Sexual harassment on college campuses

By ROBIN NELSON
Staff Writer

Sheryl Eckhardt of Iowa Civil Rights Commission came to DMACC Boone Campus to speak to the students, faculty and staff about sexual harassment, Oct. 29.

She also showed a film "Work Place Hastle."

Although Eckhardt's presentation dealt mainly with harassment in the workplace, many college campuses around the nation have also felt the impact of the Thomas/Hill hearings.

Poeple don't realize that both men and women can be sexually harassed. Studies show that 95% of the victims in college are female, according to a brochure published by the University of Minnesota.

To eliminate sexual harassment on college campuses, many students, faculty and staff are re-examining policies and taking steps for this problem. While there is no way to protect it, here are a few warning signs:

- Staring, leering, ogling despite the intent or surreptitious nature of the activity.
- Frequent and excessive commenting on personal appearance of students (or employees).
- Touching out of context. Pinching, stroking, "brushing up against the body" of others is clearly unnecessary for communications.

• Excessive flattery and praise of the student. This behavior is especially seductive to the person of low self-esteem or high admiration and is especially questionable in the presence of others.

Remember, men and women interpret signals differently. Men may think of a smile as a "come on" where women might think of it just as "friendly."

What, if anything, is DMACC-Boone campus doing to promote open discussion of the issue of sexual harassment, and is it enough? Let the Bear Facts staff know by writing a letter to the editor and placing it in the Bear Facts mailbox in the main office.

Thanksgiving break

The Boone campus will be closed at 3 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 27, for Thanksgiving break.

Therefore, as stated in the tabloid, evening classes are not scheduled to meet the evening of November 27. This will also affect any afternoon class that is still meeting at 3 p.m. or begins after 3 p.m.

*If you think you stay busy,
think again!*

By CHAD ELSBERRY
Staff Writer

Have you ever wondered what instructors do with their spare time? Well, I know one person here at the Boone Campus who writes books in her spare time.

Nancy Woods is a math and physics teacher who has recently finished work on an Instructor's Manual for the Beiser Physics Fifth Edition textbook. She worked on the manual between May and September of 1991, and it was just recently published.

While working on the manual, Nancy was also pursuing her Master's Degree in math to go along with her Master's in physics, teaching classes, and helping take care of her family. Her family includes her husband, and four boys ranging in ages from sixteen months to seventeen years. By the way, Nancy's motto is "You can do anything, with the right amount of effort."

When asked how she became interested in writing the book, Woods expressed that "self-fulfillment" along with the challenge of the project played a large part in her decision. She said it took a lot of late nights and a lot of patience to get the book completed.

However, she also made it clear her teaching career is very rewarding. Nancy describes her job as an educator involves the challenge of reducing what's considered hard down into its simpler aspects. She also pointed out that being here at DMACC, in comparison to a larger school, gives her the freedom to try different methods of teaching depending on the students in her class. In addition, the class sizes here allow for more interaction between instructors and students.

Currently, Nancy is serving as an Educational Consultant for Addison Wesley Publishing; and in the near future, she has plans to do more writing along with continuing her teaching career.

Soviets visit Boone Campus

By BRIAN PHELPS
Staff Writer

DMACC's Boone campus recently hosted 12 Russian delegates from the Stavropol State Pedagogical Institute (SSPI). The SSPI is interested in starting a community college in the Stavropol area of Russia. They wanted to see how a community college in the U.S. worked so they came to study DMACC.

The Russians sat in on some classes around campus. In Computer Science 181 class they learned how the computers and some of the software work. The Soviets also sat in on a composition class, where they told the students that a pair of jeans in Russia costs people one week's salary.

In October, when they visited Boone the first time, the Soviets were treated to a ride and a lunch on the Boone Scenic Valley Railroad. Also, they attended a practice of the fall play "South Pacific."

In May, Gary Stasko and Vivian Brandmeyer, Boone Campus business instructors, will visit the Soviet Union for part of the educational and cultural exchange.

You still have time to submit a manuscript for the annual DMACC Writing Contest, according to Rick Chapman, head of Communications/Humanities, Ankeny campus.

The deadline is Dec. 2.

The guidelines for the contest are as follows:

Eligibility
Any DMACC student enrolled in the fall, 1991 semester may participate. Entrants are limited to one prize.

