SEXUAL ASSAULT: County court finds resident guilty after one day of testimony.

MARC CHASE DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A former SIUC student was found guilty in county court Wednesday of sexually assaulting a Saluki Express bus driver while the victim was driving along her bus route last spring.

Carbondale resident Marshall Wheaton, who was an undecided freshman in spring 1996, was found guilty of two counts of sexual assault after one day of testimony.

-Both counts carry a minimum of four years in prison each and a maximum of I years in prison without probation. Circuit Judge David Watt Jr. handed down the conviction after Wheaton waived his right to jury Monday.

The conviction comes after an incident that took place while Barbara Reeves, a former Saluki bus driver, was on duty March 4.

Wheaton, who testified in Jackson County Court Wednesday that Reeves had consented to have sex with him, was a passenger Beggs, who was invited by the Smith Hall Council in Thompson Point, said the purpose of his visit was to get student opinions on issues to make the University more "user-friendly" and inform the students about what changes are planned for the University.

"The University is here to meet students' needs," Beggs said. "If we were meeting students' needs, we wouldn't need to be here. I kind of want to shake things up. Just because we've done something one way for 10 years, does that mean we still should?"

Beggs began the informal evening with a short talk about how he remembered Thompson Point as a student in the early '60s and his memories of SIUC Halloween tra-

"This is kind of nostalgic,"
Beggs said to the group of about 30. "I don't see any carvings of mine on the furniture, but I do see the same kind of problems I had, when I was a student here."

Beggs said these problems included a feeling of being "lost" on campus, being unaware of special services for students and SIUC's negative "party image" reputation.

A businessman says he plans to learn as well as share his business experience with SIUC students while participating in the Executive in Residence Program for the College of Business and Administration.

Brady, who has visited other col-leges like the University of Illinois, Northwestern University and Dartmouth College, said the founda-tion frequest on the development of tion focuses on the development of minorities entering the business field. He said the goal is to increase stu-dents' abilities to deal with the capacity of the work place.
"In order to guarantee longevity in the field, you have to serve people the best way possible," Brady said. "Business is service."

While meeting with faculty, Brady will discuss new initiatives for business students like strengthening busi-ness techniques and resource development. He said he wants to make sure the curriculum of the business program at SIUC prepares students to be successful in the business field.

Thomas Keon, dean of the College of Business and Administration, said Brady has interesting views on how to better the education of students to guarantee success.

Cammie Neeley, a freshman in mortuary science from Chicago, said she is pleased that Brady is visiting she is pleased that Blady is visiting the earnpus. Last year, Neeley became the first recipient of the H.B. Brady Foundation Scholarship for academic status and financial need. The scholarship was for $500.

GOP moving to embrace long-term budget planning

President Clinton's new budget, set for release Thursday, will help set the government's short-term agenda, but congressional Republicans are moving to embrace a long-term approach that could strengthen their oversight of feder-al programs and how agencies spend taxpayer dollars.

The effort involves a little-known law — the Government Performance and Results Act — that Senate Republicans pushed in 1993 and that Clinton signed and endorsed as a building block for Vice President Al Gore's "reinventing government" project. Under the law, agencies will be required to write strategic plans, set goals and measure their performance.

"Previously, quality has been the primary criterion used in review," Yopp said, "Now it's one of several."

Paul LeBlanc, Graduate and Professional Student Council vice president and a Graduate Council member, said the IBHE places a larger priority on how many students are in a program rather than the quality of a program.

However, Yopp said, a program that does not generate enough student interest will have to be eliminated or modified.

The number of jobs available in the market also was considered in evaluating the programs that supply those fields with graduates, Yopp said.
The IBHE is concerned that there not be so many graduate programs of the same type in the 12 public universities that they overpro-

Yopp said most programs that do not meet the criteria, which were approved by the Graduate Council and GPSC, will be either merged, restructured or eliminated.

Chancellor Donald Beggs said only similar programs would be consolidated.

