Subcommittee tentatively sets 5.9 percent faculty pay raise

By JILL THOMPSON

Montana Kaimin Legislative Reporter

HELENA — A legislative subcommittee responsible for recommending a budget for the Montana University System to the Legislature yesterday agreed to tentatively set base pay increases for University of Montana faculty at 5.9 percent.

The increase would be in addition to the state pay plan increase given to all state employees. Gov. Thomas Judge has recommended that state employees receive a 5.5 percent raise, while the Legislative Fiscal Analyst (LFA) recommended a 6.25 percent hike. Another legislative subcommittee will decide on a final figure for state raises.

Ron Perrin, captain of the University Teachers Union bargaining team that is currently negotiating a contract with the administration, said he found the possibility of an 11.4 percent pay increase "encouraging."

Average Increase of $1,460

The decision by the Appropriations Joint Subcommittee on Education would put the average salary for a UM faculty member at $20,228, according to figures provided by Judy Rippingale, senior analyst for the legislative fiscal analyst. The average salary at UM for fiscal 1979 is $18,868, according to LFA figures.

The subcommittee arrived at the new figures by matching the average faculty salary at eight regional schools with which the two Montana university units are frequently compared. These schools are the universities of Nevada at Reno and at Las Vegas, Wyoming, New Mexico, North Dakota, Idaho, South Dakota and Utah State University.

Subcommittee chairman Rep. Carroll South, D-

Miles City, said Montana faculty will be getting a little above the average for those schools because part-time faculty are taken into account in computations for the Montana schools, while they are not at the other schools.

Increase Less at MSU

Under the subcommittee's recommendation, according to Rippingale, the average faculty salary at Montana State University would be the same as at UM, but would result in only a 4.9 percent increase for the MSU faculty.

The average salary at Montana College of Mineral Science and Technology would be $19,115, or a 2 percent increase, according to Rippingale.

Faculty at Western Montana College, Northern Montana College and Eastern Montana College would receive average salaries of $18,205, Rippingale said. This would result in a 3.3 percent increase at Western and a 6 percent increase at Northern, she said.

The percentage increase for Eastern is not yet firm, Rippingale added, because she has not been able to obtain a firm figure for Eastern's current salary to work with. This is because collective bargaining negotiations are going on at that school and the salaries have not yet been set.

Equalized Appropriations

In other action, the subcommittee moved to equalize general fund appropriations for UM and MSU in the areas of organized research and athletics.

This would result in an increased appropriation of $65,000 for athletics at UM and a decreased

Botany chairman named in discrimination charge

A University of Montana discrimination grievance committee yesterday heard a hiring discrimination complaint against Botany Department Chairman Sherman Preece.

The eight-member committee heard the complaint of Laurel Pye, botany graduate student, in a closed session.

The formal hearing yesterday was the third step in the procedure for filing a discrimination complaint at UM.

Pye, who requested the closed hearing, was not available for comment on the nature of the complaint last night. Committee Chairwoman Maxine Van de Wetering, associate professor of philosophy, also could not be reached for comment.

Prior to the formal hearing yesterday, Lynda Brown, Equal Employment Opportunity officer, investigated Pye's complaint and concluded there were grounds for further action, if procedures outlined in the UM discrimination grievance manual were followed.

The committee now has 10 days to consider Pye's complaint and make a recommendation to UM President Richard Bowers, according to the manual.

Bowers must then act on the committee's recommendation and decide what punitive action, if any, will be taken.

If Pye is not satisfied with Bowers' decision she can appeal the decision to the Board of Regents.

Board members are Van de Wetering; Janna Rankin, assistant professor of forestry; Larry Elison, professor of law; Edward Pfau, an employee of the Physical Plant; Gayle Zachariasen, office manager; Fred Weldon, director of student affairs, and UM students Bob Law and Patty Brolin.

Charges filed in campus assault

By JESSICA SALL

Montana Kaimin Reporter

The alleged assailant of a University of Montana woman appeared in Justice Court last Friday and was released on $4,000 bond.

Jesse Dale Sandstrom, 26, is charged with felony sexual assault for allegedly attacking the UM woman as she tried to enter Jesse Hall about 5 a.m. on Feb. 17.

According to the police report filed by Al Baker, a detective with the Missoula Police Department, Sandstrom attacked the woman by "taking her down on the ground, reaching under her dress and tearing her underwear off of her."

