in those losses.

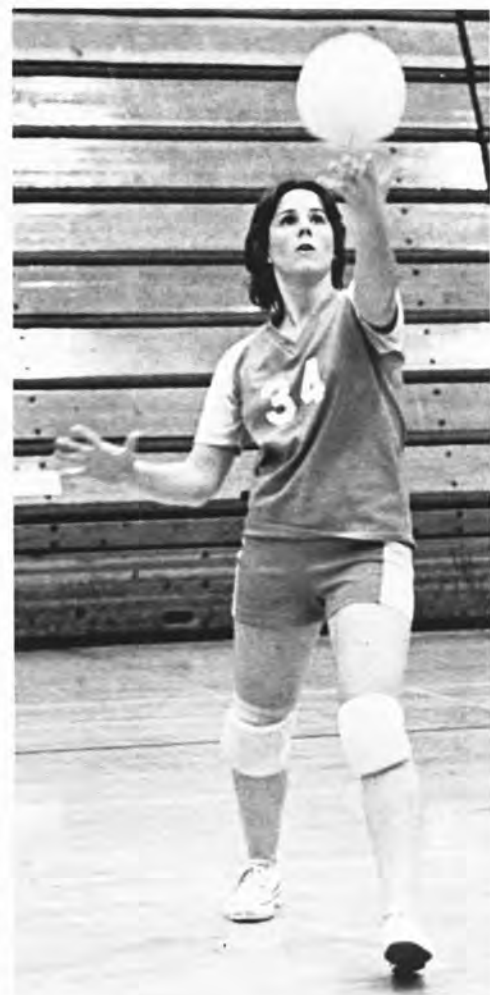

Usually, however, the women were on the other side of the net, combining sophisticated setting, hitting and blocking talents into an unbeatable unit.

Senior co-captains Sharon Daniels and Bobbi Little were awarded twin Most Valuable Player titles for their contributions to the 1977 campaign.

"Both these women have reached the pinnacle of their careers," Peterson explained. "Sharon is one of the best center hitters and blockers in the state, and Bobbi is super in the back-court. She also hits very, very well."

Peterson is optimistic about rebuilding her team in the coming years, but admits "the seniors are going to be very hard to replace."

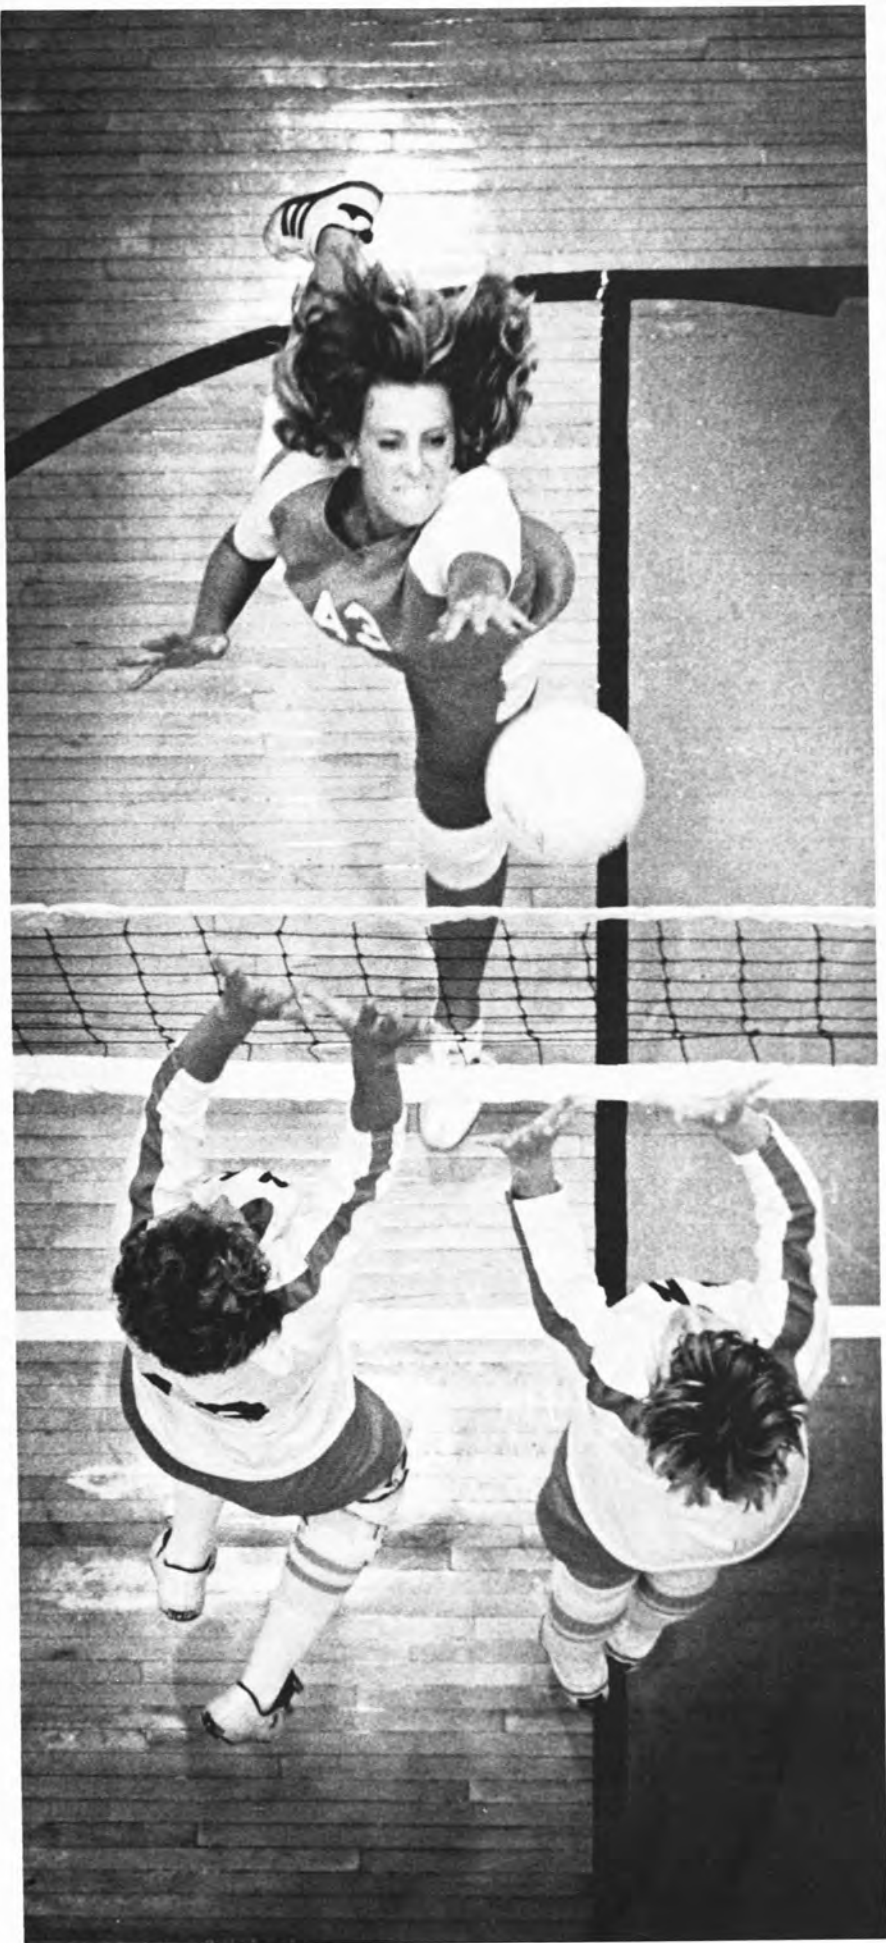

Above all, Peterson expressed an interest in recruiting women who will complement this season's team philosophy. "They epitomized the idea of women's sports in that they enjoyed what they were doing, and, at the same time, they did the best possible job."

Before fall match play began, it seemed that the women's golf team had a rough course to travel.

Chilling rain was forecast, the five-woman squad sought a sixth member, and first-year coach Janet Parks wondered if her nine years' experience leading Falcon tennis teams could be adopted to golf.

"You approach the two sports differently," Parks explained. "In tennis, it might help if you suggest a change of grip or strategy between sets. In golf, asking them to change their grip won't help. They either have it or they don't. You see it in the scores."

It appears that the golfers did have it this fall, despite some formidable competition. The Falcons outstroked MAC teams in every match, but they didn't surpass the likes of Michigan State, Purdue, and Indiana.

"Team-wise, we're much stronger this year," said team member Val Wilson.

Teammate Karen Parshall agreed. "This fall was the first time the team played consistently well, all together."

Parshall has produced top scores throughout her career. In her most notable effort, she won the BG Invitational Title last spring.

"Until last spring I never played up to my full potential," Parshall said. "My performance has really picked up since then."

Senior Patty Pilz will be missed on the team next fall, but Parks expects sophomore Lori Griffey, freshman Cathy Hackett and several promising recruits to fill the vacancies.

Starting off with a bang was easy for Bowling Green's women distance runners this year. The harriers returned in September ready to trounce every opponent in their path.

However, a few weeks after the Falcon's second complete season of competition began, the pace had slackened considerably.

Because several of coach Dave Williams' top runners were plagued with illnesses or injuries, he was forced to rely upon a relatively inexperienced nucleus.

While the team's standing was often a disappointment throughout the season, Williams said he is pleased with the women's final 22-17 invitational results.

"We did better than last year's team had done," Williams said. "We put together our first winning season, and on that we will lay a foundation for years to come."

Williams singled out performances by walk-on Karen

McQuilken, freshman, and sophomores Betsy Miller and Becky Dodson.

"Becky was running up to potential this year," he said. "I think Becky will improve a lot now because she is more confident."

Dodson, who continually boasted the best BG finish on the three-mile course, attributed her success to a helpful team atmosphere.

"I feel we were all equal in physical ability, but this was my first collegiate cross country season, and so I was more psyched up and geared to win than the others. After all, I was still unproven as a distance runner," she said.

Williams offered a final evaluation: "At this point our team can become great, or it can just be good. It depends on the kind of challenge our women can handle as the team grows."

Spread the word, field hockey fans: BG is back! And according to second-year coach Sue Gavron, the lady stickers have set their sights on higher goals.

After the team posted a disappointing 1-9-1 record in 1976, Gavron initiated a grueling conditioning schedule. Since then, Gavron has noticed increased concentration and a higher level of stickwork, as well as vastly improved fitness among team members.

But the greatest reward was evidenced by the team's 4-5-2 regular season record this fall.

BG tied with state champion, Dayton, while the backfield held the ominous Michigan and Ohio State offensive squads. And victory was sweet when the Falcons fielded state runnerup, Wooster College.

"It's a totally different feeling to walk out on the field when you're not assuming you'll lose," Gavron said. "Now we're sure we're not going to be anyone's patsy. We've produced some high-caliber, well-distributed play."

Praising the team's five seniors, Gavron labeled Joanne Schaefer's efforts superior. "She was a leader both off the field and on," Gavron said.

Although she expressed some concern about filling the gaps left by graduates, Gavron added, "The reputation and soundness of the team has been reestablished at last. Now we're ready to grow. Like the song says, 'We've Only Just Begun'."

The Falcon "swimmin' women" made waves this year in more ways than one.

Coach Tom Stubbs inherited from Jean Campbell a team that had seen its share of state championships and other laurels. Last year, when Campbell stepped down, she made a prediction: "This is a fantastic group and they certainly will go places."

And when Stubbs tested that statement, he watched the swimmers glide into first place at every dual and invitational meet of the season.

"You could say that this is their first truly undefeated season," Stubbs said. "They've never won all of the invitational meets in addition to winning the duals."

Stubbs attributes the team's success to the swimmers' determination to rise to the challenge of more stringent training. Because emphasis has switched from sprints to longer distance events, the coach demanded more.

"When I first got them, we went into tougher training, but they were willing to pay the price, and turn out for practice twice a day instead of once," Stubbs said.

All 22 women kept their heads wet throughout the season and, by March, with the state title in their wake, six team members had qualified for two individual and two relay events at the National AIAW Championships at Duke University.

Mrs. Campbell was right. It wasn't easy, but they went places.

Women's Basketball

By Kathy Kruse

Which term most accurately describes Falcon women's basketball this year? 1) Fast-breaking b) Heart-breaking

Actually, both answers could be considered correct. The Ladybirds' quick-paced offense was just not enough to give them the crucial edge in more than a few close decisions.

"We lost some unfortunate, easy games," second-year coach Nora Liu said, referring to the Miami, Toledo, Cincinnati, Kent games and the first-round state championship match against Youngstown. All of them were lost by five points or less.

"Most of the losses were in away games, and our percentage is not that high (off the home court)," she said.

In recent years, yet another name has been attached to the women: short.

"The weakness is that we don't have the big girls," Liu said. "But a combination of tall girls with skill is hard to come by."

However, when the women did manage to maneuver past their looming defenders, they did not display great shooting prowess.

"We had a chance to shoot, but we just didn't make the baskets when we needed to," Liu said.

Senior guard Bobbi Little added, "If you've seen any of the other teams, you know they have at least one starter over six feet tall. Our tallest girl is only 5'10"."

Although Little and the other senior co-captain, Jenny Gill, are relatively small, Liu said that the team will notice their absence next year.

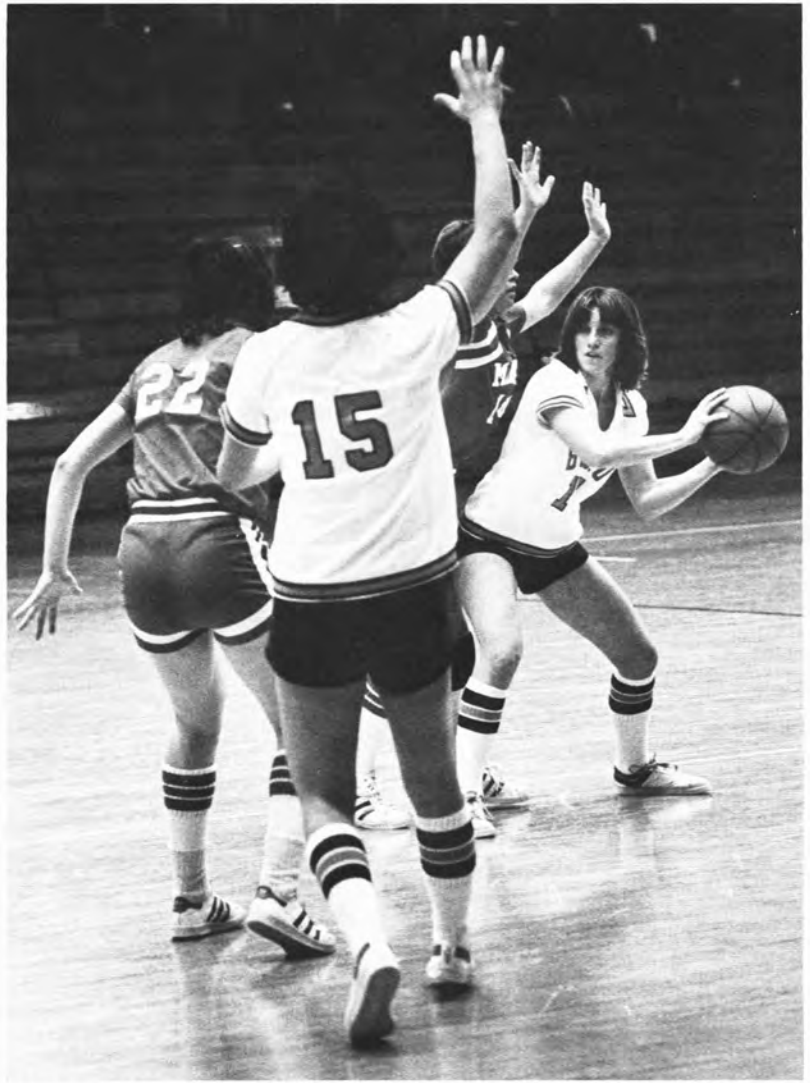

"It's hard to replace them," Liu said. "They are special people."

