CAMPUS COMMENTARY

CAMPUS COMMENTARY • CAMPUS COMMENTARY • CAMPUS COMMENTARY • CAMPUS COMMENTARY •

I came to Eastern Michigan University with a number of expectations and anticipations—that I would find a University firmly committed to excellence, that I would find a large, active and committed alumni body, that I would find new colleagues who are dedicated to what they do and to the University, that I would find strong support for alumni goals and activities both among the alumni and the University community—and I wasn't disappointed.

So far, Eastern has been everything I expected and more, and it's good to be here.

Before coming to Eastern, I was director of alumni affairs for eight years at Wright State University in Ohio. Wright State is a 15,000-student commuter campus that is part of the state university system in Ohio. My new job here at Eastern enables me to work with a larger body of alumni and gives me an opportunity to deal with more of the traditional alumni programs.

I am looking forward to meeting Eastern's alumni and finding out what your concerns and suggestions are. We in the Alumni Relations Office as well as the University in general are very interested in your opinions and welcome any input you'd care to give, whether it would be services we can offer alumni or suggestions toward helping the University reach its goals.

One of the mechanisms set up to help facilitate communication between alumni and the University is the Alumni Association. At the back of this magazine, you will find a listing of the Alumni Association Board of Directors. I encourage you to read over this list and take a moment to single out one or two you feel you could express your views and concerns to. That's what the Alumni Board is there for; these individuals have been elected to represent the total alumni body.

I would also like to encourage parents of EMU students to contact Alumni Board members with their ideas or suggestions. Any board members can be contacted through the Alumni Office.

In this issue of Eastern Today, we highlight some of the people and activities that give Eastern its special character.

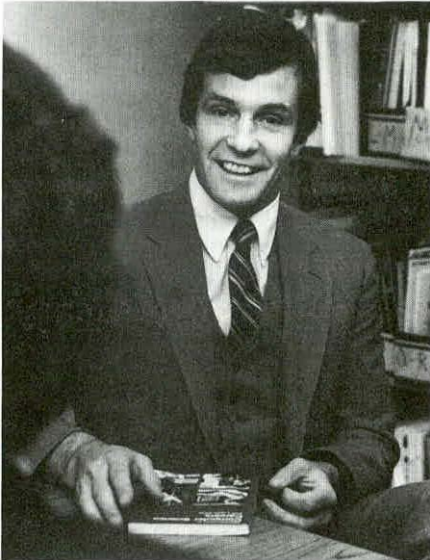

I wasn't on campus for more than a few hours before I met Ted Tangalakis. I immediately understood the warm feelings the EMU community has for this gentleman and why he was singled out to receive an honorary degree from the University.

Another person I happened to meet with right away on campus was Jim Vick, acting director of the Career Services Center. The center's services and Jim's direction fell right in line with the level of dedication and commitment to the University that I had expected to find here.

I'd like to emphasize that, if you're on campus, we wholeheartedly encourage you to stop by the Alumni Office upstairs in McKenny Union, Room 202; or if you're not on campus, call us at (313) 487-0250. We welcome any opportunities to organize alumni gatherings on or off campus, so please don't hesitate to contact us with any suggestions you may have.

I hope you enjoy this issue of Eastern Today and I sincerely look forward to hearing from you.

The Career Services Center Serves

By Sue McKenzie

Even though Jim Vick, acting director of the Career Services Center, is still waiting for furniture to fill his new offices on the fourth floor of Goodison Hall, he already has some very well-defined plans underway for the future of the center.

One of these plans is to provide a service to alumni that has never before been available—a computerized referral system that will match potential employers and job seekers. Another new plan involving alumni is the development of a career counseling network of EMU students and alumni who are willing to offer advice on job opportunities and preparation for specific fields of employment.

The service package that the Career Services Center currently offers to alumni is available for a yearly fee of $25. With this package, alumni can participate in on-campus interviews with companies that recruit at EMU, they can talk with a center staff member for help with career counseling, they can attend workshops on interviewing techniques and resume preparation, and they can use the center's credential service.

