Talk A CONVERSATION WITH TIM KARU

"I just hope that whoever reads this realizes what an important thing Head Start is, and that really what these people are doing is amazing and completely necessary to help raise kids who have really not gotten many breaks in their lives."

Tim Karu, a seventh grader at Waynflete School, gave the money he received at his bar mitzvah this spring to the Deering Place Head Start in Portland. So far, the donations total about $4,000, which will pay for windows that open, a music corner and a computer that Karu will teach students to use. Karu talked with CBW before the big event.

I've always heard about lavish bar mitzvahs where the kids get tons of money.

I read a book about these bar mitzvahs, and how they cost like $150,000 and they were just whatever the kid wanted — T-shirt makers, and make your own video games, things like that. I was shocked. I was amazed I was getting a party.

I'm sure a bunch of my friends will get me some stuff, but I would be great without presents. The party is just going to be, like, the biggest present of all. Probably my entire grade is going to be there, and a bunch of friends that I have from other grades, and about 10 of my sister's friends, and just some random other kids. We've got a DJ, and there's going to be lights and music and food — the whole nine yards.

I love to dance, and there's going to be a dance floor there, and all my friends are going to get down and boogie.

Why not keep the money?

I really think a bar mitzvah is something where you're in good spirits and you're being charitable, and it's a time to do good things for the community and for the people around you.

Does your bar mitzvah have a spiritual meaning for you?

To me, it's an accomplishment. It's something that I've worked at. I have not backed down or quit. It's something I'm going to see through to the very end.

And I'm going to share it with all the people I know.

Don't you ever act bad or get in trouble?

Not too much, really. I haven't gotten in trouble in such a long time that I can't even think of it. I'm really kind of proud of myself. Thank you for asking me that.

Tell me about your grade's volunteer work at Head Start.

We play with them and we take them out to their playgrounds and play tag and swing on the swings with them. They're really excited, because there are just not that many people who think they're special.

Cross Ideal Cut - The world's most beautiful Diamond.

Why You Should Buy Your Diamond Engagement Ring From Cross Jewelers

Cross, as Portland's oldest family-owned jewelry store, has a tradition of excellence which spans four generations. The philosophy which guides our store is that all jewelry must be made from the best precious metals, designed for beauty, designed to last, set with the finest gems and accurately represented. Our philosophy and commitment to excellence is your greatest assurance that anything you buy from Cross will represent true value and provide maximum satisfaction. The benefits of our diamond at Cross include:

Ideal Cutting: Ideal Cutting is simply the most beautiful way to cut a diamond. Only one out of every thousand diamonds cut in the world today achieves the exacting standards of the Cross Ideal Cut diamond. Your choice of a Cross Ideal Cut diamond gives you the optimal combination of brilliance, dispersion (rainbow colors) and scintillation (sparkle)—a lifetime of extraordinary beauty.

Diamond Hallmark: All of Cross' Ultimate Ideal Cut diamonds come with a unique form of identification: a laser-inscribed registry number on the girdle (outside edge) of the gem, which positively identifies the diamond and authenticates your ownership. This registry number, called a hallmark is just 4 microns (4-ten thousandths of an inch) high, and is visible only under magnification. Registered to the new owner in the permanent records of Cross Jewelers, the quality grades (cut, color and clarity), as well as the carat weight are also listed in an international diamond registry in New York City. Only Cross' Ultimate Ideal Cut diamonds offer this additional guarantee of quality.

Finest Diamond Mounting: A Cross Diamond solitaire mounting starts with the part which holds the diamond, called the head. Forged from a single block of 18K white gold alloyed with platinum, the head goes through 12 individual die striking, using 55 tons of pressure in each step. The result is the strongest, most durable head ever made. The part of the ring which encircles the finger is called the shank, and is crafted from two rectangular blocks of 18K yellow gold. Like the head, the shank sections go through multiple die-strikes. The 55 tons of pressure squeeze out all the air bubbles, densely compacting the atoms of gold. After the head and shank sections are assembled, the ring mounting is ready for finishing. The die striking results in a ring which accepts an extraordinarily high polish, for a beautiful ring which will hold Cross' most beautiful diamonds.

Cross' Diamond Lab: One of the values of buying your diamond from Cross Jewelers is the assurance that your diamond has been weighed, and the quality grading checked and verified by a registered jeweler. By acquiring our diamonds loose, we can guarantee the quality represented is exactly correct. Each Cross Ideal Cut diamond has been hand selected from hundreds, to provide the very best quality and value.

Cross' Diamond Setting Shop: Cross' Diamond Setting Shop is staffed by America's finest diamond setters, and is visible from our show room. The first rule of our diamond setting shop is, "take whatever amount of time is necessary to set the diamond most securely and most beautifully." Few people realize that, at the moment a properly weighted prong is pushed over the edge of a diamond, over 45 pounds of pressure is exerted on the diamond. Careful preparations are required to ensure that the precious metal on which the diamond rests is perfectly smooth, and properly supports the diamond. Because of their value, diamonds are never set "while you wait" at Cross Jewelers. Any time pressure on a diamond setter increases the risk to the diamond. For the safety of your diamond, setting in our shop is always scheduled within a block of time, allowing maximum time for all preparation details. The safety and security of your diamond depends on the quality of the mounting, the philosophy of the diamond setting shop, and most importantly, the skills and attention to detail by the diamond setter. If you would like to learn more about diamond setting, ask for a copy of our "Quality of Stone Setting" guide, written by Cross Jewelers.

Cross Diamond Prices are Real: For over three quarters of a century, Cross Jewelers has maintained a consistent, conservative pricing philosophy that allows you to shop with the "real price" on every piece of jewelry in our store. Items are priced according to their true value — we never have sales or offer discounts, because prices are not inflated to allow for these types of artificial sales techniques. We find that people enjoy shopping in a store where quality is accurately represented and the values are real — 365 days of the year. When non-ideal cut discount and sale diamonds are accurately graded for cut, color and clarity and accurately weighed for their carat weight, their "savings" often not only vanish when compared to an Ideal Cut diamond, but may be priced at a premium over the Ideal Cut.

Cross is a Teaching Jewelry Store: We have always found that whenever consumers have the facts, they make informed decisions and have the highest level of satisfaction in their purchase. Our entire staff is committed to taking any amount of time necessary to answer your questions and give you the background information necessary to make a decision concerning gems and jewelry. Cross has just completed a 24-page booklet titled "Cross's Guide To The World's Most Beautiful Diamonds." If you have been thinking of the purchase of a diamond, we invite you to stop and receive your free copy.

"Some slimebucket, I guess. I haven't thought about it."

With that answer and a laugh, Democratic gubernatorial candidate Bill Lemke dismissed the question. It obviously didn't mean much to him, and Lemke wasn't alone in his reaction. Of the more than two dozen candidates for various offices to whom this particular query was addressed, few came up with anything resembling a coherent answer, and none appeared to have given the matter much prior thought.

The question was simple: Are there any groups or individuals you'll refuse to accept campaign contributions from?

The answers were simpleminded: "I'll consider them on a case by case basis," said Republican gubernatorial candidate Jim Longley.

"I haven't been confronted with the issue," said Tom Connolly, another Democrat seeking the governorship. "I'm not in a position to turn down funds."

"I suspect there might be," said Harold Clough, who's running for the GOP nomination in Scarborough, "but I haven't had any offers."

"I'm lost on that one," said Democratic state Senate candidate Arthur St. Hilaire of Saco. "I can't think of one."

Which brings up a new question: If campaign finance reform is such an important issue among members of the public, how come the people most directly affected by it — the candidates — haven't developed coherent personal policies on the subject?

While passing comprehensive reform in Congress or the Maine Legislature is a convoluted process that could take years, approving individual reform is relatively quick and easy. All any politician has to do to make it happen is decide what kind of funding is acceptable, and what sort is not. If, as Republican congressional candidate David Ott complained, political action committees have too much influence on elections, why not simply refuse to accept PAC money?

Polis who actually believe in changing the system ought to have devoted considerable mental processing time to the subject of which dollars are too dirty long before announcing their candidacies. Office-seekers who don't really care about the way campaigns are financed won't have given it a thought.

"None that I can think of," Democrat John McDonough, who's running for a legislative seat in Portland, replied to the question.

"I haven't been offered any yet," said Republican Henry Joy, a gubernatorial hopeful.