Keeping the Falcon women gymnasts on their toes throughout the season paid off for fourth-year coach Charles Simpson.

His team chalked up 14 wins, falling only once, to perennial power Kent State.

"We had an outstanding season," Simpson said. "Everyone we met gave us a run for our money."

And although other teams are improving by leaps and bounds each year, Simpson said that he thinks the Falcons are keeping pace.

"You can see how far we've come by our scores," he said. "Last year we generally finished with something just over 120 points. This year we've been over 130 points in every meet."

When the gymnasts met Kent State again at the State Championships, they hoped to knock their foe out of its title seat.

"We peaked at State," Simpson said of BG's fourth straight second-place performance. "We were prepared to challenge Kent, but we didn't quite get past them."

The Falcons also finished respectably at Midwest Regionals. Their 131.45 garnered seventh place in a field of 16 teams.

"And remember, this region has some of the best (gymnastics) schools in the country," Simpson said.

He praised the expertise of the BG squad, which, except for Junior Captain Pam Culler, is comprised of freshmen and sophomores.

"And next year looks even better," Simpson said, promising more young and talented recruits.

GREEKS

Sigma Nu sponsors a bike marathon each year.

By Dick Kaverman

"People who aren't members of a fraternity or sorority don't understand the terms 'brother' or 'sister,'" said Wayne Colvin, director of Residence Life Area IV.

Colvin, who oversees 24 fraternities and 15 sororities at the University, sees closeness among members as a primary benefit of the greek system.

Inter-Fraternity Council president John Mitchell agrees, and said membership in a greek organization also helps break barriers between faculty and greek students. This is accomplished partly through exchange dinners where faculty are invited to eat at a particular fraternity or sorority house.

But there's more to greek life than socializing. The more than 2,000 greeks at BGSU do service to the community. Nearly all houses sponsor a charitable project each year.

The greeks distribute food baskets to the needy at Thanksgiving; raise funds for Project Hope; bestow scholarships to Bowling Green High School students; and even escort local children around on Halloween night.

Does this mean greeks are changing?

One fraternity member said, "Greeks have turned away from an emphasis on social events and athletics in favor of a more serious orientation to service projects."

"It's hard to find a typical greek anymore," he said.

Presidential Breakfast

University President Hollis A. Moore discusses issues.

By Carol Groves

Breakfast is often sacrificed by college students for a few extra minutes of sleep, but not when it can be spent with University President Hollis Moore.

Seventeen students seated themselves at the long banquet table in the Pheasant Room of the Union early one morning in fall. They were among one of the few groups of students who had the opportunity to enjoy a presidential breakfast of french toast, sausage and juice. The breakfasts, which are sponsored by the Union Activities Organization (UAO), are offered free to the first 17 students who sign up.

"I didn't know we had this many breakfast eaters in the whole college," President Moore exclaimed as the students entered the Pheasant Room.

After the last students had arrived and pinned on their name tags, breakfast was served and the students introduced themselves. During breakfast, the president and the students discussed areas of student concern. General fees, construction of the recreation and music buildings, the Gay Union and campus police officer resignations headed the list of topics.

"I see my job as acting as a sensitive antenna picking up signals," President Moore explained. "These breakfasts serve as one more way to pick up ideas from students about what is going on."

Senior Karen Hite said, "I came to one of the breakfasts last year and enjoyed it, so I thought I'd come to another one."

"I've never seen President Moore before," said Julia Shubert, a participant at the breakfast. "He's quiet and soft-spoken, and he acted concerned."

Joe Bencivengo attended the breakfast because he wanted to "meet the head administrator of the school, find out about the new buildings and get involved with a campus activity."

Not only does the breakfast serve as a time for President Moore to pick up signals from the students, but it provides students with the opportunity to receive direct feedback on any questions they have about the University.

As President Moore said, "This is the only day of the year I don't have Wheat Chex for breakfast!"

Julian Bond

By Jane Musgrave

An unlikely combination of poet and politician emerged when Georgia state legislator and long time civil rights activist Julian Bond appeared in the Grand Ballroom on March 5 before a crowd of more than 500 persons.

"Life is unfair in 1978," Bond said, "if you are poor and pregnant, poor and non-white or simply poor."

These groups — the American "underclass" as Bond called them — are, after 200 years, "still waiting for their own declaration of independence," according to Bond.

After citing numerous statistics illustrating that there are now "black faces in high places," Bond went on to say that such statistics are deceiving. The majority of blacks is still forced to accept jobs as unskilled laborers where the wages are low and benefits few, Bond said, adding that blacks "as always, still represent two times as many of those who have no job at all."

"A quick glance at statistics shows that while the general condition of blacks has improved, our relative condition has actually managed to get much worse," he said.

Much of the progress that has been made during the civil rights crusades of the sixties has lost its meaning, according to Bond. When the more blatant forms of discrimination were removed in the sixties, Bond explained that many people believed that things had been radically altered for the better.

"Nothing could be farther from the truth," Bond said. "All the old sayings are still true. We are still last in, first out; last hired, first fired. We are still poor all out of proportion to our numbers, powerless despite our ability to elect presidents, hungry regardless of integrated lunch counters and ignorant despite integrated schools."

Bond outlined five economic goals that he said should be the aim of all persons concerned with the betterment of American life. He called for income and wealth re-distribution through a tax structure that recognizes the difference between the "needy and the greedy," the development of programs that will lead to real full employment, a life-long educational system for all, adequate cradle-to-grave health care financed through the national treasury, and effective social control of monopolies through government management of all vital services.

Quoting the late scholar William B. DuBois, Bond told the audience, "You hold the possible future in your hands, not by wish or by will but by thought, plan and organization."

Jean-Michel Cousteau

By Sue Hayward

Jean-Michel Cousteau was only seven years old when his parents threw him into the ocean. Equipped with scuba gear invented by his father, undersea explorer Jacques Cousteau, the younger Cousteau grew to love the experience.

Since then, Cousteau has become increasingly concerned over man's destruction of the environment. At a presentation in the Grand Ballroom March first, Cousteau said the ocean has become a "universal sewer," and "you have to go to very remote parts of the world to find a clean environment."

The solution?

"Without changing our standard of living, we can change our habits and conserve," Cousteau said. "The alternative is death. The ecological system has to be balanced or everything goes berserk. And if everything goes berserk, we go with it. Some scientists say it's already too late. I don't believe that."

Cousteau said he sees the major environmental problem as the world's growing population, which requires "more and more and larger and larger industries."

"The public has to resolve the problems of the environment," Cousteau said. "They have to be taught a respect for the environment so they don't destroy it by a lack of knowledge. We ecologists have nothing to lose but our lives."

Sir Robert Mark

By Lynn Reno

Scotland Yard has been immortalized in the pages of countless mystery novels, but how does it really operate in combatting crime?

Sir Robert Mark, former director of Scotland Yard, discussed the English police system October 6, in the Grand Ballroom. Sir Robert has 40 years' experience with the English police force, four of which were spent as head of the London Metropolitan Police.

"Police are a mirror of society," said Sir Robert. "In an armed society you will find an armed police force."

British police do not carry guns, he said, only 12-inch night sticks. Possessions of firearms is restricted to banks and security guards. Penalties for illegal use of firearms are severe, and police use guns only on such occasions as confrontations with terrorists.

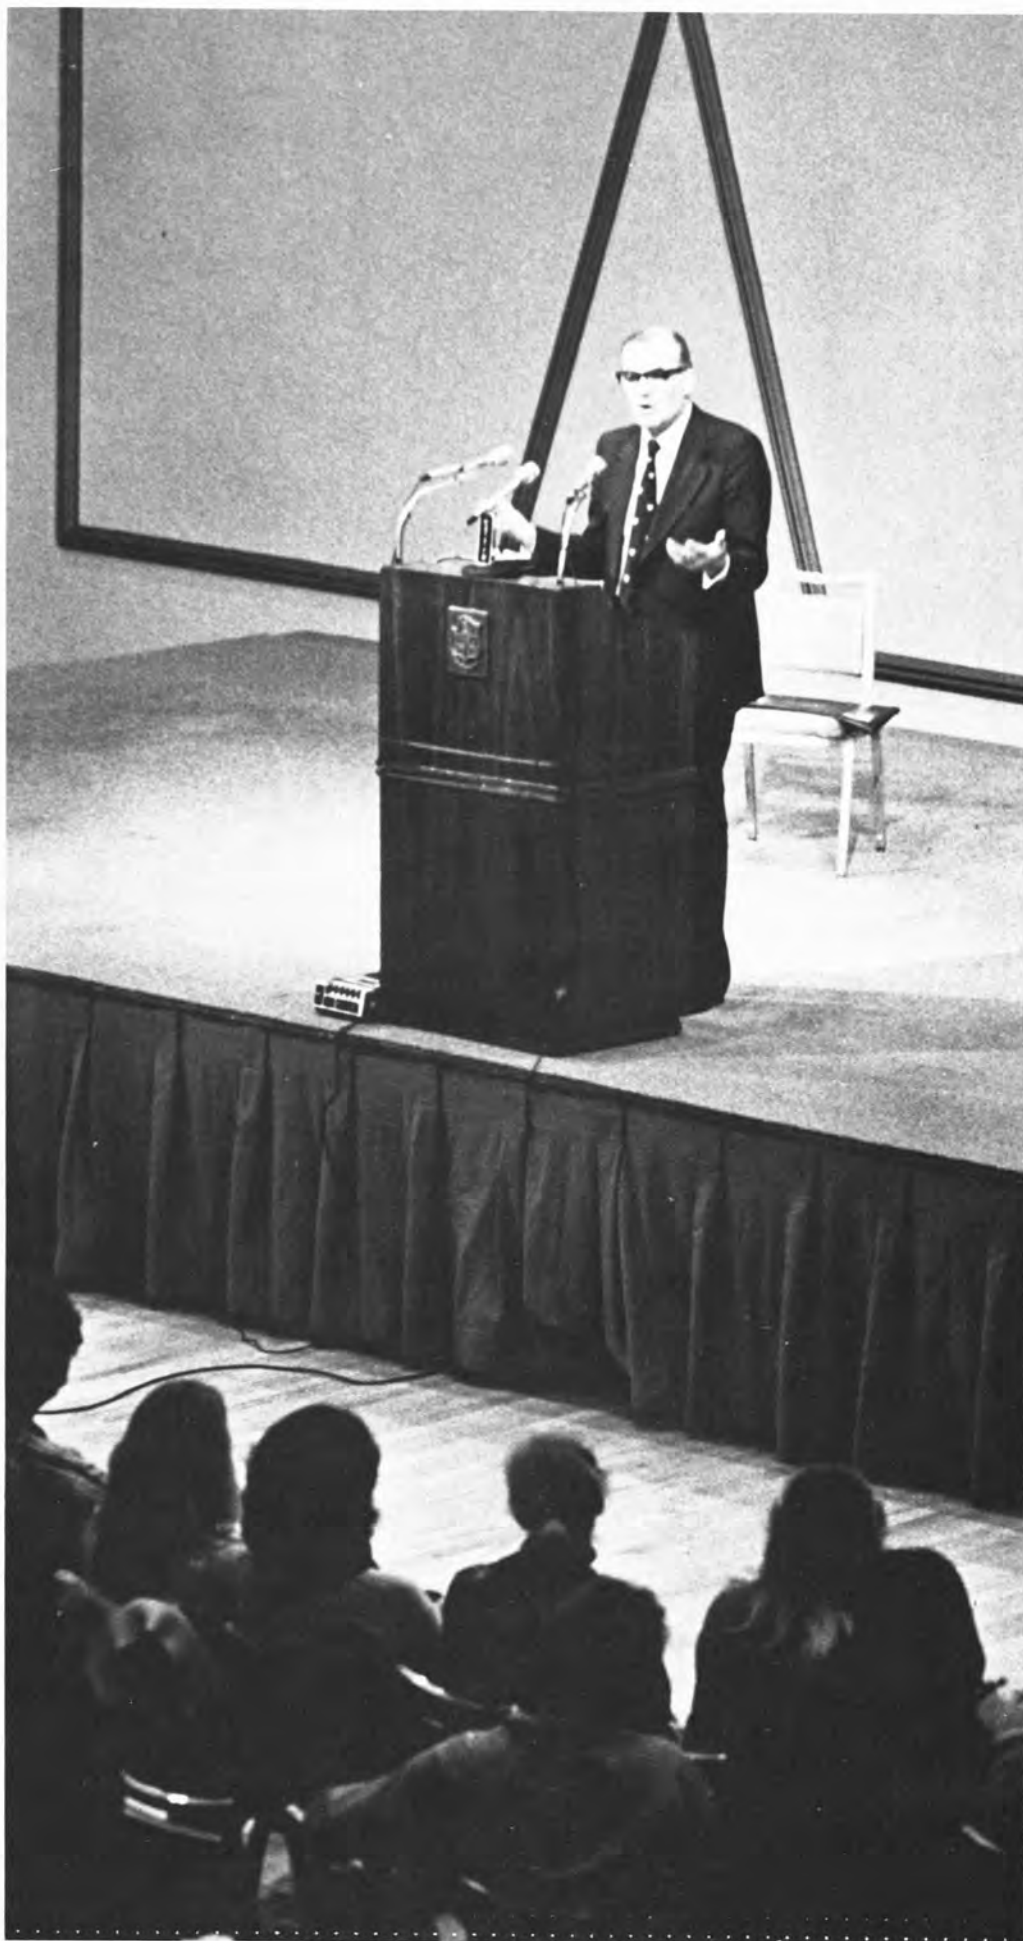

Since 1973, 148 terrorists have been arrested in 300 bombing and shooting incidents. Sir Robert said none of the terrorists were killed or harmed by the police.

