store were forced open and an entrance to the cellar obtained. Desperate efforts were then made to force open the door leading from the cellar to the store, but without avail. The would-be burglars were evidently novices at the business and missed their coveted gain.

This week a gentlemanly agent called at our office and left a box of Cerealine, a flaky substance, the product of white Indian corn, readily soluble, easily digested, and containing a large amount of nitrogenous matter and very palatable; also a bottle of Prof. Horsford's Acid Phosphate, a preparation for dyspepsia etc.; and a bottle of Baking Powder. Now if some of our wood subscribers would keep their promises our happiness would be complete.

No act of kindness is more highly appreciated by us than that of having some old stereotyped would-be business man who does not spend a dollar a year, with all the newspapers in the town, kindly tell us just how we can best spend our money and time "booming" the town. We mean one of those old fellows who never patronize a newspaper unless they have a long obituary notice which they desire printed free and who always print their business cards with a rubber stamp.

THE Scientific American, advertised in another column under the head of "Patents," certainly needs no one to "sing its praises," but, notwithstanding this fact we feel it an absolute duty to the general public, at least that portion of it which has never seen or heard of the paper, to tell them that such a "one is published" at the low price of $3 a year, and its true value cannot be overestimated. It stands at the head of all publications of its kind. A file of the paper may be seen at this office and subscriptions received.

If Holland ever grows up to the full measure of its opportunities, the future great city will surround Macatawa Bay and encircle it with thriving business streets and inviting homes. Then near will be the beach, utilized for bathing, and each summer moonlight night will see the Bay dotted with sail boats, canoes, steam launches, light crafts propelled by oars which beat time to the rower's songs. It is probably a fact that no other city of equal size makes smaller use of its rare advantages for water sports and amusements than Holland City. Why not renew the efforts to perpetuate a Boat Club?

THE new winter time card for the Chicago and West Mich. R'y will go into effect to-morrow, Sunday, noon. There are, we are informed, no very great changes in the running time. The train run by Conductor A. H. Brink, formerly run from Pentwater to Allegan will now be run from Pentwater to Grand Rapids direct, and Conductor Gibbons will run a special from this city to Allegan instead of to Grand Rapids as heretofore. Connections will be made with the D. L. & N. at Big Rapids and the issuing of this time card has been delayed for some time on account of the building of a bridge at Big Rapids to facilitate this arrangement.

POSTMASTER Verbeek this week handed us a letter from Omaha, Neb., in which the writer makes anxious inquiries after two children, a boy and a girl, by the name of Carrie and Daniel Billings. The mother of these children is at death's door and is very desirous of seeing or communicating with them. The last she heard of them was in 1883. The boy was running logs on the Hamlon, or Hamilton river, and the girl was living with a family by the name of Joslin near where the boy worked. The letter also states that any information furnished about them will meet with a substantial reward, and is signed Mary C. Billings, 1017 Harney srteet, Omaha, Neb.

THE Grand Rapids papers announce the marriage of our old friend, Alonzo Herold, of Palen & Herold, of that city. to Miss Sadie Bole on last Wednesday evening. Mr. and Mrs. E. Herold, of this city, father and mother of the groom, attended the wedding ceremony. Mr. Herold is one of Holland's best boys, having been born and brought up here. After the fire of 1871 he commenced work in Grand Rapids and succeeded so well that four years ago he embarked in business for himself. The crowning event in his life, however, was that of last Wednesday evening, and his many friends in this city join us in wishing him and his young bride a pleasant and prosperous voyage

As election is over it is again time to reach out for new manufacturing interests, and to induce capitalists and others from abroad to invest here. In these modern days only those cities which reach out for business get that which lies outside of their own precincts. Even states have to reach out for immigrants, and those states which advertise all their advantages extensively, like Kansas and Dakota, fill up rapidly with new people and new industries. If Holland would offer special inducements to manufacturers, remit their taxes for a few years, and spend a few hundred dollars in advertising the same, it might double its population in a decade. Our sister city of Grand Haven has commenced to stir up these matters and the enterprise of Holland should again assert its sway.

Hope Church Choir Concert.

The News is printed on Friday evening, too early to give a report of the concert of Hope Church Choir, but we trust that friends of the church and citizens generally will give the efforts of this musical organization the hearty encouragement, by a large audience, which they deserve. Music, as a study, is sadly neglected in this city, and when there is so much talent combined in one organization as in this one, it is fair to presume that even the most skeptical will not fail to patronize the art most liberally after having attended this concert and listened to the sweet tones produced by the ladies and gentlemen interested. Below we publish a program of the concert:

The Holland Business Men's Association.

The Holland Business Men's Association is now composed of some twenty-five members. There are over one hundred persons engaged in mercantile pursuits in Holland and every one should become members of this Association. The objects of the Association are clearly defined in the Constitution and By-Laws which we publish below:

PREAMBLE.

Whereas, Comparison of ideas and methods and concert of action are necessary to the well-being of any community; and

Whereas, We believe that a Business Men's Association will accomplish these objects; therefore Resolved, That we, business men of Holland and vicinity, duly assembled on October 21, 1886, do hereby organize ourselves into such an Associa tion and adopt the constitution and by-laws following:

CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE I-NAME. The name of this organization shall be the Holland Business Men's Association. ARTICLE II-OBJECTS.

The objects of this Association shall be to unite merchants and other reputable business men for reform, development of industries and work for the general good, and to promote by all legitimate means the social, moral and business interests of its members. Among the special objects sought to be obtained are the following:

1. Premoting kinder feelings toward honorable competitors and removing the inclination to berate and criminate neighbors in trade.

2. Greater care to secure good helpers and make and keep them worthy by a liveller interest in their efforts, habits and comforts. 3. Inspiring confidence between buyer and seller by doing business on legitimate principles. 4. Shorter hours for doing business in, and an honest endeavor to educate the buyer to make his purchases between 7 a. m. and 6-p. m., six days a 5. The proper observance of all national holidays and more frequent intervals for rest and recreation. 6. Abolishing the tendency to indiscriminate credit and stimulating the selling of merchandise for ready pay.

7. Protection against inferior and adulterate goods, short weights, counts and measures, fictiti -

LATER ELECTION RETURNS.

Michigan.—A Detroit dispatch says: The latest returns do not materially change the Republican plurality for Governor, and the full returns will make the figure not far from 7,000. Full returns show the esction of the following Congressmen, with the pluralities indicated: First District, J. Logan Chipman (Dem.), 1,456; Second District, E. P. Allen (Rep.), 1,012; Third, James O'Donnell (Rep.), 4,711; Fourth, Julius C. Burrows (Rep.), 2,313; Fifth, M. H. Ford (Dem.), 499; Sixth, Mark S. Brewer (Rep.), 1,930; Seventh, Justin R. Whiting (Dem.), 586; Eighth, T. E. Tarsney (Dem.), 510; Ninth, Byron M. Cutcheon (Rep.), 1,500; Tenth, Spencer O. Fisher (Dem.), 1,736; Elevent 1. Seth C. Moffatt (Rep.), 3,500. The latest returns give the State Legislature as follows: Senate—Republicans, 22; Democrats, 10. House—Republicans, 65; Democrats, 30; Labor, 4; doubtful, 3.

Democrats, 10. House—Republicans, 65; Democrats, 30; Labor, 4; doubtful, 3.

Colorado.—A Denver dispatch says the Republicans now concede the election of Adams (Dem.), for Governor, by 2,000 plurality. Indications favor the election of Myron W. Reed (Dem.), to Congress, by a small majority. There is little doubt that the Democrats will have control of the lower house of the General Assembly, and possibly of the Senate.

Indiana.—An Indianapolis telegram says there is no longer any doubt of the Republicans hav-

Indiana.—An Indianapolis telegram says there is no longer any doubt of the Republicans having elected their State ticket, with the exception, possibly, of Bruce Carr, the candidate for Auditor. The Legislature is very close, both parties claiming a majority of from one to three. Iowa.—Nearly complete unofficial returns from every county in the State except Marion and Lyon show that the Democrats carried twenty-two counties, with an aggregate majortwenty-two counties, with an aggregate majority of 14,089, and the Republicans seventy-seven counties, with an aggregate majority of 29,931. Net Republican majority, 15,041. Marion and Lyon will about offset each other. The Republicans elect all the Congressively was the sevent with the congressively constitution. cans elect all the Congressmen except Hayes, Heans elect all the Congressmen except Hayes, Weaver, and Anderson.

Miscellaneous.—The Minnesota Legislature will have a Republican majority of 22 on joint ballot. The vote on Governor is exceedingly close. Israel B. Abbott, a negro Republican, has been elected to Congress from the Second North Carolina District, defeating O'Hara (colored), Republican, and the Democratic nominee. The Democrats of Nebraska have elected one-third of the members of the Legislature, owing to the hostility of the Germans to the Prohibition plank in the Republican platform.

THE EAST.

MRS. LUCY PARSONS, wife of the Chicago anarchist, delivered an address at Kroebel's volksgarten in Jersey City, Sunday afternoon, to an audience of two hundred anarchists. She was particularly vindictive in her abuse of the police in Jersey City, who, she claimed, had intruded upon the meeting, and whom she called bloodsuckers and vampires. She also made a very violent attack on the American flag and on the constitution of the United States. It was noticeable that every time the mulatto woman spoke disrespectfully or sarcastically of the American flag the socialistic element present cheered vociferously....Lawrence Donovan, of New York, who recently secured some notoriety by leaping from the Brooklyn Bridge into the East River, performed a similar feat at Niagara, jumping from the Suspension Bridge. It was a jump of 190 feet, but Donovan emerged from the water with no more serious injuries than a broken rib and bruised hip.... Arthur Orton, who served a long term in an English prison for representing himself as heir to the Tichborne estate, has been arrested in Brooklyn for personating an American soldier and endeavoring to draw his pension....The United States tug Manhattan foundered off the New Haven (Conn.) harbor, and sank immediately, carrying with her all on board.

