

University of Montana

ScholarWorks at University of Montana

Graduate Student Theses, Dissertations, & Professional Papers

Graduate School

1941

Problems in first year Latin; A tentative solution

Sylvia Johnson

The University of Montana

Follow this and additional works at: <https://scholarworks.umt.edu/etd>

Let us know how access to this document benefits you.

Recommended Citation

Johnson, Sylvia, "Problems in first year Latin; A tentative solution" (1941). Graduate Student Theses, Dissertations, & Professional Papers. 4669.

<https://scholarworks.umt.edu/etd/4669>

This Thesis is brought to you for free and open access by the Graduate School at ScholarWorks at University of Montana. It has been accepted for inclusion in Graduate Student Theses, Dissertations, & Professional Papers by an authorized administrator of ScholarWorks at University of Montana. For more information, please contact scholarworks@mso.umt.edu.

Problems in First Year Latin:

a Tentative Solution

by

Sylvia Johnson
B. A., Montana State University, 1926

Presented in partial fulfillment of the requirement for the degree of Master of Arts.

Montana State University

1941

Approved:

W. T. Clark

Chairman of Board of Examiners

W. S. Bateman

Chairman of Committee on Graduate Study

UMI Number: EP40133

All rights reserved

INFORMATION TO ALL USERS

The quality of this reproduction is dependent upon the quality of the copy submitted.

In the unlikely event that the author did not send a complete manuscript and there are missing pages, these will be noted. Also, if material had to be removed, a note will indicate the deletion.

UMI EP40133

Published by ProQuest LLC (2014). Copyright in the Dissertation held by the Author.

Microform Edition © ProQuest LLC.

All rights reserved. This work is protected against unauthorized copying under Title 17, United States Code

ProQuest LLC 789 East Eisenhower Parkway
P.O. Box 1346
Ann Arbor, MI 48106 - 1346

TABLE OF CONTENTS

	PAGE
INTRODUCTION
CHAPTER
I. THE PROBLEM	1
II. THE CLASSICAL INVESTIGATION	4
III. THE FOREIGN LANGUAGE STUDY	13
IV. WEST'S PLAN FOR TEACHING STUDENTS TO READ A FOREIGN LANGUAGE	20
V. SOME EXPERIMENTS IN THE READING METHOD	27
VI. FOREIGN LANGUAGE TEXTS MADE ON WEST'S PLAN	40
VII. CHARACTER OF THE READING MATTER SUBMITTED AND THE PLACE OF GRAMMAR	44
ELEMENTARY LATIN READING MATTER: DE DEIS HOMINIBUSQUE	49
BIBLIOGRAPHY	188

List of Tables

Table	Page
I. Group Medians for Silent Reading of Latin	32
II. Individual Averages for Silent Reading of Latin	33

Chapter I

The Problem

Within the past twenty years foreign language study in the United States has been investigated with the purpose of weighing the objectives considered valid by teachers and others interested and determining uniform objectives that are worthy and capable of attainment, of discovering current practices in teaching and the results attained by existing methods and recommending efficient methods, of evaluating the content of foreign language courses and suggesting improvements. The Classical Investigation, the report of which was published in 1924, was a study of the situation in classical languages, particularly Latin. Five years later the results of the Foreign Language Study, an investigation of modern foreign languages, were made public. The committee which carried on the Classical Investigation and the committee which conducted the Foreign Language Study reached the same conclusion in regard to objectives: namely, that the primary aim of foreign language teaching should be to train students to read the language.

In the report of the Classical Investigation it is stated that 69 per cent of all students who began the study of Latin in the secondary school continued it for one or two years only.¹ Mark E. Hutchinson reports that in 1928, 87 per cent of Latin students in public high schools studied Latin for two years or less.² The Foreign Language Study found that for 83 per cent who began the study of a modern language in public and private secondary schools, two years was the maximum.³ These figures are significant in that they show the necessity of organizing foreign language courses so as to give this group the greatest possible benefit for the time spent in study. That is, the work of each year should be valuable in itself. The minority group who continue their study of the language for three or four years should not receive first consideration.

The problem was to investigate and to present a method which would enable students to read a foreign language with the greatest facility and with the least expenditure of time and effort, and to apply this method to the reading of a particular language, namely Latin. The major part of this work was the preparation of some elementary Latin reading matter suited to the purpose.

¹The Classical Investigation, Part I, General Report (Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1924), p. 31.

²C. A. Wheeler and others, Enrollment in the Foreign Languages in Secondary Schools and Colleges of the U.S. (Publications of the American and Canadian Committees on Modern Languages; Vol. 4. New York: The Macmillan Company, 1929), p. 353, cited by Mark E. Hutchinson, "Realism in Latin Teaching," The Classical Journal, 30:479, May, 1935.

³Algernon Coleman, The Teaching of Modern Foreign Languages in the United States (Publications of the American and Canadian Committees on Modern Languages, Vol. 12. New York: The Macmillan Company, 1929), p. 26.

First, in this introduction, the two foreign language studies which have been mentioned, the Classical Investigation and the Foreign Language Study, will be reviewed briefly, with special attention given to recommendations as to reading. Michael West's plan for teaching the reading of foreign languages and, in particular, his method of constructing foreign language reading texts will be presented. Several experiments in the reading method will be considered, which suggest that this method is practicable. Mention will be made of foreign language texts built on the West plan, and account will be taken of previous work done by others along this line in Latin. Finally there will be described the character of the Latin reading matter that follows this introduction and the part grammar plays in the use of it. This introduction has attempted to make clear the importance of teaching foreign language students to read the foreign language, to show the need for foreign language readers suited to teaching students to read, and to present the technique used in the construction of the Latin stories.

Chapter II

The Classical Investigation

By setting up first a tentative list of objectives and evaluating the validity of each by analyzing opinions of teachers and administrators and by testing Latin students to determine to what degree the objectives were attained, the Investigation determined on the objectives considered valid for the secondary course. The objectives are classified as immediate and ultimate. They are defined thus:

By ultimate objectives are meant those which involve educational values upon which the justification of Latin as an instrument in secondary education must depend, namely, those abilities, knowledges, attitudes, and habits which continue to function after the school study of Latin has ceased; for example, the ability to determine the meaning of an unfamiliar English word derived from Latin, the habit of sustained attention, or an appreciation of the influence of Roman civilization on the course of western civilization. By immediate objectives are meant those indispensable aims in which progressive achievement is necessary to ensure the attainment of the ultimate objectives, but which may cease to function after the school study of Latin has ceased; for example, the ability to conjugate a Latin verb or to translate a passage from Caesar.⁴

The immediate objective is increased ability to read and understand Latin. The ultimate objectives are given below.

⁴The Classical Investigation, p. 32.

1. Increased ability to read and understand Latin.
2. Increased understanding of those elements in English which are related to Latin.
3. Increased ability to read, speak and write English.
4. Increased ability to learn other foreign languages.
5. Development of correct mental habits.
6. Development of an historical and cultural background.
7. Development of right attitudes toward social situations.
8. Development of literary appreciation.
9. Elementary knowledge of the simpler general principles of language structure.
10. Improvements in the literary quality of the pupil's written English.⁵

The Committee emphasized that in order to attain the ultimate objectives, teachers must not trust that students will attain these automatically, but must introduce into classroom work specific activities that will contribute to their attainment. The immediate aim and the ultimate aims are inter-dependent and are developed concurrently.

The Investigation also studied the content of the Latin course and recommended that content should be reduced in amount and made less difficult by postponing the study of many forms and principles of syntax from the first year to the second and by omitting some entirely. The reading of the first classical author should be delayed until the fourth semester, and reading matter should be more varied. It is suggested that students read from the earliest possible moment of their study easy, well-graded material that would enable them to read classical authors when they came to them with much greater ease and enjoyment than under the old system, where the student began the reading of Caesar with little previous reading experience and after a year's study of forms and syntax, only imperfectly learned. "This reading material should be abundant, repetitious, simple and varied in form, attractive in its content, and carefully adapted to the capacity of young boys and girls."⁶ It should also conform to the genius of the Latin language and should gradually approach in difficulty classical Latin so that the student can easily make the transition from made Latin to classical Latin. The Committee of the Investigation found that there was a lack of made or adapted Latin suitable for developing reading ability.

⁵The Classical Investigation, pp. 78-79.

Principles of syntax should be so selected and distributed as best to contribute to the progressive development of the power to read Latin and to the attainment of the ultimate objectives which involve a knowledge of syntax. Functional knowledge of syntax should be stressed. New principles of syntax can often be met in reading and handled by the student without difficulty from the context. The occasion for an explanation of syntax is to clear up the meaning of a passage which cannot be understood without it. Asking questions on syntax after the thought has been apprehended or at a time when no need is felt is discouraged, for the student's attention is distracted from the content of what he is reading.

⁶The Classical Investigation, p. 127.

Concerning method, the Report puts great stress on reading in the Latin word order. The Grise Study indicated that the majority of fourth-year students attacked the Latin sentence through the English order. Most of them reacted to unfamiliar words by looking them up at once in the vocabulary.⁷ The habit of reading in the Latin order can be formed only by daily practice in comprehension at sight with insistence on grasping the meaning of word groups in the order in which they appear. The Committee is of the opinion that oral reading, which is often neglected by teachers, is valuable in helping the student to comprehend and that it can be used as a test of comprehension. In oral reading meticulous pronunciation should not be emphasized, but proper grouping of words and expression should be required. Teachers should make use of other means than translation to test whether or not students understand what they read. The large amount of translation required in Latin classes in the past has led to slovenly translation ⁷The Classical Investigation, p. 172.

English rather than to discrimination in the use of English, which has been one of the aims of Latin, found, however, not to be realized.⁸ As to vocabulary, new words should be met first in connected reading. Insofar as possible their meanings should be inferred by relating them to known Latin words, English derivatives, or through the context. Frequent sight comprehension in class room work should seek to make habitual with the student this procedure in attacking new words. Not all words can be determined in this manner, but a great many can be. The procedure is analogous to the way in which the ordinary reader reads over unfamiliar words to the meaning of a passage as a whole and usually infers the meaning of them from their relation to the complete thought. Similarly, new forms should be met first in context, and students should be trained to consider the various possibilities of a form and of the idea it may express. In the early stages of the work the similarity of the endings of the various declensions and conjugations should be pointed out. The Report states that mastery of inflectional endings and their significance is essential to learning to read Latin.

⁸In the Miller-Briggs study, 34 per cent of the Cicero translations showed that the thought was not comprehended; and an additional 40 per cent were not acceptable English. Fully 46 per cent of the Caesar translations by fourth-semester students were rated by Latin teachers below the standard of acceptable English. The Classical Investigation, pp.47-48.

An important discovery made by the testing of a great many Latin students throughout the country on Latin vocabulary, verb-forms, syntax, composition, rules of syntax, and sentence translation was that there is no significant relation between knowledge of the rules and ability to translate but that there is a high correlation between functional syntax and translation.⁹ This fact indicates that if ability to read and understand Latin is the chief objective, the emphasis should be on functional syntax, not on formal syntax, as the Report recommends.

Since this paper is concerned primarily with the Investigation's findings concerning reading, the specific methods suggested by the Committee for attaining the ultimate objectives will not be discussed in detail. It is sufficient to say that the selection of vocabulary, forms, syntax, and reading matter should be made partly on the basis of how much particular items contribute to the attainment of the ultimate aims. For example, the vocabulary to be selected for mastery should depend on its value in the attainment of the reading objective and also some of the ultimate objectives, particularly the ability to understand words derived from Latin and increased accuracy in their use. As has already been said, if teachers are to work for the attainment of the ultimate objectives, they must plan definite activities for the class work that will lead to their attainment. Thus, they should consciously work toward developing in their students correct mental habits and should show how they can function in other fields. They should not trust that exposure to Latin will work miracles.

⁹L. J. Brueckner, "The Status of Certain Basic Latin Skills," Journal of Educational Research, 9:390-402, May, 1924, cited in The Classical Investigation, pp. 92-93.

The Classical Investigation has carried out an admirable piece of work and has made needed recommendations. The problem of the secondary school teacher of Latin is to find the necessary time to do all of the things suggested. If she is going to teach her students to read Latin, is not the actual reading going to take up most of the class time? It is true that she does not need to hurry so fast to cover the ground in first-year work since the number of forms and principles of syntax for that year has been reduced, but will not the time formerly used in drill on these elements be spent on reading in the first year, the amount of which has been materially increased? Some attention, it is true, can and should be given to the attainment of the ultimate objectives, but not at the expense of the reading objective. Just as it is possible to center so much attention on the study of formal grammar that there is little time left for reading, so it is possible to devote so much time to the acquisition of an historical and cultural background that reading is neglected. Perhaps Mark E. Hutchinson is right in saying that the objective "should be the reading and enjoyment of Latin, with only so much attention paid to the so-called ultimate objectives as fits into attainment of this main objective."¹⁰

Clarence F. Bill of Western Reserve University agrees with Hutchinson on the importance of the reading objective.. He objects to the Committee's classification of objectives into the immediate objective and the ultimate objectives on the ground that the Committee seems to recommend the development of progressive power to read Latin in order to develop mastery of English, for example, not in order to read Latin. He would make reading ability the primary objective and would subordinate to it the ultimate objectives as by-products.

Furthermore, Bill has worked out a plan for teaching the reading of Latin. He stresses oral reading from the very beginning with attention to grouping of words, sense pauses, and emphasis where the thought requires it. To accustom pupils to the Latin word order and to the sound of the language, he suggests that the teacher read the review lesson while the students listen with their books closed. At first the teacher reads slowly, phrase by phrase, the pupils giving the meaning of each phrase as it comes. Later the review work may be varied by the teacher's asking questions in Latin on the content, by modifying or paraphrasing the text. As the class progresses, less time can be given to review work and to the advance lesson to allow time for sight reading, which he considers invaluable. When word lists for the reading matter are no longer given at intervals, he advises that teachers select a few of the more important words in the advance assignment and tell the class their meanings and give information about their inflection. If the teacher finds that important words are not being used often enough to fix them in memory, she should make an effort to use them in Latin sentences of her own. Bill believes in translation; even though other methods of testing comprehension are used, pupils should be given to understand that they should always be prepared to translate. Comments on grammatical, historical, aesthetic, and metrical aspects and other explanations should accompany the reading, but they should be such as are needed to understand and appreciate what is read, and this phase of study should not crowd out practice in reading.¹¹ The particular merit of Bill's work is that it provides for a great deal of practice in reading, that it trains specifically for reading in the Latin word order, and that it takes account of the value of oral reading. He says:

¹⁰ Mark E. Hutchinson, "Realism in Latin Teaching," p. 482.

¹¹For Bill's description of his procedure see Clarence P. Bill, "Reading the Classics, II," The Classical Journal, 23:489-99, April, 1928.

It is a method I have myself followed for a long time; and, while I am not claiming that it is the absolutely ideal way of learning to read Latin, I do believe that it is adapted to our present conditions, both in other respects and because classical teachers could swing into it without unreasonable effort. I have published it in the hope of contributing something to what I am convinced should be the supreme aim of classical study, ability to read Greek and Latin. The general accomplishment of this aim, I am sure, is the solid foundation for the enjoyment of classical literature and for the permanence of classical education through all stages of the curriculum.¹²

Chapter III

The Foreign Language Study

Soon after the Classical Investigation, a committee undertook a survey of the situation in modern foreign languages. First a tentative list of objectives was set up, which were advanced by responsible persons or groups of persons interested in the teaching of modern languages. Then the validity of these objectives was tested by experiments to determine to what degree students attained these objectives. For my purposes, the immediate objectives and the first three ultimate objectives are of especial interest. The tentative immediate objectives were four: progressive development in power to read the language, progressive development in power to understand the language when spoken, progressive development in power to speak the language, and progressive development in power to write the language. The first three ultimate objectives were A. ability to read the foreign language with ease and enjoyment, B. ability to communicate orally with natives of the country in which the language is spoken, C. ability to communicate in writing with the natives of that country.

¹²Ibid., p. 499.

Modern language teachers expressed their opinions as to the validity of these objectives. Of the 459 teachers who expressed opinions, 36 per cent thought that at least 50 per cent of their students after two years of modern language study attained ultimate objective A; 18 per cent thought that 50 per cent attained objective B; 40 per cent thought that at least 50 per cent attained objective C.¹⁵ Forty-three per cent of the teachers replying considered that 80 per cent of students who had studied a modern language for three years attained the reading objective; 20 per cent considered that this percentage attained the speaking and understanding objective; 41 per cent considered that 80 per cent of their classes attained the writing objective.¹⁴ Sixty per cent of the teachers expressed the view that 80 per cent of students after four years of study attained objective A; 33 per cent, objective B; 48 per cent, objective C.¹⁵ That is, only 58 per cent, 18 per cent, and 40 per cent respectively of the teachers who voted thought that objectives A, B, and C were attained by as many as 50 per cent of their students after two years' study.¹⁶

¹⁵ Coleman, The Teaching of Modern Foreign Languages in the United States, p. 45.

The results of the testing of secondary-school modern language pupils were in agreement with the opinions of teachers. Pupils were tested in grammar, vocabulary, silent reading, and writing. The lower 50 per cent of second-year classes did poorly in grammar, as did the lower 50 per cent of advanced classes.¹⁷ On the American Council reading scales, testing the comprehension of paragraphs arranged in order of difficulty, the best students in the lower half of second-year French penetrated but little farther than paragraph IV, which 63 per cent of the second-year group read correctly; the best students

¹⁴Coleman, The Teaching of Modern Foreign Languages in the United States, p. 47.

¹⁵Ibid., p. 48.

¹⁶Ibid., p. 50.

¹⁷Ibid., p. 74.

in the lower half of the third-year group hardly went through paragraph V, which 45 per cent of this group read and understood; the lower 50 per cent of the fourth-year group read and understood paragraph VI.¹⁸ Students also wrote original compositions on a simple picture, which were rated according to composition scales.

Opinions of teachers and scores on tests show "...that at least half the high school students completing two years of a modern language do not attain power to read and to write with sufficient ease and rapidity to make it probable that they have reached or that they will reach the point of using these abilities for any purpose of their own."¹⁹ The Committee summarizes as follows:

We may conclude, then, that the outcome of the two-year course, as at present organized and conducted, does not justify us in claiming for it the validity of the reading, speaking, and writing objectives for the lower half of the group, and that the case is none too clear for the attainment of these objectives by the lower half of the class in third year, unless it can be established experimentally that these abilities begin to function more effectively than we have assumed, at a lower score level on the measuring instruments that have been used.²⁰

¹⁸Coleman, The Teaching of Modern Foreign Languages in the United States, p. 75.

¹⁹Ibid., p. 90.

²⁰Ibid., p. 92.

Since many of the tentative objectives were found to be invalid, the list was revised to conform to the analyses of opinion and the testing results. The objectives agreed upon for the first two years follow.

Immediate Objectives

Progressive Development:

1. Of the ability to read books, newspapers, and magazines in the modern language within the scope of the student's interests and intellectual powers.
2. Of such knowledge of the grammar of the language as is demonstrated to be necessary for reading with comprehension.
3. Of the ability to pronounce correctly, to understand and to use the language orally within the limits of class materials.
4. Of a knowledge of the foreign country, past and present, and of a special interest in the life and characteristics of its people.
5. Of increased knowledge of the derivations and meanings of English words, of the principles and leading facts of English grammar and of the relationships between the foreign language and English.

Ultimate Objectives

1. Ability to read the foreign language with moderate ease and with enjoyment for recreative and for vocational purposes.
2. Ability to use orally and in intelligible fashion a small stock of the foreign words, phrases and sentences.
3. An especial interest in the history, the institutions and the ideals of the foreign country, a better understanding of its contribution to civilization, and a less provincial attitude toward the merits and achievements of other peoples.
4. Increased curiosity about the literature and the art of other nations and greater ability to understand and enjoy them.

5. Greater interest in the accurate use of English.
6. Increased understanding of the development and the structure of the mother tongue and of other languages.²¹

In the work of the first two years power to read the language is given a superior place, and understanding, speaking, and writing it are limited to the extent that these skills can be developed with the materials of the class room. In advanced work the attainment of these abilities is given more attention. If two-year language students, who comprise 83 per cent of the secondary school pupils who study a modern foreign language, are to receive the maximum good from their study, they should devote most of their energies to reading, which will be most useful to the greatest number. Others who need or desire the other skills will naturally desire to continue their language study. Only enough grammar study is recommended to enable students to read and comprehend. The Study found, however, that the chief emphasis of teachers was on grammar more than any other phase of study, as shown from a study of course outlines and from the fact that grading was on the basis of attainment in grammar. This emphasis was due to the belief of teachers that mastery of grammar was essential to learning to read. Several experiments have been carried on to determine what part grammar knowledge plays in reading, three of which will be discussed later.²²

²¹Coleman, The Teaching of Modern Foreign Languages in the United States, pp. 107-8.

Some general reforms were suggested by the Committee. First, the time given to oral work should be reduced and the functional study of grammar and practice in reading should be the center of attention. Second, more reading outside the class room should be required. Third, an extensive reading course should be adopted for two-year language students, while those who plan to continue their study for a longer period should be enrolled in classes of the traditional type. Fourth, only superior students should take foreign language. Fifth, a three-year course should be made the minimum except for those who will continue in college. Sixth, the criterion for success in the first two years should be the attainment of reading ability. Teachers should pass only those who give proof of really being able to read. These people will have acquired some functional knowledge of grammar and will be able to understand and use the language to some degree. Furthermore, students who have learned to read, with further study, can more effectively acquire the other skills, if they desire.

²²See Chapter V.

Chapter IV

West's Plan of Teaching Students to Read a Foreign Language

Perhaps the greatest contribution of recent times to foreign-language teaching was made by Michael West, who was Principal of the Teachers' Training College in Dacca, India, and is now at the University of Toronto. His work in teaching English to Indian boys led to a logical procedure in the making of foreign-language reading texts.

West observed that a Bengali boy would have need of being able to read English, since informative literature in his own language was inadequate. A few would need to write, understand, or speak English. But by stressing training to read the language the greatest number would derive the greatest benefit. Moreover, if the reading of English was actually to function in their lives after school study was finished, they would have to be able to read it with ease and enjoyment--"in an armchair," as West says. Besides, he wished to give the study of English the highest "surrender value," that is, the greatest proportionate amount of benefit from an incompleting course of instruction in that subject. Bengali boys who left school before finishing the English course, as many did, should receive benefit from their study in proportion to the length of time they had studied.

Therefore West set out to discover a good method of teaching these boys to read. First of all, he tried to develop reading facility in his students. He formed experimental and control groups shown by test to be of equal ability in English. The control groups were taught in the usual type of class, where practice in speaking and writing English accompanied reading. The experimental groups spent their time in reading, with emphasis on reading with comprehension and with rapidity. The general procedure in the class room was as follows. Unfamiliar words in the passage to be read were written on the blackboard, explained, and drilled on through sentences, and any difficult constructions were explained. Next a set of questions on the meaning of the passage was distributed and the questions were read by the teacher. The pupils began to read, asking for the meaning of any word they did not know. When they finished reading, they stood up and the teacher recorded the time taken to read. Then the boys wrote the answers in the vernacular. Later it was found preferable for boys to stand after they had written the answers, whereupon the teachers corrected them, the pupils then, instead of during their reading, asked the meanings of unfamiliar words, and corrected their wrong answers. After several months a test on the reading of a continuous passage was given to both the experimental and control groups. The experimental group showed a superiority of 31.8 per cent on one story, 65.7 per cent on the other.²³ Although the experimental class did not participate in speaking and writing English, as did the control classes, the two groups were practically equal on the regular school examination.²⁴ West found during this experiment that the teacher did not always know which words were unfamiliar to pupils and that the number of unfamiliar words in the best reading matter was so great that the reading was slow and difficult. Hence, he realized that reading matter suited to his purpose was needed. Since it was not available, he constructed reading texts of his own.

In the construction of these texts he used only the words of greatest frequency, using as a basis Thorndike's word-frequency list.²⁵ He discovered that the reading texts in common use made use of a great many words that were not the commonest.²⁶ He thinks that almost any non-technical matter can be rewritten within the 5,000 commonest words. Furthermore,

²³Michael West, Bilingualism (Bureau of Education, India, Occasional Reports, No. 13: Calcutta: Government of India, Central Publication Branch, 1926), p. 260.

²⁴Ibid., pp. 260-61.

²⁵E. L. Thorndike, The Teachers Word Book (Teachers' College, Columbia University, 1921), contains a list of 10,000 English words arranged in the order of their commonness.

²⁶50.6 per cent of the vocabulary of the boys in Class III was not of maximum utility; 26.0 per cent of that of boys in class X was of less than maximum utility. West, op. cit., p. 241.

he states, "Any simple narrative which does not contain too much local color and has a strong plot can be written within 2,500 or even 1,000."²⁷

In building his texts he kept in mind other criteria also. The first is that at the earliest possible moment pupils should derive a sense of pleasure and power from their reading. Secondly, words should be learned from meeting them repeatedly in reading rather than through memorizing them in lists. They should be introduced very gradually and should be used over and over until the reader knows them. West recommends as the ratio of new words to old in a primer, 30:1; in a first reader, 40:1. The third criterion is that new words should be introduced at regular intervals, not in a mass. The commonest words should be introduced first, the number of words of low frequency should be few, and ideally there should be no synonyms in the early stages. In the fourth place, the reading matter should be suited to the age and interests of the students for whom it is intended.

With these criteria in mind, West made two reading texts. Book I built up a vocabulary of 208 words; the total number of words in the book was 9,296. The number of running words per new word was 45. Of the 208 words, 137 were among the first 500 commonest words in English, and 165 were among the first 1,000 commonest. Forty-three words were outside the commonest 1,000 words but were used to present a new letter, were necessary to tell the story, or were derived from common words included in the vocabulary. It was assumed that the vocabulary of Book I had been learned by those who undertook Book II. In this second book 236 additional words were introduced. The total length was 13,217 words, and the number of running words per new word was 56. As in Book I, some relatively uncommon words had to be used. Book II was composed of ten stories and ten informative articles. It was found desirable to provide extra reading matter containing no new words that students might read with ease and enjoyment, that they might have a sense of accomplishment. Four stories containing only one new word were written to be read after Book II had been completed. West did not find such material possible after Book I.²⁸

²⁷West, op. cit., p. 245.

These reading texts were used in two experimental classes. They were used in Class II in a Middle English school with twenty-six boys, a school of low quality in an inferior locality. Since it was found that these boys were not able to read the vernacular, they received special training in silent reading in it along with their reading of English. No control group was formed, but results obtained on periodic tests by this class were compared with the results of classes in the very best school in that part of the Province. The texts were also used in a Class III, one of higher intelligence. After one term Class II was found to be equal in reading ability to Class III of a government school. In eighty-two working days, or about seventeen weeks, this experimental class made a gain in reading normally requiring two and a half years. Class III also showed a gain normally made in two and a half years. In one year's work, 141 actual working days, Class II made a two years' gain in reading and a year's gain in vocabulary. Class III made the same gain in ninety-four actual working days.

²⁸Such material at this point would have required, West says, the introduction of new words.

West summarizes the conclusions of these and other tests as follows:

Hence we may say that, given an efficient method, efficient textbooks and a reasonably efficient teacher, it is possible to give such reading ability in English as constitutes a permanent, usable and improvable possession within one year to about forty per cent and within two years to eighty per cent of an average class of Bengali boys. Of the remaining twenty per cent, sixteen are boys of natural ability so much below normal that they have difficulty in mastering the reading of their own mother-tongue. It is questionable whether the study of a foreign language can--even in the bilingual conditions of Bengal--in their case be recommended.²⁹ ²⁹West, op. cit., pp. 303-04.

3/24/41
 2041-0114-11

In the very earliest stage the procedure used in class room work was picking out new letters in the passage, learning the new words through blackboard drill, reading the sentences in unison, individual reading by the backward boys, reading the sentences and giving their meanings in unison and by individuals. After the class had advanced to the story-reading stage, the class read the questions on the passage, individuals gave their meaning, and the class read and gave the meaning of the questions; next the boys found the answers and underlined them, and the teacher checked their underlinings; the boys then wrote the answers. For home work the boys, without the English version, wrote the story in the vernacular. As the work progressed, the method remained about the same except that the story was told by some boy in class instead of its being written as home work. Although except in the very earliest stages oral reading was not practiced, the boys were able to read aloud remarkably well. They did, however, in the beginning of the work use lip-movements and vocalizations. With additional reading experience, the more advanced boys no longer used them. In the less advanced there were lip-movements without sound. One month before the end-test, an effort was made to discover whether the boys of experimental Class III were translating or actually reading. Fifty-three per cent were reading, 31 per cent were translating, and the process of the five very backward boys could not be determined. Those who were translating were advised not to translate, and a short time later all were reading except the five slowest boys. West does not discourage the use of the vernacular in the beginning stages of foreign-language study, but thinks that with reading experience translation tends to disappear.