"Our police are not violent in the pursuit of crime," Sir Robert said.

One or two policemen are murdered each year in the line of duty, he said, yet police have killed only four persons involved in crimes in the last 32 years.

Sir Robert added that the police in Britain are a legend.

As for other countries, he said, "a society that feels dissatisfied with its police system should appreciate that the cause is attributed to society itself."

Lorraine and Ed Warren

The Warrens

By Sue Hayward

Halloween night, just before the witching hour, a pair of ghost hunters sent chills through an audience in the Grand Ballroom.

Ed and Lorraine Warren, demonologists, presented their case to prove the existence of ghosts and demons. They showed slides of many supernatural incidents they have investigated. Photographs of images purported to be ghosts were displayed. The Warrens also discussed such mysterious phenomena as a Raggedy Ann doll (possessed by a spirit) which attempted to strangle a man; an orange, which, the Warrens claim, bled real blood when cut open; and objects which levitated in a room inhabited by spirits.

Known by some as "America's top ghost hunters," the Warrens have worked with clergy, police and psychiatrists in solving psychic phenomena around the world.

Their lecture left many listeners convinced that the Warrens' presentation was a hoax, but others agreed with the notion that spirits and demons do stalk the earth.

An informal discussion followed the presentation.

Karen DeCrow

ERA: The

By Jane Musgrave

To say that Phyllis Schlafly, the founder and national chairman of STOP-ERA, and Karen DeCrow, past-president of the National Organization of Women, disagree on issues concerning women's rights is like saying the Titanic suffered a minor mishap on her maiden voyage.

Debating before a crowd of more than 2,200 persons in the Grand Ballroom January 18, the two women voiced sharply contrasting viewpoints on the Equal Rights Amendment, male and female relationships, abortion, and the impact of the International Women's Year Conference which was held in Houston in November, 1977.

DeCrow said that she found it "embarrassing to stand before a large group and explain why I, as a New York attorney, want to be included in the United States Constitution."

Although the amendment is still three states shy of the 38 needed for ratification, DeCrow assured the audience that "The polls which have been taken over the past few years have shown that the ERA is needed, demanded and will indeed be a part of the Constitution in 1979."

Schlafly claimed that many of the polls are frauds and that "the proponents of the ERA have been unable to convince the majority of the people to support the ERA.

"The ERA won't give women any opportunities they don't have now," Schlafly said, stating instead that the amendment "will take away many of the rights women have enjoyed" such as exemption from the military draft, financial support from their husbands and single-sexed school and clubs.

DeCrow took issue with Schlafly's comment that the ERA would force women into combat duty. DeCrow said that opponents of the ERA frequently characterize feminists as a group of man-haters. She explained that she could think of "nothing more man-hating than saying 'my brother can go off to war and get killed but my sister can't'."

According to Schlafly, the women's liberation movement gives women a negative attitude towards life. "Women are told that if they get married, their husbands will treat them like slaves, and that life is nothing but a bunch of dirty dishes and dirty diapers." As a result, Schlafly said many women wake up each morning with "chips on their shoulders."

Schlafly, who describes herself as a mother of six children and author of eight books, said that "marriage, the family and having children are worth the social sacrifices. The rewards I get at home are worth more than all the other exciting things I've ever done."

DeCrow, however, described Schlafly differently. She said that if she had a daughter she would encourage her to use Schlafly as a role model. DeCrow said she would tell her daughter, "'Here is a woman who is a writer, a speaker, one of the leading organizers in the country, and now a law student. 'I would say to her, 'My daughter, see the opportunities that are open to women once you get out of the kitchen.'"

On the issue of abortion, the two women were equally at odds. DeCrow celebrated January 20, the fifth anniversary of the Supreme Court's decision legalizing abortion, as the "fifth anniversary that women in the United States didn't have to die to terminate a pregnancy."

Schlafly termed the anniversary as "the fifth anniversary that our country has tolerated the killing of five million unborn babies."

DeCrow said that "the issue is not whether we want people to get abortions. The issue is will abortions be safe? The answer must be 'yes'."

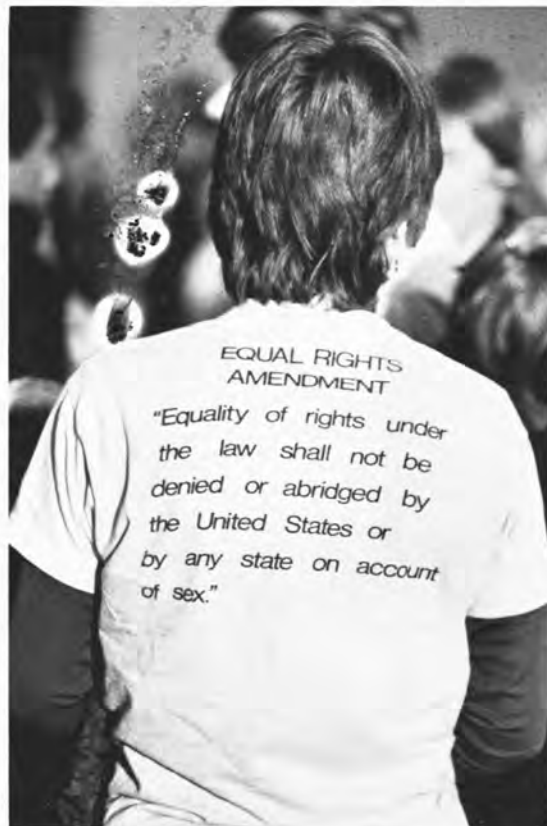

Throughout the hour-long debate, the two women were frequently silenced by various responses from the crowd. Groans, boos, hisses, laughter, applause and even occasional chants punctuated many of the speakers' statements. Area feminists waved signs and distributed pamphlets on various women's rights issues.

Although women far outnumbered men in the audience, the division of loyalties did not appear to be based on sex. Men were seen waving signs with words, "No More" printed beneath a picture of a coat hanger. Women were seen wearing "STOP-ERA" T-shirts.

The debate clearly illustrated that women's rights is not a female nor a male issue, but a human issue.

Teaching Not Preaching

Moseley Hall renovation caused a classroom shortage.

By Roger Lowe

Daily attendance at Prout Chapel increased considerably during fall quarter. But most of the students were not there to meditate or worship. They were there to attend their regularly-scheduled classes.

With Moseley Hall under renovation for all of the quarter, classroom space was scarce. So five sections of classes, each with about 80 or more students, were assigned to meet in Prout Chapel. Other classes met in the Union, Offenhauer Towers and the Centrex building. Many departmental conference rooms were also used as classrooms.

The Commuter Center, usually located in the basement of Moseley, was shifted to the Browsing Room of the Union.

"With Moseley down, we didn't have a choice," said Joseph Wheeler, coordinator of scheduling.

Renovation of Moseley involved installation of "thermalbreak" windows, which reduce heat loss in winter and heat gain in summer.

Classes were supposed to be back in Moseley Hall by the end of October, but the delay of delivery on some construction materials kept classes out of the building all quarter.

Meanwhile, some students and faculty meeting in Prout, complained about the uncomfortable pews.

The Spirited Six

The Union windows are one of SicSic's display cases.

By Mary Reinbolt

Late at night — when most unwary students are asleep — six men in grotesque Halloween masks slink around the BGSU campus.

Their mission: to boost student spirit by hanging signs painted red and black, advertising campus events, rooting for the Falcon athletic teams and commenting on University issues.

The six men are SICSIC, a secret organization begun 32 years ago. Membership in SICSIC is limited to two seniors, two juniors and two sophomores. Their identities are not revealed to anyone except their adviser, Robert Mazur. But just prior to graduation, the two senior members are unmasked and photographed for the KEY.

Once a week, the masked men slip off campus quietly and meet at their hideout, a University-owned building. There, they dress in their masks and coveralls and paint their famous signs. The whereabouts of the hideout is kept a mystery.

And mystery is the key to SICSIC's success.

One member recalled a night when SICSIC members were walking toward the Union to hang signs:

"A group of about 15 big, strong Phi Deltis were standing out front. I thought to myself, 'Oh no! These guys are going to tackle us and rip our masks off.'

"Instead, they just kind of watched us in awe. Then the next day when I passed one of those guys, I said to myself, 'Wow! He has no idea that that was just wimpy little me behind that mask last night!'"

SicSic says it best.

Spreading Joy

The Gospel Choir has grown in its nine years of existence.

By Kim Fleming

The enthusiasm of BGSU's Gospel Choir comes through in the power of 57 voices. The dedication of its members was recognized this year at their Spring concert, when the Choir celebrated its ninth year of existence.

Having toured many Eastern and Southern states, the Choir will travel this year to Boston and New York City to perform. The Gospel Choir also sings at high schools, elementary schools, benefits, and almost anywhere else they are asked.

The group has been growing in popularity and now performs at least six times per quarter. Their repertoire of more than 100 songs includes the favorite "Isn't He Lovely?" The Choir's style ranges from gospel music, spirituals, anthems and hymns to contemporary and African music. Members hope to be known soon not only in the United States but all over the world.

Director Curtis Morgan, freshman, conducts the Choir with President John Lampkin. Business managers are Joyce West and Faith Hariston.

"We keep increasing the choir," said Teresa Sanders, senior and Choir adviser. "We want people to know that it's an organization that spreads the message. We spread a lot of joy."

A Return to Tradition

By Sue Hayward

BGSU returned to its old-fashioned homecoming traditions this year, traditions that had gone by the wayside.

But instead of electing just a homecoming queen, it seemed only fair to represent both sexes. And at the BGSU-Miami football game, King Mark Davis and Queen Jacquelyn Gram received their crowns. They reigned over a losing game, as the Falcons succumbed to the Redskins 33-13.

The annual snake dance wasn't very successful, either. Though 1,364 students joined hands in a spirited line that wound around the campus, there weren't quite enough people. The people of North Yorkshire, England — who took the world record from BG in 1976 — remained champs with a record, 4,742 in their human chain.

But George Benson smoothed away those disappointments at the homecoming concert. Undergrads, alumni, faculty and visitors crowded into Anderson Arena to hear him play and sing, and suddenly scores and statistics didn't seem so important.

We'll get 'em next year!

Band leader Mark S. Kelly

By Jane Musgrave

So you can out-toot Doc Severinsen on the Trombone? You say you can twirl eight flaming batons at once and never drop a single one? And you think having these abilities entitles you to membership in the Bowling Green Marching Band?

Guess again. In order to become one of the 218 members of the marching band you must be willing to sacrifice 15-20 hours of your time each week to practice and perform. But that's the easy part.

Membership in the band is based on the individual's ability to endure the physical pain that often results from strenuous marching sessions.

Many accomplished musicians have fallen victim to leg cramps, pulled muscles or blistered feet during pre-season practice, according to Rob Cintron, a three-year band member. Physical pain has forced some to drop out, never having experienced the joy of performing in the stadium before a crowd of appreciative football fans.

After classes begin, the band practices from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. on weekdays and from 9 a.m. until game-time on Saturday. And it pays off.

"The crowd was appreciative of the band's performance at the first game," said Greg Patko, sophomore band member. "Even before we started playing they were all on their feet cheering. It really makes you feel good," he said.

Other band members agreed. "Bowling Green crowds are always good to the band," said Janet Olson, a senior band member.

This year's most popular halftime shows included contemporary hits such as the themes from "Rocky," "Star Wars" and "Star Trek," as well as older songs, such as Perry Como's 1940's tune, "Temptation."

For all the time and energy band members expend on the shows, they only receive two hours of college credit, according to the band director. Obviously, University credit is not their main concern.

“Working Hard at Sounding Good”

By Carol Groves

The University Women's Chorus is more than a collection of 160 voices. It is a diverse group of women joined together enthusiastically for the mere enjoyment of singing.

“They're terrific,” Christopher Sprink, conductor of the chorus, said. “They have the most enthusiasm of any group I have conducted.”

The chorus, designed to serve the needs of students outside the School of Music, meets as a regularly-scheduled class three times a week. That time is used for practice.

The chorus performs four concerts on campus every year, including annual fall and spring concerts. The Women's Ensemble, a select group of 32 voices from the University Women's Chorus, perform additional concerts on and off campus.

“Working with the chorus is not work at all,” Sprink explained. “They have a lot of talent and spirit.”

Kelly Bosecker, a junior business pre-law and accounting major, is president of the choir. She attributes much of the success of the chorus to the enthusiasm displayed by Sprink.

“We are really coming into our own,” Bosecker said. “Each quarter there are more women joining. I think the reason is because we are working hard at sounding good and have made a name for ourselves.”

Once More With Feeling

By Jim Flick

Men's chorus is just for fun.

"Not all the guys sing that well," said Graduate Assistant Eric Coffelt, director of the chorus. "But they do their darndest to sing as well as they can. They get a surprisingly good sound.

"We sing anything from sacred music to barbershop quartets," said Coffelt, who replaced Dr. Richard Mathey as chorus director while Mathey was on sabbatical, "and we sing entertaining things, as well as some educational music."

The 80-member chorus is often asked to perform at school assemblies in Toledo, and gives at least one concert on campus per quarter. The University allows the chorus three travel days during the quarter for concerts.

The men's chorus planned to travel to Washington, D.C., over spring break, giving concerts along the way to sing for their supper.

"We'll see if we can sing for Jimmy Carter at the White House," Coffelt said. "If not, we'll sing on the White House steps."

The chorus is the most informal University men's ensemble. Only a few of the members are music majors, although Coffelt, a 1977 BGSU graduate in music, was a member while he was an undergraduate.

The group often mixes pranks and fun with their singing. For instance, on Halloween one of the members dressed up in a gorilla costume and snuck up behind Coffelt while he was conducting.

"He scared the pants off me," Coffelt grinned.

"They enjoy going around to girls' dorms and singing for them," Coffelt said. "It's good for the guys, and the girls like it, too."

Coffelt shook his head and smiled. "I've got a bunch of clowns in here."

A comic act called, "Don Brown's Body," was well-done by Cindy Hewett.

By Jim Flick

Every year a new group of freshmen arrives on campus, and among them are some talented people.

This year's talented newcomers got a chance to show-off their abilities at the Freshman Variety Show, in the Main Auditorium October 6-8.

"We used to call it the Freshman Talent Show," said co-director Tippy Shedron. "But a lot of people thought that meant we gave away prizes."

This year, co-directors Shedron and Peter Mellen tried to unify the show with a thin plotline. "Waiting for the Boys" was the story of several college women waiting wistfully for their dates to arrive.

Unfortunately, it was a silly plot, and some of the acts had little or nothing to do with it. But the talent of the performers rose above the silliness.

One of the most charming acts was Stacy Mitchhart's rendition of the whimsical song "Popsicle Toes." He combined good guitar work, a soft balladeer's voice and a good deal of charm to produce one of the few acts that put the audience at ease. Denise Bostdorff played his cute, bookish girlfriend.