The specialization of the program could

Beggs said.

LeBlanc said students in programs recommended for consolidation or elimination will be allowed to finish school before the change.

Confusion result of gender equity

Dear Editor:

Corinne Mannino's column Friday was a little confusing to me. I appreciate her little confusing to me. I appreciate her chance to air her opinions, and I'd like to respond. She proclaimed that men dressing in women's clothes, women refusing to shave their legs, and women asserting them-selves as independent people (women's atti-tude that "they can do everything them-selves," as she wrote) is just causing too much gender confusion to be tolerated.

With the enlightenment of modern minds, yes, confusion about gender roles is inevitable. Just that Friday, a complete stranger opened the door to the Student Center for me. I was offended — I knew the only reason he did this was because I was a female, and I felt singled out, treated like I was weak. However, when out with my boyfriend and friends, opening doors for each other is a mutual practice of courtesy. Hence, some confusion exists. But it seems Ms. Mannino is criticizing

"new" practices — women, for example, not shaving their legs, ergo trying to look like men (?). I suppose she wants us to maintain society's unnatural dictum that our skin is always hair-free, Men don't shave, because, always hair-free. Men don't shave, because, again, society says they shouldn't. Should women go back to another masculine tradition of extending the vote to only white males? Is that the path to equality?

As far as the Miss Gay pageant, I feel, as think many do, that a man in drag takes joy in this refreshing abandonment of the nule uniform of shirt and shorts/pants. I guess, Ms. Mannino, you refuse to wear pantsuits uniform of shirt and shorts/pants. I guess, Ms. Mannino, you refuse to wear pantsuits and jeans because, after all, that would be you trying to look like men. Well, the unwritten laws of our largely patriarchal society have clamped down on what we can wear, say and do for far too long. I'm sorry if a man in a dress threatens you, or a woman buring her furry less greats your sensibilibaring her furry legs revolts your sensibili-ties. These people are being themselves, say-ing once and for all that gender roles are no longer guided by a restrictive society, and expanding the options of minorities, includ-ing women like yourself, for the future.

Student input could improve quality of technology at SIUC

INFORMATION administration and University Housing officials are opening the door for better communication between them and students on improving the current computing system on campus.

This open door is an opportunity for students to influence the University's technological future - a breakthrough idea.

They are asking for views and student expertise on specific needs and problems associated with the current system and optional future plans for computing on campus. From those ideas, SIUC's technology future, at least for the next five years, will be charted and prioritized by need and wants.

RESOURCES ARE LIMITED, BUT WITH increasing funding from the Illinois Board of Higher Education through allocations for updating technology, students are sure to reap the rewards of better equipment, improved access and more connections to the Internet and other technologies.

The Ethernet system — one of the many options currently being studied — in the residence halls would allow students to access the Internet from their dorm rooms with convenience, safety and greater ease than the current telephone line system. Not only would Ethernet help students, but it could retain and attract students.

ETHERNET IS USED AT DIFFERENT universities around the state, and could be a reality at SIUC if only students would express their opinions and ideas. With a little bit of input, planning and prioritizing, this system could be implemented.

But this is only one idea that officials are considering. If students want this option or any other option, like more computing labs or stations, they need to either contact Undergraduate Student Government senators or University officials who are handling the subject. Student input needs to be voiced.

STUDENTS, THIS IS THE TIME TO IMPRESS on the administration how important computing on campus is and what you want to see for the future of SIUC technology. It is time to make your early Christmas wish list for computing on campus.

"Our Word" represents a consensus of the Daily Egyptian Editorial Board.

Also called to the stand was Carbondale Police Officer John Kluge, who questioned Wheaton about the incident March 5.

Kluge said when he first spoke with Wheaton about the incident, Wheaton denied any knowledge of sexual assault. But Kluge said Wheaton later claimed to have had sex with Reeves of Reeves' own free will.

The trial took about feer hours to unfold.

