

University of North Dakota UND Scholarly Commons

Settler Literature Archive

Department of English

1777

The History of Emily Montague Vol III

Frances Brooke

Follow this and additional works at: https://commons.und.edu/settler-literature

Recommended Citation

Brooke, Frances, "The History of Emily Montague Vol III" (1777). Settler Literature Archive. 121. https://commons.und.edu/settler-literature/121

This Book is brought to you for free and open access by the Department of English at UND Scholarly Commons. It has been accepted for inclusion in Settler Literature Archive by an authorized administrator of UND Scholarly Commons. For more information, please contact zeineb.yousif@library.und.edu.

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at http://books.google.com/

Robert Belgardiner 14463 256 300gle

THE

HISTORY

EMILY MONTAGUE.

VOL. III.

Digitized by Google

` л н т Ċ G F AUD. .111

THE

HISTORY

OF

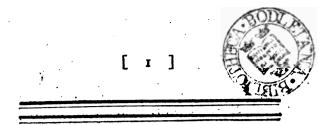

EMILY MONTAGUE.

By the AUTHOR of LADY JULIA MANDEVILLE.

VOL. III.

L O N D O N: Printed for J. DODSLEY, in Pall Mall. M.DCC.LXXVII.

Įa, 28. Digitized by Google

ТНЕ

HISTORY

EMILY MONTAGUE.

LETTER CXXIII.

To Colonel RIVERS, at Montreal.

Quebec, April 175 W different, my Rivers, is your laft letter from all your Emily has ever yet received from you! What have I done to deferve fuch fufpicions? How unjuft are your fex in all their connexions with ours!

Vol. III.

Do

Do I not know love? and does this reproach come from the man on whom my heart doats, the man, whom to make happy, I would with transport cease to live? can you one moment doubt your Emily's tenderness? have not her eyes, her air, her look, her indiferetion, a thousand times told you, in spite of herself, the dear secret of her heart, long before she was confcious of the tenderness of yours?

Did I think only of myfelf, I could live with you in a defart; all places, all fituations are equally charming to me, with you: without you, the whole world affords nothing which could give a moment's pleafure to your Emily.

Let me but see those eyes in which the tenderest love is painted, let me but hear that enchanting voice, I am infensible to all else, I know nothing of what passes around me; all that has no relation to you passes away like a morning dream, the impression of which is effaced in a moment: my tenderness dernefs for you fills my whole foul, and leaves no room for any other idea. Rank, fortune, my native country, my friends, all are nothing in the balance with my Rivers.

For your own fake, I once more entreat you to return to England: I will follow you; I will fweat never to marry another; I will fee you, I will allow you to continue the tender inclination which unites us.' Fortune may there be more favorable to our wifnes than we now hope; may join us without destroying the peace of the best of parents.

But if you perfift, if you will facrifice every confideration to your tendernefs-My Rivers, I have no will but yours.

Bz

LET-

LETTER CXXIV.

To Miss FERMOR, at Silleri.

London, Feb. 17.

My dear Bell,

L UCY, being deprived of the pleafure of writing to you, as fhe intended, by Lady Anne Melville's dining with her, defires me to make her apologies.

Allow me to fay fomething for myfelf, and to fhare my joy with one who will, I am fure, fo very fincerely fympathize with me in it.

I could not have believed, my dear Bell, it had been fo very eafy a thing to be conftant: I declare, but don't mention this, left I fhould be laughed at, I have never felt felt the least inclination for any other woman, fince I married your lovely friend.

I now see a circle of Beauties with the fame indifference as a bed of fnowdrops: no charms affect me but hers; the whole creation to me contains no other woman.

I find her every day, every hour, more lovely; there is in my Lucy a mixture of modefty, delicacy, vivacity, innocence, and blufhing fenfibility, which add a thoufand unfpeakable graces to the most beautiful perfon the hand of nature ever formed.

There is no defcribing her enchanting fmile, the fmile of unaffected, artlefs tendernefs. How fhall I paint to you the fweet involuntary glow of pleafure, the kindling fire of her eyes, when I approach; or those thousand little dear attentions of which love alone knows the value?

B₃

I never,

'ح

Digitized by Google

I never, my dear girl, knew happiness till now; my tenderness is absolutely a species of idolatry; you cannot think what a flave this lovely girl has made me.

As a proof of this, the little tyrant infifts on my omitting a thousand civil things I had to fay to you, and attending her and Lady Anne immediately to the opera; she bids me however tell you, she loves you passing the love of woman, at least of handsome women, who are not generally celebrated for their candor and good-will to each other.

Adicu, my dearest Bell! Yours,

J. TEMPLE.

LET.

LETTER CXXV.

To JOHN TEMPLE, Efq; Pall Mall.

Silleri, April 12.

NDEED

" Is this that haughty, gallant, gay Le-" thario,

". That dear perfidious-"

Abfolutely, my dear Temple, the fex ought never to forgive Lucy for daring to monopolize to very charming a fellow. I had fome thoughts of a little badinage with you myfelf, if I fhould return foon to England; but I how give up the very idea. The other is to Apply the very idea. The other is to a specific the symplectic to fay, that love Lucy as much as you please B 4 you you will never love her half fo well as fhe deferves; which, let me tell you, is a great deal for one woman, especially, as you well observe, one handsome woman, to say of another.

I am, however, not quite clear your idea is juft: catti/m, if I may be allowed the expression, seeming more likely to be the vice of those who are conscious of wanting themselves the dear power of pleasing.

Handfome women ought to be, what I profess myself, who am however only pretty; too vain to be envious; and yet we'fee, I am afraid, too often, fome little sparks of this mean passion between rival Beauties.

Impartially speaking, I believe the best natured women, and the most free from envy, are those who, without being very handsome, have that je ne scai quoi, those nameless graces, which please even without beauty; beauty; and who therefore, finding more attention paid to them by men than their looking-glass tells them they have a right to expect, are for that reason in constant good humour with themselves, and of course with every body else: whereas Beauties, claiming universal empire, are at war with all who dispute their rights; that is, with half the sex.

I am very good-natured myself; but it is, perhaps, because, though a pretty woman, I am more agreeable than handfome, and have an infinity of the je ne fçai quoi.

A propos, my dear Temple, I am fo pleafed with what Montesquieu fays on this subject, that I find it is not in my nature to result translating and inferting it; you cannot then fay I have sent you a letter in which there is nothing worth reading.

B 5

I beg

Q

Digitized by Google

I beg you will read this to the miffes, for which you cannot fail of their thanks, and for this reason; there are perhaps a dozen women in the world who do not think themselves handsome, but I will venture to fay, not one who does not think herself agreeable, and that the has this nameles charm, this fo much talked of I know not what, which is fo much better than beauty. But to my Montesquieu:

"There is fometimes, both in perfons "and things, an invisible charm, a natu-"ral grace, which we cannot define, and "which we are therefore obliged to call "the jane frai quoi.

" It feens to me that this is an effect principally founded on furprize.

We are touched that a perfon pleafes is more than the feemed at first to have a right

"Sa right to dog and we are agreeably "f furphile that the should have known" " how to conquer those defects which" " our eyes shewed us, but which our " hearts no longer believe: "tis for this " reason that women, who are not hand-" " fome, have often graces or agreeable-" " ness; and that beautiful ones very" " feldom have.

"For a beautiful perfon does generally "the very contrary of what we expected; "fhe appears to us by degrees lefs amiable, and, after having furprized us pleafingly, the furprizes us in a contrary manner; but the agreeable imprefixon is old, the difagreeable one now: 'ris! also felsions that Beauties infpire violent paffions, which are abnoft" always referved for those who have "graces, that is to fay, agreeableneffes, "which we did not expect, and which "two had no reafon to expect.

" Magni-

Digitized by Google

B 6

1 . .

"Magnificent habits have feldom grace," which the dreffes of thepherdeffes often have.

"We admire the majefty of the dra-" " peries of Paul Veronele; but we are touched with the fimplicity of Raphael, and the exactnels of Corregio.

"Paul Veronese promises much, and pays all he promises; Raphael and Corregio promise little, and pay, much, which pleases us more.

"These graces, these agreeableness, are found oftener in the mind than" in the countenance: the charms of a beautiful countenance are seldom hidden, they appear at first view; but the mind does not shew itself except by degrees, when it pleases, and as much as it pleases; when it pleases, and as much as it pleases; it can conceal itself in order to appear, and give that species of surprize to which those graces, of which I speak, owe their existence.

· " This

12

"This grace, this agreeablenes, is less in the countenance than in the manner; the manner changes every instant, and can therefore every moment give us the pleafure of furprize: in one word, a woman can be handsome but in one way, but she may be agreeable in a hundred thousand."

I like this doctrine of Montesquieu's extremely, because it gives every woman her chance, and because it ranks me above a thousand handsomer women, in the dear power of inspiring passion.

Cruel creature ! why did you give me the idea of flowers ? I now envy you your foggy climate : the earth with you is at this moment covered with a thousand lovely children of the spring; with us, it is an universal plain of show.

Our beaux are terribly at a loss for fimilies : you have lillies of the valley for comparisons; we nothing but what with the 14 THE HISTORY OF the idea of whiteness gives that of coldness too.

This is all the quarrel I have with Canada: the fummer is delicious, the winter pleafant with all its feverities; buo alas! the finiling fpring is not here; we pass from winter to fummer in an inftant, and lose the fprightly feason of the Loves.

A letter from the God of my idolatry. I must answer it instantly.

Adieu! Yours, &c.

A. FERMOR

LET.

LETTER CXXVI.

To Captain FITZGERALD.

YES, I give permiffion; you may come this afternoon: there is fomething amufing enough in your dear nonfenfe; and, as my father will be at Quebec, I fhall want amufement.

It will also furnish a little chat for the miss at Quebec; a tête-à-tête with a tall Irithman is a subject which cannot escape their fagacity.

Adieu ! Yours,

LET

A. F:

Digitized by Google

LETTER CXXVII.

To Mrs. TEMPLE, Pall Mall.

Silleri, April 20.

A FTER my immenfe letter to your love, my dear, you must not expect me to fay much to your fair ladyship.

I am glad to find you manage Temple fo admirably; the wifeft, the wildeft, the graveft, and the gayeft, are equally our flaves, when we have proper ideas of petticoat politics.

I intend to compose a code of laws for the government of husbands, and get it translated into all the modern languages; which I apprehend will be of infinite benefit to the world.

Do

Do you know I am a greater fool than I imagined? You may remember I was always extremely fond of fweet waters. I left them off lately, upon an idea, though a miftaken one, that Fitzgerald did not like them : I yesterday heard him fay the contrary; and, without thinking of it, went mechanically to my dreffingroom, and put lavender water- on my handkerchief.

This is, I am afraid, rather a ftrong fymptom of my being abfurd; however, I find it pleafant to be fo, and therefore give way to it.

It is divinely warm to-day, though the fnow is ftill on the ground; it is melting faft however, which makes it impossible for me to get to Quebec. I shall be confined for at least a week, and Emily not with me: I die for amusement. Fitzgerald ventures still at the hazard of his own neck and his horses legs; for the latter of which animals I have so much compassion, compafion, that I have ordered both to ftay at home a few days, which days I fhall devote to ftudy and contemplation, and little pert chit-chats with papa, who is ten times more fretful at being kept within doors than I am: I intend to win a little fortune of him at piquet before the world breaks in upon our folitude, Adjeu ! I am idle, but always

Your faithful

A. FERMOR.

LETTER CXXVIII,

To the Earl of _____ Silleri, April 20. Silleri, April 20. I Is indeed, my Lord, an advantage for which we cannot be too thankful to the Supreme Being, to be born in a country whole religion and hws are fuch, fuch, as would have been the objects of our wifnes, had we been born in any other.

Our religion, I would be underftood to mean Christianity in general, carries internal conviction by the excellency of its moral precepts, and its tendency to make mankind happy; and the peculiar mode of it established in England breathes beyond all others the mild spirit of the Gospel, and that charity which embraces all mankind as brothers.

It is equally free from enthulialm and fuperfition; its outward form is decent and respectful, without affected oftentation; and what shews its excellence above all others is, that every other church allows it so be the best, except itself: and it is an established rule, that he has an undoubted right to the first rank of merit, to whom every man allows the fecond.

As

As to our government, it would be impertinent to praise it; all mankind allow it to be the master-piece of human wisdom.

It has the advantage of every other form, with as little of their inconveniences as the imperfection attendant on all human inventions will admit: it has the monarchic quickness of execution and stability, the aristocratic diffusive strength and wisdom of counsel, the democratic freedom and equal distribution of property.

When I mention equal diftribution of property, I would not be underftood to mean fuch an equality as never existed, nor can exist but in idea; but that general, that comparative equality, which leaves to every man the absolute and safe possession of the fruits of his labors; which softens offensive distinctions, and curbs pride, by leaving every order of men in some degree dependent on the other;

EMILY MONTAGUE. 21.

other; and admits of those gentle and almost imperceptible gradations, which the poet fo well calls,

"Th' according music of a well-mix'd "ftate."

The prince is here a centre of union; an advantage, the want of which makes a democracy, which is fo beautiful in theory, the very worft of all possible governments, except absolute monarchy, in practice.

I am called upon, my Lord, to go to the citadel, to fee the going away of the ice; an object fo new to me, that I cannot refift the curiofity I have to fee it, though my going thither is attended with infinite difficulty.

Bell infifts on accompanying me: I am afraid for her, but fhe will not be refufed.

At

At our return, I will have the honor of writing again to your Lordship, by the gentleman who carries this to New York.

I have the honor to be, my Lord;

Your Lordship's, &c.

WM. FERMOR.

LETTER CXXIX.

To the Earl of ----.

Silleri, April 20, Evening.

W E are returned, my Lord, from having feen an object as beautiful and magnificent in itfelf, as pleafing from the idea it gives of renewing once more our intercourfe with Europe.

' Before

Before I faw the breaking up of the vaft body of ice, which forms what is here called the bridge, from Quebec to Point Levi, I imagined there could be nothing in it worth attention; that the ice would pafs away, or diffolve gradually, day after day, as the influence of the fun, and warmth of the air and earth increafed; and that we fhould fee the river open, without having observed by what degrees it became fo.

But I found the great river, as the favages with much propriety call it, maintain its dignity in this inflance as in all others, and affert its superiority over those petty streams which we honor with the names of rivers in England. Sublimity is the characteristic of this western world; the lostiness of the mountains, the grandeur of the lakes and rivers, the majesty of the rocks shaded with a pictures variety of beautiful trees and shrubs, and crowned with the nobless of the offspring of the foreft, which form the banks of the latter, are as much beyond the power of fancy as that of defcription: a landfcape-painter might here expand his imagination, and find ideas which he will feek in vain in our comparatively little world.

The object of which I am speaking has all the American magnificence.

The ice before the town, or, to fpeak in the Canadian ftile, the bridge, being of a thicknefs not lefs than five feet, a league in length, and more than a mile broad, refifts for a long time the rapid tide that attempts to force it from the banks.

We are prepared by many previous circumftances to expect fomething extraordinary in this event, if I may fo call it: every increase of heat in the weather for near a month before the ice leaves the banks, banks; every warm day gives you terranfor thole you for venturing to pais it in carrioles; yet one findly night makes, in again to ftrong, that even the ladies, and the timid amongst them, still venture themselves over in parties of pleasure; though greatly alarmed at their return, if a few hours of uncommon warmth in.

ENIOLY MOON TA GUFET OF

But, during the laft formight, the share grows indeed a very forieus one, the eye can diffinguifh, even at a confiderable diffance, that the ice is foftened and detached from the banks, and you dread every flep being death to those who have ftill the temerity to pass it, which they will continue always to do till one or more pay their railhness with their lives.