"Rape was the motive," Baker said in a telephone interview, "but it didn't occur. He (the assailant) got scared off."

Baker said the woman said she thought her assailant was frightened off because he heard someone approaching.

Baker said the woman screamed three times during the assault but Michelle Scally, Jesse Hall assistant head resident, said she and head resident Tom Gurley did not know about the alleged assault until they read about it in the Missoulian a few days later.

Bond for Sandstrom was originally set at $10,000 but was reduced to $4,000 on two conditions established by Justice of the Peace W. P. "Bill" Monger.

Warm Springs settlement averts strike

WARM SPRINGS (AP) — Workers at Warm Springs State Hospital voted by a wide margin Monday to accept a revised state contract offer, eliminating the threat of a strike at the institution for the mentally ill.

Bob Bethke, vice president of the Warm Springs Independent Union, said the offer was accepted by "a very comfortable margin" of the union's 324 members. One source said the margin was overwhelming.

The offer, which was sweetened by the state during a long negotiating session Sunday, possibly could set the stage for breaking the bargaining deadlock that has resulted in a month-long strike at three other state institutions.

About 900 members of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees went on strike Feb. 5 at Galen State Hospital, Boulder River School and Hospital and the state prison.

The new contract for the Warm Springs workers will provide raises of $30 a month across the board in each of the next two years, plus 3 percent of current salary, plus "step increases" — automatic annual raises — of 2 percent. The percentage increases for the second year will be based on the first-year salary, union and state officials said.

The state also dropped its insistence that no worker should receive more than a 7 percent increase each year, a limitation which would have kept workers in some of the lower grades from receiving the full amount of the raises.

The same offer apparently will be made to the AFSCME workers at a mediation session scheduled for Wednesday night in Helena.

Don Judge, head of AFSCME, said Monday his union had full details of the offer made to Warm Springs and was analyzing it for its application to AFSCME.

The Warm Springs contract appears to include concessions on several points the AFSCME workers had insisted on: elimination of the 7 percent limit and retention of step increases.

Before the new proposal was worked out Sunday, the state's offer to the Warm Springs union was identical to the one rejected by workers at the other institutions. That included raises of $33 per month across the board, plus 3 percent of present salary in the first year.

National Guard units from across the state have been working at Boulder, Galen and the prison since the strikes started.

Last week, Gen. James Womack of the Montana National Guard speculated that the military units could continue working at the

Oregon attempts to put a lid on jargon

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — A group of shocked and appalled legislators announced Monday that it was time to get a handle on jargon.

The ad hoc House Select Committee on Suppression of Jargon issued a preliminary report prioritizing the parameters of the verbiage dispute.

After seeking input about the cliché syndrome, the legislators decided to bite the bullet and ban jargon this week.

The report listed a veritable plethora of phrases no longer viable because they have been run up the flagpole so many times.

"The committee has listened with growing concern to the proliferation of jargon in and around the state capitol," the committee report said. "Many words and phrases are used so frequently that they have ceased to convey meaning of any kind."

Rep. Dave Frohnmayer, R-Eugene, circulated copies of the report on the House floor but he refused to say where he was coming from and where his head was at.

He would not reveal the members of the jargon brigade. He said it was just a group of legislators who, when the chips were down, took it upon themselves to sensitize the public to an issue of growing concern.

'Slight misconception'

Editor: In response to the article about Ms. Patti Stief and her "nutrition workshop" I would like to call to her attention a slight misconception concerning the courses offered by the home economics department. Not only does it offer Nutrition 146, which is a very elementary level course that incidentally carries no chemistry above that which fifth graders learn in science class, there are also the following nutrition courses: Human Nutrition 246, Family and Community Nutrition 346, Nutrition in Disease 440, Advanced Nutrition 446, as well as several classes in food production techniques, such as Principles of Food Preparation 245 which teaches essentials about preserving the nutritional value of foods. Stief might be interested in this class since she seems so fond of "preparing in her own kitchen."

On the other hand, maybe the mention of these classes is irrelevant to the subject since Stief mentioned that after taking Elementary Nutrition 146 SHE came out not knowing whether or not she should eat a candy bar. Certainly a person who was more into "going off into a corner and listening to her body" than taking time to really study the material offered by a class in nutrition wouldn't profit from the class.

