AAUP Plans To Investigate Co-operation

The local chapter of the American Association of University Professors at its monthly dinner Friday in the large meeting room discussed the national program for the promotion of a greater degree of co-operation between faculties and administrations of the nation's universities.

Dr. Edward M. Little presented a questionnaire dealing with "The Place and Function of Faculties in College and University Government." The answers will be used by the national organization in finding effective methods of furthering co-operation in university administration.

The association later informally inquired of its members about their knowledge concerning statements appearing in Friday's Kaimin and Missoulian relevant to opposition to President C. H. Clapp and his predecessors.

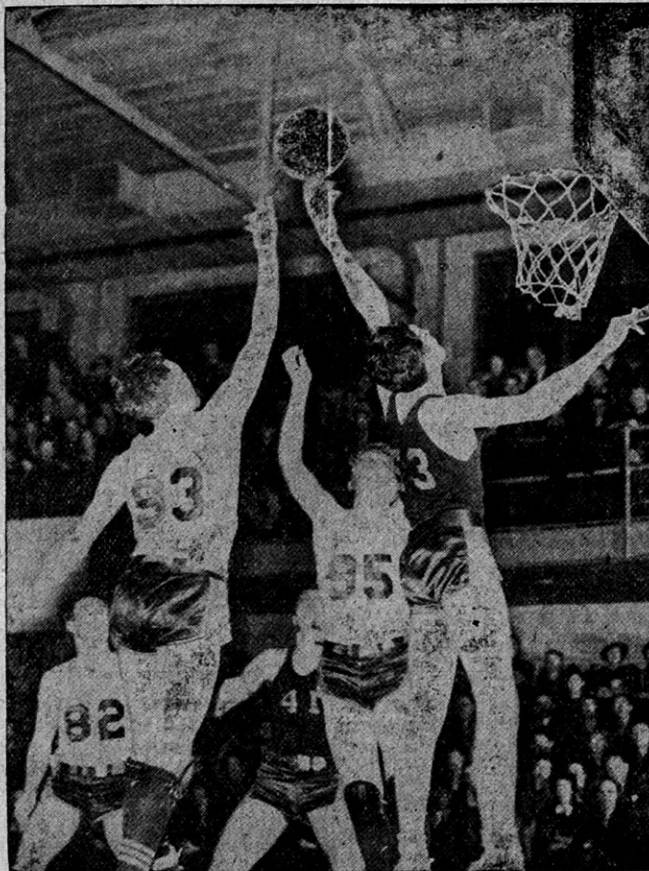

"After the formal program," according to Dr. W. P. Clark, AAUP president, "one member said he wanted to ask for information. He had seen the statement in the Missoulian to the effect that 'The bulk of the faculty members who were on the trail of President Simmons were also on the trail of his predecessors'; and in the Kaimin, from President Simmons a like statement, concerning 'schools and departments whose professors had been making trouble for President Clapp and even for the previous three presidents.'"

"He did not know, he said, that there had been any such discontent with Dr. Clapp's administration nor that anybody had 'been on his trail,'" Clark continued. "He wondered if he had been mistaken and so asked if anyone there knew if there had been any discontent or any organized or unorganized opposition to Dr. Clapp."

"Only one member hesitated when asked and, at length, admitted that there had been only minor arguments, but it was agreed in the judgment of the group that there had been no such opposition to Dr. Clapp and that the former president had the almost unanimous co-operation of his faculty," Clark said.

The statement in the Missoulian quoted Representative Moss, a member of the campus investigating committee, in an answer to a

"Accent on Youth" Gives Salon Theater Good Start

Playing to a select, stiff-shirted and evening-gowned audience, the cast of "Accent on Youth" got Montana's first salon theater off to a good start with a premiere performance in the Silver room last night.

Students, townspeople and faculty enjoyed sitting chummily close to the stage and appreciated good handling of Raphaelson's comedy by a strongly led cast.

The salon theater may not be able to handle the chariot race from "Ben Hur," but in "Accent on Youth" it shows advantages over the cinema and the conventional stage.

Mike Skones carried the lead with experience-born ease, to which Tom Campbell came a close second. Edna Holding handled her first big part carefully and determinedly if not as steadily as Skones and Campbell.