Although West feels that his work is only experimental and not perfected, he considers that his procedure and material have proved their worth. Certainly he has undertaken a prodigious task and has carried it through with care and diligence. His method is a pleasant way of learning to read a language. It abolishes the tediousness of continually consulting the vocabulary for word meanings and gives the learner a feeling of satisfaction. Textbooks constructed on his principle should enable students to build up with ease and pleasure the recognitional vocabulary which is so necessary to learning to read a foreign language.

Chapter V

Some Experiments in the Reading Method

The next problem to be considered is what has been accomplished by the reading method in the various foreign languages. Several experiments have been carried on.

In 1926-27, at the University of Illinois, a class in first-year French, composed of freshmen who had no particular interest in foreign language study and wished to study the language for only one year, used the reading method.³⁰ The plan was to study first twelve lessons in recognitional grammar in preparation for reading. After five or six lessons, however, in which the work proved difficult because it dealt with isolated examples, the class abandoned the grammar lessons, expecting to return to them later, and began to read Roth's Contes Faciles. Since no need for grammar in reading was felt, the grammar lessons were not resumed. At first the translation method was used, and for the first few weeks reading in French was practiced but was later discontinued because of lack of time. During the first semester the class read also Lavissee's Histoire de France and Malot's Sans Famille. Detailed objective tests were given to check on comprehension of assigned reading, and there was a little sight translation every day. The second semester the class read Verne's Le Tour du Monde, Loti's Pêcheur d'Islande, France's Le Livre de Mon Ami, and Mérimée's Columba. In addition to the assigned class room work, at least 100 pages of outside reading were read the first semester, and Dumas's La Tulipe Noire was read by all the second semester. At the end of the year standardized tests were given, and the results obtained by the reading class were compared with those of classes taught by the grammar method. The reading class made a gain of from 20 to 25 per cent over the regular classes in vocabulary, a gain of from 26 to 40 per cent in reading, and acquired from 16 to 41 per cent of the grammar that the regular classes learned. Moreover, students in the class were able to read French for pleasure, and, although they had entered the class with no special enthusiasm, only to work off a requirement, three-fourths of the class wished to continue French. Miss Murray states:

³⁰This experiment is reported by James B. Tharp and Eloise Murray, "Grammarless Reading of Foreign Languages," The Modern Language Journal, 12:885-90, February, 1928.

It seems safe to say that the "Reading Sections" accomplished their purpose. Students were reading rather difficult French literature and understood it in one year with practically no preliminary preparation other than actual reading.³¹

This experiment suggests that college freshmen, at least, can learn to read French with little or no systematic grammar study.

A more significant test, because it dealt with a larger number of students in nine secondary schools, was made in June, 1931, by Dr. F. D. Cheydleur, Professor of Romance Languages at the University of Wisconsin. He compared the median scores on the American Council Alpha French tests made at the end of ³¹Tharp and Murray, op. cit., p. 389.

of their first year's work by 192 French pupils who had been taught by the reading method with the national norms. He reported a 12 per cent gain in vocabulary over national norms, an 18 per cent gain in silent reading, and a 14.5 per cent loss in synthetic grammar.³²

G. T. Buswell's experiments to determine the reading habits of foreign language students show the results of different methods of learning. He photographed their eye-movements by means of a machine that records fixations, regressive movements, and fixation pauses. An immature reader makes a great many fixations and regressive movements per line, and his fixation pauses are long. Eye-movements do not indicate the reader's comprehension; for an accurate interpretation of the photographs the degree of comprehension should be learned otherwise.

By this method he tested two high school classes taught by the direct method³³ and two taught by the indirect translation method. The classes were from two different Chicago high schools and were taught by two different teachers. Students for testing were selected from the middle halves of their classes. There were one first-year and one second-year class taught by each method. In the classes of School A the direct method was used; in School B, the indirect translation method. In silent reading the second-year students of School A uniformly made fewer fixations and fewer regressive movements than the first-year students; the second-year students of School B made more fixations and regressive movements than the first-year students, who were found not to be reading with understanding. In School A the reading habits of the second-year students approached more nearly those of mature readers of the language than did those of the second-year students of School B. The pupils of School B made more fixations and more regressive movements per line than those of School A. The length of fixations, which indicates speed in recognizing words, was greater for the second-year classes of School A than School B. Superiority in this respect, however, is not so significant. Buswell's experiment shows that reading a foreign language by the direct bond tends to produce more mature reading habits than the translation method.

³²Helen M. Eddy, Instruction in Modern Foreign Languages (National Survey of Secondary Education, Monograph No. 24. Washington, D.C.: United States Government Printing Office, 1935), p. 25.

³³By direct method here is meant the method of getting the thought directly from the foreign languages without the use of English equivalents. It should not be confused with the true direct method, which has been used in both modern language and Latin teaching. The true direct method involves exclusion of the mother tongue from the class room. Most of the time is spent in oral practice with the language in imitation of the teacher.

Buswell also observed the reading habits of Latin students. For testing he used the best students in the third-year Latin classes of seven high schools, who had been taught by the translation method. He tested also students selected from the middle halves of first-, second-, and third-year classes in the University High School of the University of Chicago, who were taught to read Latin directly. The same selection was read by both groups. Table I shows the results for this second group.

Table I

Group Medians for Silent Reading of Latin³⁴

Group	Average Number of Fixations per Line	Average Number of Regressive Movements per Line	Average Duration of Fixation Pauses
First year	13.0	2.3	9.0
Second year	13.0	2.5	9.0
Third year	10.5	2.5	7.7

There was a marked improvement among third-year students in the number of fixations per line and in the duration of fixation pauses. Eye-movements of these students resembled those of an immature reader in the vernacular. They made from two to three times as many fixations per line as they did in reading English.

³⁴ G. T. Buswell, A Laboratory Study of the Reading of Modern Foreign Languages (Publications of the American and Canadian Committees on Modern Languages, Vol. 2. New York: The Macmillan Company, 1927), p.72.

A study of the eye-movements of the high-ranking third-year Latin students taught to translate reveals a great many fixations and many regressive movements. Their eyes did not move steadily across the page but stopped often and went back, as if the reader were puzzled. Buswell describes their eye-movements as "mere helpless wandering." Table II gives the results of a few individual tests. It must be noted that the lines used in the passage read were 7.7 per cent longer than those of the same passage given to the first group. Because of the small number of cases no group medians were formed.

Table II

Individual Averages for Silent Reading of Latin³⁵

Subject	Average Number of Fixations per Line	Average Number of Regressive Movements per Line	Average Duration of Fixation Pauses
A 10	34.0	9.8	6.2
A 21	30.8	13.0	6.6
A 29	50.8	23.0	7.2
A.35	23.0	8.5	7.3

Even considering the slight difference in the length of the lines, one can see from the tables that the reading ³⁵Buswell, op. cit., p. 73.

habits of these third-year students are inferior by far to those of the first group. It is significant that the first group understood better the passage read than did the second group.

The number of fixations and regressive movements is greater in the reading of Latin than in the reading of modern foreign languages. The eye-movements are similar, however, except that those in reading Latin show characteristics of less mature reading. Buswell says:

It is perfectly clear, however, that Latin can be read and that the students in this high school are learning how to read it. It is also evident that the reading of Latin presents somewhat greater difficulties than the reading of French, German, or Spanish, and that progress during a single year is less. From the nature of the language and its construction, it is not surprising to find that this difference exists.³⁶

Buswell found that the middle half of foreign language classes, either in high school or college, at the end of two years' time had not acquired mature reading habits. Some students were expert readers at the end of two years, and a few at the end of one year. He estimated that a third year of work is necessary to make most of the students efficient readers in the language. He asserts:

This precipitates the question as to whether by a more careful selection of students and possible further revision of methods of teaching this goal may still be reached in two years. There are certain rather strong reasons which suggest that this would be entirely possible, providing foreign language teachers deem it desirable to attempt such an objective in two years' time.³⁷

³⁶Buswell, op. cit., p. 91.

In his book, The Practice of Teaching in the Secondary Schools, Henry C. Morrison describes a working plan for teaching foreign languages by the reading method. He believes that the class room does not provide a suitable situation for learning to speak a language and that the reading objective is the only valid one. He advocates first building up a small vocabulary by oral work in a modern language and by board work, making use of sentences and then paragraphs in Latin. After the class has become acquainted with about 200 words and the most common forms and language peculiarities, it should be set to read in some text. Comprehension of reading is tested, but no use is made of translation. Students are trained to read without thinking of English equivalents. He emphasizes the reading of long passages with as many re-readings as are necessary to clear up the meaning. Just as in reading the vernacular, a person does not puzzle over every word but takes in the thought of whole sentences and whole paragraphs and re-reads when he does not follow it, so in reading a foreign language he should not analyze every word, but, understanding the meaning of whole passages, he will come to know through context the meaning of many unfamiliar words. The only writing of the language is through free composition, using words and forms that have been observed in use. Naturally there are mistakes, but some of the writing is surprisingly good. Attractive reading matter is made easily available, and students are encouraged to read what appeals to them.

³⁷ Buswell, op. cit., p. 95.

Under Morrison's system the student continues in the language class until he shows that he has reached the "reading adaptation," that is, until he can read easily non-technical matter of ordinary difficulty³⁸ in the language. When he has acquired that ability, he is excused from the regular classroom work but reads outside and reports to the teacher on what he reads. Or if he wishes to continue the language, he may enter a grammar class where he learns sufficient grammar to enable him to comprehend more exactly what he reads. Morrison believes, however, that reading and grammar should not be studied in the same class, for the purpose of the teaching is likely to be thrown out of focus and inhibitions may be set up. Therefore, grammar study should come after the reading adaptation has been acquired, if at all.

³⁸Morrison suggests that the standard might be that "of a popular story written for the average reader in a modern language."

For teaching by this method the teacher had to build up for himself in the beginning material presenting slowly the first small stock of words and forms in sentences and connected paragraphs. Morrison found that most beginning books introduce new words and forms too rapidly. He says:

The defect in most beginner's readers or first books is that the gradient referred to is much too steep. New words and forms appear so rapidly that the learner does not assimilate in the manner required by language-arts principles. He becomes swamped in the mass of new isolated learnings and promptly falls back on the process of memorizing, deciphering, and transverbalizing.³⁹

The "reading" method, however, has not been generally adopted. Miss Eddy said that her survey came too soon after the Foreign Language study for it to have had any noticeable effect on modern language teaching, although a few schools had been working along the lines recommended by the Committee before its report, and a few had revised its courses to conform to its recommendations. In Latin, the influence of College Entrance Examinations has always been great. As long as they require a reproductive knowledge of Latin, Latin teachers, believing that they must prepare the few who will take these examinations, continue to emphasize grammar. Miss ³⁹ Henry C. Morrison, The Practice of Teaching in the Secondary Schools (Chicago: The University of Chicago Press, 1926), p. 458.

Eddy, however, cites cases of teachers who have tried the reading method and have expressed the utmost satisfaction with it.⁴⁰

A. A. Douglass in 1936 reported that the eclectic method was the one most commonly used by modern foreign language teachers.⁴¹ This is a compromise between the direct method, which bars use of the vernacular from the class room, and the grammar-translation method, which involves along with translation the study of grammatical rules and principles. Handschin says, "If...we examine the syllabi and outlines of modern-language courses given in secondary schools today, we are surprised and shocked to see that the emphasis is still on grammar."⁴² In the following he states his explanation for this situation:

Much criticism was directed against the report (of the Foreign Language Study) for the reason that, although the material was generally known to the Committee on Direction and Control of the Study before it was published, the precise proposal as worded by Coleman ⁴⁰Eddy, Instruction in Foreign Language, pp. 24-25.

⁴¹A. A. Douglass, "The Next Steps in Improving the Secondary Program," California Journal of Secondary Education, 11:205-214, April, 1936, cited by Charles H. Handschin, Modern Language Teaching (Yonkers-on-Hudson, New York: World Book Company, 1940), p. 59.

⁴²Handschin, op. cit., p. 142.

was not known to them and shocked and disappointed some members. Other conservatives, persons poorly acquainted with conditions in secondary schools, and individuals who feared that the method proposed would encourage superficiality and lack of thoroughness, voiced their opposition loudly.⁴³

Despite, then, the recommendations of the Study and the Investigation and the good results attained by experimental classes taught by the reading method, grammar still holds the center of the stage in foreign language teaching.

Thus far it has been pointed out that investigators recommend that the ability to read be the primary requirement in the first two years of foreign language study and that functional grammar and syntax be taught to the extent that they contribute to the reading skill. Experimental work has shown that very little formal grammar knowledge is needed to learn to read. But in order to teach, with economy, students to read, there is need of reading texts containing matter that will be of interest to boys and girls and that will contribute to the attainment of the ultimate objectives, such as the historical-cultural objective, and presenting new words and forms so gradually and repeating them so often that the student will learn them thoroughly and will be able to read with a sense of accomplishment and pleasure.

⁴³ Handschin, op. cit., p. 70.

Chapter VI

Foreign Language Texts Made on West's Plan

Texts of this kind have been prepared in French, Spanish, German, Italian, and Latin. Helen M. Eddy, Head of the Department of Foreign Languages in the University High School, State University of Iowa, and Grace M. Cochran have made a series of French readers, known as the Heath-Chicago French Series.⁴⁴ There are included several plateau readers, intended to be read at certain stages in the course, which contain practically no new words, idioms, or grammatical principles. They are constructed according to the plan devised by West. To accompany the readers there are Eddy's Beginning French and Workbook. The intensive readers for the first-year are Si Nous Lisions and Pierrille; for the second year, Les Trois Mousquetaires. In addition there are three plateau readers for the first year and three for the second.

For Spanish, Sparkman and Castillo have written their Beginning Spanish, Workbook, and Primeras lecturas espanolas, to be used concurrently the first year. For second-year work, there are Sparkman and Castillo's Repasemos and Spanish Wall Charts, Perez Galdos' La Nela and Cuoderno, and Castillo and Sparkman's Espana en America and Cuoderno.

⁴⁴The French, Spanish, and German texts listed are all published by D. C. Heath and Company.

For first-year German there are Hagboldt and Kaufmann's Deutsch für Anfänger and Lesebuch für Anfänger and the first five German Readers. For second-year German, the suggested course is Hagboldt's Essentials of German Reviewed combined with Graded German Readers, books six to ten, or Leopold's Reise durch Deutschland and Thoma's Cora. Vier Lausbubengeschichten.

Since Italian is seldom taught in secondary schools, the texts in this series for that language are not listed here, but they may be secured from D. C. Heath and Company.

The University of Chicago Press has published three Latin readers: Mima Maxey and Marjorie J. Fay's A New Latin Primer, Mima Maxey's Cornelia, and Marjorie J. Fay's Carolus et Maria. An examination of the last two discloses that they are stories, of no great interest, about American boys and girls. The difficulty of telling interesting stories with a limited vocabulary is great, that is, of writing material suitable for boys and girls of high school age within the range of the vocabulary of one who is only beginning to read. The chief criticism of these readers is that they lack the flavor of a classical setting. The authors have made use of the Lodge frequency list⁴⁵ in their selection of vocabulary. In these beginning readers participles and subjunctives do not occur; the forms are those recommended by the Classical Investigation for the first year. In the reading matter which composes the main part of this study, these forms are introduced early.

⁴⁵This word count is based on the Latin usually read in high schools. It appeared in 1912.

A word count of three stories of Cornelia, selected at random near the beginning, the middle, and the end of the book, shows respectively eighteen new words out of 211, ten out of 181, and sixteen out of 197. The ratio of running words to new words is approximately twelve to one, eighteen to one, and twelve to one. A similar count of three stories from Carolus et Maria reveals seventeen new words out of 260, fourteen out of 327, and sixteen out of 242, the ratio of running words per new words being respectively fifteen to one, twenty-three to one, and fifteen to one. A count was also made of the new and old words on a page of the reading material that follows, chosen at random near the beginning, the middle, and the end. On page 60 there are six new words out of 121; on page 120 there are nine new words out of 137; on page 170 there are seven new words out of 142, the ratio of running words to new being twenty to one, fifteen to one, and twenty to one. New forms were not considered in these counts. There is such a great variation in the ratios that I shall not venture any generalization. It is perhaps safe to say, however, that the vocabulary burden in my work is no greater than it is in these two Latin readers.⁴⁶

Latin texts on the West plan present a greater difficulty than modern language texts. Since Latin is a more highly inflected language, a great many forms of the same word are possible. A noun, for example, has not been wholly presented upon its first appearance. The meaning of the word and the significance of its ending are both involved. For example, although the student has seen deus, deorum, with a different ending, is a new word if he has not yet learned the significance of the ending -orum. Similarly, he may know pulchram, but pulcherrimus presents a new element, as does pulchrior. Should each new form be counted as a new word? The answer, in part, at least, is this: From the very beginning of his study in Latin, the student should be told the importance of watching the endings of Latin words, for they show relationship to the rest of the sentence. He comes to expect the endings to change. He will have no difficulty in seeing that pulchram and pulchrā are forms of the same word. When he first meets a genitive plural like deorum, it should be treated as a new word, but its ending should be noted and its significance explained.

⁴⁶To keep the proportion of new words constant was found to be impossible. Some stories require the use of many new words; others, but few.

After several occurrences of this ending, how many, it is difficult to determine, the student will be expected to recognize a familiar word with that ending, and it is believed that he will if it has been brought to his attention each time that he has met it. If upon its first appearance and certainly its second and third, a new ending on an already familiar word counts as a new word, the vocabulary burden will, of necessity, be greater than in similar modern language reading matter, where this situation does not exist to the degree that it does in Latin.

Chapter VII

Character of the Reading Matter Submitted and the Place of Grammar

The major part of my work has been the making of an elementary Latin reader, following in the main the principles laid down by Michael West. The stories have been adapted from Ovid's Metamorphoses. As Greek and Roman myths are usually of interest to high school students, especially first- and second-year pupils, the reading material should be attractive. It is assumed that the student has no knowledge of Latin when he begins the work. From the very first day he reads connected Latin, and very soon he is reading simply told stories. Whenever a new word is introduced, it is given in the margin on the line in which it occurs and its meaning is given above the word in the place where it first occurs. The word is repeated frequently after its initial use except in the case of words which are needed to tell a story but have no great utility. The number of old words per new word is considerably less than West recommended, but not so great, it is believed, as to give students great difficulty.

Teaching students to read by this method does not mean that forms and syntax are ignored, but they are studied for recognitional, not reproductive, purposes. That is, the student is trained to recognize the future tense of a verb when he meets it in a sentence but is not asked to conjugate a verb in the future tense. But it is essential that he recognize the personal endings and that he know and watch for tense signs. He must think of silvam as a singular objective form, though he may never be asked to decline the word. Furthermore, he must see the relationship of the word to the rest of the sentence as shown by its form. It is necessary to distinguish between in silvā and in silvam, although they are not called by technical names. The ability to decline silva or even a knowledge of the grammatical principles involved in the two phrases does not ensure that a student will understand them correctly when they occur in reading.⁴⁷ In the same way, he can perfectly well handle many instances of the subjunctive without knowing why it is used. In formal study of grammar he would study the grammatical rules for the subjunctive and would be assigned the writing of Latin sentences applying them and would be called upon to analyze its use in Latin sentences. In functional, or rather recognitional, grammar enough is taught about a subjunctive form to enable students to understand a sentence containing it, and that does not demand giving its use a name. One who would read Latin must have a recognitional knowledge of forms and syntax, and the task of acquiring it is no mean one.

After a student has seen many times the various forms of a word, it is quite likely that he will be able to give a paradigm. It is probable, too, that after observing a grammatical principle in use many times, he will use it correctly in exercises or sentences. Exercises of this kind may be valuable in focusing attention on vocabulary, forms, and syntax. If he can make use of the principles he has seen in use, then his grammar is "functioning." Even if he cannot, it may be adequate for recognition. There is a vast gulf between formal and functional grammar. One might be able to give paradigms and to recite grammar rules fluently and still not be able to read Latin. On the other hand, it is quite possible to know no paradigms and practically no rules but to be able to read well. But the character of the Latin language demands that the reader recognize and pay attention to forms and grammatical phenomena. This ability and this mental attitude can be developed more efficiently by actual experience with principles in use rather than through formal learning of them.

⁴⁷The Classical Investigation found, as previously stated on p. 9, no significant relation between knowledge of the rules and ability to translate but a high correlation between functional syntax and translation.

With grammar taught only to the degree that it functions in reading, but nevertheless taught, the postponement of the more difficult forms and syntax until the second year, as the Investigation recommended, is not necessary. The student can soon learn enough about the present active participle, for example, to enable him to understand it in reading. After being told on the first appearances of these forms that final -ns or -nt- before an adjective ending corresponds to English -ing and after having his attention called to these forms on their repeated occurrences, he soon learns to read them easily. Similarly, the perfect passive participle, the recognition of which is essential to reading Latin because of its high frequency, can be introduced reasonably early although it is a more difficult form to master. For recognitional purposes there is no need of delaying the subjunctive until the second year. In fact, the use of the subjunctive in dependent clauses gives so little difficulty in reading that students can read it there without realizing that the subjunctive has been used, although many of them will be curious about the new verb form. Therefore, by limiting grammar to recognitional grammar, students in a shorter period of time can become familiar with the forms and their uses necessary to reading classical Latin. The 87 per cent of secondary students who study Latin for two years or less by this plan can be introduced to classical Latin earlier and can read it more easily. The tentative reading matter that follows does introduce soon important forms commonly deferred until the second year, and besides, from the very character of the subject matter it builds up a vocabulary that prepares for the reading of Vergil. If within two years' time Latin students can read some of the best classical Latin, their time has been well spent.

The reading matter submitted is not extensive enough to prepare students to read classical Latin, but it is a first step. More reading experience with material of the same kind, gradually increasing in vocabulary and in sentence complexity, should enable them to make the transition easily.

ELEMENTARY LATIN READING MATTER

DĒ DEIS̄ HOMINIBUSQUE et Apollō et Diāna and est is a god great deus Apollō est deus. Apollō est magnus. magnus Apollō est magnus deus. Apollō est pulcher. beautiful pulcher Apollō est deus pulcher. Apollō est deus magnus et pulcher.

in in the forest silvā Apollō in silva est. Silva est large magna. Silva est pulchra. Silva est magna et pulchra. Apollō est in magnā silvā. Deus in silvā pulchrā est. Deus in silvā magnā et pulchrā est.

amat likes Apollō silvam amat.¹ Deus silvam amat.
Deus magnam silvam amat. Deus silvam pulchram amat. Magnus deus silvam amat. Deus pulcher silvam amat. Magnus deus silvam pulchram amat. Deus magnus et pulcher silvam amat.
Deus silvam magnam et pulchram amat.

Deus in silvā est. Magnus deus in silvā est. Deus pulcher in silvā est. Deus pulcher in magnā silvā est.

dea a goddess Diāna est dea. Diāna est magna.
Diāna est dea magna. Dea est pulchra. Diāna ¹Apollō silvam amat: Apollō likes the forest.

est dea magna et pulchra.

Diāna in silvā est. Dea pulchra in silvā est. Dea in magnā silvā est. Dea pulchra in magnā silvā est. Dea magna et pulchra in silvā est. Diāna, magna dea, in silvā pulchrā est.

Diāna silvam amat. Dea pulchra silvam amat. Dea magnam silvam amat. Dea silvam magnam et pulchram amat.

Deus Apollō Diānam amat. Deus ^{goddess} deam amat. Deus deam pulchram amat. Deus magnus et pulcher deam pulchram amat.

Diāna ^{god} deum amat. Dea pulchra deum amat. Dea deum pulchrum amat. Dea deum magnum amat. Dea pulchra deum magnum et pulchrum amat.

nōn ^{not} Diāna nōn est deus: Diāna est dea.
Apollō nōn est dea: Apollō est deus. cervus ^{Stag} Cervus in Silvā

In silvā est cervus. Cervus est magnus. Cervus est pulcher. Cervus est magnus et pulcher. Cervus magnus et pulcher in silvā magnā et pulchrā est. Cervus silvam amat. Cervus magnus et pulcher silvam magnam et pulchram amat.

Dea pulchra Diāna in silvā est. Diāna sees videt magnum cervum videt, et cervus deam pulchram videt. Diāna pulchra cervum amat. Diāna does not kill necat cervum nōn necat. Cervus pulcher deam amat.

Deus Apollō in magnā silvā est. Deus pulcher Diānam nōn videt, et Diāna deum pulchrum nōn videt. Deus magnum cervum videt.
Cervus deum pulchrum nōn videt. Magnus deus cervum pulchrum necat.

Now
nunc Nunc Diāna pulchra deum in silvā videt.
Apollo Diānam nōn videt. Nunc deus deam pulchram videt. Diāna pulchra deum nōn amat because quod cervum pulchrum necat. Deus Diānam nōn amat quod Diāna deum nōn amat. Nunc cervus magnus et pulcher in silvā nōn est. happy
laeta Nunc dea nōn est laeta quod cervus in silvā nōn est. Nunc deus nōn est laetus quod Diāna deum nōn amat. Nunc Diāna nōn est laeta quod Apollō Diānam nōn amat. Nunc deus nōn est laetus quod cervus in silvā nōn est.

Cyparissus² et Cervus

puer a boy Cyparissus est puer. Puer est pulcher.
Cyparissus est puer pulcher. Cyparissus nōn est deus. Deus Apollō puerum amat, et puer deum amat. Cyparissus silvam pulchram amat.
Puer silvam amat quod puer in silvā deum videt.

Nunc puer in silvā est. In silvā est cervus magnus et pulcher. Cervus puerum videt; puer cervum nōn videt. Nunc puer cervum videt. Magnus cervus puerum amat, et puer cervum amat. In silvā puer est laetus, et cervus laetus est.

amicus friendly to the boy Cervus amicus puerō est, et puer amicus cervō est. Deus Apollō puerum et cervum in silvā videt. Apollō cervum amat, et cervus deum amat. Cervus amicus deō est; deus amicus puerō est.

cum with Cervus cum puerō in silvā est. Puer cum cervō est. Apollō cum puerō et cervō est. Diāna cum puerō et cervō nōn est.
Diāna in silvā est; Diāna deum et puerum et ²A name.

cervum nōn videt.

sedet per errat

Nunc Apollō cum puerō et cervō nōn est. sits Puer in silvā sedet. Cervus nōn sedet. on through Nunc puer in cervō sedet. Cervus per wanders silvam errat. Deus Apollō per silvam errat; deus cum puerō nōn est. Dea Diāna per silvam errat; cum puerō Diāna nōn est. Apollō cum Diānā per silvam errat.

dēfessus

Nunc cervus est dēfessus, Cyparissus in cervō sedet et cervus per silvam errat.

sōlus tēlum portat

Nunc puer in cervō dēfessō nōn sedet. Puer alone sōlus per silvam errat. javelin carries Puer tēlum portat. Tēlum est magiacit

num. Puer magnum tēlum portat. Puer tēlum amat. Puer magnum telum amat. Puer sōlus throws per silvam errat et tēlum iacit. Tēlum cer-vum amīcum necat. Nunc puer nōn laetus est.
Nunc cervus amīcus in silvā nōn est. Nunc puer in cervō nōn sedet. Nunc cum cervō puer per silvam nōn errat. Sōlus puer per silvam errat. Nunc Cyparissus tēlum nōn amat. Nunc puer per silvam errat: puer tē-lum non iacit.

Apollo puerum in silvā videt. Puer est sōlus: cervus cum puerō nōn est. Puer in arborem mutat nōn est laetus. Apollo nōn est laetus quod puer nōn est laetus. Deus Apollō Cyparissum into a tree changes the cypress in arborem mutat. Arbor est cyparissus.

Arbor est pulchra. Arbor pulchra in silvā est. Nunc puer per silvam nōn errat, quod puer nunc est arbor. Deus Apollō arborem amat.

Deus et Puer in Silvā

flūmen

prope

Deus Apollō cum puerō in silvā est.
Puer cum deō per silvam errat. Deus puerō amicus est. In silvā est flūmen. Flūmen a river est magnum. Flūmen est pulchrum. Flūmen near est magnum et pulchrum. Arbor prope flūmen est.

Deus flūmen videt, et puer flūmen videt. Apollō flūmen amat, et puer flūmen amat. Apollō arborem videt, et puer arborem videt.

Apollō prope flūmen sedet, quod dēfessus he is he sits
est. Prope arborem sedet. Puer dēfessus nōn est, et prope flūmen nōn sedet. Sōlus he wanders per silvam errat. Tēlum portat. Cervum videt. Cervus puerō amicus nōn est. Puer tēlum iacit. Puer tēlum in ^{into} flūmen iacit et cervum nōn necat. Cervus puerum et tēlum videt et per silvam ^{runs} currit. Nunc puer per silvam currit; cervum nōn videt. Puer nōn laetus est, quod cervum nōn necat. Nunc puer dēfessus est.

Nunc deus nōn dēfessus est; prope flū-men nōn sedet. Sōlus per silvam currit et puerum ^{calls} vocat. Puerum nōn videt. Puer deum vocat; deum nōn videt. Nunc deus puerum videt, et puer deum videt. Deus laetus est, et puer laetus est. Deus dēfessus est, et puer dēfessus est. Nunc deus prope magnum flūmen sedet, et puer prope magnum flūmen sedet. Puer per silvam nōn ^{now} iam currit; prope arborem et flūmen sedet. Puer deum nōn iam vocat, et deus puerum nōn vocat.

