The Paul M. Hebert Law Center encompasses unique qualities and characteristics as an institution of higher learning, establishing it as a nationally-recognized foundation of legal education. Located amidst the spreading oak trees and magnolia blossoms of the Louisiana State University Campus, it provides a true "center" of knowledge, scholarship, and experience for the aspiring lawyer of tomorrow. Offering a rare blend of the traditional civilian methodology and the common law case analysis, the law student is given a complete legal background for the practice of law anywhere in the nation.

Huey P. Long's Recipe for Success

Don't get discouraged.

The order of study: Torts, a case book; criminal law, a case book; evidence, a textbook.

Study hard and carefully the Civil Code.

Read the Bible and trace the generations.

Study Hebrew law carefully all the way; it's the basis of all law.

Read Hugo's "Toilers of the Sea," "Les Miserables," and "Notre Dame;" Dumas' "The Count of Monte Cristo," and Shakespeare's "Hamlet," "Julius Caesar," and "The Merchant of Venice."

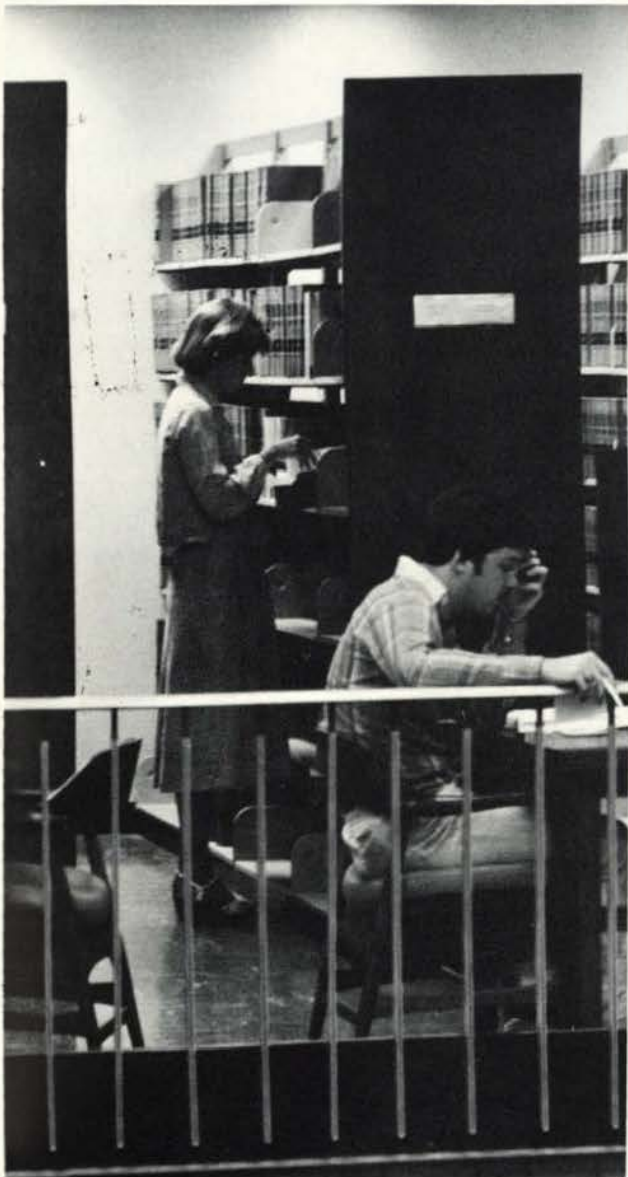

Follow this order in studying Civil Code: Corporation law, equity, criminal evidence, conflicts of law, constitutional law, revised statutes of Louisiana, code of practices.

Study code of practices hard, article by article.

Start Bible in Genesis and read along several pages a day straight through.

Dedicated to Judge Albert Tate, Jr.

DEDICATION

This issue of L'Avocat is dedicated to a brilliant man with a big heart who, though still in the prime of his life, has already left an indelible mark as a judge, educator, scholar, social reformer, concerned citizen, and humanitarian — without sacrificing in the process family life and friendships. This could not have been accomplished without a touch of genius, indefatigable work, and a firm ideology.

A brief curriculum vitae of the honoree is in order. He was born in Opelousas, Louisiana, on September 23, 1920, into a family that has resided in the Tate Cove-Ville Platte area for eight generations. He concluded his undergraduate studies in 1941 with a Bachelor of Arts degree from George Washington University and, during the war years, served in the Counter Intelligence Corps in Australia, New Guinea, the Philippines, and Japan. After the war, he opted for legal education and concluded his legal studies with an LLB from Yale University in 1947 and a certificate for civil code studies from L.S.U. in 1948.

A subsequent successful six-years' private practice terminated in 1954 when he was elected to Louisiana's appellate bench. From the beginning, his decisions attracted the attention of the legal profession for their sound reasoning, scholarship, lucidity, style, and concern for the path of the law. He frequently commanded a majority, but never hesitated to express his dissent or concurrence when faced with erroneous conclusions or questionable reasoning in other Judges' opinions.