Haydon's directive technique explains the success of his Blue Room salon theater in Portland.

Harold Schecter and Clarence Hirning handled their smaller roles well, carrying them to a high hilarity point in the last act.

Now, They Say, We're Somebody Else's Charlie McCarthy

'Round and 'round we go. Until last Thursday, because of our coverage the week before of the Bear Paws' misdirected attempt to show the students' support of Dr. Simmons' policies, we were accused of being administration Charlie McCarthys. Friday we printed the straightest report we could get, by a reliable Helena correspondent, about the highly controversial subject of faculty dissension as brought up in the legislature. Now, believe it or not, we are being accused of sitting on the knee of the anti-administration forces.

Editorially the Kaimin is backing the administration, because it is our independent opinion that in this course lie prospects for improvement of the university. However, we have done our best to keep our news stories free from our editorial opinion, and in no case has one side or the other attempted to dictate what we print.

As a further clarification, let us point out that two members of the dissenting group were contacted along with Dr. Simmons for statements for last Friday's paper. Neither, however, cared to comment about the minority report.

Dean Stone Remembers

● CLARENCE STREIT

"This university is acquiring the dignity of age," remarked Dean Stone, as he chatted with a Kaimin reporter this morning. "Its alumni are establishing for Montana a reputation which is highly satisfactory.

"The name of Urey is one of the most mentioned in science circles—and has been for four years. McGregor gave us fame amongst metallurgists. And now comes Clarence Streit. No book in recent years has attracted as much attention as his 'Union Now' which has just been published.

"I received my copy last week. It seems to me that it merits every bit of the warm indorsement which it has received from some of the really great thinkers of the world. But I'm not reviewing the book—that has already been splendidly done.

"It is the thoughts which the name of the author suggests which prompt my mentioning it—the memories which are awakened by the legend on the jacket of the book—'A famous journalist presents a living constitution for the world's democracies.'

"It seems so short a time ago that Streit was a student here and now he is listed as 'a famous journalist'. And, yet, thinking back, I'm not surprised. When he sat in our classes, he was a thinker. He thought deeply and along original lines.

"It should not occasion surprise that he has evolved this book, so far in advance of what anybody else has put into print, though several commentators assert that they have been thinking of the idea for a long time.

"There was much that was admirable in Streit as a student on this campus. He never made much noise. He was a fine man to have in a classroom—constantly presenting a query which probed deeper than the lecture had gone. As editor of the Kaimin he guided the paper wisely through some ticklish situations.

"Always leading his associates, yet never assuming superiority. As natural and comfortable as an old shoe, he was naturally a favorite amongst fellow students—but he did everything naturally. He had as much fun as anybody, too. He was no recluse.

"He responded to the first call for volunteers when we entered the World war. He was rejected—rather, he was told to wait. His record showed that he had worked with the geological survey—that had been his vacation employment—and when the engineer corps was organized he was enlisted there.

"So when he went across, it was as an engineer. But they soon discovered what he was and he had much interesting and, at times, exciting experience in the intelligence service. He was amongst those present at the deliberations at Versailles.

"Since the war, his career has been noteworthy. He finished his work here, became a Rhodes scholar, saw service as a correspondent on every front from Arabia to Spain, was banished from Roumania for writing the truth, was president of foreign correspondents at Geneva and now represents the New York Times at Washington. So the 'famous journalist' appellation has been fairly won.

"Looking over the indorsements of Streit's book, I note one which is signed 'Bruce C. Hopper, associate professor of government, Harvard.' Bruce was classmate of Streit here. He has gone far, as well. There are the school portraits of the two, on the wall there."

Scintillating Grizzlies Defeat Clawless Cats For State Hoop Crown

Montana's sparkling Grizzlies lifted the state basketball crown from a dogged but outclassed State College team with two decisive victories of 66-52 and 65-45 here Friday and Saturday nights before the largest crowds of the season.

Starting with a dazzling display of basket-shooting, Grizzlies took an early lead in both games which they never relinquished. It was a spectacular climax to the hoop careers of Captain Jim Seyler and Bill Lazetich, who contributed one-third of the Grizzly points in the two games.