THE WEST.

TOUCHING the Cherokee strip of 6,000,-000 acres in Indian Territory, Senator Plumb, of Kansas, states that if the Indians option to purchase, which it will not waive in favor of private persons. Frank James, the ex-bandit, now living at Nevada, Mo., has received a letter containing unsigned bank notes for $50, and asking that they be accepted as a memento of the recent express robbery on the St. Louis and San Francisco train. The letter bore the signature of "Jim Cummings." Fotheringham, the express messenger, is still in the custody of the Adams Express Company at St. Louis.

THE Knights of Labor at Chicago ordered all their members to quit work at the Stock Yards. The edict was obeyed by about 5,000 men. The packers held a conference on Sunday, and it was reported that they arrived at the determination to close their houses for a month unless their employes returned to work. The strike is in direct contravention of the agreement made between the packers and the accredited agent of the Richmond convention, and is said to be due to the conduct of Master Workman Butler, who ordered out the men after it was demonstrated to the satisfaction of the Executive Board of the Knights of Labor that the packing firms could not run their business on the eight-hour basis. Grand Master Workman Powderly disclaims all responsibility for the strike. On the representation of Sheriff Hanchett, of Chicago, that his deputies were unable to preserve order at the Stock Yards, Gov. Oglesby ordered the First and Second Regiments of Illinois militia to assemble at their armories ready for active

WASHINGTON.

IT is semi-officially learned that the President has sifted the list of applicants for the Surgeon Generalship down to two-Col. Chas. Sutherland, the senior surgeon, and Lient. Col. John Moore, Assistant Medical Purveyor, and from these the selection will be made....Gen. Swaim is still actively at work trying to secure a mitigation of the unexpired portion of the court-martial sentence in his case. It is understood that a strong paper in his behalf has been filed with the President, signed by numerous Senators and Representatives.

THE Supreme Court of New Jersey has pronounced the excise laws unconstitutional. In Newark alone fifteen hundred licenses are thus rendered void.

MAJOR WILLIAM GENTRY and his sonin-law, T. W. Cloney, had encounters at Sedalia, Mo., with Congressman Heard, pistols being drawn at one time. Political faction feeling caused the trouble, which, it is feared, will be renewed in the near are splitting over the high-pressure cloture future. Cloney was candidate for the proceedings.

postmastership at Sedalia, but Heard re-fused to commend him for the position.

POLITICAL.

ELECTION notes: Nearly complete returns from California give a plurality of 302 to Bartlett, the Democratic candidate for Governor. The Legislature is Democratic by 13 on joint ballot. The latest Congressional returns indicate the election of four Democats—Thompson, Briggs, McPike, and Sullivan—and two Republicans-Vandever and Morrow. Mr. Springer's official majority for Congress in the Thirteenth Illinois District is 974. Speaker Carlisle is elected in the Sixth Kentucky District by a majority of seven or eight hundred. Ofreturns from every county in the ficial State show that Robertson (Rep.) has 3,647 plurality for Lieutenant Governor of Indiana. Col. Dwyer, ex-Senator Dorsey's candidate for Congress in New Mexico, was beaten by Joseph (Dem.) by over 3,000. The next West Virginia Legislature will have a Democratic majority of nine on joint ballot. In the Seventh Congressional District of Ohio the Democrats re-elected James E. Campbell over John Little by three majority. The Republicans will accept the count. The Prohibition vote in Illinois foots up more than 20,000. The Virginia Congressional delegation stands: Republicans, 6; Democrats, 3; Knights of Labor, 1. The Democrats have a majority of 2 on joint ballot in the New Jersey Legislature. Returns from 80 of the 88 counties in Ohio indicate that Robinson (Rep.), for Secretary of State. will have a plurality of 11,488 over McBride (Dem.).

THE New York Sun declares in favor of Samuel J. Randall for the Democratic Presidential candidate in 1888.....Gideon J. Tucker has written to President Cleveland, declining to serve as a commissioner to examine and report upon 100 miles of railroad constructed by the Oregon & California Railroad Company in southwestern Oregon, because the salary is hardly adequate to the expenses of the trip, and because, if the hospitality of the road were accepted, a favorable report would place him under the imputation of venality.

GENERAL.

MAJOR MACKENZIE has raised a breeze in the War Department by a report that the high bridge without a draw now being built at Dubuque is of a pattern totally different from that authorized by Congress, and that no plans therefor have been submitted William Cramp & Sons, of Philadelphia, have made arrangements to construct for the Government a dynamite gun cruiser which will be capable of making twenty knots an hour and of firing a 200-pound dynamite shell every two minutes. The vessel is to cost not more than $350,000.

THE works of the Walker Horseshoe Company at Baltimore, worth $85,000, which have not been running this year, were swept away by fire.

THE Mexican Government has sent Mariano Barcena, an eminent engineer, to study the causes of the continued eruptions of the volcano of Coluna....John F. Hoke, the embezzling banker of Peoria, Ill., has been arrested at Montreal, where he was known as George Hanna, and efforts will be made to extradite him on a charge of forgery. AFTER THE BATTLE.

Morrison Charges the Pennsylvania Protectionists with Compassing His Defeat.

The Feeling in Washington-What Secretary McPherson, of the Republican Committee, Says.

Morrison Interviewed. [Waterloo (III.) dispatch.]
Colonel William R. Morrison said, in response to inquiries as to the causes of his defeat: "Jarrett, the tin-plate emissary of Pennsylvania, and other protectionists professing to represent the Knights of Labor and other labor interests were in the district ten or more days, just before the election, hiring and bribing such as could be hired and bribed, and contrived to consolidate in Baker's interest most of the labor element, in proof of which hiring and bribery we have Jarrett's letters. While this was going on Baker was declaring for a pure ballot. Mr. Hewitt's interview, falsely representing me as standing in the way of tariff reductions, facilitated Jarrett's mission of bribery in the interest of protectionists; but it is all right if the blood of the martyrs is still the seed of the church.'

To the question whether the result was a surprise, Col. Morrison said: "I recognized the influences that were at work as I went through the district. I received a great deal of information as to what was going on, but what surprised me was the solidity with which the element that defeated me was handled this time. Heretofore 1 have had my share of the labor vote of the district. This time it was handled as I have indicated.

When asked if he thought the cause of tariff reform has received a set-back by reason of his defeat, or by that of Mr. Hurd, or Mr. Carlisle's close call, he replied: "Oh, no, not at all. Our cause is growing right along. We have lost no strength." To the inquiry whether any sentiment antagonistic to the administration had had any bearing on the result, Col. Morrison said: "No, I think not. These are hard times. There is some feeling that the change of administration has not been followed by that effect on business and by such a revival of good times as was anticipated. This feeling, what there was of it, produced some apathy among Demo-crats, perhaps, but I did not discover any anti-administration sentiment based upon any specific objection to the course of the President."

Touching again upon the remark of Mr. Hewitt as telegraphed, Col. Morrison said: "Mr. Hewitt's bill is a good one. It legislates definitely upon certain points which are now left to construction by the Treasury Department, and which not infrequently give rise to controversies and litigation. I am in favor of Mr. Hewitt's propositions. But the effect of making that bill a law will be to increase the tariff, and that means increased taxation. The amount, I think, is estimated by the Treasury to be $5,000,000 or more. Now, I was for the Hewitt bill with this proviso: That at the same time there should be other tariff changes which would correspondingly reduce the aggregate. I opposed Mr. Hewitt's bill simply because in the presented form it meant an increase in taxation, and on that ground I will oppose any bill.'

The Feeling in Washington [Special to Chicago News.]

Mr. McPherson, the Chairman of the Republican Committee, said that he believed Carlisle would be elected, and that the Democratic majority in the House would be less than six. In his opinion, the result was largely due to the unpopularity of the President in his own party, because of his failure to pass out the offices as fast as they were called for. He cited the Louisville district, that of Carlisle, that of Morrison, and several in Virginia, as instances where there had been active contests over the patronage and dissatisfaction at the manner in which it had been distributed, as well as the delay that had attended it. The rank and file of the Democratic party are now assuming the same attitude toward Cleveland that the Republicans did toward Hayes, and he thought the sentiment of dissatisfaction would increase instead of diminish. The labor organizations, he said, would be a formidable factor in politics from this time on, and must be seriously considered. There was a good deal of truth in what Colonel Ingersoil said, that a new party had been born.

The President takes it all serenely, and does not see anything that can be construed into a set-back for the administration. He points to the fact that the elections of Tuesday show that sectionalism is breaking up. The Democrats made their gains in the Republican strongholds, and vice versa. They will have representation in Minnesota, Nebraska, Colorado, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and other Northern States, while the Republicans have made inroads in Kentucky and Virginia. This he thinks is a healthy sign, and he finds another in the fact that the most active opponents of civilservice reform have either been left at home or returned by largely reduced majorities.

[Special to Chicago Times.]
"It has been a very funny election all round," said Secretary Endicott this morning. "It was a very lively time in my State, but it resulted much better than was expected for our side." The Secretary asked about the latest news from Carlisle's district, and said that if he failed to be returned to the House it would be a great loss to the country.

