The Municipal Technical Advisory Service (MTAS) was created in 1949 by the state legislature to enhance the quality of government in Tennessee municipalities. An agency of the University of Tennessee Institute for Public Service, MTAS works in cooperation with the Tennessee Municipal League and affiliated organizations to assist municipal officials.

By sharing information, responding to client requests, and anticipating the ever-changing municipal government environment, MTAS promotes better local government and helps cities develop and sustain effective management and leadership.

MTAS offers assistance in areas such as accounting and finance, administration and personnel, fire, public works, law, ordinance codification, and water and wastewater management. MTAS houses a comprehensive library and publishes scores of documents annually.

MTAS provides one copy of our publications free of charge to each Tennessee municipality, county and department of state and federal government. There is a $10 charge for additional copies of "Records Management for Municipal Governments."

Photocopying of this publication in small quantities for educational purposes is encouraged. For permission to copy and distribute large quantities, contact the MTAS Knoxville office at (865) 974-0411.

Dear City Official:

This manual is presented as a basic summary of laws, regulations and practices regarding records management by city governmental offices. It is intended to replace the previous publication of this office written in 1987 by Harold Yungmeyer entitled Records: What to Save, What to Toss...and When. This more comprehensive manual contains additional information on records management, including new provisions addressing the many changes in technology in recent years.

We have tried to make this publication as timely and accurate as possible. Please be aware, however, that laws and regulations affecting local governments are in a constant state of change. When relying on information in this publication about a specific law or regulation, one should always consult the specific statute or regulation itself to ensure that the law has not been amended or repealed. Consult with your city attorney or other legal counsel when necessary.

The MTAS staff hopes this manual will be useful to you and will help increase the efficiency and effectiveness of your offices. Please contact us if you have questions or comments regarding this publication. As you will note in the Acknowledgments, a number of people have assisted us in preparing this document. We are indebted particularly to the County Technical Assistance Service, whose Records Management Manual for County Governments we have adapted here for use by cities.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The publication of this manual would not have been possible without the advice and assistance of many people. In particular, we acknowledge the assistance given by Wayne Moore and Jamie Awalt of the State Library and Archives and the University of Tennessee's County Technical Assistance Service, especially Legal Consultant David Connor.

We appreciate the review of the disposition schedules by all those who have assisted us, particularly Donna Bridges, Janice Casteel, Paul Miller, Ron Sanders, Warren Searby and Bill Terry. They have provided time, expertise, advice, wisdom and practical knowledge in developing this edition of the manual.

MTAS also wishes to acknowledge the assistance of several MTAS staff. Thanks to Senior Legal Consultant Sid Hemsley for his contributions. Special acknowledgement goes to Armintha Loveday, administrative services assistant, without whose assistance with typing, editing, compiling and organizing this publication would not have been completed.

PART ONE: INTRODUCTION

Records management is often an overlooked issue in both public and private sector offices; however, this task is becoming more vital every day. In this information age, everyone, from the average citizen to the largest corporation or government, must find a way to preserve, manage, store and organize their records. Whether your city has a population of 1,500 or 650,000, it is necessary to keep accurate wage and hour records on employees and have a comprehensive system for tracking documents. Good managers will expend significant time and effort in planning and making decisions about their labor force and their facilities, but few take the time to think about their records. The records of an office are often as essential to its operation as its employees, facilities and equipment. New employees can be hired and trained to replace those who leave; new office space and equipment can be leased or purchased to replace anything that is lost, even in cases of the worst disasters. If your records are lost or destroyed, however, there is nowhere to go to purchase a replacement, and they often cannot be recreated.

For certain city officials, such as the city recorder, record keeping is one of the most important duties and purposes of the office. For others, such as employees of a police department, record keeping is incidental to the fundamental purpose of the job, which is law enforcement. Nevertheless, these offices still must comply with federal and state statutes that require accurate records regarding personnel, finances, and other aspects of the office. Good records management practices will benefit both types of offices.

REASONS FOR RECORDS MANAGEMENT

Proper records management not only conveys organizational and management benefits to an office, but also, for local government offices, it is a vital task, necessary for fulfilling important legal requirements and duties. The following are just a few of the reasons your city should take records management seriously.