I was relieved to find that in her workshop she has guest speakers to do the teaching. I don't think the obvious minimal amount of reading she's done on the subject, or the fact that she has "talked with others" qualifies her to impose her opinion about such a serious subject as nutrition. And if, as she says, she "has strong feelings about people" I'd advise her to remember that people have strong feelings too.

Belong in history

Editor: Three letters were published in the Feb. 28 Kaimin shaking the fist at MLAC's decision to serve Coors at the eighth annual benefit kegger.

Sure, there's an issue here (and it looks political, Mr. McCue). Coors does have a shady history and deserves some criticism. But let's weigh the facts.

I imagine MLAC anticipated some repercussion to the Coors decision. I also imagine they considered the profit margin involved. But remember the kegger's sole purpose (originally anyway) is to provide money to charitable causes. The kegger's foundations are built around its beneficiaries, not political choices.

I don't think the average person really cares what beer he (or she) is drinking the day of the kegger. That person is into music and partying. Talk of boycotting the kegger only adds a blemish to one of the last surviving rock festivals in this country. Why hasn't Coors been boycotted in the local bars around town?

I can't justify MLAC's decision. But I do believe that charities and partyn' people are what it's all about. Unions, boycotts and discrimination play a better part in history than in the future.

Baby disrupts play

Editor: I am writing this letter on behalf of the audience and cast who attended Wednesday night's performance of "For Colored Girls Who Have Considered Suicide When the Rainbow is Enuf."

It is addressed to the parents of the baby who was allowed to make all that noise throughout the performance and to their friend who claimed that the baby, essentially, had more of a right to be there than I did because he was black. I wonder if they ever stopped to consider the feelings of the actresses who were trying to recite very dramatic monologues with that distraction. I also noticed every person in the audience getting more and more frustrated and upset as the play progressed. One person even left because of it. So please be more considerate in the future. You caused a lot of the meaning to be lost.

Endorsement denied

Editor: My name appeared on a Feb. 27 Montana Kaimin advertisement, as endorsing Cary Holmquist, Peter Karr and Mark Matsko in the ASUM elections. I am not quite sure how my name made it into the advertisement, since I have been working in Helena all quarter and never signed any statement of support.

I resent my name being placed on the ad, without even being consulted by the three candidates, for two reasons:

1) Because I have been in Helena all quarter, I have not followed the candidates' stands closely, so I am not really in a position to be endorsing any candidate.

2) I am majoring in journalism, and it is against the professional ethics of anyone in that field, or aspiring to it, to go on record as supporting any candidate in any election. To do so would cast a doubt in many readers' minds that that reporter would be able to report fairly and objectively on any matter involving that candidate.

I will be reporting for the Kaimin this spring, and would really hate to have anyone connect my supposed endorsement to my stories and doubt the articles' credibility or my ability to report without a bias.

Hopefully, this letter will clear up any such doubt.

Changes needed

Editor: I would like to express my appreciation to ASUM Programming, and especially to Kelly Miller, for scheduling the Keith Stroup lecture last night. Montana NORML (National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws) is grateful to ASUM for undertaking this project, as we do not have the financial resources at hand to implement lectures of this kind.

Mr. Stroup's efforts and the efforts of national NORML have greatly benefited marijuana smokers everywhere, particularly those persons suffering from glaucoma and the side effects of chemotherapy treatment. But many people are still being arrested for simple possession, and are unnecessarily serving time in prisons all over the country. Changes must be made.

However, this process takes time, and requires a great deal of public education and public support. We need your help. If you are able to contribute either time or money, please call or drop by the Montana NORML office: 502 Western Bank Bldg., Missoula, Mt., 543-3491. Thank you.

'Flexibility' gives hope

Editor: In regard to the impending faculty cuts, I was interested to learn that Academic Vice President Donald Habbe considers the death of faculty members to be a "flexible area." This gives me hope. I was beginning to worry about the growing number of my colleagues who suffer from high blood pressure, ulcers and acute depression because of the antics of our administration. It is a relief to discover that we are all simply being prepared for re-allocation to a "flexible area." Sincerely yours,

True Master-baiter

Editor: In regards to "Joe Respect:" True, there does appear to be a dog problem on the University of Montana campus — due to lack of owners concern and lack of a dog catcher.