Even when candidates managed to come up with something resembling an actual answer, they appeared to be making up their policies as they went along. And making them up in ways that would have little impact on the bottom line. For instance, it seems unlikely the nuclear industry was planning to make a contribution to Democrat Joe Ricci's gubernatorial campaign, even if Ricci were disposed toward accepting a radioactive check. Several polis said they wouldn't take funds from tobacco or liquor companies, but the cigarette and booze people don't make a habit of squandering their donations on candidates who favor more regulation of smoking or alcohol. So it seems unlikely those sorts of limitations would make much difference in politicians' efforts to boost their bank accounts.

There's nothing particularly principled about proclaiming you won't take money from somebody who isn't going to give it to you anyway. When it comes to reform, what really counts is refusing funding from the special interests that might actually consider supporting you. Former Democratic Congressman Tom Andrews announced in 1993 that he wouldn't take donations from labor unions, in order to demonstrate that his vote on an issue important to organized labor had not been influenced by promises of filthy lucre. Andrews' pledge came back to haunt him the following year, when his under-financed campaign for the U.S. Senate couldn't compete with the unfettered fundraising of Republican Olympia Snowe.

Andrews' idealism appears to have convinced his fellow polis that deliberately cutting off the money supply wasn't such a hot idea. Accepting only untainted cash, they concluded, was interesting in theory, but impractical as a route to victory. What those who dismiss the Andrews example forget is that even if he'd dumped his ideals and taken union bucks, he undoubtedly would have lost the race anyway. It wasn't the congressman's personal limits on contributions that did him in. It was his vote to close Loring Air Force Base. After that unpopular decision, no amount of folding green could have overcome Andrews' negative image in northern Maine.

If candidates routinely announced exactly which kinds of money were acceptable to them and which were not, campaigns would be cleaner, incomprehensible reform bills would be unnecessary and voters would have a clearer idea of who was buying whom. But until politicians buy the idea that the question about whose funds they'll refuse is a serious one, they'll continue to be regarded as bought and paid for by special interests.

This column accepts contributions of letters, even if they come from lobbyists for the liquor and tobacco industries. Donations of information should be addressed to CBW, 561 Congress St., Portland, ME 04101. Other slimebuckets can e-mail ishmael@twi.net.

"A Voice for the City ~ A Voice for You!"

A Tradition Reborn.

When Pilsner was first crafted back in the 1840s, the world acclaimed it as the finest beer ever brewed. Distinguished by its light golden color and crisp, refreshing taste, it wasn't long before Pilsner became America's favorite beer. Unfortunately, today's mass-produced Pilsners offer only a bland imitation of the original. The delightful balance of fine malts and hops. Now it's been left in the highly capable hands of small local brewers like Casco Bay Brewing Co. to reintroduce beer drinkers to the full flavor and cold-lagered clarity of this German style classic. Casco Bay Pilsner. Light and crystal clear with a pure white foamy head. Brewed in small 20 barrel batches and lagered for a full 3 weeks for a fresh, bold taste. Look for it on tap, and in 12 oz. bottles in your grocer's beer case.

Postcards from the edge

Since I don't own a camera and don't take pictures, but delight in boring people to death, I've put together a little slide show of words concerning my recent trip to the West Coast.

Preparation: During my former wayfar-ing years, I fancied myself an organized person when it came to travel. I had travel-sized toiletries, wrinkle-free outfits and a packing system that would impress NASA. This trip, however, I kind of leave things to the last minute. At midnight, I empty various dresser drawers into a suitcase, clear a couple bathroom shelves, throw whatever shoes are on my bedroom floor into my bags and consider myself done.

Departure: While waiting for our ride to Logan, I decide to unplug my appliances. On the trip down, I can't remember if the coffee pot was one of them. I develop a tic in my left eye.

Air travel: I'm not equipped for coach travel. But because I am traveling in coach, I hate people in first class. The airlines board these passengers first, so they can sneer at the rest of us as we are herded to the back. One first-class imp has already dumped a plastic container of Cheerios all over his seat. He won't even enjoy his complementary champagne. Where's the justice, I ask you?

Airline food: How can you so desperately desire something that looks and tastes like it came out of an Easy-Bake Oven? I am starving the minute I am crammed into my seat.

Toilet seat covers: A very good idea, unless you forget to punch out the perforated area in the center.

Arrival: Decline directions, say you used to live in the area. Act like you know where you're going, even when you exit the rental car lot in the wrong direction. Wave to the sales rep as you circle the agency for the third time.

San Francisco: They say you can never go home, but anything can happen in this city and generally does. And did.

Money: Consider your wallet a Kleenex dispenser, and your money, tissues. You have a very, very runny nose.

Clothing: Nothing fits when you're away. You stare into your luggage and wonder whether you picked up the correct suitcases at the baggage claim. Your clothes look and feel like they are on backwards. Also, you will put together ensembles you wouldn't be caught dead in at home. I find myself dressed like a cheerleader most of the trip.

Working out: A-plus for intention, D-minus for execution. The cross-trainers do come in handy, however, for my cheerleader look.

Wine Country: Tasting rooms open at 10 a.m. Wine for breakfast — a concept I get used to.

Wineries in Wine Country: about seven zillion.

Brew pubs in Wine Country: about seven. (I found them all.)

Food: Eat whatever you want, whenever you want.

Topic of conversation during meals: next meal.

California coast: A series of hairpin turns rounding one precipice after another and no guard rail. There's probably a pretty good reason most of the wineries are located many miles away.

Mendocino: The little New England of the West — where "Murder She Wrote" was filmed. I guess I could make one of those "the ocean's on the wrong side" jokes, but this tourist/hippie trap doesn't even merit that.

Trying to get Vietnamese food in Santa Rosa at 9 p.m.: We are informed, "Sorry, chicken's closed."

Day seven: I am lounging high aloft on a deck in the Sonoma hills. To my right, Bodega Bay. To my left, mountains. Below me, calla lilies, bearded irises, lilies of the Nile and other exotic plantlife crowd in the lush garden. Hummingbirds flit to and fro; red-headed woodpeckers squawk and tap at the eaves of the inn; buzzards arc silently aloft. The tic in my eye finally goes away.

Day eight: I start thinking about everything I have to do when I get home. The tic in my eye returns.

Saying goodbye to old friends: We promise to see each other again soon, and know we won't.

Last night in San Francisco: I am sipping martinis at Julie's Supper Club, dancing cheek-to-cheek with my cheerleading sweater, my hair festooned with swizzle sticks. More goodbyes. The vacation is careening to its conclusion.

The return: An endless day of travel, capped off by a cab ride from the Portland bus terminal with a taxi driver from parts unknown, who is not entirely clear as to how to get from outer Congress Street to the East End. The exhausted Peavey all but grabs the steering wheel from him. She is in no mood for a "Night on Earth" adventure.

Home: The vacation's officially over. It is 11:30 a.m. and I just got up. I don't know what to do with myself. I pluck a T-shirt from one of my bags and drop it in the hamper, then wander from room to room. Finally, I sit at my desk, surrounded by unopened mail, unfinished projects and the disgruntled plants I forgot to have someone water while I was gone. (They are not very happy with me. If someone finds me slumped over this keyboard, look for a trail of green slime.) I have tons of work before me, calls to return, plants to revive and this column to finish. But first, maybe it's time for breakfast.

Now where's my wine opener?

Elizabeth Peavey dedicates this column to JTM, the best traveling buddy ever.

VOTERS GUIDE

Henry Joy

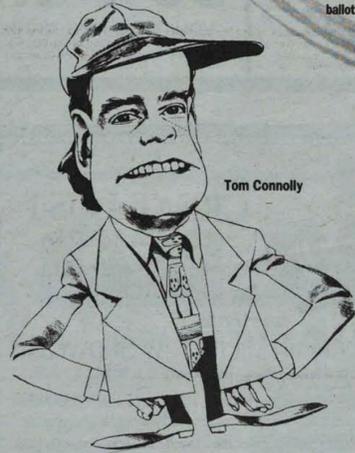

Bill Lemke

AL DIAMON
 In an extensive survey of Maine voters that we haven't bothered to conduct, the question most frequently asked about the candidates for major office on the June 9 ballot is, "Are they all nuts?"
 While the answer seemed obvious to us, we still needed concrete proof. So we invited all the gubernatorial and congressional candidates facing contested primaries to be tested. Using sophisticated scientific procedures, we attached electrodes to their most sensitive areas — their wallets and their egos, what did you think? — and asked them carefully worded questions designed to determine their Wackiness Quotient (W.Q.).