"That's what we have been offering," said Vick. "This year we're starting something new. We have developed what we're calling a computerized referral service. With that service, any senior or alum who registers will get his or her name on the data base. When potential employers contact us looking for people to interview, we take the selective criteria they give us and run it against our data base of students. Out pops a list of names. Or, if we want, out pops a stack of student profiles—standardized, one-page resumes—which we send to the company, and the company will contact those people it wishes to interview. Or, we send information to the student that says, 'This company is trying to fill a job—you fit.'"

Vick wants to enlarge the data base, and he's making the service available to alumni this year at no charge. "Because it's so new, I don't feel we can charge anybody," he said. Later, when the program is better established, alumni probably will be charged a nominal fee for the service.

To register as job seekers, alumni can fill out the attached form and mail it to the Career Services Center. They will then receive an information packet to read, fill out and return to the center.

The service is also free to potential employers. "All it costs is a postage stamp," said Vick. "We would encourage our alums who may be involved in hiring at their firm to use it; it's certainly an efficient, inexpensive way of recruiting."

For alumni who are established in their careers, the Career Services Center and the Office for Alumni Relations offer an opportunity to serve EMU through the development of a student-alumni career counseling network.

"We would like to identify, say, 1,000 alumni who would be willing to give career advice to EMU students," explained Vick. "We would develop one list of alumni organized by job title, and one list by academic major. On that list we would provide telephone numbers or addresses where our students could contact the alumni for a brief discussion about what they do, how they got there and how their jobs relate to their education."

Students at this point would be interviewing primarily for information, and not necessarily for a job. A student who is a chemistry major, for example, could look up alums who were chemistry majors and find out what kinds of jobs they hold now. Or a student interested in chemical research could contact alums now doing that work and find out what kind of educational preparation they had, what course offerings they would recommend, what entry-level jobs are available in the field, exactly what the jobs entail and how they may affect the person's lifestyle and free time.

These new services are part of an overall reorganization of the center, both in terms of its operations and its philosophy. "We intend to look at student employment as a step in the development of the career path, co-op as another step, placement as another step and alumni services as the final step," said Vick.

"One of the big changes we're making is combining student employment, co-op and placement counseling functions under

The Career Services Center's new offices on the fourth floor of Goodison Hall may not be quite finished yet, but both job seekers and employers will find them a big improvement over the house on West Forest that was the center's home since 1967.

Computerization of the center's operations will save hours of work and make such services as the computerized job-referral system possible. Patricia Tassie, career services staff member, inputs information to the data base.

Alumni

one umbrella, so we have a unified operation," Vick continued. "We're going to divide our office into essentially three functional arms: we're going to have a marketing wing, a group that will do nothing but market our undergraduates, our graduating seniors and our alumni. We're going to have a branch that deals with on-campus preparation of our students—to be ready to take jobs—which will also deal with employers when they get on campus. And then there will finally be an operations arm—our computer-based systems to make all this work.

"For a long time we've been operating with little boxes and little cards. We've been doing everything manually," said Vick. "We've wasted hours and hours."

"We've got a ways to go," said Vick, looking around him at the empty spaces and bare walls of his office. "There's no question about it. But we have the basis for a real solid program here. We're getting good comments back about the professional staff and the attitude here."

So, whether you are interested in finding a job, finding an employee (regular, student or co-op) for your company, or helping students define their career paths, there is a wide range of opportunities and a wealth of professional competence available to you at the Career Services Center.

stitution since 1946:

TED

By Chris Kozlowski
and Sue McKenzie

You walk in the aged green wooden door and the familiar bells chime. The peculiar aroma of medicinal alcohol and candy fills the air, and you feel as though you've been there before.

If you're an alumnus of Eastern Michigan University or have ever passed through its academic halls before, you probably have been there—if only to cash a check, fill a prescription, buy a magazine, or maybe even just to sit down and have a Coke.

A fixture on the corner of Normal and Cross streets, Campus Drugs has remained virtually unchanged for more than 40 years. The same thick wooden counter is still in the same spot to the left of the entrance. And Ted's cage, where he fills prescriptions, shows some signs of age but will probably never be replaced by polished formica and bullet-proof glass.

Possibly the only surprise that awaits visiting alumni is that they will most likely be remembered.

Theodore "Ted" Tangalakis, 68, has owned and operated Campus Drugs since 1946, and takes modest pride in being able to remember students who graduated in '46 just as easily as he remembers students from the class of 1984.

