Preface

The year 1985 marked the 100th anniversary of Alfred Thayer Mahan's association with the Naval War College. On 16 October 1885, Secretary of the Navy William C. Whitney ordered Mahan to the Naval War College for duty, and, four days later, Mahan came to Newport to report to the president of the Naval War College, Rear Admiral Stephen B. Luce. During that time, Luce explained fully the work which he had in mind for Mahan, the writing of a book which would link national power with naval operations and provide the basis for a theoretical understanding. Mahan stayed in Newport only for a day and then went to New York where, while he remained assigned to the college, he did his research. Mahan did not take up residence in Newport until August 1886, by which time he had been ordered to succeed Luce as president of the college. A few days after Mahan's arrival, Luce, then Commander of the North Atlantic Squadron, gave the opening address to the new class. In it, Luce declared, "let us confidently look for that master mind who will lay the foundations of that [naval] science, and do for it what Jomini has done for the military science."

A dozen years later, Luce reflected on his own words and wrote next to that sentence in a copy of the published version of his address, "He appeared in the person of Captain A.T. Mahan, U.S.N."

There is no doubt that Mahan laid the foundation for a theoretical understanding of navies as well as contributed to the rise of the U.S. Navy to great power status. Curiously, however, there has been no complete bibliography of Mahan's published work. The 100th anniversary of the beginning of his theoretical work offers such an opportunity. Several important, but partial listings of Mahan's works have been published over the years. This bibliography collates, with additions and corrections, the bibliographies published in:

- Allen Westcott, ed., Mahan on Naval Warfare: Selections from the Writings of Rear Admiral Alfred Thayer Mahan (Boston: Little, Brown, 1918) pp. 301-311;
- Charles C. Taylor, The Life of Admiral Mahan (New York: Doran, 1920), pp. 336-339;
- George Kirkham, The Books and Articles of Alfred Thayer Mahan (New York: Ballou Press, 1919);
- William D. Puleston, The Life and Work of Alfred Thayer Mahan, U.S.N. (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1939), pp. 359-364;
- William E. Livezey, Mahan on Sea Power (Norman: University of Oklahoma Press, 1947), pp. 301-326; (revised edition, 1980), pp. 387-397;
- Robert Seager II and Doris Maguire, The Letters and Papers of Alfred Thayer Mahan (Annapolis, Md.: U.S. Naval Institute Press, 1977), iii, pp. 731-732.

Mahan Bibliography

In addition, this list includes an attempt to identify translations and later editions, and to cross-reference reprints.

This bibliography is divided into eight sections. Each is denoted by a letter and each item within the section given a number. Mahan's characteristic method was to publish an article in a magazine, journal, or newspaper and then to republish it again with other articles in the form of a book. In order to trace the publishing history of these various items, a cross-reference system has been employed, using the letter of each section and the number of the item within that section.

The main divisions of this bibliography are:

- A. Books;
- B. Contributions to books written by others; Government documents;
- C. Mahan's writings collected and edited by others;
- D. Contributions to journals and magazines;
- E. Contributions to newspapers;
- F. Translated articles;
- G. Pamphlets.

The first law of bibliography is that, no matter how many years of labor go into a bibliographical reference work, on the day after publication someone will point out an imperfection, a variant, a missing title or edition. Readers with such information are asked to send it to the compilers of this list at the Naval War College, Newport, Rhode Island 02841-5010.

We are grateful for the advice and assistance of Toshiyuki Aoki, Professor Sadao Asada, Dr. Jürgen Förster, Professor Paul Holman, Kim Sae Wooung, Vice Adm. Liu Ta-tsai, Miss Barbara Lynch, Edward Lefkowitz, Professor Robert Seager II, Doris Maguire, Dr. A.J. Veenendaal, Jr., Commander Makato Yamazaki, and Toshiko Yoshimura.

Theodore Roosevelt

Author's respects and compliments —

A2a. The first edition of The Influence of Sea Power Upon History 1660-1783. The illustrations here are taken from Mahan's presentation copy to Theodore Roosevelt, showing the title page (left), Roosevelt's bookplate, and signature with Mahan's characteristic inscription on the flyleaf. In most cases, Mahan asked the publisher to send him the flyleaves of his presentation copies so that he could sign them before the book was bound. After binding, the publisher then sent out the presentation copies using a list of names that Mahan supplied. (From the collection of the Eccles Library, Naval War College.)