Space

In many cities, finding sufficient space for records is a real problem. It is rare for a city department to have all the space it needs. Most local officials would complain that the necessary records of the office are rapidly filling up all available space. City halls are overfilled with old and archived records, often found stuffed into basements, storage closets and attics. For this reason alone, it is important and cost effective for a city to implement a records management program.

Records Serve as a Legal Foundation

In a society of laws, both local governments and the citizens they serve are dependent upon good documentation to define their legal status. Court orders, tax records, and minutes of city council meetings are just a few examples of important documents that create relationships, establish rights or liabilities, and authorize certain actions. When disputes arise over legal issues, it is important to have good documentation on which to rely. Local governments have an important responsibility to preserve these records. Proper records management will ensure that these records are preserved and can be found when needed.

Open Records Requirements

Since government records generally are open to public inspection, the task of managing records becomes even more important and more complicated. The principle of allowing public access to government records, combined with the so-called Sunshine Law, which requires open meetings, is considered an important check on government and an important defense against corruption in public office and mismanagement of public resources. Unless there is a specific statutory exemption that makes a record confidential, the public has the right to inspect and copy the records of government agencies. So not only must you, as a municipal official, preserve and keep records, you must allow public access to these records for inspection. Unless your records are well organized and well protected, you may not be able to comply with public requests for information. This can undermine public confidence in government and hinder your city's relationship with the citizens it serves.

Historical Preservation of Documents

Cities play a vital role in preserving our nation's history. The documents and records of local governments give us insights into the lives of our ancestors and the circumstances of their times. Cities with too many records and too little space for them routinely end up placing them wherever they can. In many cases, these storage areas don't adequately protect records from the elements. Heat, moisture, mildew, insects and vermin can quickly render records useless. Your municipality and its citizens may be losing important information as well as a part of the community's heritage. With proper records management, the important records are preserved; the less essential records are destroyed when no longer useful so they do not take up valuable space; the records are catalogued and organized so that officials and the public can access them; and records are stored under proper conditions to enable long-term preservation.

PURPOSES OF THIS MANUAL

This manual is intended to be a resource to help city officials and other individuals implement a proper records management program in their cities. In this manual you will find a discussion of guidelines for storing records in alternative formats such as microfilm, microfiche, and the various electronic and computer storage media; suggestions about contingency planning for disaster recovery and records storage; and general information on records management, as well as a list of other sources of information on these topics. Although many of these issues are too complex to cover fully in this publication, it is hoped this manual will highlight the issues that should concern city officials and records custodians.

Most of this manual consists of appendices of records retention schedules for the major types of records kept by a city. These schedules describe the records, indicate whether they are permanent or temporary records, and establish the amount of time a temporary record must be kept before it can be destroyed. The Municipal Technical Advisory Service, a unit of the University of Tennessee Institute for Public Service, is authorized by law to produce such schedules as a guide to city officials in determining the proper disposition of their records.¹

PART TWO: LEGAL ISSUES

INTRODUCTION

City governments and all the secondary offices, boards, committees and commissions of a city are creations of the law. They find their origin in either the Tennessee Constitution or statutory law. It is a long-established principle in Tennessee law that municipalities can do only those things that the law authorizes them to do.² Therefore, it is vitally important to any operation of city government to know what the laws are that authorize the city to perform a function and to know what the laws are that place limitations around that authority. There are laws that require cities and all local governments to keep records and laws that govern how a city manages its records. Both of these topics are examined in this section.

LAWS THAT REQUIRE RECORDS TO BE KEPT

Not every record in a government office has a corresponding statute or regulation requiring that it be kept. Many records are generated simply in the ordinary course of business without any formal legal authority mandating their creation. But the creation and preservation of certain other records are required by specific laws. Since these laws affecting individual records are referenced in the retention schedules at the end of this manual, this chapter discusses the sources of those laws more generally.

Federal Laws and Regulations

Municipal officials should be aware that federal laws and regulations require them to keep certain records. This is particularly true of payroll information and other employment-related records. Most of the laws regarding how we hire, fire, compensate and treat employees are generated at the federal level. The Family and Medical Leave Act, the Fair Labor Standards Act, and the Occupational Safety and Health Act are just a few of the acts that place certain burdens on employers to keep records regarding their employees.³ These statutes also generate another layer of federal regulations that govern the implementation and enforcement of the acts. In addition to personnel issues, federal laws and regulations also touch topics as diverse as student records⁴ and wastewater management. Laws passed by the U.S. Congress are codified in the United States Code (U.S.C. or U.S.C.A. for United States Code Annotated). The massive amounts of rules and regulations generated by the different federal agencies are found primarily in the Code of Federal Regulations (C.F.R.).

