Students protest war in "Strike For Peace"

By JOHN CARRIER
Staff Writer

University students Thursday night began the third organized campus protest against United States involvement in Southeast Asia.

Proclaiming it a "Strike for Peace", the program began Thursday night in Tillman Hall with a general rally and the presentation of two movies, "ROTC" and "Peoples War". The local program continued Friday at 10 a. m. and through the day until its conclusion Friday night in the amphitheatre. A regional protest is slated Saturday night in Atlanta.

The protest here is the third in two years. In April of 1969 a small group of students, though harassed by fellow students and administrators, demonstrated on the quad and the loggia. Last year's October-November moratorium was attended by over 600 students. Like the earlier protesters, moratorium participants were heckled and physically threatened by unsympathetic students.

Through leaflets distributed in the dormitories and an information table on the loggia, organizers this week urged students to support the Friday boycott of classes and attend the scheduled activities.

Much of the strike support will likely come from members of the Clemson University Underground, the sponsoring organization. CUU chairman Jim Ellis said Wednesday night that he expects about 500 students to be present for the concluding program Friday night.

Ellis also said that students who miss class on Friday will not likely be held accountable since leaflets will be sent to faculty members informing them of Monday night's strike endorsement by the Student Senate.

Inflation, ecology, draft laws, as well as war policy will be among those topics discussed Friday, Ellis stated. "This year's moratorium is to protest the United States Vietnam policy," Ellis said. "Last year's emphasized sympathy for war dead."

Friday's activities begin with a presentation of the Greek comedy-satire "Lysistrata" by the CUU guerilla theatre. English professors Bob Barton, Barry Hannah and Charles Israel will follow with readings.

Workshops will be held from 1-4 p. m. History professor Hewett Adams will lead a discussion on Asia in Tillman Hall auditorium. Political science professor Raymond Rinkus will speak on the Mideast situation in Hardin Hall auditorium. Father Michael Kaney of Greenville will instruct draft resistance in room one of Brackett Hall while Ellis will act as moderator of a discussion on "campus complicity" in room E-108 of Martin Hall.

A panel discussion will be featured on radio station WSBF from 4-7 p. m., concerning dissent in society as relevant to the Southeast Asian struggle. Faculty members and Vice President for Executive Affairs A. Wood Rigsby will comprise the panel.

Folk songs and musical selections from "Hair" highlight the final activity Friday night in the amphitheatre. Speakers are also scheduled.

Ellis expects no counterrallies. Referring to last year's disruption, he stated. "Last year's problems were a result of the students being unprepared for the moratorium."

He urged students to support the strike, saying, "The Vietnam War, the people who have died there and will die there as we protest, are much more important than a single day of classes."

Broadwater says changes needed in S.C. government

By SCOTT JORDAN
Staff Writer

"I don't care if you are black, white or polka-dotted. Together we can forge a political coalition that can restore this state to its common sense."

Thomas D. Broadwater, United Citizens Party write-in candidate for governor, addressed a crowd of almost 500 persons in the Daniel Hall auditorium last Thursday night.

The auditorium was filled to capacity and many students were left standing outside the doors, waiting to hear South Carolina's first black gubernatorial candidate since the Reconstruction era.

THOMAS BROADWATER

Broadwater, a Columbia attorney, and graduate of South Carolina State College, was well received by the predominately white audience, and his speech was interrupted by frequent bursts of applause.

He was introduced by Tim Rogers, 1968-69 Clemson student body president and state chairman of the Student Committee to Elect Broadwater-McTeer. The committee is comprised of white students campaigning for the UCP candidates. The Rev. Julius C. McTeer is a candidate for lieutenant governor.

Broadwater stressed the need for a change of government in the state, and cited numerous statistics, dealing with such problems as racial discrimination, a rising crime rate and inadequate educational systems, to support his claims.

He attacked the state educational system and claimed that the elimination of inefficient and discriminatory busing methods could result in a $2,100 increase in salaries of school teachers. He said that such a pay increase is needed to get more and better school teachers.