Historian artist captures collage of papered-images

OLLY WINKLER-MITCHELL CAPTURES THE RICH SOUTHERN ILLINOIS HISTORY USING ONLY SCISSORS AND SMALL PIECES OF PAPER IN HER EXHIBIT "IT STARTED WITH MATISSE" ON DISPLAY AT THE SMALL BUSINESS INCUBATOR.

Winkler-Mitchell is a Carbondale resident and historian and her interest in the area's history and development make up the theme for most of are works on disnlar play.

One historical work is "The Day the Train Came to Town." The collage depicts one of the biggest events to hit Carbondale. The scene captures the excitement of 2-year-old Carbondale as it had its first taste of modernization on July 4, 1854. Silhouettes of the townspeople stand in spectacle of the first locomotive to hit town on the "iron road," the horses on the street buck and jump for fear of the new steel beast.

The scene is not much unlike that of the Amtrak station as SIUC students wait to board the train before Christmas or spring break. The only difference is the horse-drawn carriages are now replaced with cars and the occasional cabby from Carbondale's two-man fleet.

Winkler-Mitchell titled the exhibit "It Started with Matisse" because she was inspired by an exhibit by Matisse.
"Several years ago, I went to the St. Louis Art Museum," Winkler-Mitchell

"Several years ago. I went to the St. Louis Art Museum," Winkler-Mitchell said. The purpose of our trip was to see Matisse's exhibit. It was contemporary and abstract."

Winkler-Mitchell said she started cutting paper immediately following the trip because she thought she could do the same quality of work but use traditional themes. The major difference between Winkler-Mitchell's works and those of Matisse lies in the fact that she relies on detail to portray her strong Southern Illinois themes.

"I thought I could cut paper with a more universal appeal," she said about her artwork not being abstract compared to Matisses. Matisse's art dominated the 20th century art world. The later works of Matisse Matisse's art dominated the 20th century art world. The later works of Matisse inspired Winkler-Mitchell's creative outlet. Although Matisse's better known works used canvas and paint. Winkler-Mitchell's collages resemble his later work, which focuses on delicate snips of paper and color. Although Matisse always created his collages in color, Winkler-Mitchell started her art career using only delicate surgical scissors and black silhouette paper to convey traditional ideas. "Polly's Original Arc" depicts a scene using the Biblical story of Noah's Arc. The work almost has an African feel to it with elongated shapes of the animals and people.

Winkler-Mitchell was able to capture the confusion of having to pile all the animals onto the boat by creating a jungle with figures of elephants, monkeys, snakes and cats. But, the serenity comes out in the scene, as all the animals are peacefully awaiting to board the ship before the violent storm hits. The collage was made from only a single sheet of black silhouette paper.

Unlike her early works, Winkler-Mitchell's later works use color and multiple pieces of paper to create a collage of colored images. The themes of her later works stray away from traditional themes and lean toward historic Southern Illinois.

By using color, she said her artwork opened up to a whole new kind of storytelling. With the addition of color and her attraction to local history, her art flourished.

As Winkler-Mitchell showed Carbondale's progress through the years, she made her collages busier with life and used more colors. She used actual photos in a few of her works including "The Saturday Auction" and The Spiller Grandchildren Review the Troops," both on display.

As well as students having access to view her collages, Carbondale residents also have shown interest in her hometown pieces.

Carbondale residents, Robert and Marge Schulhof, are the proud owners of "Carbondale's First Christian Church of 1901-02." She said the sentiment grew when Winkler-Mitchell decided to use the original church in the collage.

"It has a very special meaning, and it is an important symbol to me," Marge Schulhof said. "She always puts something special in her work."

RETURN OF A GLASSIC

The "Star Wars" films seem to rise from the ashes like a phoenix every few years. George Lucas' elaborate space opera has inspired dozens of imitators and has given rise to a generation of mythology that remains prevalent even today.

