Translation

Of me the student Mr. Nils Brun, Smolandus, who is now intending to travel to Tegelsmora to become a private Tutor, has asked for a testimony about his conduct while [he was] here at the Royal Academy; thus he, Nils Brun, is given this, that he has lead a God-fearing life, been leading a quiet and honest life, and for the rest has been very diligent with his studies; and is for this to be commended for the best to anyone and everyone.

Some information about the old Swedish universities

In the old days, until very recently, the students at Uppsala and Lund, had to belong to what is called a “Nation”, which is a corporation of students with origins in the same province. The Nation was organized a professor as the head of it, the “inspektor”, and then some functionaries were elected among the students, and the most important was the “curator”, who took care of the econmoy and also kept an eye on younger members and their conduct. In this case the Nation was the Småland one, where Linnaeus was the “inspektor”. This testimony looks like it was written by the “curator” Harald Palm and then signed by Linnaeus. The original testimoney was kept by Nils Brun, but a true copy was sent to the diocesan chapter in Växjö, as they also had a role in keeping track of the students. Many of them came back the diocese after having passed their exams, and became ordained to the priesthood in their home diocese.

The title “archiater” for Linnaeus shows that he was a Doctor of Medicine and of high status in his profession, and he was at this time also professor of botany at Uppsala.

Nils Brun was born 1730 Sep. 26 in Åseda (Smål.), entered Uppsala in 1749, studied for some time at Greifswald in Swedish Pomerania, and became ordained 1757. He served first in the military as a chaplain and became a prisoner of war in 1759, released in 1762. Later he was the pastor of Sjösås (Smål), where he died in 1782.

This picture is from Gudhem parish in Västergötland. The reference from Arkiv Digital is <Gudhem AI:7 (1837-1848) Bild 28 / sid 22>. The problem is the place the father of the family moved to. What does it say? Solution below! A mirror helps.

It says "Engelholm" = "Engelholm" that is he died.

Here you can see the current situation of the renovation of the Turnblad Mansion, and the building of the Nelson Cultural Center.

The Turnblad Mansion was opened again before the Christmas holiday season. A friend, who has visited the renovated Turnblad Mansion, writes "In due time, the visitors will be able to view rooms that were used for storage before. The library has now been moved to the lower level where everyone can get to it. The rest of the lower level is set up for 3 nice class rooms with a possible 4th meeting place. The new elevator has been attached to the outside of the building and now people can visit all floors which they couldn't do before."

So there are improvements to the old building and the Nelson Cultural Center is shaping up. Hopefully the building of it will be done by March, and then the interior needs decorating and such to be ready for the grand opening in June. There is also hope that King Carl Gustaf and Queen Silvia will be able to come for the dedication of the new campus.