From the time the ice is no longer a bridge on which you de provide driving: with fuch vivacity on builings or pleafure; every-one-is-looking eagerly for its breaking away, to remove the bar to the conti-Woth III.

; ;

nually wished and expected event, of the arrival of thips from that world from whence we have feemed to long in a manner excluded.

The hour is come; I have been with a crowd of both fexes, and all ranks, hailing the propitious moment: our fituation, on the top of Cape Diamond, gave us a prospect fome leagues above and below the town; above Cape Diamond the river was open, it was fo below Point Levi, the rapidity of the current having forced a passage for the water under the transparent bridge, which for more than a league continued firm.

We flood waiting with all the eagerness of expectation; the tide came rushing with an amazing impetuosity; the bridge feemed to shake, yet resisted the force of the waters; the tide recoiled, it made a pause, it stood still, it returned with redoubled fury, the immense mass of ice gave way.

Jarrin A vait

A vaft plain appeared in motion; it advanced with folemn and majeftic pace: the points of land on the banks of the river for a few moments ftopped its progrefs; but the immenfe weight of fo prodigious a body, carried along by a rapid current, bore down all opposition with a force irrefiftible.

There is no defcribing how beautiful the opening river appears, every moment gaining on the fight, till, in a time lefs than can poffibly be imagined, the ice paffing Point Levi, is hid in one moment by the projecting land, and all is once more a clear plain before you; giving at once the pleafing, but unconnected, ideas of that direct intercourfe with Europe from which we have been fo many months excluded, and of the earth's again opening her fertile bofom, to feaft our eyes and imagination with her various verdant and flowery productions.

I am

Digitized by Google

I am afraid I have conveyed a very inadequate idea of the fcene which has just passed before me; it however struck me fo strongly, that it was impossible for me not to assempt it.

If my painting has the leaft refemblance to the original, your Lordship will agree with me, that the very vicifitudes of feafon here pareake of the fublication which fo ftrongly characterizes the country.

The changes of featon in England, being flow and gradual, are but faintly felt; but being here fudden, inftant, violenc, afford to the mind, with the lively pleafure arifing from meer change, the very high additional one of its being accompanied with grandeur. I have the honor to be,

My Lord,

Your Lordship's, &c.

WILLIAM FERMOR.

LETTER CXXX.

TO Mrs. TEMPLE, Pall Mall.

April 22.

CERTAINLY, my dear, you are fo far right; a nun may be in many respects a less unhappy being than some women who continue in the world; her fituation is, I allow, paradife to that of a married woman, of sensibility and honor, who diffikes her husband.

The cruelty therefore of fome parents here, who facrifice their children to zvarice, in forcing or feducing them into convents, would appear more firiking, if we did not fee too many in England guilty of the fame inhumanity, though in a different manner, by marrying them against their inclination.

C 3

Your

Your letter reminds me of what a French married lady here faid to me on this very fubject: I was exclaiming violently against convents; and particularly urging, what I thought unanswerable, the extreme hardship of one circumstance; that, however unhappy the state was found on trial, there was no retreat; that it was for life.

Madame De —— turned quick, "And " is not marriage for life ?"

"True, Madam; and, what is worle, "without a year of probation. I confers "the force of your argument."

I have never dared fince to mention convents before Madame De -----.

Between you and I, Lucy, it is a little unreafonable that people will come together entirely upon fordid principles, and then wonder they are not happy: in delicate

EMILY MONTAGUE. 31 licate minds, love is feldom the confequence of marriage.

It is not absolutely certain that a marriage of which love is the foundation will be happy; but it is infallible, I believe, that no other can be so to souls capable of tendernes.

Half the world, you will pleafe to obferve, have no fouls; at leaft none but of the vegetable and animal kinds: to this fpecies of beings, love and fentiment are entirely unneceffary.; they were made to travel through life in a ftate of mind neither quite awake nor afleep; and it is perfectly equal to, them in what company they take the journey.

You and I, my dear, are fomething awakened; therefore it is neceffary we should love where we marry, and for this reafon: our fouls, being of the active kind, can never be totally at reft; therefore, if we were not to love our hufbands, C 4 we we should be in directful danger of loving fomebody elfe.

For my part, whatever tall maiden innuts and countins may fay of the indecentivof a young woman's diftinguishing one man from another, and of love coming after marriage; I think marrying, in that expectation, on fober prudent principles, a man time cliffikes, the music deliberate and frameful degree of wice of which the bounan mind is compable.

I cannot help observing here, that the great aim of modern education strems to be, to oradicate the best impulses of the human heart, lowe, friendship, compassion, benevolence; to drivery the focial, and encrease the selfish principle. Parents wisely attempt to root out those affections which should only be directed to proper objects, and which Heaven gave us as the means of happines; not confidering that the fuccess of such an attempt is doubtful; and that, if they fucceed, read, they take from dife all its fweetness, and reduce it to a dull unactive round of talkeless days, fearcely saided above vegevarion.

If my ideas of things are right, the human mind is naturally virtuous; the bulines of education is therefore less to give us good impressions, which we have from nature, than to guard us against bad ones, which are generally acquired.

And fo ends my fermon.

Adieu ! my dear I

Your faithful

A. FERMOR.

C 5

A letter

Digitized by Google

A letter from your brother; I believe the dear creature is out of his wits: Emily has confented to marry him, and one would imagine by his joy that nobody was ever married before.

He is going to Lake Champlain, to fix on his feat of empire, or rather Emily's; for I fee fhe will be the reigning queen, and he only her majefty's confort.

I am going to Quebec; two or three dry days have made the roads paffable for fummer carriages : Fitzgerald is come to fetch me. Adieu!

I am come back, have feen Emily, who is the happieft woman exifting; she has heard from your brother, and in such terms terms—his letter breathes the very foul of tendernefs. I wifh they were richer. I don't half relifh their fettling in Canada; but, rather than not live together, I believe they would confent to be fet afhore on a defert ifland. Good night.

-1 . . .

1

Bight o'clock.

LETTER CXXXI.

To the Earl of ——.

Billeri, April 25.

There

Digitized by Google

THE pleafure the mind finds in travelling, has undoubtedly, my Lord, its fource in that love of novelty, that delight in acquiring new ideas, which is interwoven in its very frame, which fhews itfelf on every occasion from infancy to age, which is the first passion of the human mind, and the last.

C 6

36

These is nothing the mind of man abhors to thick as a flate of reft - the great ferret of happinels is to keep the foul in continual action, without those violent exertions, which wear out its powers, and dull its capacity of enjoyment; it should have exercise, not labor.

Vice may justly be called the fever of the foul, inaction its lethargy; paftion, under the guidance of virtue, its health.

I have the pleafure to fee my daughter's coquetty giving place to a tender affection for a very worthy man, who feems formed to make her happy: his fortune is easy; he is a gentleman, and a man of worth and honor, and, what perhaps inclines me to be more partial to him, of my own profession.

I mention the last circumstance in order to introduce a request, that your Lordship would would have the goodness to employ that interest for him in the purchase of a majority, which you have so generously offered to me; I am determined, as there is no prospect of real duty, to quit the army, and retire to that quiet which is so pleasing at my sime of life: I am priwately in theavy with a gentleman for my sompany, and propose returning to England in the first thip, to give in my refignation: in this point, as well as that of ferving Mr. Fitzgerald, I shall without crupte call upon your Lordship's friendship.

I have fettled every thing with Fitzgerald, but without faying a word to Bell; and he is to feduce her into matrimony as footi as he can, without my appearing at all interested in the affair: he is to afk my confent in form, though we have already fettled every preliminary.

ÂÍ

Digitized by Google

6

11 . M. M. M.

All this, as well as my intention of quitting the army, is yet a fecret to my daughter.

But to the questions your Lordship does me the honor to ask me in regard to the Americans, I mean those of our old colonies: they appear to me, from all I have heard and seen of them, a rough, ignorant, positive, very selfiss, yet hospitable people.

Strongly attached to their own opinions, but ftill more fo to their interefts, in regard to which they have inconceivable fagacity and addrefs; but in all other refpects I think naturally inferior to the Europeans; as education does fo much, it is however difficult to afcertain this.

". I am rather of opinion they would not have refued submission to the stamp act, or disputed the power of the legislature at home, home, had not their minds been first embittered by what touched their interests fo nearly, the restraints laid on their trade with the French and Spanish settlements, a trade by which England was an immense gainer; and by which only a few enormously rich West India planters were hurt.

9

Every advantage you give the North Americans in trade centers at last in the mother country; they are the bees, who roam abroad for that honey which enriches the paternal hive.

Taxing them immediately after their trade is reftrained, feems like drying up the fource, and expecting the ftream to flow.

Yet too much care cannot be taken to fupport the majefty of government, and affert the dominion of the parent country.

4

A good.

20

A good mother will confult the interest and happiness of her children, but will newer fuffer her authority to be difputed.

An equal mixture of mildness and spirit cannot fail of bringing these mistaken people, misled by a few of violent temper and ambitious views, into a just sense of their duty.

I have the honor to be,

1.

My Lord, &c.

WILLIAM FERMOR:

LETTER CXXXII.

To Mrs. TEMPLE, Pall Mall.

May 5.

HAVE got my Emily again, to my great joy; I am nobody without her. As the roads are already very good, we walk and ride perpetually, and annule ourfelves as well as we can, en attendant your brother, who is gone à fettlement hunting.

The quickness of vegetation in this country is aftonishing; though the hills are still covered with snow, and though it even continues in spots in the vallies, the latter with the trees and shrubs in the woods are already in beautiful verdure; and the earth every where putting forth flowers in a wild and lovely variety and profusion.

'Tis

'Tis amazingly pleafing to fee the ftrawberries and wild panfies peeping their little foolish heads from beneath the fnow.

Emily and I are prodigiously fond after having been separated; it is a divine relief to us both, to have again the delight of talking of our lovers to each other: we have been a month divided; and neither of us have had the consolation of a friend to be foolish to.

Fitzgerald dines with us: he comes.

Adieu! yours,

A. FERMOR.

LET-

LETTER CXXXIII.

To the Earl of ----.

Silleri, May 54

My Lord,

I HAVE been conversing, if the expresfion is not improper when I have not had an opportunity of speaking a syllable, more than two hours with a French officer, who has declaimed the whole time with the most astonishing volubility, without uttering one word which could either entertain or instruct his hearers; and even without starting any thing that deserved the name of a thought.

People who have no ideas out of the common road are, I believe, generally the greatest talkers, because all their thoughts are low enough for common conversation; whereas whereas those of more elevated underftandings have ideas which they cannot easily communicate except to perfons of equal capacity with themselves.

This might be brought as an argument of the inferiority of womens understanding to burs, as they are generally greater talkers, if we did not confider the limited and trifling educations we give them; men, amongst other advantages, have that of acquiring a greater variety as well as fublishity of ideas.

Women who have converted much with much are undoubtedly in general the most pleafing companions; but this only flows of what they are capable when properly educated, fince they improve fo greatly by that accidental and limited opportunity of acquiring knowledge.

Indeed the two fexes are equal gainers, by converfing with each other: there is a mutual mutual defire of pleasing, in smixed convortation, reftrained by politones, which fas every amiable quality; in a stronger light.

Bred in ignorance from one age to another, women can learn little of their own fex.

I have often thought this the reason why officers daughters are in general more agreeable than other women in an equal rank of life.

I am almost tempted to bring Bell as an instance, but I know the blindness and partiality of nature, and therefore check what paternal tenderness would distate.

I am shocked at what your Lordship tells me of Miss H-----. I know her imprudent, I believe her virtuous: a great flow of spirits has been ever hurrying her 10 into into indiferentions; but allow me to fay, my Lord, it is particularly hard to fix the character by our conduct, at a time of life when we are not competent judges of our own actions; and when the hurry and vivacity of youth carries us to commit a thousand follies and indiferentions, for which we blush when the empire of reason begins.

Inexperience and opennels of temper betray us in early life into improper connexions; and the very constancy, and noblenels of nature, which characterize the best hearts, continue the delusion.

I know Miss H----- perfectly; and am convinced, if her father will treat her as a friend, and with the indulgent tenderness of affection endeavor to wean her from a choice so very unworthy of her, he will infallibly succeed; but if he treats her with harshness, she is lost for ever.

He

He is too fletn in his behaviour, too rigid in his morals 7 it is the interest of wrtue to be represented as she is, lovely, smiling, and ever walking hand in hand with pleasure: we were formed to be happy, and to contribute to the happiness of our fellow-creatures; there are no real virtues but the social ones.

'Tis the enemy of human kind who has thrown around us the gloom of fuperflition, and taught that aufterity and voluntary mifery is virtue.

If moralifts would indeed improve human nature, they fhould endeavor to expand, not to contract the heart; they fhould build their fystem on the passions and affections, the only foundations of the nobler virtues.

From the partial representations of narrow-minded bigots, who paint the Deity from their own gloomy conceptions, the young young are too often frighted from the paths of virtue; defpairing of ideal perfections, they give up all virtue as unattainable, and ftart alide from the tood which they falfely suppose strewed with thorns.

I have ftudied the heart with fome attention; and am convinced every parent; who will take the pains to gain his childrens friendship, will for ever be the guide and arbiter of their conduct : I speak from a happy experience.

Notwithstanding all my daughter fays in gaiety of heart, she would somer even relinquish the man she loves, than offend a father in whom she has always found the tenderest and most faithful of friends. I am interrupted, and have only time to say, I have the honor to be, in.

My Lord, &c.

WM. FERMOR.

LET-

LETTER CXXXIV.

To Mrs. TEMPLE, Pall Mall.

Silleri, May 13.

MADAME Des Roches has just left us; she returns to-day to the Kamaraskas: she came to take leave of us, and shewed a concern at parting from Emily, which really affected me. She. is a most amiable woman; yet I think my sweet friend is not forry for her return: she loves her, but yet cannot absolutely forget she has been her rival,' and is as well satisfied that she leaves Quebec before your brother's arrival.

The weather is lovely; the earth is in all its verdure, the trees in foliage, and no fnow but on the fides of the mountains; we are looking eagerly out for thips from dear England: I expect by Vol. III. D them them volumes of letters from my Lucy. We expect your brother in a week : in fhort, we are all hope and expectation; our hearts beat at every rap of the door, fuppofing it brings intelligence of a fhip, or of the dear man.

Fitzgerald takes fuch amazing pains to pleafe me, that I begin to think it is pity fo much attention fhould be thrown away; and am half inclined, from meer compafiion, to follow the example you have fo heroically fet me.

Absolutely, Lucy, it requires amazing resolution to marry.

Adicu ! yours,

A. FERMOR.

LET-

LETTER CXXXV.

· To Colonel Rivers, at Montreal.

Silleri, May 14.

I A M returned, my Rivers, to my fweet friend, and have again the dear: delight of talking of you without reftraint; fhe bears with, fhe indulges me in, all my weakaefs; if that name ought to be given to a genderness of which the object is the most exclude and worthy of his fex.

It was impossible I should not have loved you; the foul that spoke in those eloquent eyes told me, the first moment we met, lour hearts were formed for each other; I fam in that amiable countsnance a feasibility similar to my own, but which I had till then fought in vain; I faw there those benevolent smiles, which are the marks, and the emanations of virtue; those thousand graces which ever accompany a mind confcious of its own dignity, and fatisfied with itfelf; in short, that mental beauty which is the express image of the Deity.

D 2

52 THE HISTORY OF

What defence had I against you, my Rivers; fince your merit was fuch that my reason approved the weakness of my heart ?

