Waivers under scrutiny

COLLEGE AFFORDABILITY: Plan would get rid of legislative waivers, has already been passed by the House.

JASON K. FREUND
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

College students should no longer be able to receive scholarships from state legislators, according to a bill passed by the Illinois House Thursday night.

The bill is part of the Illinois College Affordability Plan, which is a package of three bills. One bill would give tax breaks to lower- and middle-income families and the other would allow tax-free savings accounts for higher education.

EV
•During 1995-96, 110 undergraduates attended SIUC on legislative scholarships.

•Thirty-seven graduate students attended SIUC and the SIU School of Medicine on legislative scholarships in 1995-96.

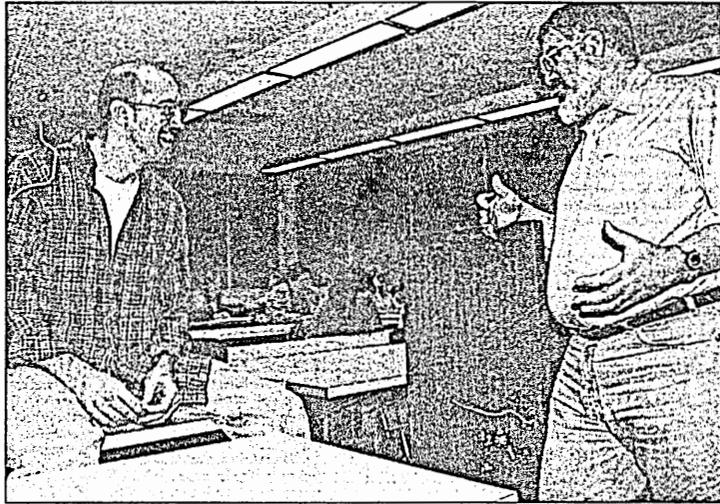

•Statewide, 1,491 undergraduates and 182 graduate students received the scholarships in 1996.

But the Senate president says the waivers should not be eliminated.

Patty Schuh, spokeswoman for Senate President James "Pate" Philip, R-Wood Dale, said Philip supported the legislation for greater disclosure on the waivers but does not think the program should be eliminated.

"He has supported it (the program) because of the opportunities it has provided students who would not otherwise be able

LEGAL SYSTEM: Law student will spend summer in Cambodia drafting health care legislation.

JULIE RENDLEMAN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Steve Rothert never dreamed of traveling to a foreign country to help people reorganize their legal system, but this summer he will travel to a country in Southeast Asia where civil violence threatens everyday life.

Rothert, a second-year law student from Warsaw, is going to Cambodia on June 1 for two months to help write legislation with the World Health Organization to improve Cambodia's health care system.

Rothert will complete his two years of law school this semester, and he will start medical school in the fall.

"I hope seeing their inadequate health care system will help me make up my mind about what field of medicine I want to go into," he said.

Rothert does not know what health legislation he will help draft until he gets to Cambodia, but one of the subjects he could write legislation for is preventing the spread of malaria and other infectious diseases.

Rothert said legislation is needed in Cambodia because only $1.50 a year is spent on health care for each citizen in

"Basically, anyone who could read or write was killed," he said.

"The first class (of lawyers in Cambodia) since 1972 will graduate this year."

An election sponsored by the United Nations will take place in 1998, and tension between Hun Sen, the Communist prime minister, and Prince Norodom Ranariddh, the Royalist prime minister, has caused public bombings.

"I do not know if I will be able to fix anything," Rothert said.
"(But) the people are eager to change and join the cultured world."

Rothert is buying a plane ticket for the trip soon, but he said there always is the possibility that civil violence could break out because of the elections, halting his plans.

"Anything could happen with the upcoming elections in 1998," he said.

"A bomb went off a couple of weeks ago in Cambodia, and (the World Health Organization) had doubts about letting me come over. But they changed their mind."

The book describes how Indiana University implemented a decen-

SIU officials say that Indiana's budget system is but one model they are examining, and that its failures and successes will be considered as they build a decentralized and open budgeting and management system for SIU. The system could be in place within two years.

"We have learned a lot from what Indiana did," Elaine Hyden, vice president of planning and budget services, said. "We learned a lot of positive things, but we also learned a lot about their problems, too."

"We looked at RCM with such intensity because so much has been written on the subject, but no model is perfect and that is why SIU is building its own budgeting and management system."

RCM is a budgeting system in which academic units collect their students' tuition money. The college then budgets that money for Tony DiGregorio felt so good about joining the fight against Multiple Sclerosis that he ran all of Sunday afternoon's 5k MS walk — twice.

"Usually I run anywhere from seven to 12 miles a day, so I just figured I'd run it twice," he said, "I was happy to run — it was for a good cause."

DiGregorio, a senior in mechanical engineering from Metamora, was one of about 350 mostly student participants in Carbondale's 9th annual MS walk.

MS Walk '97 began at 2 p.m. west of town in Turkey Park, then circled the residential areas around Glenview Drive and Walnut Street, and ended at the park about 1 1/2 hours later.

This year's walk, sponsored by Magna Bank and a number of Carbondale businesses, raised $3,858 dollars to benefit the Gateway Area Chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society in St. Louis.

The money will go toward researching MS.

The National Multiple Sclerosis Society calls MS a chronic, often disabling disease of the central nervous system. Striking people mostly between the ages of 20 and 40, the disease often affects victims' ability to walk, see and speak. It also can paralyze.