Of course, the recent frenzy of fan drooling has reached a zenth with the release of the "Special Editions," in which all three of the films have been re-released upon the screen with digital effects makeover, new sound mix, as well as discarded footage. This ploy depends on your outlook: a great testament to the film or a money-grubbing scam.

Cynicism aside, "Star Wars: Special Edition" has just a few additions to the original. The added digitals are well-placed, augmenting the old footage to a new splendor. Yet the advancement makes some of the older effects seem stilted and outdated, as if the geniuses at Industrial Light and Magic got bored with the restoration and stuck to the effects they thought mattered.

While one cannot deny the grandeur of the space battles or deny the impact "Star Wars" had upon technical advances in film, the problems still are relevant. No special effect made can rectify the corny dialogue and hammed performances that pillage the film. The story, as well as the characters, are almost too simple. They lack the complexities and frailties for basic human empathy.

Then there's the idea of the film itself. "Star Wars" seems to have transcended the basic boundaries of cinema and crossed over into commerce. It is not a film anymore; it is a phenomenon — one that seems to spring up every few years not on the basis of entertainment value, but pure nostalgia. At the time of reicase, television seemed to be set to replace storytelling and great literate adventures. No wonder "Star Wars" struck such a chord.

With this, Lucas should be applauded in some sense. Armed with a melding of pulp heroes, comic books, Arthurian legend, direct lifts from John Ford and Akira Kurosawa, and the theories of Joseph Campbell, Lucas brought the idea of mythology back to the culture. "Star Wars" merely borrowed the right elements from the right places. This in mind, Lucas seems to be flogging a dead horse with the "Special Edition." The original film has not aged well, no matter how much digital tinkering has not aged well, no matter now much origital tinkening was bestcwed upon it. Nostalgia can only go so far. So get in line, dust off your action figures and take a hit off that R2-D2 bong. "Star Wars: Special Edition" is worth seeing on the big screen, if only for its immensity and not content. For one day, it will return to the dust once more.

VIDEO PICK: "THEY LIVE"

The recent trend in modern films has been the crucifixion of that decadent, conservative era known in the hearts of men as the 80s. John Carpenter's "They Live" is the quintessential 80s chronicle: cynical, indul-gent and pessimistically humored. The film also stands as one of the most ignored, under-appreciated science fiction films ever made.

The film shows the life of an anonymous every man (Roddy Piper) who finds the world being populated by an alien race not bent on blowing up every city, or eat-ing everything in its path, but-planning to buy the world piece by piece like some sort of galactic corpo-rate takeover. The film works effectively as a pure action film, yet reading between the lines one can see Carpenter's unsettling agenda and sly, cynical sense of humor. He's one of the best directors around, and "They Live," while not his best film, certainly is his most intriguing.

REVIEWER'S CHOICE .

The Bollweevils Weevilive

Dr. Strange Records, 1996

The Bollweevils are a prime example of what Chicago punk has to offer, but "Weevilive," the band's live album, is strictly for the seasoned fan.

Of course, the sound quality of this album, recorded at the Metro in Chicago, cannot compare to its earlier studio-recorded albums. Only after seeing them live will the band's thrashing hard-core rifs and energetic way of getting the crowd into the show come out. The virgin punk is better off buying "Stick Your Neck Out" or "History of the Bollweevils Part I."

Despite not quite matching up with studio-quality sound, the CD does offer a few distinct qualities that only the Bollweevils can offer. What the CD does offer is a good picture of who the band really is and their devotion to the Chicago punk scene.

The Bollweevils also pay a little respect to their roots in a tribute to Naked Raygun, the old school Chicago punk legends. The song "Rat Patrol" will bring back memories to Naked Raygun fans and is a welcome addition to the album.

"Weevilive" is raw punk, untamed by the world of the recording studies. Listening to it extremely loud is not an option — it is the law.