The best comic act of the night was Cindy Hewett's "Don Brown's Body," a satirical cutting based on a Mickey Spillane novel. She talked the way millions of readers must imagine Spillane's tough guy hero, Mike Hammer, would talk. And the fact that she looked more like one of Spillane's blond bombshells only heightened the humor.

Judy Messina had a tough job. She stayed in the background for most of the show and accompanied musical numbers on the piano. But the next-to-last act was hers. Excellent piano work and a fine, lyric voice marked her solo debut with "Remembering You."

It was evident that the University had once again attracted a talented crop of freshmen.

Aftermath of a Blizzard

By Sue Hayward

The storm began in the early morning of Thursday, January 26. It gathered the force of a hurricane, carrying winds strong enough to knock a pedestrian off his feet. It rattled the windows in the dorms, and dropped enough snow to paralyze most of Ohio.

By Friday, the wind and snow hadn't stopped. University classes were cancelled. Traffic was literally at a standstill. And that was only the beginning for the worst blizzard in a century of Ohio history.

Later that day, the heat failed in most dorms and throughout the city. Students bundled up in long underwear and piles of blankets. While the temperature outside plummeted to -50°F ., the temperature inside was hardly comfortable.

Students in several dorms organized slumber parties in the lounges to conserve body heat. In Offenhauer Towers, amusement came in the form of a "blizzard dance" and "blizzard tournaments" of ping-pong and pool. UAO showed weekend movies as scheduled, a disco dance was held in the Carnation Room, and Cooper and Dodge performed in a free concert in the Grand Ballroom.

It wasn't long until the water went off. Snow was melted and strained for brushing teeth and drinking. The cafeterias rationed cans of soft drinks as students stocked up.

Bags of pretzels and potato chips disappeared quickly as students hoarded food. With food shipments delayed for an undetermined period, cafeteria managers asked students to select only one entree per meal. Student volunteers ran the kitchens while regular cafeteria workers were stranded at home.

Hungry but hardy, some people bundled up in scarves and sweaters and walked in caravan groups to the grocery store. Many grocery stores were open by Saturday the 28th, and milk, bread and beer were the first items out of stock.

Boredom became apparent by the 28th. BG's Mayor Perkins imposed a curfew on all city residents for three days to facilitate snow removal. No one was permitted to enter the city in a car or on foot unless faced with an emergency, or out to buy food. Fines of $1,000 were the penalty for breaking the curfew. All establishments selling alcoholic beverages had to close.

BGSU fared better than other parts of the city, where electricity was cut off for several days. Power at the University kept television, radios, toaster ovens and popcorn poppers working.

Sunday, the water returned, but couldn't be drunk until it was boiled for 45 minutes. Showers weren't taboo, though, and long lines of people stood outside bathrooms as the luxury of soap-and-water was restored.

Army helicopters buzzed around, running emergency missions. Army equipment worked steadily to clear the streets.

By Monday, most roads were nearly open. Classes were cancelled until Tuesday, so students found time to play in the drifts and cavort in the aftermath of the storm.

Tuesday, things were relatively normal. But conversations tended to dwell on the blizzard for several days afterward, and the memory will linger for years.

Mime's the Word

The Flight of Icarus

By Carol Groves

"In Ancient Greece on a small island were imprisoned Daedalus and his son, Icarus. In quest of freedom, Daedalus fashioned wings of feathers and wax and gave them to the boy with this warning: 'Fly not too high or your wings will surely fail in the heat of the sun.' And with that the youth embarked on the Flight of Icarus."

The quote from Edith Hamilton's book on mythology and narration set the scene as the youth — mime artist Trent Arterberry — illuminated by a silver-blue spotlight, took flight from atop a towering platform in the Grand Ballroom February 15. The hushed audience of 200 watched in amazement as bare-chested Arterberry journeyed through space with bird-like grace. Upon reaching a height where the heat of the sun caused his wings to fail, the spotlight dimmed slowly and Arterberry disappeared, leaving the captured audience in disbelief that he had taken the entire flight while remaining on the platform.

Mime is a form of silent theatre in which the artist attempts to represent different universal characters, objects or ideas through the movement of his body. The flight of Icarus was just one of the acts Arterberry performed. Others included "The Firefly", "The Horse and

The Man", "The Apple" and "War."

"It's the imaginary objects that separate mime from dance and theatre," 26-year-old Arterberry explained, "but the imaginary objects are not mime."

The mime artist must draw on subjects of universal understanding, he said.

"You have to be able to communicate with the audience and create a dramatic conflict, make them laugh, feel sick or sad," he said.

A former pre-med major at UCLA, Arterberry was moved by a performance given by Marcel Marceau — a world renowned mime artist — when Arterberry was a child. After watching another artist perform, Arterberry realized that "real people could do that."

With that realization, he dropped out of school and began an apprenticeship as a mime artist. He has since received national recognition from performing with such acts as Billy Preston, B. B. King, The Kinks, Aerosmith and Boston.

An artist of mime for six years, Arterberry explained one of the things he likes most about his work is that no one tells him what to do. His show is a result of his own inspiration.

Ever wonder what a playwright thinks of a college production of his play? On October 19, Edward Albee attended the University's premiere of his Pulitzer Prize-winning play, "A Delicate Balance."

"The cast is to be congratulated. It is an exceedingly difficult play to do," Albee said after attending the opening of the show. "A playwright feels grateful to have his work done with such devotion."

"A Delicate Balance" was one of the most elaborate and sophisticated shows produced on campus in recent years. The cast, which included several faculty members, interpreted Albee's tour de force superbly, and the set was magnificent.

Prior to the opening of the play, Albee spoke to a large audience in University Hall's Main Auditorium on "The Playwright versus The Theatre."

"Art is metaphor," he said, "and that is what distinguishes us from animals."

Albee, one of the world's foremost modern playwrights, has won Pulitzer Prizes for "A Delicate Balance" and "Seascape." His "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" is considered a contemporary classic.

If a University production can please a playwright of this stature, who needs Broadway?

On Nov. 16, 1977, a collection of beggars, whores and thieves took over Main Auditorium, University Hall, and the audience thoroughly enjoyed it.

The occasion was the opening of Bertolt Brecht's "Threepenny Opera" which director Roger Gross calls, "probably the greatest hit the musical comedy theatre has ever seen." It's easy to see why. This show had comedy, romance, music, suspense, sex . . . something for everyone.

Set in the seamy side of Victorian London, the story revolves around Macheath, a notorious outlaw, and his betrayal by Peachum, king of the city's beggars. The ending had an exciting twist, and the show had a lot to say about exploitation, justice, and honor (or lack of it) among the thieves.

Director Roger Gross put together a tight, enjoyable show. The scenes flowed almost effortlessly, and the players were choreographed well throughout the entire production.

Johann van der Merwe was an able musical director, and Ruth Seligman did an excellent job with costumes. Robert Hansen's open-style platform set worked well with the changing needs of the play, yet gave an immediate impression of dirt and darkness.

All elements came together for a moving, exciting performance, and "Threepenny Opera" will be long remembered as a quality production.

Mrs. Malaprop slaughtered the English language beautifully, Sir Anthony Absolute blustered superbly, and Captain Absolute plotted poorly. But in the end, the Captain got the girl — Lydia Languish — anyway.

These were the saving graces of Richard B. Sheridan's classic, "The Rivals," an otherwise disappointing Main Season production performed in the Main Auditorium winter quarter.

It opened on January 25, on the eve of the Great Blizzard and a three-day break from classes. Weekend performances were postponed until the following weekend.

The play is an elaborate period show set in late 18th century England, complete with costumes and language from the era. It centers around Captain Absolute's difficulties in winning the hand of Lydia, played by Mindy Teachy. Lydia would much rather elope with him. So the well-to-do captain pretends to be a penniless ensign. The appearance of two rivals for Lydia's attentions complicates matters further.

Senior Mary Johangten was most outstanding as Mrs. Malaprop, Lydia's vain old aunt whose propensity to misuse the vocabulary earned a form of her name a place in Webster's dictionary. Many of the subtleties of her dialect were unfortunately lost on the audience, but Johangten made Malaprop the most memorable character in the show.

Unfortunately, the action dragged between the interchanges of the more interesting characters. The flowery, courtly language of 18th century Britain and the bizarre, complicated plot confused the audience.

The most disappointing aspect of the production was the set. The turntable center of the stage — used for rapid scene changes — was effective, but the set had an amateur paint job with poor depth, perspective and color coordination.

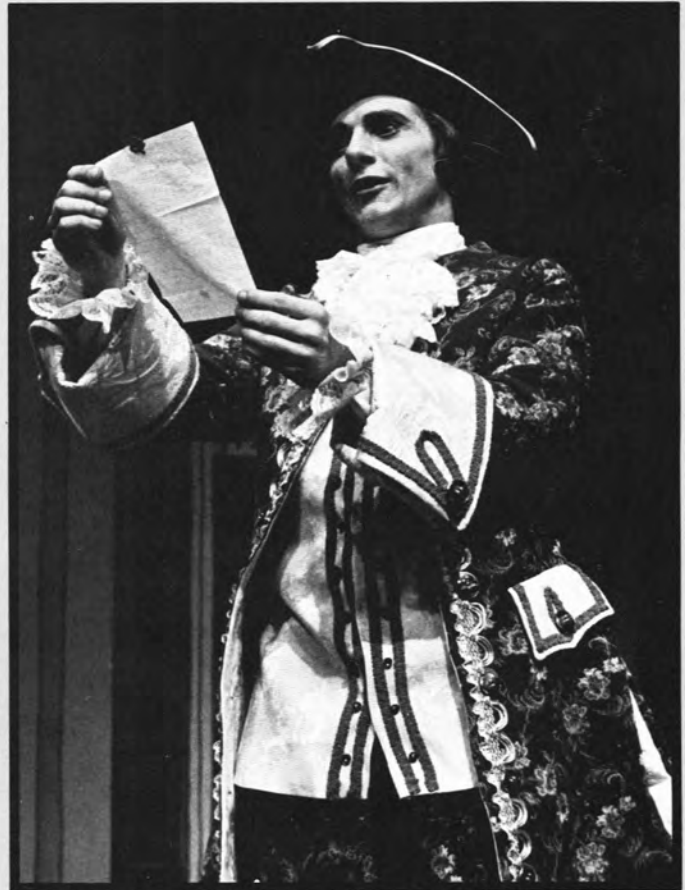

It is a credit to the cast that they almost pulled it off, despite the flaws.

"Flight" was a worthy experiment.

"I don't even consider it a play," said Alex Marshall, director of the Third World Theater production, which played February 28 through March 4 in Joe E. Brown Theater.

"It's an experience that will come from the performers — we call them 'activators' — so the audience becomes part of the performance."

The audience was invited to shout out their response to the poetry and dramatic bits, or join in the chants and songs reminiscent of Negro spirituals.

The show was different every night, as the cast experimented with technique and responded to the mood of each night's audience.

"Everyone should get something different out of it," said Marshall, a doctoral candidate on leave from Grambling State University.

"The medium was the black experience, but the meaning's universal," Marshall said. Both blacks and whites were included in the cast.

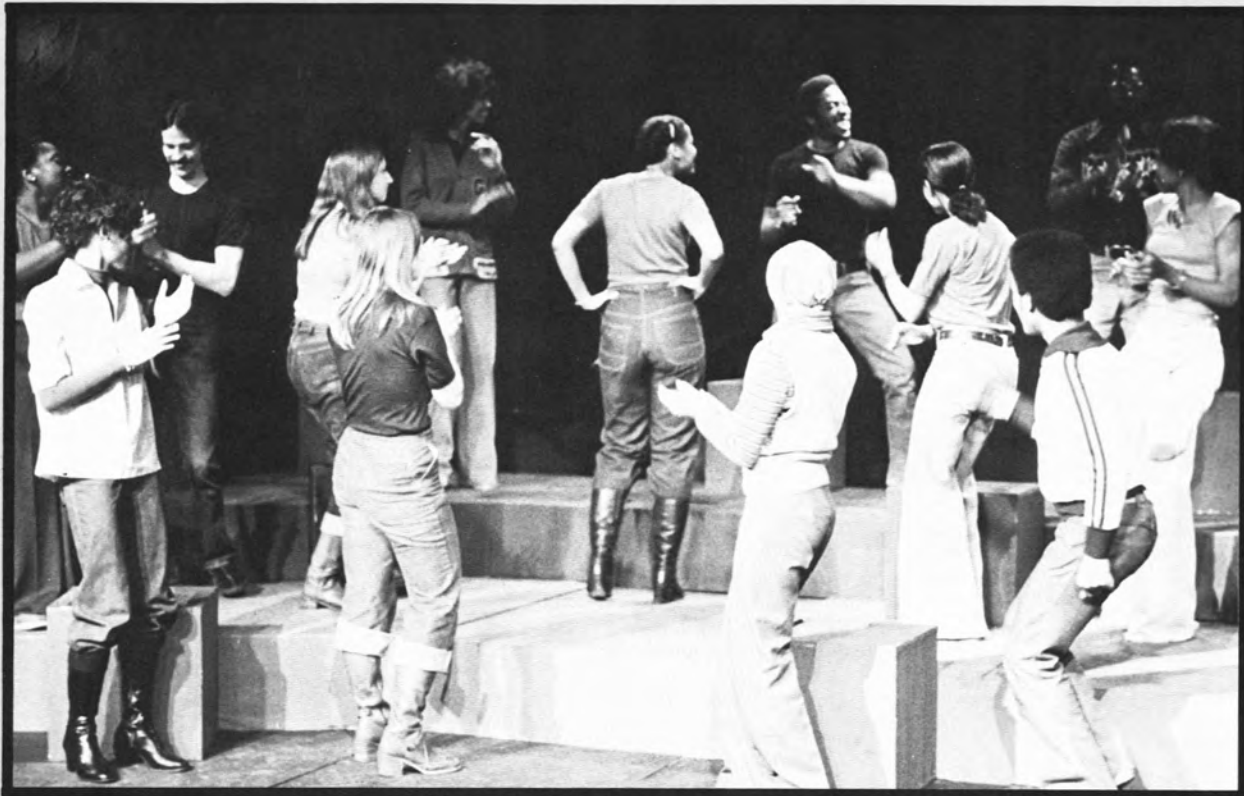

Music and rhythm conveyed as much as the words. The feeling of being black, the hopelessness of the ghetto, and the celebration of life that overcomes the blues were communicated to the audience nonvocally.

The audience chanted, shouted, and clapped.

“Rambling Man” Steve Martin

By Karen Borchers

Well, excuse me.

Everyone has heard these three words. Usually it makes one sit up and take notice. But when Steve Martin says, “Well, excuuuuuse me” people double over in their seats and roar with laughter.

That’s what happened when comedian Steve Martin and singer-songwriter John Sebastian performed in the Grand Ballroom October 9, as UAO opened its concert season.