The society estimates that about 330,000 people in the United States have been diagnosed with MS, with about 200 new cases diagnosed each week.

Company to offer cash for plasma

STICKY SITUATION: Donors with rare antibodies can make up to $400 per month.

JENNIFER CAMDEN
DE POLITICS EDITOR

The presence of thousands of healthy SIUC students has prompted a company that buys and sells blood plasma to open a plasmapheresis center this summer in Carbondale.

Life Resources, Inc., a New York-based company, will begin buying plasma from area residents in July, said Gerald Matlin, the company's corporate secretary and general counsel.

The company will do business in the old post office building, at the corner of West Main Street and University Avenue, as DCI Biologicals of Carbondale.

People undergoing plasmapheresis have needles stuck in their arms, and some of their blood is pumped out, circulated through a machine, which removes the plasma and the antibodies it contains, and the red blood cells are returned to their bodies. The body recovers within 48 hours.

Matlin said the company operates 13 other plasmapheresis centers. Many are located near universities.

"We're looking for the healthiest donors possible, and college students are generally of the age that they should be healthy, and generally are healthy," he said.

The company sells plasma to Bayer, which uses the antibodies to manufacture about 125 different injectionable drugs.

Matlin said the amount donors are paid will depend on how often they donate and what antibodies are present in their plasma.

People can donate plasma up to eight times per month, and they could earn between $120

Africa's troubles overplayed, diplomat says

DIM VIEW: American media focuses on negative if it focuses on Africa at all, Senegal's ambassador tells audience.

SHERRIE GLATZHOFF
DAILY EGYPTIAN REWRITER

It is unfortunate that the American concept of Africa is a continent ravaged with devastating problems, an African ambassador to the United States says.

"Africa is ignored in the United States, especially in the media." Ambassador Mamadou Mansour Seck of Senegal said to a crowd of 150 people Saturday night. "Ambassadors are here to show the good, the positive things about Africa.

"People only know the negative things like what is happening in Rwanda, but they don't know that out of 53 countries, only six countries have problems. In the rest of the countries people have a good life."

Seck spoke about the military and government in Africa at the second annual Friends of Africa and African Alumni Banquet Saturday in the Student Center Ballrooms as part of Africa Week.

Hearing an ambassador from Africa speak was an important opportunity for students and alumni such as Brenda Mkwesha to interact with an international dignitary.

"It's like rubbing shoulders with men of power," said Mkwesha, an SIUC alumna from Zimbabwe. "It's not every day you meet someone of high status (from) Africa."

Mkwesha was surprised that a man of such high regard as Seck was so available to interact with the public.

"If he was in Africa, he would be very inaccessible to students," she said. "It would have been very hard (to meet him). He would be well guarded."

It meant a lot to many of the African students to have a dignitary from their continent at SIUC.

"Of course the Africans are very happy to see an ambassador here to represent not only his country, but the continent, and give some information about the good and positive image of Africa," Seck said.

Seck said it is his purpose as an ambassador to relay to people the positive image of Africa by interacting with people such as students.

"Interaction with grass-roots Americans is very important," he said. "In the heartland, they don't have the opportunity like in Washington to interact with African officials.

"Even if people interact with the embassy, there are many who don't know anything about the continent. That's why we took the opportunity to come to interact, to show the continent and give a good image of the continent."

Jamal Powell, a senior in radio and television from University Park, was impressed with the things the ambassador had to say.

"I'm glad that we had the ambassador here at SIUC," he said. "I think more events like this need to be publicized to show that we're not some drunken party school and that we can have events of this magnitude."

Disgruntled students brawl after early bar closings

A 2 1/2-hour brawl involving about 1,000 people broke out after a group of bars located by Ohio University closed early April 8 because of daylight-saving time.

The crowd shouted obscenities at police and threw liquor bottles and eggs when the bar closed, according to reports. Police officers dispatched to the scene fired four rounds of wooden pellets into the crowd. About 34 students were arrested and charged with misdemeanors for disorderly conduct.

Chad Miller, a 1992 graduate, told OU's student newspaper that the brawl proved the university has not lost its reputation for being wild and crazy.

Court rejects claims crack penalties are racially biased

The U.S. Supreme Court on Monday rejected a claim that stiff penalties for dealing crack cocaine amount to racial discrimination and refused to reconsider the 10-year prison term given a black man whose first criminal offense was selling crack.

It marks at least the third time in the last three years that the justices have turned away a race-bias challenge to the crack cocaine laws.

In 1986, Congress passed a new drug law that imposed a 10-year mandatory federal prison term on people caught with at least 50 grams — roughly one-tenth of a pound — of crack cocaine. A seller of powder cocaine would have to get caught with 5,000 grams or more to get the same 10-year sentence.

Guest Column

Maggie is a midwife from Carbondale. Guest Column appears every Tuesday and Thursday. Maggie's opinion does not necessarily reflect that of the Daily Egyptian.

Safe childbirth possible without a doctor's help

The medicalization of childbirth is a phenomenon of the late 20th century, but its roots reach back to the religious and political event that defined the Medieval Era: the Inquisition.

Known also as the Burning Times, that holocaust claimed the lives of 9 million women: midwives, healers, "witches" and their female kin.

In that era, church and state were virtually one entity with one primary agenda; that is, to bring all people under institutional control for the purposes of securing power and profit, religious and political leaders then — as now — bent their efforts toward instilling conformity through dominance and fear.