A friend quotes General Butler as predicting a few days before the election that there would be a Republican majority in the next House. When asked for a reason he said: "Just study political history with a little care and you will see that since 1835 every House of Representatives, with three exceptions, I think, has been anti-administration. Two of those exceptions oc-South was not represented, and ought not really to count. So there has been but one real exception to the general rule, and I think that the election this time will make another exception. He gave a good many sound reasons why such is apt to be the case, such as dissatisfaction of prominent leaders in the administration party, because of failure to obtain the offices sought for political purposes, and a thou-sand and one other things that are likely to cause dissatisfaction in the ranks, resulting in a desire for revenge, a change of power, or something tending to upset the existing order of things. The General, however, seems to have forgotten that Republican Houses were elected in 1868. 1870, and 1872.

HARVARD'S JUBILEE.

The Old University Extends a Royal Welcome to the Chief Magistrate.

A Banquet at Which President Cleveland Makes a Speech.

President Cleveland, accompanied by Secretaries Bayard, Endicott, Whitney, and Lamar, received an enthusiastic welcome at Boston on the 8th inst. They participated in celebrating the 250th anniversary of the founding of Harvard College, where thirty-five hundred graduates had assembled. The exercises were held in Sanders' Theater, Cambridge, where James Russell Lowell delivered a classic address, and Oliver Wendell Holmes read a poem. Subsequently 1,200 guests seated themselves at the banquet tables in Memorial Hall. At the close of the banquet President Cleveland was introduced, and spoke as follows:

MR. PRESIDENT AND GENTLEMEN-I find myself to-day in a company to which I am much unused, and when I realize alumni of the oldest college in the land surrounding, in their right of sonship, the maternal board to which I am but sonship, the maternal board to which I am but an invited guest, the reflection that for me there exists no alma mater gives rise to a feeling of regret, which is kindly tempered only by the cordiality of your welcome and your reassuring kindness. If the fact is recalled that only twelve of my twenty-one predecessors in office had the advantage of a collegiate or university education. a proof is presented of the demoeducation, a proof is presented of the demoeducation, a proof is presented of the demo-cratic sense of our people rather than an argu-ment against the supreme value of the best and most liberal education in high public positions. There certainly can be no sufficient reason for any space or distance between the walks of the most classical education and the way that leads most classical education and the way that leads to a political place.

Any disincination on the part of the most learned and cultured of our citizens to mingle in public affairs, and consequent abandonment of political activity to those who have but little regard for student and scholar in politics, are not favorable conditions under a government such as ours, and if they have existed to a dam-aging extent very recent events appear to indicate that the education and conservatism of the land are to be hereafter more plainly heard in the expression of popular will, surely the splendid destiny which awaits a patriotic effort in behalf of our country will be sooner reached if the best of our thinkers and educated men If the best of our thinkers and educated men shall deem it a solemn duty of citizenship to actively and practically engage in political affairs, and if the force and power of their thought and learning shall be willingly or unwillingly acknowledged in party manage-

If I am to speak of the President of the United States, I desire to mention as the most pleasant and characteristic feature of our system of government the nearness of the people to their President and other high officials. A close view afforded our citizens of the acts and conduct of those to whom they have intrusted their interests serves as a regulator and check upon temptation and pressure in office, and is a constant reminder that diligence and faithfulness are the measure of public duty, and such as a few of the results of the constant of the the measure of public duty, and such a relation between President and people ought to leave but little room in popular judgment and conscience for unjust and false accusations and science for unjust and false accusations and for malicious slanders invented for the purpose of undermining the people's trust and confidence in the administration of their Government. No public officer should desire to check the utmost freedem of criticism as to all official acts, but every dom of criticism as to all official acts, but every right-thinking man must concede that the President of the United States should not be put beyond the protection which American love of fair play and decency accords to every American citizen.

This trait of our national character encourage, if their extent and tendency were fully appreciated, the silly, mean, and cowardly lies that every day are found in the columns of certain newspapers which violate every instinct of American manliness, and in ghoulish glee desecrate every sacred relation of private life. There is nothing in the highest office that the There is nothing in the highest office that the American people can confer which necessarily makes their President altogether selfish, scheming, and untrustworthy. On the contrary, the solemn duties which confront him tend to a sober sense of responsibility; the trust of the American people and an appreciation of their mission among the nations of the earth should make him a patriotic man, and the tales of distress which reach him from or the earth should make him a patriotic man, and the tiles of distress which reach him from the humble and lowly and needy and afflicted in every corner of the land can not fail to quicken within him every kindenimpulse and tender sensibility. After all it comes to this. The people of the United States have one and all a sacrad mission to perform and your Presiall a sacred mission to perform, and your Presi-dent not more surely than every other citizen who loves his country must assume part of the responsibility of the demonstration to the world of the success of popular government. of the success of popular government. No man can hide his talent in a napkin and escape the condemnation which his slothfulness deserves nor evade the stern sentence which his faith-

Be assured, my friends, that the privileges of Be assured, my friends, that the privileges of this day, so full of improvement, and the enjoy-ments of this hour, so full of pleasure and cheerful encouragements, will never be for-gotten; and, in parting with you now, let me express my earnest hope that Harvard's alumni-may always hoper the venerable institution may always hon r the venerable institution which has honored them, and that no man who forgets and neglects his duty to American citizenship will find his alma mater here.

A public reception was subsequently tendered to the President in Faneuil Hall, which was packed with people. For an hour they were given an opportunity to shake hands with the Chief Magistrate. When the doors were finally closed there were almost as many more people waiting for their chance. The President then pro-ceeded to the Hotel Vendome. Mrs. Cleveland held a private reception at the home of President Eliot in Cambridge. In the evening President and Mrs. Cleveland held a reception in the parlors of the Vendome. It is estimated that 8,000 people greeted them. Mrs. Cleveland's praises were upon all lips. About midnight the Presidential party lett for Washington in a special train.

Illinois.

The Republican candidates for State offices are elected by majorities estimated at from 20,000 to 26,000. Throughout the State Republican gains are reported. In many Democratic counties Republican officials are elected for the first time in many years. The Republicans have a majority of thirteen in the State Senate, and a probable majority of one in the lower house. In Chicago and Cook County the Labor vote was unexpectedly large. Butler, the United Labor candidate for Sheriff, polled over 24,000 votes, or within a few hundred of the number cast for the Democratic candidate. The Labor party elected one State Senator, and six members of the lower house in Cook county, and came within a few votes of electing the Congressman in the Second District. The Republicans elected all their candidates for county offices in Cook County, with the exception of three Judges, by pluralities ranging from 9,000 to 17,000. The sensational feature of the Illingia. The Republican candidates for State offices Judges, by pluralities ranging from 9,000 to 17,000. The sensational feature of the Illinois 17,000. The sensational feature of the Illinois election is the defeat of William R. Morrison, in the Eighteenth District, by Jehu Baker, Republican. Baker's majority is 800. This result, it is said, was brought about by the Knights of Labor. In East St. Louis, one of Morrison's strongholds, he was badly scratched. There is great rejoicing among Rapublicans throughout

New York.

Rufus W. Peckham, Democrat, has been eiected Judge of the Court of Appeals by a ma-jority of about 8,000. The Republicans have a majority in the Legislature of twenty on joint ballot, which insures the election of a Republi-can successor to United States Senator Miller. The Republicans gain two or three members of Congress.

The official returns of the municipal election

The official returns of the municipal election in New York City give Hewitt, the successful candidate for Mayor, a total vote of 91,265, a plurality of 23,023 over George, who in turn leads Roosevelt by 7,745. Wardwell, the Prohibition nominee, received 576 votes.

Michigan.

A Detroit dispatch says that close estimates on the election in Michigan place the Republican plurality at 7,000. This is based on the vote of two years ago, while the reports so far received show general Republican gains which would increase this figure. As the returns show gains when compared with a much larger vote, there seems ground for the claim of the Republican committee to 10,000 plurality. The new Senator will be a Republican without doubt, but just how large a majority in the State Legislature will vote for him is not yet known. It now appears that there will be not A Detroit dispatch says that close estimates known. It now appears that there will be not more than 32 more Republicans on joint ballot than Fusionists.

The Republicans have probably gained two

Congressmen, Mark Brewer being elected in the Sixth District by 700 and Edward Ailen in the Second by $90. This makes the Michigan delegation stand six Republicans and five Democrats, as shown by districts, as follows:

1. John L. Chipman (Dem.).

12. James B. White (Rep.).
13. B. F. Shively (Dem.-Labor-G. B.).
Upon the basis of the returns from 748 predincts, 45 per cent. of the vote of the State, the Republican ticket has been elected by a plurality of 5.275. Ex-Senator McDonald, a member ity of 5,275. Ex-Senator McDonald, a member of the Democratic State Central Committee, says, however the returns from the other 55 per cent, of the precincts will result in placing the State again in the Democratic column. Both parties claim the Legislature.

Wisconsin.

Wisconsin.

In Wisconsin the Republicans have re-elected Gov. Rusk by a plurality of upward of 20,000. The Legislature will have a Republican majority on joint ballot of 29 over Democrats and Labor representatives. The Senate stands 25 Republicans, 7 Democrats, and 1 People's party; Assembly, 57 Republicans, 36 Democrats, and 5 People's. The People's party representatives will probably act with the Democrats. The Republicans lose three Assembly seats and gain a like number in Senatorial districts. The Congressional delegation, by districts, is prob-Congressional delegation, by districts, is prob-

A WAITER'S REGULAR FEE.

Rich Men Give Only Twenty-five Cents and Find it Pays to be Generous. [New York Mail and Express.]