Daphnē et Apollō

Daphnē ^{a nymph} est nympha. Nympha est dea.
 Nōn magna dea est nympha. Magna dea est Diāna. Diāna nympham amat, et nympha Diānam amat.

Daphnē est nympha pulchra. Daphnē pulchra silvam amat. Cum Diānā per silvam she wanders always errat. Nympha in silvā semper est.

 Her father pater Pater in silvā semper est. Pater est in name nōmine deus. Pater est nōmine Pēnēus.³ Pater est flūmen magnum. Flūmen est nōmine Pēnēus.
 Flūmen nōmine Pēnēus in silvā est. Pater Pēnēus nympham amat.

Nunc Daphnē per silvam currit. Sōla est: Diāna cum nymphā nōn est. Deus Apollō per silvam errat; sōlus est. Magnus deus nympham pulchram videt et amat. Nympha deum but videt sed nōn amat: per silvam currit. Apollō per silvam currit. Nunc Daphnē dēfessa est; deus nōn dēfessus est. Nympha flūmen iam videt. Flūmen est pater nōmine Pēnēus.
 Nympha prope flūmen nunc est. Apollō prope nympham currit. Pater Pēnēus nympham videt unhappy miser et miser est quod deus prope nympham currit. Pater miser est quod nympham misera est. servā mē Daphnē misera vocat, "Pater, servā⁴ mē, servā mē! Deus prope mē currit!" Pater

³"Pater est nōmine Pēnēus": "her father is named Peneus," or "her father's name is Peneus."

⁴A command given to one person.

laurus

nympham miseram servat: in arborem nympham mūtāt. Arbor prope flūmen est. Arbor est the laurel nōmine laurus.

Apollō est miser, quod Daphnē pulchra nympha nōn iam est sed arbor. Daphnē cum Diānā per silvam nōn iam currit. Arbor pulchra in silvā est. Arborem laurum Apollō semper amat.

Nymphs
Nymphae in Silvā

Nymphae in silvā ^{are} sunt. Nymphae sunt goddesses pulchrae. Nymphae sunt deae. Nymphae sunt deae pulchrae. Nōn magnae deae sunt nymphae. Sed Diāna est magna dea. Diāna nōn est nympa.

Nymphae deam Diānam ^{love} amant. Cum Diānā they wander per silvam errant. Diāna et nymphae silvam amant.

quoque

Nunc nymphae cum Diānā nōn sunt. Prope flūmen sedent, quod dēfessae sunt. Nōn laetae sunt sed miserae, quod Diāna in sil-vā nōn est. Nunc Diānam vident et vocant. also Diānā quoque vocat. Nunc Diāna quoque prope flūmen sedet. Nymphae nōn iam miserae sed laetae sunt, quod Diāna in silvā est.

 Diāna quoque laeta est. arcum bow it is Diāna arcum portat. Magnus arcus est. pharetram A quiver Diāna magnum arcum portat. Pharetram quoque portat. Pharetra est pulchra. Nymphae magnum arcum et pharetram pulchram amant. sagittae Arrows Sagittae in pharetrā sunt. Apollō quoque arrows arcum et pharetram et sagittās portat.
Cupid
 Cupidō, deus quoque, pharetram et sagittās et arcum portat.

Diāna et nymphae nōn iam dēfessae sunt et prope flūmen nōn sedent sed per silvam nymphs
 errant. Cervum vident. Cervus nymphās videt et per silvam currit. Nymphae quoque currunt. they are Nunc prope cervum sunt. Diāna sagittam in mittit shoots cervum mittit et cervum necat. Laetae sunt nymphae quod Diāna cervum necat. Nunc dēfessae sunt et in silvā prope arborem sedent.

Arethūsa Nympha

There is Est nympha pulchra nōmine Arethūsa. the other cēterae In Achāiā⁵ Arethūsa et cēterae nymphae et ⁵ A part of Greece.

Diāna per silvam errant, Arethūsa Diānam amat, et Diāna Arethūsam amat. Arethūsa Diana's pharetram Diānae portat, quod dea nympham amat. Nympha arcum Diānae quoque portat.
Laeta est quod arcum Diānae et pharetram portat. Nunc nympha laeta sagittam Diānae in cervum mittit.

Nunc Arethūsa dēfessa est et prope flū-men sedet. Cēterae nymphae nōn dēfessae sunt: Nōn sedent sed per silvam errant.
Sōla Arethūsa prope flūmen sedet. Flūmen est nōmine Alphēus. Alphēus est flūmen et deus quoque. Pēnēus quoque, pater nymphae Daphnēs, est flūmen et deus. In flūmine deus est. Alphēus deus nympham pulchram videt et amat. Arethūsa deum videt sed nōn swiftly amat et per silvam celeriter currit. Deus quoque celeriter currit.

celeriter

audiunt

Cēterae nymphae Arethūsam nōn vident.
Arethūsa misera est. Ceterās nymphas vocat, hear sed cēterae nymphae Arethūsam nōn audiunt.
Nunc deus prope nympham miseram celeriter currit. Nympha dēfessa est. Nunc Diānam vocat, "Dea, servā mē, servā mē!" Diāna nympham audit. Nympha dēfessa nōn iam celeriter currit. Alphēus nōn dēfessus est et celeriter currit. Arethūsa vocat, "Dea, servā mē!"

Diāna audit et Arethūsam servat. In a spring fontem nympham miseram mūtāt. Alphēus in himself The spring flūmen sē mūtāt. Fōns celeriter currit, et flūmen celeriter currit. Fōns et to the sea Under flumen ad mare currunt. Sub mare fōns ad mare sub currit. Flūmen quoque sub mare currit, Fōns et flūmen sub mare in Ortygiam⁶ celeriter currunt. In Ortygiā flūmen cum fonte nunc est.

Fōns in Ortygiā Arethūsa nunc est; nymphe in Achāiā nōn iam est. Diāna Ortygiam amat, quod in Ortygiā fōns est.

Apollo et Diāna et Nymphae

Deus Apollo per silvam errat. Dea Diāna quoque per silvam errat. Deus magnum arcum et pharetram pulchram portat. Dea quoque arcum et pharetrem portat.
 Wild animals
 Ferae in silvā sunt. Ferae silferae

⁶Ortygia, a small island off the east coast of Sicily.

vam amant. Ferae per silvam celeriter cur-runt. Apollō et Diāna in silvā ferās hunt, chase agitant. Deus et dea sagittās in ferās agitant mittunt et ferās necant, of the forest Cum Diānā nymphae silvae per silvam errant et ferās agitant. Nymphae ar-cum et pharetram portant. Diāna et nymphae many multās ferās vident. Multae ferae per silvam celeriter currunt. Diāna et nymphae multās ferās agitant. Diāna sagittās in ferās mit-tit et multās ferās necat. Nymphae laetae sunt quod Diāna multās ferās necat.

Diāna et nymphae per silvam nōn semper currunt. Dēfessae prope flūmen sedent. Sub arbore quoque sedent. Prope fontem quoque sedent. Multae arborēs in silvā sunt. Multī fontēs quoque in silvā sunt.

Apollō multās nymphās amat. Sed nymphae gods deōs nōn amant. Deam Diānam sōlam amant.
 Diāna quoque deōs nōn amat. Apollō est brother frāter Diānae. Diāna frātrem amat sed cēterfrāter ōs deōs nōn amat.

Iuvenēs aprum nōn iam vident. Dēfessī sunt et prope fontem sub arbore sedent. Nōn laetī sed miserī sunt quod aprum nōn necant. relinquit Marcus cēterōs iuvenēs ^{leaves} relinquit. Fontem relinquit. Dēfessus nōn est. Sōlus per silvam errat.

Nunc Marcus aprum videt, et aper iuvenem videt. Marcus tēlum in aprum ferōcem iacit et aprum vulnerat sed nōn necat. Nunc aper toward ad Marcum celeriter currit. Ferōx est wounded vulnerātus quod vulnerātus est. Marcus aprum ferōcem nōn timet, sed tēlum in aprum iacit. Nunc aprum necat. Marcus laetus est quod aprum ferōcem necat.

mortuum Iuvenis aprum ^{dead to} mortuum ad cēterōs iuvenēs portat. Iuvenēs magnum aprum mortuum vident et Marcum iuvenem fortem vocant.

Marcus fortis et cēterī iuvenēs silvam relinquunt. Magnum aprum mortuum portant.

Venus et Adōnis.

amōris Venus est dea pulchra. Est dea amōris. like similis Venus similis Diānae nōn est. Diāna silvam amat et cum nymphīs per silvam errat. Phar-etram et arcum portat. Ferās ferōcēs agi-tat et necat. Sed Venus silvam nōn amat, pharetram et arcum nōn portat. Ferās nōn agitāt. Venus sub arbore prope fontem sedet beauty pulchritūdenem et pulchritūdinem servat. Per silvam nōn currit.

māter mother
 Dea Venus est māter deī Cupīdinis.⁷

Cupīdō est puer, deus amōris. Māter Cupīdīn-is est dea amōris. Cupīdō similis Apollinī et Diānae est: pharetram et arcum portat.
 Apollō et Diāna sagittās in ferās mittunt.
 Sed Cupīdō nōn in ferās sagittās mittit, sed mortālēs mortals (i.e., men) in deōs et deās et mortālēs. Deī aurēis wounded by the golden let deos et mortālēs, vulnerātī aureīs arrows fall in love sagittīs Cupīdinis, amant; deī et deae et mortālēs, vulnerātī cēterīs sagittīs Cupīdinis, nōn amant.

Cupīdō sagittam in mātrem Venerem mit-tit, et māter iuvenem mortālem amat. Iuvenis est nōmine Adōnis. Adōnis nōn est deus, sed mortālis. Iuvenis mortālis pulcher et fortis est. Adōnis silvam amat. Semper per silvam errat et ferās agitāt. Venus in silvā iuvenem videt et amat. Adōnis quoque deam pulchram amat.

⁷ Genitive (possessive) of Cupīdō. Compare amōris above.

Nunc Venus similis Diānae est: per silvam cum iuvene errat et ferās agitāt quod iuvenem mortālem amat. Venus ferās ferōcēs nōn agitāt sed Adōnis fortis est et ferās ferōcēs agitāt.

Nunc Venus dēfessa est et silvam relinquit. Fortem iuvenem relinquit. Adōnis sōlus ferās agitāt. Aper in silvā est. Aper est magnus et ferōx. Adōnis aprum videt; aper iuvenem videt et ad iuvenem celeriter currit. Iuvenis fortis aprum ferōcem nōn timet. Tēlum in aprum iacit et aprum vulnerat sed nōn necat. Nunc aper prope iuvenem est. Iuvenem vulnerat. Iuvenis ^{groans} gemit et ad ^{ground falls} terram cadit. Aper ferōx iuvenem vulnerātum relinquit et in silvam celeriter ^{the groans} Venus gemitūs audit et in silvam celeriter currit. Iuvenem vulnerātum videt et ad ^{Blood} iuvenem celeriter currit. Sanguinem in terrā videt. Iuvenem vocat sed iuvenis nōn audit quod nunc mortuus est. Dea misera est. San- ^{flower} guinem in flōrem mūtāt et flōrem semper amat.

Dea pulchra nōn iam similis Diānae est; silvam nōn amat, per silvam nōn errat, ferās nōn agitāt, quod Adōnis mortuus est. Nunc sub arbore prope fontem sedet et pulchritudinem servat.

certāmen discī

Contest of the discus Certāmen Discī

Hyacinthus est iuvenis. Deus Apollō iuvenem amat et iuvenis deum amat. Deus cum Hyacinthō semper est.

habet

Nunc deus et iuvenis in silvā prope Spartam sunt. Hyacinthus discum ^{has} habet.

Iuvenis discum iacit et deus discum iacit.

āera
volat

Certāmen discī habent. Nunc Apollō discum iacit. Discus per ^{air} āera ^{flies} celeriter volat et ad terram cedit. Nunc Hyacinthus ad discum celeriter currit. Terra discum in ^{into} āera ^{sends back} remittit.

remittit

Discus iuvenem vulnerat, et iuvenis gemit et ad terram cadit. Apollō gemitūs Hyacinthī audit et iuvenem vulnerātum videt.

Ad Hyacinthum celeriter currit.

Miser est quod iuvenis mortālis vulnerātus est. Apollō Hyacinthum vocat sed Hyacinthus nōn audit: mortuus est. Sanguinem Hyacinthī in terrā videt. Deus sanguinem in flōrem mūtāt. ^{Flower} Flōs quoque hyacinthus nōmine est.

color

Color flōris est color sanguinis. Flōrem Apollō semper amat.

Calydon Sends
Diāna Aprum in Calydōnem Mittit

	King of Calydon
rēx	Rēx Calydōnis est nōmine Oeneus, honors colit	Cēteros deōs et deās colit sed deam Diānam īrāta	nōn colit. Diāna ^{angry} īrāta est quod rēx eam nōn colit. In Calydōnem aprum magnum et ferōcem agrōs	mittit. Aper ferōx per silvam et per ^{fields} agrōs vāstat	currit. Agrōs ^{destroys} vāstat. Rēx miser est quod aper agrōs Calydōnis vāstat. convocat	Nunc Oeneus rēx iuvenēs ^{calls together} convocat et in silvam mittit. Multī iuvenēs fortēs conveniunt	come together ^{girl} conveniunt et virgō quoque nōmine Atalanta. virgō	^{She} Virgō pulchra est. Ea fortis quoque est.
ea	Ea ferās ferōcēs in silvā agitāt; ferās non timet. Pharetram et arcum portat. Sagittās in ferās mittit; multās ferās vulnerat, mul-tās necat.
	Meleager est iuvenis fortis. Pater iuvenis est rēx. Atalantam pulchram in sil-vā videt et amat.
	Nunc iuvenēs et Meleager et virgō in silvam conveniunt. Iuvenēs tēla habent. Rēx dīcit	^{says} Oeneus dīcit, "Aper magnus et ferōx per silvam et agrōs currit. Agrōs vāstat. Aprum necāte!"⁸

Nunc aper in silvā est. Iuvenēs et virgō aprum vident; nōn timent. Multī iuvenēs tēla in aprum iaciunt sed aprum nōn vulnerant. Aper ferōx multōs (iuvenēs) vulnerat, multōs necat.

tandem at last Virgō Atalanta aprum tandem videt. Ea nōn timet: sagittās habet. Sagittam in aprum mittit et aprum vulnerat. Aper est irātus et per silvam celeriter currit. Meleager laetus est quod virgō fortis aprum vulnerat, sed cēteri iuvenēs miserī sunt, quod virgō iuvenēs superat. superat surpasses

Sed ea aprum nōn necat. Meleager tēlum in aprum ferōcem iacit et aprum necat.

coniūnx Wife Ēgeria, Coniūnx Rēgis

of the Romans Rēx Rōmānōrum est nōmine Numa. Est good The Romans' king bonus. Rōmānī rēgem bonum amant.

Rēx bonus Rōmānōs amat. Coniūnx Numae est nymphā pulchra, nōmine Ēgeria. Rēx coniugem pulchram amat, et coniūnx rēgem bonum amat.

Rēx et coniūnx laetī sunt, quod amor est ⁸A command given to more than one person.

magnus. Rōmānī quoque laetī sunt, quod rēgem bonum habent.

Nunc rēx bonus mortuus est. Rōmānī miserī sunt quod rēx bonus mortuus est. Mag-grief lūctus mus est lūctus Rōmānōrum. Coniūnx rēgis misera est; magnus est lūctus Ēgeriae. She city urbem urbem nōn iam amat, quod Numa cum eā in urbe nōn iam est. Ea urbem tandem relinquit et seeks (goes to) petit silvam petit. Sōla per silvam errat or aut aut misera sub arbore sedet. Gemit, et cēterae nymphae gemitūs audiunt. Miseram overcome nympham petunt. Dīcunt, "Lūctum superā."⁹ Multī mortālēs miserī sunt quod pater aut māter, coniūnx aut frāter mortuus est. Silvam relinque⁹ et urbem pete.⁹"

Sed Ēgeria silvam nōn relinquit, urbem nōn petit, lūctum nōn superat. Misera in silvā semper sedet. Dea Diāna eam videt et gemitūs audit. Diāna misera est quod Ēgeria lūctum nōn superat. Nympham in fontem mūtāt.
Fōns prope urbem est.

⁹ A command in the singular.

for a wife Alcīdes et Achelōus Dēianīram Coniugem Petunt

In urbe Calydōne est virgō pulchra, nōmine Dēianīra. Pater est Oeneus, rēx Calydōnis. Frāter est Meleager. Multi iu-venēs eam pulchritūdine ^{because of her beauty} amant et eam coniugem petunt. Alcīdēs, iuvenis fortis, virginem pulchritūdine amat et eam coniugem petit. Achelōus quoque eam (coniugem) petit.
 Achelōus est deus. Est deus flūminis. Alcīdēs non deus est sed mortalis.

Alcīdēs Calydōnem petit. Patrem Dēianīrae petit et dicit, "Fīliam ^{Daughter your} tuam, I want.
 Dēianīram, coniugem petō."

Achelōus quoque dicit, "Mihi ^{To me} fīliam tuam ^{give} dā."¹⁰

Alcīdēs dicit, "Iuppiter, rēx deōrum, I am mihi est pater. Fortis sum. Mihi fīliam tuam dā."

Nunc Achelōus, "Deus sum; Alcīdes mortālis country
 est. Flūmen patriae tuae sum; Alcīdēs non est patriae tuae. Mihi fīliam tuam coniugem dā."

¹⁰ A singular command.

Achelōus deus et Alcīdēs mortālis.

Dēianīram coniugem petunt et pater virginis doubtful dubius dubius est.
 pugnans fight Nunc deus et mortālis pugnant. Alcīdēs nōn superat; Achelōus nōn superat. Alcīdēs ad terram tandem cadit et Alcīdēs laetus est. capiens seizes snake Alcīdēs deum capit, Sed nunc deus in anguem himself holds tenet sē mūtāt. Alcīdēs anguem capit et tenet. a bull taurum Nunc Achelōus in taurum ferōcem sē mūtāt, Alcīdēs nōn timet. Taurum ferōcem capit et horns of the bull cornua tenet. Iuuenis mortālis cornua taurī capit et taurum ad terram iacit. Alcīdēs Achelōum superat.

Alcīdēs fortis laetus est quod deum superat. Nunc pater virginis nōn dubius est. to Alcides Fīliam Alcīdae dat. Alcīdēs fīliam rēgis coniugem habet. Achelōus miser est quod iuuenem mortālem nōn superat et virginem coniugem nōn habet.

rapit Carries off Centaurus Dēianīram Rapit

Nunc Alcīdēs Dēianīram coniugem habet.
 Alcīdēs cum coniuge Calydonem, patriam his own suam Dēianīrae, relinquit et patriam suam petit.

Dēianīra misera est quod patrem et mātrem et frātrem et patriam relinquit. Sed laeta est quod coniūnx Alcīdae est.

ingrediuntur Per silvam Alcīdēs et coniūnx ^{go} ingrediuntur. Multās ferās vident, sed nōn timent. perveniant ^{come} Nunc ad flūmen perveniunt. Flūmen est ^{deep} altum. altum Alcīdēs flūmen altum nōn timet, sed Dēianīra timet. Prope flūmen altum sedent.

Nunc Centaurus, ^{ll} nōmine Nessus, ad flūmen pervenit. Iuvenem et conjugem videt. ego ^I Nessus dīcit, "Ego, Alcīdēs, conjugem tuam: trans across I shall carry you swim across tū trāns flūmen portābō; tū trānsnā."

Dēianīra in Centaurō sedet, et Cen-taurus in flūmine nat. Alcīdēs arcum suum ^{his} alteram ^{the other bank} rīpam rīpam in alteram rīpam iacit. Pharetram tenet.
^{he goes (walks)} Nunc in flūmen ingreditur et trāns flūmen nat. Nōn timet. Nunc alteram rīpam tenet. Dēianīra in rīpa nōn est; Alcīdēs eam nōn videt. Alcīdēs conjugem iam audit: Dēianīra vocat, "Alcīdēs, servā mē, servā mē!
^{is carrying off} Centaurus mē rapit!"

Nunc Alcīdēs Dēianīram videt; Centaurus eam rapit. Centaurus celeriter currit.

^{ll} A Centaur, half man, half horse.

Alcīdēs arcum et sagittam capit. In Cen-taurum sagittam mittit. Sagitta per aera celeriter volat et Centaurum vulnerat. Cen-taurus ad terram cadit et gemit. Sanguis in garment to Deianira vēlāmine Nessī est. Nessus Dēianīrae vēlāthis hoc men dat et dicit, "Tū, Dēianīra, hoc vēlāmen restores reficit cape. Hoc vēlāmen amōrem reficit." Dēianīra vēlāmen capit.

Nunc Alcīdēs et coniūnx flūmen altum et Centaurum mortuum relinquunt. In patriam Alcīdae tandem perveniunt. Dēianīra vēlāmēn Nessī habet. Alcīdēs et Dēianīra laetī sunt. rumor false falsus Nunc rumor falsus ad Dēianīram pervenit: aliam another woman fēminam "Alcīdēs aliam fēminam amat." Dēianīra misera est. Sed vēlāmen Nessī habet, quendam her a certain man virum Dēianīra ad sē quendam virum, nōmine Lichas Lichas, vocat, vēlāmen dat, et dicit, "Hoc vēlāmen ad Alcīdēn portā."

Lichas ad Alcīdēn vēlāmen portat et puts on induit dat. Alcīdēs vēlāmen capit et induit. Alcīdēs gemit. Tandem mortuus est. Magnus 12 est lūctus Dēianīrae.

12 For meaning see "Egeria, Coniunx Regis."

by the arrow is wounded Chīrōn Sagittā Alcīdae Vulnerātur lands Alcīdēs per multās terrās errat et tasks, labors does multōs labōrēs facit. Alcīdēs est of Chiron

 fortis. In terram Chīrōnis tandem pervenit et Chīrōnā¹³ petit. Chīrōn Centaurus est.
 Nōn similis Centaurō Nessō est. Chīrōn teaches docet bonus est. Puerōs docet. Nunc Centaurus Achillēa docet. Achillēs cum Centaurō bonō taught
 est. Centaurus Alcīdēn quoque docuit.

Chīrōn laetus est quod Alcīdēs in terram pervenit. Chīrōn Alcīdēn fortem amat, et Alcīdēs Centaurum colit.¹⁴ Alcīdēs sagittās et arcum habet. In sagittīs est venēnum, poison venēnum tās et arcum habet. In sagittīs est venēnum, of a monster mōnstrī sanguis mōnstrī ferōcis. Alcīdēs mōn-killed strum ferōx necavit. Chīrōn sagittās tenet.
 Sagitta cadit et Centaurum vulnerat. Chīrōn gemit. Alcīdēs gemitūs audit et ad Centaurum No aid nūllum auxilium celeriter currit. Nūllum auxilium Centaurō est. Venēnum, sanguis mōnstrī ferōcis, Cen-taurum superat.

Puer Achillēs miser est quod Centaurus sagittā vulnerātus est. Puer Centaurō dicit, ¹³Chīrōnā: a Greek accusative form.

¹⁴Colit: For meaning see "Diana Aprum in Calydonem Mittit."

nōlī

"Mē relinquere nōlī,¹⁵ pater!"

Centaurus puerum audit et dicit, "Nūllum auxilium mihi est. Lūctum tuum superā."

Magnus est lūctus Alcidāe quod Chīrōn sagittā vulnerātus est. Nunc Centaurus mortuus est, et Alcīdēs et puer Achillēs et multī aliī quoque miserī sunt. Miser Alcīdēs terram Chīrōnis relinquit et alium labōrem facit.

Atalanta

Atalanta est virgō pulchra. Multī iuvenēs Atalantam amant, sed ea nūllum iuvenem amat. Ea in silvā errat et ferās agitāt. ^{In beauty} Pulchritūdine Atalanta aliās virginsurpasses in running cursū es superat; cursū iuvenēs superat.

Multī iuvenēs ad virginem veniunt et eam coniugem petunt. ^{The man:} Virgō dicit, "Quī who will surpass cursū mē superābit mē coniugem habēbit.

neque Quī certāmen mēcum (= cum mē) habēbit neque¹⁶ shall perish perībit me cursū superābit, perībit."

¹⁵Relinquere nōlī: do not leave.

¹⁶Neque: et. . . non. Neque mē cursū superābit: et mē cursū nōn superābit.

tamen however Multi tamen eam coniugem petunt.
 Cursum cum Atalantā habent. Nullus iuvenis tamen eam superat. Multi per amōrem Ata-perish.
 lantae pulchrae pereunt.
 Iuvenis nōmine Hippomenēs certāmen videt ..ne et dīcit (Atalantam nōn videt), "Iuvenēsne¹⁷ dangers perīcula coniugem per magna pericula petunt?" Nunc Hippomenēs virginem pulchram videt ignōscite et dīcit, "Mihi ignōscite, iuvenēs. Virginem I had seen ego nōn videram."
 Virgō iuvenēs superat. Iuvenēs miserī gemunt et pereunt.
 Iam Hippomenēs Atalantam amat et eam coniugem petit. Certāmen cum Atalantā petit.
 Virgō iuvenem fortem et pulchrum videt et misera est quod Hippomenēs perībit.
Before
 ante Ante certāmen Hippomenēs deam amōris prays orat orat, "Venus, mihi auxilium dā." Dea iuvenem three apples tria audit et auxilium dat. Dea tria pōma pōma golden aurea iuvenī dat (ceterī nōn vident); Nunc virgō et iuvenis certāmen habent; start forward prōvolant prōvolant et celeriter currunt. Hippomenēs ante Atalantam currit; nunc virgō ante ¹⁷Ne cannot be translated; it is just the sign of a question.

mēta longē abest dēclīnat iuvenem currit. Hippomenēs dēfessus est, goal far is away et mēta longē abest. Iuvenis aureum pōmum slackens iacit. Virgō cursum dēclīnat et pōmum capit.

iterum

Nunc Hippomenēs ante virginem currit. Virgō again celeriter currit et iterum ante iuvenem currit. Hippomenēs pōmum aureum iacit; virgō iterum cursum dēclīnat et pōmum capit; Hip-pomenēs ante eam currit.

Nōn longē abest mēta , et virgō ante iuvenem iterum currit. Nunc Hippomenēs aureum pōmum longē in agrum iacit. Virgō dubia¹⁸ est. Tandem in agrum currit et pōmum capit. Nunc iuvenis prope mētā est. Atalanta celeriter currit sed iuvenis atamen ante eam est. Hippomenēs ad mētā pervenit; prize praemium Hippomenēs superat. Virgō Atlanta praemium est. Atalanta nōn misera sed laeta est quod Hippomenēs eam cursū superat.

Pater Misér

Chionē est virgō pulchra. Aliās vir-ginēs pulchritūdine. superat. Pater virginis ¹⁸Compare use of this word in "Alcīdēs et Achelōus Deīanīram Coniugem Petunt." est nōmine Daedaliōn, Daedaliōn est ferōx: war bellum amat. Multī iuvenēs mortālēs virginem Two duo pulchram coniugem petunt. Duo deī quoque eam amant, Apollō et Mercurius.

Amor duōrum deōrum tamen virginī auxiliium nōn dat. Virgō deam Diānam nōn colit.
 Ea pulchritūdinem suam ante pulchritūdinem sets pōnit Diānae pōnit. Diāna est Irāta quod mortālis herself
 virgō ante deam sē pōnit. Dea Irāta arcum et pharetram capit et in virginem sagittam mittit. Sagitta per āera celeriter volat. Virgō vocat, "Dea, mē necāre nōlī!"¹⁹ Sed sagitta virginem necat.

Pater virginis, Daedaliōn, miser est quod Chionē mortua est. Fīliam pulchram nōn iam habet. Magnus est lūctus Daedaliōnis. Lūc-bull tum suum nōn superat. Per terram, taurō Irātō similis, currit. Sōlus per silvam, a (certain)
 per agrōs celeriter currit. Ad quendam mountain high montem pervenit. Mōns altus et magnus est.
 Death
 Daedaliōn montem altum ascendit. Mortem From ab petit. Ab monte altō se iacit. Deus bird avem Apollō patrem miserum in avem mūtāt. Avis

¹⁹ Mē necāre nōlī: do not kill me.

accipiter ^{hawk} est nōmine accipiter. Avis, Daedaliōnī similis, est ferōx. Bellum amat. Cēterās avēs agit et necat.

amicō ^{Friend}
Nīsus in Cursū Amīco Auxilium Dat

^{Greeks} Graeci urbem Trōiam capiunt. Aenēās, ^{man Trojan} vir Trōiānus, urbem relinquit. Cum Aenēā, ^{son} pater, coniūnx et fīlius et ^{children} multī virī et fēminae et puerī urbem relinquunt. Aenēās est fīlius deae Veneris. Est bonus vir.