And then, as now, women were a primary target of those efforts to dominate, because women, who bear children, are powerful channels of life force.

If women are subdued, if we are persuaded to subjugate our sacred, life-giving power into control by institutions, then the message instilled in all children born is that our powers of life and choice belong to others presumably stronger and wiser than ourselves.

When women fear life and choice, then all children will fear life and choice — and thus the stage is set for people to expect being controlled, to expect to live subject to institutional demands for power and profit.

I am a lay-midwife, and that is a title I wear with both pride and humility. To say that I have a spiritual calling to midwifery is not to say that I have no training but rather that I understand birth to be a normal, healthy, life-giving process that requires no "medical" training, for medicine is the practice of treating disease.

And I am proud to have maintained my trust in the normalcy of birth, through much struggle both personal and political.

To say that I am a lay-midwife is also humbling. For though I understand that pregnancy and birth are healthy processes, well-designed by a wise and loving Creator, I also know — as the Chinese have said — that at birth the veil between life and death is very thin.

I know that my role of supporting safe births is very small compared to the work a woman herself must do — to grow a healthy baby and to give birth safely.

That work is a matter more than anything else, of her own trust, her own efforts and her own relationship with her Creator.

Medical practitioners "manage" prenatal care, "manage" birth, set themselves up as intermediaries of life and safety.

As a lay-midwife, I only support women and their families as they "manage" care for themselves.

And I am privileged to witness the miracle of birth, invited to serve in awe the emergence of new life into the loving hearts of families.

As a lay-midwife, I have been among many wise women, modern-day witches burned in this 20th-century extension of the Inquisition.

In the "Malleus Maleficarum" (Hammer of Witches), a book written by two Inquisitors long ago, the authors wrote: "Most dangerous of all is the Blessing Witch, she who helps and heals ..."

That telling statement sums up the real reason behind the persecution of yesterday's "witches" and today's midwives: It is not a danger we pose to our clients in serving them with natural and empowering means which makes us despicable, and the targets of criminal prosecution.

It is the threat we represent to the power and profit motives of the institutions, by practicing outside of their control and assisting client empowerment and self-responsibility, by encouraging people to own life and choice for themselves, according to personal conscience and faith.

It is not only birth that has been medicalized in this era. It is life itself that has been institutionalized: medically, legally, socially, economically, religiously.

I am a lay-midwife, serving families as simply and humbly as possible in their sacred work of making life.

I am a lay-midwife, proud to stand within my community and outside of institutional control, making choices and inviting others to do the same.

When women fear life and choice, then all children will fear life and choice — and thus the stage is set for people to expect being controlled, to expect to live subject to institutional demands for power and profit.

Our Word

Silence is golden

University should allow moment for reflection at commencement

A MOMENT OF SILENCE AT GRADUATION commencement — to pray or to reflect — should be allowed at SIUC.

A moment of silence — a mere 30 to 60 seconds during a one- to two-hour-long ceremony — is not too much to ask, considering the fact that the University administration abolished prayer at commencement two years ago.

LAST WEEK THE UNDERGRADUATE Student Government almost unanimously approved (one senator voting against) a proposal for a moment of silence. This student government represents the undergraduate student body at SIUC, and makes proposals based on input from constituents on and off campus — a group of constituents from all cultures and religions.

As a body of government, USG is asking the administration for a moment of silence. That request should be approved and implemented in time for next month's ceremonies.

UNFORTUNATELY THE AMERICAN CIVIL Liberties Union is trying to step in — as it did in 1995, resulting in the administration abolishing the commencement prayers. The ACLU, a more left-wing interest group, will try to persuade SIUC administrators not to have a moment of silence.

But this time, Chancellor Don Beggs and the rest of the administration need to take a stand for the students — including those graduating in three weeks — and allow a few seconds for reflection on the past and the future. Beggs, as an SIUC alumnus, should know the importance of reflection and silent prayer during a graduation ceremony.

IN THESE POLITICALLY CORRECT TIMES, a moment of silence during commencement is a suitable alternative for those cultures and people who do not wish to pray.

Those people who have specific beliefs — either to a deity or another form of values/religion — have a chance not to voice their prayers or words of praise but to think and take a moment to say a few words inside their heads and hearts without a sound.

A MOMENT OF SILENCE IS NOT A LICENSE to pray, but a license for reflection during the ceremonies.

A moment of silence is a fair trade-off from the abolished prayer during the ceremonies. It is something that can be a final gift handed to the students who are leaving this University; something that is as memorable as the ceremony itself.

IF WE DO NOT ALLOW A MOMENT OF silence during graduation, we are allowing an outside interest group to tell us when and what to think — even at our own ceremonies.

It is time for the administration to hear the call of the students and USG. Take the lead and allow a moment of silence.

"Our Word" represents a consensus of the Daily Egyptian Editorial Board.

Overheard

"We're not trying to shove prayer down students' throats. Students have the right to reflect, and if they so choose, pray."

and $150 per month if they donate at that rate. A single donation is worth between $15 and $20.

People with rare antibodies in their plasma could make between $300 and $400 per month for donating it, or up to $50 per donation.

Melinda Pennington, a senior in advertising from Louisville, Ky., said students at the University of Louisville, which she used to attend, frequented a plasma center there and said donating it was an easy $20.

However, she said she will not sell her plasma.