I feel that if Joe really wants to help out, he could do double-time and round up the strays as a civic duty to UM and help the people in the security office in doing so. Thus, prevent any accidental poisonings of children, and he would become a shining example to the rest of the community.

But if he chooses to use some form of poison bait and is clever enough to only poison the dogs, and nothing or no one else and will check all the areas where he had placed the bait after all the dogs were gone and pick-up the bait rather than leaving it around for who knows how long before some innocent suffers from it, then for sure he would truly be a Master-baiter.

Six months is too much

On Wednesday Joy DeStefano thought she had a good chance to spend the next year as ASUM's top executive. On Thursday, the day after her defeat at the polls, DeStefano found she had a very good chance to spend the next six months in jail.

Joy DeStefano was arrested Thursday for digging a hole on county property. Richard Orton was arrested at the same time for holding a banner over the hole DeStefano had shoveled. Later that day Justice of the Peace Bill Monger ordered DeStefano to serve six months in jail, because, he said yesterday, "she's been here before" and "destroying property is a no-no." Monger handed Orton a six-month-suspended sentence. Apparently it was the first time Orton had been apprehended in the act of holding a banner above an illegally unearthed pit.

2—Montana Kaimin • Tuesday, March 6, 1979

Now, DeStefano does not say she dug a hole on the courthouse lawn. She says she dug a "grave" to symbolically protest nuclear weapons. But whether the political act of digging a "grave" or as Monger put it — destroying property — is not the issue here. The question is: does the "crime" justify the sentence?

The answer is no. Monger refused yesterday to say if he thought the punishment is commensurate with the crime. However, he did discharge the sentence, which could suggest to some that he thinks people who dig holes on county property without permission owe society six months in the slammer. Missoula judges are only aggravating the situation by making martyrs of DeStefano, Bryan Black, David Host, Tom Allyn and anyone else who has protested the possibility of nuclear annihilation in a most peaceful way and then been sent to jail. A better solution to the "problem" would be to simply chase the diggers away. Or maybe let them dig their "grave." Or maybe talk to them about what they are doing and why they are doing it. One wonders if the judges who handle the cases have an understanding for the gravediggers. Monger said he is confused about why the protestors are protesting in Missoula, adding that Missoula County had voted against nuclear facilities in this county. Apparently he is not really aware of what is being protested.

If all goes as planned, Joy DeStefano will walk out of Missoula County Jail in September — a free woman who has paid her debt to society. That is unless her sentence is reviewed and shortened, which, according to Monger, can take place at any time.

Court rules against quotas for student government

(CPS) — A federal court has ruled that the University of North Carolina's efforts to make sure blacks and women are represented in student government amount to reverse discrimination.

The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld its earlier decision, appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court and then sent back to appeals court for reconsideration, that UNC had violated two white students' constitutional rights when it enforced its regulation that the 18-member Campus Governing Council include at least two men, two women and two blacks of either gender. UNC regulations said that if student elections failed to fill those quotas, the council president had to appoint students to fill them.

Two white male students sued the school when they were denied seats on the council by the council president's appointments.

Women win, gain tourney berth

Forward Candie Stevens scored 12 of her 14 points in the second half to help lift the University of Montana women's basketball team to a 57-52 victory over the Montana State Bobcats Saturday night in the Harry Adams Field House. The win gives the Grizzlies a berth in the Association of Inter-collegiate Athletics for Women's playoff tournament Thursday through Saturday in Bozeman.

Montana will meet Seattle University at 8 p.m. Thursday.

Seattle, with an 18-6 record, has a 5-foot-10-inch all-American candidate who, according to Montana Coach Robin Selvig, could give the Griz some trouble.

The Grizzlies lost to Seattle, 53-47, in Seattle earlier in the season.

The top two teams from the coast and mountain divisions of the Northwest Women's Basketball League plus the best team from the Independent Division—which is Seattle—and the host team receive berths in the playoffs.

The Grizzlies, tied with MSU for second place in the mountain division with a 5-6 mark, gained the berth because they beat the Bobcats twice. But MSU gained a berth anyway because it is the host team.

The most important play in Saturday night's victory over the Bobcats, according to Coach Selvig, was when guard Sheila Sullivan tallied four points in the last two seconds of the first half to close the gap to 27-25 at intermission.

"Sheila's four points gave the team a real boost at half time," Selvig said.

