Research Boundary Spanning:

Understanding Crisis Communication Collaborations across Government, Academic, Non-profit, and International Organizations

Breakout session 1: Panel 1

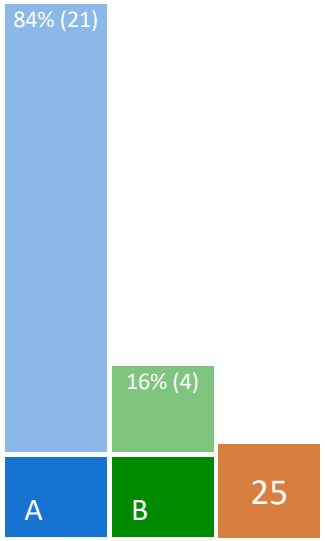
Moderator:
Amisha Mehta, PhD (QUT Business School)
Presenters:
Elizabeth L. Petrun Sayers, PhD (RAND Corporation),
Laura E. Pechta, PhD (CDC)
Brooke Liu, PhD (START University of Maryland)
Ben Duncan, (Risk Communication Consultant to WHO Health Emergencies Programme, Director for Europe, The Warning Project)

ICRCC at UCF, March 13, 2018

Q1: Have you ever been involved in collaborative research?

A. Yes
B. No

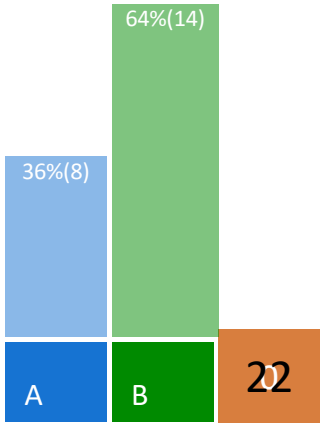
Vote online at: http://TWP.participoll.com



Q2 Have you ever done research in collaboration with an organization responding to a live emergency?

A. Yes
B. No

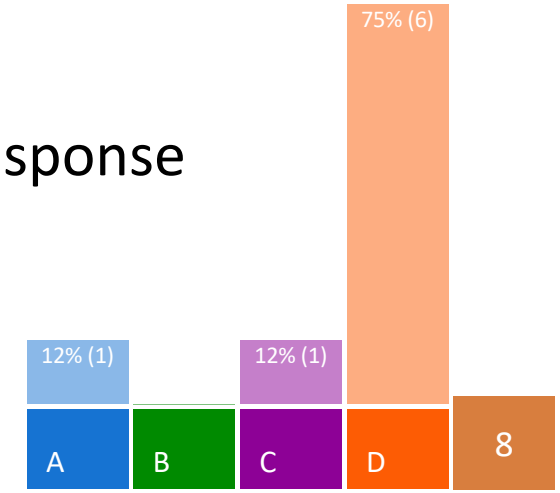
Vote online at: http://TWP.participoll.com



Q3. If you answered “NO” to Q2, which of the following best summarizes why you have not done this type of research?

A. Not relevant to my research interests
B. This type of research rarely leads to publications
C. This type of research is poorly funded
D. Too difficult to access / develop partnerships with emergency response organizations

Vote online at: http://TWP.participoll.com



The joys of collaborative field research during a crisis / emergency!

Pre-deployment training for WHO Social Science Interventions Network (SocialNET), 2017
Photo credit: WHO

Consortium for Resilient Gulf Communities (CRGC) team visiting Plaquemines Medical Center in Port Sulphur, LA , 2017. CRGC improves understanding / responses to oil spills & similar disasters.
Photo credit: Hannah Williams & Monica Martin

Breakout session 1: Panel 1

Research Boundary Spanning:

Understanding Crisis Communication Collaborations across Government, Academic, Non-profit, and International Organizations

Moderator:

Amisha Mehta, PhD (QUT Business School)

Presenters:

Elizabeth L. Petrun Sayers, PhD (RAND Corporation),
Laura E. Pechta, PhD (CDC)
Brooke Liu, PhD (START University of Maryland)
Ben Duncan, (Consultant to WHO Health Emergencies Programme and The Warning Project)

Send us questions online at:

http://TWP.participoll.com