"It has long been a question with me what was a maximum tip or fee to waiters," remarked a well-known club man to a reporter. "How did you settle it?"

"The tining settled itself. I called upon a California gentleman stopping at a hotel who is worth over $20,000,000. His experience has been extensive, for he has not only traveled all over Europe but thoroughly done his native country. I found him at breakfast, and by invitation sat down with him. He was being served on the European plan, ala carte. I noticed that the waiter was very attentive and knew the wealth behind the man he was serving. The breakfast was plain and amounted to 80 cents. The millionaire ran his hand down in his pocket and brought out several coins, among them two $20 gold pieces. The waiter turned aside somewhat nonchalantly, as if not watching the process, but as a quarter of a dollar was fished out and handed to him his face wreathed in smiles and he said, 'Thank you,' in a low voice. I was astonished; I thought 50 cents would be his lowest tip, and that a dollar was not infrequent with millionaires of his well-known generous nature.

"He said that 25 cents was the highest tip on any and all occasions. But they knew it was coming and never neglected him. He argued that it was not the great amount, but the assurance that a tip was coming that had the magical effect. He tipped nearly everybody in the hotel; the baggage man, the hall boy, the chambermaid, and the man who called the carriages, not to mention the bootblack, the barber, the boy who brushed his clothes, and the newsboy, who somehow knew his customer. A quarter all around to this small army amounted to several dollars. He asserted that he preferred to be taken for a very poor man, so as not to be bored by attention. Well, since then I have tried the quarter of a dollar limit and I find it works. A half dollar will produce no better results. The waiter knows that a half dollar tip is out of proportion, and that it is only a sporadic case of generosity. It is the average certainty I find, more than the amount. I give my barber 10 cents every time. He says that a certain millionaire gives him $1 and makes it do for six months. In the long run I give ten times as much as that millionaire, but it is in broken doses, and brings good attention

To quiet an insurrection among the flies inhabiting the house which we pay a high rent per month for, we one day purchased a sheet of this sticky fly paper. The track on this kind of aper is supposed to be several seconds heavy for flies. The manufacturers even hint in type seven inches high that the walking on it is so exceedingly bad for flies that they will mire down and never get across. The prospect for a fly promenade on it is certainly very poor, something which they evidently noticed, as they boycotted it from the start. We tried running them down and sticking them onto the paper. This was slow and far from satisfac-

We afterward mounted the paper on the broom and slashed it around the room ten or fifteen times, and found that the plan was very successful. The first swoop brought down a costly vase which a warm political friend, who is also in the grocery business, presented us with on the occasion of our purchasing a can of baking powder of him. Another wild sweep and an elegant plaque painted by our wife, and representing a pale-blue tree on a yellow background, was in ruins. Our experience was that it is not difficult to exterminate the fly in this way. Mounted on a chair in the center of the parlor or drawing-room and swinging the death-dealing paper about, we soon made it very uncomfortable for him amid the wreck of costly paintings, the fall of the heavy lambrequin, and the general smash-up of the marble statue, the high-priced hangings, the imported chandelier, the jointed stove pipe, the plastering, and the decorated profanity. Life to the ill-starred fly on that occasion was but a hollow, howling mockery. No gleam of hope shown athwart the murky depths of the black night of despair which shut down around those flies. Everything pointed to a horrible death without a ray of hope. The accumulated wealth of years crashed around him, and there was no current pie in which to hide. All was darkness, all was gloom, all was despair.—Estelline Bell.

A Literary Survival.

The Gothic, or Runic, alphabet was called the "Futhore," from the first six letters,-F, U, TH, O, R, C. The third rune (TH), which somewhat resembles y and came from the Greek p, survived in English literature until the last century, and is occasionally used to-day when people wish to write in an old-fashioned style. And they are apt to make a curious mistake in its pronunciation. This rune remained in Irish and Anglo-Saxon for the sound TH, and in England it was preserved longest in the word "THE," because that word occurs very often, and it was easier to write one letter than two. But in the course of time it came to be mistaken for Y; and, although our ancestors knew better than to pronounce it like v, their descendants do not, but usually give this apparent y the sound of the real y, making ye's out of all the THE's. They do not know that this is a survival of a rune almost to the present generation.-Henry Eckford, in St. Nicholas.

Railroad Notes.

A dispatch from New York to the Chicago Inter Ocean says: "Negotiations for a change in the ownership of the Chicago and West Michigan R'y have fallen through. The road is controlled in Boston, and it was sought by the first mortgage bondholders of the Michigan and Ohio, which has been foreclosed. It has a large traffic and is on a dividend-paying basis, and if its through business were turned from the Lake Shore to the Michigan and Ohio it would increase its earnings fully fifty per cent. The bonded debt is only $9,308 to the mile, and the stock $16,457, making a total of $25,765, with earnings of $3,141. The stock is selling in the fifties, but an average of about seventy was asked for a controlling interest, and upon that basis it would not have been possible to merge upon satisfactory terms. 'The bondholders' committee have therefore turned their attention to other plans."

The Michigan & Ohio Railroad was sold last week Thursday by the United States Court, at Toledo, O., in whose hands it has been for nearly a year, for $1,000,000. The purchasers were the first mortgage bondholders, represented by the trustees, F. P. Olcott, Samuel Thomas and R. F. Wilson, of New York. The officials of the road say that no definite plan of action has as yet been determined upon, but it is thought that the road will be put in good condition and run in a first-class manner. It is also understood that the present line will be extended northward 100 miles.

If some railroad company running to this point, and particularly the Chicago & West Michigan railway company could yet acquire control of the I. P. & C, railroad from Michigan City to Indianapolis, Ind., it would be another valuable connecting link for Holland. Indianapolis is the largest inland city and railroad centre in the United States, the centre of a rich farming country, and a large consumer of all our products. Such a line would make a valuable business highway in connection with others, and tend to enlarge and enrich our trade.

While having all the features of other fraternal societies this furnishes $2,000 insurance payable at death, or in case of disability one-half will he paid and balance at death. Any man of good moral character and suitable age may become an honorary member of the organization, and be entitled to all the fraternal advantages, but none are allowed to become endowment members who cannot stand a firstclass, rigid medical examination. All doubtful risks are rejected and only firstclass men are solicited to become members. Since organization this order has paid fifty-nine death claims, meeting them all within ten days after proof of death had been filed. The cost to a member under thirty-five years of age, including lodge dues and assessments, has only been from eight to ten dollars per year. This is a record that any society may be justly proud of, and is traceable to careful management of the order and the healthy selection of its members in particular. A man wishing to join a first-class order and carry a cheap and reliable insurance cannot do better than to join the Knights of the Maccabees. Its record for the prompt payment of losses and nominal costs have not been beaten by any organization in the country. In Michigan alone, where the order was first started, there are about three hundred subordinate Tents with a membership of 6,500 and still increasing. This speaks volumes for the order and shows how it stands at home, where the leading men in the state are at its head .- Linn County

OUT AROUND.

Johnsville.

Now that election is over local politicians are engaged in scraping off the mud and laying up a new crop of "roor-backs" for next election...Mr. Geo. O. Barlow, of West Olive, was in town Tues-day....Mrs. Harriet Harris has just received a back pension of four hundred and sixty dollars. She gets twelve dollars per month during the balance of her life.Mrs. Frank Myers and several others start north on a hunting trip this week.
....Mrs. Joseph Stone has gone to Le Roy. Mich., to join her husband who is at work at that place....Judd Harris occupies the house formerly owned by Mr. Odien....The conundrum at the polls last week was "where's the whiskey?" The problem was solved by several, though the election was quiet and nothing occured to mar the serenity of "Doc" who con-tinued to shove in the ballots and got in four to many, consequently as the law directs four had to be withdrawn. Three Democratic and one Republican vote were thrown out....Mrs. Geo. Harris' mother is visiting her from St. Joseph.Rev. A. Barber invited every one in the country to come and hear him preach at the school house last Sunday night. He expected at least two hundred but when the time came for him to open up on his satanic majesty there was not a person there. We have a good shot gun for sale and if Mr. Barber wants a congregation here let him buy it and take after a few and drive them up.....Patrick Sankey, who has moved from this vicinity to Nebraska, three times, has come back to stay, satisfied that Michigan is the State. We understand you would not be able to drive him away again with a good sized club.
...Mr. E. O. Boughey, the genial salesman of Brown & Sehler, of Grand Rapids,

was here to sell under mortgage sale the threshing outfit sold by them to Fred Ragalen who, having got tired of this life, departed into the state of matrimony and some distant country, leaving the outfit to his creditors. Most of the weeping over his departure is done by the bachelor element who regreet his capture of a reputed ten thousand dollar widow Miss Mamie Doran, who was home for a week or two, returned to Holland last Monday. She thinks some of starting for New York, that is if New York don't get back pretty soon, you know....Mr. Ed. Stiles has returned from a trip to Ohio. ..Mrs. J. B. Bacon who has been quite ill, is very much better Mr. Barrows, the store-keeper, has a collection of vegetables that would put the county fair to its ulmost to produce as fine a specimens. He has apples of enormous size, potatoes, carrots, corn, etc., all of which were brought in by tarmers around here. Among these is a beet (not a mangel-wurzel) weighing sixteen pounds and a half. This country can beet the world.
"Tug Burron."

West Olive.