Ted's appearance may have changed since this 1969 photograph, but the store hasn't changed a bit. Neither has Ted's personality or his devotion to EMU.

Shuffling through 30-year-old photographs, Ted can rattle off names, birthplaces and current addresses of many of his former employees—which is no small feat considering Ted estimates that more than 1,700 students have worked for him over the years.

More than 40 years ago, after attending Alma College and serving in World War II, Ted decided it was time to plant permanent roots with his wife Matina and their son George.

Matina, who was born in Chicago, wanted to settle down in a large city, but Ted's small-town roots (he was born in St. Louis, Mich.) kept tugging at him. The young couple sought advice from the president of the National Pharmaceutical Association.

"He said, 'If you come to Chicago, you're gonna be a small fish in a big pond,'" Ted remembers. "'On the other hand, if you go to that small town, what kind of potential do you really have?'"

Nevertheless, the Tangalakis family decided to settle down in Ann Arbor, and Ted took a job with a local pharmacy chain in January 1946. Ted used to ask every salesman who came in if he knew of any stores for sale. One afternoon, a salesman finally gave Ted a tip on a place available in Ypsilanti.

That was June 1946, and Ted spent the summer getting acclimated to his new place.

"I was still getting used to civilian life, and working hard to make ends meet.

Working in the store now, I try to get out by five o'clock. But in those early days—no way! I used to come in at quarter after seven in the morning, go home at six at night, return to the store at seven, and stay until 11. You pay your dues."

Today, Ted Tangalakis has complete control over his little corner of the world. He owns three successful businesses, Campus Drugs, Theo-Door's, and the Next Door Shoppe.

But more than any business success he has achieved, Ted is proud of his association with EMU and the relationship he shares with its students, past and present.

"Eastern is my life," said Ted. "I hurt when she hurts."

In recognition of all he's done for members of the EMU community, Ted was awarded an honorary degree at Eastern's winter commencement ceremonies in December.

From his vantage point across the street from campus, Ted has seen many changes in 40 years. "When I first came here, it was the crew cut and everyone was fully and neatly dressed. Girls were in skirts, saddle shoes and bobby socks. They had to be in their dorms by 11 p.m."

Most of all, Ted recalls, the '40s and '50s were the days of "Coke dates." Though it's now long gone, a soda fountain once took its place in Campus Drugs and, in its heyday, Ted said, "You couldn't get in the place!" Business was hopping, especially during sporting events, because EMU's gym was located right next door—where there's now a parking lot.

"The '60s were days of turmoil on all campuses," Ted said. "They were terribly upsetting to me because I had not grown up that way. Students went from wearing nice clean slacks to wearing blue jeans that hadn't been washed in weeks."

Ted remembers one incident in which nearly all the windows of buildings on Cross Street were broken by students—all except for his. "That said something to me, but when I saw the police out here with police dogs, I thought, 'They've lost their marbles!'"

As for students of the '80s, Ted said, "I don't think there's a typical student. They're dressing nicer; they're wearing blue jeans that are clean!"

Nowadays Ted looks after the drug store while his children manage the card shop and Theo-Door's. With the help of George, 39, Cerene, 34, and Dean, 33, the Tangalakis make their mark on Ypsilanti; and Ted values the hard work and closeness it took to get them there. "With them to share the load, it means I can sit and have an extra cup of coffee and visit with my grandson Teddy every morning."

Still, there's no such thing as an average day for Ted. "That's what's nice," he said. "I always say nothing new is going to happen today. But every once in a while something happens, and I'll look at the help—and they'll start to laugh. Then I'll say, 'That's something different.'"

George 'The Iceman' Gervin: EMU's Contribution to the NBA

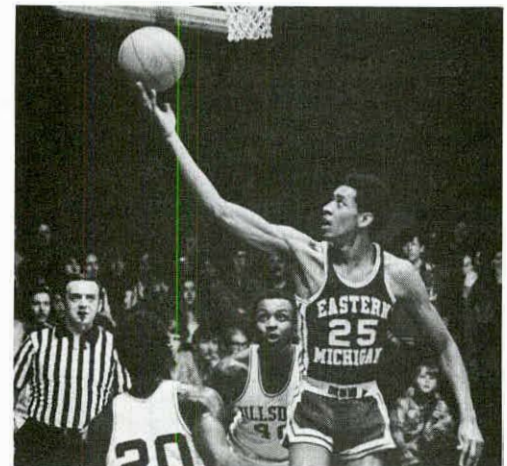

By Chris Kozlowski

George Gervin, a National Basketball Association All-Star, goes high in the air for a shot against the Pistons.