"Instead of going into the locker room down by six," he said, "we were only down by two and really ready to play in the second half."

But the game was far from over. With 9:21 left in the second half, Montana gained its first lead 41-39, since early in the game off of two free throws by Stevens.

The Grizzlies led throughout the remainder of the game but a Grizzly victory wasn't secured until the closing seconds.

The Bobcats trailed by only three points, 54-51, with 26 seconds to play but Montana guard Sheri Cameron swished a free throw with 10 seconds left, to put the game out of reach for the Bobcats.

Forward Sandy Selvig led the Grizzlies in scoring with a game-high 16 points, followed by Stevens with 14 and forward Cheryl Sandbak with 13.

Grizzlies fizzle against Weber State

Montana senior forward Allan Nielsen was named to the Big Sky Conference all-tournament team for his efforts during Weber State's 98-71 routing of the Grizzlies in a playoff game Friday night in Ogden, Utah.

Nielsen, who scored 20 points against Weber—16 in the second half—finished his collegiate career as the fourteenth leading scorer in UM history.

The Weber State Wildcats went on to win the championship title for the second consecutive year by walloping Northern Arizona University, 92-70, Saturday night. NAU beat Idaho State 90-76 in and made 30 of 39 free throws in berth in the championship game against Weber.

The Wildcats will play New Mexico State Friday at Lawrence, Kan. in the first round of the NCAA regionals.

The Wildcats pumped in 34 of 56 field goals, grabbed 48 rebounds and made 30 of 39 free throws in Friday's game against the Grizzlies.

The Grizzlies on the other hand, hauled down only 34 rebounds and made 17 of 21 free throws.

Montana stayed with Weber for the first 10 minutes, trailing 18-17. But during the next 10 minutes Weber outscored Montana 32-15, grabbing a 50-32 advantage at the half.

The Wildcats expanded their lead to 59-34 with 16 minutes left to play. Montana managed to close the margin to within 16, 65-49, with 12 minutes left, but that was as close as the Grizzlies could get.

Weber State center Richard Smith led all scorers with 24 points, making seven of 11 shots from the field and 10 of 10 from the charity line.

For the Grizzlies, Nielsen's 20-point effort was followed by center John Stroeder with 17 and guards Tim McCauley and Craig Zanon with 10 apiece.

Stroeder hauled down eight rebounds.

Gymnasts grab third place

The Montana women's gymnastics team placed third in a quadrangular meet in Pullman, Wash. this past weekend.

Washington State University won the Pullman meet with a total of 116.2 points, followed by Eastern Washington University with 110.7 points, UM with 108.4 points and Montana State University with 108.2 points.

Maureen Thomas captured

fourth in the all-around competition by scoring 30.55 points. In individual events, Thomas tied for third place in the uneven bars, gained fourth on the balance beam and floor exercise and fifth in the vault.

Montana's Dana Gail placed fifth on the uneven bars with a 7.35-point performance.

This weekend the Grizzlies travel to Corvallis, Oregon to compete in the NCWSA regionals.

House OKs sale of hard liquor outside taverns

HELENA (AP) — A Senate-approved bill which will allow hard liquor to be served outside of taverns at events such as fairs, rodeos, fund-raising dinners and similar special events got a preliminary OK from the House of Representatives Monday.

Under the bill, such off-premises liquor catering may be done, however, only by tavern owners — that is, persons who already hold state all-beverage liquor licenses.

Thus the bill was designed to protect tavern owners from competition by others such as was said to be the case in a bill killed by the House earlier. That bill would have allowed the sponsor of any special event to get a special temporary liquor license of his own.

Meanwhile, a Senate bill increasing the number of groups which may obtain temporary liquor licenses was referred to the House Rules Committee to determine if it may be considered by the House. Rules forbid consideration of bills which have a similar purpose to others killed earlier.

Opponents of Monday's bill said it further entrenches tavern owners' monopoly over liquor in Montana. Others said opening hard-liquor bars at so many public events will compound law enforcement problems now being experienced because of beer sales at such places.

In other House floor action, a Senate-passed bill to remove the four public representatives on the Legislature's Environmental Quality Council was killed.

The bill would have made the EQC an all-legislator body.

The Environmental Quality Council is an arm of the Legislature which acts as an overseer of state agencies dealing with environmental issues.