“First of all, I’d like to congratulate the decorating committee,” Martin said. “I think they’ve done a great job of making this beautiful theater look so much like a gymnasium.”

The audience roared.

Martin first made a name for himself in the comedy business not as a performer, but as a comedy writer on the Smothers Brothers Show. He also wrote for Sonny and Cher, Glen Campbell and John Denver before he began performing his own material. Recently, Martin appeared as a guest and guest host on the “Tonight Show” and was a host on “Saturday Night Live.”

Martin informed the audience of more than 2,500 persons that he was “into professional photography.” He picked up an Instamatic camera and said, “I paid nine hundred bucks for this.” Laughter. He then proceeded to take flash pictures of himself. More laughter.

“How much is it to get in?” Martin asked.

“$5.50!” shouted Martin, “Ha ha ha ha!”

“Okay, I know it’s a lot of money to come in here and I want you to feel like you’re getting your money’s worth,” Martin said. “So, what I’m going to do is massage every member of the audience.”

Martin leaped off the stage and gave back rubs to the persons in the front row seats.

Martin’s other routines included “Happy Feet,” “Let’s Get Small,” “Fun Balloon Animals,” and Martin’s friendly gestures to the crowd.

Toward the end of the show Martin said, “I’ve got to get running now.”

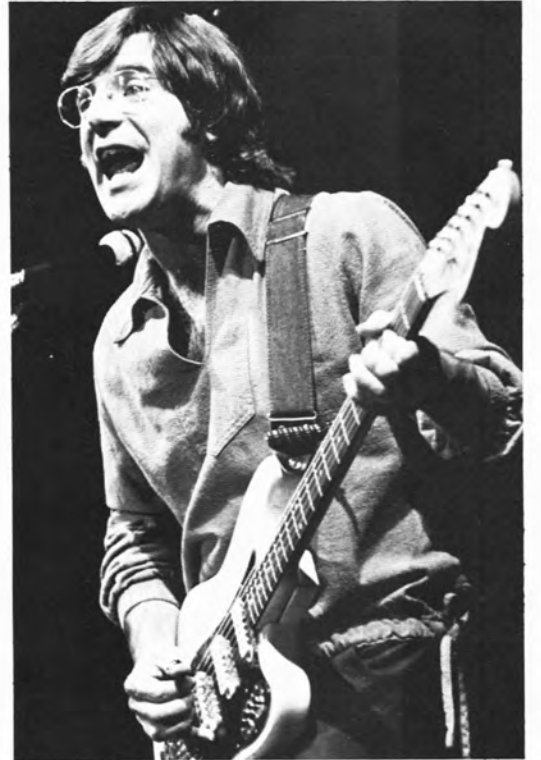

The audience groaned.

Most people seemed to enjoy Martin’s humor and referred to him as “an unbelievable man.” But it was Martin who summed it all up when he said, “I’m a wild and crazy guy!”

"Breezin" George Benson

By Jim Flick

"Are you ready?" asked George Benson's keyboard man.

"Yeah!" yelled the Homecoming crowd that jammed Anderson Arena October 22.

"Yeah!" roared the crowd.

Bowling Green was indeed ready for Benson. The jazz guitarist's "Breezin" album, released in early 1976, recently became the best-selling jazz album in history.

Benson opened the concert with a rambling, free-wheeling version of "The World Is a Gehetto," which featured Benson's fine guitar work. Then the music settled out into a long, mellow set that ended with an exciting rendition of "This Masquerade," Benson's Top 40's hit.

Was Bowling Green ready? Bowling Green is always ready for a performer as talented as Benson.

Doc Severinsen

By Sue Hayward

No one else can wear a sparkly purple suit with fringe, and carry it off with such class. And few people can rate two standing ovations from an audience of thousands.

But one performer can, and did.

"For those of you who missed the introduction, I'm Doc Severinsen."

Doc, the flashy band leader of Johnny Carson's "Tonight Show," performed in Anderson Arena Saturday, Nov. 5, for Parent's Day. The evening before, Carson had announced on his show that Doc would be appearing at BGSU.

Backed up by a full orchestra, Doc played his trumpet, danced, sang and joked with the audience. Three young women in filmy costumes danced and did back-up vocals. (One was Doc's daughter.)

Doc generated excitement, nostalgia and, at the end, tears. His show began with contemporary music and continued with country and western, the blues, jazz and a tribute to Louis "Sachmo" Armstrong.

Doc honored a request from the audience for "Flight of the Bumblebee." Only Doc could play it on a horn, moving his fingers in a rapid blur.

When he had taken his bows and left the stage, the roar of the audience's applause brought him back for an encore with "Shenandoah."

It hardly seemed possible that a trumpet which had blared at ear-shattering pitches could sound so fluid and hushed.

The magic of Doc's horn came and went too quickly, back into the realm of late night television.

Pablo Cruise and Alex Bevan

Students in balcony wait for the concert to begin.

Alex Bevan

By Jim Flick

The only question was, whom did everyone come to see?

Local favorite Alex Bevan, of University coffeehouse fame, opened the November 29 Pablo Cruise concert with a mixture of fine tunes and rowdy, funny songs.

The large crowd, taking time off from getting ready for finals, was so charmed by Bevan that they called him back for an encore when the Clevelander tried to walk off the stage after a long set.

Pablo Cruise's electric and electrifying music went right to the heart of the charged-up crowd. Their solid pop music featured Cory Lerios's innovative work on grand piano and the jazz-tinged bass guitar of Bruce Day. The lead guitar and drums meshed well for a rocking, jazzy sound.

The West Coast group vaulted into national prominence in 1977 with the release of their gold album, "A Place in the Sun," and their hit single, "Whatcha Gonna Do?"

But it was Alex Bevan people talked about on the way home.

"Dream Weaver" Gary Wright

Lighting added to the concert mood.

By Kim Fleming

The stage was set. The fans were ready. The Grand Ballroom was jammed with fans waiting to hear the Dream Weaver himself, and they weren't disappointed.

Starcastle warmed the audience first with their radiant brand of sure-fire sound. Their hand-clapping, electronic, motion-making music gave way to the more easy-listening Gary Wright. Together, the two formed a mellow blend which balanced perfectly for a great evening's entertainment.

Impressive lighting and film coordination grabbed the audience and held them suspended in a dreamlike state of sight and sound. Multiple images and computer-made shapes helped the audience soar through songs like "Dream Weaver", "Blind Feelin's", and "Shy Eyes."

"Excellent" was the only way to describe the music. "Ready" was the only way to describe the audience. And the Dream Weaver really helped us "make it through the night."

The audience demanded two encores.

"Jazz Man" Chuck Mangione

By Andrea Pitkow

Flugelhorn. Flute. Saxophone. Shining brass instruments. A warm, excited audience. Jazz.

Chuck Mangione.

The progressive jazz of trumpeter Chuck Mangione and his Quartet electrified a full house in the Grand Ballroom on Saturday, March 4.

From the first swelling notes of Mangione's flugelhorn in "It Feels So Good," the title song from their newest album, the crowd was his.

Mangione announced that the album reached the one million dollar mark that very afternoon — their first "gold album."

The band played such jazz tunes as "Day After Our First Night Together," "Chase the Clouds Away," and "Land of Make Believe."

The sweet notes of Mangione's horn were well received by the crowd of jazz lovers.

They played the rousing theme from an upcoming film with Anthony Quinn called "The Children of Sanchez." "We're not supposed to play this until the film comes out," kidded Mangione, "but we can't wait any longer!"

"Bellavia," the rhythmic title song from their 1976 Grammy Award-winning album for best instrumental composition, was dedicated to "my mother for all the spaghetti she's made!"

And "Papa Mangione" was there, too . . . Chuck's father. Before the show and during intermission, the white-bearded man stood behind a table on which lay all four of his son's records, on sale to the crowd.

"I travel often with my son," "Papa" said, proudly. He wore a black hat, just like Chuck.

Born in Rochester, New York, Chuck Mangione began his musical career at the age of eight when he took piano lessons, but later he switched to trumpet. Jazz musicians such as Dizzy Gillespie and Cannonball Adderley regularly had "jam" sessions at the Mangione home.

The trumpeter told the audience that he played a "gig" in Bowling Green back in '65, when he was just starting out with a band. "Welcome back!" someone in the audience yelled, as everyone cheered the jazz man's return.

what doth be the cost of a senior picture?

College expenses constitute a major obstacle for anyone persuing higher education. Tuition, room and board, books, registration fees, parking tickets and pizzas all grab a great deal from the former savings of the college student (or from the nest egg of his parents).

There is a hidden expense, however that springs out at the student in his last year, just as he begins to think his pocketbook is going to survive.

It's called senior pictures.

I guess you've got to have them. It gives a chance to improve on the terrible picture you ended up with as a senior in high school. It's traditional.

EVERY SENIOR is contacted by the Key (yearbook) staff and invited to make an appointment for a picture sitting. The two-minute, six-proof session costs $3.75, a pittance of what is to come.

The proofs arrive two weeks later.

My roommate Roger was the first in our off-campus house to get his proofs and consequently the price list. Roger also was the first to faint. "I had been planning to student teach in South America this winter," Roger said. "I guess I'll have to spend the money on my pictures instead."

I never had seen Roger cry before.

Paul
Lintern

MY OTHER ROOMMATES faced similar dilemmas. Brad's father had to take out a second mortgage on his house while Jerry offered to put a new roof on our house if the landlord would pay for the pictures

Unfortunately, Jerry put a new roof on the house in August to pay for rent.

Dave, who lives upstairs, has been standing at the corner of Wooster and Main Streets each afternoon for the last week, playing his guitar and passing the hat for contributions.

"All I want is enough for a wallet-sized picture for my parents and myself," he said.

Some of my other friends have been taking on extra jobs, pawning stereos and holding garage sales to earn enough for a down payment.

ONE GIRL even offered her firstborn male child in exchange for an 8 x 10 and nine wallet-size pictures.

Another friend decided either to sell his car or to drop out of school and use tuition money for the pictures. His adviser said he could make up the rest of his courses in night classes over the next five years, so he dropped out.

However, dropping out, he no longer qualified for the senior pictures, so the offer was dropped.

Only one friend, Garry who also lives upstairs, seemed unconcerned about the expense.

"My dad's got a piece of the rock," he said.

I WENT to the Key office to talk with the photographer to see whether I could pay by installations. He was very accomodating.

"We have two plans," he said. "The first one requires that you pay 10 percent of the bill every month for two years."

"But that comes to 240 percent," I said.

"Look, I'm a photographer, not a mathematician," he retorted.

"What is the other plan?" I asked.

$50 down and $10 a month for the rest of your life," he said.

"That's outrageous," I said.

"Perhaps, but that plan is good for gamblers," he said. "I mean, there's always the chance that you might get lucky, and die young."

Focus on People

A refrigerator box, with a KEY photographer lurking inside, stood in front of the Union waiting for students to approach it.

It should have been a psychology experiment to test people's bravery.

Instead, it was a chance for students to take their own picture with a cable release connected to a Nikon camera.

The focus was on people . . .

Smile and say "cheese."

I've stopped for pedestrians before, but never for a refrigerator box.

I think I'm going to sneeze.

Okay you guys, get your fake smiles ready.

I just ate a bowl of the Union's chili.

We're catching insects for our Bio 104 lab.

This is the last straw.

Haven't we met somewhere before?

After 3½ years, I finally got a complete schedule!

Don't shoot! I give up!

Leap frog, anyone?

Do I look as dumb as I feel?

Look mom, four hands.

Hello in there.

You should see our real faces.

Help! My thumb is stuck!

I'll bet you didn't recognize me with these on. You still don't!?

Faces only a mother could love.

You should see their real faces.

You're jiving me?

Where's the nearest restroom?

From the very beginning, we set a specific course. We became greeks or independents, dorm residents or off-campus students. And we chose our futures.

But when we didn't recognize those categories, we were very much alike. We were frustrated, angered and elated by many of the same things. We revolved around similar things at about the same speed.

We didn't always come to the same conclusions. Whatever we say of the time we spent here, it was never a constant routine. Each day provided us with a clearer insight into what we were.

Two "Eds" Are Better Than One

Karen and Kathy Borchers

After 8760 hours, 500 rolls of film, 160 layout sheets, 14½ headaches, and 2,000 cups of coffee, the 1978 KEY is completed.

Being Co-Editors of this 320-page yearbook was one of the most challenging experiences we have had . . . besides being twins.

We didn't always have isomorphism (complete communication) but things worked out anyway.

We owe much more than thanks to our dedicated staff.

Mr. Gordon — you were kept busy as photojournalism professor and editor of NPPA's News Photographer magazine, but you always had time to answer our questions.

Mrs. Saddle mire — are we still known as Karen short and Kathy long? Thanks for everything!

Steve — as editor of the 1979 KEY you'll be a CMG and be able to lead people on during deadlines with toast and coffee. P.S. The darkroom is a mess!

Sue — your copy editing skills were as superior as your conehead imitations.

Lou — don't worry, the scheduling of organiza-

Brian — which one was your favorite senior picture? Remember to put your toys away.

Kay — we can judge a yearbook by its cover.

Ki Ki and Dave — you two are good sports.

Bruce — thanks for being there when we needed your help. The champagne was a sparkling finish to our last deadline.

Cindy — you helped us type after pulling an all-nighter the night before.

Patti — you were a rowdy general visitor.

Thanks to the writers and general staffers — Jane, Carol, Tami, Patty, Cathy, Kim, Dick, Jim, Mary, Lonnie, Roger, and Annette.

And thanks to the photographers and lab technicians — Tim, Greg, Sue, Bill, Tom and Yu Kwan.

Through the KEY we have met many people who have made these last three years at BGSU memorable. Our thanks to all of them . . . they are very special people.

SPRING

The 1978 KEY

SPRING!

... it's here at last!

By Terry Potosnak

SPRING! It's here at last, but it seemed to take its good old time as University students sailed through the gales of November, trudged through the snows of December, survived the Blizzard of '78 and splashed through the monsoons of May.

Though the onset of June left too many cold and rainy days to contend with, "old man weather" finally came up with the right combination to warm the temperatures and light up a sunny sky.

Yes, spring returned to the University as another academic year quickly drew to a close, and in the wake of an unforgettable winter—it was one nice feeling.

Happy Birthday, Union!

By Terry Potosnak

For many years, the University Union has been an entertainment and cultural center for the Bowling Green community and this year, on its 20th birthday, it was honored in grand style.

An administrative breakfast with University President Hollis A. Moore Jr. and Bowling Green Mayor Alvin Perkins kicked off the April 11 birthday celebration.

Later that afternoon, Mrs. Moore reenacted the ribbon-cutting ceremony that was performed in 1958 by the wife of former University President Ralph McDonald.

But the highlight of the day was the 94-pound birthday cake with 60 pounds of icing baked by the University bake shop especially for the Union celebration.

Throughout the afternoon, memories of the Union's earlier days were preserved with a series of 1950-style contests.