Cake Fashion Nugget Capricorn Records, 1996

Cake's second release features music so slow they could not possibly miss a beat. Maybe it is me — behind the times of this new-fangled music era where MTV actually needs another channel to play music videos, so they can air pointless game shows. Then again, maybe it is all Cakes' fault for releasing "fashion Nugget' and showing music fans what kind of trash can get produced if you know someone in the business. "The Distance," seems to actually make fun of a guy for trying to improve himself. After listening to that song three straight times — DO NOT TRY THIS AT HOME — I came to the conclusion that I have no idea what these guys are singing about. The song could be about masturbation for all I know, a hobby Cake should take up instead of playing music.

Cake often relies on the singer's monotonous voice to carry the rest of the band members, who play their instruments slow enough to make you question their musical ability.

I would not even let these guys work the snack shop at a concert much less the stage. Frisbee sounds too good for "Fashion Nugget." An ashtray would provide a much better fate for the CD.

Nerf Herder Nerf Herder Arista Records, 1996

Nerf Herder's self-titled first release takes a swat at mimicking that '50s style rock with an added '90s with. You cannot help but compare Nerf Herder to Weezer or some later Screeching Weasel. Nerf Herder's twist comes mostly in the form of added distortion — too much distortion in certain songs. Easy Mark' relies solely on distortion to provide a melody.

Nerf Herder's major strength lies within s lyrics. "Down on Haley" paints a vivid icture of a bad street, where crack dealers for prostitutes are a common sight. They o not fall into the trap of preaching whether it is a good or bad street. They just whether it is a good or bad street. They just let you know what is out there. The major problem with Nerf Herder's music is the fact they play too slow and never really show they can rock out or use some creative ability in their melodies. On songs where the lyrics, lack strength and substance, like "Nosering Girl" and "I Only Eat Candy," the band seenis to simply repeat melodies and lyrics over and over to make an already-weak song weaker.

an already-weak song weaker.
Overall, Nerf Herder's first release is a quality-attempt to out-do existing bands of 10 songs on the CD, five deserve a second screening. They have potential.

Strung Out Suburban Teenage Wasteland Blues Fat Wreck Chords, 1996

Strung Out's CD release "Suburban Teenage Wasteland Blues" is an explosion of speed and rage that will lend any happy disposition an earful of punk rock enlightdisposition at same of Suburban Teenage enment.

When you listen to "Suburban Teenage Wasteland Blues," the guitars seem to stand out, but only for a second, because the vocals, drums and bass draw you into the songs — until you realize everything about their music stands out.

Strung Out can be heard on Fat Wreck Chord's CD complation "Survival of the Fattest" with the song "Rottin' Apple," which was one of the best on the disc.

Songs like "Firecracker" and "Better Days" do an excellent job of displaying their mastery over music and tempo.

Although many of the themes of the songs deal with belied depressed or placed off. Strung Out's style does not make you want to sit there and seethe in anger. It makes you want to get off your duff and do something about it. The best way to describe the feel of their music would be to call it inspirational music for punks. And if you are not a punk, you may have hope yet ser listening to this disc.

It is a world in which armored knights battle gigantic fire-breathing dragons, where blood thirsty vampires lurk dangerously in every shadow, a land where majestic unicorns drink from briskly babbling brooks — and all that is needed to enter this fantasy realm of endless adventure is a kitchen table, an imagination and a hobby game.

the pressures of reality

Hobby game is a collective name for four separate types of imagination-based games. $Mini^atures$ games are one type of hobby game. These are games in which giant robotic machines fire lasers and missiles at one another, or foot soldiers and cavalry troops fight bloodbathed battles. These games are called miniatures games because they use small figurines to represent each player's troops.