It contained 12 illustrations, 8 maps and 12 battle plans with one general track chart showing all of Nelson's voyages. In 1900, a two-volume version similar in general description to the first edition of 1897 was published using the same text as the popular edition. The revised edition recast and amplified the original discussion of Nelson's action towards the Neapolitan Republicans in 1799. New material is included connected with the separation of Nelson and his wife. Mahan also expanded some points, most importantly the reason for withholding the medals for Copenhagen.]

A6 trans. a. The 1913 Swedish translation and abridgement of The Life of Nelson. The flyleaf is inscribed by the translator, then a sub-lieutenant in the Royal Swedish Navy. It was one of the first published works by Axel Daniel Landquist (1891-1962). The 22 year old officer went on to write a large number of works on naval subjects, eventually reaching the rank of Commodore and becoming the Director of the Swedish naval staff college in 1947-51. (From the collection of the Eccles Library, Naval War College.)

CAPTAIN MAHAN'S WORKS ON SEA-POWER.

- I. The Influence of Sea-Power upon History. 1660-1783. With 25 Charts of Great Naval Battles. 8vo. Cloth, gilt top. $4.00.
- II. The Influence of Sea-Power upon the French Revolution and Empire. With 13 Maps and Battle-Plans. 2 vols. 8vo. Cloth, gilt top. $6.00.

CAPTAIN A. T. MAHAN'S great historical works on the "Influence of Sea-Power," the importance of which was conceded at the time of their publication, are in constant demand, and several large editions have been sold in America and in England. The late Admiral Tryon, of the British Navy, pronounced them simply great, — the best things ever written. Captain Mahan is now universally admitted to be one of the great modern historians; and his books are recognized everywhere for their originality, power, and lucidity of style, and as historical contributions of the highest importance.

Captain Mahan's works on the "Influence of Sea-Power" have received official recognition from the governments of the United States and Great Britain, — the War and Navy Departments of the United States having purchased a large edition for use in the service and ship libraries, and the British Government having supplied the books to the cruising ships of the Royal Navy.

The Influence of Sea-Power upon History.

EXTRACTS FROM REVIEWS.

The Westminster Gazette.

Captain Mahan, whose name is famous all the world over as that of the author of "The Influence of Sea-Power upon History," a work, or rather a series of works, which may fairly be said to have codified the laws of naval strategy.

Magazine of American History.

An instructive work of the highest value and interest to students and to the reading public, and should find its way into all the libraries and homes of the land.

London Times.

Captain Mahan has been recognized by all competent judges not merely as the most distinguished living writer on naval strategy, but as the originator and first exponent of what may be called the philosophy of naval history.

London Daily News.

The greatest of living writers on naval subjects. . . . Captain Mahan is the author of books which mark a new era in historical literature. They are to sailors of every navy in the world what Napier's "History of the Peninsular War" was to British soldiers, and something more. Captain Mahan is a born historian.

The Fortnightly Review.

The American officer, who is still on the active list of his navy, was fitted by nature as well as by training for the work to which he happily turned his hand. Possessed of a charming style; precise and clear instead of verbose; completely conscious of what he intends to convey and perfectly competent to convey it; and dowered with a perspicacious breadth of view which dwells on all that is important and passes over all that is irrelevant, Captain Mahan has given us two very remarkable books.

London Globe.

The distinguished author of some of the most important books on naval history and strategy which have ever been published, and which serve as text-books for nearly every naval lecture or article of the present day.

C. H. Davis, Commander and Chief Intelligence Officer, U. S. N.

Captain Mahan's book should be read by all who are interested in the development of the navy, and who believe in the importance of the navy as the principal factor of defence.

The Critic.

An altogether exceptional work; there is nothing like it in the whole range of naval literature. . . . The work is entirely original in conception, masterful in construction, and scholarly in execution.

The Influence of Sea-Power upon the French Revolution and Empire. Press Notices.

Colonel Maurice of the British Army in The United Service Magazine.

A book that must be read. First, it must be read by all schoolmasters from the headmaster of Eton to the head of the humblest board-school in the country. No man is fit to train English boys to fulfil their duties as Englishmen who has not marked, learned, and inwardly digested it. Secondly, it must be read by every Englishman and Englishwoman who wishes to be worthy of that name. It is no hard or irksome task to which I call them. The writing is throughout clear, vigorous, and incisive. The book deserves and must attain a world-wide reputation.

Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Delightful reading. . . . The most exciting and among the best written naval battles ever described, for its clearness, is the battle of the Nile, fought in the darkness and upon strange waters.

Macmillan's Magazine.

Remarkable volumes . . . Captain Mahan has for the first time made clear to the unprofessional reader how much the plans of Napoleon were influenced by the successes of the British squadrons and the consequent failure of his "Continental System."

The Fortnightly Review.

Do not contain a page that cannot be read with pleasure as well as with profit by any man for whom foreign politics, the history of the rise and fall of nations, and the sources of national greatness possess the slightest attractions.

Springfield Republican (Editorial).

No other writer has told the influence of British naval power upon the career of Napoleon with the skill and lucidity characterizing Captain Mahan's account.

The Nation.

Of great permanent value and exceptional interest, and in a high degree creditable to our naval service and to the country.

The Spectator.

Masterly and comprehensive. . . . The drama of the great war unfolds itself in these pages in a manner at once novel and engrossing.

The Christian Union.

His literary style is most satisfactory.

Baltimore American.

A permanent addition to the literature of the world.

The New York Sun.

A work of remarkable interest and abiding value.

New York Tribune.

A highly interesting and an important work, having lessons and suggestions which are calculated to be of high value to the people of the United States. His pages abound with spirited and careful accounts of the great naval battles and manœuvres which occurred during the period treated. We have before had occasion to praise Captain Mahan's literary style, which is flexible, nervous, and sufficiently dignified to satisfy every reasonable demand. It is, moreover, full of energy, and marked by a felicitous choice of language, and its tone and qualities are sustained steadily throughout.

London Times.

Of the way in which this great theme is treated we need say little; no living writer is so well qualified to do it justice as Captain Mahan, and certainly the true significance of the tremendous events of these momentous years has never been more luminously or more instructively displayed.

The Critic.

He penetrates to the real meaning of the mass of books, diplomatic, political, naval, and historical, which have been written to describe the state of things in Europe during the last decade of the eighteenth century.

William O'Connor Morris in "The Academy."

We do not hesitate to assert that, in treating this theme, he has easily surpassed all previous writers.

The Illustrated American.

Two great works as fascinating and instructive to landlubbers as to seamen.

LITTLE, BROWN, & COMPANY, Publishers,

254 Washington Street, Boston.

BULLETIN OF THE NORTH AMERICAN RE- VIEW, NOVEMBER, 1894.

The Editor takes pleasure in introducing to his readers in the November number of the REVIEW several new contributors, including Captain Alfred T. Mahan, U. S. N. ; Lord Charles Beresford ; Senator John L. Mitchell, of Wisconsin ; His Excellency the Japanese Minister at Washington ; and the Rev. Bishop Stephen M. Merrill.

The articles on the "Possibilities of Anglo-American Reunion" by Captain Mahan and Lord Charles Beresford cannot fail to attract wide attention.

Captain Alfred Thayer Mahan is a New Yorker by birth, and was appointed to the Naval Academy in 1856. In 1861 he was commissioned lieutenant, and lieutenant-commander in 1865. During 1870-71 he was attached to the New York Navy Yard, and in 1872 was commissioned commander. He was promoted to captain in 1885, and was made president of the War College in 1886. Last year he was appointed to the "Chicago," at present flagship of the European squadron. During his visit to England he was much fêted, and received many marks of distinction, including honorary degrees from both Oxford and Cambridge. Captain Mahan is accounted one of the greatest authorities on naval tactics in the world, and is best known by his two great works on the Influence of Sea Power. The first tells of the influence of that power Upon History, 1660-1783, and the second Upon the French Revolution and Empire, 1794-1812. Captain Mahan has also written The Gulf and Inland Waters and a Life of Admiral Farragut.

Lord Charles William Delapoe Beresford was born in 1846, and entered the Royal Navy at the age of thirteen. In 1875 he accompanied the Prince of Wales to India as naval aide-de-camp. At the bombardment of Alexandria in 1882 he commanded the "Condor," and greatly distinguished himself during the action both by his bravery and naval skill. For these services he was promoted to the rank of captain. He served in the Soudan under Lord Wolseley for the relief of General Gordon, and was in command of the Naval Brigade in the expedition across the desert.