We have loft Madame Des Roches ; we were both in tears at parting; we embraced, I prefied her to my bofom : I love her, my dear Rivers : I have an affection for her which I fcarce know how to defcribe. I faw her every day, I found infinite pleafure in being with her; fhe talked of you, fhe praifed you, and my heart was foothed; I however found it impossible to mention your name to her; a referve for which I cannot account; I found pleafure in looking at her from the idea that the was was dear to you, that fhe felt for you the tendereft friendship: do you know I think she has fome refemblance of you? there is fomething in her smile, which gives me an idea of you.

5

Shall I, however, own all my folly? I never found this pleafure in feeing her when you were prefent : on the contrary, your attention to her gave me pain : I was jealous of every look ; I even faw her amiable qualities with a degree of envy, which checked the pleafure I fhould otherwife have found in her converfation.

There is always, I fear, fome injuffice mixed with love, at least with love for ardent and tender as mine.

You, my Rivers, will however pardon that injustice which is a proof of my excefs of tendernefs.

Madame Des Roches has promifed to write to me : indeed I will love her; I will D₃ conquer conquer this little remain of jealouly, and do justice to the most gentle and amigble of women.

Why fhould I diflike her for feeing you with my eyes, for having a foul whole feelings refemble my own?

I have observed her voice is fostened, and trembles like mine, when the names you,

My Rivers, you were formed to charm the heart of woman; there is more pleafure in loving you, even without the hope of a return, than in the adoration of all your fex: I pity every woman who is for infentible as to fee you without tendernefs. This is the only fault I ever found in Bell Fermor: the has the most lively friendthip for you, but the has feen you without love. Of what materials must her heart be composed ?

106

No other man can infpire the fame fentiments with my Rivers; no other man can deferve them: the delight of loving you appears to me fo fuperior to all other pleafures, that, of all human beings, if I was not Emily Montague, I would be Madame Des Roches.

I bluth for what I have written; yet why bluth for having a foul to diftinguith perfection; or why conceal the real frelings of my heart?

I will never hide a thought from you; you shall be at once the confidant and the dear object of my tenderness.

In what words-my Rivers, you rule every emotion of my heart; difpofe as you pleafe of your Emily: yet, if you allow her to form a wifh in opposition to yours, indulge her in the transport of returning you to your friends: let her receive you from the hands of a mother, whose happiness you ought to prefer even to hers. D 4 Why

Why will you talk of the mediocrity of your fortune? have you not enough for every real want? much lefs, with you, would make your Emily bleft: what have the trappings of life to do with happinefs? 'tis only facrificing pride to love and filial tendernefs; the worft of human paffions to the beft.

I have a thousand things to fay, but am forced to steal this moment to write to you: we have some French ladies here, who are eternally coming to my apartment.

They are at the door. Adieu !

1.27

Yours,

EMILY MONTAGUE.

LET.

Digitized by Google

LETTER CXXXVI.

To the Earl of ------

Silleri, May 12.

Digitized by Google

I T were indeed, my Lord, to be wished that we had here fchools, at the expence of the public, to teach English to the rising generation: nothing is a stronger tie of brothershood and affection, a greater cement of union, than speaking one common language.

The want of attention to this circumftance has, I am told, had the worft effects poffible in the province of New York, where the people, effectially at a diftance from the capital, continuing to fpeak Dutch, retain their affection for their ancient mafters, and ftill look on their D 5 English English fellow subjects as strangers and intruders.

The Canadians are the more eafly to be won to this, or whatever elfe their own, or the general good requires, as their nobleffe have the ftrongeft attachment to a court, and that favor is the great object of their ambition : were English made by degrees the court language, it would soon be universally spoke.

Of the three great forings of the human heart, intereft, pleafure, vanity, the laft appears to me much the ftrongeft in the Canadians; and I am convinced the moft forcible tie their nobleffe have to France, is their unwillingnefs to part with their croix de St. Louis : might not therefore fome order of the fame kind be inftituted for Canada, and given to all who have the croix, on their fending back the enfigns they now wear, which are inconfistent with their allegiance as British fubjects ? Might

Might not fuch an order be contrived, to be given at the diferentiation of the governor, as well to the Canadian gentlemen who merited most of the government, as to the English officers of a certain rank, and fuch other English as purchased eftates, and settled in the country? and, to give it additional huftre, the governor, for the time being, be always head of the order?

'Tis possible formething of the fame kind all over America might be also of fervice; the passions of mankind are nearly the fame every where: at least I never yet faw the foil or climate, where vanity did not grow; and sill all mankind become philosophers, it is by their passions they must be governed.

The common people, by whom f mean the peatantry, have been great gainers here by the change of makers, their property is more focure, their D 6 indepenindependence greater, their profits much more than doubled : it is not them therefore whom it is neceffary to gain.

The nobleffe, on the contrary, have been in a great degree undone : they have loft their employs, their rank, their confideration, and many of them their fortunes.

It is therefore equally confonant to good policy and to humanity that they fhould be confidered, and in the way most acceptable to them; the rich conciliated by little honorary diffinctions, those who are otherwise by fharing in all lucrative employs; and all of them by bearing a part in the legislature of their country.

The great objects here feem to be to heal those wounds, which past unhappy disputes have left still in fome degree open; to unite the French and English, the civil and military, in one firm body; to to raife a revenue, to encourage agriculture, and especially the growth of hemp and flax; and find a ftaple, for the improvement of a commerce, which at prefent labors under a thousand disadvantages.

But I shall fay little on this or any political subject relating to Canada, for a reason which, whils I am in this colony, it would look like flattery to give : let it fuffice to fay; that, humanly speaking, it is impossible that the inhabitants of this province should be otherwise than happy.

I have the honor to be,

My Lord, &c.

WILLIAM FERMOR.

1 . 1.

LET-

LETTER CXXXVII.

To Mrs. TEMPLE, Pall Mall.

Silleri, May 20.

I CONFESS the fact, my dear; I am, thanks to papa, amazingly learned, and all that, for a young lady of twentytwo: yet you will allow I am not the worfe; no creature breathing would ever find it out: envy itfelf must confess, I talk of lace and blond like another chriftian woman.

I have been thinking, Lucy, as indeed my ideas are generally a little pindaric, how entertaining and improving would be the hiftory of the human heart, if people fpoke all the truth, and painted themfelves as they really are; that is to fay, if all the world were as fincere and honeft hought as I am; for, upon my word, I have fuch a contempt for hypocrify, that, upon the whole, I have always appeared to have fewer good qualities than I really have.

I am afraid we fhould find in the best characters, if we withdrew the veil, a mixture of errors and inconfistencies, which would greatly lessen our veneration.

Papa has been reading me a wife lecture, this morning, on playing the fool: I reminded him, that I was now arrived at years of indifcretion; that every body muft have their day; and that thole who did not play the fool young, ran a hazard of doing it when it would not half fo well become them.

A propos to playing the fool, I am ftrongly inclined to believe I shall marry.

Fitzgerald

Fitzgerald is fo aftonishingly preffing-Belides, fome how or other, I don't feel happy without him : the creature has fomething of a magnetic virtue; I find myself generally, without knowing it, on the fame fide the room with him, and often in the next chair; and lay a thoufand little schemes to be of the same party at bands.

I write pretty fentiments in my pocketbook, and carve his name on trees when nobody fees me: did you think it poffible I could be fuch an idiot?

I am as abfurd as even the gentle lovefick Emily.

I am thinking, my dear, how happy it. is, fince most human beings differ fo extremely one from another, that Heaven has given us the fame variety in our tastes,

Your brother is a divine fellow, and yet there is a fauciness about Fitzgerald which pleases pleafes me better; as he has told me a thousand times, he thinks me infinitely more agreeable than Emily.

Adieu | I am going to Quebec.

Yours,

A. FERMORI

L E T T E R CXXXVIIL

TO Mrs. TEMPLE, Pall Mall.

May 20, Evening.

IO triumphe! A fhip from England ! You can have no idea of the univerfal transport at the sight; the whole town was on the beach, eagerly gazing at the charming stranger, who danced gaily on the waves, as if conscious of the pleasure she inspired.

If

If our joy is fo great, who preferve a correspondence with Europe, through our other colonies, during the winter, what must that of the French have been, who were absolutely shut up fix months from the rest of the world?

I can fcarce conceive a higher delight than they must have felt at being thus restored to a communication with mankind.

The letters are not delivered; our fervant flays for them at the post-office; we expect him every moment: if I have not volumes from you, I shall be very angry.

He comes. Adieu ! I have not patience to wait their being brought up flairs.

111

Yours,

A. FERMOR.

They

They are here; fix letters from you; I shall give three of them to Emily to read, whilst I read the rest: you are very good, Lucy, and I will never call you lazy agam.

LETTER CXXXIX.

To Mils FLRMOR, at Silleri.

Pall Mall, April &.

WHILST I was fealing my letter, I received yours of the 1st of February.

I am exceffively alarmed, my dear, at the account it gives me of Mifs Montague's having broke with her lover, and of my brother's extreme affection for her.

i diđ

I did not dare to let my mother fee that letter, as I am convinced the very idea of a marriage which must for ever feparate her from a fon the loves to idolatry, would be fatal to her; the is altered fince his leaving England more than you can imagine; the is grown pale and thin, her vivacity has entirely left her. Even my marriage scarce seemed to give her pleasure; yet such is her delicacy, her ardor for his happines, she will not fuffer me to fay this to him, left it should constrain him, and prevent his making himfelf happy in his own way. I often find her in tears in her apartment : fhe affects a fmile when the fees me, but it is a fmile which cannot deceive one who knows her whole foul as I do. In fhort, I am convinced fhe will not live long unlefs my brother returns. She never names him without being foftened to a degree not to be expreffed.

Ι..

Amiable

Amiable and lovely as you reprefent this charming woman, and great as the facrifice is fhe has made to my brother, it feems almost cruelty to wish to break his attachment to her; yet, fituated as they are, what can be the confequence of their indulging their tenderness at present, but ruin to both?

At all events, however, my dear, I intreat, I conjure you, to prefs my brother's immediate return to England; I am convinced, my mother's life depends on feeing him.

I have often been tempted to write to Miss Montague, to use her influence with him even against herself.

If the loves him, the will have his true happinets at heart; the will confider what a mind like his muft hereafter fuffice. thould his fondnets for her be fatal to the beft best of mothers; she will urge, she will oblige him to return, and make this step the condition of preferving her tendernels.

Read this letter to her; and tell her, it is to her affection for my brother, to her generofity, I truft for the life of a parent who is dearer to me than my existence.

Tell her my heart is hers, that I will receive her as my guardian angel, that we will never part, that we will be friends, that we will be fifters, that I will omit nothing poffible to make her happy with my brother in England, and that I have very rational hopes it may be in time accomplifhed; but that, if fhe marries him in Canada, and fuffers . him te ponfue his prefent defign, fhe plants a dagger in the boform of her who gave him life.

I fcarce

10

I fcarce know what I would fay, my dear Bell; but I am wretched; I have no hope but in you. Yet if Emily is all you reprefent her—

I am obliged to break off: my mother is here; fhe must not see this letter.

Adicu ! your affectionate

LUCY TEMPLE.

LET-

LETTER CXL.

To Mrs. TEMPLE, Pall Mall.

Silleri, May 21.

YOUR letter of the 8th of April, my dear, was first read by Emily, being one of the three I gave her for that purpole, as I before mentioned.

She went through it, and melting into tears, left the room without fpeaking a word : fhe has been writing this morning, and I fancy to you, for fhe enquired when the mail fet out for England, and feemed pleafed to hear it went to-day.

I am exceffively fhocked at your account of Mrs. Rivers: affure her, in my name, of your brother's immediate return; I know both him and Emily too well to believe they they will facrifice her to their own happinefs: there is nothing, on the contrary, they will not fuffer rather than even afflict her.

Do not, however, encourage an idea of ever breaking an attachment like theirs; an attachment founded lefs in paffion than in the tendereft friendship, in a similarity of character, and a sympathy the most perfect the world ever faw.

Let it be your bufines, my Lucy, to endeavor to make them happy, and to remove the bars which prevent their union in England; and depend on seeing them there the very moment their coming is possible.

From what I know of your brother, I fuppole he will infift on marrying Emily before he leaves Quebec; but, after your letter, which I fhall fend him, you may look on his return as infallible.

Vol. III.

I fend

112 1

I fend all yours and Temple's letters for your brother to-day: you may expect to hear from him by the fame mail with this.

I have only to fay, I am,

A. FERMOR.

LETŤER CXLI.

To Colonel RIVERS, at Quebec.

London, April 5.

MY own happiness, my dear Rivers, in a marriage of love, makes me extremely unwilling to prevent your giving way to a tenderness, which promifes you the same felicity, with so amiable a woman

emily montague. 75

present Mifs Montague to be.

Vi

But, my dear Ned, I cannot, without betraying your friendship, and hazarding all the quiet of your future days, dispense with myself from telling you, though I have her express commands to the contrary, that the peace, perhaps the life, of your excellent mother, depends on your giving up all thoughts of a settlement in America, and returning immediately to England.

I know the prefent state of your affairs will not allow you to marry this charming woman here, without defending from the fituation you have ever held, and which you have a right from your birth to hold, in the world.

. . .

Would you allow me to gratify my friendlhip for you, and fhew, at the fame time, your perfect efteem for me, by commanding, what our long affection gives E 2 300 you you a right to, fuch a part of my fortune as I could eafily spare without the least inconvenience to myfelf, we might all be happy, and you might make your Emily fo: but you have already convinced me, by your refulal of a former request of this kind, that your effeem for me is much lefs warm than mine for you; and that you do not think I merit the delight of making you happy.

17

I will therefore, fay no more on this fubject till we meet, than that I have no doubt this letter will bring you immediately to us.

. If the tenderness you express for Miss Montague is yet conquerable, it will furely be better for both it should be conquered, as fortune has been to much lefs kind to each of you than nature; but if your hearts are immoveably fixed on each other, if your love is of the kind which despises every other consideration, return to the bosom of friendship, and depend on on our finding fome way to make you happy.

If you perfift in refuling to that my fortune, you can have no objection to my using all my interest, for a friend and bro-. ther to defervedly dear to me, and in whose happiness I shall ever find my own.

Allow me now to fpeak of myself; I mean of my dearer felf, your amiable fifter, for whom my tenderness, instead of decreasing, grows every moment stronger.

Yes, my friend, my fweet Lucy is every hour more an angel : her defire of being beloved, renders her a thoufand times more lovely; a countenance animated by true tendernels will always charm beyond all the dead uninformed features the hand of nature ever framed; love embellifhes the whole form, gives fpirit and foftnels to the eyes, the most vivid bloom to the complexion, dignity to the air, E_3 grace grace to every motion, and throws round beauty almost the rays of divinity.

In one word, my Lucy was always more lovely than any other woman; the is now more lovely than even her former felf.

You, my Rivers, will forgive the overflowings of my fondnefs, because you know the merit of its object; it and the Adieu! We die to embrace you!

n Your faithful a store with

J. TEMPLE.

Er.

es t

LET.

LETTER CXLII.

To Mrs. TEMPLE, Pall Mall.

Silleri, May 21.

Y OUR letter, Madam, to Mifs Fermor, which, by an accident, was first read by me, has removed the veil which love had placed before mine eyes, and shewed me, in one moment, the folly of all those dear hopes I had indulged.

You do me but justice in believing me incapable of suffering your brother to facrifice the peace, much less the life, of an amiable mother, to my happines: I have no doubt of his returning to England the moment he receives your letters; but, knowing his tenderness, I will not expose him to a struggle on this occasion: I will E 4 myself, myfelf, unknown to him, as he is fortunately absent, embark in a ship which has wintered here, and will leave Quebec in ten days.

