Fragment of a hollow, ^{incensario} ~~mold-made~~ figure. There is a fire core which extends to within .2cm of the figure's walls and is .4cm in diameter. There is no fire cloud or burning. Hardness 1-7. The exterior surface is quite smooth and shows evidence of burnishing, especially on the surfaces of the raised areas and on the flat area between them. The interior surface is slightly rougher, but still quite compact. The design is composed of a raised, rounded strip 2cm long and .7cm wide which runs diagonally across the fragment and extends .2cm from the surface of the stand. There is another raised strip which runs vertically along the fragment which is 3cm long, .6cm wide, and extends less than 1cm from the body of the fragment. The back of the fragment is quite flat. There are two grooves which separate the raised areas from the flat surfaces. There is no paint, slip, or applique.