Seyler's consistent ball rustling and floor work were outstanding, while Lazetich played his greatest game of the year, continually taking Bobcat rebounds from the enemy backboard, and guarding well.

For the Bobcats, Little, Feldman and big Don Cosner completed their competition against the Grizzlies, each with a creditable performance against the university warriors.

Bobcats Open Friday's Game

Neither team could find the range until Bobcat Dick Little opened hostilities with a basket after two minutes of play, Feldman adding another to give the Cats an early jump. Greene, Ryan and Lazetich sank three successive shots to give the Grizzlies the lead.

Ryan Consistent

Barney Ryan's flips kept the edge growing, the Grizzly junior guard hitting on 50 per cent of his tries. Reed, Little and Feldman kept the Bobcats within shouting distance with uncanny efforts, the half ending 30-22 for Grizzlies.

Reed, Stark and Little started the second half with a basket and two free throws, closing the gap to four points before Lazetich converted two charity tosses. Stark's firing put the Cats within two points, but the Grizzlies again pulled ahead.

Reed, subbing for the injured Brickley, pulled Bobcats again within a basket of the university, but the Dahlbergmen unleashed another vicious offense to settle the game by a 14-point margin.

Gym Crowded Saturday

Crowding the gym to overflow capacity in anticipation of a closer conflict in the deciding game, eager fans saw Grizzlies grab the lead on Lazetich's setup, and in five minutes take a 14-4 edge. Every Grizzly was hitting to settle the championship issue, with a 40-19 margin at intermission.

Bobcats outscored Grizzlies by one point in the second session, but Montana's early lead held out until the timer's gun exploded Breeden's Cats from the throne for the first time since 1934.

Ryan Leads Scoring

Barney Ryan, scoring leader in both games, Bill Lazetich, Jim Seyler, Rae Greene, Bill Hall, Art Merrick and other Grizzlies who saw action played their best ball of the year against the ever-dangerous Bobcats, who had Feldman, Little, Reed, Cosner and Max Stark sharing honors.

THE TITLE COMES HOME . . .

This is KMSU, western Montana's Kaiminbia station at the meeting point of five great alleys. Time is 8 o'clock by the watch. We return you now to your sportscoop, Otto B. Herd . . . "Well, basketball bugs, here I am with a couple thousand other compressed customers, ready to watch the fourth and deciding cage game between Montana State university and Montana State college for the state basketball title . . . the Grizzlies and Bobcats are at it again. Both teams are lined up ready to go, the refs have the whistles in their mouths and there's the tipoff! It goes to Lazetich . . . he gives it to Ryan, now a pass back to Lazzo who pots a cinch . . . it's Montana 2-0! Bobcats whirl downfloor, Feldman breaks away and oh, oh, there's the first whistle . . . a foul on Rae Greene and Tuffy gets two gift throws. He sinks the first . . . misses the second. The ball is taken off the board by Seyler and the Grizzly captain is fouled. He makes it. Montana States takes it downcourt, misses two shots . . . there's a bucket for Hall. Greene intercepts Little's fast ball and lays one in . . . Ryan hits a howitzer and now it's Seyler fooling Reed for two baskets, and the befuddled Bozemanites take time out as the gallery roars. Every Montana player has scored and the Grizzlies lead, 15-4!

"Time in! Montana State's attack is broken up. Ryan gets hot again with another mid-floor net-burner. Merrick pots one, Little retaliates. This is fast action, folks . . . Here comes Ryan a-dribbling, an Aggie touches him and now the whistling Johnny Good is shooting May into the four-foul penalty box . . . Ryan misses the shot but Seyler slaps it in. The Cats are infuriated. Cosner connects and makes the 34-19 score a little closer. Lazetich is alone under with basket with Cosner . . . Lazzo goes up, the ball goes in, and Cosner goes down on the floor.

"Time is getting short in the first half; Little and Hall are fighting for the ball . . . the referee steps in and now he's sending Biff to the showers. Dahlberg didn't like that and neither did this crowd . . . hear that jeering? Merrick has the ball, shoots and makes it good just as Harry Adams shoots to end the first half with the stunning score 40-19.