Elected to the Supreme Court of Louisiana in 1970 he served as Associate Justice until his appointment to the 5th Circuit Court of the United States in the Fall of 1979. His Supreme Court decisions are frequently monuments of juridical craftsmanship. He has spoken authoritatively and convincingly in most fields of law, public and private. His methodology, widely acclaimed, has found imitators but his style remains unsurpassed. Some of his great contributions are in the fields of Louisiana Civil Law which he has endeavored to modernize through a functional method of interpretation. His decisions in the fields of Persons, Family, Property, Obligations, and Successions deserve publication in leading periodicals throughout the civil law world for study by judges and scholars who share our legal tradition. Indeed, these decisions show the way in which perennial institutions of civil law may be made to function properly in a complex industrialized society.

The heavy responsibilities of the bench did not preclude parallel accomplishments in education, scholarship, and law reform. In 1967-1968 he served as a Professor of Law at L.S.U., on leave of absence from the Third Circuit Court of Appeal. Over the years, he delivered lectures in all Louisiana Law Schools thus contributing to their missions. He is the author of at least fifty leading articles published in Law Reviews, Bar Journals in and out of state, the Trial Judge's Journal, and "Judicature." He is also the author of a textbook on Louisiana Civil Procedure, still in use at L.S.U., and of a bibliography titled "Treatises for Judges."

In 1973, he was appointed a delegate to the Louisiana Constitutional Convention, and served as Chairman for style and drafting. The lucidity, inner consistency, and laconicism of the new Constitution are qualities attributable to a large extent to the work and dedication of the Chairman. He has also devoted much time and energy as a member of various committees of the Louisiana State Law Institute charged with the responsibility of drafting the Code of Civil Procedure and the Revision of the Louisiana Civil Code.

He has been elected, or appointed to serve, in a great number of learned societies, judicial organizations, and law reform agencies. He is an elected member of the American Law Institute and has been Director of the American Judicature Society. He has served as a member of the Judicial Council of Louisiana and of the Judiciary Commission, of which he was elected Chairman. He has also served as Chairman of the Louisiana Conference of Court of Appeal Judges, of the Judicial Planning Council of Louisiana, of the Rules Revision Committee of the Louisiana Supreme Court, and of the Executive Committee of the National Appellate Judges Conference on the Section of Judicial Administration of the American Bar Association.

His impressive national service further includes: the national chairmanship of the American Bar Association Committee on Appellate Advocacy; participation in the Judicial Administration Committee to Implement Standards of Criminal Justice and in the Committee on Use of Technology to Improve Judicial Efficiency; the vice-chairmanship of the ABA Section of Criminal Justice Committee on Implementation of Criminal Justice Standards and that of the American Bar Foundation study on Administration of Appellate Courts; and membership as ABA representative in the Advisory Council, National Center of State Courts, in the Advisory Council for Appellate Justice, and in the Board of Editors of "Judicature" and of the Judges' Journal. He has also served, each summer since 1965, as a faculty Chairman of the Intermediate Appellate Judge's Seminar conducted by the Institute of Judicial Administration at New York University and has participated on the faculty of numerous seminars in various parts of the United States sponsored by Universities, courts, and the Appellate Judges' Conference.

Professional life cannot absorb all the time and energy of a well-rounded man and ideologue. In keeping with his humanitarian inclinations, this year's honoree has been most active in civic affairs. He has served as a member of: the Committee of One Hundred, a citizen's advisory committee to study and recommend improvements in the secondary education system of Louisiana; the Goals for Louisiana Committee, an advisory committee working with the Louisiana Council on Governmental Reorganization; the Governor's Committee on the Employment of the Handicapped; the Governor's Committee on Correctional Treatment and Rehabilitation; and, as Chairman, of the Louisiana Commission for the Aging.

In his home community of Ville Platte, he served as President of the Louisiana Cotton Festival, as Commander of the Ville Platte Junior Chamber of Commerce, as District Chairman of the Evangeline Parish Boy Scout District, as Seventh District Judge Advocate for the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and as member of the Board of Directors of the Ville Platte Chamber of Commerce, Rotary Club, and Central Louisiana Association.

These accomplishments did not detract from a rich family life. He was married to Claire Jeanmard in 1949, his life-time companion, associate, and source of continuous encouragement, and is the proud father of five children. Over the years, he won the warm affection of colleagues, students, and friends.

In well-deserved but only partial recognition of accomplishments, he has been recipient of many awards. He is an honorary member of the Order of the Coif, L.S.U. Chapter, honorary member of the Loyola University Chapter of the Blue Key national leadership fraternity, and recipient of the Judicial Award of Merit of the American Trial Lawyers Association.

