CLASS DESCRIPTION: C&I 160 is designed to help you become a more proficient, successful student, one better able to juggle the demands of a formal education. We cover techniques that have been proven to help people manage time and stress, alleviate test anxiety, improve reading comprehension, note-taking skills and test-taking preparation and completion. Because you are in the thick of the semester as you work through this course, you have the opportunity to immediately apply the skills that work best for you directly to the current classes you are taking. We also do group work that will help you develop both study skills and a better awareness of university programs and procedures. If you attend class, give energy to learning and applying new strategies, and work through class requirements, you'll walk away with ideas for living a more pleasant and effective student life, you'll have new friends, and you'll earn a good grade.

CLASS FORMAT: We meet twice a week for two elective credits. You will receive a letter grade for this class that will count toward your degree credits (although it does not serve to complete a general education requirement).

Class attendance and class participation are essential to your progress and your final grade in this class. Roll call is taken at the beginning of each class session. You are allowed three absences during the semester without penalty; after three absences, you lose 25 points per absence. You cannot earn an "A" in this class if you have missed more than four classes. There is a 10- point penalty for taking an exam after the scheduled date. HANDOUTS missed because of absence are available at www.umt.edu/eop.
