Bana calls for action on budget

by Mike Rhodes and Don Wittekind FUTURE STAFF WRITERS

Approximately 80 members of the UCF marching band converged on the third floor lobby of the administration building where members of the University Budget Committee were meeting Wednesday, demanding action from administrators after the band's funds, which have been in question for some time now, unexpectedly dried up.

Vice President in Charge of Business Affairs, Phil Goree, confronted the group in an attempt to resolve the situation, but admitted that not much can be done until university president Trevor Colbourn returns from out of town.

Originally, band director Jerry Gardner's budget request for $13,900 was approved by Student Government which had funded the marching band program since its inception four years ago.

With the advent of the athletic fee, however, an agreement was reached between Colbourn, Student Body President John Sowinski, and Goree, that the marching band would be funded through athletics and not through Activity and Service Fee monies which Student Government administers.

On June 14, marching band director Jerry Gardner met with Sowinski and

by Ted Young FUTIJRE STAFF WRITER

After two weeks of the fall semester the parking situation at UCF has become a major problem. Illegal parking is rampant and tickets litter car windows. In fact, according to UCF police chief Ron Seacrist, this is the worst the parking situation has been in the history of the university.

No students interviewed are satisfied with the situation and the complaints have merit. "Its terrible," said Christopher Coombs, "I get here at 9 a.m. and still can't find a parking spot, and I don't feel like walking three miles."

In addition, many students wonder what is being done about the new parking lot behind the portables. Mark Smith, a student, said, "the university, in their infinite wisdom, waits until the beginning of the semester to close down one of the main parking lots when they have the largest enrollment to date."

Even the funds that are procured from the parking tickets are complained about. One student said, "I've gotten two tickets already and I don't feel like funding the Police Christmas Dance."

What is to be done? "A great deal," said Seacrist, "There are problems with the SEE PARKING PAGE 6

government charters

by Robert Sullivan FUTURE STAFF WRITER

Student Body President John Sowinski announced Tuesday that he has suspended the three UCF area campuses' charters for an indefinite period of time.

The announcement came at the 16th Student Senate's first meeting of the Fall semester. Only one representative was present at the meeting from any of the area campuses, Senator Rob Rotter from the South Orlando campus.

Sowinski said the main reason that he suspended the charters was because the chairmen responsible for the administration of student government at area campuses were "paid power brokers, answerable to none." Sowinski said there were also discrepencies and inconsistencies in the charters in relation to the Student Government statutes, such as grade point average and senate representation. But Rotter, chairman at SOC as well as senator, double standard," and said that the GPA and student representation issues were already taken care of by the Senate and Sowinski.

The GPA requirement was Sowinski's first executive order as president. As to representation, Rotter said that aspect would be taken care of by Senate bill 16.76, which split the powers of Chairman into executive and legislative.

Another reason Sowinski cited for suspending the charters was that he found no deposits coming from the copying machines at both South Orlando and Brevard campuses. The deposits from the machines at Brevard, Sowinski said, were deposited into a Sun Bank account.

Rotter said that SOC is now making deposits and has been to SG for quite some time.

Sowinski also charged that the area chairmen ordered labor without requisition forms and Student Government was having to make "after the fact reimbursments."

Rotter says that Ash Myers recently put out a memo stating that any person in SG without prior Unlike last year when there were 12 candidates that went uncontested and six write in candidates, the race for the 17th Student Senate will be much different this year, says Student Body Vice President Tim Albrecht.

One major difference Albrecht sees is that he is expecting high voter turnout. He says that the senators must be, "the voice of the students."

Another difference is that last year there were also nine disqualifications because prospective candidates did not fill out their campaign expense statements on time. But this year Albrecht is warning the candidates in advance and repeating again and again that these statements must be on time.

There is one change in the election statutes this year. The Student Senate has split up the area cam-

PAC plans for coming year

The Program and Activities Council, better honestly take claim to reaching almost every UCF student

PAC works under a structure that is designed for flexibility and change. Unlike the old "Village Center Board," which set up it's entire schedule ahead of time, and existed only to carry out the preset program, PAC is open to new people and ideas throughout the year.

PAC is made up of ten committees, each under the leadership of a student director. Each committee has projects assigned to it, and is responsible for planning, organizing, and carrying out those rent releases more geared to entertainment.

The second committee, Popular Entertainment, needed for these programs. brings the student body concerts, dances, parties, complished and what they hope to accomplish in comedians, etc.

Orientation, or the "O-Team" is technically known as "PAC," is one organization that can responsible for support information and campus involvement. Most of us however, remember them as the people who have molded confused high school students into college freshmen.

> Homecoming is very simply responsible for homecoming week activities. Cultural Events sponsors music, arts, dance and theater. Recreation plans trips, games, outings and special events. Speakers brings debates on current issues and events. Education/Leisure Staff organises leisure classes, the College Bowl, workshops, and seminars.

The two less obvious committees are Public Relaprojects. The first committee is Cinema. Sowinski said that the SG is one government and not four individual ones. He went on to say that the charter is subject to the main constitution. He saidthe suspension will be a "cool off period," that will be in effect until an investigation is made into the legality of the present charters.

In the meantime Sowinski plans to appoint someone to a cabinet level position to coordinate and direct area campus student government as well as individual directors for each campus. Sowinski said that these appointments will be subject to senate approval.

Auditors analyze operations

by Donald Wittekind FUTURE STAFF WRITER

Internal Auditing is a seldom noticed, but an extremely active department in the university's management system.

By definition, the department is an independent appraisal activity which reviews operations as a service to the university. In simpler terms, Internal Auditing examines all sections of the university on a preset schedule and gives suggestions on how to improve any problems that are uncovered. Each section is audited at least once every three years, and those with a large input and output of money such as Finance and Accounting, the bookstore, and athletics are audited on an annual basis.

At the beginning of each year, a three year audit schedule is planned. The schedule is followed as closely as possible, but since a

This past summer a new group of students was hired as student patrols to help with enforcement of parking policies. Said Turhan Sinclair, one of the new patrollers, "I feel the parking spaces are adequate, only people are not so eager to walk long distances to their classrooms so they park anywhere close. standard audit can last from 1 to 10 weeks, the department usually runs slightly behind the initial schedule. At the end of the year, the sections that were planned for audit but for some reason missed, are noted and eventually added into the new three year schedule that will be set the following year. This system allows the auditors a long range plan with the versatility of yearly updates.

An audit begins with a letter to the head of the department informing of the planned audit. This initial contact is followed by a series of more letters, and the addition of meetings, finally leading into the audit itself. When the audit is complete, a full report is sent to the department, as well as the president of the university. All suggestions made by the auditor must be answered in some way, meaning that if the audited department makes a change, it must inform the auditor, and if it decides not to make adjustments, than a report explaining the departments reasoning must be submitted.

When asked about where the ticket fine money goes, Seacrist said "parking ticket fines are used for two things: one, financial aid; and two, administration of the parking programs. All moving violations given by university police officers are State citations."

What should you do if you get a ticket? Basically, you should pay it within three days or you are charged a $2.00 late fee. But if you feel you have been slighted you can appeal the ticket to the Traffic Appeals Committee. Dr. Scot Leftwich, Chairman of the Traffic Appeals Committee said that "each case is looked at individually in relation to all the circumstances that are involved" but, he advised "don't make the same mistake twice."

FURNITURE RENTAL

What's so smart about renting furniture?