The results can be seen in the charts on the following pages. All the candidates are rated on a scale of 1-10, with one representing a frightening longing for a normalcy that never existed and 10 signifying a scary alignment with some alternate reality. The ideal candidate scores somewhere in the middle (3.6-6.5), indicating his or her ability to balance the practical and imaginative sides of politics. People with scores at the low end (1-3.5) spend their days curled in a fetal position, pretending that when they're born, Donna Reed will be their mother and Lassie will be their dog. Folks who earn high numbers (6.6-10) tend to occupy their time covering the windows of their campaign headquarters with aluminum foil, so the space aliens who kidnapped Elvis won't be able to nab them too.

For comparison purposes, here's how our current elected officials, none of whom face primary challenges, rate on the Wack-O-Meter. Independent Gov. Angus King and Democratic Congressman Tom Allen both earn scores of 3.5, meaning they're a little too Marcus Welby for our tastes. Democratic Congressman John Baldacci gets a 7 — pleasantly spacey. Republican U.S. Sen. Susan Collins is a 2.5, while GOP Sen. Olympia Snowe rates a 2.3, which, in layman's terms, means neither one of them is much fun at a party.

While it seems to us that ought to tell you all you need to know to cast an informed ballot, some people (with a shockingly deviant W.Q.) insist on learning something about the candidates' actual stands on issues. To accommodate them, we've included a bunch of that stuff as well.

A film by Jacques Doillon

"One of the Ten Best Films of the Year!"
—The New York Times, Washington Post, Philadelphia Inquirer
"Two thumbs up... Extraordinary!"
—Rolling Stone

Named the Best Foreign Film of the Year by the New York Film Critics Circle, Ponette stars 4-year old Victoire Thivisol, Winner of the Best Actress Award at the Venice Film Festival, in the title role.

Sent to live with her relatives, Ponette experiences the hopes, dreams and fears of a child following the loss of a parent. ultimately, it is her faith, love and strength of character that enables Ponette to triumphantly overcome her tragedy.

"Exquisite... A jewel... 4-year old wonder Victoire Thivisol — the miraculously unselfconscious star of Ponette — creates a tremendously moving vision of grief and healing!"
Janet Maslin, The New York Times

VOTERS GUIDE

I STAND MUTE BEFORE CBW

Running from his record?

Martin Joyce has the distinction of being the only local candidate in a contested primary who refused to be interviewed for this voters guide. (We don't take it personally. Joyce also refused to talk to the Portland Press Herald.) Joyce, who's about 68, is seeking the Democratic nomination for the state House seat representing Munjoy Hill, the Casco Bay Islands and part of East Deering. He's opposed by Ben Dudley and Bob Griffin in a three-way race to replace retiring Democratic state Rep. J. Elizabeth Mitchell.

While Joyce's reluctance to discuss his views on current issues means there's little information to put in the accompanying chart (see page 14), he does have some previous political experience that may be worth examining.

From 1981 to 1991, Joyce compiled a mixed record as Cumberland County sheriff. On the positive side, he helped the homeless by providing free lodging in the jail's gymnasium on winter nights. He also halted the long-standing practice of deputizing people who were not law enforcement officers, improved medical services at the jail, set up a community service program for inmates and banned jail employees from taking inmates home to work on their houses.

On the less positive side, Joyce oversaw a jail that was, according to the Press Herald, "plagued by morale problems, overcrowded conditions, favoritism among employees and high employee turnover." Throughout his tenure there were many examples of poor communication, sloppy administration and questionable practices. For instance, in November 1988, Portland police warned the sheriff's department that a dangerous inmate was planning an escape. In spite of the alert, the inmate managed to obtain a key to his leg shackles, and while being escorted from a court appearance, took off. "The Portland police had received reliable information that someone might try to smuggle him a gun," Joyce explained to the Press Herald. "They said nothing about a key."

Over the next few months, two inmates — one with a broken foot and one recovering from an appendectomy — escaped from area hospitals, despite being guarded by sheriff's deputies. Joyce complained that the department's low pay scale forced him to employ poorly trained and unqualified people. He told the Press Herald, "Some people we hire, we wouldn't hire if we didn't have to."

In July 1989, the Evening Express revealed that an inmate serving a seven-year sentence for sexually molesting a boy was routinely allowed to leave the jail without an escort in order to run errands for jail staff. He washed cars for deputies, and made trips to a bakery to buy doughnuts for guards. He was given keys to most parts of the jail, including the sheriff's office, in order to perform janitorial work. The jail administrator warned Joyce the situation was improper, but the warning was ignored. When the story broke, Joyce shrugged it off. "I think somebody's just trying to cause a problem," he told the Express. "I know people call the newspaper even if I [go to the bathroom] with the wrong kind of toilet paper."

Angered by the controversy, Joyce stopped talking to reporters. It appears that policy is still in place.

You can spend millions

Even if you're not a party member, there are still a few matters that need your vote on June 9. Such as the $48 million the state wants to borrow for road construction, pollution control and vocational schools.

The first bond issue on the ballot is for $36,985,000 for various transportation projects. Combined with $60 million in federal funds, the money will help finance engineering studies for a connector road from West Commercial Street to I-295 in Portland, as well as $10 million in improvements at the Portland Jetport.

Other projects include building new piers at Mack Point ($15 million), freight rail improvements ($3.5 million), commuter vans and buses ($325,000) and road construction and improvement ($14.4 million). There's also $600,000 to study whether to build the East-West Highway across northern and central Maine.

Interest on the bond is expected to cost taxpayers an additional $19.4 million over the next 20 years.

The second bond issue is for $6 million, and would allow the state to collect another $15 million in federal money. Among the major items it would pay for are water pollution control facilities ($1 million), cleaning up leaking landfills ($4.5 million) and establishing a comprehensive watershed protection program ($500,000).

Finally, there's a $5 million bond that would be used to buy equipment for vocational high schools. Exactly which schools get the cash will be up to the state Department of Education.

Half a judge

Sometimes the person serving as judge of probate is a judge. Sometimes that person is just another lawyer. That creates the potential for probate judges to encounter ethically sticky situations. In the morning, they could be representing clients in lawsuits. In the afternoon, they could be presiding over cases in which attorneys who opposed them in those suits now must regard them as impartial arbiters.

Judges of probate are the state's only elected judges, an odd leftover from the time Maine was a part of Massachusetts. Each county elects somebody to fill the part-time job, which pays $27,000 per year, and deals with court cases involving some guardianships, adoptions, name changes, wills and estates. Most lawyers who seek the post also maintain a private practice. And that sets up the potential for conflicts.

In the Waldo County Republican primary, for instance, Meris Bickford is challenging incumbent Probate Judge Randy Mailloux on that very issue. Bickford says conflicts are inevitable, and the only way to solve the problem is to elect someone who promises not to maintain a private law practice while serving as a judge. Mailloux says conflicts are rare, and can be dealt with through the rules that govern the conduct of lawyers and judges. The Commission to Study the Future of Maine's Courts, in a 1992 report, sided with Bickford, recommending the elimination of part-time judges because the post had such a potential for ethical dilemmas. But nothing ever came of that suggestion.

In Cumberland County, neither candidate in the Democratic primary (there's no Republican in the race) is worried about the issue. Joseph Mazziotti, 49, said if he wins the election, he'll end all private probate work by himself and other attorneys in his office. But Mazziotti, a former county commissioner, was unconcerned about the appearance of conflict if he had to rule in a case involving a lawyer he'd opposed in other non-probate cases. "I have a history of being fair as a commissioner," he said. "I've ruled against people who were always friendly and supportive of me."

Mazziotti's opponent, Bill Childs, is the son of the current longtime probate judge, Dana Childs. Childs, 42, said he'll handle the matter of potential conflicts in the same way his law firm, where his father also works, does now. "No one in my office will file cases in front of me," he said. "Even if there's the appearance of a conflict, the ethical rules apply."

Both men are experienced trial lawyers. Both are familiar with the workings of the probate court. Neither favors any major changes in the operation of that court. And neither wants to touch the conflict-of-interest issue.

Too bad.

ENDORSEMENTS

It may be difficult to take your voting responsibility seriously June 9, due to the extremely loopy nature of some of the people running for office, especially in the gubernatorial and congressional primaries. But get serious and get to the polls. These are the men and women who will be making decisions on matters of importance in Augusta and Washington. And hey, some of them are even credible candidates.