On the occasion of his appointment to the federal Appellate Bench, he was greeted by Justice Dixon as "a great mind" but "modest to a fault," as a "talented" and "prodigious worker" whose capacity to work is "infectious," and as "the best known and best loved judge in the state."

You have from the outset identified this year's honoree, Judge Albert Tate, Jr., of Louisiana: the Jurist, Educator, Scholar, Concerned Citizen, Social Reformer, Humanitarian, Family Man and Friend.

A Brief History of the LSU Law Center

The L.S.U. Board of Supervisors voted to begin planning for a school of law at Baton Rouge in 1904. The first classes began in 1906 with 19 students enrolled. The State Supreme Court notified the University President in the same year that graduates would be admitted to the bar after graduation, without further examination.

As of 1980, the Law Center had a student population of approximately 800 and nearly 40 faculty members. For many graduates, 1906 may truly be viewed as "the good old days," since the automatic admission is no longer the rule.

The law school originally was part of the University, under the guidance of its own dean, the first of whom was Dr. Joseph J. Kelly, a member of the Illinois Bar who had particular expertise in the Civil Law.

The facilities were particularly limited in the early years. The first classes were held in the basement of the main campus library. But the early emphasis on the Civil Law has not changed from the early days when Dean Kelly included a foundation in Roman Law as an important element of the education of a Louisiana lawyer.