"First of all, I don't give blood because I don't like needles," she said. "Even if I was desperate for money, I wouldn't have my plasma sucked out."

The types of antibodies in people's plasma are affected by the injections they have had, their genetic makeup and the diseases they have been exposed to, Matlin said.

The first time people come to donate plasma, Matlin said, they will have full physical exams and answer many questions about their medical histories and lifestyles. People who abuse drugs and alcohol are ineligible to donate plasma.

Plasmapheresis takes about 45 minutes.

Dick Hunter, a Carbondale real estate agent, has been trying to sell the post office building for about three years.

He said the company bought the building last week, and the sale will be closed next week.

In all, Matlin said, the company will spend about $1 million to buy and renovate the building, bring in equipment, hire and train the staff and operate until it begins making a profit.

He said the business will employ eight to 10 people, and all but two will be hired locally.

Hunter and Matlin would not comment on the price paid for the building.

Matlin said the company hopes to begin construction in about a month. The company plans to clean the outside of the building and renovate its interior.

Doing something positive for the community was a factor for students including DiGregorio, who were happy to help give students a better image by participating in MS Walk '97.

"I've participated in fund-raising walks before, and I found out about this one through my fraternity," he said.

"This turnout is good for the greek system and the school. Halloween didn't give any of us a good image; something like this does."

Austin Schwartz, an undecided sophomore from Skokie, also felt good about participating in the walk.

"It's for a good cause. That's all that matters," he said.

"It's something positive to do on a Sunday afternoon, and it's a lot better than sitting in and ordering pizza."

Rothert is uneasy about going to Cambodia because he has heard stories of people carrying AK-47 assault rifles in the streets.

Rothert was contacted by the World Health Organization through Robert Schwartz, a visiting professor from the University of New Mexico for the SIU School of Law, who went to Cambodia last summer as a consultant for the organization.

Schwartz said he did not feel like he was in danger while in Cambodia, and he did not see any crime or public protests of the upcoming elections.

"The capital, Phnom Penn, was peaceful," he said. "I hear now that it has a unified army, but their allegiance might be to the old ruling party (Khmer Rouge party)."

Rothert's mother, Dorothy, has concerns about her son going to Cambodia.

"Safety is my main concern," she said. "It will be a great experience for him — if he can stay out of the line of fire.

"They had a bombing over there just a few weeks ago."

Dorothy said her son always has been interested in law and medicine.

"He has always been interested in everything," she said.

to go to college," Schuh said.

Schuh said Phillip said that although the abuses of the program were unfortunate, they do not warrant eliminating the program.

"For a program that has helped so many students, why eliminate it because a select few abused their power?" Schuh said.

State Rep. Mike Bost, R-Murphysboro, voted to eliminate the $4-million-per-year scholarship program.

"There have been too many legislators abusing the privilege," Bost said. "They shouldn't be giving them away for political favors."

Each year, a state legislator can award two four-year scholarships, one to the University of Illinois and one to any other state university. Those scholarships can be divided into one-year or single-semester awards.

Scholarship recipients must live in the sponsoring legislators' districts.

"There are no rules," Bost said. "If I wanted to give it to someone because their parents contributed to my campaign, I could."

Part of the push to eliminate the waivers came after some recipients' names, including seven SIUC students, were published by the Associated Press and the Peoria Journal Star last year.

Reports showed that some legislators gave the scholarships to family members and political friends, and some recipients did not live in the legislators' home districts.

State Rep. Larry Woolard, D-Cartrville, voted against the measure.

"They provided many young people with opportunities, so I voted in opposition to doing away with them," Woolard said.

Last year, the General Assembly voted to release the names of scholarship recipients beginning next fall to ensure responsibility.

Edgar amended the bill, requiring the release of recipients' schools, the amount of their awards and proof that the recipients live in the sponsoring legislators' districts.

A bill to ban the scholarships was defeated in a Senate committee this spring, and a similar bill was passed by the House last year, but it did not pass the Senate.

Steve Brown, spokesman for House Speaker Michael Madigan, D-Chicago, said the bill was reintroduced because Madigan thinks the program has outlived its usefulness.

"I suspect when members of the Senate note the numbers of this vote, they will reconsider and possibly change their vote," Brown said.

Garrett Deakin, SIUC legislative liaison, said if the legislative tuition waivers are abolished, it would negatively affect some students.

But he remains optimistic that the bill will not pass the Senate.

"They tried to do it earlier in the Senate, and it failed in committee," he said.

State Sen. Dave Luechtefeld, R-Okawville, said if legislators still are allowed to award tuition waivers, they will have to be careful about following the rules.

"I could have it either way. I try to do it right," Luechtefeld said. "I have a committee made up of school superintendents, and I think that is the fairest way to do it."

Another part of the college plan allows households with annual incomes of less than $100,000 to receive annual tax credits of 50 percent of tuition and fees of $500, whichever is less, at any state university, college or community college, whether public or private.

The third bill in the plan allows families making less than $100,000 per year to save for college tax-free, if the money is used on costs related to higher education.

Deakin said the tax-free savings could cost the state revenue, and that could affect higher education.

"But if the state continues to fund education as it has, it will make college more affordable," he said, "and that's what we're all about."

Hardbodies

STORY BY MIKAL J. HARRIS

Searching for the right Mr. and Ms. SIU

James Smith stands on stage underneath bright lights as his glistening body is judged against those of the four men alongside him.

