Karla Jessen Williamson
University of Saskatchewan

Teacher Candidate

Freckled by prairie sun and wind
Unsure of what the future has to offer
Setting squarely in sunless room
Knowing the slipping of summer rays
Wishing the thoughts of ideals and ideas
Flowed as breezy as prairie skies.

David Purple: a blooming flower?
Whitehead: a cotton tail?
Dewey: a fading thought...
Setting, seething
With eyes as big as prairie skies.

(This teacher candidate asked that all our classes be taught outside.)