Your invitation is very obliging; but a moment's reflection will convince you of the extreme impropriety of my accepting it.

Affure Mrs, Rivers, that her fon will not lole a moment, that he will probably be with her as foon as this letter; affure her alfo, that the woman who has kept him from her, can never forgive herfelf for what the fuffers.

I am too much afflicted to fay more than that

I am, Madam,

EMILY MONTAGUE.

LET-

EMILY, MONTAGUE. 84 Control of the second s

To Miss Montague, at Silleri.

Montreal, May 20.

I T is with a pleafure no words can express I tell my fweet Emily, I have fixed on a fituation which promifes every advantage we can with as to profit, and which has every beauty that nature can give.

The land is rich, and the wood will more than pay the expence of clearing it; there is a fettlement within a few leagues, on which there is an extreme agreeable family: a number of Acadians have applied to me to be received, as, fettlers: in flort, my dear angel, all feems to fmile on our defign.

E 5

I have

I have spent some days at the house of a German officer, lately in our fervice, who is engaged in the fame defign, but a little advanced in it. T have feen him increasing every hour his little domain, by clearing the lands; he has built a pretty house in a beautiful ruftic ftyle : I have feen his pleafing labors with inconceivable delight. I already fancy my own fettlement advancing in beauty: I paint to myfelf my Emily adorning those lovely fhades; I fee her, like the mother of mankind, admiring a new creation which finiles around her: we appear, to my idea, like the first pair in paradife.

I hope to be with you the ift of June: will you allow me to fet down the 2d as, the day which is to affure to me a life of happines?

:2

My

EMILY MONTAGUE. 83"

My Acadians, your new fubjects, are waiting in the next nonnixe speak with me.

- All good angels guard my Emily !

Adieu! Your

Ed. Rivers,

LETTER EXLIV.

To Mrs. TEMPLE; Pall Mall.

Silleri, May 24.

E MILY has wrote to you, and appears more composed; the does not however tell me what the has refolved; the has only mentioned a defign of fpending a week at Quebec. I fuppose the will take no refolution till E 6 your your brother comes down : be cannot be bere in leis than ten days.

84 THEATISTORYLOF

She has heard from him, and he has fixed on a fettlement depend however on his return to England, even if it is not to ftay. I with he could prevail on Mrs. Rivers to accompany him back. The advantages of his defign are too great to lofe: the voyage is nothing; the climate healthy beyond all conception.

I fancy he will marry as foon as he comes down from Montreal, fet off in the first ship for England, leave Emily with me, and return to us next year: at least, this is the plan my heart has formed.

I wish Mrs. Rivers, had borne his absence better, her impatience to see him has broken in on all our, schemes, Emily and I had in fancy formed a little Eden on Lake Champlain: Fitzgerald

EMIL/TANONTAGUE. 84

gerald had promited me to apply for lands near them; we fliould have been to happy in our little new world of friendflippe our little new world of second brough a subscript our second

There is nothing certain in this vile ftate of existence: I could philosophize extremely well this morning.

Ail our little plans of amusement too for this furnmer are now at an end; your brother was the foul of all our parties. This is a trifle, but my mind to-day seeks for every subject of chagrin.

Let but my Emily be happy, and I will not complain, even if I lofe her : I have a thousand fears, a thousand uneasy reflections: if you knew her merit, you would not wish to break the attachment.

My fweet Emily is going this morning to Quebec; I have promifed to accompany her, and the now waits for me.

I can-

The cannot write : I have a heavinefs about my heatt, which has never left me fince I read your letter. 'Tis the only difagreeable one I ever received from my dear Lucy: I am not fure I love you fo well as before I faw this letter. There is foundthing unfeeling in the ftyle of it, which I did not expect from you.

Adieu ! Your faithful

an ord a part of a A. Fermon.

LETTER CXLV.

To Mrs. TEMPLE, Pall Mall.

Silleri, May 25.

F A M unhappy beyond all words; my fweet Emily is gone to England; the fhip failed this morning; I am just returned turned from the heach, after conducting her on board. On the state of the state in provide condand

EMILYHMONTACHE. 84

.

I used every art, every perfusion in the power of friendship, to prevent her going till your brother cant down a But all I faid was in vain, She told me; " fhe knew too well her own weakness to hazard feeing him; that fhe alfo knew his tendernels, and was refolved to fpare him the ftruggle between his affection and his duty it that fhe was de-termined never to marry him but with the confent of his mother; that their. meeting at Quebec, fituated as they were, could only be the fource of unhappiness to both; that her heart doated on him, but that the would never be the caufe of his acting in a manner unworthy his character : that. the would fee his family the moment the got to London, and then retire, to the house of a relation in Berkshire, where she would wait for his arrival.

That

That the had given you her promife, which nothing should make her break, to embark in the first ship for Jengland."

She expressed no fears for herself as to the voyage, but trembled at the idea of her Rivers's danger.

She fat down feveral times yesterday to write to him, but her tears prevented her: fhe at last affumed courage enough to tell him her defign; but it was in fuch terms as convinced me fhe could not have purfued it, had he been here.

1 She went to the fhip with an appearance of calmnels that aftonifhed me; but, the moment fhe entered, all her refolution forfook her: fhe retired with me to her foom, where fhe gave way to all the agony of her foul.

V : m 1 1

The.

The word was given to fail; I' was fummoned away; fhe role haltily, flie prefled me to her bolom, " Tell him," faid fhe, " his Emily"— fhe could fay no more.

Never in my life did I feel any forrow equal to this feparation. Love her, my Lucy; you can never have half the tendernefs for her fhe merits.

She ftood on the deck till the fhip turned Point Levi, her eyes fixed paffionately on our boat.

Twelve delock,

I have this moment a letter from your brother to Emily, which the directed me to open, and fend to her; I inclofe it to you, as the fafeft way of conveyance: there is one in it from Temple to him, on the fame fubject with yours to me.

Adieu !

Adieu ! I will write again when my mind is more composed.

Yours

A. FERMOR-

LETTER CXLVI. To Mils Montague, at Silleri.

Montreal, May 28.

Digitized by Google

I T was my wifh, my hope, my nobleft ambition, my dear Emily, to fee you in a fituation worthy of you; my fanguine temper flattered me with the idea of feeing this wifh accomplished in Canada, though fortune denied it me in England.

1 . . .

The

EMILY MONTAGUE gr

The letter which I inclose has put an end to thole fond deluiive hopes? I mult return immediately to England; did not my own heart dictate this flep; I know too well the goodness of yours, to expect the continuance of your efteem, were I capable of purchasing happiness, even the happiness of calling you mine, at the expence of my mother's life, or even of her quiet.

I must now submit to see my Emily in an humbler situation; to see her want those pleasures, those advantages, those honors, which fortune gives, and which she has so nobly factificed to true delicacy of mind, and, if I do not flatter myself, to her generous and disinterested affection for mie.

Be affured, my dearest angel, the inconveniencies attendant on a narfow fortune, the only one I have to offer, fhall be be fortuned by all which, the most lively entrem, the most perfort friendship, the tenderest love, can infpire, by that attention, that unwearied folicitude to please, of which the heart alone knows the value.

11

Fortune has no power over minds like ours; we poffels a treasure to which all fhe has to give is nothing, the dear exquisite delight of loying, and of being beloved.

Awake to all the finer feelings of tener effect and elegant defire, we have ery real good in each other.

I fhall hurry down, the moment I have fettled my affairs here; and hope foon to have the transport of prefenting the most charming of friends, of mistreffes, allow me to add, of wives, to a mother whom I love and revere beyond words, and to whom she will foon be dearer than myself.

My

My going to England will detain me at Montreal: a few days longer than I immended ed; a delay I can very ill fupport.

Adieu! my Emily! no language can express my tenderness or my impatience.

and the second of the second o

LETTER CXLVII.

To JOHN TEMPLE, Efq; Pall Mall. Montreal, May 28.

L' cannor enough, my dear Femple, thank you for your faft, though fride froys my air-built feneme of happinels. Could

Could I have supposed any monther would thus fovergly have felt my absence, I had never left England; to make hes easier, was my only motive for that step.

I with pleasure facrifice my defign of fettling here to her peace of mind; no confideration, however, fhall ever make me give up that of marrying the best and most charming of women.

I could have wished to have had a fortune worthy of her; this was my wish, not that of my Emily; she will with equal pleasure share with me poverty or riches: I hope her consent to marry me before I leave Canada. I know the advantages of affluence, my dear Temple, and am too reasonable to despise them; I would only avoid rating them above their worth.

Riches undoubtedly purchase a variety of pleasures which are not otherwise to be obtained; they give power, they give honors, they give confequence; but if, to 5 enjoy EMPLY MONTAGUE. 93 enjoy these subordinate goods, we must give up those which are more effential, more real, more fuited to our natures, I can never hesitate one moment to determine between them.

I know nothing fortune has to bestow, which can equal the transport of being dear to the most amiable, most lovely of womankind.

The fiream of life, my dear Temple, ftagnates without the gentle gale of love; till I knew my Emily, till the dear moment which affured me of her tenderness, I could scarce be faid to live.

Adieu !

Your affectionate

Ep. RIVERS.

LET-

LETTER CXLVIII.

To Mrs. TEMPLE, Pall Mall.

Silleri, June 1.

I CAN write, I can talk, of nothing but Emily; I never knew how much I loved her till fhe was gone: I run eagerly to every place where we have been together; every fpot reminds me of her; I remember a thoufand converfations, endeared by confidence and affection: a tender tear ftarts in fpite of me: our walks, our airings, our pleafing little parties, all rufh at once on my memory: I fee the fame lovely fcenes around me, but they have loft half their power of pleafing.

I vifit every grove, every thicket, that fhe loved; I have a redoubled fondness for every object in which the took pleafure.

Fitzgerald

Fitzgerald indulges me in this enthufialm of friendship; he leads me to every place which can recall my Emily's idea; he speaks of her with a warmth which shews the sensibility and goodness of his own heart; he endeayors to souther the by the subst endearing attention.

What infinite pleafure, my dear Lucy, there is in being truly beloved ! Fond as I have ever been of general admiration, that of all masskind is nothing to the leaft mark of Fitzgerald's tendernefs.

Adieu ! it will be fome days before I can fend this letter.

Let de la contena de

to the start

June 4. The governor gives a ball in Bonor of the day; I am dreffing to go, but without Vor III. F my my fweet companion : every hour I feel more fenfibly her absence.

5th.

We had last night, during the ball, the most dreadful storm I ever heard; it seemed to shake the whole habitable globe.

Heaven preferve my Emily from its fury ! I have a thousand fears on her account.

Twelve o'clock.

Your brother is arrived; he has been here about an hour: he flew to Silleri, without going at all to Quebec; he enquired for Emily; he would not believe fhe was gone.

There is no expressing how much he was shocked when convinced she had taken this voyage without him; he would have followed her in an open boat, in hopes of overtaking her at Coudre, if my father had not detained him almost by force, and at last convinced him of the impossibility of overtaking her, as the winds, having been constantly fair, must before this have carried them out of the river.

He has fent his fervant to Quebec, with orders to take passage for him in the first ship that fails; his impatience is not to be described.

He came down in the hope of marrying her here, and conducting her himself to England; he forms to himself a thousand dangers to her, which he fondly fancies his presence could have averted: in short, he has all the unreasonableness of a man in love.

F 2

Digitized by Google

I propole fending this, and a large packet more, by your brother, unless some unexpected opportunity offers before.

Adieu ! my dear !

Yours.

L E T T E R CXLIX.

To Mrs. TEMPLE, Pall Mall.

6th.

A. FERMOR!

WOUR brother has taken his paffage in a very find thip, which will fail the roth, you may expect him every hour after you receive this; which I fend, with what I wrote yefferday, by a finall veffet which fails a week fooner than was intended.

Rivers

Rivers perfuades Fitzgerald to apply for the lands which he had fixed upon on Lake Champlain, as he has no thoughts of ever returning hither.

I will prevent this, however, if I have any influence: I cannot think with patience of continuing in America, when my two amiable friends have left it; I had no motive for wifning a fettlement here, but to form a little fociety of friends, of which they made the principal part.

Besides, the spirit of emulation would have kept up my courage, and given fire and biilliancy to my fancy.

Emily and I fhould have been trying who had the most lively genius at creation; who could have produced the fairest flowers; who have formed the woods and rocks into the most beautiful arbors, vistoes, grottoes; have taught F_3 the

JO2 THE HISTORY OF

the ftreams to flow in the most pleafing meanders; have brought into view the greatest number and variety of those lovely little falls of water with which this fairy land abounds; and shewed nature in the fairest form,

In fhort, we fhould have been continually endeavoring, following the luxuriancy of female imagination, to render more charming the fweet abodes of love and friendship; whilst our heroes, changing their fwords into plough-fhares, and engaged in more fubstantial, more profitable labors, were clearing land, raising cattle and corn, and doing every thing becoming good farmers; or, to express it more poetically,

" Taming the genius of the flubbora " plain, " Almost as quickly as they conquer'd " Spain :"

By

By which I would be underftood to mean the Havannah, where, vanity apart, I am told both of them did their duty, and a little more, if a man can in fuch a cafe be faid to do more.

In one word, they would have been fudying the ufeful, to fupport us; we the agreeable, to pleafe and amufe them; which I take to be affigning to the two fexes the employments for which nature intended them, notwithftanding the vile example of the favages to the contrary.

There are now no farmereffes in Canada worth my contending with; therefore the whole pleafure of the thing would be at an end, even on the fuppolition that friendfhip had not been the foul of our defign.

- Say every thing for me to Temple and Mrs. Rivers, and to my dearest Emily, if arrived.

Adieu ! your faithfúl

A. Fermor.

F4 LET.

LETTER CL.

To the Earl of -----.

Silleri, June 6, 1767.

T is very true, my Lord, that the Jefuit miffionaries still continue in the Indian villages in Canada; and I am an fraid it is no lefs true, that they use swerp art to instill into those people an averfion to the English; at least I have been told this by the Indians themselves, who seem equally surprised and piqued that we do not send missionaries amongs; them.

1 Their ideas of Christianity see extremely circumscribed, and they give no preference to one mode of our faith above another; they regard a millionary of any nation as a kind father, who comes to inftruct is fouct them in the beft way of worlhipping the Deity, whom they suppose more propitions to the Europeans than to themselves, and as an ambassador. from the prince whole subject he is: they therefore think it a mark of honor, and a proof of effective missionaries; and to our remissals, and the Frenchwife attention on this head, is owing the extreme attachment the greater part of the favage mations have ever had to the latter.

The Frenck miffionaries, by fludying their language, their manners, their tempers, their difpositions; by conforming to their way of life, and using every art to gain their effeem, have acquired an influence over them which is fearce to be conceived; nor would it be difficult for ours to do the fame, were they judiciously choic, and properly encouraged.

S.

F 5

S. Sec.

I believe

I believe I have faid, that there is a ftriking refemblance between the manners of the Canadians and the favages: I should have explained it, by adding, that this refemblance has been brought about, not by the French having wonthe favages to receive European manners, but by the very contrary; the peafants. having acquired the favage indolence in peace, their activity and ferocity in war; their fondness for field fports, their hatred of labor; their love of a wandering life, and of liberty; in the latter of which they have been in fome degree indulged, the laws here being much milder, and more favorable to the people, than in France.