More than 200 people stare at Smith, who has dieted for eight weeks and has put in 20 hours a week at the gym for the past year. He has spent hundreds of dollars on nutritional supplements and shaved off all of his body hair.

After competing last year, Smith knew how much effort the 1997 Mr./Ms. SIU Natural Bodybuilding Competition would involve.

But standing onstage Saturday, flexing various muscles on command, he knows working to become "Mr. SIU" has brought him closer to being in the best shape of his life.

"You have to be very disciplined, focused and motivated to be involved in this competition," Smith, a senior in psychology and anthropology, said. "When I wanted to compete in the show, I came in with the mentality of trying to be the best that I could possibly be."

"If my best is first, second, third place or whatever, I'm satisfied because this competition gives you the chance to look your very best, maybe the very best of your entire life."

Smith became "Mr. SIU," and Annette Fiscelli, a senior in graphic design from Crete, became "Ms. SIU" at the SIUC Weightlifting Club's 7th annual competition Saturday at Shryock Auditorium.

Fiscelli turned a hobby and competition inexperienced into a first-place finish.

"This was my first competition ever, so I just learned everything through trial and error," she said.

All nine bodybuilding competitors were judged on muscularity, symmetry and presentation.

Muscularity is based on a combination of size, density and hardness of muscles. Symmetry relates to the equal development of overall body parts and muscle groups. Presentation includes the athlete's posing ability as well as posture, grooming and skin tone.

Fiscelli was one of two female bodybuilders in the competition. Smith won the men's short competition and became "Mr. SIU" by besting the men's tall competition winner by a slim margin.

For bodybuilding participant Brian Sanders, a junior in psychology from Chicago, he cited a bodybuilder's strict diet as being one of the hardest parts of his training.

"The diet will make you have mood swings. I would have killed my mom if she was down here. I need some cholesterol. I need some fat," he said, laughing. "I've been at SIU a few years and I figured that this was something good way to be involved with something. After playing five sports in high school, this is something different."

Last year's "Mr. SIU" Marlon Moss, a senior in accounting from Waukegan, knows how different bodybuilding is from other sports.

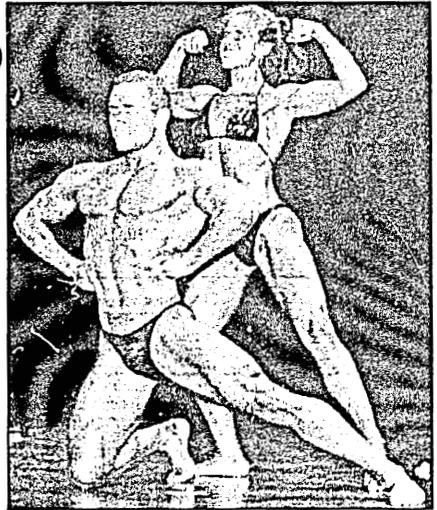

"This event does allow people to have fun, but bodybuilding is one of those sports that what you put into it is exactly what you get out of it," he said.

Although Smith worked hard onstage and off, he got more out of the competition than just winning a title.

"Onstage, you're really concentrating on flexing your muscles to their fullest capacity," he said.

"There is a certain way you have to breathe—sometimes you have to hold your breath. You can't eat before the competition because you don't want to bloat up before the show."

"But bodybuilding is like any other thing you do. It's having a dream to be the best at something, setting that goal, and feeling good about yourself."

FINAL POSE: Don Melrose, doctorate student in physical education from Streator, and Annette Fiscelli, a graphic arts major from Crete, Ill., do a final pose after winning the couples competition. James Smith (below), a senior majoring in psychology and anthropology from Glennwood, accepts the award for winning the men's short competition.

READY TO PUMP YOU UP: Finalists in the short competition give the audience one last pose after trophies were presented.

BUDGET

salaries, equipment, teaching costs and research. Currently, the University collects tuition dollars and distributes them to the colleges.

Indiana University implemented the system about six years ago, after a new president called for more fiscal responsibility on campus.

Steve Keucher, the Indiana University associate budget director, said a 1996 review committee studied the effects and recommended that it be continued on the campuses in Bloomington and Indianapolis.

"Both reports were by far more positive than negative," Keucher said. "People must remember that RCM is not a panacea or the devil incarnate."

Keucher said although the report was positive, there were at least two examples of competition between colleges, because they were offering the same courses. In both cases, the competition was identified and quickly resolved.

"The chancellor should be able to tell deans to intercede if one school is trafficking classes in another school's territory," Keucher said. "The chancellor is still the chancellor."

"RCM does not mean that the deans have absolute power and everyone stands helplessly about."

Maynard Thompson, Indiana University vice chancellor and dean for budget administration and planning, said reports of competition between colleges were greatly exaggerated.

"The perception that wholesale competition occurs with an RCM model is just not true," Thompson said. "There was some degree of competition even before RCM."

Whalen, author of the RCM book, played a central role in implementing RCM at Indiana University when he worked there.

He said unhealthy competition can occur in any budgeting system, and to avoid it, a school should reward cooperation and watch for units that lower academic standards to attract more students.

"In any budgeting system, dollars tend to gravitate to departments with increasing students," Whalen said. "So watering the paint to attract more students should be a concern."

He said an RCM model provides incentives for colleges to recruit and retain students because colleges keep and use their tuition dollars.

"This model is appropriate for this particular time in the funding of higher education," Whalen said. "But an interesting thing about RCM is it gets credited and blamed for a lot of things that would have happened anyway."