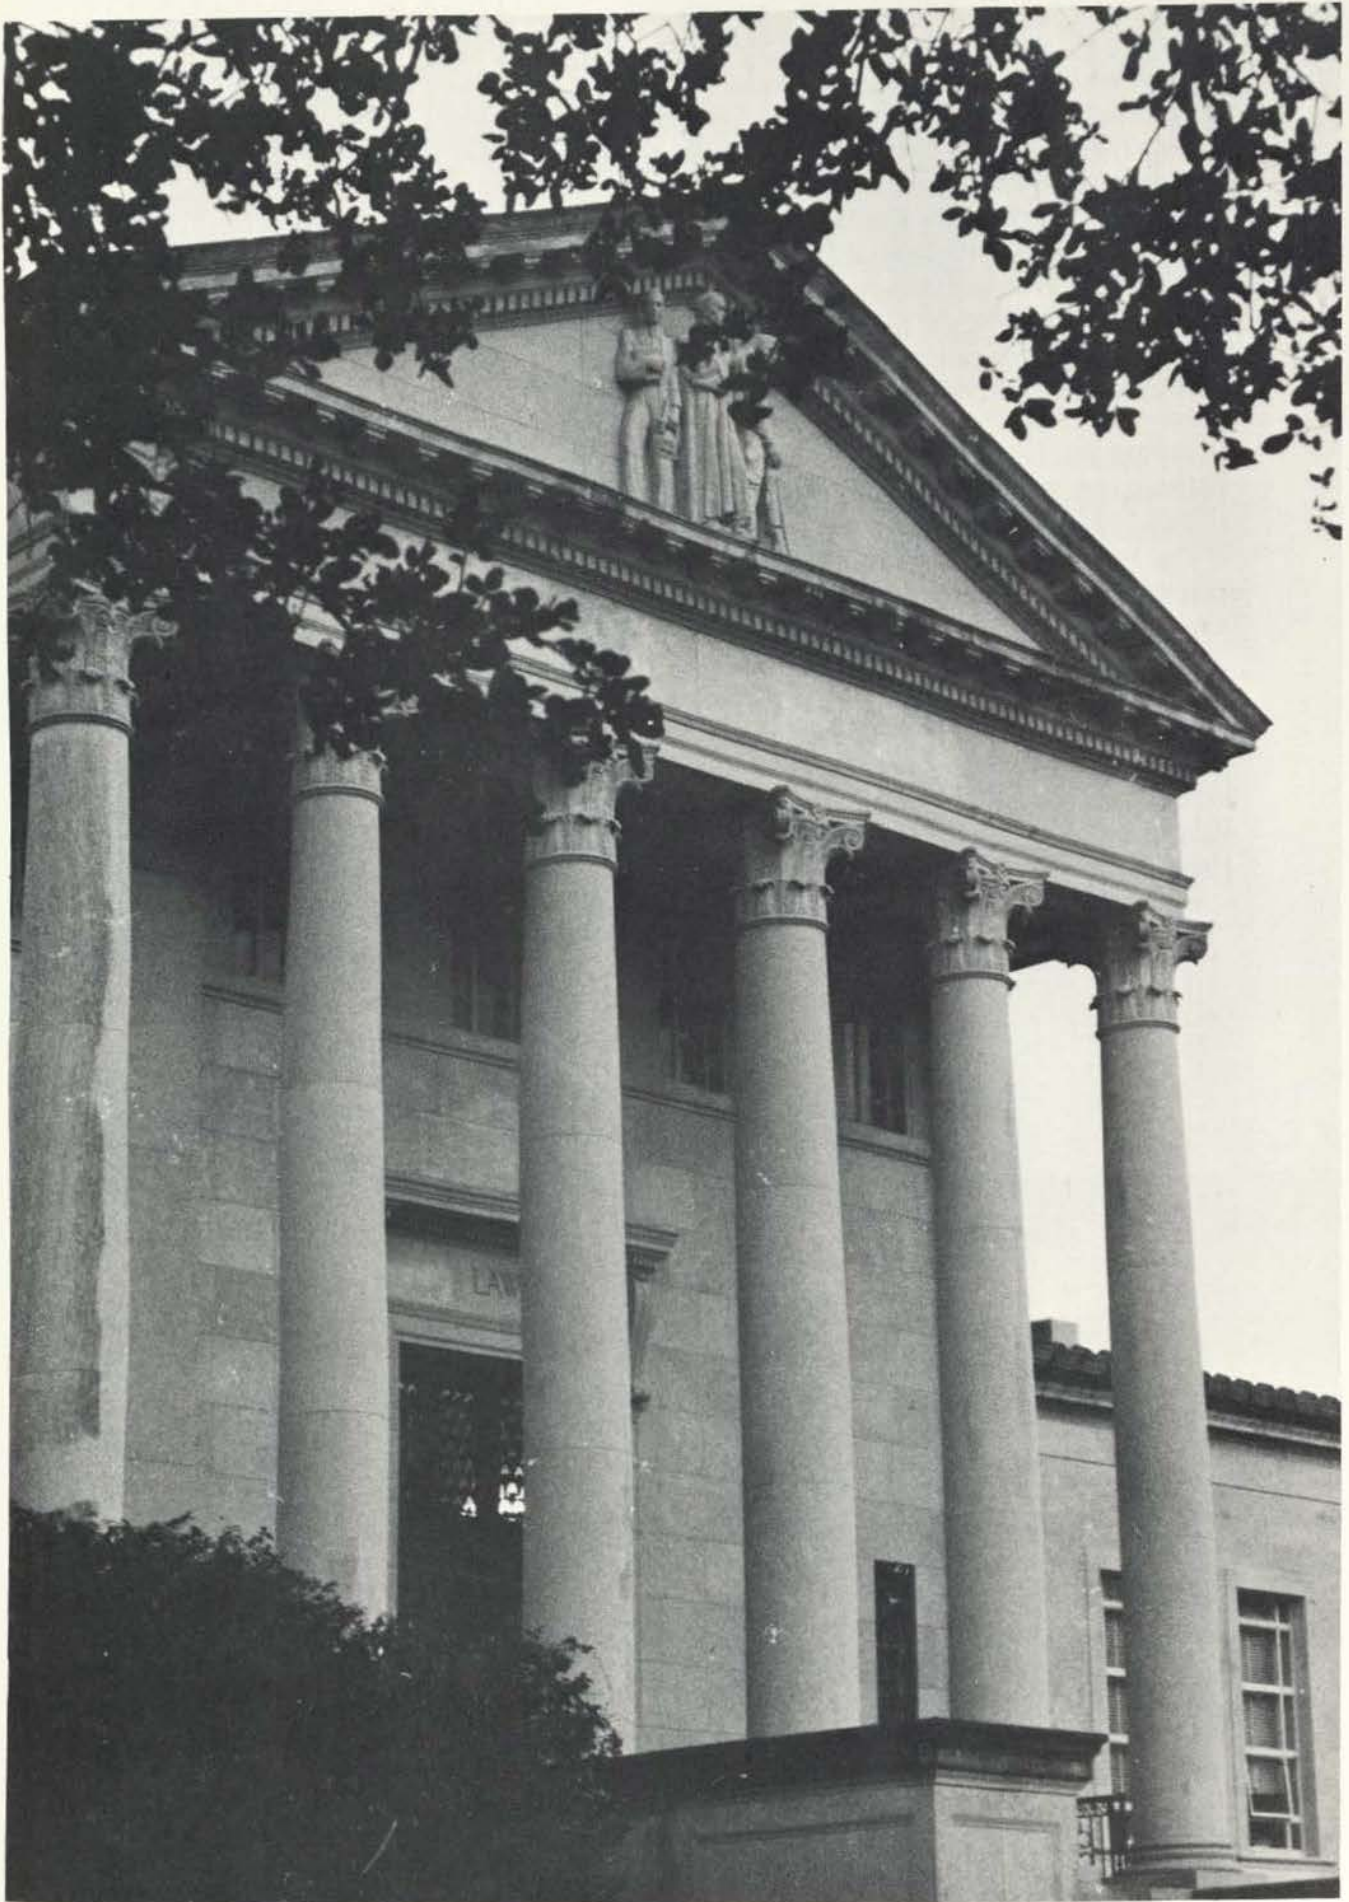

In 1910, Professor Robert Lee Tullis became Dean. His impact upon the Law Center was so great that the competition for top honors in Moot Court still bears his name. During his tenure, the course requirements were expanded to three years. In 1911, a student could be admitted after one year of college and could receive a "Bachelor of Laws" degree after three years of study.