In the Democratic primary for governor we tip our hat to Tom Connolly. On issues of paramount importance — abortion rights, gay rights — we're with him. While we disagree with him on several other points, we believe he's bright, honest and intelligent, and a lot less ludicrous than his opponents.

In the Republican primary for governor, our vote goes to Leo Martin, a solid, lifelong public servant. He's got reasonable positions on social issues, and his thinking on fiscal matters is bolstered by long experience in management. His opponents can't come close to matching his credibility.

In the Republican primary for the 1st District Congressional seat, we throw our support behind David Ott. His well-reasoned and thoughtful opinions on matters both social and fiscal, as well as his proven commitment to the state of Maine, leave his muddleheaded, backward-thinking carpetbagger opponent, Ross Connelly, in the dust.

In the Democratic primary race for House District 30, representing Munjoy Hill, the Casco Bay islands and part of East Deering, we happily vote for Ben Dudley. He's bright and has good ideas about how the state could help the people of his district. We only hope that, if elected, he won't lose the enthusiasm and freshness of vision that make him stand out from the pack.

In the Democratic primary for House District 32, representing the Western Prom, Libbytown and Stroudwater, our ballot is cast for incumbent Richard Farnsworth. While Farnsworth got off to a somewhat shaky start in his first term, his attendance record has improved dramatically and he shows very hopeful signs of maturing into a legislator who actually gets things done.

Our most excruciating decision came in the Democratic primary race for the Parkside and Bayside neighborhoods, House District 33. The man who held this office for four terms, Herb Adams, earned himself a reputation for unrivalled constituent service. But we're voting for Michael Quint, the man who replaced Adams when he was term-limited out in 1996. Quint has shown leadership and initiative in the Legislature, particularly in the Jackson Brook Institute debacle, and he deserves to continue serving in Augusta, where he promises to develop into a much-needed voice of authority in the Portland delegation.

In the Republican primary for the seat representing Scarborough and part of Gorham, House District 22, we pick Robert Pendleton.

In the Republican primary for House District 42, representing part of Cumberland and North Yarmouth, we couldn't stomach either candidate, and offer no endorsement.

In Senate District 31, which encompasses part of Scarborough, Saco, Dayton, Old Orchard Beach and part of Buxton, there are primaries for both parties. On the Republican side, we're voting for Stephen Ciembroniewicz. And in the Democratic race, we throw our wholehearted support to Peggy Pendleton, whose opponent, Arthur St. Hilaire, represents some of the most pernicious good-old-boy elements of the state's Democratic party.

On the three bond issues facing voters:

We urge you to vote no on 1, a $36,985,000 transportation bond. This is a grab bag of initiatives that should be presented to the voters individually.

We recommend a no vote on 2, as well. This bond issue would fund water-quality improvement programs — a wonderful thing, but something that should be funded out of operating budgets.

We're happy to recommend that you vote yes on 3, $5 million to equip vocational schools. It's the kind of capital investment that justifies a bond issue.

That's what we think. As always, we urge you to think for yourselves. Our charts outlining the candidates' positions on key issues start on page 8.

Radical action

Portland's new mayor, Tom Kane, took a bold step before he was even sworn into office. Kane put an item on the City Council's agenda proposing the city take by eminent domain an 80-acre parcel of property near Rand Road, a piece of land where the United States Postal Service wants to build a mail distribution center ("Mail privilege," 2.19.98). In his first Council meeting as mayor, on June 3, Kane put himself in the difficult position of arguing for a radical step: having the city purchase the property so it could block the USPS plan and prevent a negative impact on the nearby Fore River Sanctuary. (The Council meeting happened after CBW's deadline.)

SO NOTED

We applaud Kane's initiative. Certainly, the $1.5-$1.8 million the USPS says it's willing to pay for the property is a lot of money. If the city were to shell out that much to buy the land, voters would deserve to know where it was going to come from and what the long-term benefits of the purchase would be. But Kane's proposal, and his willingness to take political risks, show he's able to back up his idealism with tough action.

We've heard a lot of talk from municipal officials about the importance of preserving Portland's open spaces for future generations. Kane has now shown he's willing to make a decisive move to actually do it. Regardless of how the Council voted June 3, the new mayor has demonstrated he has courage as well as vision.

Monday, bloody Monday: "Poor Tom." That refrain was repeated more than once during inauguration ceremonies at Portland City Hall June 1. Newly-elected Mayor Tom Kane gave his inauguration speech with a blood-soaked hankie held to one nostril. Even so, blood ran between his fingers, stained his tie and dripped dramatically to the floor. Kane explained that his nose sometimes bleeds when he faces stressful situations. "Oh, well," he said as he shot an embarrassed smile at the Council, his family, about 70 well-wishers and a bank of cameras. "I'm going to press on."

ear to the pavement

Eventually, a five-minute recess was called to give Kane a chance to stem the flow. After a nearly 15-minute break, he returned to the podium, minus the tie, and finished his speech still clutching a tissue.

■ Kids' stuff: Outside Portland Performing Arts' newly acquired cultural center on Longfellow Square May 21, fourth- and fifth-graders from Reiche Community School unveiled the mural they created to draw attention to the arts group's $700,000 fundraising drive. As news cameras captured the proud children pointing to the colorful dancers and drummers they had painted, onlookers worried vandals might mar the piece. Plexiglas, said one PPA official, could be hung to protect the children's work.

■ Mall malt: Greater Portland's newest brew pub will open the week of June 15 in the unlikely environs of the Maine Mall. The Sebago Brewing Co. will be serving suds in the former Cricket's restaurant. Sebago co-owner Tim Haines is enthusiastic about the site. "It's something that's needed in the Mall area," Haines said. "Unless you want to sit in a boring chain restaurant, there's not really a lot of choice." Haines should know. He and partner Brad Monarch have worked at nearly every "boring chain restaurant" from Bar Harbor to Boca Raton. The beer making will be handled by a third co-owner, Kai Adams, formerly of the Sea Dog breweries.

■ Sew it is: The racket of babbling toddlers nearly drowned out Doris Hohman's voice May 21 as she congratulated the women graduating from Catholic Charities Maine's Refugee Resettlement Program's sewing class. For a few hours a week since September, the dozen or so women, many of them from Sudan and Zaire, have gathered to learn their way around a sewing machine. After bashfully modeling their handiwork, the beaming women happily shifted the gathering's focus to a buffet of fried plantain, sweet bread and cold cuts. The show's highlight was a "butterfly" dress, made of bright yellow-and-green batik cloth — a juxtaposition of African and Victorian styles, with a white lace collar and a string of pearls. The creator's daughter wore a matching frock. "We hope they'll be able to sew things to help their families make more money," said Hohman, adding that some may sew for local bra maven Magda Adrien. CBW

OLD PORT FESTIVITIES — A SHIRRELL RETURNS — ON THE CONG — USM ALUMS SHOW OFF — THE FUNNY BUSINESS OF "BULWORTH"

Camera ready
Big money can wait. Local film and video makers are jonesing to create — now.

■ ZOË S. MILLER

Listening to Andy Davis talk, you'd think he never sleeps. The bright-eyed, skinny filmmaker is bursting with energy and confidence, key ingredients of his many past, present and prospective projects. Davis, just 22 years old, already has canned or is working on several short films, a music documentary and public access TV programs. He and Olin Smith, owner of Portland's Motion Media Film & Video, plan to shoot a feature film this summer. "It will succeed," Davis says, with an enthusiasm that borders on boastfulness.

Davis isn't the only local artist sating his creative urges through camera-work. Rhode Island expatriate Frank McMahon has launched Portland Media Artists. Louis Frederick's theater company, Out of Cake, has embarked on a filmmaking venture. Josh McDonald is creating a pilot TV show for local broadcast. And Kyle Rankin and Efram Potelle, those infamous public access barons, are writing yet another full-length feature.

That's a lot of film for a little city. Why would an aspiring director, like Davis, make movies and videos in Portland, so far from the industry machine of Hollywood and New York City?

"Because I'm here," says Davis, who scoffs at the notion that location is a setback. "I'll use whatever tools I can to get the message out there. That's what I'm about." For Davis, the message is a commentary on the virtues of tolerance. He says his upcoming B-movie-style film will be a tearjerker hybrid of Todd Browning's cult classic "Freaks" and the '90s American gothic "What's Eating Gilbert Grape." Set on a farm, the film will chronicle a family of society's castoffs — played by authentic bearded ladies, midgets and other misfits — and their adventures with the cruel world. Davis and Smith have a budget of $250,000 — from Smith's own bankroll — and hope to wrap the film by September.