^{Another} Trōiānī per multa maria et multās terrās errant. Aliam urbem petunt. Dea Iūnō, coniūnx rēgis deōrum, Trōiānōs nōn ^{drives} amat et per multa maria agit. Venus tamen fīlium suum et Trōiānōs amat et servat.

Nunc Trōiānī in Siciliam perveniunt.
 In Siciliā Aenēās bonus magnum lūctum habet: pater, nōmine Anchīsēs, perit. Aenēās et cēteri Trōiānī miserī sunt quod Anchīsēs mortuus est.

^{Soon} Tandem Trōiānī miserī Siciliam relin-quunt. Dea Iūnō Trōiānōs ad Africam agit.
^{Soon} Mox Trōiānī Africam relinquunt: Ītaliā petunt. Nunc in Siciliam iterum perveniunt.

In Sicilia Aenēās patrem mortuum colit.

Trōiānī multa certāmina habent. Pulchra sunt praemia. Aenēās praemia pōnit et virōs ad certāmina convocat. ^{First} Primum certā-men est cursus. Multi virī, Trōiānī et Siculi, ad cursum conveniunt. Nīsus et Euryalus, Trōiānī, primī conveniunt. Nīsus et Euryalus amici sunt. Diōrēs quoque et Salius conveniunt et Helymus et Panopēs, duo juvenēs Siculi. Multi alii quoque conveniunt.

Tandem bonus Aenēās ^{signal} signum dat. Juvenēs signum audiunt et prōvolant²⁰. Nīsus ante cēt-erōs juvenēs celeriter currit. ^{Behind, after} Post Nīsum currit Salius. Euryalus, amicus Nīsi, post Saliū currit. Post Euryalum Helymus currit, et post Helymum Diōrēs (currit).

Mox Nīsus prope mētā est. Sanguis in terrā est. Est sanguis tauri. Nīsus sanguinem nōn videt. In sanguinem currit et ad terram cadit. Nīsus miser est: nunc nōn superābit. Sed auxilium Euryalō amico suō dat. Salius post Nīsum currit. Salius ad sanguinem pervenit. Nīsus Saliō se ^{puts in} op-ponit, ^{the way of} et Salius quoque ad terram cadit.

²⁰ Prōvolant: for meaning see "Atalanta".

Nunc Euryalus primus currit. Ante ceteros volat. Nunc primus ad metam pervenit.
 Euryalus, auxilio amici Nisi, superat. Mox Helymus ad metam pervenit et nunc Dioreas, horse equum Aeneas Euryalo equum pulchrum praemium dat. Helymo pharetram pulchram et sagittas helmet galeam praemium dat et Diorei galeam dat. Aeneas bonus praemia Niso et Saliō quoque dat.

Perseus Medusam Necat horribilis Medusa est femina horribilis. Angues²¹ capite head Hair crines in capite sunt. Crines in capite non sunt, sed angues horribiles. Dea Minerva crines changed Medusae in angues mutavit. Medusa viros et stone Whoever saxum feminas et feras in saxum mutat. Quicumque looks at immediately spectat eam spectat saxum statim est. Ea statim multos viros et feminas et feras in saxa mutavit.

Perseus est iuvenis fortis. Pater est deus Iuppiter. Perseus, avi similis, per terras celeriter volat. Iuvenis fortis in As
 ut terram Medusae pervenit. Ut prope Medusam ²¹ For meaning see "Alcides et Achelous Delianam Coniugem Petunt."

venit, per silvās multa saxa videt. Sed shield Perseus Medūsam nōn timet; scūtum habet. scūtum Perseus fēminam horribilem nōn spectat: in reflection imāginem scūtō imāginem Medūsae spectat. For this quam ob rem reason rem Medūsa Perseum in saxum nōn mūtāt.

Semper Perseus imāginem fēminae in scutō spectat. Tandem Medūsa et anguēs go to sleep dormiunt dormiunt. Perseus caput Medūsae celeriter cuts off praecīdit. Caput capit et sēcum (= cum sē) Over
 super ad aliās terrās portat. Super multās terrās volat.

Ut Perseus super Africam volat, sanguis Medūsae ad terram cadit. Terra, ut sanguinem accipit accipit, in anguēs sanguinem mūtāt. Quam ob rem multī anguēs in Africā sunt.

Atlas
Perseus Atlantem in Montem Mūtāt

Super multās aliās terrās Perseus, avī similis, volat. Caput Medūsae secum portat, of Atlas Tandem in terram Atlantis pervenit et dēfessus flies down dēvolat ad terram dēvolat.

Atlās rēx terrae est. Atlās est magnus in size magnitudine vir: cēterōs virōs magnitudine superat. In terra Atlantis est arbor aurea; aurea pōma

Perseus Andromedam Servat

Mox Perseus per caelum ad terram of the Ethiopians Aethiopum volat. Al̄s habet. Al̄is per aera celeriter volat. Ut super terram looks down at dēspectat Aethiopum volat, terram dēspectat. bound ligātam Virginem ligātam ad saxum videt. Saxum prope mare est. Perseus ad terram statim dēvolat. is weeping lacrimat Virgō lacrimat. quid Iuvenis virginī pulchrae dīcit, "Quid Why
cūr est nōmen tuum et nōmen terrae? Cūr tū ad are you are you weeping hoc saxum ligāta es ? Cūr lacrimās?" answers respondet Virgō lacrimat. Nunc respondet, "Andromeda, filia regis Cēpheī, ego sum.
Terra est Aethiopum. Ego ad hoc saxum ligātā as a sacrifice sacrificiō mōnstrō maris sum. Lacrimō quod hoc mōnstrum timeō." Nunc Perseus et Andromeda mōnstrum maris vident. Pater virginis et māter quo-que mōnstrum vident. Magnum et horribile est hoc mōnstrum. Mōnstrum in marī est. cries out clāmat Virgō misera clāmat et gemit. Pater et māter quoque clāmant et gemunt. Filiam tenent, sed auxilium nōn dant.

lacrimis
opus est

Perseus patri et matri virginis nunc tears there is dicit, "Non lacrimis, sed auxilio opus est. need of.

si

Monstrum non longe abest. Androm-I will save edam servabo si ea mihi coniunx erit.

Perseus ego sum, filius Iovis, regis deorum.

I have killed
Medusam horribilem necavi: caput

I cut off feminae praecidi, caput mecum porto. At-lantem in montem mutavi. Super multas

I have flown terrās alīs volavi. Andromedam coniugem peto. Eam amo et servabo."

tibi regnum

Pater virginis statim respondet, "Filiam to you Kingdom tibi dabo si tu eam servabis. Regnum quoque tibi dabo. Monstrum spectā: non longe ab saxo abest."

gladium

Perseus laetus est. Monstrum spectat: iam prope terram est. Virgo iterum clamat et pater et mater quoque. Perseus fortis in aera alīs volat. Super monstrum volat.
Sword Gladium capit. Super monstrum volat et with his sword away from gladio monstrum vulnerat et ab monstrō volat. Monstrum cum Perseō pugnat sed iuvenem non vulnerat quod iuvenis ab monstrō volat. Iterum et iterum Perseus monstrum gladiō vulnerat. Tandem monstrum necat.

Perseus laetus ad terram devolat. Pater laudant

et māter laetī sunt et iuvenem fortem ^{praise} laudant, Virgō nōn iam lacrimat, nōn iam clāmat, Saxum relinquit. Rēx fīliam suam coniugem Perseō dat. Rēgnum quoque dat sed Perseus rēgnum non accipit.

convivium coniugāle rēgiā

Perseus virginem coniugem statim accipit.
 Feast marriage palace Convivium coniugāle in rēgia est. Multī in rēgiam ad convivium coniugāle conveniunt.

Caput Medūsae Perseō Auxilium Dat

In rēgiā convivium coniugāle est.

Phīneus, frāter rēgis, venit in rēgiam; tēlum portat. Multī virī cum Phīneō veniunt; tēla portant.

spōnsam

Phīneus Irātus Perseō dīcit, "Virginem betrothed you have seized mihi spōnsam rapuistī. Tū perībis.
 Neither nor

neque...neque

Neque ālae tuae neque pater tuus Iuppiter tollit tibi auxilium dabit." Dīcit et tēlum tollit. raises

Cēpheus rēx clāmat, "Quid, frāter, facis? you doing? are

Perseus fīliam meam servāvit. Tū did not

Andromedae ad saxum ligātae auxilium nōn give ā dedistī. Sī Perseus eam ā(= ab) monstrō nōn had saved would be servavisset, ea nunc mortua esset. Praemium²⁵ are you seizing?

ab iuvene rapis? Sī praemium tibi ²⁵ Ne is merely the sign of a question.

magnum est, cūr ā saxō nōn servāvistī?"

Phīneus nōn respondet. Tēlum tamen in Persea mittit sed iuvenem nōn vulnerat, Perseus tēlum remittit; Phīneus nōn vulnerātus est. Nunc multa tēla per rēgiam volant, et multī virī cadunt. Multi virī cum Phīneō surround circumveniunt Persea circumveniunt. Perseus auxilium ā capite Medūsae petit.

vultūs āvertite

Perseus clāmat, "Amīcī, faces turn away²⁶ vultūs āvertite."

Dīcit et caput Medūsae tollit. Multi caput are changed spectant et in saxum mūtantur. Amīcī Perseī vultūs āvertunt: caput nōn spectant, in saxum nōn mūtantur.

Phīneus quoque Persea et caput horrible nōn spectat: vultūs āvertit. Clāmat, "Tū mē take away superāvistī. Caput Medūsae tolle. Tibi I give virginem et rēgnū dō. Servā mē."

Perseus respondet, "Neque gladius neque tēlum tē vulnerābit. Tū semper in rēgiā you will be my Cēpheī eris et coniūnx mea imāginem mea tuam vidēbit."

Dīcit et ante vultūs Phīneī caput Medūsae tollit. Phīneus spectat et in saxum mūtātur.

²⁶A form giving a command to two or more persons.

Narcissus et Ēchō

hominēs	Est in silvā nympha.	Men (people) Homines	eam vōx	audiunt sed nōn vident.	Nōmen nymphae	Ēchō corpus	est.	A voice	body Vōx	est: corpus nōn habet. erat	Ōlim Ēchō aliīs nymphīs similis erat.	was Corpus habēbat et cum aliīs nymphīs per sil-	had vam errābat. Iuppiter, rēx deōrum, multās	wandered nymphās amābat, et Iūno, coniūnx Iovis, in	that	she ut	silvam veniēbat ut deum cum nymphīs pre-	might catch	detained prehenderet	henderet.	Ēchō deam morābātur ut nymphae morābātur	fugerent	might flee	perceived fugerent	sēnsit	fugerent.	Dea Iūno hoc sēnsit; quam ob sēnsit	verba	rem Ēchō prīma nōn dīcit sed verba audīta	words that she verba	reportat	has heard echoes	reportat.

Nunc Ēchō corpus habet sed prīma nōn dīcit. In silvā iuvenem pulchrum, nōmine Narcissum, videt et statim amat. Narcissus cum amīcīs per silvam errat et ferās agit. Prīma Ēchō iuvenī nōn dīcit sed verba iuvenis semper reportat.

ecquis	Nunc Narcissus ab amīcīs errat. Clāmat, hic	Anyone here
	"Ecquis hic est?"

	Nympha respondet, "Est." come Puer clāmat, "Venī." ²⁷

²⁷A singular command.

Nympha respondet, "Venī."

Iuvenis clāmat, "Cūr mē fugis?" Et nympha verba reportat.

conveniāmus

Narcissus clāmat, "Conveniāmus." ^{Let us meet} ē

Nympha laeta respondet "Conveniāmus," et ē ^{out of} silvā ad puerum venit. Iuvenis nympham fugit.

Nympha misera in silvā errat et hominēs ^{remains} manet fugit. Amor iuvenis manet. Propter²⁸ amōrem corpus perit: vōx sōla manet.

Nunc in silvā errat; hominēs eam nōn vident sed audiunt. Prīma Echō nōn dicit; verba audīta semper reportat. Vōx sōla est.

Narcissus Suam Imāginem Amat

was

Narcissus erat iuvenis pulcher. Māter erat nympha, et pater erat deus flūminis.

eum

Multi iuvenēs eum amābant, multae virginēs eum amābant. Narcissus tamen nūllōs iuvenēs, nūllās virginēs amābat. Per silvam errābat. et ferās agitābat. Virginēs fugiēbat.

Fōns erat in silvā. Ōlim prope fontem ²⁸For meaning see "Perseus Atlantem in Montem Mūtāt."

Narcissus sedēbat. Dēfessus cursū ^{from running} bibēbat ^{As, when} erat. Ut ^{was drinking} ē fonte bibēbat, in fonte imāginem suam vidēbat et statim amabat.
 Imāginem pulchram spectābat. Suōs crīnēs pulchrōs, suōs vultūs pulchrōs spectābat et oscula ^{kisses} sēcum laudābat.²⁹ Imāginī suae oscula dabat.

Semper iuvenis imāginem spectat: nōn ^{food} cibum dormit, cibum nōn capit, nōn bibit. Iuvenis miser clāmat: "Cur mē semper fugis? Pulcher ^{to love} sum; nymp̄hae multae mē amant. Tū mē amāre ^{seem} vidēris: ut oscula tibi dō, tū mihi oscula ^{to give} dare vidēris. Ut ego lacrimō, tū quoque lacrimāre vidēris. Ut ego tibi dīcō, tū dīcere vidēris; verba tua tamen nōn audiō.
 Ō iam ego sēnsī!³⁰ Ego sum imāgō. Mē amō.
 Propter amōrem perībō; mortem nōn fugiō.
^{peace} quiētem Mors quiētem dabit." ^{Thus} sic Sic iuvenis dīcit. Semper imāginem suam spectat. Lacrimat. Lacrimae in fontem cadunt et imāgō fugit. Narcissus miser clāmat, "Cūr mē fugis?"

²⁹For this word see the story "Perseus Andromedam Servat."

³⁰For this word see the story "Narcissus et Echō."

diū

Iuuenis miser prope fontem diū for a long time manet et imāginem spectat et sēcum laudat.

 Nōn dormit, cibum nōn capit, nōn bibit. Per amōrem nunc perit et corpus prope fontem est.
 Nymphae silvae propter mortem frātris miserae sunt. Echō quoque misera est. Iam corpus iuuenis prope fontem nōn est: in flōrem mūtātūr. Semper flōs imāginem suam in fonte spectat.

dē mūnere malō

About Midas Gift Bad Dē Midā et Mūnere Malō of the Phrygians

 Midas, rēx Phrygum, quendam³¹ senex cārus vīnum virum nōmine Sīlēnum in rēgiam suam accipit. old man dear to Bacchus Sīlēnus est senex. Senex cārus Bacchō wine has drunk

 est. Senex multum vīnum bibit et ab has wandered.
 Bacchō errāvit Ut errābat, in rēgiam arrived Midae pervēnit. Bacchus miser est quod senex abest. Midas Sīlēnō cibum dat, et senem ad takes back Bacchum redūcit. Bacchus nunc laetus est.
 Gift
 Deus Midae dīcit, "Mūnus tibi dabō.
 Quid petis?"

redūcit

Midas respondet, "Hoc mūnus mihi dā, ³¹For meaning see "Centaurus Deianīram Rapit." quodcumque tanget whatever will touch ut quodcumque corpus meum tanget in gold aurum mūtētur."

aurum

Bacchus miser est quod rēx malum mūnus petit; hoc mūnus tamen dat.

viam

Midas laetus rēgiam suam petit. Per way many things viam multa tangit; multa in aurum mūtāt. Arborem tangit; statim rēx arborem auream videt. Saxum tollit; saxum quoque in aurum mūtātur. Pōmum ab arbore capit; aureum statim est pōmum.

vult

to take Ut rēx in rēgiam pervēnit, cibum capere he wants Much vult. Multus cibus ante rēgem pōnitur.

Ut Midas cibum tangit, cibus in aurum mūtātur to men Vīnum, hominibus mūnus Bacchī, bibere vult; ut vīnum tangit, vīnum statim in aurum mūtā-tur.

Nunc Midas propter malum mūnus miser prays
est. Aurum nōn iam amat. Rēx Bacchum ōrat, "Ō Bacche, mihi auxilium dā. Malum est hoc take away
mūnus. Hoc mūnus tolle."

Quod Midas deō cārus est, Bacchus verba rēgis miserī audit, et mūnus tollere vult.

ortum

That Sic Bacchus Midas dicit, "Ut hoc mūnus may be taken away source tollātur flūmen Pactōlum et ortum bathe

lavā flūminis pete. In fonte corpus tuum lavā ut hoc mūnus tollātur."

arēnae Midas laetus verba Bacchī audit et ortum flūminis Pactōlī petit. Corpus in fontē lavat. Mūnus malum statim tollitur. sands Quam ob rem arēnae flūminis Pactōlī aureae sunt.

Pān et Sŷrinx .

habitat Nympha pulchra nōmine Sŷrinx silvās dwells in Arcadiae habitat. Multī virī nympham amant et eam coniugem petunt, sed ea virōs fugit.
 Diānem deam et silvās amat. Sŷrinx, Diānae similis, arcum et sagittās portat et phare-made of horn corneus tram habet. Si arcus nymphae corneus were nōn esset et arcus Diānae aureus nōn esset, all, everyone would think omnēs crēderent omnēs crēderent Sŷringem Diānam was to be esse. Multī tamen crēdunt eam Diānam esse.
 Sŷrinx per montēs et silvās errat et ferās agitat.

Ut nympha per silvam errat, Pān, deus silvae, eam videt et statim amat. Ut deus nympham pulchram spectat, amor eum superat.
 Pān amōrem suum nymphae dīcit, sed Sŷrinx eum fugit. Per silvam nympha celeriter currit, et Pān quoque currit. Nympha cursū ad flūmen Lādōnem pervenit: flūmen cursum impedit hinders impedit. Nympha nymphās flūminis vocat et dicit, "Servāte mē. In aliam fōrmam mē mūtate."

prehēnsam has been caught prō Ut Pān crēdit nympham prehēnsam esse, calamōs reeds holds tenet prō corpore nymphe calamōs tenet. Ut deus gemit, calamī quoque gemunt. Deus gemitum amat et dicit, "Sī nympham habēre nōn possum, calamī mēcum semper manēbunt." possum I cannot ordine a row iungit Sic deus dicit. Calamōs in ordine pōnit et iungit. fastens together Pān in silvīs calamīs gemitum facit et in memoriā nympham pulchram tenet.

Rānās Frogs
Lātōna Mortālēs in Rānās Mūtāt

Lātōna, mater Apollinis et Diānae, Iūnōnem fugit. Iūnō est coniūnx Iovis.
 Iūnō Lātōnam nōn amat; quod Lātōna Iovī cāra est. Iuppiter pater Apollinis et Diānae est. parvōs small children liberōs Per multās terrās Lātōna parvōs liberōs portat et coniugem Irātā Iovis fugit.
 Tandem fēmina cum liberīs in terram.

Lyciam pervenit; dēfessa bibere et cibum lacum agricolae labōrant capere vult. Parvum lacum videt; prope agricolae labōrant lacum agricolae labōrant. Nāter ad lacum pervenit, parvōs liberōs in terrā pōnit, et in terrā sē pōnit ut ē lacū bibat. Agricolae permittunt eam bibere nōn permittunt.

aquam Lātōna sic dicit; "Cūr aquam mihi nōn pūblica you (plural) give datis? Aqua pūblica est. Petō that you give ut hoc mūnus (that is, aquam) mihi dētis.

nōlō I do not want In lacū corpus meum lavāre nōlō, sed bibere. Parvī liberī mei quoque aquam petunt."

Sed verba Lātōnae agricolās malōs nōn move movent; aquam nōn dant et verba irāta dīcunt.
 Even stir up muddy Etiam aquam turbant et aque līmōsa est.

Lātōna ab agricolīs aquam nōn iam petit; Irāta est.

Tandem fēmina ōrat, "In hōc lacū semper may you live vīvātis!" Verba Lātōnae Iovem movent.

sonum raucum lacū nant; in rīpā sedent. Sonum raucum hoarse dant. Rānae sunt.

Aenēās Turnum Superat

Græcī urbem Trōiam ^{captured} cepērunt, et fled from Aenēās urbem fūgit. Cum Aenēā coniūnx et parvus fīlius et pater senex et multī left virī Trōiānī et fēminae urbem reliquērunt.

Coniūnx Aenēae nōmine Crēūsa, ut urbem re-by was killed linqūbat, ā Graecīs necāta est.

Trōiānī per omnia maria et per omnēs terrās errāvērunt. Dea Iūno Trōiānōs miserōs drove per omnia maria et per omnēs terrās ēgit.

Venus tamen, māter Aenēae, fīlium suum et loved Trōiānōs amāvit et servāvit. novam ^{new} Aenēās novam urbem petit. In Italiā novam urbem petit. In Italiā est rex nōmine Latīnus. Latīnus fīliam suam nōmine of the Lavīniam coniugem Aenēae dat. Rēx Rutulōrum Rutuli

gerit ^{tamen, nōmine Turnus, cum Trōiānīs} ^{wages} bellum gerit. Turnus Irātus est quod Latīnus fīliam suam Aenēae dat. Fīlia betrothed Latīnī Turnō spōnsa erat.

Quam ob rem Rutulī cum Trōiānīs bellum gerunt. Diu³² bellum gerunt.

³²For this word see the story "Narcissus Suam Imāginem Amat."

Neque³³ Rutulī neque³³ Trōiānī superant. Multī Trōiānī et Rutulī vulnerantur, multī necantur.

nāvēs	Et iam Turnus nāvēs ^{ships} Trōiānōrum incendit	sets on fire incendit. Dea Cybelē āb caelō nāvēs cupit	videt. Nāvēs servāre ^{wishes} cupit. Dea nāvēs sub aquam mittit. Statim nāvēs in nymphās mūtantur. Nymphae perīcula ³⁴ maris in memoriā tenent et auxilium nāvibus ^{to the ships} dant.
	Nāvibus Graecōrum, tamen, auxilium nōn dant: urbem Trōiam in memoriā tenent. Sub aquis nymphae vivunt.

Turnus tamen bellum nōn relinquit.

Diū Rutulī et Trōiānī bellum gerunt. Neque Turnus neque Aenēās superat. Tandem Aenēās Turnum superat, et Turnus cadit. Urbs quoque, nōmine Ardea, cadit. Trōiānī urbem vēstant et incendunt. Ex urbe vastātā³⁵ nōva avis subvolat	subvolat. Nomen urbis in ave manet. Avis ardea	a heron est nōmine ardea.

³³For this word see the story "Caput Medūsae Perseō Auxilium Dat."

³⁴For this word see the story "Atalanta."

³⁵Ex urbe vastātā: out of the ruined city, or out of the ruins of the city.

Māter Filium Suum in Mortem Mittit

Geneus, rēx Calydōnis, cēterōs deōs et honored deās coluit, sed deam Diānam nōn coluit.

Quam ob rem Diāna Irāta aprum in Calydōnem sent misit. Aper ferōx per silvās currēbat et agrōs vāstābat. Rēx iuvenēs convocāvit et said dixit, "Aper ferōx per silvās currit et agrōs vāstat. Aprum necāte!" Iuvenēs fortēs a (certain)

quaedam et quaedam virgō quoque in silvam came vēnērunt. Virgō erat nōmine Atalanta. Pulchra et fortis erat. Meleager, filius rēgis, virginem pulchram et fortem amābat. Virgō fortis aprum ferōcem sagittā vulnerāvit et Meleager eam laudāvit. Cēteri iuvenēs virginem nōn laudāvērunt: nōn laeti erant quod virgō virōs superāvit. Meleager aprum tēlō necāvit.

Nunc aper mortuus est. Corpus magnum (aprī) in terrā est. Omnēs iuvenēs et virgō quoque corpus spectant. Sic Meleager Atalantae dicit: "Tū, virgō fortis, hoc praemium (i. e., aprum) cape. Tū aprum vulneravisti, ego necavi. Praemium meum cape!"

Sic dicit et virginī aprum dat. Virgō laeta aprum accipit. Alii tamen virginem praedo not wish mium accipere nolunt. Irati sunt.

Two fratrēs, Flexippus et Toxeus, filii sister soror Thestii, (soror est Althaea, māter Meleagri) clāmant: "Praemium accipere nōlī.³⁶ Viri, nōn virginēs, praemia accipiant!"³⁷ Sic dicunt et praemium ā virgine rapiunt.

Meleager iratus est quod duo viri praemium ā virgine rapuerunt. Statim gladium capit et Flexippum necat. Ut frater Flexippi, both to avenge Toxeus, dubius est (et frātre suū ulcisci cupit et Meleagram timet), Meleager tēlum iacit et Toxea necat.

ulcisci et...et

Althaea, māter Meleagri et soror Flexippi et Toxei, audit filium suum aprum necavisse.³⁸ Laeta est. Iam audit Meleagram fratrēs suōs necavisse. Et misera et irata est. Fratrēs suōs ulcisci cupit.

was born the fates nascēbatur Ut Meleager nascēbatur, Parcae³⁹ in ignem fire stick of wood put rāmum ignem rāmum posuerunt et dixerunt, nascēbatur ignem rāmum

³⁶For nōlī see the story "Chiron Sagittā Alcīdae Vulneratur."

³⁷Virī accipiant: let men receive.

³⁸audit...necavisse: hears that her son has killed the boar.

³⁹Three old women represented as spinning the thread of each man's life.

eadem tempora

same length of life
"Puer, tibi et rāmō eadem tempora we give had left damus." Ut Parcae mātrem et puerum reliquerant, mater rāmum ab ignī rapuit et in aquam posuit. Māter rāmum diū servāvit et fīlium quoque.

Nunc māter rāmum capit et ignem incendit.
Iam misera est, iam irāta. Iam lacrimat, iam nōn lacrimat: Irāta frātrēs suōs ulcīscī (cupit) et fīlium suum in mortem mittere cupit.
Sic dubia est. Nunc dīcit: "Ego malum evīl deed faciō. Ego meum fīlium in mortem mittō. Sed fīlius meus frātrēs meōs necāvit. Ego sōla can frātrēs meōs ulcīscī possum. Parcae fīliō meō et rāmō eadem tempora dedērunt. Ego rāmum ab ignī rapuī, diū servāvī et fīlium quoque. Hoc malum facere volō; tamen nōn i want shall I do possum. Quid faciam? Nunc frātrēs meōs mortuōs videō, nunc fīlium meum cārum (videō).
Frātrēs meī mortuī, you (plural) shall win superābitis.
Et ego quoque morī to die volō."

volō

ūritur

Sic māter dīcit. Vultūs āvertit et is burned rāmum in ignem iacit. Rāmus ūritur et corpus Meleagrī quoque. Meleager gemit.
Patrem senem, frātrēs, sorōrēs, coniugem vocat et mātrem quoque, Meleagrō auxilium nōn dant, et mox Meleager mortuus est.

Omnēs⁴⁰ miserī sunt quod Meleager mortuus est. Nunc pater neque filium neque coniugem habet: coniūnx Althaea sē necāvit. Sorōrēs quoque miserae sunt. Lacriant, et lacrimae in corpus mortuum frātris cadunt. Corporī frātris ōscula⁴¹ iterum et iterum dant. Lūc-tum nōn superant. Quam ob rem dea Diāna sorōrēs miserās in avēs mūtāt.

to the enemy betrays Fīlia Rēgis Patriam Suam Hostibus Trādit hostibus trādit

Mīnōs, rēx Crētae, cum Nīsō, rēge Megarae, urbis Graeciae, bellum gerit. Prope urbem Megaram Mīnōs manet et urbem capere cupit. Nīsus, rēx Megarae, urbem tenet.
Nīsus senex purpureum crīnem^{purple lock of hair} in capite habet. Sī purpureus crīnis ā capite rēgis senis rapiātur,^{should be taken} rēgnum cadat.^{would fall}

Quam ob rem Nīsus purpureum crīnem servat.

Mīnōs et Nīsus bellum diū gerunt.

Nīsus urbem tenet et Mīnōs urbem capere nōn ⁴⁰For meaning see "Pān et Sŷrīnx."

⁴¹For this word see the story "Narcissus Suam Imaginem Amat."

can potest. Minōs prope urbem diū manet.
 Rēx Nīsus fīliam pulchram nōmine Scyllam habet, Ea cum patre in urbe vivit ^{habitat} Certāmina bellī spectāre amat, Saepe fīlia ^{Often} turrem ^{tower} Nīsī turrem ascendit ut certāmina spectet. hostium ^{of the enemy she came to know} Nōmina et vultūs hostium nōvit. nōvit ^{of the leader} Et ante aliōs vultūs ducis nōvit, ducis Virgō in turri saepe sedet et ducem hostium spectat. Ducem hostium amat. Pulchritūdinem virtūtem ^{courage} et virtūtem ducis sēcum laudat. Magna est virtūs ducis. Virgō (cum duce hostium esse ^{to be} castra ^{camp} cupit. Urbem relinquere et castra hostium petere cupit.
 Et ea ut in turri sedet et castra hostium spectat, sēcum dicit, "Hoc bellum amō neque⁴² amō. Misera sum quod Minōs mihi hostis est; laeta quod per bellum hostium ducem pulchrum et fortem nōvī. Urbem relin-quere et castra hostium petere cupiō. Fortēs iūsta ^{just} ^{cause} causa sunt hostēs et iūsta est causa bellī. Hostēs causa ^{will win} superābunt, crēdō. Hostēs, sī superābunt, portās ^{gates} ^{will open} portās urbis aperient. Cūr nōn ego portās aperient ^{should I open} aperiam? Sanguis nōn erit: nūlla sagitta, nūllum tēlum rēgem cārum vulnerābit.