Broadwater leveled criticism at the duality of the state school system, saying, "There are those who say we need the dual system to preserve quality education. They are wrong."

He was asked if he thought the S. C. police were adequately trained and screened. "I think it is incredible that we have all kinds of physical requirements for policemen, but nobody says anything about the mentality of those who walk around waving their guns and sticks. I would have each new policeman take a psychological test."

Rogers said, "Mr. Broadwater is literally laying his life on the line. His life is threatened almost daily. His house has already been shot into."

Broadwater and Rogers had earlier dined in the Harcombe Commons dining hall with a group of student supporters. After his speech, Broadwater entertained questions from the audience. When asked about the possible disadvantages of an alienated General Assembly, he said, "I think it will be an advantage. I won't have any friends in the Assembly to protect and I will be able to call the shots as I see them."

Clemson may leave ACC if '800 rule' remains

By JOHN BOLT
Sports Editor

University officials hinted this week that a change in Clemson's conference affiliation will be forthcoming if the Atlantic Coast Conference does not change the rule requiring athletes to have a Scholastic Aptitude Test score of 800 or above.

The controversy over the '800 rule' has been raging for years. In the early 1960s, the ACC became the first major conference in the country to set an academic requirement for athletes. The schools involved decided that the cut off should be an 800 SAT score.

Since that time the National Collegiate Athletic Association has set up its own standards. In By-law 4-6 (b) it is stated that an athlete must have at least a 1.6 predicted GPR to be eligible to participate in intercollegiate sports. The NCAA also publishes a table which uses SAT scores and class rank to give a predicted 1.6 GPR.

Because of the conference '800 rule', an athlete must be treated two ways. First he must meet the requirements set up by the University and then those by the conference, something which the regular student does not have to do.

U.S. Senator Ernest F. Hollings (D - S.C.) charged in a radio broadcast Monday that Vice President Spiro T. Agnew is a "jackass."

In an interview with business director Paul Batson of student radio station WSBF, Hollings said that Agnew had made America "a tough bed for Nixon to lie in, and a tough country to live in." Hollings blamed this situation on Agnew's speeches that were sometimes not in line with forth coming administration policies.

According to Hollings, Nixon is responsible for having "this jackass running around ripping us apart." Hollings felt it was "unfortunate" that the Vice President was creating difficulties.

Concerning other issues, Hollings criticized the Vietnam situation for being "on dead center."

"The rhetoric (of the war) is one of victory," stated Hollings. "The fact is one of defeat."

"You've got to act with resolve, you've got to be positive in your policy, and once you're in and are not going to win, you should get the devil out of there."

Hollings stated that the United States is "going to have to cut our apron string" with the Thieu government.

"We would have saved lives if we'd gone in there, and not 'nuked' them, but at least we could have knocked them out long ago," claimed Hollings. "It's unfortunate that under the days of Lyndon Johnson, he wouldn't fight that war."

Hollings said that though the Senate had passed the Cooper-Church amendment, it cannot make specific military plans but only set general guidelines.

"We've got to have the President and Congress together on this most important issue," he asserted.

Hollings concluded that he cannot, in good conscience, ask young men to go to Vietnam.

ERNEST HOLLINGS

SPIRO AGNEW

The discussion then shifted to the issue of campus unrest. Hollings said that there are enough laws, but they must be enforced more promptly and fairly.

"I think it's a mistake for people to think that everything should be solved in Washington," stated Hollings. He added that if he were running a university, he would have a plan to contend with campus unrest, and would not follow the "bad example" of Kent State.

Hollings commented that though the students did much to cause the trouble at Kent State, the National Guard was in no condition to settle the trouble since it was "obviously" worn out from settling a Cleveland labor dispute."

"I won't let the situation get like Orangeburg either, with two armed camps," exclaimed Hollings.

Hollings then went on to the issue of pollution. He told Batson that the fight against pollution had become organized with the creation of the Environmental Protection Agency.