More and more students are discovering the smart alternative to hand-me-down furniture and thrift shop specials: furniture rental. According to Jess Larson of Certified Furniture Rental, 1320 E. Hwy. 436 Altamonte Springs, students are good candidates for renting furniture. Here are the reasons why:

You save the cost of moving - as well as the hassle. Imagine: a truck drives up, the furniture is unloaded, and all you do is point.

You establish credit. Smart students know the value of this as they plan for the future.

You don't waste time scouring the thrift shops, wondering if you can live with that musty smell. Rental furniture is all quality furniture in showroom condition.

You don't worry about where to store your furniture for the summer. Come springtime, you make one phone call, and the furniture is picked-up free of charge.

And, furniture rental fits a student's budget. Certified offers three rooms of quality furniture for as little as $39.95 a month. Split that with a roommate or two, and the cost is probably less than you'll spend on pizza and beer.

Yes, furniture rental is the smart alternative. Maybe you should check it out.

Students find parking worst

by Jim Easterling FUTURE STAFF WRITER

The biggest complaint that UCF students have is the lack of parking spaces, a Future poll shows. After the first week of classes thirty students were asked, "what are three complaints that you have about UCF&" All but one of the students that had a complaint mentioned parking as a problem.

The second biggest complaint mentioned was having to wait in long lines at registration and add/drop.

Tied for third are gripes about paying an athletic fee and eating campus food. "The only decent place to eat is in the UCF Dining room. We really need quality fast food on campus," said senior Jim Brim.

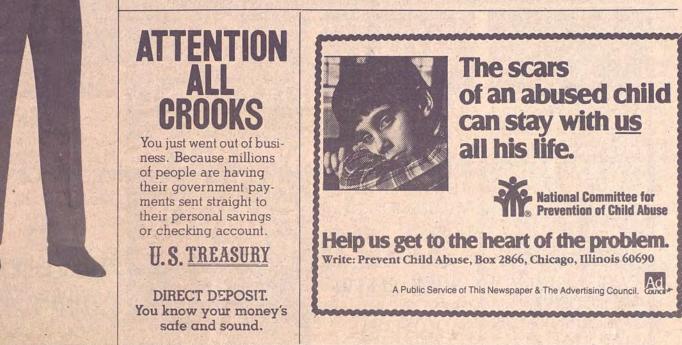

Three of the students saw no problems whatsoever, Junior Danny Bryan said, "Compared to FSU I have no complaints;

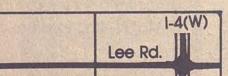

these lines are nothing."

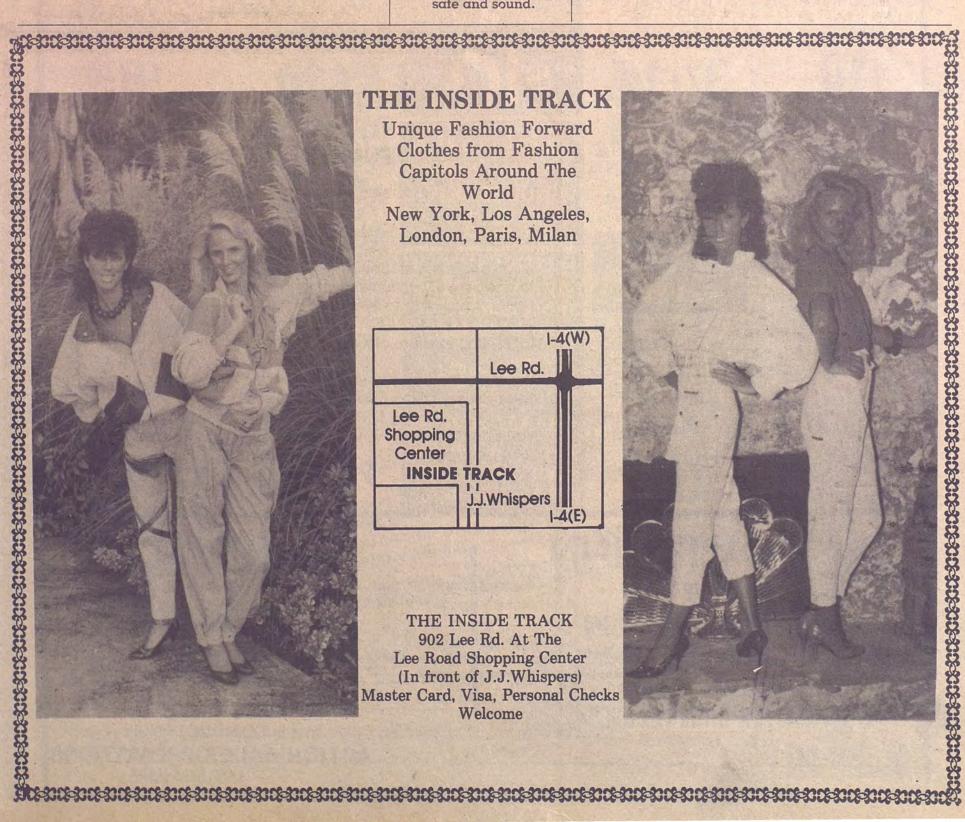

Some students thought the campus was too crowded. Others had peeves about teacher quality, bicycle parking, the distance to the portables, inadequate library space, and the lack of a student union.

One student said, "I can't believe we don't have a place to hang out and socialize. Many schools much smaller than ours have a student union."

Here are the percentage results of the complaints: lack of parking spaces, 30 percent; long registration and add-drop lines, 21 percent; paying the athletic fee, 15 percent; poor food quality, 15 percent; campus too crowded, 9 percent; no student union, 4 percent; lack of bicycle parking spaces, 2 percent; poor teacher quality, 2 percent; inadequate library space, 1 percent; and distance to portables, 1 percent.

Funding holds up building new dorms

by Jennifer Machtel FUTURE STAFF WRITER

The university is currently looking at several options to fill the need for additional student housing.

The university has filed a loan request with the federal government to construct one residence hall. Last year the request was turned down because UCF had recently received money to build Brevard. Orange and Seminole halls. The housing department is waiting for an answer. If the built near the newer dorms to complete that area.

Another option may be private investors. The Housing Feasibility Study Committee, which consists of students and administrators, has recommended to President Colbourn that the use of private funding is needed. In this case the dorm would be built on the north-west end of campus near Lake Claire.

The cost of building one resident hall capable of housing 170 students is over $2 million. The recent construction of Brevard, Orange, loan is approved the dorm will be Seminole and the commons building cost $4.8 million.

> A final proposal is to purchase the Haystacks apartments on Alafaya Trail. A study on this proposal is under way but no decision is expected to be made in the near future. One problem would be the initial funding to purchase the apartments. After that there is the problem of furnishing the apartments and hiring a staff.

> According to Chris McCray director of housing, "the housing department is self-supporting and receives no state funding. All of the money comes from student rent."

If the apartments were purchased they would be rented as university housing but wouldn't be as resident hall oriented as on campus dorms. Resident assistants and staff would be available to the students.

Last year the housing office turned away over 700 students, and this year the figure would have been higher but the office stopped accepting applications.

No definite plans can be made concerning housing at this point. McCray said, "the additional housing is greatly needed and soon."

Renovation gives library

by Jennifer Machtel FUTURE STAFF WRITER

The UCF library is set for another 10 years and plans are being made to utilize the space that the recent renovation created.