Thompson said the Indiana University RCM review committee concluded that faculty and staff often blamed RCM for any problems that occurred after RCM began.

"There were a lot of rumors that the data did not support," Thompson said. "One rumor was that after RCM there were more large classes, but actually, classes are smaller now than before we had RCM."

Patrick Rooney, special assistant to the chancellor at the Indiana University-Purdue University in Indianapolis, said there is pressure to increase class sizes to accommodate more students and increase tuition dollars. He said, however, that many deans have kept classes small so that students receive more attention and choose to become majors in their colleges.

"It has not been the case that there has been an insidious plot to lower academic standards," Rooney said.

Thompson said RCM also was blamed when the administration decided to shift some funds from non-academic services to academic areas.

"There was a recommendation prior to implementation of RCM to shift funds to the academic side," Thompson said. "RCM was blamed even though the decisions occurred before."

Thompson said one mistake Indiana made when beginning RCM was not providing the chancellor with enough resources. He said most of the funds were given to the schools and deans, and little was reserved for the central administration.

"In retrospect, that was not a good idea," Thompson said. "Some decisions still should be reserved to the central administration."

He said Indiana also should have spelled out campus priorities before using RCM. He said the priorities would provide a framework for how funds should be distributed to best meet the school's needs. SIU developed campus-wide priorities for the fiscal year 1997 and 1998 budgets. SIU President Ted Sanders said the priorities drive the academic mission and allow the University to distribute funds accordingly.

Sanders said the priorities are the first steps in developing SIU's new budget and planning system.

"The system we have right now sets priorities first and foremost," Sanders said. "This was the first important step for a new budgeting process for SIU, and Indiana did not take this step until now."

"Indiana's model is not a perfect fit for us, and that is why we are building our own."

However, Sanders said, SIU can learn from Indiana and other universities, including the University of Illinois and Stanford University, that have implemented or are considering an RCM model.

Jean Paratore, assistant vice chancellor of Student Affairs, said Student Affairs decided to visit Indiana University in October to see how the RCM model affected their counterparts there.

"We had heard all the rumors and fears, so it occurred to us when the term (RCM) was first thrown out and people were reading the (Whalen) book that this was going to be a big change," she said. "We sat around a table with our counterparts and talked how this process developed for them, their initial fears, and how they live with this day in and day out."

She said RCM benefited Indiana University's Student Affairs because as the budget became more open, Student Affairs became more visible and was able to obtain more funds.

Thompson said the successes and failures of Indiana will not necessarily occur at any other university that shifts to an RCM model because all universities are different.

"I think SIU has made exactly the right decision," he said. "The best way to do this is to design a system that works for you."

During part of his speech, Seck mentioned the small amount of foreign aid the United States contributes to Africa.

Powell said that American students need to hear about the problems in Africa so they can become involved in helping the continent's citizens.

"(The students) can learn from Seck, get involved and try to help out the African nations," he said. "They can do this by writing congressmen encouraging Congress to give more foreign aid to African nations."

Seck said it is important for African students to represent their nations as if they were ambassadors in the United States.

"Permitting African students to come to the United States is important," he said. "They go back to their countries, and they advocate being a good friend to the United States. I think that is important."

Seck said that while students are here to learn technology to take back to Africa, it is more important for them to learn from the American people, and to interact with them.

"This country is a country of diversity where you have any human race represented," he said. "That is different from Africa where, in one country, they are all black or all white. This country is a symbol of the global village."

Awa Diouf, a graduate in business finance from Senegal, said it was significant to her to be able to sit with the ambassador because he is from the same nation, and they shared a common bond.

"That was something," said Diouf, who coordinated the event. "I worked to have him come here. I always remember that I am sitting with the ambassador from my country. It feels good because I can speak my native language with him I can talk with him about things from home."

As the coordinator, it was sometimes hard for her to deal with Seck because he is of such high regard in her country.

"Sometimes it was difficult for me just to go to him and say, 'OK Mr. Excellency, we want you to do this,'" she said. "We tried to be very diplomatic when we were dealing with him."

Mkwesha said she will take more than a memory of meeting an ambassador away from the evening.

"I got his autograph," she said. "It's a one-in-a-million chance to meet a Senegalese ambassador."

excited with his team's effort.

"It was just a miserable day, and at one point all of the coaches t together and considered canceling the meet," Cornell said. "Considering that, the kids really dug in and did a tremendous job."

The Saluki men were carried by their throwing events for the second straight week.

Peter Juszczek led the Salukis with a win in the javelin with a throw of 199-5, while Devin Resmer finished right behind Juszczek in second with a throw of 173-1.

Joseph Parks grabbed the Salukis' other first-place finish by setting a season-best in the 3,000-meter steeplechase with a time of 9:13.30.

Jeraldo Henry completed another solid double-event finish Saturday. Henry finished second in the long jump with a leap of 22-9 3/4 and earned third place in the triple jump with a leap of 49-8 1/4.

Neil Duncan rounded out the Salukis' finishes with a season-best performance with a time of 48.99, finishing second in the 400-meter dash.

"Peter (Juszczek) and Joseph (Parks) did a great job," Cornell said.

"Jeraldo (Henry) continues his excellent performance week after week, and for a walk-on like Neil (Duncan) to do this well is fantastic."

While the men battled the elements Saturday, the women did the same while grabbing a total of eight first- and second-place finishes in Jonesboro.