This agency consolidates different anti-pollution government agencies and helps "fix responsibility" for enforcing the anti-pollution laws.

"I'm delighted to see Clemson lead the way in this (environmental action)," said Hollings. "It's a place that's gone right on up."

In order to compete with these teams and be able to have people come watch the team play, the coaches must be a liberty to have the type of players that these institutions have. In the ACC they do not have this liberty.

In Coach Hootie Ingram's words, if the 800 rule is kept, athletics at Clemson will decline very rapidly. This would seem to say that it is imperative that the rule be done away with, by any means.

It is not the wish of the University to become an independent. The two major sports of football and basketball could probably survive without the conference, however the incentive of the other smaller sports such as soccer, tennis and track would be taken away. They would have no type of championship to seek. This is why a conference of some type is necessary, officials maintain.

However, Duke University, Wake Forest University, the University of North Carolina and the University of Virginia don't seem to want to do away with this law. These schools claim that it would lower their academic standards.

And so within the next week, some word is expected concerning the University's stand. Coach Ingram doesn't want to leave the conference. Coach Locke doesn't want to leave the conference. President Edwards doesn't want to leave the conference. However they all feel that if the conference is no longer beneficial to the school, in fact is detrimental to it, it must be abandoned for a better system.

Clemson is not afraid to do this. In 1933 it tried to break away from the Southern Conference and go into the Southeastern Conference, and in 1953 it did leave the Southern to form the ACC. If the 800 is kept all indications point toward a new conference composed of teams which are more sympathetic with member school needs.

Last week the Board of Trustees of the University of South Carolina provided the impetus to a move out of the conference. It stated that USC would begin recruiting players with a SAT score of less than 800. These players will not take the field until September, 1971, and the conference has until then to decide what to do about the rule.

Probably, though, the fate of the conference will be decided this December at the annual meeting of the ACC. It will be at this time that a final decision will be made as to whether Clemson will remain in the association.

Spiro, he's their hero

By JACK LYNCH
Assistant News Editor

Barnum and Baily would be proud. Vice President Spiro T. Agnew came to Greenville Monday to speak to a rally on behalf of state Republican candidates, especially Albert Watson.

The rally was a memorable experience for every person who attended. It reminded people of every sort of gathering, except a serious political meeting.

The first thing one noticed upon entering Greenville Memorial Auditorium was the number of grade — and high-school age youths running throughout the halls, and filling up the decent seats. Apparently these school pupils had been given a holiday to see Spiro (National Spiro Agnew Day?).

The Silent Majority was also represented at the rally. Dressed in the staid, conservative clothing that marked them as members of Middle America, they were a large, vocal yet somewhat subdued minority at the rally. Spiro was their hero, and they were proud of it.

A few blacks and long-hairs were sprinkled about the auditorium. Most of them though were high school students. Carefully watching the mob were strategically placed armed guards, who frowned upon the long-hairs.

A chorus of school children attempted to entertain the impatient audience with renditions of patriotic songs. However the crowd remained bored until the band struck up "Tiger Rag" which brought the audience to life. (The band played other tunes before the program started. Conspicuously missing though was "Dixie.") Ballons were floating around the auditorium, and a general carnival atmosphere prevailed. Excitement filled the air. Spiro was coming!

And Spiro came out, ten minutes before he was supposed to make his entrance. The somewhat shocked audience rose to its feet to cheer him. But quickly made his exit.

The crowd waited for a few minutes, and then there was a drum roll and the band played the "Star Spangled Banner." The mob respectfully stood up, a few long-hairs raised their hands to displace the peace symbol.

On the stage, one Republican got up and said that "this is a great day for South Carolina." The Middle Americans cheered. Then the program is turned over to the master of ceremonies, presidential assistant Harry Dent who exclaimed "Spiro is indeed our hero down here." More cheers from the Silent Majority and a few raised, clenched fists from the long-haired high schoolers.