The festivities seemed to be an appropriate tribute to so important an institution as the Union.

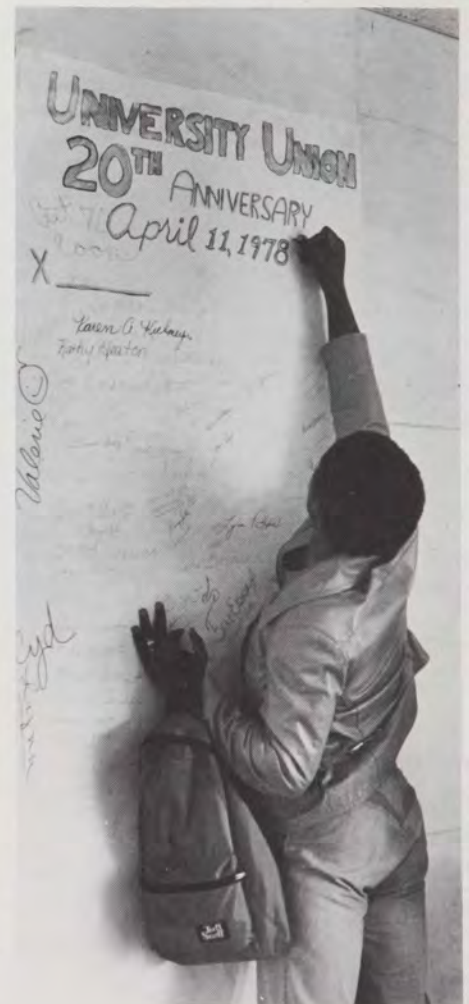

As Moore said, "It would be hard to imagine a university with a mission like ours, of being a resident university, without a facility like the Union."

A partygoer celebrates with streamers and noisemakers.

Greek Week—A Growing Experience

By Steve Schippers

The University's greek community came together May 1-5 for its traditional Greek Week celebration.

The schedule of events, including cookouts, games and an all-campus cleanup, provided students with the opportunity to interact in a friendly, though often competitive, atmosphere.

The climax of the week was the Beta 500 when 13 consecutive years of Sigma Phi Epsilon victory came to a surprising halt. The brothers of Pi Kappa Alpha were the first to cross this year's finish line, but despite the thrills of victory and the agonies of defeat, greek unity and friendly competition made Greek Week '78 a "Growing Experience."

The brothers of Sigma Phi Epsilon try for their 14th Beta 500 victory.

Cookouts were among the many activities offered during Greek Week.

The flag goes down to signal a victory for Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity in the Beta 500.

Intimacy Week

By Kim Fleming

Intimacy—one person being close to another person.

This simple definition of intimacy belies the complexity of the large number of relationships that fall into that category. In fact, it took a week for the University to touch on the ideas of intimacy.

Intimacy Week, April 24-30, offered students a series of lectures, films, discussions and workshops covering many topics relating to intimacy.

The highlight of the week was an address by keynote speaker, Dr. Constantina Safilios-Rothschild, professor of sociology at Wayne State University.

Dr. Safilios-Rothschild fascinated the audience with her lecture on "Intimacy, Marriage and Its Alternatives" in which she discussed interesting revelations that surfaced in the 1960s concerning women's roles, marriage and the attitudes toward divorce and children.

The important thing about Intimacy Week, however, was the experience of learning about many types of human relationships.

Cicely Tyson

By Lonnie Pomerantz

With her dynamic spirit, quick wit and sharp tongue, Cicely Tyson, one of the most distinguished actresses of our time, captivated the audience during her appearance in the Grand Ballroom April 19.

Describing her career as "just one of those things that happened," Tyson confessed that she never thought of becoming an actress as a child and never attended a movie until she became an adult.

Once I got a taste of acting, I knew that was what I wanted to do," she said.

Tyson attributed her fame to hard work, intuitiveness and tremendous need to achieve success.

"Acting is a difficult business," she said. "At best you have to learn your craft; have enough strength and faith in yourself to be able to withstand rejection after rejection; and have a good friend to feed, dress and support you when you need it."

Florynce Kennedy

By Jeff Steele

"You just can't continue to do business with a two-party system that simply doesn't have your best interests at heart," said Florynce Kennedy, distinguished lawyer and feminist, during her talk in the Grand Ballroom April 4.

Kennedy, founder of the Feminist Party and author of "Color Me Flo," is known for her involvement in protests against discrimination.

After verbally attacking political apathy and incompetence, Kennedy advanced a boycott of nationally advertised products as an effective political weapon.

Advertising money could be better spent than fighting over products that are essentially exchangeable, Kennedy said.

In support of political change, Kennedy said that the trouble with politicians is "that their commitment to greed is greater than their commitment to politics." She then singled out several political leaders as examples.

"You can change society," Kennedy concluded. "All struggle pays off. Ready or not, here we come."

James Baldwin

By Jim Flick

This spring, the University was honored by having a Pulitzer Prize-winning author teach in the English department.

James Baldwin spent the month of May lecturing students in two classes.

"I'm not really a teacher," he laughed. "We're here to clarify things for each other."

Baldwin, who is noted for his strong social statements, freely discussed his opinions and observations with students.

"The nigger in this country has always been something created by the white man to comfort himself with," he warned.

Baldwin grew up in Harlem and remembers it vividly.

"I knew no Christian could treat my mother and father the way they were being treated. That was the end of white Christianity for me."

Baldwin often uses art to convey his powerful sentiments.

"The purpose of art is revelation," he noted.

confront racial issues. We're trapped now."

Although Baldwin's stay may have been short, he will return to the University in September, 1979. A decision to offer him a permanent visiting faculty position will be made this summer.

Gerard K. O'Neill

By Jim Flick

"I feel confident that we'll have colonies in space within the next 10 or 15 years," said Dr. Gerard K. O'Neill, physicist at Princeton University, in a lecture in the Grand Ballroom May 2.

"It's going to take all of us working together, but we could see the humanization of space in our own lifetimes."

O'Neill is no idle dreamer.

He is the author of "The High Frontier," a non-fiction bestseller about space colonization that won the Phi Beta Kappa award for best science book of 1977.

O'Neill believes that space colonies could pay for themselves within 15 years by gathering solar power, unhindered by clouds, and beaming it to the earth.

"There are resources beyond earth's biosphere that can be used without damaging earth," O'Neill explained.

In the last year, there have been three Congressional initiatives to investigate space colonization, he noted. And several other nations have expressed interest in his research.

It was not a lecture for dreamers—the facts too solidly supported O'Neill's visions.

F. Buckminster Fuller

By Jim Flick

"Forget what you think," said Buckminster Fuller. "I'm trying to teach you."

Speaking without notes in the Grand Ballroom April 17, the 82-year-old world-acclaimed genius jumped from one complex idea to another for three hours.

Fuller, a philosopher-inventor holding 35 honorary degrees and more than two dozen patents, was expelled twice from Harvard and never completed a degree.

After serving in the Navy, he failed in several business ventures and was, in his own words, a failure.

"So I decided to make an experiment of myself," he said.

Fuller set out to discover the basic principles that govern the universe and turn them over to humanity.

"I had no competition," he shrugged.

"Understanding the principles of nature is how humans outdo animals," Fuller noted. "Society doesn't understand this."

His accomplishments include the geodesic dome, the "Spaceship Earth" concept and a prediction of the energy crisis—in 1927.

"I know my basic principles," Fuller said. "They hold true everywhere."

Here Comes The Sun

The sun must be at the right angle.

By Lonnie Pomerantz

During an old tribal festival called the Sun Dance, Indian men offered their flesh to the sun in exchange for supernatural powers.

This year, the University paid tribute to the sun, too, by participating in Sun Day, a national effort to focus attention on the sun and its potential for solar energy.

A solar energy display in the Union Oval highlighted the Sun Day festivities while background music of sun-related songs played from a nearby tape deck.

The display included a life-sized solar collector used for heating water and buildings and photographs of local solar homes. Small model homes with sun panels, designed and built by Physics 101 students to demonstrate the effectiveness of solar heating, also were exhibited.

But the solar gadgets—cigarette lighters, a beverage heater, an oven that baked cookies at 170°F and a reflector that roasted marshmallows—seemed to attract the most interest.

A solar clock (sundial) and clothes dryer (clothesline) also were displayed, and a lecture on "Solar Energy for the Do-It-Yourselfer" was given by a representative from Solar Usage Now, Inc.

That afternoon, a telescope was set up on the roof of the life science building where a sun viewing session was held. Sun spots, cooler areas of the sun's protosphere, could be seen. They looked like dark round pits against the massive glow of the sun, although temperatures there reach 4000°C.

Sun Day demonstrated that with a little imagination, solar energy can be practical and fun.

Swan Club Show—"The Little Seamaid"

By Jeff Steele

It was synchronized swimming at its best when the University's Swan Club presented its 1978 program in the Natatorium April 27-29.

The 40 Swan Club members and seven male recruits presented Hans Christian Anderson's "The Little Seamaid" before a packed house all three nights.

The production, adapted for water performance by director Jean Campbell, marked the second consecutive year that the club performed a play rather than the more conventional variety show.

"I feel that plays have so much more to offer people than variety shows," Campbell said. "I wouldn't be doing them if I didn't think so."

Campbell said that she felt the show offered more synchronized swimming skills than previous shows.

"Last year's show was unique in that the characters actually spoke to the audience, but this year offered more skills than before," she said.

The program marked the last performance in the Natatorium before the completion of the new Student Recreation Center this fall.

Petruchio married the shrew and tamed her—or did she tame him?

William Shakespeare first posed that question in the 16th century, and the University Second Season production of "Taming of the Shrew" ably reproduced it April 27-29 in three sell-out performances.

Clarity of language was the show's highest achievement. In the University production, the archaic beauty of the bard's phrasing could be fully appreciated.

The success of the show lay in the discovery of 31 capable Shakespearean actors and actresses by director Lynn Wentworth, theater teaching fellow.

Rodger A. Gerhardstein, graduate assistant in English, was outstanding as Petruchio, the tamer. Barbara Wilson, graduate assistant in speech, played opposite him as Katherina, the shrew. And fine acting jobs by other cast members made for a truly memorable Second Season performance.

The tamer and the shrew locked in battle.

Jonathon Weir bemoans his lot as Petruchio's servant.

Italian Straw Hat

By Jim Flick

Wouldn't you know he had the hat all along? "Italian Straw Hat," the year's final theater production held May 17-20, was a comic spectacle. Fadinard ran around Paris with his wedding party in tow, looking for a hat to replace one his horse had eaten.

A series of mistaken identities, funny songs and silly chases kept the audience laughing.

As Fadinard, Paul Tauger, graduate student in theater, paced the show nicely. He ran frantically around the stage, stopping only for comic asides to the audience, while searching for the hat.

Mark Magill stole the show as Nonacourt, the bumpkinish father-in-law who carried his potted myrtle tree around town, threatening to call off the ceremony and singing his foolish songs.

A strong supporting cast provided even more humor. Jerry Roerig was excellent as Vezinet, the deaf uncle, and Brian Pavlac was beautifully decrepit as Tardiveau, a dodging old man.

Oh, the hat? Fadinard had it all along, among his wedding gifts.

Karma

By Jim Flick

"It's the most important piece I've written," said Dr. John Scott, University playwright-in-residence.

But his elaborately staged "Karma" was a disappointing production which suffered from an overly complicated plot and superficial dialog.

The student cast was headed by Connie Williams who was excellent in the title role. Amos Cowson was convincing as her junkie ex-husband.

Visiting professional artists also worked on the production. Dean Irby, of the Negro Ensemble Company in New York, directed the play, and the Heath Brothers, a nationally known jazz group, performed the music.

Local artist Robert C. Hansen designed the elegantly functional set.