According to Anne Marie Allison library director, "The renovation has not actually created extra space. It has brought the library to the standard that it should be at." The standard includes ideals for the square footage per faculty member and per student. The shelving in the library was too tight and there generally wasn't enough space according to Allison.

Allison plans to use the open area on the first floor to exhibit art work done by faculty and students. Also there are now group study rooms available to students. The rooms make it easier for classmates to study together without disturbing others.

Three rooms are being used as temporary classrooms. Once the new engineering building is completed the rooms will be converted to faculty study rooms.

The problem of seating will soon be solved. There are many tables and carrols around the library that do not have chairs. Five hundred chairs are on order and should be arriving soon.

The library receives most of it's funding through the state legislature. Last year the amount UCF received was $560 thousand compared to $800 thousand this year. Allison said, "I am very optimistic about purchasing books and materials for the library." The state funding was minimal last year but has improved this year. In addition to state funding the library receives various gifts and donations from the public.

"Libraries have to plan expansion for five to ten years," said Allison. "It isn't like moving a piece of furniture in your house, it is costly and time consuming to move and renovate the library.' Hopefully she added, the library will be set for another ten years.

Guest commentary

Back in January when I realized I was going to graduate from the community college in my home town I began to think of my next two years. What I needed in a school was quality education, solitude and security, due to the fact that my parents thought it best I should live on campus. (Besides you can't argue with the people who hold the purse strings to your education.)

After narrowing down my choices I finally came up with UCF. Rumor had it that this institution was highly acclaimed in my chosen field of study, Business Administration. A few months after I made the preliminary steps to get admitted to UCF I began to wonder about the choice I had made. There were many mitigating factors affecting my choice.

After having submitted the required forms, transcripts and fees, on two separate occassions, I still received letters telling me the school had yet to receive certain important items I knew I had sent. The last straw came when I was notified the school still had not received my Pell Grant paper work. This came as quite a shock, since I knew I had sent them in Febuary, when I filed my-tax return.

Well this I just chalked up to experience. Maybe the school had a massive inflow of students. From here on in I sent everything certified mail, strangly enough, it got here.

My next experience came at registration, it was like nothing I had ever seen before, at first it appears to be rather disorganized but once you get in there it becomes rather simple and efficient. I only had one slight problem, the man who I assume was in charge at the door was rather unfriendly, leaning more towards the nasty side. He made me feel as though I should be honored to get through the doors to register.

The whole day I met only two kind souls, and they were both in the financial aid office. I don't know who the young lady is who rescued me from the never ending line at financial aid, but she was very nice

Attitude adjustment

Often, as students, we get caught up in the day to day trivialities that parasitically trouble our lives, and we tend to forget the goals which we have set for ourselves.

The trivial problems are self-evident. These little distractions hit a student in the face as he drives through a parking lot hoping to chance upon a space. Long lines, lack of funds for whatever reason, abuse of powers, all contribute to the overall air of indifference at this university. No one is immune to the effects of this. Nor can anyone say in good faith that they have not contributed to UCF's attitude problems.

Orlando Stadium has yet to be mobbed with supporters for the Fighting Knights. Our own gymnasium was never filled to capacity. We forget that the players are also students under the same pressures, paying the same fees, making the same sacrifices as we do. But instead of comeradery, we offer indifference. It has been said that attitude determines altitude, and while that may be an over-simplified cliche, it exemplifies this university's real problem. The University of Central Florida can never be the institution that everyone wants it to be until each individual takes positive steps towards making things more bearable.

No individual can affect a change by himself. But an army of people trotting around babbling pleasantly could be a step in the right direction.

Strangly enough, this university has an alluring charm in itself. A charm that most of our comrades living the crazed life of a commuter may never know. By day the campus is steamy and rushed. But after hours cool air and darkness cover the area and by early morning the pastorale is unrivaled.

So just as there exists both

The Future AUGUST 31, 1984

The first two weeks of school are always frustrating. Complaints reverberate off the reflecting pond and throughout campus, seeming to shake the very balsa wood portable building walls.

Often these complaints are followed by a response like, "That's college for you. They try to make things difficult."

That's not true, I thought. They don't make things tough purposely. This isn't the Marine Corps. School is difficult enough anyway.

I was wrong. Welcome to Camp UCF, fellow maggots.

The first evidence that UCF is putting the screws to students is the merciful way it treats the washouts. Students who wish to simply drop classes during add/drop can skip the interminable lines in favor of a little drive-in window around back where they conveniently dispatch of their classes.

Students who prove their willingness to stick it out by foolishly paying for classes before the deadline are haunted by the school's master computer which routinely searches its memory and cancels at least one of their classes.

They are forced to suffer add-drop and/or wait until 1986 for a refund.

The newly-renovated library is magnificent but the grandeur doesn't come free. The library people mischievously changed the program of the computer card-catalogue system and threw away the instructions just for fun.

It's harder to find a book there than it is to find a photographer who doesn't have nude photographs of Vanessa Williams.

One expects long lines at the bookstore during the first couple weeks, but why are there such lengthy lines in the snack bars?

Obviously the school employs people off the street to stand in various lines to make students think that the waiting will never end. They must get paid by the hour because they seem content to stand in long, and understanding, it really made my day.

Then there was Barry Davidson. Even though he could not do very much for me he was kind, and he treated me as though he was glad I was here. From there on in, UCF began to look a lot more appealing.

After speending a week here in classes and in the dorms I have come to the conclusion that this institution may be all right after all. The educational standards of most of my instructors appear to be very high. It was a relief to know that they had never heard of grading on a curve. Dormitory life is good, I've gotten the security and solitude I was looking for.

Besides, you can't beat this school for services it has to offer to it's students, educationally as well as recreationally. I guess when it comes right down to it, I made the right choice. Student Government elections turnouts are barely topping ten percent. Yet we continue to complain about how our money is spent.

Is the UCF student body lowering itself to the basest levels of hypocrisy? a harsh and soft side to UCF's physical makeup, so there is to its attitudes. But it is only the harsh side which we talk about.

We hardly appreciate why this institution exists. Although it does not always appear to serve us, it still exists for us.

by whipping out a more expensive new edition of the book which is the same as the old edition except the page numbers are all changed.

But cheer up. By now the horror of getting classes is behind everyone and most people have gotten a card from the public library where they have an archaic but simple cardcatalogue system and more books. The snack bars aren't worth eating at anyway.

It's all downhill from here.

Editor:

Welcome back to UCF. After reading the "new" Future from cover to cover and admiring the new graphics I was disappionted to find the content basically the same. As a fifth year senior I have read more than my fair share of Future articles and one irritating fact remains consistent. The continual bad-mouthing of fthe football team.

I'm tired of it!

It is unfortunate that the squad lost 12 players to academic difficulties. However I am also sure that there were more than 12 regular students who flunked out and I don't see their names in print for everyone to read and hold up to ridicule.

As fir the gridiron team's "Goliath" schedule, better they should end with a lesser record against solid competition that they can learn from than to go undefeated against a bunch of panty-waist teams.

Especially annoying was Creig Ewing's article. It is a disgrace that the athletic department has a large deficit, however that is caused by poor management of the department and not the football team alone.

If anyone out there thinks UCF football is a joke I'd like to challenge tham to endure the long hours, 100 degree plus on field tempatures, and physical torture of two-a-day practices in full pads followed by one week of arduous practice and brutal competition.