⁴² Neque amō: et nōn amō.

will open Egō portās aperiā et patriam meam hostibus trādam. Ego meum pātre[m] sōlum timeō. Sī tamen purpureus crīnis ā capite patris rapiētur, rēgnum cadet."

nox
 Night
 Nox venit. Omnēs dormiunt. Virgō tamen non dormit. Ea patrem suum petit et purpureum crīnem praecīdit.⁴³ Patrem et rēgiā celeriter relinquit; portās urbis et castra hostium petit. Tandem in castra hosti-um pervenit.

Virgō rēgī hostium dīcit, "Per amōrem I have climbed ad tē veniō. Ego turre[m] saepe ascendī et tē spectāvī et virtūtem tuam mēcum laudāvī.
 Ego Scylla sum, fīlia rēgis Nīsī. Tibi patriam meam trādō. Ego purpureum crīnem will take patris meī praecīdā. Tū urbem capiēs.
 Purpureum crīnem cape. Tē sōlum praemium petō."

crūdēlis Rēx tamen hoc mūnus nōn accipit. cruel Respondet, "Virgō crūdēlis, mūnus nōn accipiō.
 Patria mea Crēta tē nōn accipiet."

Rēgnum Nīsī tamen cadit. Mīnōs urbem capit. Nunc Mīnōs urbem relinquit: Crētā, ⁴³For this word see the story "Perseus Medūsam Necat." patriam suam, petit. Scylla urbem relinquere et Crētam petere cupit, Virgō rēgem ōrat; Mīnōs tamen verba virginis nōn audit. Rēx eam sōlam prope mare relinquit. Ea nāvēs spectat.

Irāta (virgō) clāmat: "Vir crūdēlis, cūr mē fugis? Ego amōrem meum ante patriam et patrem posuī. Nōnne⁴⁴ amor meus et mūnus tē movent? Nulla terra mē accipiet: patria mea per mē ^{was defeated} superata⁴⁵ est; aliae terrae mē timent. Verbane mea ad tē perveniunt?
 Nāvēs ā terrā longē absunt: vir crūdēlis mē et terram nunc vidēre nōn potest. Mē tamen you shall leave I will follow nōn relinqūēs: ego tē sequar!"

Sic ea dicit et in mare se iacit. Nat she follows et nāvēs sequitur. Nunc ad nāvem pervenit et nāvem tenet.

has been changed Pater Scyllae in avem mutatus est. Per āera volat et filiā videt. Filiā ulcisci vult. Virgō avem crūdēlem videt et timet. Ut avis prope eam volat, ea nāvem lets go dimittit. Sed in aquam nōn cadit: aer eam ⁴⁴Nonne...movent: don't my love and gift move you?

⁴⁵Superata est: compare necata est in the story
 "Aenēas Turnum Superat." tollit. Ea quoque in avem mūtāta est.

Nōmen āvis est Cīris.

Rome

Venus Rōmam Servat

The Sabines

Sabīnī urbem Rōmam capere volunt.

Prope Rōmam sunt. Nox est. Omnēs Rōmānī dormiunt.

clauserat	Rēx Rōmānōrum portās urbis clauserat,	had closed had opened Iūnō, tamen, dea crūdēlis, portās aperuerat, ut Sabīnī urbem caperent. Dea Venus sōla sēnsit ⁴⁶ Iūnōnem portās aperuisse. Ea Rōmam servāre vult: Rōmānōs amat. Venus	to close it is permitted licet	portās claudere cupit; nōn tamen licet: facta	acts undone to render infecta	deīs facta deōrum infecta reddere ⁴⁷	nōn reddere	licet.

		cool
gelidās	Est in urbe fōns. Aquās gelidās habet.
	Venus ā nymphīs fontis auxilium petit.
	Nymphae auxilium dare volunt. Quam ab rem aquae fontis nōn iam gelidae sunt sed	hot calidae	calidae. Fōns cum aquīs calidīs ad portās flows fluit	urbis fluit. Iam nūlla viā ⁴⁸ Sabīnīs per ⁴⁶For this word see the story "Narcissus et Eχhō."

⁴⁷Inflecta reddere: to undo.

⁴⁸For this word see the story "Dē Midā et Mūnere Malō." apertās open portās apertās est: fōns calidus sē oppōnit,⁴⁹ Sic Venus urbem cāram servat.

Achillēs cum Cygnō Pugnat

Trōiānī cum Graecīs diū pugnābant,⁵⁰ Prope urbem Trōiam Graecī manēbant, Urbem capere cupiēbant. Trōiānī magnā cum virtūte (= cum magnā virtūte) pugnābant. Graecī quoque magnā cum virtūte pugnābant. haec This One ūnus Haec est causā⁵¹ bellī. Unus ē filiīs rēgis Trōiānī, nōmine, Paris, Helenam, fēminam very beautiful, most beautiful pulcherrimam, in Trōiam rapuerat.⁵² Ea omnēs fēminās pulchritūdine superābat. Coniūnx Menelāī, rēgis Spartaē, erat. Menelāus ut sēnsit Paridem coniugem suam rapuisse, Irātus erat. Aliōs ducēs Graecōs convocāvit. Cum multīs aliīs ducibus Graecīs Graeciam reliquit et Trōiam petīvit.
 Helenam pulcherrimam ā Trōiānīs rapere cupiēbat; Troiani tamen fēminam pulcherrimam

⁴⁹See "Nisus. in Cursū Amīcō Auxilium Dat."

⁵⁰For this word see the story "Narcissus Suam Imāginem Amat."

⁵¹See "Fīlia Regis Patriam Suam Hostibus Trādit."

⁵²For the form compare clauserat and rapuerat in "Venus Rōmam Servat."

reddere to give back Menelāō reddere nōn cupiēbant. Quam ob rem Graeci cum Trōiānīs bellum diū gerēbant.

Nunc Graeci cum Trōiānīs bellum gerunt.

Graecus Achillēs magnā cum virtūte pugnat, strength vī magnā (cum) vī quoque. Aliōs Graecōs virtūte et vī superat. Multōs Trōiānōs fortēs had sent battle proelium in mortem miserat. Nunc proelium est.

Achillēs cum Trōiānō Hectore aut cum Cygnō pugnāre cupit. Hectorem vidēre nōn potest; Chariot currum Cygnum tamen videt. Currum in hostem (that drives
 dirigit is, Cygnum) dirigit. Tēlum in hostem iacit.

Tēlum per āera celeriter volat et Cygnum hits percutit. Cygnus neque gemit neque ad terram cadit. Clāmat: "Nūllus vir mē vulnerāre potest. Fīlius Neptūnī, rēgis maris, sum!"

Nunc Cygnus in Achillēa tēlum mittit, sed nōn vulnerat. Iterum Achillēs tēlum in Cygnum iacit, iterum nōn vulnerat. Achillēs irātus est quod Cygnum vulnerāre nōn potest.
 Strength
 Clāmat: "Vīres in mē sunt."⁵³ Multōs virōs fortēs vulnerāvī, multōs necāvī. Cūr Cygnum solum vulnerāre nōn possum? Vīresne mē ⁵³ Sunt here means is because virēs in Latin is plural, although it is rendered in English by a singular.

reliquērunt?"

Menoetes

Sic dicit et tēlum in Menoetēn Trōiānum vulnere extrahit iacit. Menoetēn percutit et necat. Currum wound suum iam relinquit. Achillēs ut ē vulnere draws out calidō tēlum extrahit, dicit: "Vīrēs mē nōn reliquērunt. Magnae sunt vīrēs. Ego aliud tēlum in Cygnum mittam."⁵⁴ Iterum tēlum in Cygnum magnā vī iacit. Tēlum Cygnum percutit et ad terram cadit. Sanguis in corpore Cygnī est. Achillēs crēdit sē hostem vulnerāvisse.

Sanguis tamen est ē vulnere Menoetae. Cygnus nōn vulnerātus est.

vincula iugulum premit

Nunc Achillēs gladium capit. Gladiō cum Cygnō pugnat. Hostem iterum et iterum gladiō percutit sed nōn vulnerat. Achillēs thongs of the helmet nunc vincula galeae Cygnī capit et throat chokes vinculis iugulum premit. Magnā vī iugulum premit. Nunc Achillēs Cygnum nōn videt.
Arms
Arma sōla videt. Cygnus arma reliquerat arma

Deus maris (pater Cygnī) corpus in avem a swan cygnus mūtāverat. Avis est nōmine cygnus.

⁵⁴For the form compare the second aperiam and trādam in "Fīlia Rēgis Patriam Suam Hostibus Trādit."

	Dog
canem	Hecuba in Canem Mutatur had captured Some alii,..alii	Graeci Troiam ceperant.	Alii others Troiani ex urbe fugerant, alios (Troianos) Among these inter hos	Graeci ceperant. Inter hos erat coniunx regis Troiani. Namine erat Hecuba. Graeci crudelibus multis filios Hecubae et regis Priami in bello necaverant.
	Post bellum cum multis viris Troianis et feminis Graeci Troiam relinquunt. Feminae lacrimant et terrae oscula dant. Miserae sunt quod patriam suam relinquunt. Hecuba weeping
conscendit	lacrimans quoque navem conscendit, going to (seeking) Nunc Graeci, patriam petentes, of the Thracians in terram Thracum perveniunt. Rex terrae est nomine Polymnestor. Priamus unum ex filiis suis Polydorum ad Polymnestorem miserat, et cum puero aurum. Rex malus desiring Thracum, aurum cupiens, Polydorum gladio necaverat et corpus in mare miserat.
	this
hac	Ut Graeci in hac terra sunt, Achilles demands
poscit	mortuus poscit ut Polyxena, filia Hecubae, tomb be killed
sepulcrum	ante sepulcrum suum necetur. Quam ab rem Graeci virginem a matre rapiunt. Ea (virgo) magna cum virtute mortem petit. Troianae (fēminae) et Graeci quoque, virginem fortem videntēs, lacrimant, Ea tamen nōn lacrimat.

 Nunc ante sepulcrum Achillis gladiō necātur; ad terram cadit, Trōiānae lacrimantēs corpus virginis tollunt, Māter corporī gelidō lacrimās et ōscula dat. Lacrimāns dicit: "Filia mea, tū quoque gladiō necata es, killed.

Achillēs crudēlis multōs frātrēs tuōs necāvit. Nunc mortuus est sed etiam nunc hostis. Mortuus tē in mortem misit.
 Tū solum levāmen meum erās. Nunc nullum levāmen levāmen mihi est. Graeci crudēlēs filiōs meōs in mortem miserunt. Patriam et sepulcra filiōrum relinquō. Urbs capta est.

serva

Nunc hostēs mē in Graeciam rapiunt. Ego, coniūnx rēgis, serva erō. Cūr nōn ego quoque morior? Priamus mortuus est.

huius

Laetus tamen est: tē mortuam, filia mea, nōn videt. Ūnum levāmen tamen manet: Polydōrus, filius meus. Ūnus filius vīvit! Rēgī huius terrae datus est."

lītus

Sic māter dicit et mare petit ut corpus filiae aquā lavet. Ut in lītus pervenit, corpus Polydōrī videt. Aquae corpus in lītus miserant. Trōiānae clēmant. Māter tamen clāmāre nōn potest: lūctus eam superat.

 Nunc Irāta est. Fīlium ulcīscī cupit.
 Polymnēstorem, rēgem huius terrae, petit.
 Cēterae Trōiānae eam sequuntur. Hecuba fēminās vocat. Ea digitīs suis oculōs rēgis effodit. Thrācēs tēla et saxa in Hecubam et Trōiānās iaciunt. Nunc Hecuba, dīcere cupiēns, dīcere nōn potest: lātrat.
 In canem mūtāta est. Ea, mala sua in memoriā tenēns, in hāc terrā manet.

digitīs oculōs effodit

lātrat

Mala multa et magna huius fēminae miserae et Trōiānōs et Graecōs et deōs quoque mōvērunt. Graecī tamen eam in Graeciam nōn rapuērunt. Ea, coniūnx rēgis, serva nōn erat.

vellus

Fleece Iāsōn Vellus Aureum⁵⁵ Capit

cōgit

Iāsōn, vellus aureum petēns, cum virīs multīs et fortibus per mare ad Colchidē viam capit. In Colchidē nunc pervenit; rēgem huius terrae petit et vellus aureum pos-cit.⁵⁶ Rēx cōgit Iāsonem multōs labōrēs⁵⁷ facere ut vellus aureum accipiat.

⁵⁵For the meaning of this word review the story
 "Atalanta."

⁵⁶This word occurred in "Hecuba in Canem Mūtatur."

⁵⁷This word occurred in "Chirōn Sagittā Alcīdae Vulneratur."

Ut Iāsōn in rēgiā est, filia rēgis nōmine Mēdēa iuvenem pulcherrimū⁵⁸ videt et statim amat. Ea amōrem superāre nōn potest. hunc ^{This} Sēcum dīcit: "Hunc amōrem superāre nōn poshio ^{This} sum. Causa huius amōris est deus.⁵⁹ ^{This} Hic iuvenis vellus aureum capere cupit. Pater periculōsōs ^{dangerous} meus cōgit eum labōrēs periculōsos facere nē ^{that (lest)} ut vellus aureum capiat. Timeō nē pereat. Cūr timeō? Hostis est. Egone, filia rēgis, hostem amō? Haec terra quoque mihi quod ^{what (that which) I may love} dare potest quod ^{amem.} ^{Whether} ^{or} ^{Unless} utrum...an ^{Utrum} vivat an pereat in deīs est. Eum nisi ^{Unless} tamen vīvere cupiō. Nisi Iāsōnī auxilium dabō, per hōs labōrēs periculōsōs perībit. redībit ^{return} Sī eum servābō, redībitne in patriam suam et mē relinquet? Ego cum Iāsone hanc terram fidē ^{(I) will leave} relinquam; ^{pledge} eum fidem dare cōgam. ^{I will compel} Coniūnx Iāsōnis erō. Cūr dubia sum? Egone patrem, parvum frātrē, sorōrem, deōs, et dūrus ^{stern} patriam relinquam? Pater meus est dūrus; frāter est puer; frāter sorōrī suae cārus est; barbara ^{barbarous} magnus deus in mē est; haec terra est barbara.
 Sī hanc terram cum Iāsone relinquam, magnās 58For meaning see "Achillēs cum Cygnō Pugnat." 59The god of love, Cupid.

urbēs vidēbō et virum mihi cārum habēbō. great things
 Nōn magna relinquam; magna petam.
 Nōne⁶⁰ perīcula⁶¹ maris timeō? Iāsonem tenēns, nūllum perīculum timēbō. Sed malum est; hoc malum fuge, Mēdēa." almost paene Sic Mēdēa amōrem paene superat. Silvam petit. In silvā Iāsonem videt, et amor comes back revenit statim revenit. Ea vultūs pulcherrimōs virī diū spectat et sēcum laudat. Iāsōn ā virgine auxilium poscit et fidem dat: sī ea as a husband auxilium dabit, sē coniugem virginī. dabit. Mēdēa laeta est. Lacrimāns respondet, "Ego tē servābō. Tū fidem servā." Nunc ea herbs magic iuvenī herbās magicās dat.
 The next day plain herbās posterō diē campum posterō diē multī ad campum conveniunt ut Iāsonem labōrēs perīculōsōs facere is present adest spectent. Rēx quoque adest. Iāsōn adest.
 Rēx cupit Iāsonem labōrēs nunc facere breathing out efflantēs Prīmum ferōcēs taurī ignem efflantēs per campum celeriter currunt. Iāson nōn timēns ad taurōs viam capit. Ignēs taurōrum harm nocent virō nōn nocent (herbās magicās habet).

⁶⁰See use of this word in "Fīlia Rēgis Patriam Suam Hostibus Trādit."

⁶¹For this word see the story "Atalanta."

iugum impōnit arāre

Iāsōn ^{yoke} iugum in taurōs impōnit et taurōs to plow campum arāre cōgit. Amīcī Iāsonis: laetī mīrantur clāmant. Rēx Irātus est quod Iāsōn nōn are amazed perit. Omnēs mīrantur.

dentēs

Nunc Iāsōn dentēs ^{teeth} anguis capit et in armātī ^{armed} terram impōnit. E dentibus virī armātī spring up (are born) statim nāscuntur. Tēla habent.

parant

Amīcī Iāsonis, virōs armātōs videntēs, timent. Virī armātī tēla in Iāsonem iacere prepare parant. Amīcī Iāsonis timent nē pereat Mēdēa quoque timet. Iāsōn magnum saxum themselves in hostēs iacit, et virī inter se pugnant. Mox omnēs hostēs pereunt. Et Colchī et amīcī Iāsonis mīrantur. Mēdēa laeta est quod iuvenis cārus non perit.

Nunc Iāsōn vellus aureum capere cupit.
Dracō⁶² tamen aureum vellus servat. Nōn dormit.
Iāsōn tamen herbās magicās in dracōnem im-pōnit, et statim dracō dormit. Iāsōn laetus vellus aureum capit.

Sīc, auxiliō Mēdēae, Iāsōn laborēs periculōsōs facit. Nunc cum Mēdēā coniuge Colchidem relinquit et patriam suam petit.

⁶² This word occurred in "Perseus Atlantem in Montem Mūtāt."

Mēdēā Senem in Iuvenem Mītat

Nunc Iāsōn cum Mēdēā coniuge Iolcum, urbem Iāsonis, pervenit. Patrēs et matrēs laetī sunt quod iuvenēs revēnērunt et conveniunt ut deōs colant. Pater Iāsonis tamen, nōmine Aēsōn, nōn adest. Senex est et paene mortuus. Iāsōn miser ā coniuge auxilium petit: "Tū mē ā perīculis servāvisti. Magnās vīrēs herbārum habēs. Per tē ferōcēs taurī ignem efflantēs mihi nōn nocuērunt. Per tē dracō aureum vellus servāns dormīvit. Nunc patrem meum senem et paene mortuum vidēs. Sī potes ā mē annōs rape et patrī meō dā." Sic vir lacrimāns dīcit.

 These Haec verba Mēdēam movent. Respondet: to anyone cuiquam "Nōn cuiquam annōs tuōs dare possum. greater than what (that which) maius tamen maius quam quod by skill quam arte petis tibi dabo. Arte meā, nōn annīs shall make tuīs, patrem tuum iuvenem faciam, sī dea Hecatē mihi auxilium dabit."

Ut nox venit, Mēdēa sōla silvam petit.
 Ceterī dormiunt. Nullus sonus⁶³ est. Ea ⁶³For meaning see "Pān et Sŷrinx." orat: "O Hecatē, si tibi cāra sum, nunc mini auxilium dā. Per tē magnās vīrēs habeō. repeterere Per tē ego flūmina ortūs⁶⁴ ^{their} suōs repeterere cōgō, silvās et montēs moveō. Taurī ignēs efflantēs Iāsonī meō nōn nocuērunt. Iāsōn iugum in hōs (taurōs) imposuit et hōs terram arāre coēgit ^{compelled} Virī armātī, dentibus nātī ^{born} anguis nātī, Iāsonī nōn nocuērunt: inter sē pugnāvērunt. Dracō vellum aureum servāns quae ^{which} dormīvit. Nunc herbās mihi dā quae senem iuvenem faciant."

Sic Mēdēa orat et Hecatē currum⁶⁵ dē dēmittit caelō dēmittit. Mēdēa sentit deam verba sua audīvisse. Currum ascendit et per caelum placitās per multās terrās rapitur. Herbās in terrīs legit ^{that please her she plucks} videt; herbās placitās ^{legit.} legit.

Nunc, multās herbās magicās habēns, in urbem redit. Omnēs deōs colit. Rēgem mor-tuōrum orat nē ^{that not} senem rapiat. Ut deōs orāvit, poscit ut corpus senis ad sē in silvam portētur. Senex, mortuō similis, in iacet ^{lies} terrā iacet.

⁶⁴For meaning see "De Midā et Mūnere Malō."

⁶⁵For meaning see the story "Achillēs cum Cygnō Pugnāt."

Nunc omnēs Mēdēam sōlam cum senē relinqunt. Ea herbās et multa alia in bronze kettle are boiling aēnum imponit. Ut herbae fervent, aēnum cuts iugulum⁶⁶ senis gladiō secat. Omnis sanguis corpus relinquit et in terram fluit. Nunc mouth Mēdēa herbās magicās in iugulum et ōs black nigrum impōnit. Statim crīnēs colōrem nigrum ac-cipiunt. Aeson nōn iam senex et paene mortuus est, sed iuuenis et fortis.

Mēdēa Mala Peliam Senem Necat of Pelias Mox Mēdēa ad rēgnum Peliae viam capit. Pelias senex est. Filiae Peliae in rēgiam Mēdēam accipiunt. Mēdēa virginibus was dicit Aesonem senem arte suā iuuenem factum made factum esse esse. Virginēs artem fēminae mīrantur et give eam ōrant ut annōs Peliae senī det.

promises pollicētur. Sīc dicit, "Ut fidēs artis there may be ram lamb arietem meae sit, arietem senem in agnum agnum mūtābō."

Ariēs senex ad Mēdēam portātur. Ut

⁶⁶For meaning see "Achillēs cum Cygnō Pugnat." fīliae rēgis spectant, Mēdēa herbās magicās in aēnum impōnit. Ut herbae fervent, iugulum arietis secat et corpus in aēnum impōnit. Nunc bālātus ex aēnō audītur et statim exsilit magnus.

bālātus exsilit

Fīliae Pelīae mīrantēs spectant et Mēdēam ōrant ut patrem in iuvenem mūtet.
 Mēdēa hoc mūnus pollicētur.

Sed fēmina mala nunc in aēnum aquam pūram et sine vīribus herbās pōnit. Rēx dormit. Fīliae cum Mēdēā in cubiculum patris veniunt et virum dormientem spectant. Mēdēa dīcit: "Cūr nunc dubiae estis?"

pūram sine cubiculum

Iugulum senis gladiīs secāte ut in corpus sanguinem iuvenis pōnam." Haec verba fīliās movent. Gladiōs tandem capiunt et, vultūs āvertentēs, iugulum patris secant. Senex paene mortuus sē tollit et fīliās gladiōs tenentēs videt. Dīcit, "Quid facitis, fīliae? Cūr patrem necātis?"

Tandem Mēdēa iugulum senis celeriter secat et corpus in aquam pōnit. Fīliae, patrem mortuum videntēs, Irātae et miserae sunt et fēminam malam necāre cupiunt. Sed ea per caelum currū rapitur.

	Poor	Guests
	Duo Senēs Pauperēs Deōs Hospitēs Accipiunt pauperēs hospitēs	Iuppiter, pater hominum et rēx deōrum, dēveniunt	et alius deus Mercurius, mortālibus similēs, domōs	de caelō ad terram dēveniunt. Deī, cibum et homes quiētē ⁶⁷ petentēs, multās domōs veniunt sed nōn accipiuntur. Ūna domus tamen deōs Here accipit. Parva est. Hic vīvunt vir et coniūnx, senēs et pauperēs. Vir est nōmine Philēmōn, fēmina Baucis.
	Senēs pauperēs deōs accipiunt et cibum et vīnum dant. Fēmina cibum et vīnum pōnit. crātēra replērī	Deī cibum capiunt et vīnum bibunt. Senēs mixing bowl of itself is refilled mīrantēs crātēra per sē vīnō replērī vident et sentiunt deōs esse hospitēs. sumus	Nunc deī dīcunt, "Deī sumus. Omnēs we are poenam	aliī hominēs sunt malī et poenam dābunt ⁶⁸ punishment vōs	sed vōs poenam nōn dābitis. Nunc you (plural) domum relinquite et montem ascendite." Senēs cum deīs montem ascendunt. Aquam ⁶⁷For the meaning see the story "Narcissus Suam Imāginem Amat."

⁶⁸Poenam dābunt: will give punishment; better, will be punished.

respiciunt in terris respiciunt, Sōla domus look back and see their eōrum manet. Ut senēs mīrantēs spectant, templum parva domus eōrum in templum magnum et pulchrum mūtātur. Nunc rēx deōrum dīcit, "Quod-ever cumque mīnus vōs petitis, Baucis et Philēmōn, dabō; dīcite."

eādē hōrā Senis Philēmōn cum coniuge dīcit et tandem respondet: "Petimus ut vivētēs hoc We ask at the same hour we may templum servēmus et eādē hōrā moriāmur. die.

Dā nē coniugem meam mortuam videam neque ea mē mortuum videat."

Deus hoc mīnus dat. Multōs annōs senēs templum servant et deōs colunt. Tandem ut by chance forte ante templum sunt, eādē hōrā (to be) changed Philēmōn coniugem in arborem mūtārī videt et Baucis Philēmōna in arborem mūtārī Farewell
 valē videt. Eādē hōrā inter sē dīcunt, "Valē." Hīc ante templum duae arborēs nunc manent.

Cadmus Urbem Pōnit

iubet Agēnor, pater Cadmī, iubet Cadmum per orders to search for quaerere omnēs terrās sorōrem quaerere. Iuppiter tamen hanc virginem amāverat et rapuerat. invenit Quam ob rem frāter eam in nūllā terrā invenit. finds

In patriam redire nōn potest: pater (you) find dixerat, "Nisi⁶⁹ tū sorōrem tuam iuvēneris, (will have found) domum redire nōlī."

Tandem Cadmus, nūllam domum habēns, asks what rogat quā deum Apollinem rogat in quā terrā domus should be established pōnenda sit. Apollō respondet, "In cow vaccam silvā vaccam vidēbis. Eam sequere.⁷⁰ In quō place locō ea quietem petet, urbem pōne."

Nunc Cadmus in silvā vaccam videt et eam sequitur. Tandem vacca in herbā quietem petit. Cadmus sentit hunc locum urbis esse.
 Comitēs Comitēs cum Cadmō sunt. Cadmus iubet hōs (comitēs) fontem petere. Comitēs per silvam viam capiunt et fontem petunt. In cave antrum silvā est antrum. Prope antrum est fōns. urns urnās Fontem comitēs Cadmī petunt et urnās in aquam dēmittunt. Sed magnus anguis ex antrō caput sticks out effert. Urnae ad terram cadunt. Sanguis corpora virōrum relinquit. Aliī tēla parant,⁷¹ aliī fugiunt, aliī dubiī sunt. Anguis ferōx omnēs necat.

Iam nox adest et comitēs Cadmī nōn

⁶⁹ For the meaning see "Iāsōn Vellus Aureum Capit."

⁷⁰ A command

⁷¹ For this word see "Iāsōn Vellus Aureum Capit."

revēnērunt. Cadmus mīrātur quae sit causa delay wonders is morae et per silvam comitēs quaerit. Ut cormora pora comitum mortuōrum et anguem super cor-72 poribus iacentem videt, clāmat, "Corpora avenger your ultor cāra, ego aut ultor mortis vestrae aut companion vestrae comes erō.

Sic miser dīcit et multā vī magnum saxum in anguem iacit. Anguis tamen nōn vul-nerātur. Nunc Cadmus tēlō anguem vulnerat et tandem necat.

Ut Cadmus hostem (that is, anguem) mor-tuum spectat, vōx audītur, "Cūr Cadme, anguem necātum (= mortuum) spectās? Tū quoque anguis eris et hominēs tē spectābunt." Dea Pallas adest et iubet eum dentēs anguis in terram impōnere.

Cadmus terram arat et dentēs anguis in terram impōnit. E dentibus virī armātī statim nāscuntur.⁷³ Cadmus timet et tēla capere parat. Unus ē virīs clāmat, "Tēla With us nōbīs capere nōlī! Nōbīscum pugnāre nōlī! Virī 72

For meaning of word see "Medea Senem in Iuvenem . . .

Mitat."

73 For meaning see "Iason Vellus Aureum Caput." armatī inter sē pugnant et multī necantur.

 Five
 quīnque Quīnque virī manent. Tēla in terram iaciunt et sē comitēs Cadmō dant. Cadmus, urbem pōnēns, hōs comitēs habet. stands Thebes stat Nunc stat urbs, nōmine Thēbae, et fēlix happy seems vidētur Cadmus fēlix vidētur. Coniugem habet, multōs grandsons already nepōtēs fīliōs et fīliās et nepōtēs, hōs quoque iam iuvenēs. Sed ante mortem nullus vir fēlix (to) be called dīcī potest.

Avenges
Diāna Actaeona Ulcīscitur grandson

Prīma causa lūctūs Cadmō est nepōs, nōmine Actaeōn.