George Gervin—1971-72

George Gervin (25) connects on a reverse layup in a game against Hillsdale during his intercollegiate career at Eastern Michigan.

A long time ago, in a field house not too far away, there reigned a championship college basketball team—a team led by a magical young sophomore, which would win its way to the NCAA College Division National Tournament.

Back in 1972, George Gervin was a 19-year-old, 6'8", 170-pound All-American. Born in an east side Detroit ghetto, Gervin struggled through secondary school, surviving through the hoop to make it to California's Long Beach State—for only two weeks—then transferring to EMU.

Today, George "The Iceman" Gervin earns between $650,000 and $1 million a year (depending on how many games his team wins) playing professional basketball for the National Basketball Association's San Antonio Spurs.

Sometimes called the invisible superstar, Gervin's hefty paycheck is not made out for nothing. In addition to winning numerous NBA scoring titles, Gervin is the third most effective shooter in NBA history, trailing only Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Wilt Chamberlain.

He's got it all now, but it didn't come easily.

"If I had it to do all over again, I would try to do it the right way," Gervin said. Making it through high school was exciting because of basketball. But Gervin feels he should have placed a higher value on his education through those years.

"I consider myself fortunate to be where I am. If it weren't for basketball, who knows where I'd be today?" When advising young pro-basketball hopefuls, Gervin likes to remind them, "Education measures a person's true value in life. Playing ball should be secondary."

Gervin barely made it through high school but was excited to play college ball—and even more anxious to get to the pros.

During his sophomore year at Eastern, Gervin was a catalyst in getting the Hurons to the NCAA championships. But in the semi-final game against Roanoke College, EMU lost 99-73, and perhaps more importantly, lost Gervin for the rest of the season.

With a little more than seven minutes remaining in the game, Gervin was ejected, and eventually suspended, for engaging in a scuffle with a member of the opposing team.

If the suspension weren't enough, Gervin found himself in more hot water that following August. He was one of five EMU athletes declared ineligible by the NCAA because of "the inadvertent use of non-national test results in determining the freshman eligibility" of the athletes.

Thinking his college basketball career may have been ending, Gervin dropped out of EMU to play with the semi-pro Pontiac Chaparrals, and eventually ended up playing with the Virginia Squires of the American Basketball Association. In 1974 he signed with the San Antonio Spurs, and has remained there ever since.

At age 32, Gervin is beginning to think about hanging up his basketball shoes for good. Although he says, "I'd like to play almost forever," Gervin plans on retiring within about the next four years. He has business interests to keep him busy, but what he's looking forward to most is spending time with his family—his wife Joyce and their children George Jr., 8, Jared, 6, and Tia, 5.

Gervin was one of six children. His father left his family when he was about two years old, and though his mother did a wonderful job raising the family, he says, he feels cheated by not having a father. He doesn't want that to happen to his children.

Gervin recently told a Newsweek reporter, "I want to establish strong communication with my children, and give them a lot of good memories of growing up with a father who loved them and cared about them."

If Gervin does as well with his family as he's done in his basketball career, he's sure to end up in the "Father Hall of Fame"—just as sure as he is to make it into the NBA Hall of Fame.

Men's swimming coach Mike Jones says, "If you think last season was something to behold, wait until this season is over!" Last year, the EMU men's swim team was crowned Mid-American Conference champion for the fifth consecutive year—tying a conference record for most consecutive team titles. The 1984-85 squad, led by returning All-American Kevin Miller, is already off to a fast start. The EMU swimmers have set varsity and conference records in the 400-yard medley relay and in the 1,000-yard freestyle.

"I feel the Mid-American Conference race will be between Kent State, Northern Illinois and EMU," boasted wrestling coach John Easley. The Hurons finished a strong fourth place in 1984 and are expected to challenge for the top spot in 1985. Returning for EMU are MAC champions Steve Brown and Robert Beck. Both Brown and Beck competed at the NCAA National Championships in 1984 and are hoping to return in 1985.