In these small-scale combats, each player controls the strategic movement and attacks of certain small figurines on a table-size battlefield simulation. When a player's figurine is symbolically 'killed' by the imaginary weapons of another player's figurine, it is then removed from the battle in the same way a chess piece is removed from the game when it is symbolically killed. The goal of each player is to defeat the troops of the other players and become the champion of the battlefield. A well-known example is the game "Battletech.

second form of hobby gaming is the roleplaying game. In these games, one-on-one swashbuckling sword fights and restful conversation at the local fire lit inn are everyday occurrences In this type of game, each play er assumes the adventurous day-to-day life of a character in an imaginary world. The only necessities for these games are a sheet of paper, dice, a rule book and a vivid imagination. These games are unique in the sense that a player never wins or loses the game, because the game has no set goal to achieve. The game continues until the player's character is destroyed. "Dungeons and Dragons" is a classic example.

Hobby gaming also manifrests in the form of board games. In these games, such as "Diplomacy," the player attempts to form alliances with other players, and players attempt to reach the same goal every time they play.

Miniatures games, role-playing games and board games all have a common link. All three use dice to determine the outcome of events anytime something random (such as whether or not an imaginary rifle shot hits its mark) must be decided. These dice are of various shapes and colors. There are even unique dice used in these games, which have as few as four sides and as many as 100 sides.

There is, however, a form of hobby gaming that does not utilize dice. Using a "water card to counteract another player's "fire card," and then returning the attack with a "monster card is how a tradable card game such as $Magi^c$ is played. Strategy and luck of the draw determine the outcome of the game. It differs from a stand- alone card game such as "Uno," because players collect and trade the cards they use in the game rather than using a standardized

While one theoretically could purchase any of these types of hobby games and eventually figure out how to play it, Scott Thorne, owner manager of the hobby game store Castle Perilous, 715 S. University Ave. Suite 203, said he does not recommend doing so because of the complexity of the games.

"It's best to get associated with someone else who is already familiar with it," he said. "Most gamers are willing to teach you if you express a

"On Saturdays we come in, we play, we relax, we have a good time," he said. When we play the games, the person running the game may be dealing with one Individual at a time, and that leaves the rest of us sitting there free to talk to each other. I think it's more about socializing than anything else."

While the number of members in the SGS varies greatly from year to year, Thorne said he player believes hobby gaming is not without its

"My grades could be higher if I spent my spare time studying instead of gaming." he Thorne said while role-playing games and card games are relatively new, miniatures gaming and board gaming are much older.

"Board gaming pre-dates role playing.
'Diplomacy' was President John F. Kennedy's favorite board game," he said. "Role playing only dates back to 1970 or 1971 with the introduction of GreyHawk, which eventually became the basic Dungeons and Dragons game. And the trading card games came out about 1993

Thorne said the roots of modern miniatures games such as "Battletech" existed much > "Miniatures gaming dates back to the 1880s," he said, "when H.G. Wells developed a set of miniatures rules called 'Little

Over the years, Thorne said he has seen the mainstream popularity of hobby gaming come and go.

The early '80s was the high point of the gaming hobby because you could find them (hobby games) on the shelf at Wal-Mart. And, Sears offered them through their toy catalog, he said. "So I would say, their popularity has slacked off.

Thorne said the card games are the exception because they can be purchased almost anywhere now. "You could find Magic in bars and in fish stores, for god's sake," he said.

Thorne said the amazing popularity of Magic, which peaked about two years ago, introduced many people to hobby gaming, and a large number of those people now are playing other games as well.

We saw a lot of people coming into the hobby due to the Magic card game," he said. "Now we're seeing a lot of those people shifting over to role playing and war gaming."
For students who are interested in getting a taste of hobby gaming, the Strategic Games Society will have its annual gaming convention, the Egyptian Campaign, March 28 through March 30. Thorne said it is the largest gaming convention in Illinois, and various visitors come from the quad-state area.

"It pulls in a lot of people," he said. "Last year there were 550 people roughly attending, this year we hope to see about 600 people."

Even if you get eaten by a dragon, get transformed into a zombie by a vampire or get all your infantry troops slaughtered in a messy civil war battle, the one thing you should not have to fight is boredom.

This year the Egyptian Campaign will be in the Student Center Balirooms on the second floor. The cost is $10 for all three days with pre-registration and $12 at the door. For more information, or for a pre-registration packet, cali Joel Nadler at 529-4630.