State Laws and Regulations

Since municipal governments are instrumentalities of the state, some of the laws addressing what records need to be kept by city offices and how those records should be managed are found in the Tennessee Code Annotated (T.C.A.). As with the federal government, the state of Tennessee also has a set of rules and regulations promulgated by state agencies, boards and commissions, which are published by the secretary of state and known as the Official Compilation — Rules and Regulations of the State of Tennessee.

The duties of many city officials are set forth in Title 8 and in the general law charters in Title 6 of the T.C.A. Other duties and responsibilities are found in private act charters. For many offices, there are requirements included in the duties of the office to keep and preserve specific types of records. Certain city officers and employees, such as the city recorder, human resources manager and court clerk have a major record-keeping function. The proper and efficient performance of these duties is necessary not only for the continued operation of the city government, but also for the preservation of order in our society. Even offices without a primary record-keeping function are required to keep records.

Even though city officials may change with every election, the offices themselves must maintain a level of continuity. To ensure this, the responsibility for keeping and turning over the records of city offices was specifically addressed in the statutes requiring officials to be bonded. Part of what is insured by the bond of an official is the fulfillment of a duty to "... faithfully and safely keep all records required in such principal's official capacity, and at the expiration of the term, or in the case of resignation or removal from office, ... turn over to the successor all records and property which have come into such principal's hands"⁵ Failure to do so can result in recovery against the insurance company or sureties on the bond who may, in turn, proceed against the official in his or her individual capacity for subrogation of the claim.

Basic Record-Keeping Statutes

Both older state laws and their more modern counterparts are found primarily in Title 10, Chapter 7 of the T.C.A. Parts 1 and 2 of that chapter contain a number of statutes governing preserving, transcribing and indexing records. Most of these laws are specifically for counties and county offices; however, some also apply to municipalities. For instance, one statute allows government officials to keep required government records on computer or on removable computer storage media instead of on paper.⁶ However, this statute conditions the use of electronic media on a number of safeguards and restrictions. More information on this statute and other laws regarding electronic records can be found in detail in Part 3 of this manual in the chapter on Alternative Storage Formats.

The State Public Records Commission

Part 3 of Chapter 7 of the T.C.A., Title 10, establishes the State Public Records Commission and designates the Records Management Division of the Department of General Services as the primary records manager for all state government records.⁷ Currently, these entities do not take jurisdiction over local government records, but they can be looked to for examples of proper records management and preservation.

Public Access

The Freedom of Information Act (FOIA)⁸ was passed by Congress in 1966 and amended in 1974. FOIA creates procedures that allow members of the public to obtain the records of federal government agencies.⁹

The Freedom of Information Act does NOT apply to city governments, nor does it apply to state or other local governments. It applies only to certain federal departments and agencies of the United States government. But you should be aware of the FOIA in the event that citizens try to assert their rights to municipal government records under that act. Different policies and procedures apply to offices under the Freedom of Information Act that are not included in the Tennessee public records statutes that apply to your office(s). Under the FOIA, citizens may request a federal agency covered by the act to perform searches of its records to locate certain information and then disclose the information, providing copies to the person making the request (subject to certain fees). As will be seen, Tennessee statutes allow broad access to public records, but they generally do not require local officials to perform searches or create new reports or responses to requests if those reports are not already a part of the office records. For an exception to this rule, see The Tennessean v. Electric Power Board of Nashville, 979 S.W. 2d 297 (Tenn. 1998).

TENNESSEE PUBLIC RECORDS STATUTES

The public records statutes that do apply to city offices are found in Title 10, Chapter 7, Part 5 of the T.C.A. The starting point for a discussion of the law in this area is the declaration found in T.C.A. § 10-7-503 that government records are open to public inspection. It reads as follows:

...all state, county and municipal records and all records maintained by the Tennessee Performing Arts Center management corporation, except any public documents authorized to be destroyed by the county public records commission in accordance with [T.C.A.] 10-7-404, shall at all times, during business hours, be open for personal inspection by any citizen of Tennessee, and those in charge of such records shall not refuse such right of inspection to any citizen, unless otherwise provided by state law.¹⁰

This statute has been construed broadly by both the state attorney general and the Tennessee judiciary.¹¹ The legislature made it clear that its intent in passing this law was to "... give the fullest possible public access to public records," and it instructed the courts to exercise whatever remedies are necessary to ensure that purpose is fulfilled.¹² The courts have ruled that a "presumption of openness" exists with government documents.¹³ That is not to say, however, that public access is totally without limitation.