Davis says he cultivated his knowledge of films as a pre-teen, watching three movies with his grandfather every Friday night while his Grandmother was out playing bingo. They'd take turns choosing movies, and Davis' mother never censored their selections. "I was a weird kid," says Davis, who credits David Cronenberg's "The Fly" for introducing him to smart movies. As a youth, he also loved spaghetti westerns, sci-fi and action films. Still, he is not a compulsive moviegoer, nor is he one to invest countless hours in the classroom. He says the three semesters he spent studying film at the Art Institute of Pittsburgh gave him all the formal training he needed. "I just wanted to make something and win an award," he says, both of which he accomplished before leaving the art school.

Davis wants to give creative kids an outlet. His company, Zero Doomsday Productions, provides a forum for painters, DJs, musicians — anyone doing something creative. "The idea is that someday, artists won't starve," says Davis. "I've got big plans for creating an art life here in Portland. There's a lot of talented people here who just don't know how to get connections."

Since moving to Portland several months ago, Davis has set about making his own connections. Almost overnight, he put together a press kit for "Zero Doomsday Hour," a show for public access TV that will profile creative Maine youths, using footage kids film and send in. Davis has been talking to school principals about how to educate students with the program, which he'll produce with help from his mother. Ideally, he says, he'd like it to be "TV for the classroom." Davis is also working on a music documentary for public access with his girlfriend, Concetta Smith. So far, the two have done interviews with such luminaries as Reverend Horton Heat, Frank Black and Henry Rollins. Davis may even shoot Heat's first video.

Davis might appear to have a monopoly on creative energy, but he meets his match in Josh McDonald, Frank McMahon, and Louis Frederick — who are all stirring up Portland's scene with locally made films and videos.

McDonald, a producer at News-Center 6, is putting together a crew to create "Masked Amore," a pilot TV show about a shy, nondescript comic book artist who decides to become a superhero. McDonald would like to turn the program into a series on South Portland's public access station, but his attitude about the future is more easygoing than that of his local filmmaking counterparts. If his crew members stick around for more episodes, he says, that's great. And if they take off, well, that's too bad. With the shoestring budget he puts together from his own income, it's hard to pay for their loyalty. McDonald acknowledges that pursuing a career in television will probably require him to head to New York City someday. "At this point," he says, "I'm just looking to complete the first part of my project. And hopefully, in the end, I'll find myself someplace I like being."

For McMahon, a friendly, dark-haired 36-year-old, the place to be is Portland. McMahon, who moved to Maine last summer after a decade of directing a public access station in Rhode Island, has thrown his energy into creating a film scene here. He makes his living writing and illustrating for computer technology magazines, but devotes his free time to photography, film and video projects that he releases internationally on his website. He's passionate about the possibilities of the coming digital age, which he thinks will help eliminate the problems that come with working in entertainment backwaters like Maine.

Last winter, with Portland Media Artists, a group of filmmakers he organized, McMahon produced "Snowbound," a short dramatic mystery that he made available on the Internet, generating response from as far away as Europe and Africa. He even received a call from the Independent Film Channel, which is scouting him as a possible guest for John Pierson's show, "Split Screen." Portland Media Artists and McMahon are casting actors for "Nightingale," a feature film he wrote about a female superhero who kickboxes wrongs into rights. Funds for their projects come out of pocket.

Unlike Davis, McMahon has no immediate intention of throwing all his cash into one big movie. Instead, McMahon prefers to complete lots of small projects to gain experience, stay engaged and foster a creative community. He hopes to create an art space that is accessible to everyone, from the young "punks" who get a bad rap from city officials to the 30-something playwrights struggling to have their work reach the stage. He says he'll begin actively looking for a location this fall, and he wants the venture to remain informal — no season tickets, no set schedule, just a place for creative people to brainstorm, perform and socialize.

Frederick and his cohorts at Out of Cake already have an art space — a modest, wood-floored storefront next to Zootz on Forest Avenue — where they've been presenting an ongoing festival of new and experimental theater. The group's members plan to stay in Portland, so they can quietly nurture ideas away from the hubbub of saturated markets like New York City and Los Angeles. "We're not looking at it as a way to get rich or get famous but as a way to learn what we like to do," says Frederick. "Portland feels like a great studio town."

That nurturing atmosphere has spurred Out of Cake's first film project, a feature-length drama penned by Frederick about a working-class neighborhood where the children are disappearing. In the story, told from the viewpoint of a priest, Frederick mixes suspense with fantastical elements. "We'll be bringing to it some of the more expressionistic and imaginative design that we've learned from doing theater," he says of the flick, which is scheduled to be shot on Munjoy Hill this fall. If the movie turns out well, the group may take it on the national film-festival circuit.

Out of Cake is also doing its part to foster a performing community. In May, the company held an open audition that attracted 50 thespians over two days. Also on the film-scene menu for Out of Cake is "The Screenplay Buffet," set for late summer. Three screenwriters, selected from a regional pool of applicants, will receive a cash stipend from Out of Cake's corporate sponsorship dollars and hone their scripts in a week-long "lab" that culminates in formal readings.

All this activity makes one wonder whether the groups should pool efforts and money to create one collective art space. Davis thinks "we should all be like a family" and help each other with equipment, but Frederick likes the way it is now, with "lots of things bubbling up." With a scene so varied, the youngsters can go to Zero Doomsday, the pop-culture arbiters can join up with Out of Cake and those with a hankering to make TV can call on Josh McDonald.

Perhaps one big, happy collaboration is out of the question, but a Portland Film Festival may be in our future. McMahon, for one, thinks so. After all, he says, "Sundance started as a small no-name festival."

FRIDAY 5

BOOZOO CHAVIS

Zeb was clever. He sold his soul to the devil for a jewel-encrusted accordion. Ol' Lucifer was as mad as a wet tomcat when he realized that wasn't a soul at all he'd bought - just a soup can with gold stars painted on it. Zydeco master Boozoo Chavis, however, didn't have to do any soul-swapping to get where he is. The Louisiana native has been putting the squeeze on the accordion since he was a youngster, creating legions of both imitators and fans - a far cry from the childhood poverty that inspired songs like "Paper Shoe." At Raoul's, 865 Forest Ave., Portland, at 9 p.m. Tix: $12-$15. 773-6886.

TRAIL OPENING AND NATIONAL TRAILS DAY

Zeb lived in the woods, and he knew the rain would make a mess of his dirt trail. That's why he coated the surface with a nice, dense layer of Rice Krispie treats. The 126 members of the Omega Team at Windham Middle School, along with the Gorham-Sebago Regional Land Trust, celebrate the opening of the Hawkes-Towpath trail - a year-long student project - with a ribbon-cutting ceremony and nature walk. Trail lovers can continue the celebration with National Trails Day on June 6, featuring hiking ventures, giveaways and trail maintenance throughout the state. For the ribbon-cutting ceremony, meet at Windham Middle School, 408 Gray Road, at 5 p.m. 892-1824. For a full schedule of Trails Day events, call 879-7490.

Boozoo, that's whol Boozoo Chavis performs June 5.

SATURDAY 6

SKATEFEST

A loud explosion. A gust of wind. "What was that?" strangers would ask. Hell, everyone knew it was Zeb on his Acme Speed O' Sound rollerskates. Play It Again Sports presents a day of hot-wheeling activities with Skatefest, including a stunt team, a slapshot contest and maintenance clinics, plus refreshments from Raff's and Deering Ice Cream. For those unsteady on their feet, there are skating clinics, too. At Play It Again Sports, 315 Marginal Way, Portland, from 10 a.m.-3 p.m. Free. 773-6063.

SUNDAY 7

THE HOODOO BASH

When Zeb picked up a guitar - watch out! Before long, even the old folks would be noodle dancin'. The Hoodoo Bash, meanwhile, features not one but three grass-roots musical acts for the jelly-jointed. The String Cheese Incident out of Colorado teams up with Strangefolk and moe. from the East Coast to cook up a pasta tub of jam rock. At the State Theatre, 609 Congress St., Portland, at 7:30 p.m. Tix: $20. 888-767-6398.