Actaeōn cum comitibus in montibus ferās agitāt. Iam diū ferās agitant et dēfessī middle of the day medius diēs sunt. Iam medius diēs est, et Actaeōn we have comitibus suis dīcit, "Multās ferās necāvimus. killed, When the next Dawn cum altera Aurora Dēfessī sumus. Cum altera Aurora brings back we shall go to diem redūcet, silvam petēmus cease et work opus repetēmus. Nunc tamen opus dēsinite et domum redīte." Virī opus dēsiniunt et domum redeunt. Actaeōn tamen domum nōn redit; per silvam errat.
 these valley vallēs In hīs silvīs est vallēs, deae Diānae

Athamās et Īnō Poenam⁸¹ Dant

Nōvus deus, nōmine Bacchus, in urbem Thēbās venit. Hic deus est fīlius Iovis et Semelēs, fīliae Cadmī. Vīnum mīnus hominibus dat. Pentheus, rēx Thēbānōrum, et aliī quoque novum deum nōn colunt; quam ob rem poenam dant. Omnēs deum tandem accipiunt et colunt.

Īnō, soror mātris deī, in primīs⁸² magnās vīrēs Bacchī laudat. Sōla dē sorōribus suis nullum lūctum ^{has had} habuit. Līberīs suis, ^{laeta} coniuge, Bacchō fēlix est. Dea Īnō eam fēlicem videt et eam lūctum habēre cupit. Īnō ĩrāta est quod Semelē ab Iove amāta est et omnēs Thēbānōs ulcīscī cupit. Dea sēcum dīcit, "Fīlius Semelēs (Bacchus) magnās vīrēs habet. Multī eum nōn colentēs poenam dedērunt. Egone, coniūnx rēgis deōrum, nullās vīrēs habeō? Īnō, soror Semelēs, liberīs suis, coniuge, Bacchō fēlix est. Bacchum laudat. Eam ulcīscī cupiō."

Īnfernās
sēdēs dūcit

of the lower world abodes leads Via ad Īnfernās sēdēs dūcit

⁸¹ For meaning see "Duo Senēs Pauperēs Deōs Hospitēs ⁸² Accipiunt."

In primīs: especially.

sēdibus ad terram capit et in rēgiam Athamantis pervenit. Inō et Athamās, ut eam vident, timent. Rēgiam relinquere parent; Tīsiphonē tamen eis ^{them (to them)} sē oppōnit. Ea caput movet, et anguēs sībilant.
 Dea horribilis duōs anguēs sībilantēs dē mediīs crīnibus capit et magnā vī iacit.
 Anguēs per pectora ^{breasts} Inūs et Athamantis perer-rant et furōrem eis dant. Furia venēnum⁸⁶ quo-que sēcum habet. Hoc per pectora Inūs et Athamantis fundit. Hoc quoque furōrem eis dat. Tandem Tīsiphonē in rēgnū umbrārum redit.
 Statim Athamās, furōre ductus, in mediā ^{incited} rēgiā clāmat, "Comitēs, in hīs silvīs ^{liones} leaenam cum duābus ^{young I saw} prōlibus vīdī. Eam agitāre parāte!" Sic dīcit et coniugem velut feram sequitur.
 Parvum fīlium ā mātrem rapit et in saxum caput discutit. Iam mātrem, lūctā et furōre ducta clāmat et, alterum parvum puerum portāns, fugit. (Ea) fugiēns Bacchum vocat. Prope mare est altum saxum. Hoc Inō cum puerō ascendit et sē et fīlium dē saxō dēmittit.
 Sed Venus eam videt. Neptūnum, deum

⁸⁶See "Chīrōn Sagittā Alcīdae Vulnerātur." maris petit et sic orat, "O Neptūne, qui magnās vīrēs habēs, magna poscō. Fēmina mihi cāra sē cum parvō puerō in magnum mare dēmisit adde Hōs servā et eōs deīs tuīs ^{add} adde." Neptūnus hoc mūnus dat. Nōva dea est Leucothoē nōmine; novus deus, Palaemōn.

follow

(Fēminae) Thēbānae eam ad mare sequuntur et eam in mare sē cum filiō dēmittere vident.
 Omnēs crēdunt eam mortuam esse et miserae iniūstam sunt. Iūnōnem iniūstam (= nōn iūstam⁸⁷) et crudēlem vocant. Iūnō ^{these} irāta hās fēminās ulcīscī vult. Ūna ex hīs fēminīs nunc dīcit, rēginam ^{queen} "Ego rēginam in mare sequar!"⁸⁷ Sed ea, sē in mare dēmittere cupiēns, sē movēre nōn potest: in saxum mūtātur. Aliae Thēbānae quoque, velut stant,⁸⁸ in saxa mūtantur. Aliae tamen in avēs mūtantur et super mare volant.

Cadmus in Anguem Mūtātur

Cadmus, iam senex, lūctū ductus, cum coniuge urbem Thēbās relinquit. Per multās ⁸⁷For meaning see the story "Filia Rēgis Patriam Suan Hostibus Trādit."

⁸⁸For meaning see "Cadmus Urbem Pōnit."

of Illyria terrās errant; in terram Illyricam tandem perveniunt. Hīc, ut prīma mala domūs suae recall et labōrēs suōs memorant, Cadmus dīcit, sacer that which ille "Sacerne erat ille anguis quem cupiēns novam urbem pōnere necāvī et dentēs in terram im-posuī? Sī hanc ob rem deī Irātī mē et domum meam ulciscar

Sic senex dīcit; sine morā in pectus Arms
 bracchia cadit: in anguem mūtātur. Bracchia sōla stretching out tendēns manent. Bracchia tendēns et lacrimāns, dīcit, "Venī, Ō contūnx miserrima,⁸⁹ venī, et while dum bracchia mihi manent, mē tange et hand More manum manum accipe, dum manus est." Plūra dīcere plūra cupit sed nōn potest. Sībilat: haec vōx sōla est.

Contūnx, pectora manū percutiēns, clāmat, "Cadme, manē. Mē relinquere nōlī. cast off Where dispōne Illud corpus dispōne. Ubi sunt pedēs,⁹⁰ bracchia, manūs, vultūs - omnia? Cūr nōn mē quoque, magnī deī, in anguem mūtātis?" Plūra dīcere nōn potest. Deī verba ⁸⁹ For the meaning of this word compare pulcherrima, in "Achillēs cum Cygnō Pugnāt." ⁹⁰ See pedibus in "Diāna Actaeona Ulciscitur." audiunt et eam quoque in anguem mūtant Omnēs comitēs, quī adsunt,⁹¹ duōs anguēs spectantēs mīrantur et timent, Nunc duo angues comitēs relinquunt et silvās petunt.

 In illīs locīs manent, Illī anguēs hominēs neque fugiunt neque nocent, In memoriā semper tenent sē hominēs fuisse. were (to have been)

Pulchritūdō Sua Pīcō Nocet

Ōlim erat iuvenis, nōmine Pīcus, quī aliōs iuvenēs pulchritūdine et virtūte super-ābat, Rēx erat, ^{Eum} illum omnēs nymphae amābant.
 Ille tamen ūnam nympham sōlam amābat. Haec nympha erat nōmine Canēns, Ea pulchritūdine Insignis arte canendī ^{remarkable beauty (skill) of singing} insignis erat, sed arte canendī ^{more remarkable} insignior⁹² erat; quam ob rem Canēns nōmine erat. Arte suā canendī silvās et morābātur ^{delayed (used to delay)} saxa movēbat, ferās morābātur, avēs tenēbat.
 Hōc diē dum Canēns domī canit, Pīcus domum reliquerat ut aprōs in silvā agitāret.
 Equum⁹³ habēbat. Tēla manibus tenēbat. Pur-⁹¹Compare the form adest.

⁹²For the meaning of the suffix -ior compare altior in "Diāna Actaeona Ulciscitur."

⁹³For meaning see "Nisus in Cursū Amicō Auxilium Dat." pureum ^{was wearing} vēlāmen gerēbat, In hās silvās charms carminibus Circē quoque, quae herbīs et carminibus īnsignis erat, vēnerat ut herbās legeret;⁹⁴ Ut iuvenem, pulchritūdine īnsignem, videt, statim eum amat. Herbae, quās lēgerat, dē manū cadunt. Ignēs (that is, amor) per tōtum whole corpus errant. Illum <sup>Him (that man) to go to (to approach)</sup> adire cupit; tamen adire nōn potest: equus tam⁹⁵ celeriter currit, et comitēs quo-que cum illō sunt. Circē dicit, "Tū mē fugere non potes, si ego mē nōvā, si herbīs et carmini-bus īnsignis sum."

 Sic Circē dicit et imāginem aprī falsi cum nūllō corpore facit. Iubet hanc (imāginem) ante oculōs Pīcī currere et in silvam thick, dense to go where dēnsam ire, ubi nulla via equō est.
 Sine morā aper falsus ante oculōs Pīcī currit et in silvam dēnsam ^{goes} it. Pīcus equum relinquit et in silvā altā aprum pedibus She (that woman) sequitur. Illa ^{By} iuvenem nunc adit et siē dicit, "Per oculōs tuōs, quī mē cēpērunt, et per pulchritūdinem tuam tē ōrō dēnsam

 Ire

⁹⁴ For meaning see "Mēdea Senem in Iuvenem Mūtāt."

⁹⁵ For meaning see "Diāna Actaeona Ulcīscitur." ut mē coniugem accipiās," quaecumque Iuvenis respondet. "Quaecumque tū es, nōn sum tuus. Canēns sōla mē tenet et per longōs annōs teneat. Nūllam aliam fēminam amābō dum illa vivet." Circē plūra dīcit; illum tamen mōvere nōn potest. Tandem clāmat, "Ad Canentem tuam nōn redībis et poenam dabis." Sic clāmat et carmina dīcit. Ille fugit sed mīratur sē tam celeriter currere. Nunc sentit sē avem esse.

 Ille, Irātus quod in avem mūtātus est, arbor-ēs rōstrō percutit et arboribus vulnera dat. Nōmen sōlum Pīcō manet: avis quoque nōmine pīcus⁹⁶ est.
 Intereā comitēs Pīcum per silvās vocant; illum tamen nōn inveniunt. Circēn tamen inveniunt. Rēgem suum repossunt, et in illam tēla lacere parant. Illa herbīs et venēnīs eōs spargit, carmina dīcit, et Hecatēn deam invocat. Silvae ē locō sē movent, terra ingemit, arborēs pallidae sunt, saxa sonum raucum⁹⁷ dant, canēs lātrant et ⁹⁶A woodpecker.

⁹⁷This word occurred once before, in "Latōna Agricolās in Hānās Mūtāt."

(Those) who umbrae mortuōrum per āera volant. Quī adsunt mīrantur. Circō vultūs mīrantium with her wand

virgā virgā tangit. Sine morā iuvenēs in to no one

ferās mūtantur; nullī sua imāgō manet.

waits for expectat

Intereā Canēns domī coniugem expectat. slaves

servī

Omnēs servī, illum quaerentēs, per silvam discurrunt discurrunt; tamen neque illum neque comitēs inveniunt. Canēns, lūctū mōta (= ducta), lacrimat et pectora manibus percutit. Misera est quod coniūnx cārus nōn redit. Illum quaerēns, per silvās, per montēs, per vallēs multōs diēs errat; nōn dormit, cibum nōn capit. Ad rīpās flūminis Tiberis tandem per-venit. Viā et lūctū dēfessa, corpus in rīpā pōnit. Hīc iacet dum corpus in aquam mūtātur.

The Muses

Canēnae hunc locum Canentem dē nōmine nymphae dīcunt.

nymphae dīcunt.

to Ceres

Erysichthōn Cererī Poenam Dat

Quī deōs nōn colunt poenam dant. Haec story

fābula

est fābula de virō quī deam Cererem nōn frūmentum coluit. Haec dea ^{grain} frūmentum, herbās, flōrēs, arborēs colit.

quercus

In silvā est alta arbor. Est quercus, oak tree circum Cererī sacra. Altior⁹⁸ quam aliae arborēs chorēās Around dances

 est. Circum hanc (arborem) nymphae chorēās saepe dūcunt.

 Erysichthōn tamen servōs arborem sacram succīdere to cut down succīdere iubet. Servi quercum succīdere nōlunt. et morantur. Sed Erysichthōn irātus secūrem axe secūrem ab unō dē servīs capit et dīcit; do you (plural) delay
 "Cūr morāmini? Sentiō arborem sacram Cererī esse, sed sī haec arbor dea herself
 ipsa ipsa esset, eam (arborem) tamen succīderem." ut Dīcit, et dum secūrem manū tollit, quercus ingemit et tota arbor pallida est.
 Et ut ille arborem secūrī vulnerat, sanguis effluit flows out ē vulnere effluit. Omnēs mīrantur et timent. Ūnus (vir) illum ōrat nē quercum succīdat. Sed Erysichthōn secūrem ab arbore in illum āvertit et caput praēcīdit.

 Dum Erysichthōn secūrī iterum et iterum arborem vulnerat, vōx dē quercū audītur, "Nymp̄ha, Cererī cāra, in hāc arbore vīvō.
 Ego moriēns hoc dīcō: tū poenam dabis ." Ille tamen arborem succīdit; tandem quercus ⁹⁸For this form see "Diāna Actaeona Ulcīscitur" and compare insignior, found in "Pulchritūdo Picō Nocet."

sonitū ^{crash} magnō cum sonitū ad terram cadit.

Post haec omnēs nymphae Cererem petunt et ōrant ut Erysichthōn poenam det. Dea hoc pollicētur. Sine morā ūnam ex nymphīs ad sē vocat et dīcit, "Est locus in Scythiā, terra sine frūmentō, sine arbore. Hōc in locō

Famēs ^{Famine, Hunger} vivit Famēs. ^{stomach} Ad eam adī et iubē eam alvum in alvum Erysichthonis famem impōnere.

Ille (that is, Erysichthōn) famem semper may (he) have habeat! Nō multus cibus famem superet:⁹⁹ iēiūnus ^{hungry let him be (to) delay} semper iēiūnus sit. ^{Morārī} nōlī.

 Since
 cum Cum via longa sit, currum meum et dracōnēs, quī per āera volant, accipe." iussa ^{the orders} Nympha sine morā iussa deae facit.

Per āera currū rapitur et in Scythiam per-venit. ^{rocky} Famem quaerit. Illam in agrō saxeō rārās invenit. Famēs herbās rārās (= nōn dēnsās)

^{her} manibus et dentibus legit. Corpus eius macrum ^{lean} ^{hollow} cavī macrum est; oculī cavī sunt, vultūs pallidī.

Nympha, ut illam procul¹⁰⁰ videt, iussa deae dīcit. Nōn plūra dīcit. Nympha, procul stāns neque diū morāns, tamen famem sentit.

⁹⁹Ne multus cibus famem superet: let not much food satisfy his hunger.
¹⁰⁰Compare the use of this word in the story "Atalanta."

ad currum currit et ab dracōnibus per āera ad patriam rapitur.

Sine morā Famēs iussa Cereris facere parat. Per āera domum Erysichthonis volat et in cubiculum¹⁰¹^{his} eius it. Erysichthōn dor-mit; nox est. Illa in alvum dormientis (virī) famem impōnit. Nunc in patriam suam redit. Intereā Erysichthōn dormit et per sleep
somnum cibum videt, dentēs movet: cibus empty tenuis est tenuis āer. Ut somnus eum reliquit, mag-nam famem sentit et cibum cupit. Servi ante eum multum cibum et vīnum pōnunt; ille tamen iēiūnus est. Pōscit omnia quae terra, What enough satis āer, mare tenent. Quod satis urbī esse potest, ūnī nōn potest. wealth opem Tandem omnem opem suam alvō dat. sells vēndit Fīlia manet; illam quoque vēndit. Sed illa dominum accipere nōn vult: cominum fugit et dominus illam sequitur. Ad mare illa pervenit, et, manūs super mare tendēns, Neptūnum ōrat, Take away
eripe "Eripe mē ā dominō!" Neptūnus virginem in to her of a fisherman piscantis virum mūtāt et eī vēlāmen piscantis dat.

¹⁰¹For meaning see "Mēdēa Mala Peliam Senem Necat."

Dominus, piscantem spectans, rogat, have you seen
 "Virginemne hic prope mare vidisti? fled Illa me fugit. Ego eam huc in loco (= in hoc just now modo loco) modo vidi. Ubi est?"

Illa respondet, "Quicumque¹⁰² tu es, mihi ignosce.¹⁰³ Piscans, ego oculos ab mari non no one verti. Mihi crede, nemo, nisi ego, hic modo verti nemo stetit." Dominus credit et locum relinquit. shape Virgini forma sua redditur.¹⁰⁴

Pater tamen, sentiens formam filiae suae mutari posse, illam saepe vendit, nunc horse
 equam formam equam, nunc vaccam, nunc avem, nunc cervam. Sic illa patri cibum dat. Homo since miserrimus tandem, cum satis cibi accipere non possit, dentes suos suo corpori dat et consumit totum corpus consumit.

Ulixes et Circe

Ulysses

Post bellum Troianum Graecus Ulixes domum rediens, multos annos per maria erravit .
 Nunc Ulixes cum comitibus in terram ¹⁰²See quaecumque, which occurred in the story "Pulchritudo Sua Pice Nocet."

¹⁰³Compare ignoscite in the story "Atalanta".

¹⁰⁴See reddere in "Achilles cum Cygno Pugnatus".

Circēs pervenit. ^{are chosen} Quīdam comites leguntur quī in urbem Circēs adeant. Dum ad rēgiam Circēs adeunt, per viam multās ferās vident et timent. Ferae tamen nōn timendae sunt;¹⁰⁵ nōn nocent. Mox illi ^{they (those men)} in rēgiam ^{them} perveniunt. Servae illōs accipiunt et ad ^{mistress} dominam dūcunt. Circē quoque illōs bene accipit et hospitium¹⁰⁶ dat.

Sine morā servae cibum et vīnum ante ^{juices} hospitēs pōnunt. Circē sūcōs herbārum in vīnum fundit (nēmō videt). Hospitēs vīnum cum sūcīs bibunt. Nunc Circē illōs virgā ^{pigs} tangit et in suēs mūtāt. Ūnus sōlus, nōmine Eurylochus, neque vīnum cum sūcīs accipit neque in suem mūtātur. Ille comitēs in suēs mūtārī videt; ad Ulixēn redit et dīcit omnia quae facta sunt.¹⁰⁷

Mox Ulixēs ad Circēn venit ut comitēs ulcīscātur. Circē Ulixī quoque vīnum cum sūcīs herbārum dat. Ille tamen nōn accipit.
 Ut Circē eum virgā tangere parat, ille virgam ¹⁰⁵Non timendae sunt: should not be feared.

¹⁰⁶For the meaning of this word see "Perseus Atlantem in Montem Mūtāt."

¹⁰⁷Omnia quae facta sunt: everything that has happened.

dēicit her dashes
dē manū eius dēicit et gladium suum capit.

Ulixēs Circēn coniugem accipit.

Post haec Ulixēs coniugem poscit ut comitēs in corpora sua mūtentur. Circē hoc meliōribus mūnus dat. Illa comitēs sūcīs meliōribus better spargit, capita virgā percutit, et carmina canit. Statim illī in hominēs mūtantur.
Laetī sunt quod suēs nōn iam sunt, sed grātiās agunt hominēs. Comitēs Ulixī grātiās agunt!¹⁰⁸

Ulixēs et comitēs in hāc terrā tōtum annum morantur. Hanc terram tandem relin-quunt et per mare dōmum petunt.

Ajax
Et Ulixēs et Aīāx Arma Achillis Poscunt

Multōs annōs Graecī cum Trōiānīs cir-cum urbem Trōiam bellum gerunt. Tandem Paris, quī coniugem Menelāī rapuerat, bravest Achillēa, fortissimum Graecōrum, sagittā necat. Nunc duo Graecī, Ulixēs et Aīāx, arma Achillis mortuī poscunt. Agamemnon, decision arbitrium facere nolēns, iubet omnēs ducēs to sit down together consīdere Graecōs mediīs in castrīs consīdere ¹⁰⁸Grātiās agunt: they give thanks, they thank.

et arbitrium facere.

Ducēs iussa Agamemnonis faciunt: conveniunt et mediīs in castrīs consīdunt.

Āiax primus dicit. "Verbīs nōn insignis certat sum. Ulixēs verbīs certat; ego factīs (certō).
Mea facta nōn memoranda sunt;¹⁰⁹ fights you (plural) you (plural) have seen vōs vidistis. Ulixēs (facta) sua memoret;¹¹⁰ nox sōla ea vīdit. Nisi (= sī... nōbilitāte nōn) Ulixēn virtūte superārem, nōbilitāte in birth tamen superārem. Pater meus erat Telamōn, quī magna (facta) fēcit. did Aeacus Telamōnī
pater erat, fīlius Iovis. Et Achillēs erat fīlius Pēleī, frātris Aeacī.

Cēterī ducēs Graecī Trōiam adīre parābant ut cōgerent Trōiānōs Helenam pulcherrimam reddere. Ulixēs tamen furōrem fīnxit pretended et arma fūgit, dum quīdam (vir), dolīs in trickery Insignior quam ille, dōlum eius sēnsit et in should be given arma illum dūxit. Arma mihi danda sunt, quī in prīma perīcula vēnī..

Ut Nestor senex, verbīs Insignissimus;¹¹¹ vulnere equī et annīs dēfessus erat, Ulixēs ¹⁰⁹Nōn memoranda sunt: need not be told.

¹¹⁰Ulixes memoret: let Ulysses relate.

¹¹¹Compare fortissimum above.

auxilium nōn dedit: ille fūgit. Olim Ulixēs quoque auxilium cupīvit. Comitēs vocāvit.

Ego forte¹¹²aderam; illum timentem vidī et (having been) saved servāvī. Ille tamen servātus quī ob (= per) vulnera modo¹¹³stāre nōn poterat, fūgit.

Hector adest et sēcum deōs in proelium¹¹⁴ dūcit; tū nōn sōlus, Ulixē, timēs, sed fortēs (virī) quoque. Ille fortissimus Trōiānōrum erat. Ego tamen cum Hectore pugnāvī. Magnum I threw saxum in illum iēcī et illum ad terram mīsī.
Ab illō ego nōn superātus sum.

nostrās
our Olim Trōiānī nāvēs nostrās incendēbant.
Ubi est Ulixēs, verbīs insignis? Ego ante nāvēs pugnāvī et eās servāvī. Quam ob rem mihi arma date.

Our haec arma Ulixī, quī dolīs sōlīs Insignis est, quī sine armīs pugnat, danda weight sunt? Ille magnum pondus hōrum (armōrum) to bear Flight ferre nōn potest. Fuga tibi (that is, difficilis Ulixī), haec (arma) ferentī, difficilis erit.

¹¹²For meaning see "Duo Senēs Pauperēs Deōs Hospitēs Accipiunt."

¹¹³For meaning see "Erysichthōn Cererī Poenam Dat."

¹¹⁴For meaning see "Achillēs cum Cygnō Pugnat."

Quid verbis opus est? Arma mediis in hostes mittite. Iubete nos haec petere et (ei) recovering referenti arma date." Next deinde Sic Aiax dixit. Deinde Ulixes, ante ducens stans, dicit. "Miserrimus sum quod Achilles mortuus est et certamen de armis his eius est. Cum tamen ille fortissimus a nobis us ereptus sit, arma eius mihi danda sunt: ille per me in bellum venit.
 Ego quoque a sanguine Iovis sum. Mihi Laertis pater est, Laertae pater est Arcesius, Arcesio Iuppiter (est pater). Aiax nobili-tate me non superat. Non per nobilitatem tamen, sed per virtutem haec arma petenda sunt.
 Per me Achilles in bellum venit. Mater eius, timens ne filius in bellum vocetur et pereat, illum velaminibus femineis dissimulat et inter feminas ponit. Ille, his disguised had deceived velaminibus dissimulatus, omnes fefellerat, wares mercedes inter quos Aiacem. Ego tamen, mercedes femineas ferens, ad eum adii. Mercibus femineis arma addideram. Ille me non fefellit. please
 Non mercedes femineae illi placent, sed arma.
 Haec tollit et admiratur. Quam ob rem sensi illum esse virum. Dixi, 'Graeci te expectant. Cur tū Trōiam adire morāris?' Sic ego dixi et (illum) fortem ad (facta) fortia misi. Quam ob rem mea sunt facta eius.

(Virum) qui Hectora necare posset, dedi; per mē Hector in mortem missus est.

Iam nāvēs nostrae Aulida ^{to Aulis} convēnerunt.
Winds
venti nōn sunt qui eās (nāvēs) Trōiam The fates agere possint. Fata ^{our} poscunt ut Agamem-sacrifice nōn, dux noster, fīliam mactet. Ille suam very dear fīliam cārissimam mactare nōn vult. Ego persuaded tamen eī persuāsi ut hoc faceret. Ad mātrem I was sent had to be devirginis missus sum, quae dolō fallenda erat. ceived.
Dixi Achillēa fīliam eius conjugem petere. Illa mihi crēdit et fīliam Aulida mittit. Hunc labōrem difficilem nōn Aiāx sed ego feci.

In urbem Trōiam missus sum et dūcēs Trōiānōs petivi ut Helenam redderent. Priamum et Antēnora movi; Paris et frātrēs tamen nōn moti sunt: mihi nocere cupiverunt. Hoc on behalf of periculum pro vobis petivi. dicere
longa Longa mora est memorare omnia quae et manū et dolis per longum bellum feci. Post prima proelia hostēs in urbe se diū contincontinuērunt uērunt (tenuērunt). Quid tū, Aīāx, intereā facis? Sī mē mea facta memorāre cupis, multa fortia fēcī.

Nunc Iuppiter iubet nōs bellum dīmittere^{us} et Trōiam relinquere. Graeci bellum dīmittere^{to give up} et domum redire cupiunt. Qūr nōn Aīāx illōs morātur? Ille quoque fugit et domum redire parat. Ego tamen verbis meis virōs ā nāvibus in castra redūxī et eis persuāsī nē bellum relinquerent. Quodcumque¹¹⁵ Achillēs ego fēcī fēcit, meum est quī ā fugā illum redūxī.

Multōs Trōiānōs circum hanc urbem necāvī. Mihi multa vulnera sunt. Sī verbis meis nōn crēditis, vidēte! (pectus suum lays bare reteggit). Haec sunt vulnera mea. Aīāx tamen corpus sine vulnere habet.

Ut Trōiānī nāvēs nostrās incenderant, Aīāx ante eās pugnāvit. Nōn sōlus tamen eās servāvit. Patroclus quoque aderat; ille quoque laudandus est.

Ego ipse corpus Achillis mortuū cum armīs eius ex campō ferre poteram.¹¹⁶ myself was able (could)

¹¹⁵For meaning see "Duo Senēs Pauperēs Deōs Hospitēs Accipiunt."

¹¹⁶For meanings see "Iāsōn Vellus Aureum Capit."

Mihi sunt virēs quae pondus armōrum ferre possunt: arma cum corpore virī ferre poteram.

Āiāx mē nōn fortem vocat quod nōn primus in bellum vēnī. Achillēs quoque nōn primus vēnit. Ante illum tamen ego vēnī. Ego illum ad arma mīsi, nōn Āiāx.

Ego imāginem deae Minervae mediīs de hostibus rapuī. Nisi illa (imāgō) ex urbe had been taken would be standing rapta esset, Trōia nunc stāret.

Ubi erat Āiāx? Ubi erant magna verba magnī darkness virī? Ille timet. Ego tamen per noctem (night)

mediōs per hostēs urbem petō, imāginem rapiō et per hostēs ferō. Per mē Trōia capta To you (plural)
est. Vōbīs comitēs, auxilium dedi.

Mihi praemium date!"

by the leaders Nunc arbitrium dūcibus dandum est.

Verba Ulixīs dūcēs movent: arma illī dantur.

Ulixēs dūcibus gratiās agit.¹¹⁷ Āiāx miserrius tamen gladius suum capit et clāmat, "Hic gladius meus est! An¹¹⁸ Ulixēs hunc quoque pos-cit? Hic (gladius), quī multōs Trōiānōs in mē will send mortem mīsit, dominum mittet. Nēmō nisi ¹¹⁷For meaning see "Ulixēs et Cīrcē."

¹¹⁸See meaning of an of utrum...an, "Iāsōn Vellus Aureum Capit."

Āiāx Āiācem superāre poterit." Dicit et gladiō sē necat. (Vir) quī nūlla vulnera ab hostibus accēperat, ab sē (vulnera) accēpit.
 Nēmō gladium ē vulnere extrahere¹¹⁹ potest; expellit eum (that is, gladium) sanguis ipse ^{itself drives out} expellit.
 Sanguis ē vulnere ad terram effluit. Sanguis mūtātur in flōrem purpureum, quī dē sanguine Hyacinthī quoque vēnerat.