Who Has Access?

The statute states that records must be open for inspection by any "citizen" of Tennessee. In keeping with the legislative intent to provide for liberal public access to government records, the Tennessee Supreme Court has determined that the word "citizen" includes convicted felons incarcerated as inmates within the Tennessee prison system.¹⁴ Although certain rights are stripped from individuals when they are convicted of a felony (e.g., voting, ability to hold public office), the court concluded that neither the Tennessee Public Records Act nor any other statute prevented a convicted felon from seeking access to public records. Neither should access be denied to anyone else who appears to be a citizen of this state.

The law is not as generous with nonresidents, however. Since the statute states that it grants public access to "any citizen of Tennessee," the Tennessee Attorney General has opined that public officials may deny requests for copies of public records based on the lack of state citizenship.¹⁵ Since there is no fundamental federal right to access of government records and since Tennessee's laws provide access only to state citizens, the attorney general reached the conclusion that it is not a violation of the privileges and immunities clause of the United States Constitution to deny access to people from other states who make requests for Tennessee records. Keep in mind that although the act does not affirmatively require disclosure of public records to noncitizens, neither does it prohibit the release of public records to noncitizens.¹⁶ It is within the discretion of the official who has custody of the records to determine whether or not access will be provided to noncitizens. Offices should develop a written policy on that subject and enforce it consistently.

How Should Access Be Provided?

The law states that records shall be open to inspection "during business hours." Additionally, in all cases where a person has the right to inspect public records, he or she also has the right to take extracts or make copies of the record, or to make photographs or photostats of the record while it remains in the possession, custody and control of the official who has lawful custody of it.¹⁷ Every effort should be made to provide reasonable accommodation to parties requesting access to records; however, providing this service need not prevent the performance of other duties of the office. A request to see every record of an office and make a photocopy of each of them could obviously bring the entire operation of an office to a halt. For this reason, the official who has custody of the records is also authorized by law to adopt and enforce reasonable policies governing the making of extracts, copies, photographs or photostats of the records.¹⁸ These regulations should be reasonable and not interfere with the intent of the legislature to provide broad public access to records. The official with custody of the record should strive to balance the right of access to records with his or her responsibility to preserve and protect the records. Regulations should be tailored to accommodate requests in a timely manner while allowing for the continued efficient functioning of the office and for the preservation and security of the records. Regulations that are intended to frustrate the ability of a citizen to access records will likely be found unreasonable and struck down by the courts. Examples of reasonable regulations might include:

- Providing that requests for inspection of a large number of records will be accommodated only by appointment pursuant to a written request;
- Establishing a policy that copies of records will be provided within a reasonable time period (for example, the next business day for small requests and within five business days for larger requests);
- Prohibiting the inspection and copying of records by citizens without supervision of the official or an employee of the office; and
- Prohibiting the handling of older bound volumes or other fragile records by anyone other than an employee of the office so long as the information in the records is still provided in a usable format.

Be aware that there is a danger of theft, vandalism or damage by negligence inherent in allowing a member of the public access to government records. There is a profitable market for certain historical manuscripts. Across the country, government records are disappearing from government offices and reappearing for sale in antique stores, flea markets and specialty shops. To prevent theft or vandalism, someone from your office should supervise the person accessing the records, or, at a minimum, the person accessing the records should be required to examine them in an open area.

Denial of Access — Liability

Any citizen of Tennessee who is denied the right to personal inspection of a public record in whole or in part is entitled to petition the court to review the actions that were taken to deny access to the record.¹⁹ Petitions may be filed in the chancery court for the county where the records are located or in any other court exercising equity jurisdiction in the county.²⁰ Upon the filing of the petition, the court shall, at the request of the petitioning party, issue an order requiring the defendant to appear and show cause why the petitioner should not be granted access to the record. No formal written response to the petition is required. The burden of proof rests on the person having custody of the records to show why public access should not be allowed.²¹

If the court determines that the petitioner has a right to inspect the records, they shall be made available unless the defendant timely files for appeal or the court certifies a question with respect to disclosure of the records to an appellate court.²² If a public official is required to disclose records pursuant to these procedures, he or she cannot be held civilly or criminally liable under state law for any damages caused by the release of the information.²³ If the court determines that the government entity knowingly and willfully refused to disclose a public record, it may, at the discretion of the judge, assess all reasonable costs involved in obtaining the record, including attorney's fees, against the governmental entity.²⁴

WHICH RECORDS MAY BE SUBJECT TO PUBLIC ACCESS?