Awards
Tuition scholarships: the Ankeny Campus Student Action Board has provided (2) writer scholarships:
• Best overall writer will be awarded $250 from the SAB. The Ankeny Campus Foundation will match that amount for a total scholarship of $500.
• Runner-up best writer will receive $125, which will be matched by the Boone Campus, for a total award of $250.

Cash awards include $100 for best story and $50 for runner-up. In addition, a $100 award for best poem and a $50 award for runner-up will be available. All returning, graduating, and transferring students are encouraged to enter their works.

Publications

Manuscript Standards
Number: participants must submit at least three original manuscripts, and may submit up to five. The purpose of this requirement is to select the best writers, not just the best works.

Copy requirements: manuscripts must be typed (double spaced) and accompanied by a single cover sheet including: the titles of the pieces, the author's name, college program, home address, and phone number and signed statement as follows:

"The following pieces of writing are solely my own work. I am currently a student at DMACC (if interest in scholarships, then add that you plan to be enrolled in the fall, 1992). I do not object to the publication of my writing if it is properly acknowledged."

Each piece should be titled but your name should be left off the individual works since your entrant number will be attached for anonymity.

Routing
Entries should be sent to: DMACC Creative Writing Contest % R.W. Chapman, Contest Coordinator, Science and Humanities Department, Bldg. 2, Ankeny Campus, 2006 S. Ankeny Blvd., Ankeny, Iowa 50021.

Mueller presents paper at speech convention

By JOHN GREENE
Staff Writer

Boone campus speech and drama teacher Kay Mueller recently attended the SCA or the Speech Communication Association Convention in Atlanta Oct. 31 through Nov. 3.

Teachers, professors and graduate students representing colleges and junior colleges from all over the country attended the convention.

The event was held at a number of hotels where there were workshops on new teaching methods and strategies. Also there were annual meetings to attend.

Mueller authored a paper entitled "Win-Win, Conflict in Negotiation" and presented it at one of the workshops.

One workshop named Gifts, short for the Great Ideas for Teaching Speech, provided new strategies for grading and listening to students speeches, and evaluations of speeches.

She also said that many of the workshops were full. She didn't get to attend as many as she would have liked to.

While she was in Atlanta, Mueller also toured many historical Civil War museums and saw places where the Civil War actually occurred.

Mueller also said that one of the biggest pluses of attending the convention was meeting the different people. She said that she even talked to one of her old professors from ISU. They got to talk about their school administrations and their budget problems.

Mueller said she made many new friends and hopes to attend SCA again next year.

According to Bill Alley, Rec. Club advisor, members will be involved in helping for the preparation of "Magical Easter."

Magical Easter, which is in its fourth year, is a program that offers many things to experience.

Some of the activities include an Easter egg hunt, a parade featuring a variety of entertainment and many people wearing different kinds of costumes.

DMACC drops their first games against NIACC

By SHANNON HAYES
Staff Writer

Mason City, Iowa—Coach Joe Dunham of the DMACC basketball team was out to prove that his team could play with other teams this year and his pre-game jitters showed how nervous he was about it.

The 106-84 score disproved how well the Bears looked. Dunham said that the team played very hard and aggressive, but we just didn't get back fast enough on defense and NIACC had a man we couldn't stop on the boards. We also missed too many free throws.

DMACC made 18 of 32 free throws and was out-rebounded 36 to 26. NIACC the first half probably scored 20 points off of fast break points and the second half about 10, which really hurt the Bears.

"This is the best we have looked on the offensive part of the floor, but we have a lot of improving to do on the defensive side," Dunham said.

Dunham adds, "If we can cut down on these kind of mental mistakes we will be fine the rest of the year also the players are still getting to know each other on the court and in a couple more games they should feel a lot more comfortable with each other which will be a real edge."

The Bears had a difficult time keeping Charles Grigsby off the boards and not letting him get more than one chance at the basket. Grigsby had 26 points and 12 rebounds to lead NIACC to their win over DMACC. Twenty-two of his points came in the first half.

The offensive leader for DMACC was point guard Reggie Martin. Martin had 29 points. Eleven coming from the field and 7 of 14 from the line.

The Bears kept the game close the first half. One point in the game the Bears were within seven points. DMACC came out at the half very flat and not ready to play. NIACC took advantage of this and started to gradually pull away with the lead.

Two other players with double figures were Dana Scott with 11 and Ritch Webb with 10 points.

The leading rebounders were Jeff Mulder and Brad Vincent with 11 combined.