During Robert Lee Tullis' term, Professor Ira S. Flory joined the law faculty. Students of the Modern Law Center will associate the name "Flory" with the Flory Trial Club, which sponsors mock trial competition. Flory joined the faculty in 1912 and remained for thirty-eight years, less a short period during the first World War. Professor Flory was the first to actively seek alumni support in the form of financial contributions, particularly toward funding an adequate library. In 1924, partly because of his efforts, the school was admitted to the Association of American Law Schools, and shortly the approval of the A.B.A. Council on legal education was secured as well.

In a 1964 article on the history of the law school, Dean Paul M. Hebert noted the impact of Tullis and Flory:

Through the accomplishments of these two great men . . . aided by additions to the Faculty, such as Harriet S. Dagget and others . . . the solid basis for further development was laid.

In 1935 the law school at L.S.U. received an expanded budget and a new dean, Frederick K. Beutel. Beutel was a nationally respected expert in Negotiable Instruments, and was able in a short two years term to expand the law school greatly. During Beutel's leadership, the first full-time Law Librarian joined the faculty. Leaverworth Colby gave the library an expanded capacity for research and growth. In 1937 Beutel left L.S.U. for a professorship at William and Mary. But before he left, the Law School had its own building, known as Leche Hall, and modeled after the U.S. Supreme Court in Washington.

Following Beutel's term, the tenure of Dean Paul M. Hebert began. Dean Hebert made such an impact upon the school that it was renamed the Paul M. Hebert Law Center in 1979. Dean Hebert's first term lasted only two years. During the interim, several law professors served as acting deans. The progress of the Law Center didn't stop there.

Several major developments took place between 1939 and 1959 when Dean Hebert returned.

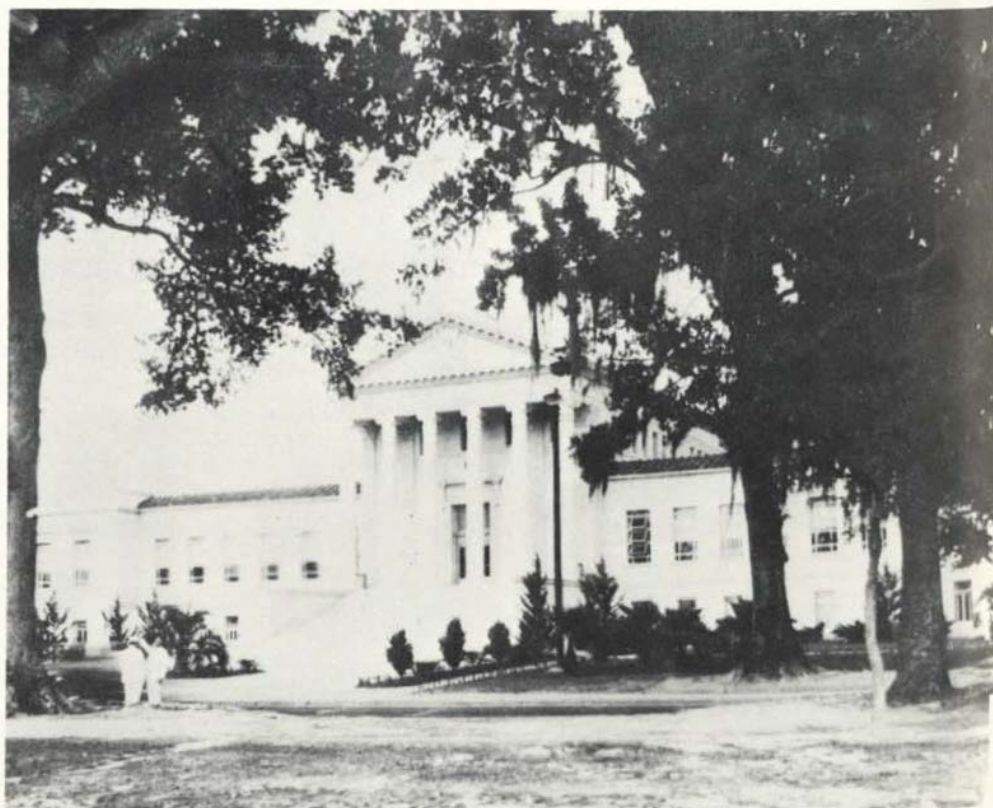

In 1938, the Louisiana State Law Institute was established, as was the Louisiana Law Review.