"Back in the second half, the Bobcats have scored seven points in a row. Ryan and Greene pass cleverly; Greene shoots and the Grizzlies have their 20-point lead once more. Reed lets fly a long shot, the ball is in the air . . . it looks good, it . . . we pause now for station identification.

"Dahlberg has sent in the bench . . . Lazetich and Seyler get a deafening ovation as they leave the game, closing their college cage careers. Sundquist sneaks around the Bobcat defense for a basket . . . there is Miller pitching one. Coach Breeden seems to be asking Manager Porter for a towel to throw in. Reed connects and there is the final gun. Score, 65-45, Montana. The Grizzlies are state champs for the first time since 1934, and the two scores of 66 and 65 are probably the highest ever run up against any State college quint . . . it was Montana all over this year. G'bye, now."

Wood Goble, '38, pharmacy, has accepted a position in Great Falls.

147-pound division in the M club tourney, dropped an unpopular decision to Tommy Jenkins of the Butte Elks. This was the outstanding bout of the early eliminations, both fighters starting toe to toe and slugging for blood. Gillogly took a slight edge in the final round, with the judges giving the decision to Jenkins.

Don Mittlestaedt, 118-pounder, won his first bout, beating Glen Todd of the Dillon CCC, but lost his second bout to Ray Campana, Butte CYO fighter. Mittlestaedt was cautious throughout the fight and lost the verdict to the more aggressive Campana.

The bouts were sponsored by the Butte Elks.

Clarence K. Streit, Montanan, Publishes Thoughts and Ideas On 'Civilization's Breakdown'

Clarence K. Streit, graduate in journalism in 1919 and foreign correspondent for the New York Times since 1924, recently published his book, the result of twenty years' wanderings and thoughts on the cause and the cure of "this threatened breakdown of civilization." As an immediate outgrowth of his eight years' experience at Times reporter at the League of Nations, the book is entitled "Union Now".

The league, in which each nation acted as a unit, is bound to fail, Streit writes, because the individuals in the units exist only for the "great mystical body of the state." In a "union," however, the state is a mere piece of machinery for increasing the liberty and happiness of the individual.

Suggests Forming Union

Streit, who was a Rhodes scholar from Montana, offers as his solution for the present world deterioration the forming of a union of the 15 democracies of the world, each of which have worked toward greater personal liberty and intellectual freedom. These democracies are the United States, the United Kingdom, The Netherlands, Finland, Sweden, South Africa, Belgium, Australia, Switzerland, Norway, Denmark, New Zealand, France, Canada and Ireland.

In the constitution he advocates a union defense force, free trade between member nations, a common money and a union postal and communications service.

Argument Based on History

Streit's chief argument for a union success is found in the history of the United States. He points out that our league of states formed by the Articles of Confederation was ineffective.

These states, separated by jealousy, tariffs and boundary disputes, yet, having in common their ideal of personal liberty and freedom, banded together to form a union, buried the hatchet and allowed the individual to govern the state. History has proved the success of the United States constitution, he says.

Scores Scoop

Streit, after leaving Oxford, joined the foreign staff of the New York Times with his first assignment in Arabia and Turkey, where he made one of his biggest scoops, the first interview with Kamal Pasha Ataturk, revolutionary leader of the Turkish republic.

From Turkey he went to the Greek revolution and then to the Rif insurrection in north Africa. Streit distinguished himself repeatedly with his efficient handling of difficult assignments and excellently written accounts.

He covered the Balkans next and was banished for writing an unpopular story about Queen Marie.

Becomes League Correspondent

After a short time in Rome Streit became in 1930 the league correspondent for the Times, where he remained until the league ceased to function. He was then recalled for a short period and is now working in the Washington, D. C., offices of the Times.

Shaw Praises Student Spirit

"Student spirit at the Bobcat-Grizzly series was excellent," Stan Shaw, Traditions chairman, said yesterday.

"I think the amount and kind of spirit showed by the students last week was very fine. There was a minimum of booing and of course there was no incentive for booing," said Shaw. "The support given to the yell kings was the best that it has been all season."