The women's team was led by distance runners Kim Koerner and Jenny Monaco and javelin thrower Vena Clendenin, with each of the three capturing first-place honors.

Koerner captured the title in the 3,000-meter run with a time of 10:38.76 and finished second in the 1,500-meter run with a time of 4:52.07.

Monaco gave Koerner a challenge in the 3,000-meter before finishing second with a time of 10:39.66. Monaco then recovered to capture first place in the 5,000-meter run with a time of 18:31.47.

Clendenin captured the Salukis' third first-place finish of the day with a toss of 129-0 1/2 in the javelin. She also finished 12th in the shot put with a distance of 36-8 1/2.

Clendenin was proud of both her efforts and the team's efforts Saturday.

"In spite of the weather, we did a really good job," Clendenin said. "I was very happy with my performance in the javelin. It was hard to get warmed up, but we were pretty happy."

Clendenin said the efforts of Monaco and Koerner helped inspire the team Saturday.

"In some of the events, there was some tough competition," Clendenin said. "Jenny (Monaco) always runs really strong, and Kim (Koerner) really stepped up her performance and ran well Saturday."

Grabbing second-place finishes for SIUC were Mindy Bruck, with a time of 2:16.92 in the 200-meter dash; Donna Wechet, with a time of 14.92 in the 100-meter dash; Leah Steele, with a leap of 6-6 3/4 in the high jump; the 4 x 100-meter relay team, with a time of 48.75; and the 4 x 400-meter relay team, with a time of 4:01.24.

doubles, one triple and two homers, which includes a grand slam against Southeast Missouri State University March 2. The first baseman also has a team-high .993 fielding percentage.

Senior center fielder April Long said Shields' return has had an immediate influence on the Salukis' program.

"I think she has made a great comeback," Long said.

"She has done an outstanding job. Defensively, I am definitely glad we got her. I have faith in her and trust her. She is going to get every ball that will come her way."

Brechtelsbauer said the Salukis' success can be credited in part to Shields.

"Our pitchers have done a good job this year, but some of those shutouts you need to give (Shields) a little credit for," Brechtelsbauer said.

"She does a great job over at first base."

Whether at the plate or in the field, Brechtelsbauer is just glad that Shields is back on the team.

"I don't think there is anybody any happier for her than I am," she said. "You want to see somebody who is that committed come out here and have the season she deserves to have. She is a hard worker."

Tiger sets sights on grand slam

JUST BEGINNING:
Woods says next goal is to sweep golf's majors.

NEWSDAY
AUGUSTA, Ga. — No one has ever won the modern Grand Slam of golf, the Masters, U.S. Open, British Open and PGA Championship. After Sunday's resounding Masters victory, only Tiger Woods has a chance to do it this year. "I think it's possible to do it," said Woods. "Phil Mickelson won four tournaments last year. If you win the right four tournaments, you can win the Grand Slam."

CBS golf commentator and former U.S. Open champion Jerry Pate sees the venues for this year's remaining major championships as favoring Woods. The U.S. Open will be played at Congressional outside of Washington. The British

Pate said the British Open will be the toughest for Woods to win, but it was at Royal Lytham and St. Annes last year that Woods posted his best finish as an amateur in a major, a tie for 22nd.

SWIMMING

Team long distance coach Rick Walker said Stooke's performance was a surprising one because of the way he pushed Wiley the entire race.

"Chuck Wiley has won the last four 25k races now," he said. "(But) I have never seen him get pushed the way he did by Nathan."

For Stooke, it was his first time swimming the 25k distance. He said that while the current was strong at times, he was confident enough to handle the obstacles in the salt-water course.

"The whole competition would've been overwhelming had it not been for coach Walker," Stooke said. "He helped advise me about the mental walls I was going to hit. When I got to those walls, I would think about what he said and just continue on."

Stooke, who was unable to win an event at the Missouri Valley Conference Championship in March, attributed his second-place finish Saturday to the work ethic he developed after the season ended.

"My work ethic was a huge factor because anyone who swims can go out and swim a 5k, but a 25k takes a lot of determination to train for," he said. "You can't over-train, it's just a matter of practice and the mental ability to handle the pressure."

Instead of pursuing an internship or working for the summer, Stooke will concentrate only on swimming, so he can better prepare himself for the Pan Pacific Games in Japan this summer.

"I'm staying down this summer to train for the next big race," he said. "I've begun to keep a log so that over the summer I can work on mistakes or flaws I may have in my swims."
Stooke said all the fun and excitement he had at the U.S. Swimming Championships was an experience he never will forget.

"I met a lot of great people," he said. "The people associated with the event were more excited about my finish than I was. (But) it definitely feels great to know you're one of the best in the country."

Walker said Stooke's performance just shows what SIUC is all about, and it concludes a year in which he has seen greatness throughout the season.

"Our year has been one big ride — winning the MVC Championship and NIC Championship, having a diver make it to the NCAA Championship," he said. "Of course, now Nathan just shows SIUC is at a high level with the rest of the nation."

Swimming Champion-ships was an experience he never will forget. "I met a lot of great people," he said. "The people associated with the event were more excited about my finish than I was. (But) it definitely feels great to know you're one of the best in the country."

The Saluki men's tennis team earned its first conference win of the season with a 4-2 defeat of Bradley University in Terre Haute, Ind., Saturday.