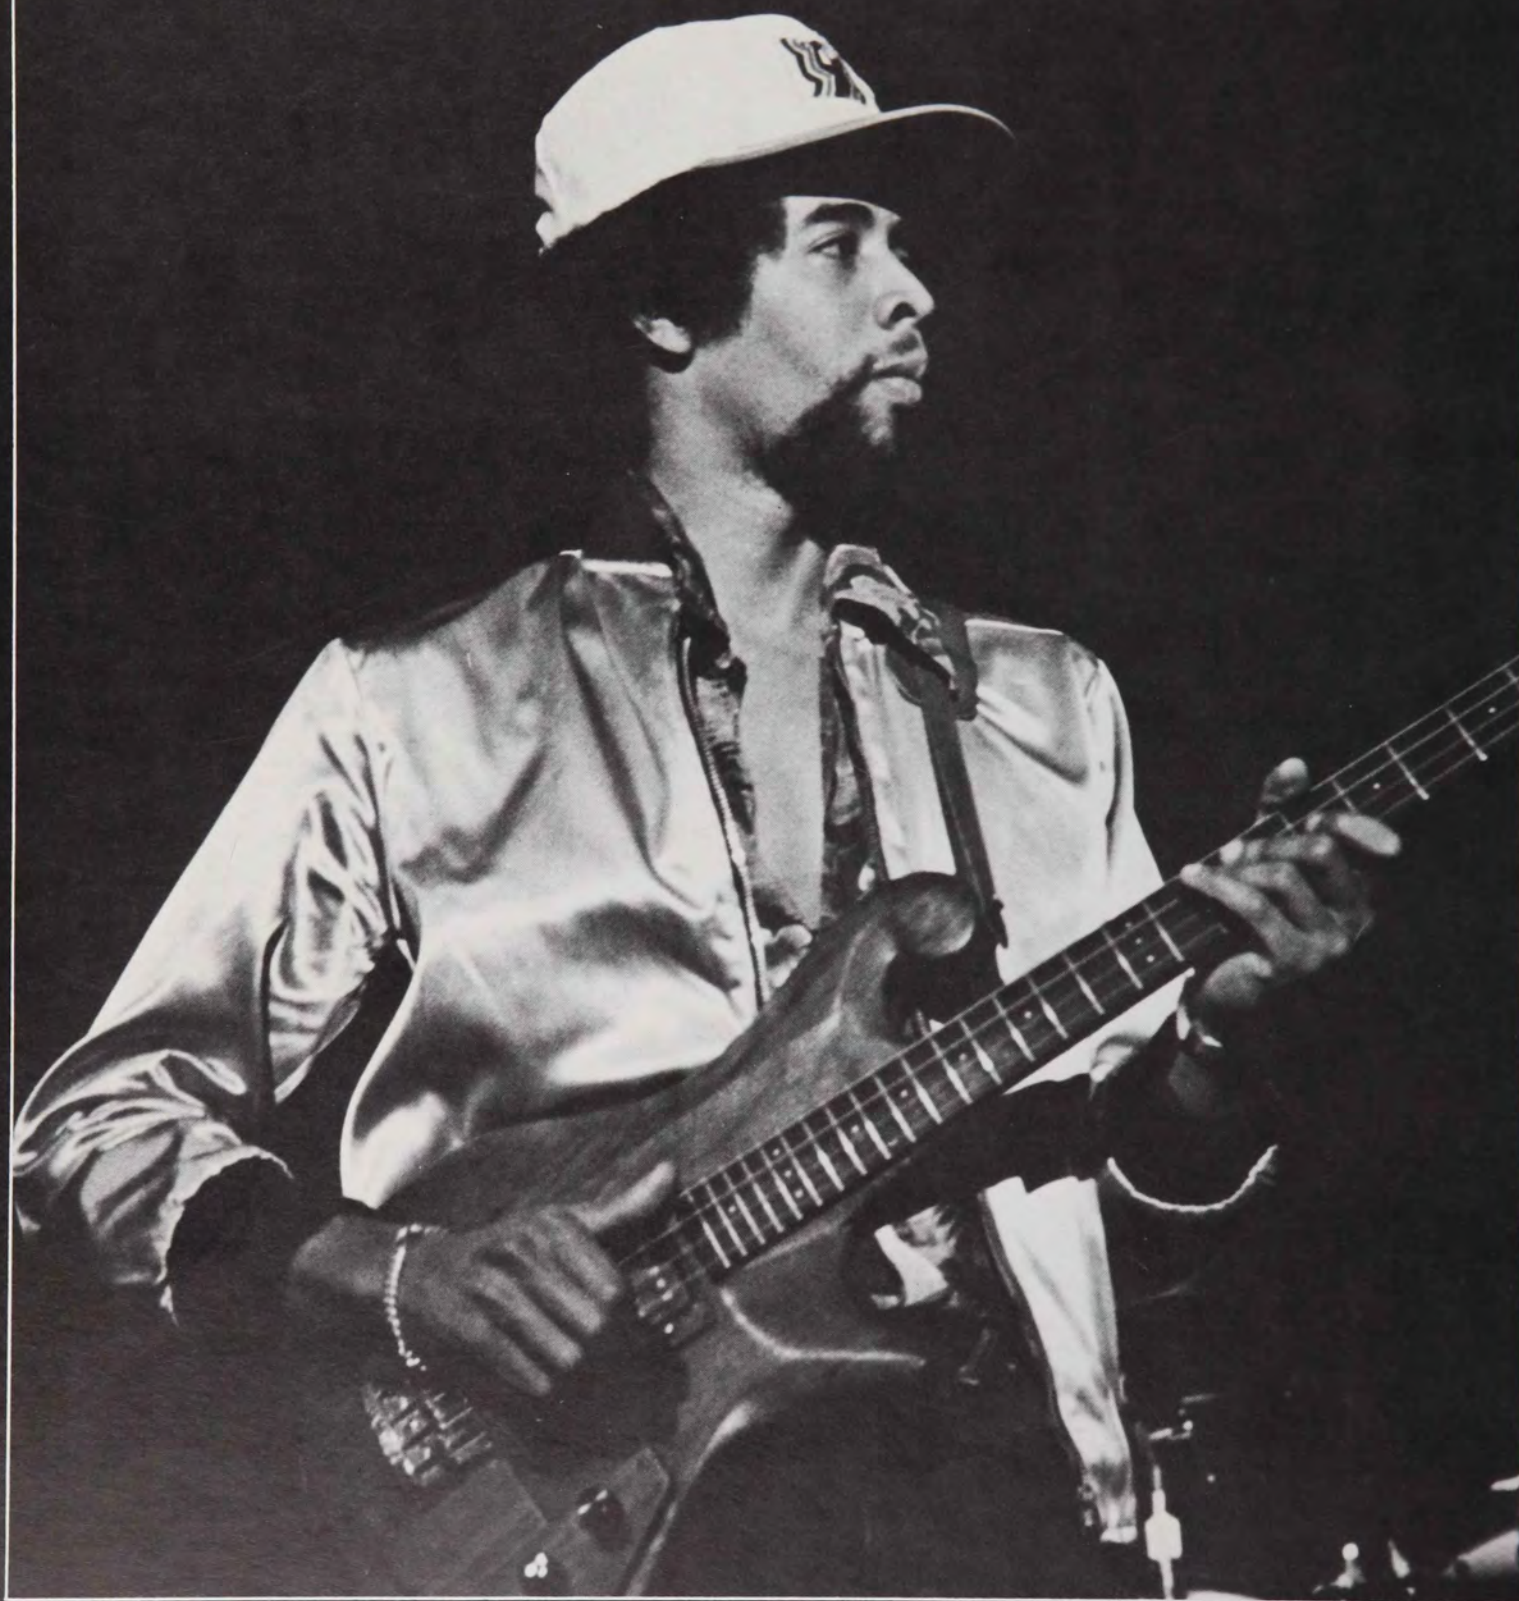

Originally scripted as a drama, Scott rewrote "Karma" as a musical in 1977. Toledoan Stanley Cowell, who played piano for the production, composed the music and Scott wrote the lyrics.

"The play is painful," Scott explained. "I thought adding music would reduce the pain and not lose the importance."

Stanley Clarke

Stanley Clarke, referred to by many as the "top electric bassist," entertained concertgoers in the Grand Ballroom April 11. Noted for his work with musicians such as Chick Corea, Stan Getz, Thad Jones and Mel Lewis, Clarke displayed his versatile musical abilities on both electric and string bass. His repertoire, featuring cuts from his "School Days" album, included songs touched with swing, jazz-funk, honky tonk and rhythm and blues.

Tower of Power

Tower of Power's famous horn section added much to the music and dance of the group's May 10 concert in the Grand Ballroom. The section, known as one of the best in popular music, highlighted the evening's performance. The audience was treated to a taste of Tower of Power's new disco dabblings but its older jazz-rock-soul sound still was preserved.

Jackson Browne

"I've been known to tune for 10 or 15 minutes and then play out of tune anyway," joked Jackson Browne to a near sell-out crowd in Anderson Arena April 11.

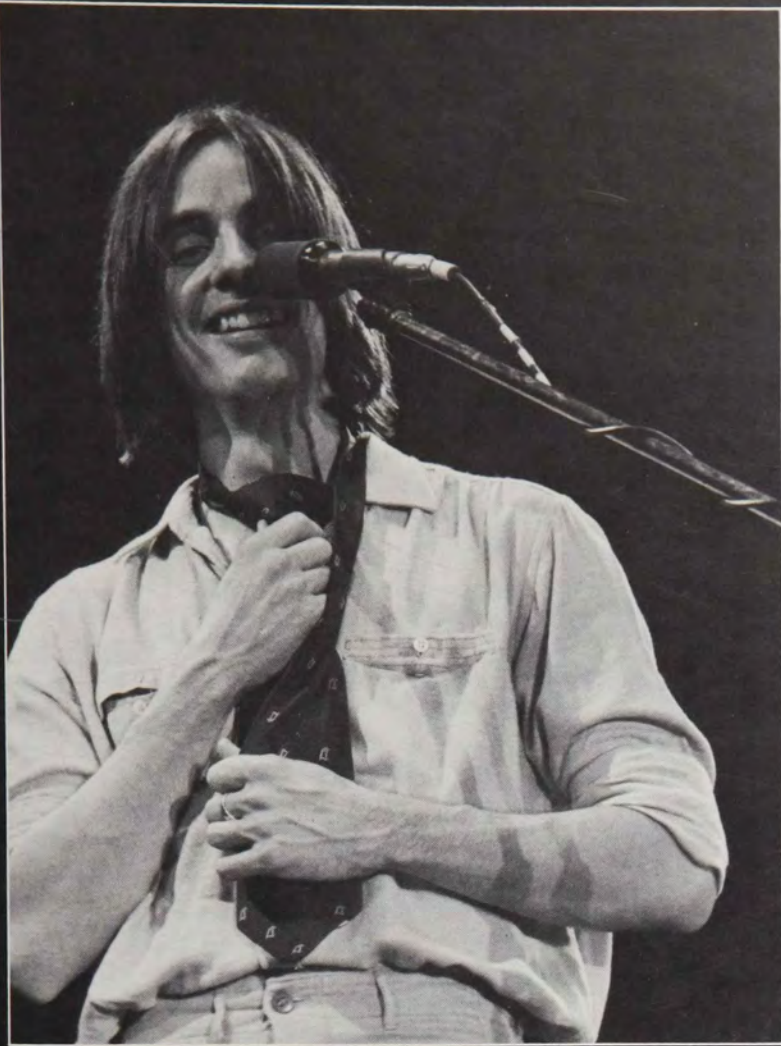

But everyone seemed to think he sounded fine, as the first concert of spring quarter began in an explosion of cheers and applause for "Take it Easy," the song that spurred Browne's professional career.

Karla Bonoff, songwriter and background vocalist for Linda Ronstadt and others artists, warmed up the audience. Then Browne kept the crowd alive with 20 of his top songs, many taken from his latest album, "Running on Empty."

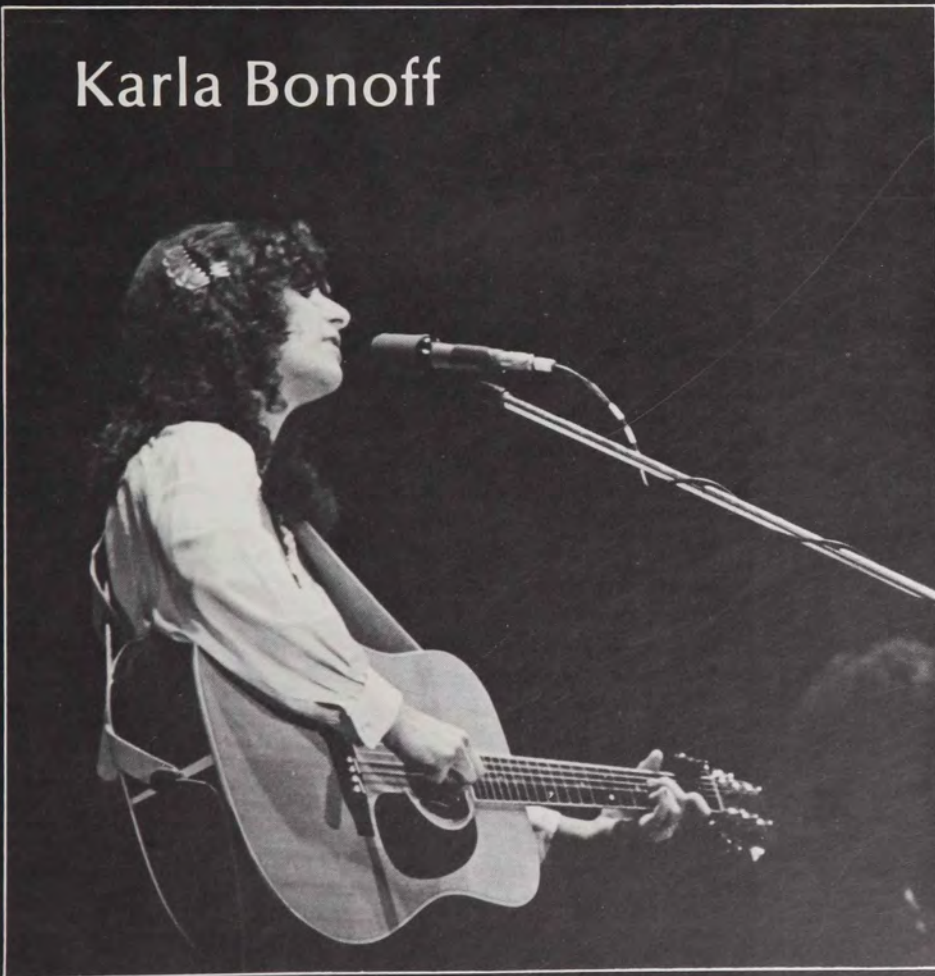

"But the only time that seems too short is the time that we get to play..." sang Browne, and the audience agreed.

Browne enthusiasts, elated by the concert, roared through three encores then left reluctantly, wishing they could "stay just a little bit longer."

Falcons Third In NCAA Finals

The hockey team experienced their finest season in the nine-year history of Bowling Green hockey, capping it off with a third place finish in the NCAA hockey championships.

The Falcons, ranked sixth in the nation, compiled a 31-8 record overall. They were 23-0 at home and were first in the CCHA with a 15-3 mark.

After capturing the CCHA regular season championship, the Falcons won the CCHA playoff by defeating Ohio State and St. Louis. They also claimed the NCAA Western crown by downing Colorado College and Wisconsin before falling to Boston College in the NCAA semi-finals.

Leading the way for BG was junior Ken Morrow. Morrow was selected by the American Hockey Coaches Association to play for the 1978 Western All-American team. Morrow is BG's first All-American hockey player and the first player from the CCHA to be given this honor.

Morrow also was named to the CCHA all-league first along with junior forward John Markell (CCHA's leading scorer with 61 points and the co-player of the year), and freshman goalie Brian Stankiewicz (23 wins and a goals against average of 2.58).

Coach Ron Mason also was selected as CCHA coach-of-the-year for the second time in the last three years.

The quality of the fans is more important than quantity.

Baseball

Third In MAC

Once again, the Falcon baseball team won more than 30 games, finishing the 1978 season with a 32-14-1 record overall and an 11-6 mark and third place standing in the MAC.

Don Purvis, in his seventh season as head baseball coach, recorded his 200th Bowling Green win as the team stayed in the MAC race until the final weekend of the season. That strong showing helped BG to tie for second in the Reese Trophy all-sports competition.

Second baseman Chuck Black, junior, led the Falcons in batting with a .388 average, hits with 57, runs scored with 43, and walks with 37. His three-year total of 181 hits is a BG career record. For his accomplishments, Black was named to the MAC first-team as BG's only representative.

Two juniors, third baseman Jim Selgo and left fielder Mark Shane were chosen for the MAC second team.

Honorable mentions were received by seniors Terry Milton, pitcher, and Jeff Lee, catcher and junior center fielder Jeff Groth.

Men's Track

The men's track team, under the guidance of Coach Mel Brodt, ended the 1978 season with an overall record of 2-2 and an eighth place finish in the MAC championships.

The Falcons were led by distance runner Bob Lunn, junior, who qualified for the NCAA championships by finishing third at the MAC championships in the 5000 meters.

Sophomore John Anich finished fifth at the MAC championships in the 800 meter event, and also qualified for the NCAA finals. However, both he and Lunn were eliminated in the preliminary round.

Junior Kevin Ryan made several strong showings in the 1500 meters. He also ran in the MAC championships, though he was out for most of the season with leg injuries.

Freshman Tim Dayhuff also showed promise as he helped the team defeat Kent State with firsts in the 200 and 400 meters and the 440 and mile relays.

For the second consecutive year, the women's track team took the coveted Mid-American Invitational title. That honor was earned this year when the team defeated Central Michigan, 172-123.

Dave Williams, in his fourth year as the women's track coach, brought his team along at a slow, steady pace. His strategy paid off as the Falcons qualified six thin-clads for the Association For Intercollegiate Athletics For Women.