"We had a great season last year; we won just about everything there was to win," stated EMU men's track coach Bob Parks. Parks expects the Hurons to have another good year but realizes it will be hard to top last season. Last year, Parks' Hurons captured the Mid-American Conference Indoor Invitational and the Outdoor MAC Championship. EMU also won both the Indoor and Outdoor Central Collegiate Conference Championships. The Hurons set a world record in the sprint medley relay and captured an NCAA national title in the distance medley relay. The highlight of the year took place at the 1984 Summer Olympic Games in Los Angeles. Junior Earl Jones captured a bronze medal for EMU and the United States in the 800-meter dash. "We have a number of real talented athletes returning," said Parks. "We can't top the Olympics, because this isn't an Olympic year—and you don't break world records every day, but EMU should have the same kind of team it did a year ago."

The Eastern Michigan women's track team finished second in the Mid-American Conference Indoor Invitational and captured a fourth place finish in the Mid-

American Conference Outdoor Championship in 1984. The Hurons just missed taking the team championship indoors, finishing second to host Western Michigan by one point. Assistant track coach Robert Hunt expects the Hurons to have another fine year with EMU having some of the best sprinters and jumpers in the MAC.

The EMU men's gymnastics team placed fourth at the Great Lakes Conference Championship last year and Huron head coach Marv Johnson hopes his team can improve and finish in one of the top three spots in 1985. Returning is EMU's top all-around performer, senior Marcel Humes. Joining Humes is the talented duo of Mike Sherman (EMU's captain) and Andre Dailey. All three are expected to have stellar seasons.

"This year's team has a lot more talent and depth," stated EMU head women's gymnastics coach Steve Wilce. Wilce's Hurons finished a strong fifth place at the Mid-American Conference Championships in 1984 with three Hurons finishing in the top 10 in the all-around competition. Only Bowling Green could match the Hurons in that category. Sharon McNie, Lynn Wright and Audrey Novak hope to repeat their strong performances of 1984 and lead the Hurons to an upper division finish in 1985.

"I thought we had some really strong games last year," said men's basketball coach Jim Boyce. "With the people we have back, and the talented freshmen we've recruited, we can be successful this year. Our team may seem young, but I can guarantee this—they're exciting to watch."

The Eastern Michigan women's basketball team returns five starters from last year's team that finished 13-14 overall and 8-10 in the Mid-American Conference. EMU head coach Kathy Hart is hoping that the year of experience will pay off for the Hurons as they attempt to finish among the top four teams in the conference. The top four teams will compete at the Mid-American Conference post-season tournament (March 8-9) with the champion representing the conference at the NCAA National Tournament.

EMU's football team may not have finished at the top of the MAC standings last season, but they experienced a little more than just success on the field. The Hurons finished the 1984 season with a 2-7-2 overall record and finished at 2-5-2 in the Mid-American Conference (8th place), but more than that, they scored an "Eastern Energy" victory by averaging 18,999 fans at every home game. EMU finished fourth in the MAC attendance race behind Central Michigan, Toledo and Miami. The "Energy" also paid off for three outstanding football players. Offensive tackle Dale Boone and place-kicker Mario Ferretti were named to the 1984 All-Mid-American Conference Second Team. Free safety Anthony Fields received honorable mention All-Conference honors.

Quirk-Sponberg Campaign Reaches Goal

EMU President John W. Porter notified the Kresge Foundation in November that the University has raised approximately $1.3 million for renovation of Quirk Theatre and construction of the new Sponberg Theatre, meeting the Kresge challenge gift of $250,000 and a $150,000 gift from an anonymous donor who pledged to give one dollar for every two dollars raised by the University before Dec. 31, 1984.

"We were very pleased to announce the success of the first capital campaign in EMU's history," said Jim Brunnemer, director of development. "This was the first completely privately financed building project at Eastern, and its success testifies to the commitment to excellence of our friends and alumni."