Lieutenant governor candidate Jim Henderson camp-out with Spiro and heaped praise upon him. The symbol of ... in Carolina politics, Senator Strom Thurmond (R-S.C.), was introduced. Strom called Spiro "the greatest man since John C. Calhoun and Robert E. Lee." He then introduced Watson who told the crowd that "things are going great" in his campaign.

Then came the moment the audience had been waiting for. Spiro rose to speak. More cheers and clenched fists. The indoor lights were lowered for dramatic effect.

Spiro proclaimed that a Watson election would help bring about a two-party system in the South. He predicted that in the future "every election is open season on tantamount," whatever that meant.

The liberals of America were attacked in Spiro's best manner. Spiro lashed out against the "befuddled disciples of John Kenneth Galbraith, leftward-tilted politicians, and the mass media victrolas."

The famed, though somewhat contradictory phrase "radical-liberal" was not ignored by Spiro. He used the phrase six times, and denounced the "radiclib" once. ("Radiclib" sounds like the type of term that the big Eastern newspapers, which Spiro hates, would invent to fit in their headlines since "radical-liberal" is too long. Funny Spiro should use the term.)

Well the Republicans may not always produce good politics, but they certainly do create some great theater.

Canteen schedule outlined

By TIM DOYLE
Staff Writer

F. D. Miller, canteen manager, said Tuesday that "the new canteen was never meant to be open on a 24-hour basis."

"People have gotten the wrong impression somehow, concerning the hours that the canteen will be open," he said. Miller stated such an around-the-clock schedule is virtually impossible. "I have a hard enough time hiring people for two shifts as they are now," he added.

Miller said he felt that the confusion about the schedule was due primarily to the lounge located in the canteen area. He stated that this lounge will be open on a 24-hour basis once the canteen is completed. "It will contain soda and candy machines for the students' use, but the canteen area will close at 11 p.m.," he said.

Miller commented that the schedule of the new canteen will be identical to that of the West campus canteen. This schedule is Monday through Friday from 7:30 a.m. to 11 p.m.; Saturday from 7:30 a.m. to 12:45 p.m.; Sunday, 4 p.m. to 11 p.m.

"We have had a time with the limited space that we were forced to work with," Miller said. "We had to install a lot of smaller equipment because of this problem."

He said that an upright freezer, refrigerator and walk-in storage box had been installed but that most of the supplies would have to be stored in the old canteen.

When asked the approximate opening of the new facility, Miller said, "I don't have any idea when it will open."

He did say that the canteen was waiting only for several pieces of cooking equipment. "We could open up in a week if we could receive the rest of our shipped equipment," Miller said that one piece of equipment was shipped from Atlanta on October 13 and it arrived in Greenville on October 27.

BOXING COMEBACK?

Boxing was once an intercollegiate sport here before it was dropped from the athletic program. But Monday night, with Muhammad Ali and Jerry Quarry fighting for real in Atlanta, the spirit was inescapable. Residents of Johnstone Hall took turns beating each other's brains out before a cheering throng of 200 on the quadrangle. It was the good old days — almost.

University Senate feasibility to be studied by committee

By CHARLES WHETSTONE
Staff Writer

Dr. B. J. Prochaska, president of the Faculty Senate, said Monday that the Advisory Committee of the Faculty Senate has recommended the Tri-Level Committee as the most qualified committee to study the feasibility of a University Senate.

Three representatives each from the administration, faculty, and student body make up the Tri-Level Committee.

The Advisory Committee acted on behalf of the Faculty Senate because the next meeting of the Senate was several weeks away at the time a Student Senate resolution inviting the Faculty Senate to participate in the study of the University Senate was received.

"Since our Advisory Committee is made up of one representative from each of the University's colleges and the three officers of the Faculty Senate, we felt they were qualified to make the decision," said Prochaska.

"The membership of the Tri-Level Committee consists of individuals from each aspect of university life, and, therefore, we feel they are unusually well equipped to consider this proposal," Prochaska said. "Although the Tri-Level Committee has not met this year, they should convene their first meeting in the very near future," he added.