The cry of fraud is now heard on every hand, because the candidates on both tickets were not elected. Queer is it not?The crowd around the average country store will now relapse into old channels of conversation again....Quite wintry Saturday and Sunday The new railroad agent's family arrived here evening....The houses about West Olive are nearly all occupied...A.
P. Robinson has bought Mr. Barlow's claim on the White property and will take possession before long....Another Pro-hibitionist arrived in town last Saturday night. He was a few days too late to vote this year, but under the care and training of father and mother Irish, where he is stopping, we have no doubt he will gain the title we have given him....Quite a quantity of wood and bolts are being shipped from this station now-a-days....

Joseph Burton has gone south to spend the winter....Mrs. G. C. Jones, of Olive Center, took the train here Monday morning to visit a recently widowed daughter.
....Frank Wallace has dedicated his new horse without any formal ceremony ... There were some Indians in town Monday with baskets and axe helves. Our merchants patronized them to some extent.New goods were being put on the shelves of the new store of Davidson, Trumble & Co., Tuesday and Wednesday.We are glad that election is over. We have all got to abide by the result. Neighbors can now meet and talk a few moments without quarreling or betting. I say with "Andrew," let us have peace.

Flocks of wild geese are frequently going over on their way south, and are invariably engaged in animated conversation, which we, of course, do not understand, but presume to mean winter at the north, and an occasional snow squall and a light shower of snow here remind us that it is moving in that direction, and will soon be at hand....James Cassidy Waffle, who has been to Grand Rapids for surgical treatment, and just returned, has been greatly benefitted ...Mrs. Welton is busily engaged in making preparation for herself and family for removal to California, where her husband, Sydney L. Welton, has taken for a homestead one hundred and sixty acres of government soon find relief. Did he get a wing, or a leg, for his lunch basket get a wing, or a leg, for his lunch basket when starting out on that voyage of discovery, which resulted in ascertaining that "Andrew's" story, relating to the affair, possessed two sides? We take for granted, however, his statement that the hunters were old turkey shooters, and able to tell, at a glance, the difference, if any existed, between a wild and a tame turkey, whether its appearance was on the wing or on the table, but yet may not be so ready to explain what became of Mr. Stone's turkey that failed to return; or all of the circumstances connected with the death of the one found in the field the next day with its body riddled with shot. But we will accord the privilege to prenext day with its body riddled with shot. But we will accord the privilege to presume that the case was the result of a chronic difficulty peculiar to old turkeys about this time of the year, but if so we hope that the complaint may not extend to our flocks before Thanksgiving, at least. to alter in the least "Andrew's" statement in regard to the less "Andrew's" statement in regard to the loss of his turkeys. We are, therefore, forced to the conclusion that this West Olive correspondent is a srudent of Wiggins' and has directed his attention more to predicting than to recording events. It thus appears that "Andrew" was not so wild after all in his "Andrew" was not so wild after all in his account of that wild turkey affair. The Proper Adjective.

An uneducated man may stumble upon an expressive word, while a scholar may have to hunt for it. Daniel Webster was noted for his habit of using synonym after synonym, until he found just the word to express his idea. Once, while arguing that a bank should pay over a sum of money unlawfully withheld from his client, he said, "We the expressions. But the right one came when he thundered forth, "We wish to make them disgorge."

A less scholarly lawyer would have been satisfied with any of the other phrases. Among the anecdotes told of Coleridge, there is one which illustrates a scholar's anxiety for the proper

One day, he was standing in a pic-ture gallery, absorbed in gazing at a new painting. After looking at it for fifteen minutes, he deliberately came to the conclusion that the only epithet which could be used of the picture was the adjective "majestic." Just as he reached this conclusion, a gentleman entered the saloon with two ladies.

What a majestic scene!" exclaimed the gentleman, as he stopped before the painting.

Coleridge walked up to him, and bowing low, said, "My name is Coleridge. I thought I knew the English language, but it has taken me fifteen minu es to discover that the word 'majestic' applied to this picture. You have hit plied to this picture. You have hit upon the right word at once."

"Yes, yes," replied the gentleman, with a gratified simper; "it is a splendid, a beautiful, a lovely painting!"

"Ah!" rejoined Coleridge, "I retract my previous statement. You used the word 'majestic' only by chance, and not after deliberation." And the great man walked away with a thoughtful smile.

Got What? Why, a wonderful and timely book on a vital issue.

IT IS CALLED

"THE LABOR MOVEMENT!"

And 'tis the joint production of many of the gallant and able "labor leader" of the country, and the recogized authorities upon the topics connected with the different branches of industry, to wit: such men as McNeal, Powderly, George, Trevellick, etc., etc., Embellished with numerous large and life-like portraits of the various champions of the cause, including Powderly, Trevellick, Congressman Tarsney, Thos. Barry and many others. This book is going to prove to be emphatically

There lay upon the ocean's shore What once a tortoise served to cover, A year or more with rush and roar, The surf had rolled it over, Had played with it and flung it by, As wind and weather might decide it, Then tossed it high where sand-drifts dry Cheap burial might provide it.

It rested there to bleach or tan,
The rains had soaked, the sun had burned it;
With many a ban the fisherman
Had stumbled o'er and spurned it;
And there the fisher-girl would stay.
Conjecturing with her brother
How in their play the poor estray
Might serve some use or other.

So there it lay through wet and dry, As empty as the last new sonnet, Till by-and-by came Mercury, And, having mused upon it,
"Why, here," cried he, "the thing of things
In shape, material, and dimension!
Give it but strings, and, lo it sings, A wonderful invention!"

So said, so done; the chords he strained, And, as his fingers o'er them hovered, The shell disdained a soul had gained, The lyre had been discovered. Oh, empty world that round us lies, Dead shell, of soul and thought forsaken Brought we but eyes like Mercury's, In thee what songs should waken!

A BLUE-EYED ANGEL

BY RALPH DOUGLAS.

It surely is true, that "God moves in a mysterious way, His wonders to perform.' Listen to the facts of the following case, then see if you will not agree:

A tall, handsome, stylish woman is sitting in a private parlor of the Temple House. She and her escort had come into the town just after breakfast. Her companion was a very quiet, dignified, gentlemanly party, and had registered simply as "Dr. Lester and lady." The west-bound train they waited for was due at 7 p. m. Evidently the gentleman was occupied with business, as he had been absent from the hotel save at the noon hour. Then "Dr. Lester and Lady" had dined together in the private parlor.

They had seemed on the best of terms, very friendly, but just a little reserved, or "on guard" in their manner. After a slow, cosy, leitering dinner the Doctor rose to depart. "I dislike leaving you so alone, Myra, but it is best doubtless, and your will, I believe. You will pardon me then?" And he gave her a kind, calm smile.

Certainly, Doctor! Don't think of me as lonesome, and I understand, of course, that your business cannot be delayed," which latter was wholly to blind the waitress. They shook hands and parted blandly.

How should any maid or servant suspect them to be a runaway couple? Who should scent an elopement in the calm conduct of this reserved couple? Thus did they throw dust in the eyes of observers; for this mild-mannered man was guilty of the blackest treachery toward the man he had loved as a brother, God help us! How love of a woman can mar and unmake us! This woman, this graceful, queenly Myra, was one of the chilliest, most virtuous of women, yet this terrible love had "gone to her head," and she, too, was undone.

At this Lester's bidding, she had concluded to ignore the ties that had become chains and bonds, and to snap her fetters and be free! This silly short-sighted sister of ours lost sight of the fact that, though she ignore the truth, yet it was not quenched, and that broken links make more ngerous wounds than a whole chain worn with patient grace!

So all was going wrong. Madam Myra sitting alone by her parlor window leant her golden head on one shapely hand and let her mind roam at will.

Where was Lester? Doubtless roaming about town, thinking of her, with head bent and hands clasped behind him as was his fashion. Suppose—ah! suppose Arthur should encounter him! but she sighed with relief. That was impossible, for only two days ago he had started for a city directly in the opposite direction from this one. Poor Arthur! Yes, after all, poor Arthur? How would his wonderful pride be shattered, to return and find his wife had run away!

Yes, whether he loved her or not as he used to, yet he had much pride in her beauty, her integrity, her social station. Social station? What would be her position hereafter? And her cheeks grew have believed she, the virtuous Christian lady, could have come to this? She who had ever been so free, and proud, and selfpossessed!

She struck her two palms together and locked her hands in her lap. Oh, why, "Isabel, do y why had she done this?

True, her husband, this cool, calm, superior Arthur, neglected her in a way, but how much worse he might have been to her! And he had always trusted her, and had never dreamed she could prove wicked and vile like many other women; and if girl, as I have none?" other women who ran away from their husbands with men they liked better were vile, so in common justice, she, too, must be vile! And yet in common justice also, she must say it was no vulgar passion that had led to this step.

Arthur, absorbed in business, seemed when she loved children so. cool and careless toward her, and her soul longed for a perfect friendship. Yet when they had parted two days before, there had seemed a flash of the old-time tenderness. Ah well! for years he had been careless, he had coolly thrown her upon society for friendship, amusement, entertainment; me to the Orphans Home!" what affection or companionship could she "How good God was to se children, surely it would have been differ-hand slipped within the white palm await-ing her. Myra was gazing on the street, or sky, anything or nothing without the window, and the baby stood quietly watching her brown eyes, her shining hair, and amused herself playing with the lady's fingers and rings.

The child's presence was comforting, her silence a real charm, so, shortly, Myra lifted her to her lap, where she too might view the scene outside.

Thought growing bitter and memory sting, Myra turned her attention to the lit-

"Who are you, dear; what is your name?"

"Have you run away from mamma?" "No; mamma has gone away from me;

she is dead."