The team not only went undefeated in the regular 1978 season (3-0), but also went 49-9 in their invitational meets. In the BGSU Invitational they finished fourth out of 22 teams, the Michigan Invitational showed a third out of 10, and in the Central Michigan Invitational they were second of eight.

The Falcons placed first out of nine teams at the Mid-American Invitational, and, for the third consecutive year, won the All-Ohio team championships by defeating Ohio State.

Women's Lacrosse

The women's lacrosse team turned in their second .500 season in their second year of play by ending with a 5-4-2 record.

The team opened the season with an important win over Wooster College, but the remainder was a roller coaster with four wins, four losses and two ties.

Mickey Cochran, in his first year as women's lacrosse coach, will retire from his coaching duties to devote more time to academics.

While coaching at Bowling Green, Cochran led the soccer and men's lacrosse teams to national prominence. No successor has been named.

The 1978 men's lacrosse team showed a definite improvement over its 1977 effort as it finished the season with a 12-4 overall record. The laxers were 3-4 in the Midwest Lacrosse Association, earning a fourth place ranking.

Coach Jim Plaunt's team won its first 12 matches, defeating Notre Dame, Chicago and Michigan along the way. However, the team fell on hard times when it lost its last four games.

The Falcons were led by senior defenseman John Grim, who was named All-American Honorable Mention. He was backed by seniors Dick Irwin, Tim Murphy and Jim Macko.

All four men won letters in lacrosse for four consecutive years.

Women's Softball

A new sport was added to the University's athletic department this year—women's softball. Although it was recognized as a club sport this year, it will become a varsity sport next year.

The team started the season slowly by losing its doubleheader opener to Ohio State in two no-hit games. The hitting improved, however, and the team ended with a 3-9 season record.

The state tournament at Ohio University was the season's highlight, and Coach Sally Hattig called the Falcons' win over the Bobcats "our best game of the year."

The lone senior, captain Diane Evans, helped lead the team with her .243 batting average.

Men's Golf

For the third time in the last six years, the men's gold team captured the MAC title and the right to represent the conference in the NCAA championships.

The team defeated Ball State in the championships by three shots as junior Pat Dugan, eighth at the MAC championships, and junior Steve Cruse, 11th overall and the only Falcon on the all-MAC golf team, led the way for BG.

Also playing well for BG were senior John Miller, 11th at the MAC finals, sophomore Gary Lust, 14th, and senior co-captain Gary Treater, 15th.

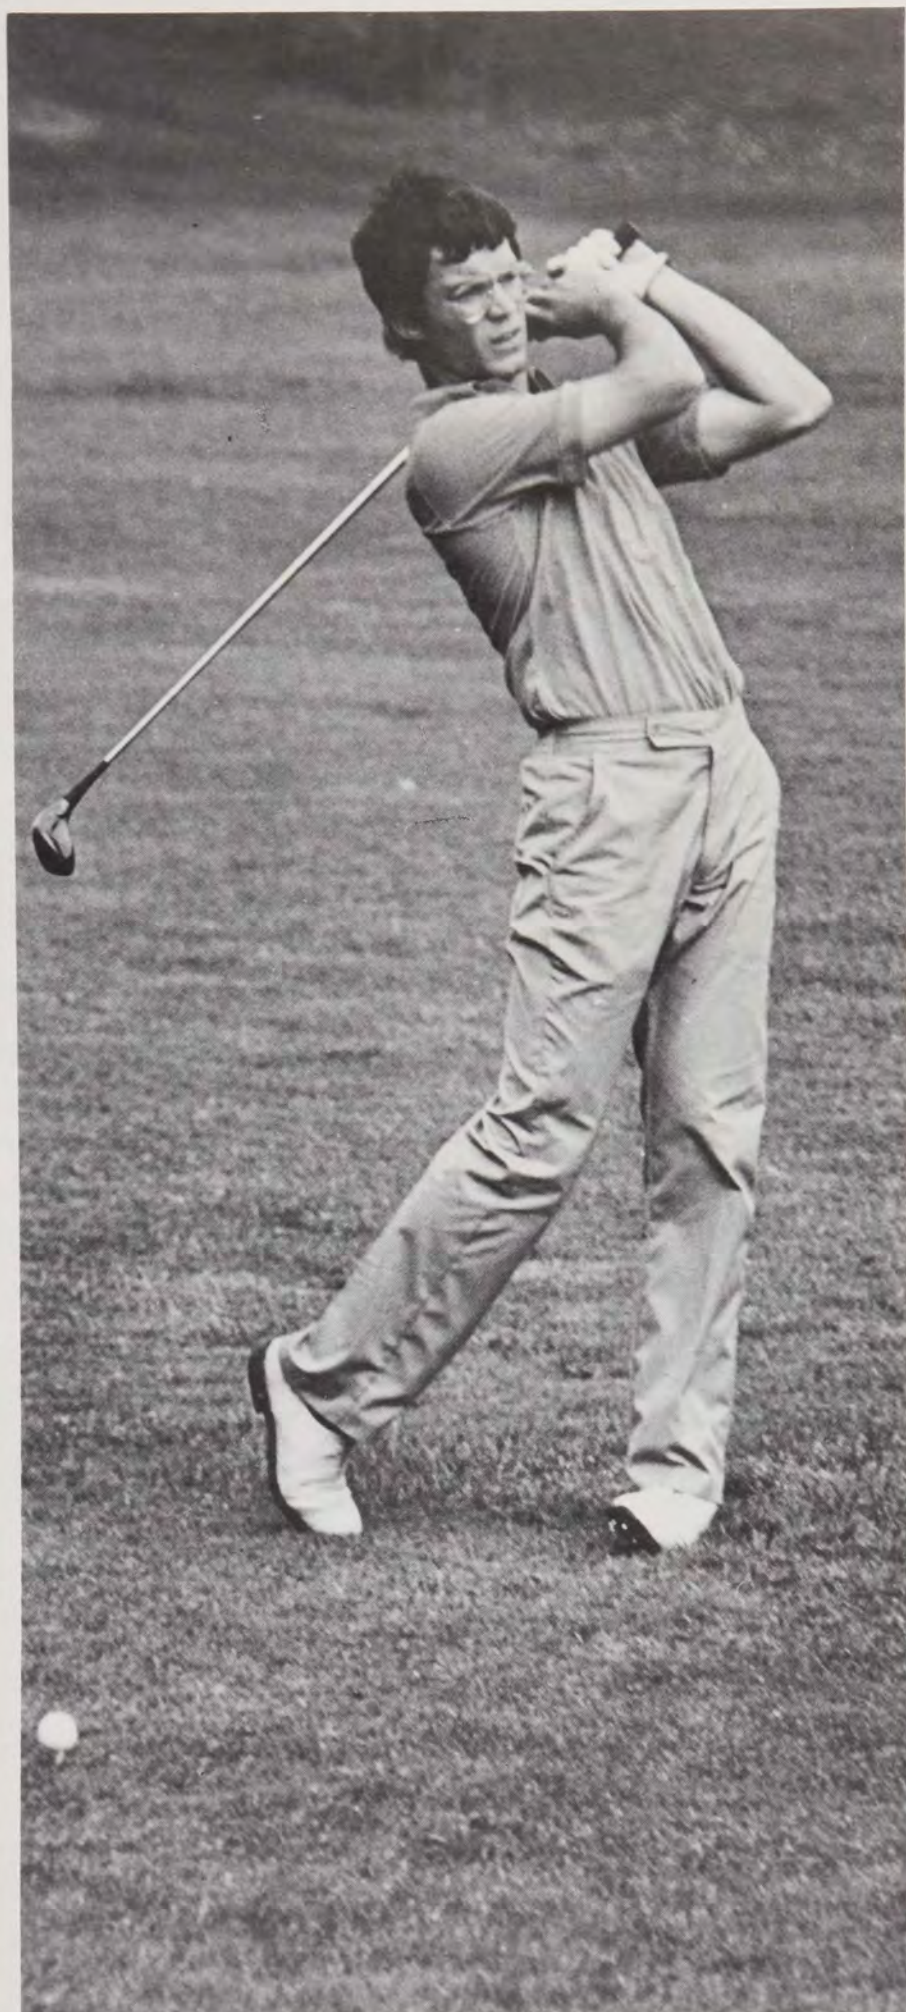

Coach John Piper had his eighth consecutive winning season at BG, compiling a 90-33-2 slate for 1978. He was named the MAC golf coach-of-the-year.

The golf title was the first MAC championship for BG since 1973.

Men's Tennis

The men's tennis team completed one of their most successful seasons in 1978 by posting a 21-7 mark. The 21 victories were a Bowling Green record for tennis and were earned against such opponents as Indiana State, Cincinnati, Northern Illinois, and Kent State.

The team was 6-3 in the MAC and tied Ohio University for third in the championships, as every member of the team won either a championship or consolation.

The Falcons placed two men on the All-MAC team with senior Glenn Johnson and junior Tom Olson receiving the honors. They also teamed up to win the number one doubles title after Olson won the number two singles title.

The 21-7 Falcon tennis record lifted Coach Bob Gill's 10-year Bowling Green record to 97-89.

Women's Tennis

After a 6-2 record in 1977, the women's tennis team expected an improvement in 1978; seven of eight letter winners from the 1977 squad returned this year.

Coach Joan Weston's charges duplicated the 1977 record perfectly. Again the team was 6-2 with losses to Central Michigan and Miami marring the season.

In the MAC championships, held at Bowling Green, the Falcons tied for third place with Ohio University. Ohio State won the event with Miami finishing second.

The team was led by senior Mary Lou Kurz, first singles, and juniors Barb Swick and Karen Driftmyer, second and third singles, respectively.

The outlook for future seasons continues to be bright. The team will only lose Kurz and sixth singles Leslie Rogers to graduation.

Robin Ziska, number six singles, returns it from the baseline.

Let The Good Times Roll!

By Kim Fleming

From May 18-21, the University and the Bowling Green Community had the opportunity to experience some of the best times ever, and they should have—because it was Good Times Weekend!

The fun-filled festivities featured a balloon ascension that didn't get off the ground because of Bowling Green's ever-present wind. But a quick recovery was made with the help of a "Chicknic Lunch" and Mr. Pepperoni's one-man band.

Music graced most of the activities as polka, ragtime, jazz and Latino bands, sound systems and an authentic calliope entertained participants.

Adding to the weekend's Gay 90s theme were melodramas, organ grinders, peanuts and beer and a parade that was rained on but not out.

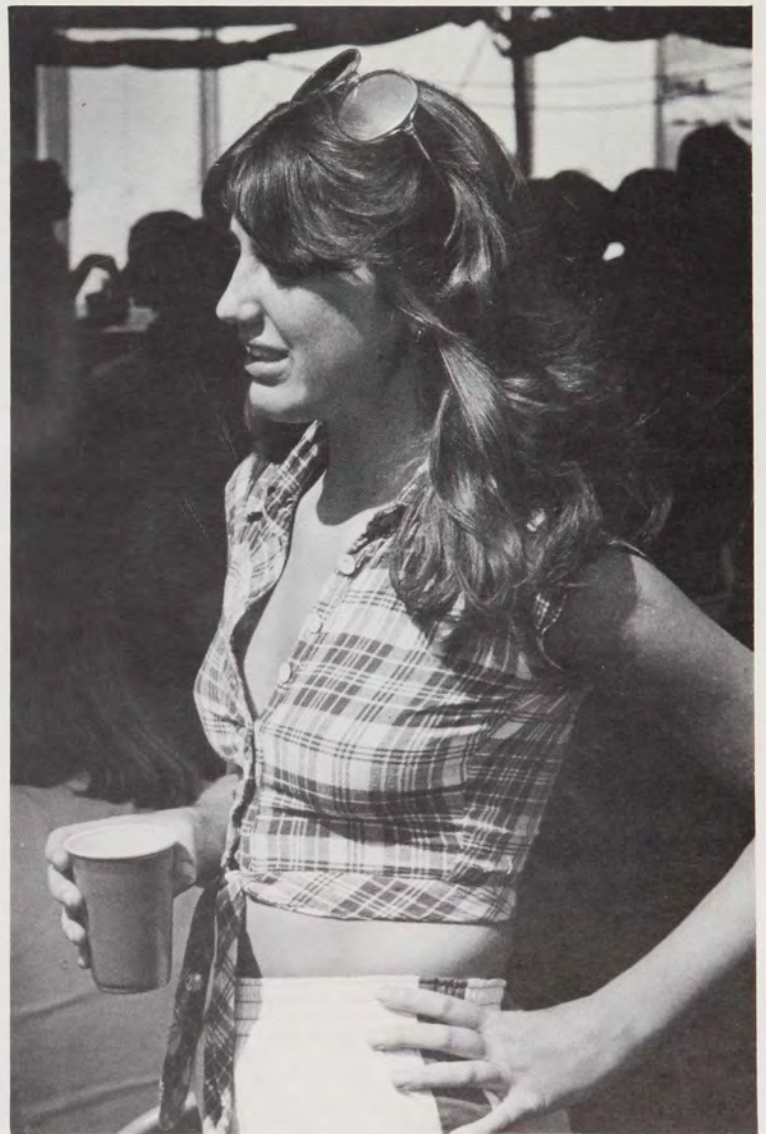

A crafts sale added to the festive mood and the King Arthur Fair, featuring demonstrations of medieval jousts, was held next to the huge circus tent which housed most of the weekend's main events.

Graduate assistant Dan Cormany, coordinator of Good Times Weekend, stressed that the cooperation of the students and townspeople was the key to the event's success. Many students donated time and money with the satisfaction of knowing that they were bringing a good time to the University.

Happy Hours were held in the Good Times Weekend circus tent.

Erma Bombeck had the graduates laughing, but her message was serious.

Look Out World

By Terry Potosnak

Bombeck, a syndicated columnist and author of several humorous bestsellers, quizzed the graduates on the merits of their educations.

"Can you buy food in a store that doesn't have golden arches?" she asked. "Can you accept the responsibilities of your own actions?"

Bombeck, who received an honorary doctorate of humane letters from the University during the exercises, also displayed a serious side as she warned the graduates against "the heartbreak of apathy."

"Whatever it was that brought you to the stadium today, hang on to it," she said. "And whatever you do—be."

In Memoriam

Dr. James R. Overman
April 15, 1888-May 24, 1978

During the 42 years (1914-1952) in which Dr. James R. Overman served Bowling Green State University, he was responsible for numerous "first time" achievements.

Overman, a native of Bedford,

Indiana, was one of the original eleven faculty members of the University, first librarian, first chairman of the mathematics department, first dean of the College of Liberal Arts, first registrar, first dean of men and faculty, and first advisor of The KEY.

When Dr. Overman officially retired in 1952, the University showed its appreciation by naming the new science building, Overman Hall, in his honor.

Overman remained active in University affairs until recent years, completing his book "The History of Bowling Green State University" in 1967.