"Personally, I have no opinion regarding the establishment of a University Senate, but I would like to see the topic discussed," Prochaska continued.

Regarding the November deadline for the committee's report, Prochaska said, "The time limit is a little short when one considers the depth of study which a satisfactory report would require."

The idea to have a committee set up to study the possibility of a University Senate originated in the Student Senate. The Faculty Senate was then invited to participate in the study by the Student Senate.

Aeronautics Commission approves Aero Club lease

By MIKE FORTH
Assistant News Editor

The South Carolina Aeronautics Commission "has approved the lease of certain property on the Clemson-Oconee Airport to the Clemson Aero Club, subject to the provision of a contract to be executed between the Aeronautics Commission and the Aero Club."

This was the official statement of the settlement of the Reid Garrison-Clemson Aero Club conflict as stated by C. G. Merchant, Jr., director of SCAC, in a letter received on Oct. 22 by Dr. Don Turk, faculty advisor of the Aero Club. The statement was the outcome of a meeting of the commission in Columbia the previous day.

The approval of a lease for the Aero Club marks the culmination of action taken by SCAC concerning the conflict which has resulted from many accusations of continuous harassment over the past five years made by members of the Aero Club against Garrison, owner of Garrison Aviation who presently holds a ten year lease at the airport.

Among the accusations made in the past by members of the Aero Club was one incident in which Danny Walker, a former Aero Club instructor, indicted Garrison with a charge of personal physical harassment.

More recently Aero Club members have charged that Garrison has unjustly increased the rate of the tie down fee for the club. One spokesman for the club stated that while Garrison is charging a fixed rate of $15 for each space that is being rented by private members with comparable sized aircraft, he is charging the Aero Club an additional fee of two dollars per three members. The spokesman pointed out the fact that this means the Aero Club is having to pay a tie down fee of close to $50 for one plane that is presently tied down at the Clemson-Oconee Airport.

The injustice, however, is not being limited to the Aero Club alone, according to Don Hendricks, Aero Club flight instructor. "The Fort Hill Flying Club received a tie down bill this month of $71 per plane," stated Hendricks. He pointed out that the gravity of the situation can be seen when Garrison's rates are compared to the $5 tie down fee for a comparable tie down space at the Pickens County Airport in Liberty.

The case of Garrison versus Hendricks was brought to the attention of the Oconee County Court earlier this month. The decision rendered by the court was that Garrison had the right to prevent Hendricks, and subsequently the Aero Club, from using the facilities leased by Garrison to give free instruction to club members, but that Garrison could not deny the Aero Club the use of the runway.

Carlos Lam, president of the Aero Club, pointed out at the club meeting Monday night that the Aero Club lease which has now been approved by SCAC is a ten year lease which was granted by the same authority that granted Garrison's lease. Lam also expressed hope that the Aero Club will now be able to proceed without any further harassment from Garrison. Although the Aero Club lease has been approved by SCAC, the exact location and land area of the proposed lease has not yet been determined. A representative of SCAC is, however, scheduled to meet with the Aero Club in the "very near future" to determine the specific terms of the contract, according to the letter that Dr. Turk received.

In a discussion of the situation at the club meeting, Dr. Turk outlined the area of flight instruction as the only area which may have certain stipulations under the club's lease.

Dr. Turk explained to the club members that the Aero Club may have to obtain a paid instructor with recognized qualifications who will keep records of the member's progress and will limit instruction exclusively to Aero Club members. These stipulations would give certain limited non-commercial rights to the Aero Club, yet preserve Garrison's right to run a commercial business.

Dr. Turk acknowledged the fact that the Aero Club has not been promised any sub-sidiation under the terms of the lease to develop the land for construction of a tie down area.

He also said that he didn't "expect this to turn into something big by tomorrow morning". He expressed confidence for the future of the Aero Club however, and said that "we've got the land now, and we're on our way."

outshooting them 30-15. But the team was able to convert only 3% of their shots while Duke's two forwards Tymeson and Guttierrez scored on an amazing 33% of theirs. Clemson's lone goal was scored by Andy Demori, the ACC's leading scorer with 21 goals, on a head shot in the second quarter.