Many of the officers alfo, and those of rank in the colony troops, have been adopted into the favage tribes; and there is fitronger evidence than, for the honor of humanity, I would wish there was, that fome of them have led the death dance at the execution of English captives, tives, have even partook the horrid repaft, and imitated them in all their cruelties : cruelties, which, to the eternal difgrace, not only of our holy religion, but even of our nature, these poor people, whole ignorance is their excule, have been inftigated to, both by the French and English colonies, who, with a fury truly diabolical, have offered rewards to those who brought in the scalps of their enemies. Rouffeau has taken great pains to prove that the most uncultivated nations are the most virtuous : I have all due refpect for this philosopher, of whose writings I am an enthusiastic admirer; but I have a still greater respect for truth. which I believe is not in this inftance on his fide.

There is little reafon to boaft of the virtues of a people, who are fuch brutal flaves to their appetites as to be unable to avoid drinking brandy to an excefs fcarce to be conceived, whenever, it fails in their way, though eternally lamenting F 6 the the invaders and other associous crimes of which they are to perpetually guilty when under its influence.

It is unjust to fay we have corrupted them, that we have taught them a vice to which we are ourfelves not addicted; both French and English are in general fober: we have indeed given them the means of intoxication, which they had not before their intercourfe with us; but he must be indeed fond of praifing them, who makes a virtue of their having been fober, when water was the only liquor with which they were accuainted.

From all that I have observed, and heard of these people, it appears to me an undoubted fact, that the most civilized Indian nations are the most virtuous; a fact which makes directly against Rousseau's ideal fystem.

Indeed all fifteins make againit, infread of leading to, the different of fruth.

2 14 - 14

Père

Père Latitan has, for this reason, in his very learned comparison of the manners of the favores with those of the first ages, given a very imperfect account of Indian manners is the is even to sandid as so own, he tells you nothing that what makes for the fystem he is endeavoring to establish,

My with, on the contrary, is not to make truth fublervient to any favorite fentiment or idea, any child of my fangy; bus to distance is, whether agreeable on not to my own opinion.

...My:accounts may therefore be fold on imperfect filom...midtake in ...miinformation, but will never be defignedly warped from truth.

montandar i seconda seconda

That the favages have virtues; dandos must own; but only a love of paradox can make any man affert they have more than polified nations.

Your

Your Lordship asks me what is the general moral character of the Canadians; they are simple and hospitable, yet extremely attentive to interest, where it does not interfere with that laziness which is their governing passion.

They are rather devout than virtuous; have religion without morality, and a fense of honor without very strict honesty.

Indeed I believe wherever fuperfition reigns, the moral fenfe is greatly weakened; the ftrongest inducement to the practice of morality is removed, when people are brought to believe that a few outward ceremonies will compensate for the want of virtue.

I myfelf heard a man, who had raifed a large fortune by very indirect means, confeis his life had been contrary to every precept of the Gofpel; but that he hoped the pardon of Heaven for all his fins, as he he intended to devote one of his daughters to a conventual-life as an expiation.

.3

This way of being virtuous by proxy, is certainly very eafy and convenient to fuch finners as have children to facrifice.

By Colonel Rivers, who leaves us in a few days, I intend myfelf the honor of addreffing your Lordfhip again.

I have the honor to be

Your Lordship's, &c.

Digitized by Google

WM. FERMOR.

·· _: _: :

LETTER CLI.

Y OUR Lordfhip will receive this from the hands of one of the moft worthy and amiable; menod sizes /kndw, Colonel Rivers, whom I am particularly happy, in having the honor to introduce to your Lordfhip, as I know your delicacy in the choice of friends, and that there are fo few who have your perfect efteem and confidence, that the acquaintance of one who merits both, at his time of life, will be regarded, even by your Lordfhip, as an acquifition.

'Tis to him I fhall fay the advantage I procure him, by making him known known to a nobleman, who, with the wildom and experience of age, has all the warmth of heart, the generofity, the noble confidence, the enthulialin, the fire, and vivacity of youth.

Your Lordship's idea, in regard to Protostant convents here, on the footing of that we visited together at Hamburgh, is extremely well worth the confideration of those whom it may concern; especially if the Romish ones are abolished, as will most probably be the cafe.

The nobleffe have numerous families, and, if there are no convents, will be at a lofs where to aducate their daughters, as well as where to dispose of those who do not marny in a reasonable times the i convention of they find in both reaspects from these locules, is one fitning motive to them to continue in their ancient religion.

As

11

As I would however prevent the more useful, by which I mean the lower, part of the fex from entering into this ftate, I would wish only the daughters of the feigneurs to have the privilege of becoming nuns: they should be obliged, on taking the vow, to prove their noblesse for at least three generations; which would fecure them respect, and, at the same time, prevent their becoming too numerous.

They should take the vow of obedience, but not of celibacy: and referve the power, as at Hamburgh, of going out to marry, though on no other confideration.

Your Lordship may remember, every nun at Hamburgh has a right of marrying, except the Abbess; and that, on your Lordship's telling the lady who then prefided, and who was young and very handfome, you thought this a hardship, she answered with great spirit, "O, my Lord, you "know it is in my power to resign." I refer

I refer your Lordship to Colonel Rivers for that farther information in regard to this colony, which he is much more able to give you than I am, having visited every part of Canada in the design of settling in it.

I have the honor to be,

My Lord, &c.

WM. FERMOR.

Your Lordship's mention of nuns has brought to my memory a little anecdote on this subject, which I will tell you.

I was, a few mornings ago, viliting a French lady, whole very handlome daughter, of almost fixteen, told me, fhe was going into a convent. I enquired which fhe had made choice of: fhe faid, " The " General Holpital."

"I am

"I am glad, Mademoifelle, you have "not chofe the Urfulines; the rules are "fo very fevere, you would have found them hard to conform to."

"As to the rules, Sir, I have no obi jection to their feverity, but the habit of the General Hospital-"

I smiled.

" Is fo very light-"

" And fo becoming, Mademoifelle."

She finiled in her turn, and I left her fully convinced of the fincerity of her vocation, and the great propriety and humanity of fuffering young creatures to choofe a kind of life to repugnant to human nature, at an age when they are fuch excellent judges of what will make them happy.

LET.

LETTER CLH.

and the first of the second second

To Mrs. TEMPLE, Pall Mall.

I SEND this by your brother, who fails to-morrow.

Time, I hope, will reconcile me to his and Emily's absence; but at present I cannot think of losing them without a dejection of mind which takes from me the very idea of pleasure.

I conjure you, my dear Lucy, to do every thing poffible to facilitate their union; and remember, that to your request, and to Mrs. Rivers's tranquillity, they]

· Silleri, June 9.

they have facrificed every profpect they had of happines.

I would fay more; but my fpirits are fo affected, I am incapable of writing.

Love my fweet Emily, and let her not repent the generofity of her conduct.

Adieu!

Your affectionate

A. FERMOR.

LET-

LETTER CLIII.

To Mrs. TEMPLE, Pall Mall.

Silleri, June 10, Evening.

MY poor Rivers! I think I felt more from his going than even from Emily's: whilft he was here, I feemed not quite to have loft her: I now feel doubly the lofs of both.

He begged me to shew attention to Madame Des Roches, who he assured me merited my tenderest friendship; he wrote to her, and has left the letter open in my care: it is to thank her, in the most affectionate terms, for her politeness and friendship, as well to himself as to his Emily; and to offer her his best fervices in England in regard to her estate, part of

tis THE HISTORY OF

of which fome people here have very ungeneroully applied for a grant of, on pretence of its not being all fettled according to the original conditions.

He owned to me, he felt force regret at leaving this amiable woman in Canada, and at the idea of never feeing her more,

I love him for this fensibility; and for his delicate attention to one whole difintereffed affection for him most certainly deferves it.

Fitzgerald is below, he does all poffible to confole me for the lofs of my friends; but indeed, Lucy, I feel their absence most severely.

I have an opportunity of fending your brother's, letter, to Madame Des Routes, which I must not loke, it they are not very fitter unit frequent: 'tis by a French gentleman who is now with my father.

Adieu! Your faithful

A. Fermor.

Twelve at night.

We have been talking of your brother; I have been faying, there is nothing I fo much admire in him as that tenderness of foul, and almost female fensibility, which is fo uncommon in a fex, whose whose education tends to harden their hearts.

Fitzgerald admires his fpirit, his underftanding, his generofity, his courage, the warmth of his friendship.

My father his knowledge of the world; not that indifcriminate fulpicion of mankind which is fallely fo called; but that clearnels of mental fight, and difcerning faculty, which can diftinguish virtue as well as vice, wherever it refides.

Vol. III. G "I alfo

"I also love in him," faid my hater, that noble fincerity, that integrity of character, which is the foundation of all the virtues."

"And yet, my dear papa, you would "have had Emily prefer to him, that white "third of affer milk, Sir George Clayton, "whose highest claim to virtue is the con-"fututional absence of vice, and who never knew what it was to feel for the "forrows of another."

"You miltake, Bell: fuch a preference was impoffible; but fhe was engaged to Sir George; and he had alfor a fine fortune. Now, in these degenerate days, my dear, people must eat; we have lost all taste for the airy food of romances, when ladies rode behind their enamored knights, dined luxuriously, on a banquet of haws, and quenched their thirst at the first fream."

" But, my dear papa-"

"Bat,

Digitized by Google

EMPLY MONTAGUE. 113 "But, my dear Bell-"

I faw the fwest old man took angry, fo chose to drop the fubject; but I do aver, now he is out of fight, that haws and a pillion, with fuch a noole fellow as your brother, are preferable to ortolans and a coach and fix, with fuch a piece of ftill life and infipidity as Sir George.

Good night! my dear Lucy,

 a. Legistry and a set of the mass and evenced parts of the space door for drawing hope you will have door for draw of the it group in the set of a first and a set manual first of the set of the set of any are the door of the set of the mass of the door of the factor to a south.

and a second s And a second second

" But, my dear B4"--"

To Mrs. TEMPLE, Pall Mall. Court to 2000 1 E de la court d'action to 2000 1 E de la court d'action Siller d'action de la court to 2000 1 E de la court Siller , Jude 17.

Have this moment received a packet of letters from my dear Lucy; I shall only fay, in answer to what makes the greatest part of them, that in a fortnight I hope you will have the pleasure of seeing your brother, who did not hesitate one moment in giving up to Mrs. Rivers's peace of mind, all his pleasing prospects here, and the happiness of being united to the woman he loved.

You will not, I hope, my dear, forget his having made fuch a facrifice : but I think too highly of you to fay more on this fubject. You will receive Emily as a friend, as a fifter, who merits all your cfteem efteem and tenderne's, and who has loft all the advantages of fortune, and incurred the Centure of the world, by her diffinterefted attachment to your brother.

EMILY MONTAGUE. MIS

I am extremely forry, but not furprized, at what you tell me of poor Lady H-----. I knew her intimately, the wastacrificed at eighteen, by the avarice and ambition of her parents, to age, difeafe, ill-nature, and a coronet and liter death is the natural confequence of her regret: the had a foul formed for friendlhip; the found it not at home; her elegance of mind, and native probity, prevented her leeking it abroad; the died a melancholy victim to the tyranny of her friends, the tendernels of her heart, and her delicate tenfe of honor.

If her father has any of the feelings of humanity left, what mult be not fuller on this occasion?

x:Ľ

Ιc

-146 THE HISTORY OF

It is a painful confideration, my dear, that the happiness or milery of our lives are generally determined before, we are proper judges of either.

Reftrained by cuftorn, and the ridiculous prejudices of the world, we go with the crowd, and it is late in life perfore we dare polithink point a state of the cost of

How happy are you and I, Eury, in having parents, who, far from forcing our inclinations, have not even endeavored to berray us into chooling from fordid They have not labored to fill guize i isi built and the fill motives . our young hearts with vanity of avarice: they have left us those virtues, those amiable qualities, we received from na-They have painted to us the ture. charms of friendship, and not, taught 1 usirio value riches above their real brice. 14

.)

My

My father, indeed, checks a certain excels of romance which there is in my temper; but, at the fame time, he never encouraged my receiving the addreffes of any man who had only the gifts of fortune to recommend him, he even advifed me, when very young, against marrying an officer in his regiment, of a large fortune, but an unworthy character.

If I have any knowledge of the human heart, it will be my own fault if I am not happy with Fitzgerald.

I am only afraid, that when we are married, and begin to fettle into a calm, my volatile disposition will carry me back to coquery: my passion for admiration is naturally strong, and has been increased by indulgence; for without vanity I have been extremely the task of the men.

G 4.

I have

Digitized by Google

I have a kind of an idea it won't be long before I try the strength of my refolution, for I heard papa and Fitzgerald in high confultation this morning.

Do you know, that, having nobody to love but Fitzgerald, I am ten times more enamored of the dear creature than ever? My love is now like the rays of the fun collected.

He is fo much here, I wonder I don't grow tired of him; but fomehow he has the art of varying himfelf beyond any man I ever knew: it was that agreeable variety of character that first ftruck me; I confidered that with him I should have all the fex in one; he fays the fame of me; and indeed, it must be owned we have both an infinity of agreeable caprice, which in love affairs is worth all the merit in the world.

Have

eu Thaile upou in hever observed, Lucy, that the fame perfon is feldom greatly the object of both love and friendfhip?

Those virgues, which gommand effective do not often inspire passion.

"Friendship seeks the more real, more folid virtues; integrity, constancy, and a steady uniformity of character: love on the contrary, admires it knows not what; creates itself the idol it worships; finds charms even in defects; is pleased with follies, with inconsistency, with caprice: to fay all in one line, with a standard and a standard and a standard a "Love is a child, and like a child he plays."

The moment Emily arrives, Tentrear that one of you will white test me Tho words can speak my impatiente This equally anxious to heat OP my dear G 5 Rivers.

136 37

sso THE HASTORY OF: Rivers. Henres feed them profoques gales ! Adieu !

abete virtitititititit ottore de com

L É T T E R CLV. Sub of Il villet To Mrs. TEMPLE, Pall Mall.

Silleri, June 30.

OU are extremely miltaken, my in dear of the fociety here of had mather live at Quebes, take it for all in all other in any rown in Eaghand, where the manner of living living here is uncommonly agreeable; the feenes about us are lovely, and the mode of amufements makes us tafte those feenes in full perfection.

Whilst your brother and Emily were here, I had not a wish to leave Canada; but their going has left a void in my heart, which will not easily he filled up: I have loved Emily almost from child, hood, and there is a peculiar tenderness in those friendships, which "Grow with our growth, and ftrengthen "with our ftrength."

There was also fomething romantic and agreeable in finding her here, and unexpettedly, after we had been feparated by Colonel Montague's having left the regiment in which my father forved.

In fhort, every thing concurred to make us dear to each other, and there- $G \ 6$ fore fore to give a greater poignancy to the pain of parting a fecond time.

As to your brother, I love him for much, that a man who had lefs candor and generofity than Fitzgerald, would be almost angry at my very lively friendship.

I have this moment a letter from Madame Des Roches : she laments the loss of our two amiable friends ; begs me to affure them both of her eternal remembrance : fays, " the congratulates Emily " on possessing the heart of the man " on earth most worthy of being be-" loved; that she cannot form an idea " of any human felicity equal to that " of the woman, the buliness of whole " life it is to make Colonel Rivers happy. " That, Heaven having denied her that " happines, the will never marry, not " enter into an engagement, which, 46 would make it criminal in her to re-"member him with tenderness: that it is, " however, however, she believes, best for her he has left the country, for that it is impossible she should ever have seen him with indifference."

It is perhaps as prudent not to mention these circumstances either to your brother or Emily; I thought of sending her letter to them, but there is a certain fire in her style, mixed with tenderness, when she speaks of Rivers, which would only have given them both regret, by making them see the excess of her affection for him; her expressions are much stronger than those in which I have given you the sense of them.