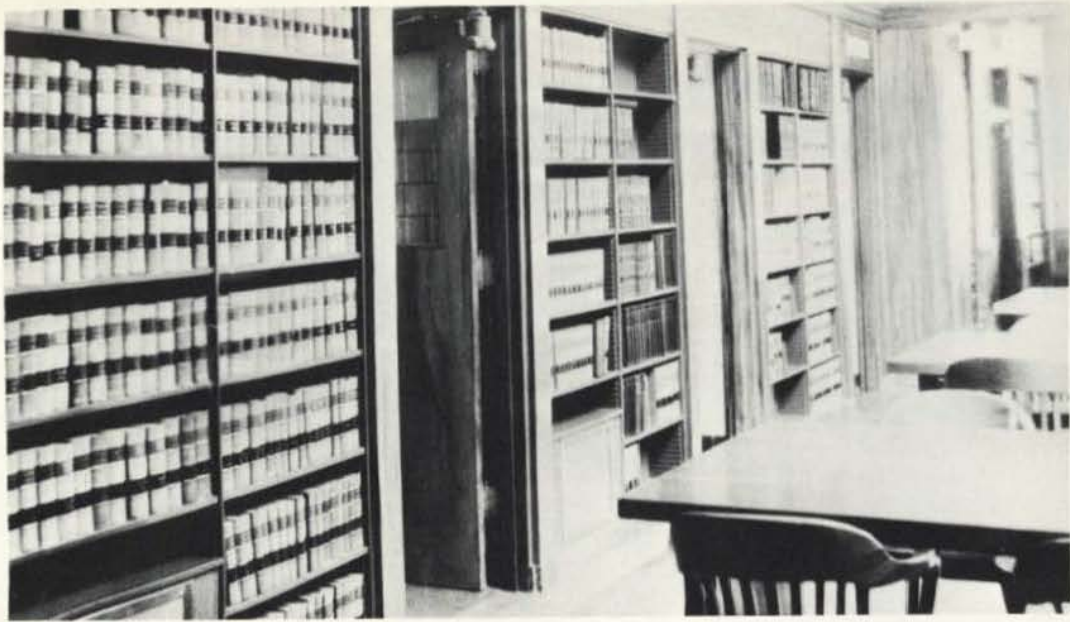

In 1978, the L.S.U. Board of Supervisors completed the separation of the Law School from the Baton Rouge campus. This allowed the Law School to have its own chancellor and to establish its own policies and programs separate from the L.S.U. campus.

This separate status was an idea promoted first by Dean Paul Hebert, whose dream was realized a year after his death. In fact, Dean Hebert was lobbying for the separate status when he was stricken by a fatal heart attack.

The Law Center's first chancellor, William D. Hawkland, was appointed in 1979.