Maybe if we all showed a little more interest and a lot more support it would do more than the negative articles and cheap shots now aimed at the program

Roaches serve several purposes

by Vicki White FUTURE STAFF WRITER

Cockroaches aren't exactly the stuff dreams are made of, but UCF professor Dr. Timothy O'Keefe and former students Michele Simos and Dave Mitchell have come up with plenty of other uses for them in their book, 99 Uses For a Dead Cockroach.

he Future

Simos is credited by O'Keefe with originating the idea, although both of them feel that Mitchell, the book's illustrator, deserves a lot of credit for putting their words into pictures and adding a few ideas of his own. Originally, the title of the book was to be 101 Uses For a Dead Cockroach, but the title was changed by the publisher.

"Basically, it started out as a quick way of making some money," Simos explains. "I got the idea from listening to all the goofy songs that people make up on the radio and all of those books, such as 101 Uses For a Dead Cat."

She adds that "various roach experiences" also had a hand in her coming up with the book. "I'm one of those people who, if there's a bug in the room, always seems to find it," she says. "I got some hot cocoa out of one of those machines at work and when I took a drink out of it, I felt something funny in my mouth. It was a roach."

Both Simos and O'Keefe say that unlike cats, roaches are the sort of creatures that everyone hates. O'Keefe adds that they are making a strong social statement with the book-cockroaches should be recycled. "Cockroaches are Florida's greatest natural resource, but no one really knows what to do with them," he explains, "so we came up with a list of some possible uses.'

Mitchell worked as The Future's cartoonist before graduating in December 1981. He found out Driving down South Orange Blossom Trail on Saturday night. Alone. Not going anywhere in particular. Park Avenue was dead, and I'm not up to facing the Rosie's crowd tonight. Maybe I'll try some of the hotel lounges on International Drive. I'm in a sort of touristy mood anyway.

Waiting at the light near the interstate, I see several young black women standing under the streetlight. They are studiously nonchalant. "Bad Girls" comes on the radio. I have to smile. Seeing my amusement, one of the girls calls out, "Hey,

A question about the origin of croissants over breakfast one morning launched author Charles Panati into his latest book, Browser's Book of Beginnings.

Panati's book is loaded with facts and figures on almost anything you would ever want to know about almost everything. His style is basic, down to earth. There is no dwelling on minutiae or streams of words that mean nothing to anyone but an expert in the field.

The book is rather sparsely interested with line drawings, although even these are fascinating at times. One 19th century diagram traces evolution from protozoans through fish, lizards, alligators to camels, rabbits, and finally man.

2 baby. Wanna go to a party" I turn red and lurch forward as the light changes. My car stalls. They all laugh.

Several blocks down, I come upon "Off the Wall." I remember the building as the former location of the "Golden Rock", a fifties joint. The parking lot is packed. I make a U-turn and swing back towards the place. As luck would have it, someone is pulling out just as I come in. I quickly slip into his spot. The driver of a Toyota glares at me as he continues circling.

At the door, a young couple is having a heated argument. It seems he can't get in because of his faded jeans. He wants to go to ABC. She wants him to go home and change. She shrieks, "O.K. fine! Go to ABC! I'm staying here. And you know I can get • my own ride home!" He cringes.

Inside the doorman is checking everyone's IDs and informing them of the dress code. "No faded jeans, no sleeveless or collarless shirts, and no hats." he says. A thirtyish women throws her hand

Oh.

There are two doors off the lobby. One says "Off the Wall, European Video Disco," the other says "The Padded Cell, Mellow Disco." I try the video disco first.

The decor of the disco immediately strike, as a combination of a funhouse and a toy store. A giant stuffed gorilla sits in a bathtub next to the dance floor. To the left of the gorilla is a semi-circular bar with real saddles for stools. Overhead is a card table upside-down on the ceiling. Attached to the table are several ashtrays complete with cigarette butts, beer cans, four or five poker hands, one set of car keys, and what appears to be the deed to a house.

Some of the facts in the book are rather wellknown, such as the big bang theory of the universe, but there are a few surprises inside, such as the cradle of Western civilization being listed as Ireland, A.D. 675, or the fact that welfare was a common thing as far back as 2100 B.C. In Egypt the government provided welfare in the form of food to families of farmers during droughts and crop failure.

Another interesting fact concerns the origin of ice cream. Normally, one would associate ice cream with cows, and cows with someplace like Europe or the United States. Not so; ice cream originated in China around 2000 B.C. and was a soft rice paste mixed with milk and frozen.

Besides the facts, Panati includes little bits of personal information throughout the book. For instance, he notes that one of the first pineapples in France was offered to King Louis XIV, who "snat

Audience enjoys James Taylor

by Richard Truett FUTURE STAFF WRITER

"I've seen fire and I've seen rain. I seen sunny days that I thought would never end. I've seen lonely times when I could not find a friend, but I always thought that I would see you one more time again." — James Taylor, 1970

Once, in an adolescent fit of frustration, I sent those words (affixed with the proper quotation marks and credit) to a girl I had romantic designs on. It was those words that broke a series of comic blunders of mine and patched up a stormy relationship, albeit briefly. It is for that reason James Taylor is endeared to me. In a concert Sunday night at the Orange County Civic Center, James Taylor left the large enthusiastic crowd happy and disappointed. Happy because, to see James Taylor is a rare experience: he does not tour that much. Disappointed because, inexplicably, he did not perform many of his biggest hits. Taylor did not perform "You've Got A Friend," a number one smash; he did not perform "Handyman," "Her Town, Too," and "Shower The People."

Taylor's shy and introspective personality was evident from early on. After about the third song, he said "Hi," three more songs and he said "Gee thanks," in response to the massive applause he received after each number.

Taylor has assembled a tight band, featuring the legendary Leland Sklar on bass. Sklar, who looks to be about forty and most likely has never shaved in his life, looked like the Ayatollah. Taylor joked that Sklar was about to pass a fur ball. The audience howled. Taylor could do no wrong.

Randy Newman, who hit the top ten with the controversial song "Short People," opened the show. If any white man can sing the blues it is Newman. He is also an accomplished songwriter who has written hits for others, such as Three Dog Night's ched the yet unpeeled fruit from the gardener's hand and bit vigorously into it, severely lacerating his royal lips on the pineapple's prickly eyes. Under royal fiat, the cultivation of pineapples in France came to an abrupt halt and did not resume until Louis's successor ascended the throne."

Panati writes in a manner that entertains as well as informs the reader. In describing bagpipes, which originated in Asia in the first century A.D., he writes, "The first bagpipes were, however, strange instruments. The bag was the entire hide of a sheep or goat, with the chanter, the pipe with finger holes, fitted into a wooden plug in the animal's neck. The drones emerged from other plugs in the forelegs. In overall appearance, the finished product was not at all dissimilar to the animal whose body was the bag."

The book is arranged in the order of things occurring in the world. For instance, the first chapter is called "Creation: From Stars to Shining Sea." From there, Panati covers such diverse subjects as "Sea Life: Sponges to Good friends keep you going when all you want to do is stop.

Sharks," "Human Life: Primates to Pundits," "Beverages: Tea to Tab," and "Music: Renaissance to Rock."

The book is a real treasure trove for people who collect facts, and could become a bible for those who are addicted to Trivial Pursuit. Instead of having a bibliography section at the end of the book, Panati gives his references and then tells a little about each one, sort of a mini-review. This makes the book useful for people who may use the book as a research resource.

Gone from this album is the funky keyboard antics of the past. In its place is a harder rocking sound. Not mindless guitar cranking, mind you, but something to let the listener know that Elton is 'in tune" with current music trends.