Myra pressed the child to her heart. Poor little motherless one; why had not fate given her the child? Then she had been spared the folly into which she was now falling. While her mind would run upon her own affairs, as if to keep those clear blue baby eyes from reading all her soul, she continued to question the child at random. Thus she learned that while the mother had been some time dead, the father had died only a few weeks before, here in the hotel; and it became plain to Myra the child had no home, no people, and only through pity was, for the present sheltered by the Temple House! Then a silence fell, and thought flew on the faster, while the baby sat still on Myra's knee.

Who can follow the thoughts that flashed and flamed through Myra's mind? Slowly the big tears welled up to her brown eyes and dripped over her fair, round cheek.

Was she already regretting her wrong step, her voluntary fall from the high places of principle, honor, and respectability? Aye! And the little one's soft voice broke in upon her tearful revery. "Did your papa think you had pretty hands, too? and did he pat and kiss them too, like my papa did mine?" Her father! At mention of him he seemed to stand before her, and he had been in the spirit land for years!

A gentle, honorable man, with soft and silver hair, with kind eyes that beamed with tenderness and pride and fatherly love as they turned upon her! Oh Lord of earth and heaven, what must be his feelings toward her now! And she had been his pride and joy, his darling only daughter!

Why had no thought or memory of her father reached her sooner and saved her from this sinful step? Was this strange, silent child an angel he had sent to save her, even at this last late, dreadful mo-

"What did you say?" cried Myra, with startling vigor. But Baby Belle was not frightened by her vehemence, only bewildered, and she slowly repeated her in-

Myra held forth her hands and looked at them. Never before had she realized how very like her father's they were-now the resemblance was startling indeed!

Yes, surely, her hands were fair things to look upon, and their beauty had been a pride to her loving father.

How he had enjoyed giving her pretty jewels, valuable rings, and dainty gloves, yet always wisely teaching that a woman's hands, to be fair in sight of men and angels, must be ever adorned with charity, gentleness, and kindness. And once-how vividly it flashed to memory now-some graceful, kind act of devotion to an old, homeless, sick stranger, coming to his knowledge, he had patted her hands proudly, saving "Now I know these dear hands belong to a good and Christian girl! one not ashamed to be a sensible waing Christian, and I am proud, my child, to say these hands are mine!" Which last was in playful reference to the strong resemblance to his own. And now to see them! Her father's hands yet, held there before the Baby Belle, like some spirit's warning, and behold! she had forgotten to remove her wedding ring! Strange omen! strange thought! A runaway wife still cherishing her wedding ring. Perhaps it was the flash of that gold band that saved and strengthened her. A mighty revolution of thought and feeling had swept her being this lonely afternoon. Her father had sent a blue-eyed angel to rescue her, a lovely little angel, whom she could reward with love and care. Heaven had sent the orphan across her path, and her childish prattle had saved her, for warm. What was she now? Who would Myra's uneasy mind was settled, her path was plain to see-she should return to her husband!

Whether he would pardon her or not, she should adopt the child and live to love

"Isabel, do you like me?" she asked, as earnestly as any lover might in future

"Very much," was the sweet and simple answer.

"Enough, my baby, to give your sweet, small self to me, to come and be my little

"And have a home, and you be my mamma, you mean?" asked Isabel, with sparkling eyes.

"That is it, my Baby Belle! Will you?" And poor Myra waited with bated breath. Heaven had been unkind, if we dare say so,

Baby looked straight into the loving brown eyes, then with a sobbing sigh put down her golden head upon the lady's breast and said: "How good God was to send you here to-day! Next week they were going to send

"How good God was to send me here tofind there? Had she but been blessed with day!" Slowly Myra repeated the words, and children, surely it would have been different. She could have been absorbed by death lurked in the syllables. Then she them as he by business. Business was a kissed away the child's tears of joy and remonster that had chilled and darkened all lief. Possibly after all, her strange temptation and fall was all a part of her Creator's plan, to teach her a lesson, and to benefit the Baby Isabelle, and kissing the child, she prayed with pallid lips: "Father in heaven, permit me this to serve as expiation for the foul sin I have harbored in this weak and wretched heart!" Then she sent for the landlord. From him she learned there was no one known to have any claim upon the waif, and that truly enough she was in a few days to have been consigned to the asylum. She then explained her wish to take the child, and also her position in the world, and demon-strated how much she could benefit the Admit they would not, yet she knew now she had done wrong in leaving stern-faced duty for pleasant, smiling love. Already she missed respectability. And she had been so pure, so proud, so far beyond temptation! up her little belongings and bid adieu to the maids who had befriended the little temptation!

The door swung softly open and a little child, perhaps six or seven years old, slid softly into the room.

Myra took scant note, but being by nature kind and courteous, extended an idle hand toward the timid intruder. Slowly the shild crossed the room and her baby the pen in her white hand and stared hard.

at the street, the sky, the distantsea. How could she tell it all to that gentle lover? But time was flying, the must be gone, she must never see him again!

Lester, Lester! I know your heart will break,—mine may also. I cannot say forgive me, for God will not if I fail in this last resolution. I dare not think of your grief. As for myself, I am dead. Remember me as dead, Lester, and God pity us both. I shall go back. We were in great error, I see it now. I shall go back, but do you go on to Europe, even as you would grant a prayer to a dying woman,—go! And God grant we may never meet on earth again.

Wretchedly,

MYRA.

This she sealed, addressed, and ordered delivered to Dr. Lester as soon as he returned. Then, as though legions from Hades were at her heels, she grasped the child and hurried aboard the train. She was white as milk, and sat for hours holding hard to the child's hand, with head thrown back and eyes tightly closed, her lips as pale as death.

But one thought seemed to possess her. She could indulge, poor thing, in respite to her sorrow, for all the time and all the same the train was sweeping great miles of distance between them, between her beaten heart and her sore temptation.

It was night, late night, when she again reached home. As the hired carriage swept up the old familiar drives that she had thought never to see again, she leaned forward in the moonlight, while her tears fell fast. Truly, she seemed a dead woman revisiting the scenes of home and happiness.

When was it she had left this place,yesterday, last week, or years ago?

She could not decide. Providence was kind-Arthur had not returned. Of course not; he had not expected to for days. Once again in her own room, alone. Baby Belle sleeping in her bed, she felt her courage come again. It had been a close call, but she was safe!

Said she to her maid: "I am sorry to disturb you at this hour, Anna, but I do want my dresses removed at once from the trunks and put again in their proper places. 1 will reward you well, don't fear. The lady I went to visit had gone away, so surprised myself instead of her. have decided to adopt this little girl, Anna; she was an orphan and about to be sent to an asylum, so I took her myself."

Poor Myra! she wanted no signs of disturbance to meet even her own eyes in the morning; she wanted to waken in the morning and begin life just as before, not even a misplaced dress or ribbon to remind her of that hasty flight to and fro.

All the bustle and stir was quieted, the house once more in peace and darkness Myra had fallen into an uneasy slumber, which she was awakened by her husband's kiss. unexpectedly and quietly had returned. After one little city of fright Myra said nothing.

"Nay, sweetheart, never turn so white and stare so at me," he said, laughing lightly. "Do you think I am a burglar?" When he turned on the gas and noted the beautiful child held so close to her heart, he whistled with amazement. 'Why, who is this?" And he stooped to inspect the stranger. His wife leaned on her elbow with frightened, wide eyes and pale face. She seemed choking and unable to do other than gasp at his name. How little he could guess the cause! "Why, my little woman," he exclaimed, "I did not think you were such a coward ! came in quietly; I have the night key you surely know, you little goose. I be-whispered. "Myra! surely that was not a pretty thought to entertain; but (kissing her) forgive you, for I believe you are dreaming yet! By the way, it was a bad dream that brought me home so soon! So you see I am as silly as you."

She hid her face on his shoulder and was softly crying, while he stroked her shining head and talked. "I dreamed, dear, I saw you dying, but I could not reach you to be of any help. It seems now a doubt with me if you were dying or lost. Anyway you were in great distress, and I was in even greater agony, so that I wakened. And still I was so worried about you I could not give my mind to business, Try as I might, I could not shake off the notion you needed me here at home, and now I am glad I yielded and came, for surely you are ill, or you would not be so nervous! Stop crying, Myra, and tell me what is the matter?"

Tell him! and turn to adamant and ice this strange flood of tenderness? Never! "I have had bad dreams too!
All sorts of evil things, Arthur!
I sinned, I died, I saw angels and the dead-oh, everything has happened since you went! If my bad dreams had come true, Arthur, and I had done very evil, would you have forgiven me if I repented and came back, dying, to crave your pardon?"

Heavens! Was she in delirium, in fever? How pale and wan and wide-eyed she had grown! She must be soothed and quieted at once, so he kissed her as he perhaps had not in years, with all the fervor of a

"There! let that satisfy you. I did not think a short separation would so disturb us, Myra! Now tell me, who is this?"

nodding to the Baby Belle. So she made a mighty effort—how mighty who of you can appreciate?—and told a simple tale of going to Farnham to shop and "kill time," and finding this wee one so forlorn; she told how her heart hungered for the child, and then she anxiously watched to see if he would refuse to take the little one.

Said he with a sigh: "All right, Myra; have the moon if you like—and you can get it. She is a pretty child, and I sup-pose a prattler will be pleasant about the house.

So all was calm. A child was given home and love, a woman's soul was saved, the husband's honor and happiness preserved.

With another sigh this man who had had such a narrow escape, turned to his wife, saying: "Yes, I am glad you brought her, Myra; she seems a charming child," but Myra had fainted away! The sin, the sorrow, the escape, the danger, and the reaction had proved too much for the overstrained nerves. She too fully realized that for all concerned it had been a very close call.—Chicago Ledger.

