"I don't believe any of us doubt as to the worth-whileness," he stated, "and the willingness of the people to have it can only be determined by a vote."

Mayor Geerlings stated that he feit the project to be very worthwhile, that library facilities in the city are inadequate, and that a building of this type will give cultural benefits as well as influence to the city. Ald. Brouwer stated that he is not in favor of the erection of the building. Since there are no buildings sufficiently large in the city to take care of large crowds on certain occasions, such as the Holland Fish and Game club banquets, conventions, commencements, and basket ball games, he stated that he felt "a youth center is our number one project."

Following a question by Ald. Smith as to whether the $85,000 included furnishings for the buildng, Willard Wichers applied in the affirmative. Miss Schermer then was called upon by Mayor Geerlings and showed how badly the local library is in need of space. Vote on the question follows:

 HOLLAND'S RIPLEY SHOWS "BELIEVE IT OR NOT" SOMETHING

There is more than one Ripley who could edit a "Believe It or Not" column. Holland burst forth with a claimant for that distinction last week. The local aspirant is C. Eugene Ripley, manager of the Holland office of the Michigan Bell Telephone Co.

For several days, the local Mr. Ripley had a soft maple seedling sprouting between the front fender and the body of his car. He care fully nurtured the plant and cared for it most tenderly. When Ripley's car was taken to a local garage to be washed, the washers were instructed not to disturb the plant However, after the "shine" had been put on, the maple's surround ings became too unnatural and the tree "up and died." *******

Our lesson today is located in a South Haven, North Holland and time of struggle and tumult and Holland to be represented at the crudeness. But it tells a most charming and fascinating and romantic story. It intrigues the mind. It grips the heart. It stimulates the imagination. And the reading heart goes every step of the way ty, Friday evening, August 5, at the With those who go out from home the V.F.W. hall. But we are concerned with the two principal characters in this dewill become the bride of Gerald The latter was assuredly a woman of strength and character and of a pleasing personality. She loved and was loved. No ordinary woman love and devotion as came to her from her two daughters-in-law and especially from Ruth. Had Naomi to return home. Much as this good woman loves her sons' wives her great heart cannot allow them to make the adventure and the sacrifice. She thinks of what leaving home involves and the radical changes necessitated by the transplanting into a different environment. She sees what they cannot see. She therefore does all she can to disourage their going with her. Orpah yields to her pleading and goes back home. Ruth persists in her great and loving purpose and declares it in language beautiful and immortal. It is to be rated with the classics of the heart's expressions. It is an open window through which we may look into a rare soul. It is a revelation of a mind that is made up to a course of life in spite of all possible untoward circumstances. It is the glowing declaration of a heart that devoted to a far-flung purpose. Her fixed resolution involved a great deal more than appears upon the surface. It means leaving home without any hope of seeing t again. It means an almost clean creak with the past, with its tradtions and customs and conventions in short, with her way and maner of life. It means a new resilence among a new people with different traditions and a different istory and a different religion and different social atmosphere.

Only brave souls can make ad ventures that involve such radical and far-reaching changes, that have packed into them so many uncertainties as to their outcome Only souls that are lured by great visions and are motivated by great aim adventure into life's hazard-It is hard to make up one's mind to move from one country to another. We like the home folk and the home ways. It is hard to change one's religion, but such a change comes about gradually. It may be that the silent influence of Naomi's life upon Ruth led her to see the superiority of Naomi's God to her own gods. We do not go far astray in our thinking when we say that Jehovah captured Ruth's heart through Naomi's beautiful life. At any rate she chose the God of her mother-in-law and with a determination that is stirring. We cannot explain God through our language, but we can reveal Him through our living. And we would note, too, that Ruth was willing to be buried in the foreign land to which she was now going. That was no mean part of her sublime resolution. There is a drawing power in the home cemetery where the family lot is. At least we want to sleep with our fathers and this has been true of untold generations of mankind.

One cannot read this beautiful story of Ruth and escape the thought and the wonder of the fact thought and the wonder of the fact that there are great souls among all the races of people. Lovely and gentle Ruth came up out of the heart of paganism to be a glorious world figure. By the strange and romantic Providence of God she was bound like a gold thread into the ancestral line of our Lord. And when He bids His church to go into all the world to make disciples of all nations He is but sending His disciples after His own—His own by every right of blood and love.

Next Week A Gala Week In Saugatuck

OUR PICTURESQUE NEIGH-BORING TOWN WILL BE DE-VOTED TO ART; HOLLAND SHOULD PARTICIPATE

Elaborate preparations for the annual Arts Fete at Saugatuck on August 10, 11 and 12, reveal a curous story of conquest.

Picturesque Saugatuck with its sheltered cove for Great Lakes watercraft, its dune mountains and its carefully nurtured atmosphere of the 1890's, virtually is com-mandeered during artists' week. The villagers do 'most everything except stand on their heads and wiggle their ears to please the throngs of tourists who come curious to view the goings-on.

Just now, for instance, the 561 villagers who comprise the town's winter population are reheard a "Donning of the Smocks" cere-mony which is to be the opening feature of the 1938 show.

Every merchant, tradesman, and householder will put on artists' smocks and berets, assisted by a bevy of pretty girls, after which the whole populace will fall into line for a grand parade. This oc-curs on Wednesday afternoon, August 10. The rest of the week is to bring all manner of sports activities, exhibitions of paintings, local pictures in all the store windows, and a grand arts' ball on Friday evening, August 12, at the beautiwas held Monday at 5 p. m. in the ful Big Pavilion ball room, which is to conclude the fete.

four summer art schools ocated in Saugatuck and Douglas, ts sister village, completely dominate vacation activities there. The Chicago Art Institute's summer school, located across the chain ferry to the west of the village, is the oldest. It was established there 30 years ago. The AK studio, established by Albert Krehbiel of Chicago some 12 years ago; the Greason summer school, established some four years ago by William Greason of Detroit, and Joseph Trevitts of Philadelphia; and the Taylor academy, in its fourth season under direction of Cora Bliss Taylor, also offer art instruction.

More than 500 artists, at one time or another during the season, are at Saugatuck painting to their heart's content. Saugatuck also has attracted other cultural groups as schools of music and writing, are springing up this summer to supplement the other activities.

The civic celebration arranged in nonor of these summer guests, who outnumber the town's permanent population, is one of the tourist attractions of western Michigan during August. Artists will paint n the streets during the fete. The masked, costume Arts ball on Aug. 12 is a climax to these colorful ceremonies.

Most of the painters, etchers, sculptors and art students are members of the Saugatuck Art association, which is in part support-ed through proceeds of its annual Arts ball.