"Restless" has been getting pretty heavy airplay and it is indicative of the sound of the album. An astute radio listener will notice that Elton has even gotten back on the playlist of WDIZ. After four solid listenings, the album became more likeable; there is enough variety in vocal styles to keep the 10 songs distinct, something many new albums lack these days.

The ultimate test though, is this: when one is sitting at a stop light with the convertible top down, or T-Tops removed, (whatever the case may be) would one be embarrassed to have Breaking Hearts blasting from the radio? The answer is no. One could do much worse by listening to, say, Twisted Sister, or Ratt.

Scandal/Warrior Columbia Records

Scandal could be a very powerful force in the music biz if they ever chance upon the right ingredients for constructing top-notch songs. They have Nigel Olsson is in fine form, there is one thing out the talent: Patty Smyth's booming vocals just of their control: the times have changed. A new might be the best in the business. Case in point:

The only thing that saves the song from being The new album, Breaking Hearts is not a happy laughable is Smyth's uncompromising vocal first rate stuff.

Pat Benatar must be a little worried; Smyth is not only better looking but can sing circles around Benatar. Smyth has even encroached on Benatar's home turf of singing "tough girl" type songs.

Scandal, after watching a single that was probably the best release of last year, "Goodbye To You," run out of steam in the mid-50s on the Hot 100, is in the process of carving out a niche for itself in the rock world. Scandal is somewhere between Huey Lewis and the News and The Cars. They are not a hard rock band and they do not try to be. The only thing holding them back now is good material.

The album Warrior features 10 tunes that expound upon the various phases relationships go through, unrequited love, lust, and so on-not exactly trailblazing material. There is a cover of a Journey tune, "Only The Young," that is treated rather nicely. The hit single "The Warrior" was cowritten by Nick Gilder, who had a number-one hit called "Hot Child In The City." Scandal enlisted Mike Chapman to produce the album. Chapman, who produced Blondie's biggest hits cleaned up the Scandal sound a bit.

ferent ideas around between us, and I gave them (O'Keefe and Simos) a free hand in interpreting their ideas for me," he added. Mitchell's drawings are simple, yet effective in getting the idea across. Not only that, but he said that it was a very inexpensive book to draw.

All three are surprised at the way the book has taken off. It has already sold out its first printing. So far, they have gone on a publicity tour for Burdines, one of the stores that carries the book. "I was surprised they decided to sell it, because it's really hard to get a book placed with Burdines, but their book buyer just loved it," O'Keefe said.

On the Burdines tour, they visited such exotic locales as Miami, Orlando, and the Tampa-St. Petersburg area. This was a real treat for Mitchell, who had never flown in a jet before. At each stop, he did "roachicatures" of all the people who bought a book, as well as all Burdines employees.

In addition to zipping around the state for Burdines, they also appeared in three TV shows in the Orlando area-The Carole Nelson Show, Spectrum, and PM Magazine. They also put in some appearances on radio talk shows in Tampa and St.

Petersburg. "It's really kind of hard to imagine yourself on TV," she said. that there was anything about roaches to talk about for an hour, but we did it," O'Keefe remarked.

Have they been entertaining any thoughts about going nationwide with the book? "We have one national distributor already," said O'Keefe. "We had sent it to 13 publishers, but they all turned it down because they felt that it was too regional."

Simos would also like to see it go national, but she also says that they should get at least one or two national distributors lined up before they do anything else. "It's kind of a catch-22 situation, though," she explains. "We don't want to go on the Phil Donahue Show or something and not have any copies of the book on hand, but if we don't do a lot of publicity, then we don't sell the books and the distributors won't be interested in picking the book up."

At any rate, all this notoriety hasn't altered their lives dramatically. Simos said that she would like to write and perhaps illustrate another book. "I keep joking to my friends that my next book will be for awhile, sort of like the critters that it is based called The Story of Lovebugs," she laughs, "but actually I would like to do something a bit more serious.'

At any rate, she admits it is nice to be a celebrity of sorts. "It's neat to be able to come to work and say, 'Well, I was on TV last night,' or to even see

O'Keefe looks at it from another point of view. "While we were working on the book, I didn't want to talk about it too much. When people asked me what I was working on, I just told them that it was kind of hard to describe," he said, "so some people thought that I was working on a porno book. Now they know."

Mitchell says that all the attention is fun after working in obscurity. An employee of Deterline in Kissimmee by day, he freelances as a cartoonist and hopes to gain some exposure from the book. "It's hard for a cartoonist just starting out," he said, "so this sort of exposure is important."

As a result of the book, he says that he has gotten some work from LaFray-Young, the book's publishers. He is also in the process of redrawing his "Norman The Armadillo" strip that appeared in The Future and adding a few more episodes to it as well to submit it to a syndicate.

While no one expects to get rich, Simos, Mitchell, and O'Keefe all expect that the book will be around

On the final page of the book is a monument called Mt. Roachmore with a few mushroom clouds in the background, a tribute to the roach's capacity to survive.

Woody Allen mixes with fans at pub

by Richard Truett FUTURE STAFF WRITER

Invariably I will run into someone who will inquire as to what I did over the summer. Invariably I will answer that I went to New York and met my hero, Woody Allen.

I do not know of anyone that does not admire some screen or music star. I picked the unlikely persona of Woody Allen, probably because of my own Jewish, New York roots. Whatever the reason, my devotion to Allen can best be described as canine.

I have read his books at least 300 times, sat through his movies like a mindless veggie digesting every bit of dialogue, listened to his albums so often that I can almost memorize the words. Woody Allen is an absolute genius with the English language. He does the equivalent of gymnastics with words. What would a person say in that moment that they are face to face with the person they admire most in the world? How would a person act? It is a rare experience.

Every Monday night Allen plays his clarinet at a place called Michael's Pub, located in Manhattan. After coercing my sister into taking me there (coerced, because I ended up* springing for the cab fare and dinner), we took a place in a crowd of people watching Allen eat dinner between one of his three sets. I thought it amazing that a man of his status would make himself so visible, so accessible.

My sister Stacey, who long ago mastered the technique of being able to get a good table in a resturaunt, got us seated three tables away from Allen. I was surprised to see that he looks exactly in real life as he does in the movies. Certain interlopers approached his table intermittently and tant.

After long thought and careful consideration, I decided to ask for his autograph. I put on my meekest face and approached his table and in the most polite voice I could muster, I asked. Woody (we're on a first name basis now) acquiesced graciously.

I wanted to say that I had read his books and seen his movies and listen-

Laws give both landlords and tenants obligations

by Patty McKown SPECIAL TO THE FUTURE

Legal Lines is a column devoted to answering any questions that students may have about their legal rights. This week's column deals with the obligations that tenants and landlords have toward each other.

Landlords are required by law to provide certain services for their tenants. At the same time, tenants are also required to fulfill certain obligations as well. Listed below are some of the qusetions that a person may have concerning their rights:

1) What do I do if the ceiling falls in or the toilet breaks in my apartment?

A landlord is required to comply with all of the requirements of building, housing, and health codes during tenancy. In the absence of these codes, a landlord is obligated to maintain roofs, windows, screens, doors, floors, steps, porches, exterior walls, foundation, and all other structural components in good repair and capable of resisting normal forces and loads.

In addition, they are required to maintain the plumbing in reasonable working condition.

2) I've got bugs running all over the house I am renting? Who's responsibility is it to get rid of them?

