BIBLIOGRAPHY OF REGIONAL GEOGRAPHY IN WESTERN LANGUAGES
AND
REGIONAL BIBLIOGRAPHIES WITH EMPHASIS ON GEOGRAPHY

Edited by Toshio NOH

This is a bibliography of books in regional geography in which the books are classified by region and within the region they are arranged by alphabetic order of the authors. The books are mainly those in English, German and French. Those in Russian and other Slavic languages are not included.

Included are mainly the works after the First Worldwar as a rule, but there are exceptions such as those which the editor considered very important in the history of the development of the science of regional geography. An example is Richthofen, Ferdinand von: China. 5 vols. 1877-1912.

Entries are limited to books, and the articles published in periodicals are excluded, but some of the publications in periodicals with a character of separate books are included as exceptions. An example of such exceptions is some of the Ergänzungsheft of Petermanns Mitteilungen.

The standard of selection is whether the contents are basically regional descriptions or not. No matter how the titles are "Principles of Human Geography" "Outline of Economic Geography" and so forth, if the contents are strongly regional, they are included inspite of the titles. e.g. Jones, Clarence F.: Economic Geography. New York, 1953.

Regional descriptions of geomorphology, climatology and biogeography are included. Those of minerals, geology and so forth are not included. Purely historical books are excluded, but among them strongly regional works and those which the editor considered important for the study of regional geography are treated as exceptions. An example is; Darby, H. Clifford: The Domesday geography of England. Cambridge, 1952-62. In general, the proportion of the contents on historical and contemporary circumstances is very diversified and it is very difficult to draw a boundary between them.

Dictionaries, Year-books, statistics and directories are excluded, but some of them with the nature of regional geography are included as exceptions.

Discoveries, travel records and reports of expeditions are not included because they are not considered as regional geography as they are, but this exclusion is rather a prevention against limitless expansion of the contents. On practical purposes, many of them are to be considered same as regional geography.

Entries are arranged by region. For the division of regions, the convenience for use is considered. The regional division of Asia is mainly based on Hettner, Alfred: Grundzüge der Länderkunde. Vol. 2. Die aussereuropäischen Erdteile. 1930. The division of Europe is after Gottman, Jean: A geography of Europe. 1950.

The books dealing with more than two regions are; if the emphasis is on one of the regions, it is classified into that region. If emphasis is not clear, it is classified into the major region (1) general. Very important works concerning more than two regions are entered in more than two places.

The arrangement of the entries is as follows: The name of the author, or editor (ed.); The title of the book: (The library, collection, series, it belongs); Number of volumes; The place of publication; The publisher; The date of publication; Total pages.—in case of revisions, information of more recent publication. — This is the principle, due to the very diversified quality of the information available to the editor, many of the entries are missing one or more of the items.

Abbreviations used in this bibliography are as follows. They are used in the entire bibliography independent of the languages used in the books of entries.