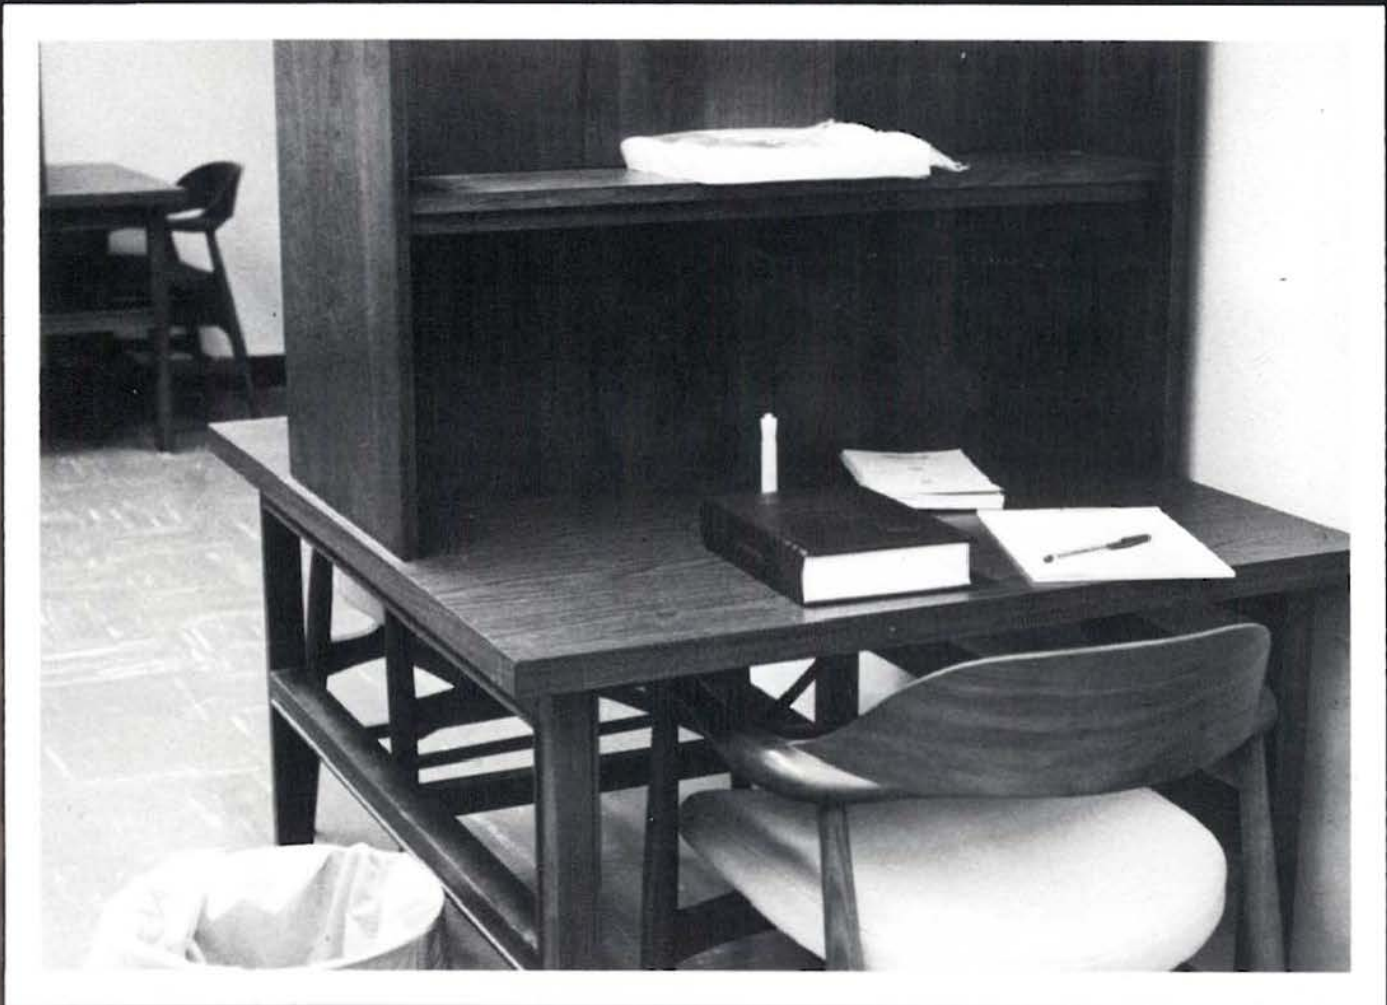

— Paul Marx

"I say the business of a law school is not sufficiently described when you merely say that it is to teach law, or to make lawyers. It is to teach law in the grand manner, and to make great lawyers."
— Oliver Wendell Holmes (1913)

FACULTY

Chancellor William D. Hawkland

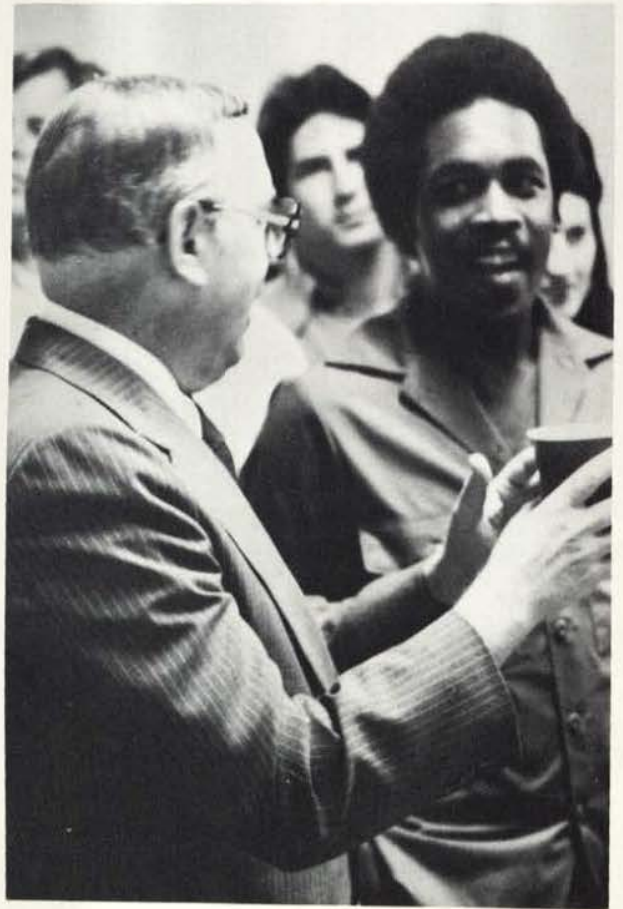

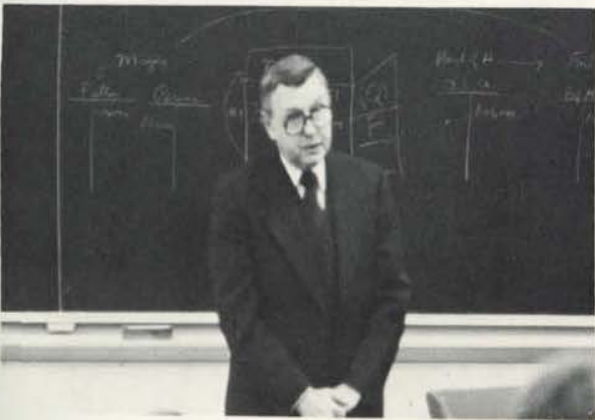

William D. Hawkland accepted the Chancellorship of the L.S.U. Law Center in 1979, ending the (unusual) dual deanship of Winston Day and Howard L'Enfant.