That depends. The landlord of a dwelling unit, other than a singlefamily home or a duplex, unless provided for in writing, shall make provision for the extermination of pests.

3) The pipes are messed up in my apartment so I can't get any running water. What do I do?

him back and pours tequila and Triple Sec down his throat. He gags. His friends cheer. So that's an upside-down margarita!

The dance floor is packed. Two small motorcycles on poles shine their head lights onto the mirror ball. Most of the crowd is young and white. Most of the music is r&b and disco. There is a game room, pool table, and several exercycles(&!) in a separate area to the side of the disco.

I spot a couple of friends sitting in what appears to be a giant Tweety-Bird cage, complete with perch. They tell me that Off the Wall is just the place to go now. "Man, we score every time we come down here!" My other friend rolls his eyes and holds up one finger.

I saunter off and buy a Heineken from a girl selling them out of an iced-down wheelbarrow. "On busy nights it's faster for the customers this way," she explains. Drink prices are about the same as the other discos in town.

Over at the kamikaze chair (same priniciple as the margarita chair) the waitress tells me that the DJ is Bobby Burrows, formerly of "Illusions" and that the VJ is Debi Dee, formerly of "J.J. Whispers." I begin to question the presence of videos-there is not a TV in sight. Just then a large screen descends over the dance floor and "Candy Man" by the Mary Jane Girls pops up, blending seamlessly out of "Borderline" by Madonna.

The light show is hot, with a wild helicopter light the rear end of a small plane.

On the other side of the building, in the "Padded Cell," Rick "Ricko" Frazier is on a small stage behind the bar. I sit through several songs as he plays mostly folk and jazz tunes. The crowd is wildly enthusiastic. They call out their favorite artists and songs. Ricko knows all the songs. They send him drinks.

In the middle of the room is a toucan in a large cage. The sign on the cage says "K-9 Attack Bird." A totally restored, cherry red, 1959 Thunderbird rests between the bar and a TV room. In the backseat is the couple I saw outside. He has on dress pants. She's totally wasted.

In the TV room are several couches facing a widescreen projection TV. Nobody is watching the program. Hearing screams I turn back into the Padded Cell. Ricko has 10-15 customers literally dancing on the bar as he romps through Jimmy Buffett's "Why Don't We Get Drunk and Screw?" In between Ricko's sets a DJ plays a blend of old Motown, current pop, and slow dance classics.

The Padded Cell seems to attract the couples, the older customers, and the non-disco people who need a place to retreat to once they've chosen their prey for the night.

So I leave "Off the Wall" after three hours, six drinks, four dances, two minutes on an exercycle, $15, and one phone number. The doorman (a smil-

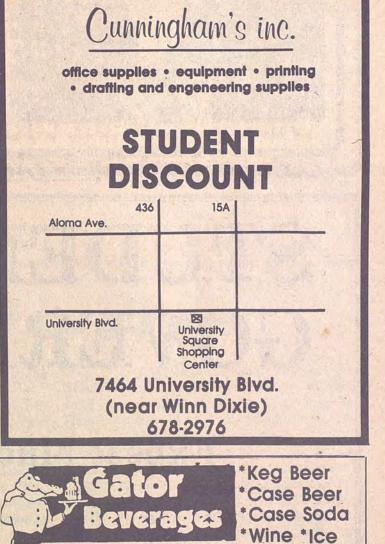

Only as I drive out do I see the plane crashed into the side of the building. Having already been inside it doesn't faze me a bit. Three blocks down from Off the Wall I think to myself, "So there is a good time still to had on S.O.B.T, and it doesn't even involve lap dancing or mini-movies." I approach the corner with the streetlight. The girls are still there. They wave. I slouch. The car doesn't stall.

UF & UCF tangle in scrimmage

by Scott Gunnerson FUTURE STAFF WRITER

The University of Florida and the University of Central Florida squared off in women's volleyball in an interstate preseason scrimmage in the UCF gym last Saturday. Both teams are new to Division I this season, but could give any established program problems.

The University of Florida is starting a women's volleyball team after over five years without one. Florida head coach, Marlyn McReavy, is one of the finest vollyball coaches in the country and is under final consideration for the job of Women's Olympic Volleyball Coach in 1988, in Seoul.

The Florida volleyball team has 12 full scholarships and a high powered to get back in shape.

The injury occured last season in a game against Tampa. Santiago, who started 12 game and finished 9, felt something in his arm pop on the last pitch to end an inning. The next inning Santiago, UCF down 0-1 on an unearned run, went right back out on Santiago's recovery is estimated at the mound with the idea that he had being between six and twelve weeks no major problems. Unfortunatly he depending on how hard he will work did have problems and the Spartans knocked Santiago out of the box with a scoring barrage.

> With a record of 8-3 and 16 games left on the conference schedule. Santiago had to sit out the rest of the season. UCF only won one of those of sixteen games. He pitched a total of 93 inning with an ERA of 3.20.

Smashing !

"Last year I wanted to pitch alot,' Santiago explained "the only way I'm going to get noticed is by throwing a lot. I was pitching every other game and I over did it. I wanted to pitch every other game, but it just caught up with me"

Coach Bergman is hoping that Santiago will be ready go in the spring. "I hope to give him the ball on opening day," Bergman said.

athletic department that has the ability to attract top notch Division I athletes. That's exactly what the Lady Gators have according to UCF head coach Lyn King.

But in the only game of the scrimmage in which UCF head coach Lyn King played her complete starting line-up, the Lady Knights won by three points.

UCF has seven returning players from last season's successful Division II team. Where UF has some outstanding individuals, UCF relies on outstanding teamwork.

Last spring King felt that her team would be doing well to win 50 percent of their games. Her team and prediction have improved since then.

"Many of my players want to prove that they are Division I caliber," King said. Being here at the right time to make the move to Division I will present a challenge to the whole team.

King feels there are only seven teams on the schedule that the Lady Knights cannot realistically beat. If they do, King feels it will be an upset.

UCF to face powerful USF in soccer

by Scott Gunnerson FUTURE STAFF WRITER

The men's soccer team will have a new look this year. Coach Jim Rudy has one of his youngest squads ever and his team will face their first regular season opponent, University of South Florida, on Sept. 6 on the UCF soccer field.

"They have many more players with international expirience," said Rudy of South Florida. Some of the South Florida standouts include Kelvin Jones of South Africa at center middle field and Mark Westerhorstmann of West Germany at center foward.

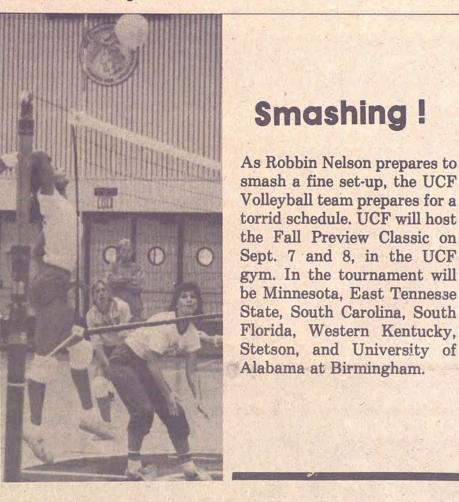

hard to say what we are good at until we get on the field and do it."

On Sunday, the Knights host Miami Dade South Junior College. Dade South is the defending Junior College Champions. The match is an exhibition and will be held late Sunday morning.