SMALL boy (rushing in front of young lady wearing a large poke bonnet, and staring her full in the face): "You've lost yer bet, Charlie; I told yer it warn't On Getting Rich.

Every now and again some wiseacre undertakes a sermon to the workingmen in which it set forth, with a good deal of elaboration of detail, and supported by numerous "practical" illustrations, that it is possible for every man, if he be industrious and thrifty, to get into business and achieve competence for himself. The intention is to say, though they do not say it exactly in that way, that it is possible for every man to be rich. One of the leading citizens of the town will die, John Jones, for instance. The local papers will have fulsome eulogies. It will be told how he originated from "poor but respectable" parents, worked on a farm, or did odd jobs for the neighbors, saved his money, opened a little grocery store, carried in three bushels of clover seed or barrels of flour, and toted the goods round to the customers himself rather than go to the expense of hiring a man to do it for him. How he thus accumulated his first few hundred dollars. Howone of his customers got in debt to him for several hundred. How he compromised by taking half the customer's farm. How coal was subsequently discovered underlying the farm. How he sold it for $15,000 hard cash. And so forth, and so forth, and so forth! This is but one of the variations of the same old story, and the telling it is always accompanied by the same advice that what the eminent deceased did in those ways it is possible for each and every man to do. But what a howling absurdity it all is! To be sure the great majority of men are not thrifty. They are industrious. They must be to live. But they are careless in their expenditures, within a certain range. Suppose they were not. Then not half so many of the others would become rich. The recklessness of the many is the chief factor in the construction of the fortunes of the few. That is, if it can be called reckless for a man to prefer to surround himself and his family with such comforts as his means affords, rather than pinch and stint, with the hope of some day having enough to buy his neighbor's property at forced sale at half its value, and sell it to the other man with more money than wit who comes along, for twice what it is worth.

There can only be so many rich, and to make and keep them rich others must remain poor. There can only be se many bankers and grocers and dry goods men. If the supply of either comes to exceed the demand, some will be crushed out, and it is not always the least wise or the least deserving that meet that misfortune. The fact is there are too many men in such business and in all businesses now. There are even too many mechanics and factory and mine workers for the manner in which the business of the country as a whole in managed. The only one class of which there are not too many are the small farmers. Of these there can never be too many. So long as the stock of small farms hold out there can be no excess of small farmers. Farming the small farm is the basis and best of all business. It is the business the law should do the most to encourage, particularly in a country with so lavish an endowment of rich soil, unequaled anywhere in the world, as this country possesses. And, strangely enough, though the small farmers are sufficiently numerous in the country to outvote all the rest of us, if they saw fit, they are less deferred to by those who make the laws and customs of the State and Nation than any other. With a solid. intelligently managed union, the small farmer could have the laws just as he might choose to shape them. He wouldn't be rich in the common acceptation of the term; but he would come nearer than any other representative of a great body could possibly come to having all he needed, and he would have an organization in comparison with which all other so-called great organizations, either of labor or capital, would seem ridiculously insignificant.-Wilkesbarre (Pa.) He Failed to Get the Tacks.

"Can you t-t-tell me where I may g-g-get some g-g-g-good t-t-tin t-t-ttacks?"

"Certainly," replied the wag. "You turn down this street on your left two blocks, then turn again two blocks to your left, and again two blocks to your left, and that will bring you to the best hardware shop in town, where you'll be sure to find them."

The stammerer continued his way. The wag, walking down the street two blocks, entered the aforesaid hardware shop and proceeded as follows:

And One Which Appeals to Common Sense -Many Curable Cases, [Medical Stilus.]

"Many persons die of Consumption who could easily be cured," says Dr. S. C. Clark, of Watertown, N. Y., "if they would go at it right I have a new view of the disease. Consumption is not always of lung origin."

"How so? What is it, then?" "Many cases of consumption are secondary.
The disease itself prevails everywhere, but the best practitioners refuse to attribute it entirely to inheritance or the weather. If a person lives in the most favorable climate in the world and has any tendency to lung weakness, if certain conditions exist in the system, that climate, however favorable, will not prevent development of the disease. The disorder in such cases is only a secondary symptom in the lungs of some other ailment, and can never be cured until approached through its source."
"Yes, doctor; but what is the method of ap-

"If you dip your finger in acid you burn it; do you not?"
"Yes."

"If you wash the burnt finger every second with the acid, what is the result?' "Why, constant inflammation, festering, and eventual destruction of the finger."

"Precisely! Now then for my method, which commends itself to the reason and judgment of every skillful practitioner. You know certain acids are developed in the body. Well, if the system is all right, these acids are neutralized or utilized and carried out. If the system is run down by excesses, anxiety, continual exposure, or overwork, these acids accumulate in the blood. If there is any natural weakness in the lung, this acid attacks it, having a natural affinity for it, and if the acid is in the acid is not neutralized or passed out of the system, it burns, ulcerates, and finally destroys the lung. Is this clear?"

"Perfectly! But how do you prevent the accumulation of these acids in the system?"

"Irregularities of the liver and kidneys execute."

"Irregularities of the liver and kidneys create this excess of acid, and the supply can be cut off only by correcting the wrong action of these organs. The kidneys alone should carry out in quantity, in solution, enough of this acid daily, which, if left in the blood, would kill four men. When the stomach, the liver, and the hidneys are all consuling to increase and the kidneys are all conspiring to increase the acid, the wonder is that weak lungs resist death as long as they do!

"But you have not told us how you would treat such cases."

"No, but I will. The lungs are only diseased as an effect of this acid or kidney poison in the blood. After having exhausted all authorized remedies to correct this acid condition, I was compelled, in justice to my patients, to use Warner's safe cure; though a proprietary remedy, it is now recognized, I see, by leading physicians, by Presidents of State Boards of Health, and by insurance physicians, as a scientific and the only specific for those great organs in which over ninety per cent. of diseases originate or are sustained."

"Is this form of treatment successful?" "It is wonderfully so, and for that reason I am only too willing that you should announce it to the world of consumptives."

Note by the Publishers :- We have received the above interview from H. H. Warner & Co., Rochester, N. Y., with the request that we publish it for the good of suffering people. In a foot note to their letter they say:

"The experience of Dr. Clark is not strange to us. In our correspondence we have found that many thousands of people are suffering from what they think is consumption, whereas the real difficulty is with the liver and kidneys, proven by the fact that when these or-gans are restored to health by the use of Warner's safe cure the consumption disappears, and so does uremic or kidney poisoning, which causes so many symptoms of diseases that the human system is subject to. The same may be said of rheumatism, caused by an acid con-dition of the system. We insist upon what we always have claimed, if you remove the cause, the system will soon perfect the work already begun. Mrs. Rev. Dr. Theodore Wolf, of Gettysburg, Pa., wife of the editor of the Lutheran Quarterly, said her friends thought her 'far gone with consumption,' but after a thorough treatment with Warner's safe cure, she says: 'I am perfectly well.' We can cite thousands of such cases, but one is enough. If you publish the above article, kindly send us a marked copy."

We gladly give place to the article, for if we can in any way stay the ravages of consumption, which carries away so many millions yearly, it is our bounden duty so to do. -Pur.

Going to Balls Unasked.

Some of the papers appear to be surprised because the prisoner in "the aristocratic libel case" attended several "receptions" without being invited by any one. There is nothing new in this sort of effrontery, which has been quite common ever since there commenced what Lord Beaconsfield termed "those vast and successful invasions of society by new classes." Thirty years ago, when Lady Palmerston's parties were the best in London, she used to say that she never gave one which was not attended by people who had either not been invited for the night they came, or (in most instances) who had not been invited at all. Lady Palmerston, whose parties (even on her "political" evenings) were strictly "select" in the best sense of the term, was very good-natured and always refused to resent these liberties. "If it pleases them to come, I am glad they should do so," she used to say: "Receptions" are now a vast omnium-gatherum, the invitations usually being issued by the upper servants, whereas Lady Palmerston wrote every card herself, so that if people like to dispense with the formality of an invitation they may safely count on escaping detection. Balls at "new houses" are invariably attended by people who have never been asked, as when the invitations are sent out by two or three different individuals the foolish hostess is simply at the mercy of audacious intruders. - London Truth.

Denouncing a Fraud.

"I see that this man Quacker is coming again," said a Dakota editor to his business manager, referring to a traveling physician, "and I have just written a column article which I think will fix him. I spoke of his deluded victims

"Well, it won't look hardly right, will it—he just came in and left an ad." "Is that so? One of his column ads?"

"Yes, he said that he had decided to advertise in our paper exclusively as he believed it to be an excellent medium."

"Yes, of course. Say," he added, turning to the foreman, "just kill that piece headed 'Death to all Quacks and Frauds.' 1 must go and write another to take the place of it—I suppose we might as well give the Doctor a pretty good send-off."—Estelline Bell.

THE small boy who plays circus with the "trick-goat" in his back yard should see that the St. Jacobs Oil bottle is not empty.

"Michael Stropoff."

Mr. G. C. Staley, while playing the lead-ing part in "Michael Strogoff," at Oakland. Cal., became so hoarse from a severe cold that he despaired of being able to continue his part. Two bottles of Red Star Cough Cure entirely cured him. Does not nauseate.

A Mining Anecdote.

It is safe to say that three-fourths of those who deal in mining stocks through the medium of the boards never saw a mine, and that less than one-half have A Horse's Hind Legs and Shoulders. any knowledge of how a mine is worked. That people should make serious mistakes in their speculations through ignorance of these matters is not to be wondered at.

