

A JOURNAL OF WESTERN OKLAHOMA
W E S T V I E W

Volume 15
Issue 3 Spring

Article 26

3-15-1996

March Wings

William Snyder Jr.

Follow this and additional works at: <https://dc.swosu.edu/westview>

Recommended Citation

Snyder, William Jr. (1996) "March Wings," Westview: Vol. 15 : Iss. 3 , Article 26.
Available at: <https://dc.swosu.edu/westview/vol15/iss3/26>

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by the Journals at SWOSU Digital Commons. It has been accepted for inclusion in Westview by an authorized administrator of SWOSU Digital Commons. For more information, please contact phillip.fitzsimmons@swosu.edu.

MARCH WINGS

by William Snyder Jr.

*Mais voilà l'oiseau-lyre
qui passe dans le ciel
l'enfant le voit
l'enfant l'entend
l'enfant l'appelle:
Sauve-moi
joue avec moi
oiseau!*

Jacques Prevert

This row house of narrow rooms—
storm glass shut, windows sealed, shades drawn down. But for one.
My kitchen window— this shade up,
this pane free— for light,
for strength.

And through this window, the house
across the way, backyard sketched
in winter leaf, scattered twig,
deck-rail planters
topped with ancient snow.

A brick walk— the bricks seem random, stained. I drink coffee,
cup the hot, glass cup in my palms,
press my forehead
against the inner pane. Then birds.
Small birds. A troop of grayish birds
with black and chestnut wings
flit here and there across the way,
perch on naked, brown limbs,
alight on bricks, peck and preen.
They sing. I think they sing.