UCF will be depending on five players to lead the team. They are Gene O'Brien at sweeper, Greg White at right back, Mike Blanchard at stopper, Greg Johnson at goalkeeper and Todd Goodman at center foward.

have a good shot." Goodman is a junior who transferred from Miami Dade South and played on the junior college championship team.

Thursday afternoon the men's soccer team hosted the Winter Park Reds in a scrimmage. The Reds are an amateur team that consists mainly of former UCF players. UCF had a losing streak going into the game against the Reds and with a two goal lead going down to the stretch, Rudy did not want to lose it. "I wanted to lock it up so I added a fourth mid-fielder," Rudy said. "I took out one forward and added a fresh mid-fielder."

Rudy still does not know what to expect from his men's team. "This is the newest team I've ever coached, except for my first year coaching," Rudy said. "So few players are returning, it's going to be

Johnson sat behind an All-American for the past two years and as a senior, he is finally getting his shot. "He's got a physical dimension that is as good as any player we have ever had, in terms of leaping ability." Rudy said.

The plan worked and kept the Reds away from the Knight goal for the rest of the game. Rudy reminded his team that "Every time we've had a lead or been tied with this team in the last few minutes, we've been beaten."

Volleyball returns seven erans

by Joanne White FUTURE STAFF WRITER

The new school year not only starts a new season for women's volleyball at UCF, it also starts in a new division. Even though the move to Division I has the appearance of a new challenge, most of the teams on the current schedule have fallen to the Lady Knights in seasons past.

UCF will begin the year with eight returning players, six seniors and two

Ferral and a substances of the second s sophomores. The returning seniors are: Connie Armstrong, a hitter and defender; Juli Arnold, a setter, transferred to UCF in 1983 from Indian River Community College; Cindy Chwalik, a hitter and middle blocker who missed playing last season due to injuries; DeeDee McClemmon, a hitter and defender; Millie Ross, an outside hitter and defender and the team's most consistant player at all positions; and Carol Sniegowski, a setter and hitter who has lettered for the three years she has played at UCF.

The returning sophomores are Patti Stevenson, a hitter and middle blocker with 25 percent of the team's total blocks last season; and Heidi Dexter, a hitter that is expected to do very well again this year.

There is also some new talent joining the squad this year in Robbin Nelson, a junior who plays as a hitter and middle blocker and who holds the vertical jump record of leaping 22.6 inches off the court; and three freshman; Kandi Porter, Susan Ritz and Kim Porter.

The Knights will be opening the season on Sept. 7 in the Fall Preview Classic at UCF. This opener will feature a few out of state competitors such as Alabama-Birmingham, East Tennessee State, Minnesota and many more.

UCF V.S. BETHUNE COOKMAN

The Series: This marks th fourth meeting between University of Central Florida and Bethune Cookman College. BCC has dominated the series, winning the three previous games. The scores:

1981 - BCC 24, UCF 20

1982 - BCC 40, UCF 21

1983 - BCC 31, UCF 22

Interestingly, BCC has scored first and never trailed in the series with the Knights. But, the games have been close and always decided in the fourth quarter, even the 40-21 game in 1982. Only four or five points seperated the two teams as the games entered the fourth quarter.

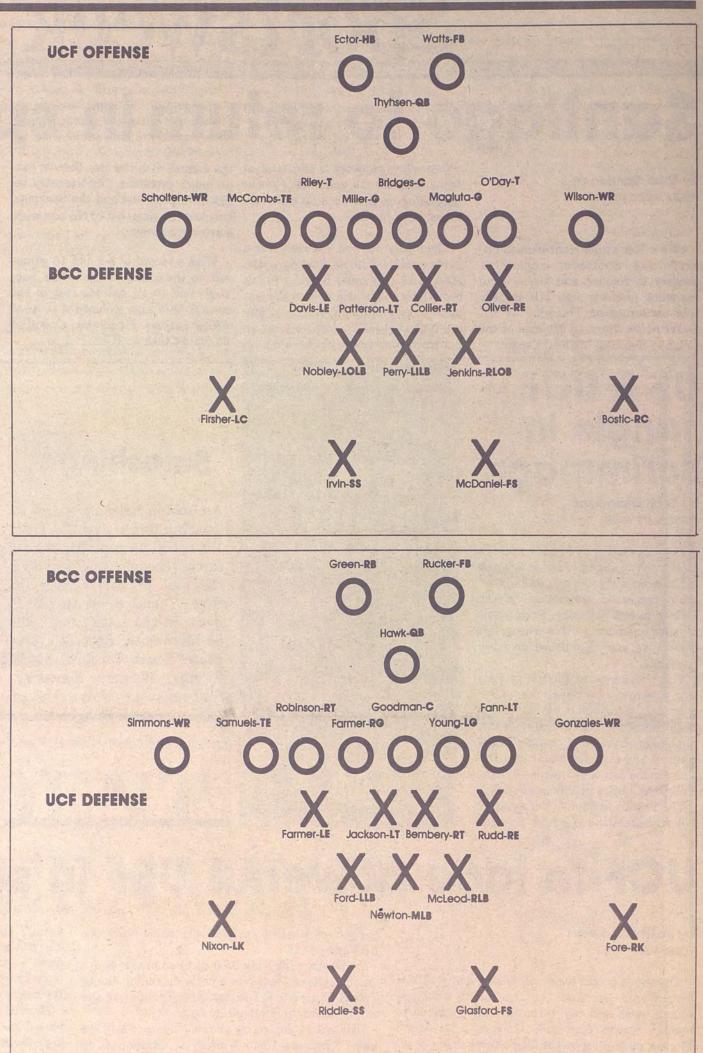

BCC has been playing football 61 years. This is the sixth year of UCF sixth The series with BCC is the longest in UCF's history.

Coaching: UCF's Lou Saban is entering his second season as the head coach of the Knights following last year's 5-6 record. This mark's Saban's 31st year as a head coach at both the College and professional levels. Saban coached the Buffalo Bills, Denver Broncos and Boston Patriots in the NFL during his career.

BCC's Larry Little is also entering his second season in this, his first coaching job. Little guided the Wildcats to a 4-4-1 record last year. Little is a 1967 graduate of BCCC and was an all-star offensive guard for the Miami Dolphins before returning to his alma mater as head coach.

Last year: The game was originally scheduled for mid-season, but was canceled due to heavy rain and lighting prior to kickoff. It was rescheduled and played at the end of the season. BCC took the lead on a first quarter field goal but relied on two fourth quarter TD passes from Quarterback Bernard Hawk to seal the victory. BCC held a 17-14 lead when the fourth quarter started.

UCF: Once again the Knights will be a young team Quarterback Dana Thyhsen returns as one of the team's few returning seniors. Thyhsen threw for 2,058 yards and 19 TD's last year. Against BCC, he completed 23 of 42 passes for 293 yards and 2 TD's in 1983. Elgin Davis leads UCF's running game but has been slowed by an ankle injury. Although he is only a sophomore, he is UCF's career rushing leader. He rushed for 786 yards and nine TD's last year. In his place will be freshman Robert Ector from Miami. Charles Lincoln and Darrell Rudd anchor the Knight defensive line. Rudd is a senior leader and was the top tackler last year with 124 total tackles.

BCC: Junior QB Bernard Hawk is being touted as an All-American candidate and he has engineered the last two victories over UCF. He threw for 1756 yards and 13 TD's last season. Against UCF in 1983, he completed 15 of 26 for 212 yards and two scores. Hawk is one of 13 starters returning for BCC. Hawk's favorite target will be wide receiver Leon Gonzales. The big news is BCC's massive defensive line led by tackle Steve Collier (6-7, 290) and Robert McGuire (6-6, 290).