DMACC SCORING:

Reggie Martin 11-20 7-14 29, Dana Scott 3-8 3-6 11, Ritch Webb 5-8 0-2 10, Adam Krug 2-6 0-0 5, Jeff Mulder 3-6 4-5 10, Brent Krug 1-3 4-5 6, Brad Vincent 4-5 0-0 9, James Heintz 2-3 0-0 4, Tom Sandve 0-0-0 0, Gene Rife 0-0-0 0, Three point goals- Scott 2-2, Krug 1-1, Vincent 1-1.

DMACC women lose opener against NIACC

By SHANNON HAYES
Staff Writer

Mason City, Iowa—The DMACC women took on a well balanced team last Wednesday. The final score was 105-69.

Coach Criner commented by saying, "Our rebounding needs a lot of work and we missed a lot of shots, which was the difference in the game, but I was thrilled to see that our defense is going to be good in time."

Last year the Lady Bears average 57 points and in this years first game they scored 69 points. Criner adds that this years team is better than last years team and when we play NIACC again here this year it will be a lot closer game.

The biggest problem we faced with NIACC was they had a girl inside that must of been 6'5" that we couldn't stop and when we tried to stop her they had a guard that could shoot good from outside. And we couldn't make the adjustments to stop both at once.

This is how the scoring went for the women.

Dena Wernimont 16, Karla Lilly 12, Heather Smith 12, Michelle Schlenker 12, Jennifer Kellen 10, Sonya Hanna 8, Valarie Camp 6.

Leading rebounders were Schlenker and Wernimont, which combined for 16. and Jennifer Silberhorn had 6.

Karla Lilly lead the team with 4 assists.

"If we can rebound better and shoot better than we did we will beat Marshalltown," Criner adds.

Wand dazzles Boone Campus audience

By BRIAN PHELPS
Staff Writer

Have you ever wondered what it would be like to be hypnotized?

Some DMACC-Boone campus students got the chance on Wednesday, Nov. 6. About 20 students volunteered to go up on stage in the theater and be taken in by Jim Wand's powers.

When Wand first appeared on stage, he gave a brief history of himself and hypnosis. He assured the audience that if they volunteered they could not be forced to do anything they did not want to do. Also he assured that no one could be "locked" in hypnosis.

All the students on stage were asked to focus at a red flicker light, much like the ones you may remember on top of beer and pop cans in the mid-to-late 70s.

As Wand begins to talk, the lights on stage were dimmed and the volunteers were asked to concentrate on the light and his voice.

He began to talk very slowly counting down from ten. When he reached one, most everyone was hypnotized? (The ones that weren't under his spell were told they probably lost concentration because everyone can be hypnotized.)

After the students were under hypnosis, the fun really began. Wand asked them to raise their right hand stiff above their heads. The volunteers' hands, and one person's hand from the audience, all went up in unison. Wand then asked a few more people that had lost concentration to take their seats and enjoy the show.

Next, he had the hypnotized students driving semi trucks, flying air planes, relaxing on a beach in Florida and even had the guys experience childbirth.

After Wand returned the students to their normal state, he asked them how they felt, how long they thought they were under, and even showed them Polaroids of their antics.

Everyone said they felt fine. One participant thought she was under for about 15 minutes when she was really under for about an hour.

Before he released the students from his powers, he gave a few of them a code word and a trick to perform when they heard the word.

One student, at the sound of "Ankeny," was instructed to notice the ceiling was falling and to warn everyone of the danger.

Another was to realize his shirt was on backwards when he heard the word "hypnosis" and he could have to change it around.

When he heard the word "Boone," one student was to stand up and yell, "I am Tarzan, lord of the apes."

Also on the mention of the word "Boone," a female participant was instructed to yell, "I am Jane come to me baby!"

The crowd rolled with laughter as they all performed their tricks.

After the show, I talked to Mike Moore about being on stage. He said, "I felt very relaxed but I don't think I was hypnotized." He added he was under the spell for a little while but then slipped out. Jason DeBoom, who volunteered last year and again this year, said it was fun.

Everyone I talked to in the audience enjoyed the show very much and had a great time.

Need another class for spring semester?

If you're looking for another class to round out your spring semester schedule, the Journalism Department has some great offerings for you!

Here is a brief synopsis of what you can expect from each of these four classes. All will transfer as electives.