THE OLD PORT FESTIVAL

Zeb wasn't much for the water. He'd get on a boat, and sure enough, a few minutes later he'd mutiny against himself. At the Old Port Festival, there's no need to get your feet wet. The event features plenty of landlocked activities, such as comedy performances, musical entertainment, shopping opportunities, and an international stage highlighting the music, dance and arts of Israel. The opening parade begins at City Hall, 389 Congress St., Portland, at 11 a.m. The festival is 11 a.m.-5 p.m. For a full list of events, call 797-5982.

Vive le fromage! The String Cheese Incident performs at the Hoodoo Bash, June 7.

WEDNESDAY 10

INTRODUCTORY ROCK CLIMBING CLINIC

Everyone said Mt. Diabolical couldn't be climbed. 12 miles straight up and coated with vegetable shortening, no one dared to tackle it - except Zeb. Novice rock climbers may want to start with an introductory clinic, where they'll get the instruction, equipment and know-how to make it to the peak. The clinic also provides useful wisdom for the beginner, like, "Plant the summit flag into the mountain, not your forehead" - advice Zeb never did take to heart, God rest his soul. At Maine Rock Gym, 127 Marginal Way, Portland, at 9:30 a.m. Cost: $45. Reservations required. Clinics are held Wed and Sat throughout the summer. 780-6370.

•Eduardo Mariscal and his troupe of dancers perform "Before the End," a caricature of our society at the end of the 20th century. At the Portland Stage Company, 25A Forest Ave., at 8 p.m. Also June 5. Tix: $10. 871-9056.

Prime cut
Mississippi-born folkie Steve Forbert has been wielding a guitar since the tender age of 10. Between then and now he's put out some albums — notably 1992's dark, searching "The American in Me" — and earned more than a few fans with songs chronicling the contradictory pleasures of being human. Forbert is the kind of singer-songwriter who forges a relationship with his fans and carries them through hard times by sharing his own life lessons. Catch up with an old friend, June 4 at Raoul's, 865 Forest Ave, Portland, at 8 pm. Tix: $10-$12. The Wycomicos open. 773-6886.

review

"Transitions: Processes of Growth" runs through Aug. 5 at the University of Southern Maine's Area Gallery, Portland Campus Center, Bedford Street. 780-5256. The most striking thing about this show, a somewhat random sampling from the extended ranks of noteworthy University of Southern Maine alumni, is what is lacking (Eric Hopkins and Alan Bray, for example), rather than what is present. Nonetheless, several artists stand out from what is generally a mainstream, lackluster display.

In the multimedia mode, we have "Summertime," by JoAnn Oransky, an attempt to explore digital imaging as a painterly technique; her "Lava Flow 1, 2, 3" is a much more successful effort. Bertelle Brooking's computer-generated imagery combined with mixed media in "Tumultuous Waters" is ambitious, but muddled. Her "Little Johnny," a spiraling book project using computer imagery, is appealing, but difficult to fully appreciate under glass.

Karen Lorenz' acrylic triptych, "Untitled Series of 3," is a minimalist spatial study of lines and patterns. Stephen Trip uses three-dimensional projections to enhance two-dimensional paintings, as in "Roof Tops," in which a roof and corner gable jut out from a conventional painting to create an unexpected twist. Likewise, his "Golf Course" compares and contrasts a realistic interpretation of a landscape with an abstraction of the same scene, using sculptural layers to underline the different perspectives. Joan Noon uses a technique she refers to as "drawing in space with wire" in "Body Language" and "Tilted Torso." Each of these three artists follows a process that points to a realm of intriguing possibilities, though their methods need to be refined.

Judith O'Donnell applies a bold, expressionist style to her acrylic paintings in an approach that is a combination of primitive, intuitive and psychological urges. She needs to develop these strong impulses without falling prey to self-aggrandizement — an ambitious and difficult course to follow. It is hard to know exactly how to read Patricia Dunn Wood's surreal romantic acrylics. Marilyn Tuttle's "The Ring" is a more conclusive study of contemporary mysticism.

Among the highlights here are the collaborative collages by Diane Langley, Laura Dunn and Rae Eastman, three women, born in different decades, who sent their evolving artwork to each other, round-robin style. The pieces, which have visited the East Coast, New Mexico, and southern California, are detailed montages, part of a larger body of work encompassing art, nature, domestic violence, food and other issues in the lives of women. Herb Aldrich's excellent colored-pencil pieces, "The New Moon" and "The New Day" are rich descriptions of seasonal change. Rosalie Preble Barden's "Finding A Way," a mixed-media collage with an Eastern sensibility, is masterfully rendered. And Marilyn Tuttle's "Lori's Journey" uses its unusual material — encaustic — to give her portrait a vague, dreamy veneer. ANNE SEIKONIA

Performance

Besides being a time of suffocating dreariness for women, difficult psychological readjustment for WWII vets, and all round stifling conformity for everyone, the '50s were an era when people meant what they said — like, "Duh-doo run-run, duh-doo run run." Shirley Alston Reeves — former lead singer of the '50s pop juggernaut, the Shirelles — performs those immortal lyrics, plus such classics as "Tonight's the Night" and "Dedicated to the One I Love." The evening features cabaret style seating, dancing, and a choice of appetizers. June 5 at the Italian Heritage Center, 40 Westland Ave, Portland, at 8 pm. Jesse Lee Butler opens. Tix: $20. 772-2500 or 772-0060 or 934-2506.

"Before the End" June 4 and 5. Eduardo Mariscal and his troupe of dancers, including Vicki Piper Kendrick and Deb Parish, perform an evocative piece that caricatures our society at the end of this century. At the Portland Stage Company, 25A Forest Ave., at 8 pm. Tix: $10. 871-9056.

Casco Bay Movers Spring Concert June 13. The studio performs its spring dance concert at the Portland High School Auditorium, 284 Cumberland Ave., at 7:30 pm. Tix: $8. 874-1013.

Scottish Music and Dance June 12. The performance features Highland and step dancer Laura Scott, fiddler Ed Peariman, and singer, guitarist and harp player Tony Curie, along with student dancers. At the Portland Performing Arts Center, 25A Forest Ave., at 7:30 pm. Tix: $10. 874-6958.

Stepping Out Dance Center's Spring Recital June 6. The studio performs a dance concert at Merrill Auditorium, 20 Myrtle St., Portland, at 1:30 and 7 pm. Tix: $10-$12. 283-2450.

music

Cathedral Choirs June 5. The Cathedral Choir and the Cathedral Chamber Singers of St. Luke's perform the works of Mozart. At St. Luke's Cathedral, 143 State St., Portland, at 7:30 pm. Suggested donation: $10. 772-5434.

Congress Street Minutes

Live from 576 Congress Street

It is windy and steamy outside. A sirocco wind seems to be brewing. Petra is reading "A Brief History of Everything" by Ken Wilsen and I'm drinking coffee from a cup with rainbows and butterflies on it. Kim is wearing a Walt Disney Epcot T-shirt. Chan walks by with Althea, Sarah's black dog, who sports an "I Love My Dog" leash, and tells me there is going to be a thunderstorm. It is my first afternoon off that is not a holiday in a long, long, long time.

Cars are queuing up on Forest Avenue. Some guy driving a Saturn has a mighty bass system so loud I can't tell what the song is and it makes my knees vibrate. People drift past, eyes crunched up in the dusty wind. One man walks by with a walkie-talkie. Petra tells me that she's seen a lot of homeless people carrying walkie-talkies lately. A guy from Parks and Rec is spraying the marigolds in a round cement planter with a Holder mini-tractor and a retractable hose system.

I am sitting in the left ventricle of the heart of the Arts District, which an artist friend of mine remarked should be re-named "The Psychiatric District," with banners sporting giant pill bottles. This is not meant as a cruelty, but as an observation. It's somewhat unnerving, but I'll take this over the artificial environment of a mall any day. This same artist friend also thinks the statue of legendary Hollywood director John Ford slated for Gorham's Corner, down near Giobbi's, should be scrapped in favor of a tribute to local artists who succumbed to drugs, alcohol or mental illness.

Along rolls a bottle man with a shopping cart, sleeping bag rolled up underneath. His face looks like it is about a thousand years old, as if he has seen or imagined unspeakable worlds far beyond this one. Meanwhile, a covey of punked-out kids with chains and mohawks stroll past, like some hallucination from the 1980s. A pigeon crosses my path, all gray except for pure white tail feathers, a possible omen.

