Gazebo in the Park

by Dennis Ross

Walnut shells are centered on the concrete gazebo floor all within a small circle.

A small child's gathered treasure?

I slip away to the lawn,
and the world pond quiets.

A grizzled squirrel carries in a walnut, holds it like a chalice, gnaws out the nut,
and leaves the shell within the circle, then repeats herself time and again.

A squirrel shaman? An artist?
An eccentric?

If I dump a bag of shelled walnuts
into the circle,
would I encourage a new religion,
reward an artist,
or just froth the mind of Crazy Alice?