Pȳramus et Thisbē

Haec est fābula dē magnō amōre. Multī hominēs hanc fābulam nōvērunt et amant. Nunc vōs quoque hanc audiētis. ^{will hear} Pȳramus est iuvenis pulcherrimus, et Thisbē omnēs virginēs pulchritūdine superat.
 In urbe Babylōne vivunt. Domūs eōrum¹²⁰ parietem ^{wall} ^{common, in common} commūnem parietem commūnem ^{habent.} Pȳramus Thisbēn amat, et Thisbē Pȳramum. Duo amantēs ^{lovers} marriage ^{conjugium} cupiunt, sed parentēs nōlunt.
 Parentēs tamen amōrem eōrum ēripere nōn possunt. ^{Greater} ^{becomes, grows} maior ^{fit} amor fit. ^{In} 119 For meaning find this word in "Achillēs cum Cygnō pugnat."

120 For meaning see "Duo Senēs Pauperēs Deōs Hospitēs Accipiunt."

rīma crack commūnī pariete duārum domōrum rīma parva est. Commūnis paries hanc rīmam accēperat when it was being made cum fieret. Amantēs primī rīmam vident (quid amor nōn sentit?). Amantēs rīmam viam vōcis faciunt. Verba eōrum per go On this side on hinc rīmam eunt. Hinc stat P̄ramus; il-illinc that side linc Thisbē.
 Saepe ut hinc stat P̄ramus, illinc Thisbē, dīcunt: "Ō male pariēs, cūr amanti-bus tē oppōnis? Cūr nōbīs corpora ^{join} iungere¹²¹ non permittis, aut ōscula dare? Malus, tamen, tū nōn es: viam vōcis ^{to us} nōbīs das." Sic amantēs saepe stant et, ut nox venit, dīcunt "Valē" et ōscula parietī dant.
 One (certain) Quōdam diē amantēs ad haec loca adeunt. Hinc stat P̄ramus; illinc Thisbē.
 Iungere corpora et inter sē ōscula dare cupiunt. ^{Decide} Cōstituunt domibus nocte exīre cōstituunt et domōs urbis relinquere et ad sepulcrum of Ninus Nīnī convenīre. Prope hoc sepulcrum est mulberry tree white berries mōrus albīs pōmīs et nōn procul mōrus albīs est fōns gelidus. Hōc cōstitutō¹²² parietem ¹²¹Corpora iungere: to embrace.

¹²²Hōc cōstitutō: after this has been decided, or after deciding this.

relinquunt.
 exit Hāc nocte Thisbē domō ^{goes out} exit; domōs urbis relinquunt. Amor eam fortem facit.
 Prima ad sepulcrum pervenit et sub arbore sedet: Pŷramus nōn adest. Venit ad fontem cruentātō mouth bloody cattle bovēs leaena¹²³ferōx ōŕe cruentātō: bovēs modo necāvit. Thisbē, ut hanc procul videt, timēns in antrum fugit. Dum fugit, vēlāmen eius ad terram cadit.
 Ut leaena multam aquam ex fonte bibit, in silvam redīre parat. Vēlāmen invenit et laniat tears Then tum ōre cruentātō laniat. Tum leaena in silvam redit. Vēlāmen cruentātum et laniātum relinquunt.
 Mox Pŷramus ad locum constitūtum pervestīgia Tracks
 venit. Vestīgia ferae videt et pallidus fit.
 Ut quoque vēlāmen cruentātum invenit, cum gemitū dīcit, "Ūnā nocte duo amantēs perībunt.
 Ego tē, Thisbē, in mortem mīsī, quī in hunc locum tē venīre iussī have ordered neque ante tē leōnēs lions vēnī. Ō leōnēs, quī in hāc silvā sunt, meum dīvellite tear apart corpus dīvellite et consūmite." Vēlāmen Thisbēs tollit et sēcum ad arborem fert. Ut lacrimās et ōscula vēlāminī cārō dat, sic dicit, "Accipe nunc meum quoque sanguinem."

¹²³For meaning see "Athamās et Inō Poenam Dant." ēmicat ātrum rādīcēs

Gladium, quem habet, in pectus suum mittit et ē vulnere extrahit. Sanguis in āera altē spurts ēmicat. Pōma mōrī sanguine sparguntur et in dark roots ātrum colōrem mūtantur. Rādīcēs arboris san-guinem accipiunt et pōmīs colōrem sanguinis dant.

cognōscit

Post haec Thisbē timēns ex antrō exit et oculīs amantem quaerit. Locum et formam recognizes arboris cognōscit, sed color pōmōrum eam dubiam facit. Dum dē locō dubia est, corpus cruentātum in terrā iacēns videt. Pallida fit. Ut amantem cognōscit, lūctū mōta, cor-porī ōscula et lacrimās dat. Ōscula vultibus dēns, clāmat, "Pyrāme, quod malum tē ā mē ēripuit? Pyrāme, respondē. Tua cāra Thisbē tē vocat. Audi et vultūs attolle." Ad nōmen Thisbēs Pyrāmus oculōs aperit, caput tollit, oculōs ad amantem advertit, tum, illā vīsā,¹²⁴ moritur.

postquam

after Illa postquam vëlāmen suum et gladium perdidit

eius cognōvit, dīcit, "Tē tua manus et amor has destroyed perdidit, miser! Est mihi quoque fortis for manus et amor in hoc factum. Amor mihi ¹²⁴ illā vīsā: having seen her.

vīrēs in vulnera dabit. Tē mortuum sequar, Ego et causa et comes mortis tuae erō. Tē, quem mors sōla ā mē ēripere poterat, mors ēripere nōn poterit. Et vōs, meī et eius parentēs, nōs in eōdem sepulcrō compōnite.
 Et tū, quae arbor sanguinem ūnius accēpit, quae nunc meum (sanguinem) quoque accipit, semper tenē signa sanguinis et habē semper ātra pōma, monumenta mortis."

monumenta

Hīs dictīs,¹²⁴ virgō in suam pectus eundem gladium mittit. Prope corpus amantis iacet.
 Verba eius deōs mōvērunt, parentēs mōvērunt.
 Color in pōmīs est āter, et corpora duōrum in eōdem sepulcrō requiēscunt.

requiēscunt

Plūra dē Midā

Fābulam dē Midā, quī quodcumque tangēbat, in aurum mūtāre poterat, lēgistī. Postquam liberāverat hōc mūnere sē liberāverat, aurum nōn iam amābat. Silvās et montēs habitābat. In primīs¹²⁵ deum Pāna, antra montium habitantem, liberāverat

¹²⁴Hīs dictīs: having said this, or after, when she had said this.

¹²⁵For meaning see "Athamas et Inō Poenam Dant." colēbat.

Mōns altissimus nōmine Tmōlus prope mare stat. Hīc Pān calamīs īnsonat,¹²⁶ et nymphae silvārum conveniunt ut audiant, Hīc Pān, ut, calamīs insonāns, ^{songs} carmina inter nymphās canit, dīcit carmina sua carmina Apollinis superāre. Quam ob rem ille in certāmen cum Apolline venit. Mōns Tmōlus legitur¹²⁷ quī arbitrium det.

finem
lyrā

Tmōlus, in monte suō sedēns, audire parat. Ille, deum silvārum spectāns, dīcit "In mē est nūlla mora." Pān calamīs īnsonat. Quī adsunt, nullum verbum dīcunt. Postquam ^{end} Pān finem canendī fēcit, Tmōlus oculōs ad Apollinem advertit. Deus pulcherrimus calamīs ^{lyre} nōn īnsonat sed lyrā. Apollō magnā cum arte lyrā īnsonat. Carmen eius Tmōlō placet.¹²⁸ Postquam ille fīnem canendī fēcit, sine morā Tmōlus dīcit Apollinem superāre Pāna.

Arbitrium Tmōlī omnibus placet, sed Midās, quī forte adest, dīcit arbitrium in-¹²⁶For the meaning of calamīs insonat, review the story "Pān et Sýrinx."

¹²⁷Compare leguntur of "Ulixēs et Circē."

¹²⁸For meaning see "Et Ulixēs et Ajax Arma Achillis Poscunt." nōmine Alcyonē. Cēyx coniugī suae cārissimus est. Ille dē viā coniugem certiōrem facit.¹³¹ Illa pallida fit et lacrimat. Diū tacet; tandem dīcit, "Cūr mē relinquere cupis? Ubi est tuus amor mei, ^{for me} quī magnus erat? Viane longa tibi placet? Sed, crēdō, per terrās via est: terram nōn timeō. Lūctum solum I shall bear feram; nōn timēbō. Mare tamen timeō.

 Planks
 tabulās dē nāvibus in lītore modo vīdī et saepe in sepulcrīs sine corporibus nōmīna lēgī. Sī tamen tibi persuādēre nōn possum, cārissime coniūnx, mē tēcum dūc. Domī manēre nōn cupiō. Quodcumque tū ferēs, ego quoque feram."

Ille verbīs et lacrimīs Alcyonēs movētur: magnus amor in pectore est. Sed neque viam dīmittere neque coniugem cāram in perīcula dūcere vult. Multa verba respondet; haec (verba) quoque, ^{by which} quibus sōlīs amantem movet, addit, "Longa nōbīs omnis mora est sed ego shall return tibi polliceor mē mox reditūrum esse." ^{when} Ille, ubi fīnem dīcendī fēcit, nāvem to be made ready et in mare dēdūcī parārī

¹³¹Certioorem facit: informs.

iubet. Alcyonē, ut nāvem parātam videt, iterum timet, iterum lacrimat. Illa ōscula coniugī dāns, miserrima dīcit "Valē". Cēȳx sine morā nāvem cōnscendit, et nāvis lītus relinquit. Nunc Alcyonē oculōs tollit et videt coniugem in nāve stantem. Ubi nāvis ā terrā procul abest neque Alcyonē oculīs vultūs virī iam cognōscere potest, dum potest, nāvem fugientem oculīs īnsequitur. Ubi haec (nāvis) quoque vidērī¹³² nōn iam potest, Alcyonē lacrimāns domum redit.

	Iam nāvis mediō in marī est, et ventī waves seem undās	undās tollunt. Undae caelum tangere videntur. Nāvis per undās agitur. Caelum et mare sunt ātra. Magnae undae in nāvem dēstumultus	cedunt. Magnus est tumultus. Hic (vir) lacrimās nōn retinet ; ille vocat eōs fēlicēs quī in terrā moriuntur et in tellūre pōnuntur: hic, manūs ad caelum tendēns, deōs subeunt	auxilium ōrat; illī frāter et pater subeunt, ¹³³ huic domus cum līberīs et quodcumque reliquerat ¹³²For meaning compare the form parārī and dēducī above.

¹³³Illī frāter et pater subeunt: to (that) one comes the thought of his brother and father, or better, (that) one thinks of his brother and father.
Huic: another.

(subeunt). Cēycī coniūnx subit; eam vocat. longs for dēsīderat Eam sōlam dēsīderat; laetus tamen est quod ea abest. Patriam suam quoque vidēre et moriēns in domum oculōs vertere cupit. Sed nōn nōvit ubi sit: tam ātra est nox. Magna unda in nāvem magnā vī cadit et sub undās sinks parts mergit nāvem mergit. Magna pars virōrum cum nāve pars pereunt; aliī tabulās et partēs (parts) nāvis tenent. Cēyx ipse tabulam tenet; tenēns, coniugem vocat. Ūrat ut undae ante oculōs il-līus (i.e., Alcyonēs) corpus suum ferant et ipse in tellūrem patriae pōnātur. Sed magna unda (eum) ōrantem et Alcyonem vocantem sub aquās mergit.

ignorant ignāra Intereā Alcyonē, ignāra hōrum malōrum, numerat coniugem exspectāns, noctēs et diēs numerat.
Omnēs deōs colit; ante omnēs, tamen, Iūnōnem safe tūtus ōrat ut coniūnx tūtus redeat et nūllamm to her (fēminam) sibi antepōnat.

Dea (Iūnō) ubi prō virō mortuō ōrārī 134 to Iris messenger nūntiae nōn iam fert, Iridī, nūntiae suae, vocātae, fīdissima sic dīcit, "Iri, fīdissima nuntia mea, i go Somnī celeriter ad sēdem deī. Somnī et iubē eum Sleep

134 Compare parārī above.

dream somnium ad Alcyonēn somnium, illam certiōrem faciēns dē morte coniugis, mittere." Iris iussa deae facere parat.

Magnum antrum Somnus habitat. Nullus sonus in domō eius est: neque canēs lātrant; neque ferae neque bovēs, neque arborēs, ventīs mōtae, neque hominēs sonum dant. Mediō in couch torus antrō est torus pulcher in quō deus ipse dor-miēns semper iacet. Circum hunc Somnia, multās formās habentia, iacent.

manibus moves aside Somnia dīmovet. Deus, oculōs, somnō gravēs, heavy tollēns, tandem quaerit cūr illa vēnerit. Et illa rēspondet: "O Somne, quī dēfessīs cor-poribus quiētem dās, iubē Somnia sub imāgine rēgis Cēycis ad Alcyonēn adīre et eam certiōrem dē morte coniugis facere. Hoc iubet Iūnō." Ubi iussa dīxit, Iris locum relinquit; nōn iam vim somnī ferre potest.

imitātur excitat Deus iussa facere parat. Ille ūnum dē Morpheus
 Somniīs, nōmine Morpheia, quī formās hominum arouses magnā arte imitātur, ē somnō excitat et eum ad Alcyonēn adīre et illam dē morte coniugis certiōrem facere iubet. Hōc factō, deus in torō caput grave dēpōnit et sē somnō iterum dat.

Ille (i.e., Morpheus) per noctem volat et mox in urbem Haemoniam pervenit. Vultūs et formam Cēycis imitātur. Mortuō similis, ante torum coniugis miserae stat. Aqua dē barbā beard dēfluit barbā et crīnibus virī dēfluit. Tum lacrimāns dīcit: "Cognōscisne Cēyca, coniugem tuum, an vultūs meī morte mūtātī sunt? Mē spectā: cognoscēs et inveniēs prō instead of Prayers
 vōta coniuge tuō coniugis umbram! Vōta tua mihi auxilium nōn dedērunt; perī. Ventī Aegaeō in marī nāvem cēpērunt et sub undās mersērunt. Unda mē, tuum nōmen clāmantem, sub aquās mersit. Tūtus ad tē nōn redībō. Ego ipse haec tibi dīcō. Dā lacrimās; mē unlamented indēplōrātum indēplōrātum ad Īfernās sēdēs mittere nōlī."

Haec, vōce Cēycis, Morpheus dīcit.

Illa ingemit, lacrimās dat, et per somnum eum to embrace complectī complectī petēns, āera tenuem¹³⁵ complectitur.
 Exclāmat: "Manē! Cūr mē relinquis? Tēcum ībō." Illa vōce suā ē somniō excitātur. Somnus eam relinquit. Eum, quem modo vīdit, oculīs quaerit.

Ubi eum invenire nōn potest, lūctū ducta, ¹³⁵For meaning see "Erychthōn Cererī Poenam Dat."

Nōn nōvit quis sit (procul abest), sed, in Alas
 heu memoriā tenēns mortem virī suī, dīcit, "Heu, miser, quīcumque¹³⁶ es, et coniūnx quoque, sī one (any) quae (coniūnx) tibi est." Nunc undae nearer propius corpus propius agunt. Illa cogn. scit: est coniūnx! "Ille est!" exclāmat. Pectus percutiēns, crīnēs scindēns, et manūs ad Cēyca tendēns, dīcit, "Sīc, ō cāre coniūnx, sīc ad sē me redīs?" Corpus in mare mittit, et mittēns full plēnum in avem mūtātur. Dum volat, sonum plēnum complaint querellae querellae dat. Ut ad corpus sine sanguine pervenit, corpus ālīs complectitur et ōscula It is uncertain rōstrō dat. Dubium est utrum¹³⁷ Cēyx hoc sēnsit an¹³⁷ vultūs, undīs mōtōs, tollere he seemed vīsus sit; ille tamen sēnsit, et tandem in avem ille quoque mūtātur. Nunc quoque avēs, amōre manente, coniugium servant. Mare habitant et per undās volant.

rēgiō genere

Royal Birth, kind Avis dē Rēgiō Genere

The diver
Mergus quoque est avis dē rēgiō

¹³⁶For meaning see quaecumque in "Pulchritūdo Sua Pīcō Nocet."

¹³⁷For meaning of utrum...an, see "Iāsōn Vellus Aureum Capit."

genere. Fīlius Priamī, rēgis Trōiae, et frāter Hectoris fortis erat. Ille nisi as a youth strange iuvenis nova fāta ¹³⁸ sēsisset, nōmen equal pār Hectorī habuisset. Nōn eadem māter same illīs erat sed idem pater. Hic iuvenis nōmine erat Aesacus. Urbēs nōn amābat; montēs et silvās habitābat; nōn saepe Trōiam adībat.

Ōlim ille, per silvam errāns, nympnam drying siccantem crīnēs siccantem in rīpā flūminis vīdit, et statim amor pectus incendit. Illa vīsa (= quam ille vīderat) celeriter fūgit, quam pursued Aesacus īsecūtus est. Anguis, forte in herbā lacēns, pedem (virginis) fugientis dente strīnxit (= vulnerāvit) et venēnum in corpore reliquit. Illa moriēns mediā in fugā fell cecidit. Aesacus corpus eius mortuum com-plectitur, clamāns, "H eu mihi, quī, tē se-brought on intulī quēns, tibi hoc malum intulī. Sed hoc nōn timui. Ego et anguis te in mortem misimus: vulnus ab angue, causa ā me data est. Mihi culpa ¹³⁹ blame
maior culpa quam illī (that is, anguī) est!

¹³⁸ For meaning see "Et Ulixēs et Āiax Arma Achillis Poscunt."

¹³⁹ For meaning find this word in "Pyramus et Thisbē."

Sed mortem tuam meā morte ulcīscar.¹⁴⁰

Ubi fīnem dīcendī fēcit, altissimum next proximum saxum proximum marī ascendit et dē saxō in mare corpus mīsit. Sed Tēthys, dea mare habitāns, (eum) cadentem accēpit, corpore pennīs with feathers (having been) covered. tēctō eius pennīs tēctō.
 Amāns tamen vīvere nōluit. did not want Ut ālās in corpore sēserat, altē subvolāvit et himself iterum corpus ad mare mīsit; sibi tamen nōn nocuit. Iterum et iterum sic viam mortis petēbat. Corpus sub undās mittēbat, sine fīne petēns viam mortis. Amor illum thin legs macrum fēcit; longa sunt crūra; caput ā corpore longē abest. Mare amat et nōmen tenet quod ille sub mare sē mergit. Avis the diver
 mergus est nōmine mergus.

Pygmalion et Imāgō Pulchra

Pygmalion, omnēs fēminās fugiēns, sine ivory ebore coniuge vīvēbat. Intereā ex ebore imāginem virginis (nūlla virgō est pulchrior) fēcit, for (of) which cuius amor pectus incendit. Virginis vērāe¹⁴¹ sunt vultus, quam vīvere crēdas.

¹⁴⁰ Compare form of sequar, found in "Fīlia Rēgis Pat-riam Suam Hostibus Trādit."

¹⁴¹ For meaning see "Cēyx et Alcyonē."

Pygmalion opus suum (that is, imaginem) miratur, et amor non veri corporis pectus incendit. Illi (i.e., imagini) oscula dat (having been) et (oscula) reddi putat; illa tacta touched seems non ebur esse videtur. Munera, puellis placita, dat et velaminibus pulchris imaginem adorns ornatur. ornatur Festal
 festa dies Veneris venerat et omnes deam colabant, cum Pygmalion, ante aras stans, oravit, "Si vos, o dei, omnia dare po-let there be testis, sit coniunx mihi - virgo similis eburneae meae (virgini)" (non aude¹⁴² dicere, "Eburnea virgo mea mihi coniunx sit").
 Venus, quae ipsa aderat, sensit, tamen, quid meant vota¹⁴³ illa vellent.

Pygmalion, ut domum rediit, imaginem puellae suae vivere videt. Ille miratur et. doubting dubitans, eam tangit; illa non iam ebur living vivum sine vita sed corpus vivum est! Veneri mag-lips nis gratias agit et ora non falsa ore suo presses premit. Virgo, ut oscula data sensit, at the pariter oculos ad caelum attollens, amantem pariter same time cum caelo vidit.

¹⁴²For meaning see "Plura de Mida."

¹⁴³For meaning see "Ceyx et Alcyon."

Dea (Venus) adest coniugiō quod ipsa fēcit. Pygmalionē coniuge bonā fēlix est, et coniūnx virō suō bonō (fēlix est).

vies Arachnē cum Pallade Certat

mōnstrat	Nōn sine poenā mortālēs cum deīs as shows certant, quod haec fābula mōnstrat. lānifica	to whom of weaving wool Dea Pallas, cui ars lānifica greatest maxima	maxima est, audīverat virginem mortālem praise laudem	laudem huius artis sibi (that is, Palladī) clāra	nōn dare. Illa neque genere neque locō clāra (- īnsignis) sed arte sōlā (clāra) erat; parvīs opibus ¹⁴⁴ et dē genere nōn clārō erant parentēs. Illa tamen, nōmine Arachnē, Lydian per urbēs Lūdās arte lānificā nōmen clārum habēbat. Nymphae silvās et undās saepe re- linquēbant ut eius opus admirābile spectārent. Facta vėlāmina spectāre cupiēbant et illam vėlāmina facientem: illa tantā cum arte manūs et digitōs ¹⁴⁵ movēbat ut scīrēs you would know had been taught. scīrēs	eam ā Pallade doctam esse. Hoc tamen denies negat	ipsa negat et dīcit, "Dea mēcum certet; ¹⁴⁶

¹⁴⁴For meaning see "Erysichthōn Cererī Poenam Dat."

¹⁴⁵See digitīs in "Hecuba in Canem Mūtatur."

¹⁴⁶Dea certet: let the goddess vie.

nihil	nothing sī mē superābit, nihil est quod negem." of an old woman anūs sūmit baculum	Pallas fōrmam anūs sūmit; staff crīnēs anūs capitī addit et manū baculum sustineat	tenet, quod corpus annīs grave sustineat. Old age senectūs	Sīc virginī dīcit, "Senectūs fert nōn omnia mala quae fugiāmus, sed multa docet. Advice cōnsilium	Cōnsilium meum exaudī. Inter mortālēs nōmen maximum artis lānificae tibi pete; deae (that is, Palladī) tamen laudem dā pardon veniam	et veniam tuīs dictīs (= verbīs) rogā; For nam	veniam illa tibi rogantī dabit. Nam ars tua ā deā docta est."
vix	with difficulty, scarcely Illa īrāta, vix manum retinēns, ignāra quis fēmina sit, hīs dictīs respondet: "Senectūs tē nōn docuit sed mentī tibi nocuit, quae hoc cōnsilium Let her hear mihi dās. Audiāt illās vōcēs (= illa verba) sī quae ¹⁴⁷ fīlia tibi est. Satis con- siliī mihi in mē est. Veniam nōn rogābō. Cūr nōn ipsa venit? Cūr hoc certāmen fugit?" Tum dea, "Adest!" dīcit: fōrmam anūs dispōnit ¹⁴⁸ et deam sē mōnstrat. Aliae quae

¹⁴⁷Compare in "Cēyx et Alcyonē" the words sī quae (coniunx) tibi est.

¹⁴⁸For meaning see "Cadmus in Anguem Mūtātur." adsunt deam colunt; virgō pallida fit sed deam nōn timet. Illa, certāmen artis lānificæ cum deā cupiēns, mala petit; nam quis mortālis sine poenā cum deō aut deā certat? Neque Pallas certāmen fugit neque plūra puellæ stolidæ dīcit.

	Sine morā illæ certāmen ineunt. In tēlā	web old tēlā fābulās veterēs dēdūcunt: Pallas veterēs	old maximā arte fābulās veterēs de deīs et de poenīs mortālium, quī cum deīs certāre audent, dēdūcit; Arachnē multās fabulās de amōribus deōrum et hominum tam admirābilī arte dēdūcit ut figurās vēra corpora esse crēdās.
vitium	defect Nōn ūnum vitium in illō opere Pallas irā	vidēre potest. Irā puellæ ducta, vēlāmina rādium	(that is, opus) scindit, et, ut rādium laqueō	tenēbat, caput Arachnēs percutit. Cum virgō collum	with a noose neck misera, hoc nōn ferēs, laqueō collum pendēret	had bound was hanging ligāvisset et pendēret, Pallas dīxit, "Vive, puella stolidā, pendē tamen; hæc timoris	poena tua tuō generī et nepōtibus causa of fear timōris sit. Nōn sine poenā hominēs cum deīs certāre audent!"

Ea (Pallas) discēdēns¹⁴⁹ puellam sūcīs herbārum spargit: statim, sūcīs tāctī, crīnēs virginis dēfluunt quibuscum et nose nārēs et aurēs (dēfluunt); parvum caput fit; tōtō corpore quoque parva est; digitī prō side latere stāmen arānea crūrībus in latere sunt; alvus cētera habet thread Spider de quō tamen illa stāmen dūcit. Arānea fit.
 Semper pendet et stāmina facit.

Dē Ave Quae Comes Minervae Erat

Pulchra fīlia rēgī Corōneō was uxōrem multī virī uxōrem (= conjugem) petēbant.
 Sed fōrma (= pulchritūdō) eī nocuit; nam solēbat was accustomed tardīs slow cum, ut solēbat, per lītora tardīs pedibus īret, deus maris eam vīdit et statim amor pectus eius incendit. Illa fugiēns per hard mollī lītora, durō lītore relictō,¹⁵⁰ soft sand mollī arēnā impediēbātur.¹⁵¹ Et deōs et hominēs vocābat; vōx ad nūllum mortālem pervēnit. Virgō (that is, Diāna) tamen, prō virgine mōta, auxilium dedit. Virgō bracchia ad caelum tendēbat; to be covered began coepērunt bracchia pennīs tegī coepērunt. Illa ¹⁴⁹ See discēdentem in "Cēȳx et Alcyonē".

¹⁵⁰ Durō lītore relictō: having left the hard shore.

¹⁵¹ For meaning see "Midas".

pectus manibus percutere coepit, neque iam pectus neque manūs habēbat. Currēbat, neque, ut ante, mollī arēnā impediēbātur: super terram tollēbātur et mox altē per āera ferēbātur.
 Avis comes Minervae addita est.

Nōn semper tamen comes deae erat. Nam Ōlim Minerva parvumpuerum sine mātrem, cistā ^{box} nōmine Erichthonium, in cistā posuerat quam to be watched three servandam tribus sorōribus dederat cum order lēge lēge nē eam (that is, cistam) aperīrent. watched speculābātur Avis in arbore sedēns speculābātur quid sorōrēs facerent. Duae dē tribus sorōribus et atque Pandrosos atque Hersē, cistam servāvērunt neque aperīre voluērunt; Aglauros tamen timidās timidās sorōrēs vocāvit et eam (cistam) aperuit, in quā erant puer et anguis. Avis haec facta deae dīxit. Quam ob rem Minerva eam comitem suam esse nōn iam volēbat.

pestis invādit

Pestilence Comes upon Pestis Rēgnam Aeacī Invādit

Ōlim rēx Ōenopiae Aeacus erat, quī tamen terram Aegīnam dē nōmine māttris suae hating called perōsa vocāvit. Iūnō, perōsa terram dictam ā fēminā quam Iuppiter amāverat, pestem in hominēs mīsit.

	Prīmō haec (pestis) canēs et avēs et came upon bovēs et ferās invāsīt. Agricola ¹⁵² mīrātur strong labōrēs validōs	validōs bovēs inter opus in agrīs cadere. ācer	high spirited formerly quondam	Equus, ācer quondam, nōn iam cursū about to die certāre cupiēns, gemit moritūrus. In silvīs et agrīs et viīs corpora iacent; odōrēs	odōrēs āera vitiant.
vitiant Mox hominēs miserōs pestis invādit et holds sway fever dominātur	in tōtā urbe dominātur. Maximus aestus cor-aestus	pora capit: illī quōs pestis invāsīt nōn torum, nōn vēlāmina ferre possunt; in dūrā terrā corpora dēpōnunt, neque terra aestū Doctors
medicī	eōs liberat sed accipit. Medicī pestem dis-dispellere	pellere nōn possunt; (medicōs) ipsōs quoque for each one cuique	pestis invādit. Fīnis pestis cuique Each one est mors. Quisque domum suam fugit, nam cuique, ignārō vērae causae, domus causa mortis vidētur. Aliōs paene mortuōs errāre per viās, dum sē sustinēre possunt, vidērēs, aliōs lacrimantēs et in terrā iacentēs, vix oculōs ad caelum advertentēs, bracchia ad caelum tendentēs, aliōs mortuōs ubi mors ¹⁵²For meaning see "Latōna Agricola in Rānas Mūtāt."

tot illōs cēperat. Aeacus, cum tot ^{so many} hominēs morī vidēret, perōsus vitam relinquere cupiēquō ^{Where} illīc bat. Quō oculōs adverterat, illīc (= in illō locō) multa corpora mortua suōrum of his people vidēbat.

^{was} In urbe altum templum Iovis fuit, quō multī miserī veniēbant ut prō patre aut filiō, prō mātrem aut filiā, prō uxōre aut husband marītō, prō frātre aut sorōre rēgem deōrum orārent. Saepe dum prō uxōre marītus, prō arās filiō pater verba orantia dicit, ante arās ^{altars} ipsās moritur. Saepe taurī, ad templum sacerdos ^{priest} ductī, dum sacerdos vōta facit et vīnum inter cornua fundit, nullō vulnere cadunt.