I intend to be very intimate with her; becaufe fhe loves my dear Rivers; fheloves Emily too, at leaft fhe fancies fhedoes, but I am a little doubtful as to the friendfhips between rivals: at this diftance, however, I dare fay, they will always continue on the beft terms poffible, and I: would have Emily write to her.

2

Da

Do you know the has defired me to contrive to get her a picture of your brother, without his knowing it? I am not determined whether I thall indulge her in this fancy or not; if I do, I must employ you as my agent. It is madnets in her to defire it; but, as there is a pleafure in being mad; I am not fure my morality will let me refuse her, fince pleafures are not very thick fown in this world.

Adieu !

Your affectionate

A. FERMOR.

LET-

EMILY MONRAGUE 195

LETTER CLVL TO MISS TEMPLE, Pall Mall

1. 1. 1. 1. 1.

Silleri, July 10.

BY this time, my dear Lucy, I hope you are happy with your brother and my fweet Emily: I am all impatience to know this from yourfelves; but it will be five or fix weeks, perhaps much more, before I can have that fatisfaction.

As to me-to be plain, my dear, I can hold no longer; I have been married this fortnight. My father wanted to keep it a fecret, for fome very foolifh reafons; but it is not in my nature; I hate fecrets, they are only fit for politicians, and people whole thoughts and actions will not bear the light.

Fòr

For my part, I am convinced the general loquacity of human kind, and our inability to keep fecrets without a natural kind of uneafines, were meant by Providence to guard against our laying deep schemes of treachery against each other.

*²¹ I remember a very fenfible man, who perfectly know the world, ufed, to fay, there was no fuch thing in nature (s la fecret; a maxim as true, at leaft I believe fo; as it is falutary, and which I would advife all good mammas, aunts, and governeffes, to imprefs ftrongly on the minds of young ladies.

So, as I was faying, voilà Madame Eitzgerald!

This is, however, yet a fecret here; But, according to my prefent doctrine, and following the nature of things, it cannot long continue fo.

You

You never faw to polite a hufband, but I suppose they are all so the first formight, especially when married in so interesting and romantic a manner; I am very fond of . the fancy of being thus married as it were; but I have a notion I shall blunder it out very foon: we were married on a party to Three Rivers, nobody with us but papa and Madame Villiers, who have not yet published the mystery. I hear fome miss at Quebec are scandalous about Fitzgesald's being to much here; I will leave them in doubt a little, I think, merely to gratify their love of scandal; every body should be amused in their way. der tor

> ાણુક તે એ દ્વિત આ ઘટું છે. આ ગામમાં આ ગ

> > A. FITZGER

Pray

Digitized by Google

Adieu! Yours,

Pray let Emily be married; overy body marries but poor little Emily.

LETTER CLVII.

To the Earl of ----- lijkin, Jelp 16.

HAVE the pleafure to tell your Lordihip I have married my daughter to a gentleman with whom I have reason to hope she will be happy.

He is the fecond for of an Irifh baronetof good fortune, and has himfelf about five hundred pounds a year, independent of his commission; he is a man of an excellent fenfe, and of honor, and has a very lively tenderness for my daughter.

Ft.

It will, I am afraid, be fome time before I can leave this country, as I choose to take my daughter and Mr. Fitzgerald with me, in order to the latter's foliciting a majority, in which pursuit I shall without scruple tax your Lordship's friendship to the upmost.

I am extremely happy at this event, as Rell's volatile temper made me fometimes afreid of her chooling inconfidecately : their marriage is not yet declared, for fome family reafons, not worth particularizing to your Lordthip of their states of ablence comes from New York, for me and Mr. Fitzgerald, we fhall fettle things for taking leave of Canada, which I however affure your Lordthip I thall do with fome reluctance.

41 L

The

up theatstory of .

The climate is all the year agreeable and healthy, in fummer divine; a man at my time of life cannot leave this chearing, enlivening fun without reflectance; the fleat is very like that of Italy or the South of France, without that opprefive clofenefs which generally attends our hot weather in England.

The manner of hife here is the full is again y mouth in the full is we make the molt of our fine furners, by the pleafanteft country parties you can imagine. Here are forme very estimable perfors, and the spirit of urbanity begins to diffuse itself from the centre : in short, I shall leave Canada at the very time when one would with to come to it.

It is aftonifhing, in a fmall community like this, how much depends on the perfonal character of him who governs.

I am

I am oblight to break off abruptly, the perion who takes this to England being going immediately on board.

L have the honor to be, My Lord,

Your Lordship's, &c.

WM. FERMOR.

Paterial Tender of Laterial description of the second second two for Policy E T T E R CLVIII. 101 CLVIII.

To JOHN TEMPLE, Elqyi Pall Mall. Silleri, July 13.

AGREE with you, my dear Temple, that nothing, can be more pleasing than and my care fogle have, I flatter my felf, the happy happy experience; and with with you that the character was more common: but I muft own, and I am forry to sign it, that my fair countrywomen and fellow-citizens (I fpeak of the nation in general, and not of the capital) have an unbecoming kind of referve, which prevents their being the agreeable companions, and amiable wives, which nature meant them.

From a fear, and I think a prudifh one, of being thought too attentive to pleafe your fex, they have acquired a certain diftant manner to men, which borders on ill-briefling : they take great pairs to yeil, under an affected appearance of difdain, that winning infibility of heart, that delicate tendernefs, which renders them doubly lovely.

They are even afraid to own their friendships, if not according to the fquare and rule; are doubtful whether a model woman may own the toves even her huff-6 band;

EMPLY MONTAGUE. not band; and feem to think affections were given them for no-purpole but to hite.

Upon the whole, with at least as good a native right to charm as any women on the face of the globe, the English have found. the happy fecret of pleasing less.

Is my Emily arrived? I can fay nothing elfe.

Twelve o'clock.

I am the happiest woman in the creation: papa has just told file, we are to go home in fix or seven weeks.

Not but this is a divine country, and our therm 'a terrefitial paradife; but we have lived in It almost a year, and one grows tired of every thing in time, you know, Temple.

I fhall

I fhall fee my Emily, and flirt with Rivers, to fay nothing of you and my, little Lucy.

Adieu! I am grown very lazy fince I married; for the future, I fhall make Fitzgerald write all my letters, except billet-doux, in which I think I excel him.

Yours,

A. FITZGERALD.

LETTER CLIX.

To Miss FERMOR, at Silleri.

Dover, July 8.

AM this moment arrived, my dear Bell, after a very agreeable passage, and am fetting out immediately for London, from whence I shall write to you the moment I have have feen Mrs. Rivers; I will own to you I tremble at the idea of this interview, yet am refolved to fee her, and open all my foul to her in regard to her fon; after which, I shall leave her the mistress of my destiny; for, ardently as I love him, I will never marry him but with her approbation.

I have a thousand anxious fears for my Rivers's fafety : may Heaven protect him from the dangers his Emily has escaped 1.

I have but a moment to write, a ship being under way which is bound to Quebec; a gentleman, who is just going off in a boat to the ship, takes the care of this.

May every happiness attend my dear girl! Say every thing affectionate for me to Captain Fermor and Mr. Fitzgerald.

Adieu! Yours,

Η

EMILY MONTAGUES

Vol. III.

LET.

LETTER CLX.

To Miss Fermor, at Silleri.

London, July 19.

GOT to town last night, my dear, and any at a friend's, from whence I have this morning fent to Mrs. Rivers; I every moment expect her answer; my anxiety of mind is not to be expressed; my heart finks; I almost dread the return of my messenger.

If the affections, my dear friend, give us the higheft happiness of which we are capable, they are also the source of our keeness misery; what I feel at this instant, is not to be described: I have been near resolving to go into the country without seeing or sending to Mrs. Rivers. If the should fhould seceive me with coldnels—why should I have expected myfelf to the chance of fuch a reception? It would have been better to have waited for Rivers's arrival; I have been too precipitate; my warmth of temper has milled me: what had I to do to feek his family? I would give the world to setract my meffage, though it was only to let her know I was arrived; that her fon was well, and that fhe might every hour expect him in England.

There is a rap at the door: I tremble I know not why; the fervant comes up, he announces Mr. and Mrs. Temple: my heart beats, they are at the door.

One o'clock.

Digitized by Google

They are gone, and return for me in an hour; they inful on my dining with them, and tell me Mrs. Rivers is impatient to fee me. Nothing was ever fo polite, fo delicate, fo affectionate, as the behaviour of both; they faw my confusion, and did H 2 every every thing to remove it : they enquired after Rivers, but without the least hint of the dear interest I take in him : they fpoke of the happiness of knowing me: they alked my friendship, in a manner the most flattering that can be imagined. How strongly does Mrs. Temple, my dear, refemble her amiable prothers her eyes have the fame fenfibility, the fame pleasing expression; I think I scarce ever faw fo charming a woman; I love her already; I feel a tenderness for her, which is inconceivable; I caught myself two or three times looking at her, with an attention for which I blufhed.

How dear to me is every friend of my Rivers!

I believe, there was fomething very foolifh in my behaviour, but they had the good-breeding and humanity not to feem to obferve it.

I had

Digitized by Google.

I had almost forgot to tell you, they faid every thing obliging and affectionate of you and Captain Fermor.

My mind is in a frate not to be defcribed; I feel joy, I feel anxiety, I feel doubt, I feel a timidity I cannot conquer at the thought of feeing Mrs. Rivers.

I have to drefs; therefore must finish this when I return.

Twelve at night.

Digitized by Google

I am come back, my dearest Bell; I have gone through the scene I so much dreaded, and am astonished I should ever think of it but with pleasure. How much did I injure this most amiable of women ! Her seception of me was that of a tender parent, who had found a long-lost child; H 3 she the killed me, the prefied me to her bofom; her tears flowed in abundance; the called me her daughter, her other Lucy: the afked me a thousand questions of her fon; the would know all that concerned him, however minute: how he looked, whether he talked much of her, what were his amusements; whether he was as handfome as when he left England.

I answered her with some hesitation, but with a pleasure that animated my whole soul; I believe, I never appeared to such advantage as this day.

You will not afcribe it to an unmeaning vanity, when I tell you, I never took fuch pains to pleafe; I even gave a particular attention to my dreffs, that I' might, as much as poffible, juftify my Rivers's tendernefs: I never was vain for myself; but I am fo for him: I am indifferent to admiration as Emily Montague; but as the object of his love, I would would be admired by all the world; I with to be the first of my fex in all that is amiable and lovely, that I might make a facrifice worthy of my Rivers, in shewing to all his friends, that he only can infpire me with tenderness, that I live for him alone.

EMILY MONTAGUE ISI

Mrs. Rivers prefied me extremely to pails a month with her: my heart yielded too eafily to her requeft; but I had courage to refift my own wifnes, as well as her folicitations; and fhall fet out in three days for Berkshire: I have, however, promifed to go with them to-morrow, on a party to Richmond, which Mr. Temple was fo obliging as to propose on my account.

Late as the featon is, there is one more thip going to Quebec, which fails tomorrow.

H 4

You

.7

You shall hear from me again in a few days by the packet.

Adieu! my deareft friend!

Your faithful

EMILY MONTAGUE.

. .[:]

Surely it will not be long before Rivers arrives; you, my dear Bell, will judge what must be my anxiety till that moment.

LETTER CLXI.

To Captain FERMOR, at Silleri.

Dover, July 24, eleven o'clock,

I A M arrived, my dear friend, after a paffage agreeable in itfelf; but which my fears for Emily made infinitely anxious and painful; every wind that blew, blew, I trembled for her; I formed to myfelf ideal dangers on her account, which reafon had not power to diffipate.

We had a very tumuleuous head-fea a great part of the voyage, though the wind was fair; a certain fign there had been flormy weather, with a contrary wind. I fancied my Emily exposed.tothose florms; there is no expressing what I fuffered from this circumstance.

On entering the Channel of England, we faw an empty boat, and fome pieces of a wreck floating; I fancied it part of the fhip which conveyed my lovely Emily; a fudden chillnefs feized my whole frame, my heart died within me at the fight: I had fcarce courage, when I landed, to enquire whether fhe was arrived.

I asked the question with a trembling, voice, and had the transport to find the ship had passed by, and to hear the perfon of my Emily described amongst the passengers who landed; it was not easy to mistake her.

H 5

paffengers

I hope to fee her this evening : what do I not feel from that dear hope !

Chance gives me an opportunity of forwarding this by New York; I write whilft my chaife is getting ready.

Adieu! Yours,

ED. RIVERS.

I shall write to my dear little Bell as foon as I get to town. There is no deforibing what I felt at first feeing the coast of England : I faw the white cliffs with a transport mixed with veneration ; a transport, which, however, was checked by my fears for the dearer part of myself.

My

EMILY MONTAGUE. 1557 My chaife is at the door.

Adieu!

Your faithful, &c.

ED. RIVERS.

LETTER CLXII.

To Miss FERMOR, at Silleri.

Rochefter; July 24.

To

Digitized by Google

I A M obliged to wait ten minutes for a Canadian gentleman who is with me, and has fome letters to deliver here : how painful is this delay ! But I cannot leave a ftranger alone on the road, though I lofe fo many minutes with my charming Emily.

H 6

16 TINE HISTORY OF

To fosten this moment as much as poffible, I will begin a letter to my dear Bell: our fweet Emily is fafe; I wrote to Captain Fermor this morning.

My heart is gay beyond words: my fellow-traveller is aftonifhed at the beauty and riches of England, from what he has feen of Kent: for my part, I point out every fine profpect, and am fo proud of my country, that my whole foul feems to be dilated; for which perhaps there are other reafons. The day is fine, the numerous herds and flocks on the fide of the hills, the neatness of the houses, of the people, the appearance of plenty; all exhibit a scene which must strike one who has been used only to the wild graces of nature.

Canada has beauties; but they are of another kind.

This unreasonable man; he has no mistress to see in London; he is not expected

EMILY MONTAGUE IST

pacted by the most amiable of mothers, by a family he loves as I do mine.

I will order another chaife, and leave my fervant to attend him.

He comes. Adieu! my dear little Bell! at this moment a gentleman is come into the inn, who is going to embark at Dover for New York; I will fend this by him. Once more adieu!

LET-

L E T T E R CLXIII.

To Miss FERMOR, at Silleri.

Clarges-Street, July 25.

I AM the only perfon here, my dear Bell, enough composed to tell you Rivers is arrived in town. He stopped in his post-chaise, at the end of the street, and sent for me, that I might prepare my mother to see him, and prevent a surprize which might have hurried her spirits too much.

I came back, and told her I had feen a gentleman who had left him at Dover, and that he would foon be here; he followed me in a few minutes.

I am not painter enough to defcribe their meeting; tho' prepared, it was with difficulty difficulty we kept my mother from fainting, the prefied him in her arms, the attempted to fpeak, her voice faltered, tears stole foftly down her cheeks: nor was Rivers less affected, though in a different manner : I never faw him look fo handfome; the manly tendernefs, the filial respect, the lively joy, that were expressed in his countenance, gave him a look to which it is impossible to do justice: he hinted going down to Berkshire to-night; but my mother feemed fo hurt at the proposal, that he wrote to Emily, and told her his reason for deferring it till to-morrow, when we are all to go in my coach, and hope to bring her back with us to town.

You judge rightly, my dear Bell, that they were formed for each other; never • were two minds fo fimilar; we must contrive fome method of making them happy: nothing but a too great delicacy in Rivers provents their being fo to-morrow;

Digitized by Google

ł

row; were our fituations changed, I fliould not⁵hefitate a moment to let him make me for Lucy has fent for me. Adjeu !