A flysheet accompanying the November, 1984, issue of The North American Review containing D16: "Possibilities of an Anglo-American Reunion." (From the Naval Historical Collection, Naval War College. Record Group 28.)

Mahan Bibliography

- D46. "Nelson at Naples," The Athenaeum, 3741, 8 July 1899, p. 65. [Mahan's response to F.P. Badham's criticism of A6: The Life of Nelson (1897) in The Saturday Review, 15 May 1897 and 3 November 1897 and The English Historical Review, April 1898. J.K. Laughton commented on the issue in the English Historical Review in October 1897. Badham charged that Mahan was not critical enough of Nelson's conduct at Naples in June 1799. After publication of A6c, the revised 2nd edition of The Life of Nelson, Badham renewed his criticism, despite Mahan's attempt to meet the original criticism in the revised edition. This article, D46, is a direct response to Badham's "Nelson at Naples," The Athenaeum 3740, 1 July 1899, pp. 36-37. Badham rebutted in The Athenaeum 3742, 15 July 1899, pp. 97-98.]

Besprechung der Aufsätze des Kapitäns A. T. Mahan in den „Times“.

(Fortsetzung. Abschnitte IX und X, vom 30. März und 1. April.)

Von M. Galfter.

The war on the sea and its lessons.

By Captain A. T. Mahan, U. S. N.

(Der Krieg auf dem Meere [1898] und was er lehrt.)

Abschnitte IX. und X. Der Posten, der vor Cerveras Liegeplatz gestellt wurde, und die Ueberwachung der Bewegungen Cámaras.

Mit einer kurzen Uebersicht über den Stand der amerikanischen Streitkräfte im letzten Drittel des Monats Mai beginnt der neue Abschnitt. Das fliegende Geschwader kreuzte seit dem 22. vor Cienfuegos, während das um sein stärkstes Schiff geschwächte Geschwader Sampsons vor Havana Wache hielt. Die diesem beigegebenen Monitors waren ein nur mangelhafter Ersatz, und erst am 28. wurde das Fehlen der „Zowa“ durch das Hinzutreten der „Oregon“ wieder gut gemacht. Man erwartete, daß der Feind wahrscheinlich den Hafen von Cienfuegos anlaufen werde, ehe er sich nach der Nordküste Cubas wenden würde.

Am 19. ging dem Marineministerium die zwar glaubhafte aber noch unsichere Nachricht zu, daß das feindliche Geschwader in Santiago eingelaufen sei. Infolge von ungünstigen Zufälligkeiten hatte dies tatsächlich am 19. Morgens, unbemerkt von den amerikanischen Hilfskreuzern, stattfinden können. Der schnelle Hilfskreuzer „St. Louis“ hatte erst am 18. seinen Stand vor Santiago verlassen, nachdem es ihm dort unter Beistand eines Schleppdampfers gelungen war, das Kabel zwischen Santiago und Jamaica zu zerschneiden. Er war dann nach der kaum 50 Seemeilen östlich gelegenen Bucht von Guantanamo gelaufen, um auch dort dasselbe vorzunehmen, war aber aus dem inneren Theil der Bucht durch das Feuer eines kleinen Kanonenbootes und eines Geschüzes am Lande vertrieben worden. Das nur schwach armirte Schiff war dann mit seinem Begleitdampfer nordwärts gedampft, um Kohlen zu nehmen, hatte also zunächst am 19. die Ankunft Cerveras vor Santiago nicht bemerken können und war dann auch nicht zur Stelle, als Commodore Schley mit dem fliegenden Geschwader am 26. eintraf. Hätte es diesem berichten können, wie schwach die Verteidigungsmittel in Guantanamo Bay seien, so hätte Schley sicher ebenso, wie Sampson es später that, diesen Hafen als Kohlenplatz gewählt. Ohne diese Kenntniß hatte Schley am 26. für nöthig gehalten, daß wegen der Schwierigkeit des Kohlennehmens in der bewegten See vor Santiago das Geschwader mit seinem mit 3000 t Kohlen befrachteten Kohlendampfer den Rückweg nach dem 700 Seemeilen entfernten Key West antreten müsse.