The wave of grit out here is unbelievable. The Whit's End sign goes down with a SLAM! A shoal of well-heeled women wearing name tags around their necks turns the corner down Forest Avenue, dresses billowing in the wind. A kind pedestrian resurrects the Whit's End sign. The sky is eggshell blue; the light is gray. The verdant morning has paled. With a loud BRAAAP an out-of-stater gets pulled over by the Portland Police Emergency Services, inadvertently creating three lanes on Congress Street. A second bottle person approaches with her young daughter, who has grown up considerably since I first saw them making the rounds.

A man on a bicycle hands me a flyer as he whizzes past, for a Brotherhood Dogs gig at The Bitter End. Across the street a man passes, wearing one black boot and one silver boot. One half of "The Brothers Quay" strolls past. That's my significant other's nickname for a duo who are virtually inseparable and can often be glimpsed glued to the interior of various coffee shops on the peninsula. I've seen them around for years, but have never spoken to either of them. Seeing one without the other renders the whole scene askew, as if reality is in fact only a camera obscura projection. The shoal of women returns. They are walking in pairs and pointing. They cross the street and disappear into the Catholic Charities building.

It is so windy now that the potted plant in front of "DNT Nails" is on its side. The bottle man with the shopping cart heads back downtown on the other side of the street while a bearded man with a cane and a laundry cart pokes through the trash receptacles on my side that the first bottle man has already cleaned out. An existential paradigm. I take out a copy of "The Terror of the Snows," selected poems by a French-Canadian poet named Paul-Marie Lapointe, which I picked up at an outdoor book sale. I open it at random, looking for a clue. What I come up with is: "each day astonished you land upon earth/ this night was not the last." This seems obscure, yet somehow representative of the day's strange temperament. I try again, and am awarded this pithy fragment: "a thousand lovers lift me out of death/ pull me from the earth." I interpret this as the signal to head home, especially since my coffee and my eyes are filled with grit. Another interlude has passed through the cross-hairs and has already begun to coagulate, stiffen and fade. CBW

movies Review

"Bulworth," directed by Warren Beatty.
Rated R. At Hoyts Falmouth 10, 206 Route 1, Falmouth, 781-5616, and Maine Mall Cinemas, Maine Mall Rd., So. Portland, 774-1022.

The white fellow who manages to cop a homeboy stance without making a laughingstock of himself should be looked upon with great awe. Do not underestimate the difficulty of such a feat. The path to that goal is littered with the debris of failures like Vanilla Ice and Snow. Even the Beastie Boys, those crown princes of white B-boy-ness, got where they are today by capitalizing more on their whiteness than their soul.

That said, the idea of a stiff, defunct liberal of a white politician turning into a genuine homeboy seems so embarrassing and offensive that it couldn't possibly work. And of course it wouldn't, in real life. But somehow, Warren Beatty's new racial and political parody, "Bulworth," hammers the goofy power of its leading character to a smart and pithy message. Whether it's the well-chosen cast (including Don Cheadle), the aptly written lines or Warren Beatty's appropriately self-mocking spirit (which we mention that Beatty as B-boy is as ridiculous as Bill Clinton would be with a 40 and a gat?) we can't be sure. "Bulworth" just works — and that's good news for those of us who find "Primary Colors" too pro-Clinton and "Wag the Dog" painfully obvious.

We first meet incumbent U.S. Sen. Jay Bulworth (Beatty) in the last days of his re-election campaign as he sits alone in his office, stonefaced, flanked by yellowing black-and-whites of himself with various '60s-era progressive leaders. There's Bulworth with JFK, Bulworth with Martin Luther King. You get the point.

Bulworth's well-archived history of egalitarianism stands in stark opposition to the anti-white, anti-affirmative action, "edge of a new millennium" rhetoric he spouts in his media spots — which he watches again and again and again through a sleepless night. Clearly, something is loosening inside Bulworth's head. The plot unfolds beautifully with Bulworth confirming his puppethood by accepting a payoff in the form of a $10 million life insurance policy from his insurance lobbyist buddy (Paul Sorvino). He follows up by sealing a deal to have himself offed by an unknown hit man the next day. That great white guilt is gnawing at him.

Beholden to no one — his cemetery plot and his daughter's financial future secured — Bulworth turns race traitor and goes on a truth-telling rampage à la "Liar Liar." That is, he's not telling people anything they don't already know; he's just saying what everyone is too greedy and immoral to admit.

"I didn't help your neighborhood because you didn't give any money to my campaign," Bulworth tells a church full of black parishioners. Halle Berry, a sexy, sullen and scantily clad homiegirl activist, is there for his refreshing admission.

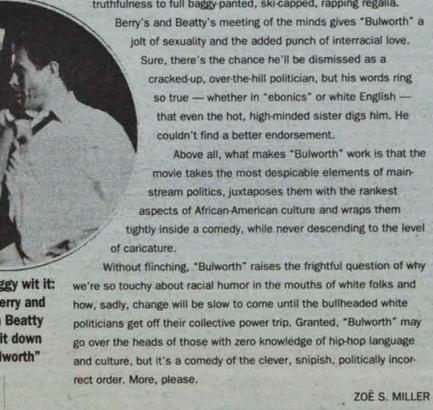

She takes to the campaign trail with Bulworth as he spirals from mere truthfulness to full baggy-panted, ski-capped, rapping regalia.

Berry's and Beatty's meeting of the minds gives "Bulworth" a job of sexuality and the added punch of interracial love.

Sure, there's the chance he'll be dismissed as a cracked-up, over-the-hill politician, but his words ring so true — whether in "economics" or white English — that even the hot, high-minded sister digs him. He couldn't find a better endorsement.

Above all, what makes "Bulworth" work is that the movie takes the most despicable elements of mainstream politics, juxtaposes them with the rankest aspects of African-American culture and wraps them tightly inside a comedy, while never descending to the level of caricature.

Without flinching, "Bulworth" raises the frightful question of why we're so touchy about racial humor in the mouths of white folks and how, sadly, change will be slow to come until the bulheaded white politicians get off their collective power trip. Granted, "Bulworth" may go over the heads of those with zero knowledge of hip-hop language and culture, but it's a comedy of the clever, snipish, politically incorrect order. More, please.

Gettin' jiggy wit it: Halle Berry and Warren Beatty shake it down in "Bulworth"

NEW THIS WEEK
AYN RAND: A SENSE OF LIFE Even though she spent her childhood in Russia, Ayn Rand still possessed enough vicious ignorance of her native country and its people to make a living off clunky, didactic and dull pro-capitalist novels. Insecure about her homesickness, an unrepentant misogynist, she established a dehumanizing cult of "logic" among her proteges, eventually driving her husband to alcoholism with her extramarital romances. And she still found the time to lend her specious authority on Russia to McCarthy and his xenophobic Lynch mob. Now Michael Paston's documentary follows the life of the inflammatory author, using interviews, film footage, personal papers and photographs. The Movies CHARACTER The legitimate son of a cold-hearted bullhead and a delusional mother strives to succeed at his law firm while grappling with the dominating, ruthless presence of his father. When the older man turns up dead, the boy becomes the prime suspect. Directed by Mike Van Diem. The Movies A PERFECT MURDER Michael Douglas — who holds the record for appearing in the most dramatic thrillers about a guy with female trouble — plays a husband who hires his wife's lover to rub out the unfaithful femme. With Gayneth Paltrow. Maine Mall Cinema, Hoyts Falmouth 10
THE TRUMAN SHOW Thanks to the restoration of some archival footage, viewers can now see episodes of the short-lived variety show starring Truman Capote and Harry S. Truman. In the pilot episode, featuring special guest stars the Clutter family — wait, that's the "The Truman and Truman Laff Hour." In "The Truman Show," Jim Carrey is an orphan whose whole life has been the subject of a live, 24-hour soap opera. When he discovers his own existence — including his wife and best friend — is a sham, he decides to break free and see what the real world is all about. Maine Mall Cinema, Hoyts Falmouth 10
WILD MAN BLUES Barbara Kopple's documentary is about, um, Woody Allen and his New Orleans-style jazz band, and — documentaries, they're just so uninteresting. Are the people on screen acting, um, like themselves, or just the way we think they should act? You start to think maybe Kant was right, maybe, um, we never can know anything for certain. Think of the implications. If you leave a tip after dinner, um, are you doing it because you have to, or because you're giving the waiter a sense of purpose? Keystone Theatre Cafe