Dum Aeacus ipse sacrificia Iovī prō sē et mūgītūs patriā et filiīs tribus facit, taurus mūgītūs horribilēs dat et sine vulnere cadit. Ante templum et arās ipsās corpora mortuōrum iacent. Aliī laqueō mortī sē dedērant ut morte mortis timōrem dispellerent. Tantīs malīs mōtus, rēx orat: "ō Iūppiter, sī nōn you are said falsō dīceris Aeginam mātrem meam amāvisse,¹⁵³ pater meus esse, aut mihi

¹⁵³Dīceris Aeginam mātrem meam amāvisse: it is said that you loved Aegina my mother.

fulgōre tonitru meōs my people redde aut me quoque in sepulcrō lightning thunder pōne." Ille (Iuppiter) fulgōre et tonitru signum dedit.
 iuxtā nearby Forte fuit iuxtā arbor, Iovī sacra, per ants formīcae quam multae formīcae, pondus magnum parvō ōre ferentēs, ībant. Ille dum numerum citizens cīvēs mīrātar, dicit, "Tot cīvēs, pater, quot¹⁵⁴ quot formīcae in hac arbore sunt, mihi dā et fill trembled complē urbem complē." Alta arbor tremuit tremuit et sonum, rāmīs sine ventō mōtis, dedit; rēx, timōre mōtus, ōscula terrae et arborī dedit.

Nox subit et somnus corpora dēfessa hominum tenet. Ante oculōs Aeacī iacentis (= dormientis) arbor eadem adesse et in rāmīs same number seemed totidem totidem formīcās ferre vīsa est animal animalia et tremere et animalia (that is, formīcās) in terrā spargere, quae statim māiora et māiora fiēbant, mox sē tollēbant upright ērectō et ērectō corpore stābant, numerum pedum et ātrum colōrem dēpōnēbant et fōrmam hūmānam sumēbant. Somnus abit; mane est. Maximus tumultus in regiā est; rēx vōcēs hominum, ut ¹⁵⁴ Tot...quot.: so many...as.

solēbat, audire videtur. Dum credit hōs quoque somnī esse, fīlius eius venit et ēgredere ^{Come out} dicit, "ēgredere, pater, quod tē laetum faciat vidēbis." ^{having gone out} Ille ēgressus tot hominēs quot in somnō viderat vidit, quī adeunt et rēgem salūtant salūtant. Ille Iovī magnās grātiās agit, et cīvibus novīs urbem et agrōs dat. Cīvēs Myrmidonās ¹⁵⁵ vocat, quī ex formicīs nātī sunt.

Boreās ¹⁵⁶ Ōrithyiam Rapit ^{four} Erechtheō, rēgī Athēnārum, erant quatquattuor tuor fīlii et totidem filiae, quārum duae ^{pulchritūdine} parēs formā erant. Altera nōmine Prōcris coniuge Cephalō fēlix erat; alteram, Ōrithyiam ¹⁵⁶ ¹⁵⁷ nōmine, Boreās amābat coniugemque petēbat, ^{as a son-in-law} ^{scorned} --que generum quem generum pater virginis sprēvit, sprēvit maritum virgō (sprēvit).

Ille, cum neque virginī neque patrī entreaties precibus eius precibus persuādere posset, irā mōtus, ^{usual} solita quae illī ventō solita est, dixit: "Cūr mea

¹⁵⁵ Supposedly derived from the Greek word meaning ant.

¹⁵⁶ The North Wind.

¹⁵⁷ Coniugemque petēbat: et coniugem pētēbat.

weapons tēla solita, vīrēs īramque, reliquī precēsque mōvī, quae mihi nōn solitae sunt?
 Et virgō et pater mē sprēvērunt. Vīs, nōn precēs, meum tēlum solitum est. Vī ego clouds struck nūbēs per caelum agō; vī, mari percussō, maximās undās faciō nāvēsque sub undās summergō; vī validās quercūs vertō; idem ego, cum frātrēs mēos in caelo invēnī, tanta vi such certō ut aer īsonet ignēsque ē nūbibus ēmicent. Hāc vī solitā Ōrīthīya coniunx ought to be sought petenda est. Precibus ego nōn iam illam petam, sed vī. Ego gener Erechtheī erō." Hīs dictīs, Boreās ālīs tellūrem mareque embracing amplexus mōvit. Ille amāns Ōrīthīyam, ālīs amplexus, did cease dēstitit rapuit neque cum pondere cārō volāre dēstitit walls of the Cicones moenia dum in moenia Ciconum pervēnit. Illic Ōrīthīya coniūnx Boreae māter duōrum puerōrum became facta est; quī cētera mātris, ālās patris habuērunt. Hae ālae tamen cum corpore nōn nātae sunt, nam dum barba aberat, sine pennīs erant Calcis zētēsque puerī fuērunt; mox pariter¹⁵⁸ cum barbā ālae in corporibus nātae sunt.

¹⁵⁸ For meaning see "Pygmalion et Opus Pulchrum."

Thēseus et Ariadnē

Post multa facta mala Mēdēa, dē quā fābulās ante lēgistī, Iāsone relictō, in urbem Athēnās pervēnit, quam Aegeus rēx acmātrimonium cēpit inque mātrimonium dūxit. Iam post multa facta fortia aderat Thēseus, filiū quem invidiā pater Aegeus nōn cognōvit. Mēdēa, ^{jealousy} invidiā interficere ducta, illum interficere cupiēbat. Illa miscuit venēnum, ab ōre Cerberī canis captum, ^{mixed} miscuit quod pater, ignārus quis Thēseus esset, pōculum filiō, ut hostī, dedit. Thēseus manū ^{cup} pōculum capulō sūmpserat, cum pater in capulō ^{hilt} eburneō gladiī, quem Thēseus gerēbat, signa suī generis cognōvit pōculumque ab ōre dēiēcit. Illa mortem per magica carmina effūgit.

Pater, filiō fēlix, magnās grātiās deīs agit. Omnēs Athēniēnsēs mūnera ad templa deōrum ferunt; ignēs sunt in arīs, ante quās multī bovēs cadunt. Omnēs convīvia agitant et fortia facta Thēseī inter vīnum camunt.
 Rēgia carminibus precibusque hominum cōsonat ūllus ^{any} ^{sad} tristis neque ūllus tristis locus totā in urbe est. cūrae ^{cares} Neque tamen cūrae aberant, nam Mīnōs, rēx Crētae, filiō Androgeō per Athēniēnsēs inferre ^{to bring on} interfectō, bellum inferre parabat ut mortem filiī ulcīscerētur. Hic (Mīnōs) est idem cui Scylla patriam per amōrem trādīdit.

Mīnōs, bellō gessō ^{fought} Athēniēnsibusque ^{demanded} ^{seven} septem ^{superātīs}, poposcit ut septem puerī totidemque puellae Crētam mitterentur, quī Mīnōtaurō, ^{monster} mōnstrō, taurī capite, hominis corpore, trāde-^{labyrinth} labyrinthō ^{rentur}. Hoc mōnstrum in labyrinthō, ex quō ^{having entered} ^{had been} ingressus nēmo ingressus exīre posset, inclūsum ^{shut up} inclūsum erat erat.
bis ^{Twice} Bis septem puerīs totidemque puellis tertium mōnstrō trādītīs, iam tertium sacrificium dāndum erat. Thēseus comes hīs puerīs puellīsque miserīs ire cupiēbat, ut cum Mīnōtaurō vēlīs pugnāret. Iam nāvis nigrīs ¹⁵⁹ ^{sails} vēlīs, signīs lūctūs, parāta est et trīstēs patrēs matrēs-que lacrimantēs filiōs filiāsque complectuntur.
Inter quōs est Aegeus, quī, filiū fortem iterum iteramque amplexus, dīcit, "O Thēseu, filiī mī, quī post tot annōs mihi redditus es, cūr mē senem relinquis? Sī tū perībīs, ego quoque perībō. Sī tamen auxiliō Minervae, quae urbem nostram servat, mōnstrum superābis, cum tū rediēns montēs patriae tuae iterum

¹⁵⁹ For meaning see "Mēdēa Senem in Iuvenem Mūtāt." vidēbis, nāvis alba vēla prō nigrīs ferat,¹⁶⁰ ut, signō vīsō, sciam tē tūtum esse. Iamque valē."

Thēseus et aliī puerī puellaeque nāvem cōnscendunt. In lītore stantēs, parentēs nāvem oculīs sequuntur dum nigra vēla vidērī possunt.

Ubi nāvis Crētā pervēnit, Ariadnē, fīlia Mīnōis rēgis, Thēsea vīsum amat. Illa aēcum dīcit, "Heu, iuvenis tantae fōrmae moritūrus! Ille, sī auxiliō deōrum Mīnōtaurum superābit, tamen ē labyrinthō exīre nōn poterit, cuius ad līmen ^{entrance} Daedalus, quī il-lum fēcit, vix ^{could} redīre potuit. ^{But} At tamen vīvet: eum servābō."

līmen at glomus ēvolvēns prōgreditur āriter filō relēctō

Illa, hīs dictīs, iuvenī cārō ^{ball of} glomus thread dat ūsumque docet. Thēseus, glomus unroll ^{walks} ēvolvēns, ut it, per labyrinthum prōgreditur.
 Cum Mīnōtaurō ^{fiercely} āriter pugnat et eum interficit. Tum ille, filō ^{thread wound up} relēctō, ad līmen redit.

Iam ille, Ariadnē raptā vēlīsque datīs, island
 Insulam Dīam Insulam pervēnit, ubi ille crūdēlis ¹⁶⁰Nāvis ferat: let the ship bear.

¹⁶¹For meaning see "Arachnē cum Pallade Certat." comitem dormientem reliquit. Illas cum somnus abiit, Thēsea nōn vidit sed nāvem ā lītore discēdentem. Ubi sē relictam esse sēnsit, vēla nāvis oculīs sequēns, dum poterat, pectus percutiēns dīxit: "Ō crūdē-deserted dēsertō lis, mēne in lītore dēsertō relinquis?

 Hāsne grātiās mihi agis? Per mē tū, Mīnōtaurō interfectō, ad līmen labyrinthī redīre could (have been able) potuistī. Patriam meam parentēs-que cārōs reliquī. Redī mēque tēcum tolle. farther longius
 At nāvis longius longiusque abit; vix nunc certē vēla vidēre possum. Vir tam crūdēlis, certē surely peperit tē hūmāna mater nōn peperit, gave birth sed ferōx rūsus leaena. Ego misera patriam meam nōn rūsus again vidēbō, tū tūtus tamen Athēnās redīs." Sōla in dēsertō lītore stāns, nāvemque discēdentem spectāns, sic virō nonaudienti clamavit. had been left Dia, in quā insulē Ariadnē relictā erat, ā Bacchō deō incolēbātur. Ille virginem fōrmōsam fōrmōsam (= pulchram) amāvit, et, ubi ea ē corōnam vitā discessit, corōnam eius, dē capite sidera sūmptam in caelum immisit, ut inter sidera esset. Illa (corōna) per āera volāvit, dum-gemmae que volābat, gemmae in ignēs (that is, sidera) mūtatae sunt, et in caelō, fōrmā corōnae manente, sunt.

immemor
 cōnspectum

Nōn sine poenā tamen Thēseus comitem fōrmōforgetting reliquerat. Poenam dedit: nam immemor verbōrum patris, montibus patriae vīsīs, nāve nigra vēla ferente, ad terram adiit. Pater, ex altō saxō mare prōspectāns fīliumque exspectāns, ubi nāvis cum nigrīs vēllīs in cōn-believed spectum vēnit, crēdidit fīlium interfectum esse. Lūctū mōtus, in mare sē prōiēcit et periit.

Galatēa et Cyclōps

Galatēa, maris nymp̄ha fōrmōsa, Hērēi Acis
 Dōridisque fīlia erat. Ab Ācide, iuvene fōrmōsō, amābatur et eum amābat. Cyclōps quoque Polyphēmus nōmine, mōnstrum Siciliam habitāns, eam amābat; illa hunc nōn amābat. Omnēs Cyclōpēs ūnum oculum mediā in forehead fronte habent. Altissimī validissimīque tear away overturn ēvertere sunt: montēs dīvellere arborēsque ēvertere possunt. Illī in montibus Siciliāe prope sheep ovēs Aetnam montem ovēs servant.

Polyphēmus nymp̄ham sine fīne petēb attention
 Iam eī (that is, Polyphēmō) cūra fōrmāe erat:

pectēbat iam crīnēs horribilēs ^{combed} pectēbat, iam barbam trimmed recidēbat recidēbat, iam ferōs vultūs in aquā spectābat hill collem compōnēbatque. Quōdam diē ille collem prope mare ascendit atque illīc sedet, ovibus pāstōrem shepherd fistulā Shepherd's pipe pāstōrem sequentibus. Fistulā multa dē fōrmā Galatēae canit. Montēs undaeque carminibus eius cōnsonant. Nympha sub saxō hiding verba latēns cum Ācide suō latēns dicta hīs similia audit:

"Ō fōrmōsissima nymphārum quae mare colunt, Galatēa, cūr mē semper fugis? Sī mē well bene bene nōvissēs, nōn fugerēs. Sunt mihi pars living montis, antra pendentia vīvō saxō, quae cold hiemem neque aestum neque hiemem sentiunt. Multa pōma in rāmīs arborum pendent, quae manum tuam exspectant. Hae ovēs omnēs mihi sunt, multae quoque in vallibus silvīsque errant, should multae in antrīs sunt. Neque sī forte rogēs, ask how many tibi dīcere possim quot (ovēs) sint: pauperis est numerāre ovēs.

Iam caput ē marī extolle, iam, Galatēa, scorn venī neque mīnera mea sperne. Certē ego mē nōvī: modo imāginem meam in fonte vidī, fōrmaque mea mihi videntī placuit. Vidē how big quantus quantus sim: nōn maior quam hoc corpus est Iuppiter in caelō. Crīnēs meī in vultūs umerōs	shoulders impudent umerōsque tegunt. Unus est mihi clipeō	oculus mediā in fronte, sed similis magnō shield clipeō.

tantum miserere	Et pater meus in undīs vestrīs dominātur. ¹⁶² Only - pity Tantum mei miserere ¹⁶³ precēsque exaudi. Tē fulmen	sōlam timeō, quī Iovem et caelum et fulmen, thunder- bolt cōpia	tēlum Iovis, nōn timeō. Sed cūr mē fugis scorned neque omnēs? Cūr, Cýclōpe sprētō, Ācin amās anteponisque mihi Ācin? Utinam ille tibi nōn chance placēret! Tantum cōpia dētur; ¹⁶⁴ ille sentiet quantae vīrēs mihi sint. Corpus illius dīvel- your lam atque per agrōs perque undās vestrās for you spargam. Tantus amor tui in pectore meō are moved est, neque tū, Galatēa, movēris."

Hīs dictīs, locum relinquit atque per silvās collēsque errat cum Galatēam Ācinque ignārōs invenit. Illa, timōre mōta, sub undās sē prōicit, et Ācis fugit, clamāns, "Fer mihi auxilium, Galatēa! Ferte (auxilium), parentēs, et (mē) peritūrum¹⁶⁵ ad rēgna vestra ¹⁶²For meaning see "Pestis Rēgnum Aeacī Invadit."

¹⁶³Singular command.

¹⁶⁴Cōpia dētur: let a chance be given.

¹⁶⁵Compare the form moritūrus in the story "Pestis Rēgnum Aeacī Invadit." admittite!" Cyclōps eum īnsequitur partemque ē monte raptam mittit, quae Ācin tōtum tegit.

rubrō āmissō appāret caeruleus

Sanguis ē tellūre, sub quā Ācis erat, fluit, quī mox, colōre rubrō ^{red} āmissō, aqua clear clāra fit. Statim iuvenis in flūmine stāns appears except that dark sea-blue appāret; quī nisi quod maior, caeruleus tōtō in ōre est, quod cornua habet, Ācis est.

Galatēa eum in flūmen mūtāvit, quod nōmen iuvenis tenet.

Scylla et Glaucus

Quondam (= ōlim) Scylla maximā fōrmā before
priusquam nautārum quō modō

nympha maris erat priusquam mōnstrum, timor sailors nautārum, facta est, Haec fābula dīcit how quō modō illa in mōnstrum horribilem mūtāta sit.

Ut nymp̄ha fōrmōsa per lītora ingredi-tur, Glaucus, novus deus maris, eam videt et whatever amat, Ille quaecumque verba crēdit (eam) fugientem morārī posse dīcit. Illa tamen swift top of the mountain celeris summum fugit timōreque celeris in summum montem marī proximum pervenit. Hīc morātur et tūta locō, ignāra utrum mōnstrum deusne (= an deus) ille sit, admirātur colōrem tergum	atque crīnēs caeruleōs tegentēs umerōs ultimās	back lowest tergumque atque ultimās partēs corporis piscī	fish piscī similīs. Ille eam morārī sentit et dīcit: "Nōn mōnstrum, virgō, ego sum sed deus aquārum. Quondam tamen mortālis eram; I was tum quoque mare mihi placēbat, nam modo now rētia	nets rētia plēna piscium ducēbam, modo in saxō arundinem	sedēns arundinem tenēbam. Sunt lītora meadow

prātō	prātō proxima quōrum alterā in parte undae, alterā in parte herbae sunt, quās neque ovēs pecudēs	cattle have cropped carpsērunt	neque pecudēs carpsērunt neque manūs have touched hominum tetigērunt. Ego prīmus in illā captivōs	herbā sēdī ut piscēs captivōs (= quōs cēperam) numerārem. Piscēs, herbā carptā, sē movēre in terrā ut in aquā coepērunt. ¹⁶⁶ I was hesitating Dum morābar mirābarque, omnēs piscēs in undās suās fūgērunt, dominō novō lītoreque relictīs. Causam quaerō, utrum deus hoc fēcerit sūcusne herbae. 'Quae herba tamen tantās vīrēs habet?' mēcum dīxī. Dum mirābar ¹⁶⁶For meaning see "Dē Ave Quae Comes Minervae Erat." momordī	manū herbās carpsī dentibusque momordī cum	chewed nātūrae	pectus meum amōre alterius nātūrae rapī	to resist resistere	sēnsī. Neque diū resistere potuī et dixī.	never to be visited again numquam	"Terra numquam repetenda,	valē!" dignum	corpusque sub undās mersī. Deī maris, cum	worthy mē acceptum dignum inter deōs esse crēderent.

	Ūceanum ¹⁶⁷ Tēthynque ¹⁶⁸ coniugem rogāvērunt ut me mortālī nātūrā liberārent. Hī, carmine	hundred centum	iterum iterumque dictō, mē aquīs centum	ordered flūminum corpus meum lavāre iussērunt. Iussā	I remember meminī	fēcī. Haec bene meminī	neque cētera mēns	mēns mea sēnsit. Quae (that is, mēns) post-	different quam rediit, alium mē tōtō corpore quam modo	I had been same fueram neque eundem mente recēpī: tum prīmam ego hanc barbā caeruleam crīnēsque meōs, quī umerōs tergumque tegunt, magnōsque umerōs bracchiaque caerulea ultimāsque partēs piscī similīs vidī. Haec fābula dicit	I became I am quō modō factus sim quid sim. Quid haec prōdest	fōrma, deīs maris placita, quid mihi prōdest ¹⁶⁹	things rēbus	deum esse, sī tū hīs rēbus nōn movēris?"

¹⁶⁷Sea-god, father of the sea-nymphs and river-gods.

¹⁶⁸Sea-goddess, wife of Oceanus, and mother of the sea-nymphs and river-gods.

¹⁶⁹quid mihi prodest: what good to me is?

Scylla deum haec dīcentem plūraque dictūrum scorned reliquit atque ille sprētus Cīrcēn, deam vīribus magicīs, quae hominēs in ferās vertēvertēbat bat(= mūtābat), petīvit. past praeter Ille praeter multās terrās maximā vī nāvit moxque in rēgnū Cīrcēs pervēnit.
 Postquam ā Cīrcē in rēgiā acceptus est, precor haec dīxit: "Dea, deī miserēre,¹⁷⁰ I beg precor.
 Tū sōla mihi auxilium ferre potes, sī ego shouldseem dignus (esse) vīdear. Quantaē vīrēs sciō herbārum sint, bene sciō, quī illīs (herbīs) mūtātus sum. Ut causam cūrae meae scīrēs, in lītore Italicō Scyllam vīdī amāvīque.
 Quid prōdest precēsque prōmissaque verbaque sprēta tibi dīcere? Virgō mē sprētum fūgit.
 At tū, sī any quae vīrēs carminum sunt, ōre sacrō sive carmen movē sive maiōrēs sunt vīrēs herbārum, use ūtere herbīs ūtere. Neque rogō ut mē hōc amōre liberēs (hoc nōn cupiō) sed ut illa (that is, Scylla) partem amōris ferat."

At Cīrcē (nam amor Glaucī pectus eius incendēbat) haec verba respondit, "Quid tibi ¹⁷⁰For meaning see "Galatēa et Cūclops." prōdest virginem nōlentem neque eōdem amōre captam sequī? Tū per tē ipsum dig-nus amārī es, et, sī volēs, tū amāberis.

 Nō dubius sīs utque fidēs fōrmae tuae tibi adsit, ego, cum dea sin, cum carmine et herbā tantum possim(= tantās vīrēs habeam), ut ego tua sim, precor. (Eam)(tē) spernentem sperne, amantem amā."

(Deae) haec precantī Glaucus rēspondit, "Numquam meus amor Scyllae mūtābitur: semper mihi aderit." Circē sprēta illī nocēre nōn poterat (nam deus erat) (neque sī posset, vellet), sed invidiā mōta, Scyllae, quae sibi anteposita erat, nocēre cupiēbat.

Herbās magicās cum carminibus miscuit. Tum herbās mixtās ferēns, mare potēns, ē rēgiā went out ēgressa est. Super summās undās caeruleās, solid dry ut in terrā solidā, pedibus siccīs prōgressa pool

est. Erat parvus gurgēs, Scyllae placitus, where tūta

quō ab aestū et maris et caeli illa sē ferēbat(= ībat). In hunc (gurgitem) Circē poured

venēna infūdit atque carmen sacrō ore iterum iterumque mōvit. Hīs rēbus factīs, gurgite relictō, super undās, ut vēnerat, ad rēgnum returned suum rediit.

solida siccīs

gurgēs

¹⁷¹For meaning see "Thēseus et Ariadnē".

Mox Scylla ad hunc gurgitem vēnit et ad medium alvum in aquam dēscenderat cum ultimae partēs corporis in mōnstra mūtatae sunt. Si longius prōgressa esset, tōtō corpore mōnstrum fuisset. Primō crēdēns illa (mōnstra) nōn partēs corporis abigēbat suū esse, fugiēbat abigēbatque, sed, quae femoribus fugiēbat, sēcum ferēbat, et, corpus tangēns, prō femoribus curūribusque pedibusque ōra canum invēnit et ferās circum alvum iacere.

Glaucus amēns, ut virginem vīdit, amplexūs lacrimāvit amplexūsque Circēs fugit. In eōdem locō Scylla, timor nautārum, mansit cumque cōpia data est, ab Ulixē, quem quo-que Circē amābat, comitēs rapuit. In saxum, nautīs periculōsum, tandem versa est (= mūtata est), quod etiam nunc manet, quod etiam nunc nautae timent.

Bibliography

Bibliography

A. Books

- Crawford, Claude C. and Edna Mable Leitzell; Learning a New Language. Los Angeles: C. C. Crawford, University of Southern California, 1930. 242 pp.
A guide for students of foreign languages.
- Gray, Mason DeWitt, The Teaching of Latin. New York: D. Appleton and Company, 1929. 239 pp.
A study of the teaching of Latin in conformity with the recommendations of the Classical Investigation.
- Handschin, Charles H., Modern-Language Teaching. Yonkers-on-Hudson, New York: World Book Company, 1940. 458 pp.
A practical and for the modern language teacher.
- Huse, H. R., The Psychology of Foreign Language Study. Chapel Hill, N. C.; The University of North Carolina Press, 1931. 231 pp.
Valuable for its treatment of units of expression and for its analysis of needed experiments in foreign language teaching.
- Morrison, Henry C., The Practice of Teaching in the Secondary School. Chicago: The University of Chicago Secondary 26. pp. 436-77. ss. 1926.
An excellent description of reading-method technique in foreign language teaching.

B. Parts of Series

- Buswell, G. T., A Laboratory Study of the Reading of Modern Foreign Languages. Publications of the American and Canadian Committees on Modern Languages, Vol. 2. New York: The Macmillan Company, 1927. 100 pp.
A study of the reading habits of foreign language students by photographing eye movements.
- Coleman, Algernon, The Teaching of Modern Foreign Languages in the United States. Publications of the American and Canadian Committees on Modern Languages, Vol. 12. New York: The Macmillan Company, 1929. 293 pp.
An investigation of modern foreign language teaching and recommendations on the basis of its findings.

Eddy, Helen M., Instruction in Foreign Languages. National Survey of Secondary Education, Monograph No. 24. Washington, D. C.; United States Government Printing Office, 1933. 61 pp.

A report of the actual practices of foreign language teachers.

West, Michael, Bilingualism. Bureau of Education, India, Occasional Reports, No. 13. Calcutta: Government of India, Central Publication Branch, 1928. 354 pp.

A scholarly report of the author's experiments in teaching English to Indian boys and his conclusions in regard to foreign language teaching.

C. Publications of Learned Organizations

The Classical Investigation. Conducted by the Advisory Committee of the American Classical League, Part I, General Report. Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1924. 305 pp.

A survey of classical language teaching with recommended reforms in objectives, content, and methods.

D. Periodical Articles

Bill, Clarence P., "Reading the Classics," The Classical Journal, 22:88-96, November, 1926.

_____, "Reading the Classics, II," The Classical Journal, 23:489-99, April, 1928.

A practical plan for using the reading method in teaching Latin.

Bisbee, H. M., "Latin Without Tears," The Classical Journal, 10:72-78, November, 1914.

Bradley, Barclay W., "The Effect of Foreign Language Study Upon Habits of Thinking," The Classical Weekly, 25:1-5, October, 1931.

Brown, J. N., "Are the Latin Conjugations Real or Imaginary?" The Classical Journal, 34:134-42, December, 1938.

Carr, W. L., "Reading Latin as Latin--Some Difficulties and Some Devices," The Classical Journal, 26:127-40, November, 1930.

Excellent analysis of the immediate objectives necessary to the attainment of the ability to read Latin as Latin.

- _____, "Shall We Teach Our Pupils to Read Latin?" The Classical Journal, 23:500-510, April, 1928.
- _____, "Vocabulary Density in High School Latin," The Classical Journal, 29:323-24, February, 1934.
- Claflin, Edith Frances; "On Translating Latin," The Classical Journal, 20:104-12, November, 1924.
- _____, "Teaching the Comprehension of Latin," The Classical Journal, 32:276-82, January, 1927.
- Coutant; Victor, "Comprehension and Translation of Secondary-School Latin Prose," The Classical Journal, 35:449-59, May, 1940.
- Dean, Mildred, "A Classical Teacher Looks at the Report on Modern Foreign Languages," The Classical Journal, 30:85-98, November, 1934.
- _____, "The Evolving Latin Course," The Classical Journal, 30:411-17, April, 1935.
- Dunham, Fred S., "What Is Our Aim in Secondary Latin?" The Classical Journal, 30:159-66, December, 1934.
- Hutchinson, Mark E., "Objectives in the Teaching of High-school Latin and the Measurement of Their Attainment," The Classical Journal, 34:271-82, February, 1939.
- _____, "Realism in Latin Teaching," The Classical Journal, 30:477-88, May, 1935.
An excellent view of the need of adapting the Latin course to changed attitudes of education of Latin is to survive.
- _____, "Some Needed Research in the Teaching of Latin," The Classical Journal, 29:335-56, February, 1934.
- _____, "The Reading Method--Is It Practicable in Latin?" The Classical Journal, 31:289-302, February, 1936.
- Faschall, Clarence, "The Situation of Latin in the Secondary Schools," The Classical Journal, 24:404-11, March, 1929.

- Spilman, Mignonette, "Learning to Read in the Latin Order," The Classical Journal, 24:323-37, February, 1929.
- Tharp, James Burton, and Eloise Murray, "Grammarless Reading of Foreign Languages," The Modern Language Journal, 12:385-90, February, 1928.
- Walker, Arthur Tappan, "The Report of the Classical Investigation, a Criticism," The Classical Journal, 25:83-92, November, 1929.
- White, Dorrance S., "New Emphasis in the Teaching of Latin," The Classical Journal, 30:544-54, June, 1935.
Latin as a social study.
-
- _____, "What Price Method?" The Classical Journal, 25:511-19, April, 1928.
A criticism of the reading method.
- Wrightstone, J. Wayne, "Measuring Diverse Objectives and Achievements in Latin Teaching," The Classical Journal, 34:155-65, December, 1938.