Many students at SIUC take part in hobby gaming, and each of them seem to have their own unique views on the pros and cons of loel Kimme, a junior in cinema and photography from Belleville, said he likes to play a lot of different role-playing games because it allows him to escape the everyday pressures of college life.

"It's a chance to suspend reality and have some fun," he said.

John Null, a sophomore in automotive technology from Westmont, said he spends about 48 hours a week hobby gaming. He said he takes part in the games because there are no limits to what he can do when he does it in an

"You can get away with doing anything you want, and it's all legal," he said. "You don't have to worry about the cops crashing in and saying you can't do something.

Null said even though he spends so many hours playing the games each week, he does not believe that it interferes with his school

"I usually focus on my classes, and then game to relax in my spare time," he said.

All players seem to agree that hobby gaming is not addictive or dangerous as it is portrayed in movies such as Tom Hank's 1980s movie
"Mazes and Monsters." However, at least one

Hyperion 1997

> Decisions. decisions and more decisions plague the mind of young lean Stevenson as she walks through the world of college life, career decisions and sexuality choices.

"Ain't Gonna Be The Same Fool Twice." by April Sinclair, a native from Chicago, explores the life of a person who. like many college stu-dents, has to make choices that will affect her the rest of her life.

The main character in the book, Jean Stevenson, leaves the comforts of her inner-city Chicago home and the safety of her parents to embark on her college career to a rural university in Illinois. Sound familiar?

are easy to identify with. From the trauma of figuring out the right major, to the dilemma of whether or not peet pressure will force her into trying marijuana, it is easy to under-stand the struggles she goes through as a college student.
"Ain't Gonna Be The Same

Fool Twice." reads like a non-fiction autobiography. The descrip-tion and images projected in the book are so real that it is easy to get caught up in Jean's struggle to understand her feelings and desires.

Through the years of 1971 to 1975, Jean, an African American, deals with problems of racism. adjusting to new friends and try-ing to find a career. Jean's biggest dilemma is when she realizes her attraction to women, which makes her question her sexuality.

When Jean finishes college and heads for San Francisco on a graduation trip with friends from college, a problem with a blind date leaves her alone in this strange city where she can expiore things that have been forbidden for her in the college

"Maybe it was time to put myself in a situation where I could check out my feelings toward women. With a few phone calls, I could probably find a women's bar. This was my ? ? chance. I was away from home, and no one would ever have to know. My heart raced at the thought of entering such a forbidden

When Jean meets a woman whom she finds interesting, she has to question her sexuality and her career goals. She must decide whether going back to Illinois and working for a small-town newspaper will be too mundane for her or if she should stay in San Francisco and quench her thirst for excitement that would be unavailable in Illinois.

"After breakfast, I called home to deliver the news. Mama answered the phone. I took a deep breath. 'Mama, I've made some new friends and I'm gonna stay in San Francisco and look for a job."

While in San Francisco, Jean learns the ins and outs of the gay night life, problems of infidelity and lack of compassion with her same-sex lovers, and the disre-spectful way that straight people react to lesbians. When she meets a strange man, she ques-tions whether or not relationships with just women are enough for her.

For me, the test of really good fiction that is told in the first person is whether or not the story is believable, and this book defi-

was written as if Sinclair were actually livng the experiences, which really hooked me as a reader.

"Ain't Gonna Be The Same Fool Twice" is not just another piece of fiction; it is a life's lesson from a person who took chances and was willing to take what the world was willing to offer. It is a well-written, moving story that may one day be deemed a

Web mimics classic games

Not everyone has the time or patience for complicated role-playing games on the Web. Those who can only spare a few minutes at a time for the Web need simple diversions. Some of these "Interactive Web Games" successfully recreate the fun and excitement of the analog originals while others weed out the games' necessary quirks.

http://www.westnet.com/~cry-wait/pothead/pothead.html Virtual Mr. Spud Head is the equivalent of that silly tuber of a children's toy, Mr. Potato Head. Unlike other decoratethe-potato sites on the Web that generate anatomically correct black-and-white spuds, Mr. Virtual Spud Head lets creplaces. Some may opt to decorate an assortment of other vegetables on the faces of contemporary political figures.