Notes: UCF has a 14-15-1 record in the Orlando Stadium (including games at The Tangerine Bowl). Last year's season ending loss to Bethune Cookman snapped a modest, two game home winning streak. The largest crowd to watch the Knights play was 14,212 against Fort Lewis last year.

Next Week: UCF will travel next week to Thibodaux, L.A. to play Northeastern Louisianna University. The game will be played at the John L. Guidry Stadium (capacity 12,800) at 8:00 p.m. on Saturday Sept, 8. For Northwest, Quarterback Rodney Horn accounted for 1,318 yards and 11 touchdowns in 1983. He was 144-64-6 1067 yds with ten touchdowns passing and 251-84 with one touchdown rushing. NLU has three returning All-Americans, offensive guard Mike Grantham, a first team choice; tight end Joey Evans (NLU's receiver leader with 23-381-2) and defensive tackle Bennie Jones (the sack leader with 9-78 yds). Evans and Jones made the second team All-American. Linebacker Ronnie Washington led the Tribe with 132 tackles, including 6-14 for losses, and has been all-SLC second team for two years in a row. Mike Howard and Mike Turner led the team with four interceptions last year.

One of the most intriguing questions surrounding the Northeast team is how its defense will do after suffering several major personnel losses. Since spring practice, three defensive starters have been lost. Strong safety Ernest Smith suffered a knee injury during a summer workout. Second team all-SLC end Glenn egan was sent home with personal problems. Second team All-American cornerback David Outley was dropped from the squad, along with wide receiver Alvin Brown, for disciplinary reasons. There is also a major position change with starting linebacker Mark Moseley moving to strong safety.

Women's soccer want NCAA finals

Women's soccer at UCF will be kicking off its 1984 season with an 'old' roster of players. There will be four returning seniors, two juniors and six sophomores.

Senior Linda Gancitano, a defender. was selected to the U.S. Women's Team this past summer. In 1981 Gancitano was selected as an All-American, and also chosen most valuable defender for the national championships. Donna Laboranti, a forward, is a versatile player who can play with either foot with agility and ease. Kathy Mulqueeny, a forward who spent time last year out with injuries, was twice selected to the American potential and is known as a technical, tactical player. Mary Varas, a midfielder, is a member of the 1983 All-South and All-American teams. Varas is also a member of the 1983 and 1984 East Regional Women's team. She was a gold medalist in the Empire State Games. Juniors returning to the squad are Laura Dryden, a midfielder/defender, named to the UCF Invitational Team and Kim Wyant, the team goalie who was the MVP at the NCAA championships in 1982. She was also selected to the 1984 Women's National team.

The six returning sophomore members of the team are Irene Brassil, a forward, Cindy Jones, a defender and member of the 1983 Women's U.S. National team, Chris Midwest Regional. She has All Kessler, a forward, JoEllen Mur-chland, a midfielder, Kerry Ryter, a midfielder/defender, and forward Amy Simons.

The newest members of the squad are freshmen, Michelle Ackers, a forward who at 5'10" towers over most of her fellow team mates. Amy Allman, another goalie, Kelly McCarthy, a defender, and Jean Varas, a midfielder/forward.

The UCF soccer team opens the season against Barry University on Sept. 23, at UCF. Barring any unforseen injuries this season the soccer U team will fare well against its opponents.

Winter Haven hosts Bud Light jet ski tournament

The best Jet Ski racers in the world will return to Cypress Gardens and compete for $5,000 during the sixth annual Bud Light Florida Championships set for Sept. 1-3. Co-sponsored by Bernie Little Distributors and Pamama Jack, this is the final event of the World Cup Championships, which features an additional $3,000 to be awarded to the top ten pros.

Early entries include defending World Cup Champion Larry Rippenkroeger, National Points Champion Brian Bendix, and New England Champion Dave Gordon. More than 100 top ranked racers are expected to compete for the World Cup. Considered the most prestigious award in Jet Ski circles, the World Cup is awarded to the racer who accumulates the most points during the four stop series.

After the first round of World Jet Ski racing, Rippenkroeger held the lead for World Cup points. He battled five foot waves at Panama City Beach Myers Beach hindered Rippinkroeger as Bendix roared to three first-place finishes. Bridges, Miller return from injuries

They've made a full recovery, and University of Central Florida Head Football Coach Lou Saban is glad to have them back.

Charlie Miller and David Bridges, two cogs in the Knights' offensive line, have returned to form this fall after being sidelined by severe injuries last season. Saban is now counting on the two as leaders along the offensive front line.

"They know their business up there," Saban said. "Line play is going to make a big difference Saturday against Bethune-Cookman and it's good to know we've got some experience up there."

Bridges, a 6 foot 1 inch tall, 230 pound sophomore, suffered a broken right hand last season. Miller, meanwhile, returned in good shape this fall after being sidelined with a serious knee injury. The 6 foot tall, 225 pound senior and two-year letterman is from Belle Glade.

Saban has also been impressed by the work of running back Robert Ector. He is a 5 foot 9 inch tall, 170 pound halfback from Miami, who Saban says has displayed good speed and quickness.

"He's really got some nice moves," Saban said. "He's a good athlete and he's eager to learn.'

Time on your hands

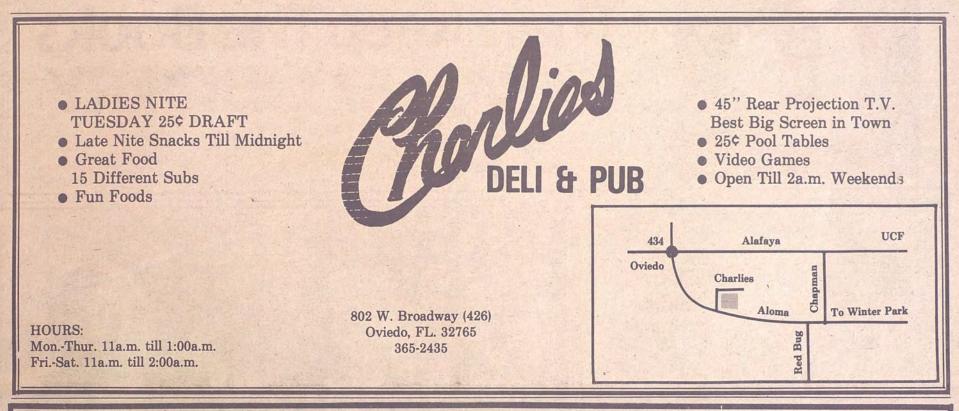

The Recreational Services department at UCF offers a variety of sports and activities for any student who wants to participate.

Loren Knutson, the director of "rec services," says the toughest thing is informing the students about the facilities. Anyone who wants to play individual or team sports can become active in the program.

For those students who would like to play on a team but don't have access to one, you can sign up at the recreational services office. A team will be formed from all of the individuals who signed up to play.

If you would like to play any of these sports but do not care to play in the league or you do not have the equipment you can check out the equipment you'll need at t ie recreation office. Equipment to te used in the gymnasium can be checked out at the equipment room in the Education Building.

During the fall semi-ster some of the sports offered are lag foctball, volleyball, tennis, basket all and golf. Sign up is still open now, if 'ou' like to play any of these sports or us the facilities contact Loren Knutso at the recreational services office.