JNAD 120
Introduction to Mass Communications
MWF 11:15 to 12:10
Three Credits
Room 203

This interesting and informative class covers the basics of all mass media, including TV, radio, film, magazines, newspapers, advertising and more. The text is fun to read and easy to understand.

Guest speakers, videos, seeing the movie All the President's Men and lively discussion.

This is a good all-around class for students in every field of study. We all deal with and are affected by the mass media every day. Now is your chance to understand how and why they work.

JNAD 123
Publication Production
(The Bear Facts)
Classtime is coordinated to fit with staff schedules
Three credits
Room 210

This class is responsible for producing monthly issues of The Bear Facts.

Included are reporting, interviewing, writing news stories, photography, ad sales and layout and design.

There are no quizzes or exams, and no text. Your grade is based on work completed for each issue.

This class experience will look great on your resume!

JNAD 124
Layout and Design
MWF 12:20-1:15
Three Credits
Room 205

This class is an introduction to publication layout and design.

Design theory is introduced, and then students learn about layout and design for all of the mass mediums. In-class work is a big part of this class.

The text is very appealing to the eye and easy to understand.

JNAD 125
Principles of Advertising
MWF 9:05-10
Three Credits

Room 116

This class is an introduction to the world of advertising.

All of us literally bombarded with advertising messages from the time we first turn on the radio or read the newspaper in the morning, till we fall asleep during The Tonight Show or Arsenio Hall at night.

This class explores how advertising messages are developed and tested, how much they cost and gives a basic overview of advertising as it relates to each mass medium (newspapers, magazines, radio, TV, cable TV, videos, etc.).

Some "hands-on" experience at writing ads also makes the class more interesting.

Tuition: not pocket change anymore

BOULDER, Colo. (CPS)—Employees at the bursar's office at the University of Colorado recently got a shock when a student pushed a wheelbarrow into the office filled to overflowing with quarters and pennies—$1,134 to be exact.

The money? One year's tuition. The wheelbarrow driver was in a d e f i n i t e I'm-angry-and-I'm-not-going-to-take-it-anymore kind of mood. "It's just not pocket change anymore," read a sign taped to the side of the wheelbarrow.

The angry student was William Roberts, a senior who said the stunt was a symbolic gesture to inform the regents that tuition, which just rose 7 percent, is becoming a real problem for students.

Roberts said the money was wrapped in paper wrappers to allow for easy counting by the busar's office employees.

COMMENTARY

He comments on "South Pacific," behind the scenes

Letter to the Editor

When tryouts rolled around, everyone thought that it was great that Boone Community Theater, got together with the DMACC Drama Department to do a show, South Pacific. There were a lot of wonderfully talented people on stage.

However, other aspects have a lot to be desired.

For starters, credit needs to be given where it is due. The program does not adequately reflect the time and efforts of many individuals who virtually broke their backs getting this show put together.

Janene Hale should be given a medal or some form of appreciation for all of the time and resources expended doing costumes.

Also, a big thanks to Jim Merrill for painting Bali H'I on the backdrop and for all of the other support given.

Mike Koch, Jayne Smith, Julie Sharp, and Connie Booth should be commended for their efforts.

Personal thanks to Nicole Rusnak and Deb Bishop for help backstage and with makeup.

The real tragedy of this production was the set construction. The biggest problem was a lack of communication among crew and directors. Combined with the fact that there was a promise made by BCT that set work would be "taken care of." An effective set of designs was never delivered. It ended up with the set work being done by aforementioned individuals in a last minute scramble. Some ideas were scrapped after being near completion.

The same dilemma applied to costuming which was pulled heroically out of the fire by Hale and Judith McMahon. Publicity was not what it was cracked up to be either. On a brighter note, I though the lighting people did an outstanding job under the circumstances.

Director Kay Mueller is not to blame in this situation. Essentially, I, among other DMACC students involved with this show, feel that DMACC was dumped on, used and abused. I, for one will never work with this particular production staff again.

My problem is not with the actors. Kahla and Chuck Jackson, Mike Terwilliger, Bill Grieser, Deb Bishop, Nicole Rusnak, and Merrill were simply genius on stage. I'd like to think that I've met and worked with some outstanding performers and made some good friends.

Needless to say, the program adequately reflect the time and effort put in by the DMACC people. I'd also like to thank anyone else who was neglected such as the orchestra, Jim Loos (music Director), and the chorus.

I look forward to our next DMACC production and working with Mike, Jim, Janene, Julie, Nicole and Kay again.