A disappointed Coach Ibrahim stated that he wasn't displeased with his team's performance. "We have a good team, and our team-work and spirit have been at an all-time high. We have just been unable to score goals ever since the loss of Daughterty and our opponents have been of excellent caliber. Duke made 3 goals against us which were probably the best shots at goal that I have seen ever since I have been in this country. Guttierrez was unbelievable all day and we failed to stop him. He beat us, even though we did a good job against the rest of the team."

The Tigers are now 6-2-1 on the season, with four games remaining. Their next match will be against defending ACC champion Virginia this Sunday at 2:00 p. m. on Riggs field. The Cavaliers, undefeated last year in regular competition, are 5-2-1 this year and ranked eighth in the South. A victory would salvage a lot for the very young Tigers, possibly on their way to the best soccer record ever at Clemson.

IT'S FALL AGAIN

While the Maryland soccer fell all over Clemson, both legally and otherwise, last Saturday, the Tigers were falling from the unbeaten ranks as Maryland defeated them, 4-0.

The Clemson soccer team suffered two defeats on Saturday and Tuesday, dashing their dreams of an NCAA playoff bid. They lost 4-0 to Maryland on Saturday at Riggs field and fell to Duke's Blue Devils 5-1 in Durham on Tuesday.

A crowd of over 500 people watched the Tigers battle Maryland. They played well despite the loss of starting forward Crag Daughterty with a knee injury and star fullback Joe Alfandre having to play with a broken nose.

The Tiger defense made several costly mistakes leading to three of Maryland's four goals, yet the team wasn't out of the game until late in the third period when they failed to capitalize on several golden opportunities. The booters were only outshot 28-24 by the nationally ranked Terps who were third in the nation last year and first the year before.

Against Duke the Tigers played an excellent ball control game in which they controlled the ball most of the contest. They were able to apply tremendous pressure on the Blue Devil defense.

Ruggers win two games; face Atlanta here Sunday

By READE BAXLEY
Special Correspondent

On Sunday afternoon the Clemson Rugby Club met the highly touted Georgia Bulldogs on the football practice field. Georgia came to Clemson boasting an undefeated record against such opponents as the Vanderbilt and Atlanta Rugby Clubs. In the first of two games Clemson's "A" team jumped off to an early lead of 3-0 as a result of a try by Steve Johnson. An inspired team effort during the remainder of the first half allowed Clemson to increase their lead to 9-0 by intermission. Playing a man short in the second half because of a shoulder separation suffered by the Tiger fullback, the ruggers continued to pressure the Georgia defense. Once again Johnson scored, and after the kick split the uprights Clemson led 14-0. Georgia then rallied with five minutes to play and scored eight quick points. As time ran out Clemson found itself victorious over powerful Georgia by a score of 14-8.

In the second game Clemson once again overpowered Georgia's ruggers. The versatile Larry Osborn kicked and ran for a total of ten points inspiring the team to a second victory over Georgia, this time by a score of 13-0. Clemson's team captain, Joe Agusiewicz, attributed the victories to an overall team effort in which thirty members dedicated their entire Sunday afternoon to distinguishing Clemson University as one of the finest rugby clubs in the South.

Parsons called colorful; compared to Emerson

By JIM DALES
Sports Writer

"The American College Dictionary" defines "colorful" as "presenting or suggesting vivid or striking scenes". This description fits Steve Parsons well. Parsons, presently second seeded tennis player, reminds one of Roy Emerson with his quickness and desire.

Parsons came out of the hills of Charleston, West Virginia, as one of the most highly touted players to ever hold a racket in the South. He became interested in tennis after mastering table tennis.

From that early beginning, things started to happen. Parsons was an outstanding player on the Charleston High School team that was ranked third in the country during his junior year.