Believe me Your faithful and devoted TEMPLE

To Miss FERMOR, at Silleri.

54.1

Pall Mall; July 20:

A M the happiest of human beings :: my Rivers: is arrived, he is well, he loves me; I am dear to his family; I fee. him.

him without reftraint; I am every, hous more convinced of the excels of his affection: his attention to me is inconceivable; his eyes every moment tell me, I am dearer to him than life,

I am to be for some time on a visit to his sister; he is at Mrs. Rivers's, but we are always together: we go down next week to Mr. Temple's, in Rutland; they only stayed in town, expecting Rivers's arrival. His seat is within fix miles of Rivers's little paternal estate, which he settled on his mother when he left England; she prefies him to refume it, but he peremptorily refuses; he infusts on her continuing her house in town, and being perfectly independent, and mistress of herself.

I love him a thousand times more for this tenderness to her; though it disappoints my dear hope of being his.

his. Did I think it possible, my dear Bell, he could have risen higher in my efterm?

If we are never united, if we always live as at prefent, his tendernefs will ftill make the delight of my life; to fee him, to hear that voice, to be his friend, the confidance of all his purposes, of all his deligns, to hear the fentiments of that generous, that excited foul—I would not give up this delight, to be emprets of that world.

My ideas of affection are perhaps uncommon ; but they are not the lefs juft, for the lefs in nature.

A blind man may as well judge of colors as the mass of mankind of the sentiments of a truly-enamored heart.

The fenfual and the cold will equally condemn my affection as romantic, few minds, minds, my dear Bell, are capable of love; they feel paffion, they feel effecm; they even feel that mixture of both which is the beft counterfeit of love; but of that vivifying fire, that lively tendernefs which hurries us out of ourfelves, they know nothing; that tendernefs which makes us forget ourfelves, when the intereft; the happinefs, the honor, of him we love is concerned; that tendernefs which renders the beloved object all that we fee in the creation.

Yes, my Rivers, I live, I breathe, I exift, for you alone : be happy, and your Emilwia for

My dear friend, you know love, and will therefore bear with all the impertinence of a tender heart.

I hope you have by this time made Fitzgerald happy; he deferves you, amiable as you are, and you cannot too foon foon convince him of your affection: you fometimes play cruelly with his tendernefs: I have been aftonished to fee you torment a heart which adores you.

I am interrupted.

Adieu ! my dear Bell.

Your affectionate

EMILY MONTAGUE.

LETTER CLXV.

To Captain FERMOR, at Silleri.

Clarges-Street, Aug. 13

LORD — not being in town, I went to his villa at Richmond, to deliver your letter.

I cannot

I cannot enough, my dear Sir, thank you for this introduction; I passed part of the day at Richmond, and never was more pleasingly entertained.

His politenels, his beaming; his knowledge of the world, however amiable, are in character at his feation of life; but his vivacity is aftonifhing.

What the, what pirit, there is in his conversation.! I hardly thought myself a young man near him. What must he have been at five-and-twenty?

 $V \times IO$ if (T i i i He defined me to tell you, all his interest should be employed for Fitzgerald, and that he wished you to come to England as foon as possible.

We are just fetting off for Temple's house in Rutland.

Adieu !

Your affectionate -

En. Rivers,

L E T T E R CLXVI.

To Captain FERMOR, at Silleri.

Temple-house, Aug. 4.

Digitized by Google

I ENJOY, my dear friend, in one of the pleafanteft houses, and most agreeable situations imaginable, the society of the four perfons in the world most dear to me; I am in all respects as much much at home as if mafter of the family, without the cares attending that flation is my withes, my defires, are prevented by Temple's attention and friendibin. and my mother and fifter's amiable anxiety to oblige me; I find an unfpeakable fortness in feeing my lovely Emily every moment, in feeing her adored by my family, in seeing her without restraint, in being in the fame house, in living in that cafy converfe which is born from friendship alone : yet I am not happy.

It is that we lose the present happines in the purfuit of greater : I look forward with impatience to that moment which will make Emily mine; and the difficulties, which I fee on every fide arifing, embitter hours which would otherwife be exquifitely happy.

The narrownels of my fortune, which I fee in a much ftronger light in this land of luxury, and the apparent impoffibility of 5 of placing the most charming of women in the station my heart wishes, give me anxieties which my reason cannot conquer.

I cannot live without her, I flatter myfelf our union is in fome degree neceffary to her happiness; yet I dread bringing her into diffreffes, which I am doubly obliged to protect her from, because she would with transport meet them all, from tenderness to me.

I have nothing which I can call my own, but my half-pay, and four thoufand pounds: I have lived amongst the first company in England; all my connexions have been rather fuited to my birth than fortune. My mother prefies me to refume my estate, and let her live with us alternately; but against this I am firmly determined; she shall have her own house, and never change her manner of living.

Б

Temple

Digitized by Google

Temple would fhare his effate with me, if I would allow him; but I am too fond of independence to accept favors of this kind even from him.

I have formed a thousand schemes, and as often found them abortive; I go to-morrow to see our little estate, with my mother; it is a private party of our own, and nobody is in the secret; I will there talk over every thing with her.

My mind is at prefent in a ftate of confusion not to be expressed; I must determine on fomething; it is improper Emily should continue long with my fister in her present fituation; yet I cannot live without seeing her.

I have never asked about Emily's fortune; but I know it is a small one; perhaps two thousand pounds; I am pretty certain, not more.

VOL. III.

We

Digitized by Google

We can live on little, but we must live in fome degree on a genteel footing : I cannot let Emily, who refused a coach and fix for me, pay visits on foot; I will be content with a post-chaise, but cannot with lefs; I have a little, a very little pride, for my Emily.

I wifh it were possible to prevail on my mother to return with us to Canada : I could then reconcile my duty and happiness, which at present seem almost incompatible.

Emily appears perfectly happy, and to look no further than to the fituation in which we now are; fhe feems content with being my friend only, without thinking of a nearer connexion; I am rather piqued at a composure which has the air of indifference: why fhould not her impatience equal mine?

The coach is at the door, and my mother waits for me.]

Every

Every happiness attend my friend, and all connected with him ! in which number I hope I may, by this time, include Fitzgerald.

I 2

Adieu !

•

Your affectionate

ED. RIVERS!

LET-

Nyery happinets a real by all a wall and a second s

L E T T E R CLXVIII.

To Captain FERMOR, 'at Silleri.

Aug. 6.

I HAVE been taking an exact furvey of the house and estate with my mother, in order to determine on some future plan of life.

'Tis inconceivable what I felt on returning to a place fo dear to me, and which I had not feen for many years; I ran hastily from one room to another; I traversed the garden with inexpressible eagerness: my eye devoured every object; there was not a tree, not a bush, which did not revive some pleasing, some soft idea.

I felt,

I felt, to borrow a very pathetic expreffion of Thomson's,

"A thousand little tendernesses throb," on revisiting those dear scenes of infant happiness; which were increased by having with me that estimable, that affectionate mother, to whose indulgence all my happiness had been owing.

But to return to the purpole of our visit : the house is what most people would think too large for the estate, even had I a right to call it all my own; this is, however, a fault, if it is one, which I can easily forgive.

There is furniture enough in it for my family, including my mother; it is unfafhionable, but fome of it very good: and I think Emily has tenderness enough for me to live with me in I 3 a house, a house, the furniture of which is not perfectly in tafte.

Digitized by Google

In fhort, I know her much above having the flighteft with of vanity, where it comes in competition with love.

We can, as to the house, live here commodioully enough; and our only prefent confideration is, on what we are to live: a confideration, however, which as lovers, I believe in strictness we ought to be much above!

My mother again folicits me to refume this eftate; and has proposed my making over to her my half-pay instead of it, though of much less value, which, with her own two hundred pounds a year, will, she fays, enable her to continue her house in town, a point I am determined never to fuffer her to give up; because the loves London; and because I instift on her having her own house to go to, if the should ever chance to be displeased with ours.

I am

I am inclined to like this proposal: Temple and I will make a calculation; and, if we find it will answer every necessary purpose to my mother, I owe it to Emily to accept of it.

I endeavor to perfuade myfelf, that I am obliging my mother, by giving her an opportunity of fhewing her generofity, and of making me happy : I have been in fpirits ever fince fhe mentioned it.

I have already projected a million of improvements; have taught new ftreams to flow, planted ideal groves, and walked, fancy-led, in fhades of my own raifing.

The fituation of the house is enchanting; and with all my passion for the favage luxuriance of America, I begin to find my taste return for the more mild and regular charms of my native country.

We have no Chaudieres, no Montmorencis, none of those magnificent scenes on which the Canadians have a right to pride themselves; but we excel them in the lovely, the smilling; in enameled meadows, in waving corn-fields, in gardens the boast of Europe; in every elegant art which adorns and softens human life; in all the riches and beauty which cultivation can give.

I begin to think I may be bleft in the poffeffion of my Emily, without betraying her into a flate of want; we may, I begin to flatter myfelf, live with decency, in retirement; and, in my opinion, there are a thoufand charms in retirement with those we love.

Upon the whole, I believe we shall be able to live, taking the word live in the sense of lovers, not of the beau monde, who will never allow a little country squire of four hundred pounds a year to live.

Time

Time may do more for us; at leaft, I am of an age and temper to encourage hope.

All here are perfectly yours.

Adieu ! my dear friend.

Your affectionate

ED. RIVERS.

I 5

LET

LETTER CLXVIII.

To Mrs. TEMPLE, Pall Mall.

Silleri, Aug. 6.

Digitized by Google

T HE leave of absence for my father and Fitzgerald being come some weeks sooner than we expected, we propose leaving Canada in five or fix days.

I am delighted with the idea of revifiting dear England, and feeing friends whom I fo tenderly love: yet I feel a regret, which I had no idea I fhould have felt, at leaving the fcenes of a thousand past pleasures; the murmuring rivulets to which Emily and I have fat listening, the fweet woods where I have walked with my little circle of of friends: I have even a ftrong attachment to the scenes themselves, which are infinitely lovely, and speak the inimitable hand of nature which formed them: I want to transport this fairy ground to England.

I figh when I pais any particularly charming fpot; I feel a tenderness beyond what inanimate objects seem to merit.

I must pay one more visit to the naiads of Montmorenci.

Eleven at night.

I am just come from the general's affembly; where, I should have told you, I was this day fortnight announced Madame Fitzgerald, to the great mortification of two or three cats, who had very fagaciously determined, that Fitzgerald had too much understanding ever to I 6 think. 180 THE HISTORY OF think of fuch a flirting, coquetifh creature as a wife.

I was grave at the affembly to-night, in fpite of all the pains I took to be otherwife: I was hurt at the idea it would probably be the laft at which I fhould be; I felt a kind of concern at parting, not only with the few I loved, but with those who had till to-night been indifferent to me.

There is fomething affecting in the idea of the laft time of feeing even those perfons or places, for which we have no particular affection.

I go to-morrow to take leave of the nuns, at the Urfuline convent; I fuppofe I fhall carry this melancholy idea with me there, and be hurt at feeing them too for the last time.

I pay vifits every day amongst the peafants, who are very fond of me. I talk to them of their farms, give money to their children, children, and teach their wives to be good hufwives: I am the idol of the country people five miles round, who declare me the moft amiable, moft generous woman in the world, and think it a thousand pities I should be damned.

Adieu! Say every thing for me to my fweet friends, if arrived.

7th, Eleven o'clock.

I have this moment a large packet of letters for Emily from Mrs. Melmoth, which I intend to take the care of myfelf, as I hope to be in England almost as soon as this.

Good morrow!

Yours ever, &c.

A. FITZGERALD.

J am

Three o'clock.

I am just come from visiting the nuns; they expressed great concern at my leaving Canada, and promised me their prayers on my voyage; for which proof of affection, though a good protestant, I thanked them very fincerely.

I wished exceedingly to have brought fome of them away with me; my nun, as they call the amiable girl I faw take the weil, paid me the flattering tribute of a tear at parting; her fine eyes had a concern in them, which affected me extremely.

I was not lefs pleafed with the affection the late fuperior, my good old countrywoman, expressed for me, and her regret at feeing me for the last time.

Surely there is no pleafure on earth equal to that of being beloyed ! I did not think think I had been fuch a favorite in Canada : it is almost a pity to leave it ; perhaps nobody may love me in England.

Yes, I believe Fitzgerald will; and I have a pretty party enough of friends in your family.

Adieu ! I shall write a line the day we embark, by another ship, which may possibly arrive before us.

LETTER CLXIX.

TO Mrs. TEMPLE, Pall Mall.

Silleri, Aug. 11.

Digitized by Google

W E embark to-morrow, and hope to fee you in lefs than a month, if this fine wind continues.

I am

I am just come from Montmorenci, where I have been paying my devotions to the tutelary deities of the place for the last time.

I had only Fitzgerald with me; we visited every grotto on the lovely banks, where we dined; kiffed every flower, raised a votive altar on the little island, poured a libation of wine to the river goddels; and, in short, did every thing which it became good heathens to do.

We ftayed till day-light began to decline, which, with the idea of the last time, threw round us a certain melancholy solemnity; a solemnity which

- " Deepen'd the murmur of the falling "floods,
- . "And breath'd a browner horror on "the woods,"

I have twenty things to do, and but a moment to do them in. Adieu !

I am

I am called down; it is to Madame Des Roches: fhe is very obliging to come thus far to fee me.

12th.

We go on board at one; Madame Des Roches goes down with us as far as her eftate, where her boat is to fetch her on fhore. She has made me a prefent of a pair of extreme pretty bracelets; has fent your brother an elegant fword-knot, and Emily a very beautiful crofs of diamonds.

I don't believe fhe would be forry if we were to run away with her to England: I proteft I am half inclined; it is pity fuch a woman fhould be hid all her life in the woods of Canada: befides, one might convert her you know; and, on a religious principle, a little deviation from rules is allowable.

Your

Digitized by Google

Your brother is an admirable miffionary amongft unbelieving ladies : I really think I fhall carry her off; if it is only for the good of her foul.

I have but one objection; if Pitzgerald fhould take a fancy to prefer the tender to the lively, I should be in fome danger: there is fomething very feducing in her eyes, I affure you.

LET-

L E T T E R CLXX.

To'Mrs. TEMPLE, Pall Mall.

Kamaraikas, Aug. 14.

BY Madame Des Roches, who is going on fhore, I write two or three lines, to tell you we have got thus far, and have a fair wind; the will fend it immediately to Quebec, to be put on board any fhip going, that you may have the greater variety of chances to hear of me.

There is a French lady on board, whole fuperstition bids fair to amuse us; such has thrown half her little ornaments overboard for a wind, and has promised I know not how many votive offerings of the same kind to St. Joseph, the patron of Canada, if we get safe to land; on which shallI

I shall only observe, that there is nothing fo like ancient absurdity as modern: she has classical authority for this manner of playing the fool; Horace, when a fraid on a voyage, having, if my memory quotes fair, vowed

" His dank and dropping weeds

. " To the ftern god of fea."

The boat is ready, and Madame Des. Roches going; I am very unwilling to part with her; and her prefent concern at leaving me would be very flattering, if I did not think the remembrance of your brother had the greatest thare in it.

And the second states and the second

Digitized by Google

She has wrote four or five letters to him, fince the came on board; very render ones I fancy, and deftroyed them; the has at laft wrote a meer complimentary kind of card, only thanking him for his offers of fervice; yet! I fee it gives henipleafure to write even this, however cold and formal; because because addressed to him: she asked me, if I thought there was any impropriety in her writing to him, and whether it would not be better to address herself to Emily. I finiled at her simplicity, and she finissed her letter; she blussed and looked down when she gave it me.