After falling to Indiana State University Friday, SIUC recovered to snap a six-game losing streak in improving to 4-11 overall and 1-6 in the Missouri Valley Conference with the win.

Mick Smyth, Kyle Henry, Brian Etzkin and Brian Ingle picked up wins for the Salukis Saturday.

SIUC BASEBALL

Dawgs to battle SEMO

The SIUC baseball team opens a two-day stretch against non-conference foes when it battles Southeast Missouri State University at 2 today at Abe Martin Field.

The Salukis are coming off a four-game split with Bradley University Saturday and Sunday. SIUC travels to Champaign for a matchup with the University of Illinois Wednesday.

SIUC SOFTBALL

NFL

Vikings sign Cunningham

Quarterback Randall Cunningham, attempting to make an NFL comeback, has signed with the Minnesota Vikings. WIP radio in Philadelphia reported Sunday that the deal is for one year.

The 34-year-old Cunningham, who retired last summer after 11 years with the Philadelphia Eagles, will serve as a back-up to Brad Johnson.

Cunningham, a three-time Pro Bowl selection, is the NFL's all-time rushing leader among quarterbacks with 4,482 yards. During his stay in Philadelphia, he completed 1,874 of his 3,362 passes for 22,877 yards, 150 touchdowns and 105 interceptions.

Players addicted to drugs

At least 10 percent of National Football League players reportedly are addicted to painkillers. The New York Times reported Sunday that the use of painkillers is so widespread that some players hoard hundreds of pills, and a few even trade tickets to NFL games with pharmaceutical workers to get their share of the drugs.

The newspaper reported that some players spend weeks or even months in the offseason "getting rid of their dependency" and dealing with withdrawal symptoms.

SIUC swimmer earns spot on U.S. National team with 15-mile ocean swim.

SIUC junior Nathan Stooke emerged from the water depleted from an exhausting 15-mile swim Saturday, completely unaware of what he had just accomplished.

It took friends and relatives to put things in perspective for the O'Fallon native, whose grueling swim at the U.S. Swimming Championships in Indianlake, Fla., resulted in a second-place finish and a spot on the U.S. National Team. The intensity of the swim has been compared to a 45-mile run.

Stooke, along with 28-year-old Chuck Wiley of Texas, will represent the United States at not only the Pan Pacific Games in Japan this summer, but also the World Championships in Perth, Australia, in January.

"It has always been a dream of mine to be at this level," he said. "The whole thing didn't quite settle in until I talked to friends and family. (But) it feels great to be one of only two people to represent the United States."

With a time of a little more than 5 1/2 hours, Stooke became SIUC's first swimmer ever to represent the United States on the U.S. National Team. Stooke was just two minutes behind Wiley.

SIUC starter overcomes adversity at first base

BOUNCING BACK:
Saluki Shields rebounds from multiple injuries last year to have great season in 1997.

Theresa Shields will never forget April 10, 1996.

The Saluki softball team was playing the University of Missouri, and Shields, a sophomore first baseman from Lombard, had just returned to the Salukis' lineup after being on the injured list for shoulder problems.

What was supposed to be an average inning of softball turned into an inning that would change Shields' life.

A ball was hit down the first base line, and Shields moved to her right to field the ball. She then pivoted to throw it to first base when her left knee snapped, tearing the cartilage and ligaments inside.

"I went through surgery a month later and another surgery a month after that," Shields said. "I tore meniscus cartilage and my anterior cruciate ligament (ACL)."

Coach Kay Brechtelsbauer said the loss of Shields was hard on the Salukis.

"There is no question we missed her last year," Brechtelsbauer said. "You can see by her play, her base-running ability and her plays at first base, she makes us look good over there."

After the months of rehabilitation and extensive pain, Shields returned to the Salukis' starting lineup at the first base position this season.

"I wasn't very apprehensive (about playing on the knee), because I knew I would be back to normal after a few weeks of practice," Shields said. "I just needed to get back in the swing of things. It is just second nature to play softball."

"I feel really good. Our defense is tremendous this year. I just do my job."

The rehabilitation process back to the field was long and emotionally as well as physically difficult for Shields.

"(The injury) was very frustrating because I did not get to play one full game," she said. "I lost a whole year of my eligibility, so I only have two years after this one to play softball."

"The only thing that frustrated me is it was some of the worst pain I have ever had in my life. I can't (relate it to anything) because it was the worst pain I have ever had."

Shields' persistence in wanting to return to the Salukis this season was a positive influence on the team, Brechtelsbauer said.

"The determination (Theresa) has (set an example for the team)," she said. "She could have folded and gotten really discouraged and wondered if she was ever going to come back. She did go through an awful lot of pain in rehabilitation. It was a painful process for her, but she did it diligently."

Shields has started 35 of the Salukis' 36 games this season, while recording a .263 batting average. In 96 at bats, she has hit four

The SIUC men's and women's track and field teams left Arkansas Saturday comfortable with their performances but eager for a return to warmer weather.

In cold, windy weather, the men's team earned two first-place finishes at the Tyson Invitational in Fayetteville, Ark., while the women's team brought home three first-place finishes from the Arkansas State University Track Classic in Jonesboro, Ark.

The men's team faced a strong field of competitors Saturday, including the University of Arkansas, four-time NCAA defending champions; the University of Michigan; Oklahoma State University; and Iowa State University.

The weather also played a factor in Saturday's meet. For the second straight meet, the Salukis battled cold temperatures and strong winds.