With wins in such prestigious tournaments as the Southern Juniors Tournament in Davidson, North Carolina, Steve climbed to the top of the ladder in his home state and was named the top player in West Virginia.

When asked why he selected Clemson over the many other schools trying to recruit him, Parsons answered, "Coach Bruly was definitely the deciding factor. He impressed

Parsons sees North Carolina as the team to beat and he does think they can be beaten. "UNC with Fred McNair is very good. But, I think we will be favored against them since we play them here. They are mostly clay court players and we have a hard surface. We also have increased depth this year and should be able to take 'em here," explained the Tiger standout.

Cross Country team on road to Atlanta for regional meet

This week the Clemson cross country team has been preparing for their Regional III meet in Atlanta on Saturday. There will be a large number of teams from Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Kentucky, Tennessee and Alabama running on the Atlanta Water Works course.

Due to injuries to Jason Hill and Richie Furst, two of Coach P. Wee Greenfield's best runners, the team has compiled only a 2-6 record.

Running for the Tigers in the cross country championship meet are sophomores Larry Rush, Frank Romero, Wayne Jenkins, freshman James Bell and junior Dave Hall.

Coach Greenfield said, "This should be the best race all season for this hard-working bunch. Even though cross country isn't much of a spectator sport, this is the most grueling race in track."

Tigers travel to Maryland

By JULE WELBORN

Last week the Clemson Tigers faced the top team in the conference and came out on the losing end of a 21-10 game. This Saturday the Tigers will journey to College Park, Maryland, for what is always a tough game for the Tigers.

Brad O'Neal, a plant science major from Fairfax, said about Duke, "They hit pretty hard. They have a sound football team, and they didn't make very many mistakes last Saturday."

As for his good day, the senior end said that he just happened to be at the right place at the right time. He caught seven passes, one for 48 yards, the longest single gain of the year by the Clemson offense.

"Duke has to be the team to beat in the conference now," added the senior receiver.

Turning to the Terps, O'Neal commented, "They have a hard hitting, aggressive, but undisciplined team. Their defensive backfield is quick and their defense differs from that of Duke, so we will have to change our pass patterns. But we should be able to pass against them."

The senior stated that the Tigers will need to run enough to set up their passing attack. He concluded, "The Maryland game is always a rough and tough one for Clemson. Especially when we play at College Park."

B. B. Elvington said that the short passes hurt the Tigers last week. "We had trouble stopping them. We weren't hurt too bad by their running game. However, Steve Jones was a hard runner. They should be thankful for having a player like Leo Hart."

As for Maryland, the senior defensive tackle stated, "They have a big strong offensive line. Art Seymour is supposed to be their best back. Their favorite play is the sweep. Their running game is stronger than their passing game."

It isn't easy, being a Paulist. Bridging gaps between young and old, black and white, past and future. But it is a challenge.

The Paulist mission is to people... individually and in all the societies in which they live... to discover Christ wherever he is acting... to be attuned to the needs of the present, yet to form a vision of tomorrow's world.

Sailing team edges Citadel for victory

By JIM BELL
Sports Writer

The Clemson Sailing team will be competing in their last invitational of the season November 7 at Knoxville, Tennessee. Last Saturday the sailors captured the first place Pewter Mug in their own host regatta on Lake Hartwell.

In the Clemson University Fall Invitational International 420's - 14 foot fiberglass sailboats were used. Bill Rembold, Herb Hucks and Trip Hines skippered for the winning Tiger team.

Rembold said, "We got it all together this week. Consistent high placing by all the team members helped us to win."

The meet was very close with only 2 1/4 points separating the first three schools. Clemson's final team score was 9 1/4 compared to secondplace Citadel with 10 1/4 and third place University of South Carolina with 11 1/2. Rounding out the remaining four teams were Duke (17), Davidson (22), University of Tennessee (28), College of Charleston (33).

Although none of the Clemson skippers scored the lowest number of points in their divisions, the team still won. It was a tight race in "A" division with USC's Ann Boyd winning low point skipper over Bill Rembold of Clemson by 1/4 point.