I also would enjoy working in another show with such professional quality actors and actresses again.

See you next spring!

What's your reaction to Magic's announcement?

By JOHN GREENE

Recently, DMACC Boone campus students were asked what their reactions were to Magic Johnson's announcement that he contacted the HIV virus?

Robin Nelson: I was shocked, I couldn't believe a hero could fall. This should show everyone that no one is invincible.

Holly Buechler: I was amazed it happened to him.

Chad Elsberry: I heard it over the radio. I was stunned, at first, I didn't think I heard it correctly.

John Smith: Shows it can happen to anyone, nobody is eliminated.

Phil Harris: I wish I made the money he did when he retired from basketball.

Lori Marr: It's hard to believe.

Jeremy Kach: Good job, it took guts.

Jennifer Brant: Maybe now people will understand how dangerous AIDS really is.

Jamie Brant: It's too bad for the world of basketball.

Denise Cornellison: His situation shouldn't be used to promote safe sex, but to educate the dangers of AIDS.

Jeff Craigmile: Totally shocked, ashamed to watch a sports celebrity go downhill. (He was great on Arsenio Hall.)

Brian Phelps: I was shocked to hear the news.

Marilyn Smith: I hope people learn something from his announcement.

Chris Jones: If it was anyone else it wouldn't have been a big deal.

Michelle Higgins: I was totally shocked.

Judy Blackburn: A shock to hear the news.

Theresa Miller: I think it's sad; he's handling it very responsibly.

Rhonda Erickson: I just couldn't believe it.

Jennifer Anderson: I just could not believe the news.

A look at guns in America

By CHAD ELSBERRY
Staff Writer

The Second Amendment to the U.S. Constitution says, "A well regulated militia, being necessary to the security of a free State, the right of the people to keep and bear arms, shall not be infringed." Unfortunately, the meaning of this Amendment is far from being clear or concise.

There are legitimate factors to be considered on both sides of the Second Amendment controversy. However, there is one thing that is very clear, and it is the controversy itself. On one side of the spectrum sits the National Rifle Association (NRA), and on the other side the strict gun control advocates.

According to public opinion polls, most Americans feel they have a right to "keep and bear arms;" however, at the same time, the majority of Americans think a waiting period along with other boundaries are valid, too. Thus, the public at large favors the spirit of the Second Amendment in a monitored and controlled fashion. But is this being done? I don't believe it is.

I guess the point I'm trying to make is that both the NRA and the strict gun control advocates are a little off base.

According to statistics put out in a pamphlet by Life Skills Education, there are over 200 million handguns in the United States, and over half of all American families own at least one firearm. Thus, it's almost ridiculous to maintain the position that the Second Amendment doesn't apply to individual citizens.

In contrast, the fact that gun related deaths run at such staggering rates in our country also makes it absurd to uphold the Second Amendment as some inalienable right of the people.

What we are left with is a nearly impossible situation in which no complete solution can be found.

But, that doesn't mean there aren't certain actions we can take. Among these actions would be recognizing the Second Amendment as a right which does exist but with certain boundaries. I believe those boundaries should include mandatory waiting periods, mandatory gun instruction, and site restrictive laws for certain weapons.

I've heard many people who are opposed to any gun restrictions say it isn't guns that kill people it's people who kill people. I've also heard gun advocates point out the comparison between firearms and automobiles by saying that we as a country don't outlaw cars even though they are involved in far more deaths than guns are.

And to these two points I must agree.

However, we as country demand that drivers have some kind of instruction and training, so why not do the same for gun owners? Is it completely unreasonable to make sure an individual knows how to properly handle a gun before we allow them to do so?

In addition, there are also laws which limit cars in their build in order for them to be street legal. Again, why can't we do the same thing with certain firearms by demanding they be kept and used at specified gun clubs?

I'm not saying these measures will eliminate gun inflicted deaths in our country, but isn't it time we started addressing the problem in the context of reality in which it does exist?

Was a fine enough?

By BRIAN PHELPS
Staff Writer

On November 7, 1991, 16-year-old Eric Branstad found out what charges were going to be pressed against him for an accident that had killed two people.

When the story first broke, the media said Eric was speeding, also made an illegal lane change, and was at fault. But, on the court date the only charge filed was an illegal lane change, with a fine of $34.50.

I've had speeding tickets alone that cost more than that.

And I didn't hurt anybody. I wonder if the name Branstad had anything to do with the decision...