Perhaps the greatest blunder on record was made by a gentleman of decided Tentonic origin, who visited my office one day and asked, point blank: "Haf dey schtruck dot vinze?"

"What winze do you refer to?" said I. "Dot vinze in der Oonion Consolidated Mine," was the ready reponse.

"There's no winze in the Union Consolidated Mine that they are likely to strike at present." I answered, and then, thinking the man might be a little confused in his mining knowledge, I asked:

"What do you mean by a winze? What do you suppsse a winze is?"

"A vinze?" he shouted, with a knowing smile, "oh, a vinze is a body of

"No, it isn't," said I, and, taking a pencil, I drew him a little sketch of a winze, and explained to him that it was a small shaft from one level to another, generally for the purpose of ventila-

"Is dot a vinze?" he fairly yelled, in the most astonished manner; "den, by gracious, I lose me tousands und tousands of dollars on dose vinzes. Every time I see dev have started a vinze, or struck a vinze, I buy der schtocks, and every time dey go down right avay. It always vas a wonder to me why de Comstocks didn't pay more dividends and levy fewer assessments ven dere vas so many hundred vinzes in der mines."

He walked, out leaving the door open, and I could hear him repeat at every third step, as he went down the stairs: "Oh, dose vinzes! Oh, dose vinzes!"-San Francisco Argonaut.

Despise Not the Day of Small Things.

Little things may help a man to rise—a bent pin in an easy chair, for instance. Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets" are small things, pleasant to take, and they cure sick-headaches, relieve torpid livers, and do wonders. Being purely vegetable they cannot harm any one. All druggists.

Charming Ugly People.

Saint-Simon's Memoirs is the most consoling book in the world for ugly people. Half the men and women we meet in his pages are without personal beauty, but by no means without charm; and one is almost deluded into the belief that the body is rather as a costume at a masquerade than a costume on the stage, and neither indicates nor influences the part one plays. Occasionally he carries his liberal courteousness of description to a somewhat comic extreme, as when he says of Mme. de Foix: "She was the prettiest humpback ever seen; tall, in early years dancing most charmingly, and having so much gra e that one could not wish that she were not humpback. She was very little at court, very much in the great world; . . . extremely amusing, without the least malice, and never more than 15 years old; when she died childless at 55, regretted by every one."-New York Evening Post.

An Obstacle to Physical Well Being.

Physicians rightly characterize constipation as an obstinate impediment to the welfare of the body. The performance of the more important functions, such as digestion, biliary secretion, and an active circulation of the blood, are interrupted by it in a greater or less degree, as the development of the complaint is incipient or mature. Not at once, of course, but with reasonable promptitude, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will remove every symptom to which it gives rise, as well as all minor maladies that gives rise, as well as all minor maladies that spring from it, among them indigestion and chronic biliousness. From drenching cathartics it is vain to hope for permanent benefit, and there are few purgatives that are not violent and profuse in their operation. Blue pill and calomel are designed to act upon the liver only, and taken frequently are pernicious to health. The Bitters produces relaxation of the bowels without pain, and a renewal of their regularity. It out pain, and a renewal of their regularity. It also conquers fever and ague, rheumatism, neuralgia, and inactivity of the kidneys.

APPEARANCES are deceiving in this world. The nicest man you ever met was a buncesteerer .- Life.

SAM JONES AND THE 'QUAKE. [Extract Atlanta Constitution.]

Sam Jones says, "The 'quake is an awful thing-a visitation that is alarming, but it will help the meeting. People will stop and think for a little while, for I tell you that sinners are cowards. Nobody can stand the earthquake ague but a Christian. That is an ague that Simmons Liver Regulator can't cure."

But for Ague, Dumb Ague, Fever and Ague, Swamp Fever, Intermittent Fever, and Chills and Fever-in a word, Malarial Quake, the one sure preventive and cure, positive in its results and speedy in its action, is Simmons Liver Regulator, a purely vegetable preparation, prepared by J. H. Zeilin & Co., of Philadelphia. It strikes at the seat of the disease by regulating the Liver. It produces a healthy, vigorous condition of the body in place of the general debility which accompanies Malarial Fevers. A cloud of witne ses, numbering the best and noblest of the land, will attest the truth of this assertion.

"A horse's shoulders," he said, "notwithstanding their strength, are very delicate and very apt to become strained. The raising of the fore feet rests them, and throws the weight on the hind legs. In the stable a horse will always kick out a hole in which to put his hind feet, and those who study the comfort of their horses always make the front part of the stall higher than the back. Besides, this has a perceptible effect on the beauty of a horse, and the prettiest shoulders are always found on horses whose stalls are constructed in accordance with the animal's instinct."- Farrier's Talk.

There Shall Be No Alps.

When Napoleon talked of invading Italy one of his officers said: "But, sire, remember the Alps." To an ordinary man these would have seemed simply insurmountable, but Napoleon responded eagerly: "There shall be no Alps." So the famous Simplon pass was made. Disease, like a mountain, stands in the way of fame, fortune, and honor to many who by Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" might be healed, and so the mountain would disappear. It is specific for all blood, chronic lung and liver diseases, such as consumption (which is scrofula of the lungs), pimples, blotches, eruptions, tumors, swellings, fever-sores, and kindred complaints. kindred complaints.

A QUESTION ABOUT Brown's Iron Bitters ANSWERED.

The question has probably been asked thousands of times. "How can Brown's Iron Bitters cure everything?" Well, it doesn't. But it does cure any disease for which a reputable physician would prescribe IRON Physicians recognize Iron as the best restorative agent known to the profession, and inquiry of any leading chemical firm will substantiate the assertions that there are more preparations of iron than of any other substance used in medicine. This shows conclusively that iron is acknowledged to be the most important factor in successful medical practice. It is, however, a remarkable fact, that prior to the discovery of BROWN'S IRON BITTERS does not injure BROWN'S IRON BITTERS does not injure BROWN'S IRON BITTERS does not injure because headache, or produce constipation—all other iron britters in the Only income the first supplied for the class and if a nursing mother, the class along its representation of the class and the class along its representation. TOBACCO PAPER PULP.

A Peculiar Kind of Cigars.

A correspondent from New York writes: While seeking information among retail tobacconists, a peculiar preparation of tobacco used for the manufacture of a certain inferior class of cigarettes in Havana was spoken of, and with some difficulty it was learned that a German merchant, who is not in that line of trade, had a box of peculiar cigars sent to him some time ago from Germany as a sample, with a purpose of inducing him to undertake putting them on this market.

"Take a cigar," he said, hospitably, offering a box half full of the "weeds," and lighting one of them himself. "Yes, I did have some such cigars sent me awhile ago, but I declined to have anything to do with them, as there was no profit in them. They could not pay duty and compete with the class of cigars they would be expected to run against here. 'Pecaliar manufacture?'
Yes, rather. The richest, oiliest, rankest tobacco brought from some of the West Indian Islands is first put through a process exactly like that of making paper pulp. While it is in that state chemistry's aid is invoked to entirely change its character. The elements that render it rank, and offensive are that render it rank . and offensive are eliminated from it; other essential oils and ethers are added to it. It can be made to exactly counterfeit any tobacco in the world, even the finest from the Vuelta de Abajo.

"When it is just right, it is run out in a film, that gradually grows in thickness to a sheet, just as paper is made. Upon this sheet certain acids are lightly sprinkled in minute drops here and there, to simulate upon the perfected sheet the little spots and blotches that you see in the genuine tobacco The color has already been attended to and regulated so that it will come out just right for any shade of cigar, from a Claro to an Oscuro, but now other essential oils are touched to the sheet in the most delicate way, to give the rich, oily gloss of sub-cutaneous color, so to speak, that will be observed on the finest dark leaf. Finally the sheet goes between powerful steel rollers, upon the carefully matched surface of which are deeply engraved exact reproductions in the most delicate detail of markings of genuine tobacco leaves. When those leaves are cut out of the sheet, it requires the skill of an expert to determine that they are not real. The remnants go back into the vat, and the leaves are, according to their quality, made into cigars or chopped up into filling for cigarettes. By the way, how do you like that cigar you are smoking now?"

"Very well." "Good flavor? Burns well? Holds well its fine white ash?"

"To all your queries—yes."
"Well, that is one of the cigars I have described to you the making of. Take this knife and cut it open. Examine its wrappers and the filler carefully. I am not surprised to hear you say that it looks like natural leaf, and that you can trace the lines of the veins and fine stems in it. Of course you can. But tear a bit in two and look at its edge with this magnifying glass. Do you observe that its fibers are irregularly disposed of, criss-cross, just like this bit of paper that I tear and put under the glass? A natural leaf does not tear in that way. Scrape it, and you will see that its fibers separate from their hold in different directions. Soak it in water and it will become soft and pull apart like paper. It is simply tobacco paper. No, I do not know that there are in the country any more of these cigars than the few I have left. I do not think that there are. But I know that great quantities of them are sold all over Europe, and that the exportations to South America are quite large. People there smoke them in preference to the genuine and good real leaf cigars, grown and made in their own countries. Well, perhaps they don't know how the imported ones are made. A dealer need not feel it compulsory upon him to tell, and there's a great deal of virtue in a label to the

With Coats Wrong Side Out.

At the battle of Manassas the uniform of the First Louisiana Regiment of Confederate Infantry was blue. Another Confederate regiment, mistaking them for the enemy, fired upon fhem. An order was immediately given for the Louisianians to shuck their coats and put them on inside out, and the comical spectacle of 800 men with their coats all turned wrong put an end, for the time being, to the pomp of war.