Chancellor Hawkland's professional credentials attest to his stature as one of the country's leading jurists. After receiving his B.S. in mathematics from the University of Minnesota, Hawkland pursued his law degree from that institution. His studies were interrupted by service in the United States Navy during World War II, after which he returned to graduate with numerous honors.

Hawkland pursued further graduate studies at Columbia University, where he received an LL.M. and began his life-long advocacy of the Uniform Commercial Code. Chancellor Hawkland has played major roles in the adoption of the U.C.C. in many states and has influenced legislators considering this issue nationwide.

Chancellor Hawkland has taught at the University of Tennessee, Temple University, UCLA, University of Illinois, University of Buffalo, University of Minnesota, University of Texas, New York University, and the Faculté Comparé du Droit in Strasbourg, France. It was from Illinois that the L.S.U. Law Center lured Hawkland, convincing him to undertake the administrative duties which so many institutions had unsuccessfully sought to have him accept. His mission is to bring this school to the forefront of legal education. There can be little doubt that with his background and vision, Chancellor Hawkland is uniquely suited to develop the potential of the L.S.U. Law Center.

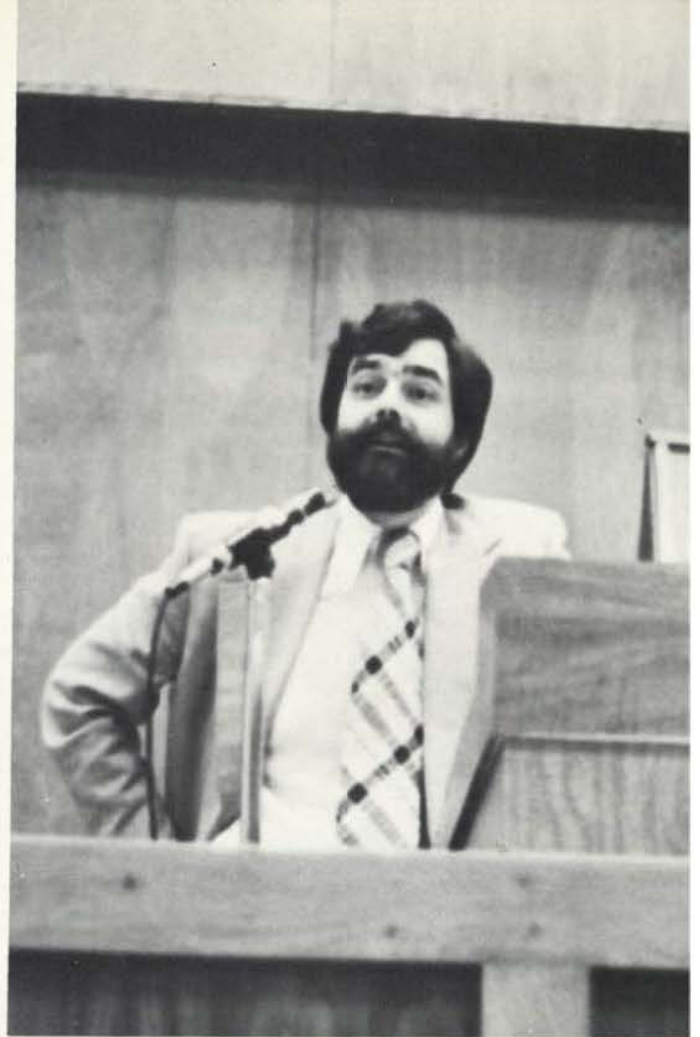

Winston R. Day and Howard L'Enfant served as Acting Dean and Acting Associate Dean of the Law Center, respectively, until July, 1979. They are remembered for their dedication to the students as well as their untiring efforts in promoting the welfare of the Law Center.

This past year, Professor Day taught Family Law, Civil Law Property and Torts.

Professor L'Enfant currently serves as Vice-Chancellor, while teaching Basic Civil Procedure.

“He who must search a haystack for a needle is likely to end up with the attitude that the needle is not worth the search.”
— Robert Jackson (1953)

THE END

In Memoriam

Kate Wallach 1905-1979

A dedicated scholar of the law, Kate Wallach retired from the LSU Law Center in 1975 with professor emeritus and law librarian emeritus honors. She was a valuable asset to the legal learning experience of future generations of law students. Her professional and conscientious work will be remembered and appreciated by her students, her fellow professors, and all those who enjoy the variety, breadth, and efficiency of the many collections and services of the library, which were a product of the special devotion of her work.