Opponents of the bill said the public members serve the public interest well on the council. Supporters of the bill said the presence of non-legislators on the Council has damaged its credibility with the Legislature.

If you've had trouble getting financing for a mobile home or recreational vehicle purchase lately, House action on another Senate bill Monday may interest you.

The House endorsed a bill which sponsors said will make more money available in the state for such loans.

Interest rates will be higher than before, however.

Spokesmen for the industry say low interest rates have created the tight money situation and dealers and buyers are both at a standstill.

The bill advanced Monday by

Mission Mountain to perform at kegger

Mission Mountain Wood Band has agreed to play at this year's annual benefit kegger, Bob McCue, chairman of the Missoula Liquid Assets Corporation, said yesterday.

The band, which has performed at the kegger for the past seven years, will receive $5,000 for performing, McCue said, adding that the amount is "a little more than last year."

MLAC does not yet know who the other bands will be, McCue said.

The kegger will be at the K-O Rodeo Grounds up Miller Creek Road either May 16 or May 23.

the House raises the allowable interest rate and is supposed to make it easier to get a loan for a mobile or motor home. Supporters say it also might allow loans to be made for up to 15 or 20 years on mobile homes and RV's.

The House also gave debate-stage endorsement to bills authorizing county civil authorities to control and license dogs and requiring Senate confirmation of the governor's appointees to the Board of Real Estate.

Northern Tier lecture tonight

Charles Kay, a biologist and researcher who served as an environmental adviser on the Alaska Pipeline project, will present a slide show and lecture tonight in the University Center Ballroom at 7:30 p.m.

Kay's presentation, titled "What the Pipeline Did to Alaska," will compare the crossing of the Northern Tier Pipeline in Montana to the Alaska Pipeline in Alaska.

Kay's speech is being sponsored by the Student Action Center and ASUM Programming.

institutions for perhaps only 20 to 30 days more.

LeRoy Schramm, chief of labor relations for the state, said the Warm Springs offer averaged "a little over 5.5 percent," with some lower-paid workers receiving a little over 7 percent and higher-paid workers receiving a little less.

Schramm said the revised offer would cost "a little more" than the original offer, but the the provision for straight 2 percent step increases would benefit both the workers and the state.

"The step is not as costly as giving everybody a 2 percent raise, because of the turnover," Schramm said. He said, for example, that a worker at the Step 11 level might be replaced by a new worker at Step 1.

"In some ways the step pays for itself. That way we could increase the compensation for the people who stick around."

Steps in the present state pay plan average about 2 percent but vary from about 1 percent to slightly over 2 percent, he said.

Assault . . .

The first condition is that Sandstrom not be out alone "for any reason" after 9 p.m. He must be accompanied by his lawyer or his employer.

Secondly, Sandstrom must not have any contact with the woman who filed the complaint.

Sandstrom is scheduled to reappear in justice court on March 13 at which time he may request a preliminary hearing on the felony charge. A trial date has not been set.

Pay raise . . .

appropriation of the same amount for athletics at MSU, South said.

In organized research, South said, MSU had been overfunded because a one-time appropriation of $119,000 for fiscal 1975 for a foreign trade study had been built into the budget base. MSU has been funded each year since then for a one-time project.

South said the base for organized research would be determined by adding what both units spent and dividing that figure in half. UM spent less than $200,000 in 1978, South said, and MSU spent $407,000. This results in a base of $303,000 for each unit.

Zero-Based Budget

The subcommittee also considered funding Western's non-faculty staff and capital budgets from a zero base rather than the 1978 base. South said that the 1978 base method, used for the other five units of the system, would provide Western with more support staff than it needs for its enrollment.

"Western has reached the point where we can no longer compare them and make adjustments with the other five units," he said. Sen. Larry Fasbender, D-Fort Shaw, a member of the subcommittee, agreed, saying, "I don't think we have any choice but a zero-based budget at Western Montana College."

Faculty at Western would be funded on enrollment as are the other units, South said. Western's operating expenses would be funded from a 1978 base, South said, because the cost of maintaining the campus, utilities and other such expenses is not dependent on the number of people using the facilities.

The subcommittee also agreed to recommend an appropriation of $158,000 a year for support of the physical education complex at Eastern, to take that burden off the students. South said EMC students were the only ones in the system supporting their PE complex and that the appropriation "must be made if we are to treat all the units fairly."