COACH FIRED:

Washinton's Lynam joins growing list of jobless coaches.

Washington Post

DENVER - The mixture of high expectations, high salaries and poor results cost Jim Lynam his job Wednesday when the Washington Bullets fired their coach of the past two seasons.

Assistant coach Bob Staak was named the interim replacement and assistant Clifford Ray was retained. The Bullets also fired assistant Buzz Braman. General Manager Wes Unseld flew here to inform the coaches and the players of the decision Wednesday morning, then returned to Washington.

Lynam, who had signed a two-year contract extension last summer worth more than $1 million per year, declined to comment when reached in his Denver hotel room Wednesday. In the team's news release, he was quoted as news release, he was quoted as saying: "I'm very disappointed at not having the opportunity to see this through. I take full responsi-bility for the performance of the team and I certainly feel that our record is not reflective of the talent on this team."

Lynam's overall record with the Bullets was 82-128, includ-

RODMAN REPENTS:

Bull's bad boy back from suspension, vows to play next 11 games for free.

NEWSDAY

Dennis Rodman's sentence is over. But the David Stern-imposed probation will now begin.

probation will now begin.
The commissioner announced
Tuesday that Rodman's suspension will end following the All-Star break, However, Stern hinted that Rodman is one serious incident away from being banned from bas-ketball.

"Dennis told me that while he "Dennis told me that while he does not plan to change the way he plays the game, he will conform his conduct on the playing court to acceptable standards." Stem said in a statement, "and he knows that may end his career in the NBA."

Rodman received an 11-game suspension without pay for kicking a TV cameraman in Minnesota during the Bulls-Timberwolves game on Feb. 11. The penalty was severe — only the 26 games Kermit Washington received for punching Rudy Tomjanovich dur-ing a game in 1977 was harsher — but Stern hinted that it was warranted, based on Rodman's lengthy history of poor conduct. Rodman did receive a conces-sion. He wasn't required to meet with a psychologist, as previously mandated by Stern. Rodman and the players' union were adamant about having that order rescinded during a meeting last Thursday in Stern's office. After giving the matter some thought, Stern waived the counseling requirement. The union had threatened to take the matter to

In return, Rodman gave Stern a pledge to behave.

'I am satisfied that Dennis recognizes that his conduct in the Minnesota game was unacceptable," Stern said.

SIUC BASEBALL

Salukis No. 3 MVC pick

The Saluki baseball team reaped the benefits of a third-place finish in the Missouri Valley Conference last year by being picked to finish third this season and placing three members on the preseason all-conference team Wednesday.

The league's preseason poll, voted on by the conference head coaches, picked the Salukis to finish third behind Wichita State University and Southwest Missouri State University in conference play

The coaches also picked three Saluki players to make the league's 13-player preseason all-conference team. First base-men Aaron Jones, third baseman Jerry Hairston and center fielder Joe Schley were named to the squad. Jones was named to the postseason squad last season, while Hairston was named the Valley's Freshman of the Year last year.

The Saluki men's basketball team shot just 39 percent from the field, but used a strong defensive effort to hold off a pesky Wichita State University squad 60-56 at SIU Arena Wednesday night.

The win gave the Salukis their third straight Missouri

Valley Conference victory in an important four-game stretch, and improved SIUC to 12-10 overall and 5-6 in overall and in a three-way tie with the Salukis and Bradley University for sixth place in the conference at 5-6.

Saluki coach Rich Herrin said his team's defensive effort was the key to the victory.

"That was probably our best defensive game of the year. Herrin said. "Especially in the first haif, we played very, very tough defense. We're happy to beat a good ball