EMILY MONTAGUE: 189'

She is lefs like a fprightly French widow, than a foolifh Englifh girl, who loves for the fifft time.

. I . .

· F

But I fuppofe, when the heart is really touched, the feelings of all nations have a pretty near refemblance: it is only that the French ladies are generally more coquets, and lefs inclined to the romantic ftyle of love, than the Englifh; and we are, therefore, furprized when we find in them this trembling fenfibility.

There are exceptions, however, to all rules; and your little Bell feems, in point of

Digitized by Google

9

of love, to have changed countries with Madame Des Roches.

The gale encreases, it fluttens in the fails; my fair friend is summoned; the captain chides our delay.

Adieu! ma chere Madame Des Roebes. I embrace her; I feel the force of its being for the last time. I am afraid she feels it yet more strongly, than I do: in parting with the last of his friends, she seems to part with her Rivers for ever.

One look more at the wild graces of nature I leave behind.

Adieu ! Canada ! adieu ! fweet abode of the wood-nymphs ! never fhall I ceafe to remember with delight the place where I have paffed fo many happy hours.

Heaven

Heaven preferve my dear Lucy, and give profperous gales to her friends !

Your faithful

A. FITZGERALD.

LETTER CLXXI.

To Miss Montague.

Ifle of Bic, Aug. 160

YOU are little obliged to me, my dear, for writing to you on fhipboard; one of the greateft miferies here, being the want of employment: I therefore write for my own amufement, not yours.

We have fome French ladies on board, but they do not refemble Madame Des 6 Roches.

Digitized by Google .

Roches. I am weary of them already, though we have been to few days toge-ther.

The wind is contrary, and we are at anchor under this ifland; Fitzgerald has proposed going to dine on shore ι it looks excessively pretty from the ship.

Seven in the Evening.

We are returned from Bic, after passing a very agreeable day.

We dined on the grafs, at a little diftance from the fhore, under the fhelter of a very fine wood, whole form, the trees rifing above each other in the fame regular confusion, brought the dear fhades of Silleri to our remembrance.

We walked after dinner, and picked rafberries, in the wood; and in our ramble came unexpectedly to the middle of a vifto, visto, which, whilst some ships of war lay here, the failors had cut through the island.

From this fituation, being a rifing ground, we could fee directly through the avenue to both fhores : the view of each was wildly majeftic; the river comes finely in, whichever way you turn your fight; but to the fouth, which is more fheltered, the water juft trembling to the breeze, our fhip which had put all her ftreamers out, and to which the tide gave a gentle motion, with a few fcattered houfes, faintly feen amongft the trees at a diftance, terminated the prospect, in a manner which was inchanting.

I die to build a houfe on this ifland; it is pity fuch a fweet fpot fhould be uninhabited: I fhould like exceffively to be Queen of Bic.

Fitzgerald has carved my name on a maple, near the fhore; a pretty piece of Vol. III. K gallantry gallantry in a hufband, you will allow: perhaps he means it as taking possession for me of the island.

We are going to cards. Adieu ! for the prefent.

Aug. 18.

'Tis one of the loveliest days I ever faw: we are fishing under the Magdalen islands; the weather is perfectly calm, the fea just dimpled, the fun-beams dance on the waves, the fish are playing on the furface of the water: the island is at a proper distance to form an agreeable point of view; and upon the whole the scene is divine.

There is one houfe on the island, which, at a distance, seems so beautifully situated, that I have lost all defire of fixing at Bic : I want to land, and go to the house for milk, milk, but there is no good landing-place on this fide; the island feems here to be fenced in by a regular wall of rock.

A breeze fprings up; our filhing is at an end for the prefent: I am afraid we fhall not pais many days fo agreeably as we have done this. I feel horror at the idea of fo foon lofing fight of land, and launching on the vaft Atlantic.

Adieu ! Yours,

A. FITZGERALD.

Digitized by Google

LET-

1

How ftrong must be the love of gain, to tempt us to embrace a life of danger, pain, and mifery; to give up all the beauties of nature and of art, all the charms of fociety, and feparate ourfelves from mankind, to amass wealth, which the very profession takes away all possibility of enjoying!

Even glory is a poor reward for a life passed at sea.

I had rather be a peafant on a funny bank, with peace, fafety, obfcurity, bread, and a little garden of rofes, than lord high admiral of the British fleet.

Setting afide the variety of dangers at fea, the time paffed there is a total furpenfion of one's exiftence: I fpe the beft part of our time the leaft a third of every voyage mifery.

I abhor the fea, and am peevifh with every creature about me.

If there were no other evil attending this vile life, only think of being cooped up weeks together in fuch a fpace, and with the fame eternal fet of people.

If cards had not a little relieved me, I fhould have died of meer vexation before I had finished half the voyage.

What would I not give to fee the dear white cliffs of Albion!

Adieu ! I have not time to fay more.

Your affectionate

A. FITZGERALD.

LET-

LETTER CLXXIII.

TO Mrs. TEMPLE, Pall Mall.

Dover, Sept. 8.

W E are this inftant landed, my dear, and shall be in town tomorrow.

My father ftops one day on the road, to introduce Mr. Fitzgerald to a relation of ours, who lives a few miles from Canterbury.

I am wild with joy at fetting foot once more on dry land.

I am not lefs happy to have traced your brother and Emily, by my enquiries here, for we left Quebec too foon to have advice there of their arrival.

Adieu !

Adieu! If in town, you shall see us the moment we get there; if in the country, write immediately, to the care of the agent.

Let me know where to find Emily, whom I die to fee: is fhe ftill Emily Montague?

Adieu !

Your affectionate

A. FITZGERALD.

K 5

:

LET

Digitized by Google

LETTER CLXXIV.

To Mrs. FITZGERALD.

Temple-house, Sept. 11.

Y OUR letter, my dear Bell, was fent by this post to the country.

It is unneceffary to tell you the pleafure it gives us all to hear of your fafe arrival.

All our argofies have now landed their treafures: you will believe us to have been more anxious about friends fo dear to us, than the merchant for his gold and fpices; we have fuffered the greater anxiety, by the circumstance of your having returned at different times.

I flatter

I flatter myfelf, the future will pay us for the paft.

You may now, my dear Bell, revive your coterie, with the addition of fome friends who love you very fincerely.

Emily (ftill Emily Montague) is with a relation in Berkshire, fettling fome affairs previous to her marriage with my brother, to which we flatter ourfelves there will be no further objections.

I affure you, I begin to be a little jealous of this Emily of yours; the rivals me extremely with my mother, and indeed with every body elfe.

We all come to town next week, when you will make us very unhappy if you do not become one of our family in Pall K 6 Mall, 204 THE HISTORY OF Mall, and return with us for a few months to the country.

My brother is at his little effate, fix miles from hence, where he is making fome alterations, for the reception of Emily; he is fitting up her apartment in a ftyle equally fimple and elegant, which, however, you must not tell her, because she is to be surprized: her dreffing room, and a little adjoining closet of books, will be enchanting: yet the expence of all he has done is a mere triffe.

I am the only perfon in the fecret; and have been with him this morning to fee it: there is a gay, fmiling air in the whole apartment, which pleafes me infinitely; you will fuppofe he does not forget jars of flowers, becaufe you know how much they are Emily's tafte: he has forgot no ornament which he knew was agreeable to her.

Happily

Happily for his fortune, her pleafures' are not of the expensive kind; he would ruin himfelf if they were:

He has befpoke a very handfome post chaife, which is also a fecret to Emily, who infifts on not having one.

Their income will be about five hundred pounds a year: it is not much; yet, with their difpolitions, I think it will make them happy.

My brother will write to Mr. Fitzgerald next post: fay every thing affectionate for us all to him and Captain Fermor.

Adieu! Yours,

LUCY TEMPLE,

Digitized by Google

LET-

LETTER CLXXV.

To Captain FITZGERALD.

Bellfield, Sept. 13.

I CONGRATULATE you, my dear friend, on your fafe arrival, and on your marriage.

You have got the flart of me in happinefs; I love you, however, too fincerely to envy you.

Emily has promifed me her hand, as foon as fome little family affairs are fettled, which I flatter myfelf will not take above another week.

When fhe gave me this promife, fhe begged me to allow her to return to Berkfhire this till our marriage took place; I felt the propriety of this ftep, and therefore would not oppofe it: fhe pleaded having fome bufiness alforto fettle with her relation there:

My mother has given back the deed of fettlement of my eftate, and accepted of an affignment on my half-pay: fhe is greatly a lofer; but fhe infifted on making me happy, with fuch an air of tendernefs, that I could not deny her that fatisfaction.

I shall keep some land in my own hands, and farm; which will enable me to have a post-chaise for Emily, and my mother, who will be a good deal with us; and a constant decent table for a friend.

Emily is to superintend the dairy and garden; she has a passion for flowers, with which I am extremely pleased, as as it will be to her a continual fource of pleafure.

I feel fuch delight in the idea of making her happy, that I think nothing a trifle which can be in the least degree pleasing to her.

I could even with to invent new pleafures for her gratification.

I hope to be happy; and to make the lovelieft of womankind fo, becaufe my notions of the ftate, into which I am entering, are I hope just, and free from that romantic turn fo destructive to happines.

I have, once in my life, had an attachment nearly refembling marriage, to a widow of rank, with whom I was acquainted abroad; and with whom I almost feeluded myself from the worldnear a twelvemonth, when she died of. a fever, a fever, a stroke I was long before I recovered.

I loved her with tendernels; but that hove, compared to what I feel for Emily, was as a grain of fand to the globe of earth, or the weight of a feather to the univerfe.

A marriage where not only effeem, but paffion is kept awake, is, I am convinced, the moft perfect flate of fublunary happiness: but it requires great care to keep this tender plant alive; especially, I blush to fay it, on our fide.

Women are naturally more conftant, education improves this happy difpofition: the hufband who has the politenefs, the attention, and delicacy of a lover, will always be beloved.

The fame is generally, but not always, true on the other fide: I have fometimes feen

You will fee Emily before I do; fhe is more lovely, more enchanting, than ever.

Mrs. Fitzgerald will make me happy if fhe can invent any commands for me.

Adieu | Believe me · Your faithful, &c. ED. RIVERS. LET-

EMILY MONTAGUE. 213

LETTER CLXXVI.

To Colonel RIVERS, at Bellfield, Rutland.

London, Sept. 15.

EVERY mark of your friendship, my dear Rivers, must be particularly pleasing to one who knows your worth as I do: I have, therefore, to thank you as well for your letter, as for those obliging offers of fervice, which I shall make no foruple of accepting, if I have occasion for them.

I rejoice in the prospect of your being as happy as myself: nothing can be more just than your ideas of marriage; I mean, of a marriage founded on inclination : all that you describe, I am so happy as to experience.

I never

10

Digitized by Google

I never loved my fweet girl fo tenderly as fince fhe has been mine; my heart acknowledges the obligation of her having trufted the future happiness or misery of her life in my hands. She is every hour more dear to me; I value as I ought those thousand little attentions, by which a new softness is every moment given to our affection.

I do not indeed feel the fame tunultuous emotion at feeing her; but I feel a fenfation equally delightful: a joy more tranquil, but not lefs lively.

I will own to you, that I had ftrong prejudices against marriage, which nothing but love could have conquered; the idea of an indiffoluble union deterred me from thinking of a serious engagement : I attached myself to the most seducing, most attractive of women, without thinking the pleasure I found in seeing her of any consequence: I thought her lovely, but never suffected

EMILY MONTAGUE. 215 furfpected I loved; I thought the delight I tafted in hearing her, merely the effects of those charms which all the world found in her conversation; my vanity was gratified by the flattering preference she gave me to the rest of my fex; I fancied this all, and imagined I could cease feeing the little fyren whenever I pleased.

I was, however, miftaken; love ftole upon me imperceptibly, and en badinant; I was enflaved, when I only thought myfelf amused.

We have not yet feen Mifs Montague; we go down on Friday to Berkshire, Bell having fome letters for her, which she was defired to deliver herfelf.

I will write to you again the moment I have feen her.

The invitation Mr. and Mrs. Temple have been fo obliging as to give us, is too pleafing pleafing to ourfelves not to be accepted; we also expect with impatience the time of visiting you at your farm.

Adieu !

Your affectionate

J. FITZGERALD.

LET

EMILY MONTAGUE. 317.

LETTER CLXXVII.

To Captain FITZGBRASD.

Stamford, Sept. 16, Evening.

BEING here on some business, my dear friend, I receive your letter in time to answer it to-night.

We hope to be in town this day fevennight, and I flatter myfelf, my dearest Emily will not delay my happiness many days longer: I grudge you the pleasure of feeing her on Friday.

I triumph greatly in your having been feduced into matrimony, becaufe I never knew a man more of a turn to make an agreeable hufband; it was the idea that Vor. III. L occurred occurred to me the first moment I faw you.

Do you know, my dear Fitzgerald, that, if your little fyren had not anticipated my purpose, I had defigns upon you for my fifter?

Through that carelefs, inattentive look of yours, I faw fo much right fenfe, and fo affectionate a heart, that I wifhed nothing fo much as that fhe might have attached you; and had laid a fcheme to bring you acquainted, hoping the reft from the merit fo confpicuous in you both.

Both are, however, fo happily difposed of elsewhere, that I have no reason to regret my scheme did not succeed.

There is fomething in your perfon, as well as manner, which I_f am convinced must be particularly pleasing to

EMILY MONTAGUE. 219

to women; with an extremely agreeable form, you have a certain manly, fpirited air, which promifes them a protector; a look of understanding, which is the indication of a pleafing companion; a fensibility of countenance, which speaks a friend and a lover; to which I ought to add, an affectionate, constant attention to women, and a polite indifference to men, which above all things flatters the vanity of the fex.

Of all men breathing, I fhould have been most afraid of you as a rival; Mrs. Fitzgerald has told me, you have faid the fame thing of me.

Happily, however, our taftes were different; the two amiable objects of our tenderness were perhaps equally lovely; but it is not the meer form, it is the character that strikes: the fire, the spirit, the vivacity, the awakened manner, of Miss Fermor L 2 wor won you; whilft my heart was captivated by that bewitching languor, that feducing fortnels, that melting fensibility, in the air of my fweet Emily, which is, at leaft to me, more touching than all the forightlines in the world.

There is in true fentibility of foul, fuch a refiftle's charm, that we are even affected by that of which we are not ourfelves the object: we feel a degree of emotion at being witne's to the affection which another infpires.

'Tis late, and my horses ar' at the door.

Adieu!

Your faithful

ED. RIVERS.

LET.

EMILY MONTAGUE. 224

LETTER CLXXVIII.

To Mils Montacus, Role-hill, Berkshire.

Temple-house, Sept. 16.

I HAVE but a moment, my deareft Emily, to tell you Heaven favors your tendernefs: it removes every anxiety from two of the worthieft and most gentle of human hearts.

You and my brother have both lamented to me the painful neceffity you were under, of reducing my mother to a lefs income than that to which fhe had been accuftomed.

An unexpected event has reftored to her more than what her tenderness for my brother had deprived her of.

A relation.

322 THE HISTORY, &c.

A relation abroad, who owed every thing to her father's friendship, has sent her, as an acknowledgment of that friendship, a deed of gift, settling on her four hundred pounds a year for life.

My brother is at Stamford, and is yet unacquainted with this agreeable event.

You will hear from him next poft,

Adieu! my dear Emily!

Your affectionate

L. TEMPLE.

END OF VOL. III.