Major contributors to the campaign were the anonymous donor who kicked off the campaign, the Kresge Foundation, the Herrick Foundation ($100,000), the Charles Stewart Mott Foundation ($75,000), Margaret Cameron ($50,000), Alfred Taubman ($50,000), the EMU Board of Regents ($50,000) and Shirley Houseman ($11,500). Other contributors to the campaign were the Gerstacker Foundation, James and Ruth Glasgow, Alfred Kales, the National Bank of Ypsilanti, Nancy Hawes Wagner and Richard

EMU Fourth Largest University in State

Eastern Michigan University was one of only three of the state's 15 colleges and universities to report an enrollment increase this fall, jumping from fifth to fourth largest university in terms of fall head count. As of October 1984, Eastern enrolled 19,210 students, an increase of 330 students over 1983.

EMU President John Porter said this year's enrollment report was especially significant. "We are the only institution of the top nine to show an increase this year. I think that demonstrates that students have recognized the quality and marketability of our academic programming, the quality of instruction, the excitement of campus life and our commitment to assuring access to higher education.

"It is particularly noteworthy that Eastern's share of the 'market' has increased steadily from 7.85 percent in 1980 to 8.66 percent this year. As a result, we expect to achieve a final enrollment of more than 20,000 students for the first time in our history."

The largest institution in the state is Michigan State University with an enrollment of 40,272. Second is the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor with an enrollment of 34,347. Wayne State University ranks third with an enrollment of 29,070.

Phonathon Hopes to Raise $125,000

Plans are underway for the 1985 Eastern Michigan University Phonathon, and this year's fund-raising goal is $125,000. Alumni and students will staff 30 telephones for 20 nights of calling, Sundays through Thursdays, March 3-28, from 6-9:30 p.m. in 312 McKenny.

"We encourage alumni participation at the calling end," said Dan Milliman, coordinator of annual giving. "We have a lot of fun and it's a great opportunity to serve the University and get to know some of our students at the same time."

If alumni are interested in helping with the Phonathon, they may contact Milliman through the Development Office, 212 McKenny, (313) 487-0252.

"The money we raise is used for every conceivable purpose at the University," said Milliman. "We look for unrestricted gifts to the University's general fund, but donors may designate their gifts for whatever purpose they choose."

Last year, the Phonathon raised $101,360, $11,360 more than its goal of $90,000. With enthusiastic support from alumni, friends and students, this year the Phonathon can be even more successful!

Worswick. Contributions also came from the estates of Leone DePew Perry, Hazel Agner Christman, Glenn and Mary Chappell, and Julius and Ruth Lockhart Lerch.

Ground was broken for the project in September, and construction is now underway. Participating in the ground-breaking ceremony was Grace Sponberg-Pfau, wife of the late Harold Sponberg, for whom the new theater will be named.

Sponberg was president of EMU from 1965 to 1974, the University's period of most rapid growth. Under Sponberg's administration, 27 new curriculum programs were developed, enrollment nearly doubled from 10,200 to almost 20,000 students, and the Teacher Education Department, the College of Business and the University itself all received some form of accreditation. Rynearson Stadium, the baseball stadium and track facilities were built, and EMU joined the Mid-American Conference and the National Collegiate Athletic Association. Pray-Harold, Sill Hall, Mark Jefferson, and the dormitory complexes of Phelps-Sellers, Walton-Putnam and Hill-Hoyt-Pittman were constructed, in addition to expansion and remodeling projects.

EMU Endorses Project to Improve Cross Street Area

As part of a combined effort between Eastern Michigan University, the Ypsilanti Chamber of Commerce, local businesses and area residents, the EMU Board of Regents has taken action to help revitalize the Cross Street area adjacent to campus between Normal and Hamilton streets.

The Cross Street Committee, a group of campus and community representatives chaired by EMU's Roy Wilbanks, assistant to the president for governmental and community relations, began work on the project a year ago and made an eight-point proposal to the Board of Regents in August.

Included in the eight-point proposal are: EMU's endorsement of a University Village area, located on Cross Street between Huron Street and the Water Tower; the development of improved residential opportunities in the Village area; the authorization for EMU's physical plant and public safety directors to help develop a plan to maximize pedestrian safety and access to the Cross Street properties; and joint cooperation between EMU's campus police and the Ypsilanti Police Department to establish walking police patrols in the Cross Street area. EMU also would share in the cost of installing sodium vapor lights along Cross Street.

Implementation of the eight recommendations has already begun and will continue through June 1986.