ALSO SHOWING

ALMOST HEROES Matthew Perry and the late Chris Farley star as Edwards and Hunt, a couple of bungling frontsmen — a la Lewis and Clark — on an expedition to the Pacific coast. Hoyts Clark's Pond, Hoyts Falmouth 10
THE BIG HIT Mark Wahlberg returns for another below-the-belt picture, this time as a hit man (Wahlberg who discovers he's being set up by everyone he's closest to. With Lou Diamond Phillips and Christina Applegate. Nickelodeon
THE BIG LEBOWSKI The Coen brothers ("Fargo," "Raising Arizona") take another refracted look at middle America with this story of a dippy kowler (Jeff Bridges) who is kidnapped after being mistaken for a high roller behind on his debts. Also with John Goodman. Nickelodeon
BULWORTH Warren Beatty stars as the title character, a pawn of lobbyists who suffers a nervous breakdown, takes out a contract on his own life, and proceeds to tell it like it is. He raps, too. With Halle Berry. Reviewed this issue. Maine Mall Cinema, Hoyts Falmouth 10
CITY OF ANGELS Are they still handing out Oscars at the Academy Awards, or is it halos now? Nicolas Cage is Seth, a bedside surgeon who falls in love with a dying man's beautiful surgeon (Meg Ryan). Sooner than you can say a Hal May, the winged one has taken the plunge from grace right into the good doctor's bedroom. "Wings of Desire" devotees will no doubt scorn this remake for its Hollywood stylings, but the film conveys its theme ("better to have loved and lost than to never have loved at all") with humor and smartness. Reviewed 4/16/98. Maine Mall Cinema
DEEP IMPACT To this day, it's still unclear what's more terrifying about the '70s schlock disaster pic "Earthquake": the disaster itself or having to watch Lorne Greene perform heroics. What is clear is that, these days, a disaster has to threaten to obliterate a whole city, not just shake it up. Or, in the case of "Deep Impact," obliterate the world. Robert Duvall and Morgan Freeman lead this terror-from-the-heavens biggie about a comet headed for Earth. Reviewed this issue. Hoyts Clark's Pond, Hoyts Falmouth 10, Pride's Corner Drive-In FEAR AND LOATHING IN LAS VEGAS Terry Gilliam ("Brazil") directed this movie version of Hunter S. Thompson's autobiographical novel about the drug-warped mishaps — some of them unsettling — he encountered while covering a narcotics-enforcement convention in Las Vegas. Hoyts Clark's Pond, Hoyts Falmouth 10
FIREWORKS Your partner's crippled, your wife

is dying, the mob is on your case — what's a good cop to do? Get bad, for one. Then knock off a bank, rub out a few people out while you're at it, and hope to hell your former coworkers show a little mercy. Directed by and starring Takeshi Kitano. The Movies GODZILLA He's mean and he's green. The terror from the South Pacific rises again, this time skipping Tokyo (the city's been razed enough for the concrete jungle of the Big Apple. The only people who won't get a kick out of the major-league mayhem are those with chronic impairment of the enjoyment glands. Reviewed 5/25/98. Hoyts Clark's Pond, Hoyts Falmouth 10 GOOD WILL HUNTING When one therapist after another gives up on the brilliant but troubled Will Hunting (Matt Damon), he's finally handed over to a shrink at the community college (Robin Williams). The doc may not have a Cambridge address, but he has what all the others don't: patience. Reviewed 1/15/98. Keystone Theatre Cafe HOPE FLOATS Sandra Bullock is a former high school princess who leaves her cheating husband and returns to her sleepy hometown. For the local stud (Harry Connick Jr.) who's always loved her but never had the courage to say so, it's a second chance at realizing his dream: to marry her and get a part in one of them "Speed" movies. Hoyts Clark's Pond, Hoyts Falmouth 10 THE HORSE WHISPERER Even though it's not uncommon for horses to whisper "you stupid boob" each time you turn your back on them, this equine epic has less to do with our four-legged friends than with the remarkable healing powers of TLC. Robert Redford stars as a dewy, soft-shouldered cowboy who tames feral ponies — and the hearts of coltish women much, much too young for him. Hoyts Clark's Pond, Hoyts Falmouth 10 LES MISÉRABLES Don't blame Victor Hugo if a movie about an innocent man relentlessly pursued by a cop sounds familiar. The French author's sweeping historical novel had dabbled on the persecuted-saint premise 130 years before "The Fugitive." The movie itself is top-heavy, concentrating all its effort into the first hour and letting the second go to waste. The climactic battle scenes are a particular dig. Geoffrey Rush, however, is fantastic as the loquacious Javert. Each time he appears on screen, the temperature in the theater drops 10 degrees. With Liam Neeson, Claire Danes and Uma Thurman. Reviewed 5/7/98. Nickelodeon THE OBJECT OF MY AFFECTION He's just been dumped and needs a room. She needs a roommate. He's a guy. She has a boyfriend. But they're just friends — right? Bearing obdurate parallels to "Chasing Amy," this comedy from Nicholas Hytner ("The Madness of King

George") tries to find the line that separates hetero from homosexuality. Maybe, on the way, we'll also find the line that separates chic exploitation from conscientious dialogue. But let's hope not, or we can forget studied art house epics like "Mandingo." With Jennifer Aniston and Paul Rudd. Reviewed 4/23/98. Nickelodeon PAULIE DreamWorks obviously raked in a bundle from its other animal-outwits-man film, "Mushroom," or they probably wouldn't have greenlighted this film about a talking parrot. Nickelodeon QUEST FOR CAMELOT After he's accidentally blinded, King Arthur's stable boy runs off to the woods where he learns to survive by his instincts. An encounter with a beautiful maiden prompts him to return to court and fight for his rightful position at the round table. Meanwhile, they're sure to charm your pants off by finding any odd reason to break out into song: "Oh, I'm on my way to gettin' a lit-tle blood lettin' I there's nothin' quite as peachy as a little leechy, leechy/Ahh, ho, ho!" Hoyts Falmouth 10 SLIDING DOORS A woman is fired, an occurrence that sets off two divergent realities. In one, she catches an early train, and arrives home only to discover her boyfriend in bed with another woman. In the other, she misses the train, and ends up leading a life of dull ennui. Got that? Keystone Theatre Cafe THE SPANISH PRISONER You can't trust David Mamet. He stands there shuffling his cards, and when he holds one up and asks you to memorize it, you're secretly watching to see what his other hand is doing. Just when you figure out exactly how the trick is done, you stand up to leave and realize he's tied your shoelaces together. So go ahead, take another crack at him with "The Spanish Prisoner." The fast-bottomed plot involves a naive company man who may be a con, who may be being conned, or who may just be the bait for a con job. Who the hell knows? With Campbell Scott and Steve Martin. Keystone Theatre Cafe TITANIC With a script that's entertaining but not refreshing, Cameron scuttles the allegorical possibilities of the Titanic and instead launches a shallow romance between Jack Dawson (DiCaprio) and Rose De Wit Bukator (Winslet). All the same, when the ship finally goes down, it does so with fitting spectacle and grandeur. Reviewed 1/1/98. Maine Mall Cinema, Hoyts Falmouth 10 THE WEDDING SINGER Adam Sandler stars as a musician on the rebound in this homage to '80s pop. With Drew Barrymore. Nickelodeon

ADVERTISING "Super Sales Rep"

You are needed at once for this fast growing publication. You must be bright, self-motivated, empathetic but tough, kind but determined, have high energy, have demonstrated courage, possess persistent and patient sales skills that consistently put you over budget and you must have a strong sense of humor that lets you roll with the punches.
This 10-year old free alternative weekly has a current circulation of 30,000 and a readership of over 77,000. And we're growing. If you get on board with our winning team now you are going to be more challenged than you have ever been, work harder than you have ever worked, have more fun and be well compensated.
We intend to grow our paper to meet the demands of a growing readership. We intend to compete with a determined eye on excellence. We are ruthless about quality and intolerant of poor service. We will have a better product in which people will recognize the quality and value.

Do You Have The Stomach For Summer?

Why waste another summer running on the treadmill to nowhere, when you could be toning your abs, getting in shape and having fun while you're learning to defend yourself?

Our Cardio Karate® program takes the music, excitement and energy of aerobics but adds important self-defense techniques like jabbing, kicking, punching and blocking. You learn while you burn at 800 calories per hour! (According to Muscle and Fitness Magazine who rated aerobic kickboxing as the number one calorie burning workout!)

There's no physical contact, no uniforms (you wear your regular workout clothes) and best of all you'll love it! Classes are forming now, call today!