This whole episode makes me think of a guy I know doing 10-15 years in state prison for about the same thing. The state called it involuntary manslaughter. Some of the details were slightly different than the Branstad case. My friend only killed one person, and was definitely speeding.

There are a few more differences, but my point is that the punishment is supposed to equal the crime. I don't know what the price of human life is today. But, I think if you can take two for $34.50 you got off very lucky.

My condolences go out to the families and friends of the two victims of this case. May I suggest the state of Iowa at least revoke Eric Branstad's license for at least a year?

"Trade you an Einstein, for a Curie..."

BEAVERTON, Ore. (CPS)—Einstein, Oppenheimer and the rest of the world's greatest thinkers would have loved this—scientist trading cards.

At the Oregon Graduate Institute of Science and Technology, scientists are receiving the same treatment as professional baseball players.

A new series of trading cards features a photograph of a faculty member on the front with a synopsis of his or her speciality on the flip side.

Students undeterred in pursuit of sex

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (CPS)—According to a recent study by the Kinsey Institute for Sex Research at Indiana University, students these days are anything but starved for sex.

Yep, the study shows—stop the presses!—that most students on college campuses are having lots of sex these days.

A survey of 651 undergraduate men and women showed that 81 percent of the men and 75 percent of the women were not virgins; that the average age for both sexes' first sexual experience was 17, and that students spend an average of two nights a week with their sexual partners.

The study also showed that 50 percent of the men and 36 percent of the women had sex with someone they just met and that, on average, students had two one-night stands in 1990.

Yale offers feminist theology studies

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (CPS)—Yale University is offering a new major for master's students through its Divinity School. The focus—feminist interpretations of the Bible and theology.

The new concentration consists of 22 interdisciplinary courses in theology, ministry, church history and biblical studies.

Nine faculty members will teach the classes.

"The move also announces to the academic world that there are enough books to support feminist theology studies and that substantial research has been done in this area," coordinator Letty Russell said in a press release.

Corporate America going casual?

NORTH READING, Mass. (CPS)—If you're looking for a corporate job, you'll be glad to know the formal pinstripe suit is a thing of the past, according to a report by Converse Inc., the athletic shoe company.

Survey findings indicate the slick, dress-for-success look is becoming less popular, with only 22 percent of 201 U.S. companies surveyed having a specific dress code. The same companies, by a margin of 8-to-1, report that their men and women executives are dressing less formally.

"The corporations still expect you to look sharp, but looking sharp is not necessarily a three-piece suit," says Jennifer Murray, a company spokesperson.

Women executives are leading men in the move to more casual office styles, the report says. Some 65 percent of companies report that women are wearing less traditional styles, compared with 44 percent of the men.

Schools promote Organ Donor Campaign

(CPS)—Want to donate your kidney, liver or heart?

Those attending Howard University, North Carolina A&T, Prairie View A&M or Southern University, may soon have the chance.

The four historically black universities are working with Dow Chemical's Take Initiative Program on Transplantation to make black students more aware of a shortage of organ donors.

As part of the campaign, student organizations are distributing information about the need for donors. The information shows that blacks have the highest rates of high blood pressure and kidney failure among racial groups and that they receive fewer transplants.

Dead prof apparently was bigamist

PALO ALTO, Calif. (CPS)—As if Stanford University hadn't been handling enough problems of its own, up popped three—no, one—more last month.

After pediatrics professor and lung transplant researcher Norman Lewiston (who graduated from high school in Perry, Iowa) died in August, a local newspaper ran his obituary, which named his widow.

Shortly after the obituary ran, another woman called the Stanford Medical School to tell officials she was Lewiston's widow.

Finally, a few weeks later, a third wife was discovered—the woman, a San Diego nurse, had filed for divorce just one month before Lewiston died.

An investigation by school officials found that Lewiston married his third wife two years ago, his second wife five years ago and his first wife in 1960, with whom he had three children.

The third wife had told reporters she thought he had divorced his first two wives.

While attorneys sort out the mess in terms of Lewiston's estate, Stanford officials are looking into another oddity.

An audit uncovered a previously unknown bank account in which Lewiston deposited reimbursed research funds.

This notice should indicate the College cannot perform its legal obligation to the system without new revenues to the College. The notice should indicate that the College does not have, and does not intend to, appropriate monies to make payments into the state telecommunications network fund until adequate revenues are assured and available to cover cost and expenditures for the system."