It has already been noted that the legislature intended the fullest possible public access to public records. But what are public records? Generally speaking, the courts have ruled that “[i]n those instances where documents have been made or received in connection with the transaction of official business by any governmental agency, then a presumption of openness exists, and the documents are public records within the meaning of [T.C.A. §] 10-7-503.”²⁵ However, this presumption of openness is overcome wherever state law provides that a record shall be kept confidential.

T.C.A. § 10-7-503 itself includes some restrictions on the public’s access to certain records. This section makes contingency plans of law enforcement agencies to deal with bomb threats, terrorist acts, and other acts of violence confidential and not open to public inspection. It also requires that certain information relative to law enforcement officers that is made confidential be redacted before the record is inspected. It also requires notice to a police officer within three days after the officer’s personnel information has been inspected.

Confidential Records

Another statute in the Tennessee Public Records Act provides a long list of government records that must be kept confidential.²⁶ This statute is amended and added to regularly by the Tennessee General Assembly. The following list reflects the records designated as confidential by T.C.A. § 10-7-504 at the time of publication (current through the 2007 legislative session).

- Medical records of patients in state, county, and municipal hospitals and medical facilities;
- Any records concerning the source of body parts for transplantation or any information concerning persons donating body parts;
- All investigative records of the Tennessee Bureau of Investigation (TBI), all criminal investigative files of the Motor Vehicle Enforcement Division of the Department of Safety relating to stolen vehicles or parts, all files of the Driver’s License Issuance Division and the Handgun Carry Permit Division of the Department of Safety relating to bogus driver’s licenses and handgun carry permits issued to undercover law enforcement agents;
- Records, documents and papers in the possession of the Military Department that involve national or state security;
- Records of students in public educational institutions;
- Certain books, records, and other materials in the possession of the office of the attorney general relating to any pending or contemplated legal or administrative proceeding;
- State agency records containing opinions of value of real and personal property intended to be acquired for a public purpose;
- Proposals received by the state pursuant to personal service, professional service and consultant service contract regulations, and related records before the state has finished its complete evaluation;
- Investigative records and reports of the Internal Affairs Division of the Department of Correction or the Department of Children’s Services;
- Official health certificates, collected and maintained by the state veterinarian;
- Capital plans, marketing information, proprietary information and trade secrets submitted to the Tennessee Venture Capital Network;
- Records of historical research value that are given or sold to public archival institutions, public libraries, or libraries of a unit of the board of regents or the University of Tennessee, when the owner or donor requires that the records are kept confidential;
- Personal information contained in motor vehicle records;

- All memoranda, work notes or products, case files, and communications related to mental health intervention techniques conducted by professionals in a group setting to provide job-related critical incident counseling and therapy to law enforcement officers, correction officers, dispatchers, EMTs, paramedics and firefighters;
- All riot, escape, and emergency transport plans incorporated in a policy and procedures manual of county jails and workhouses or prisons operated by the Department of Correction or under private contract;
- Records of any employee's identity, diagnosis, treatment, or referral for treatment by a state or local government employee assistance program;
- Unpublished telephone numbers in the possession of emergency communications districts;
- Employment records of state, county, municipal, or other public employees that contain unpublished telephone numbers, bank account information, Social Security numbers, or driver's license information (except where driving or operating a vehicle is part of the employee's job duties) of the employee or an immediate family or household member. [NOTE: Under the law, this information in employment records should be redacted whenever possible and not be used to limit or deny access to otherwise public information.];
- Certain personnel information of undercover police officers and their immediate family or household members;
- Identifying information, such as unlisted telephone numbers, in the possession of a private or public utility service provider that could be used to locate an individual, when the utility has been provided with a copy of a valid protection document and confidentiality has been requested;
- Those parts of a record identifying an individual as a person who has been or may in the future be directly involved in the process of executing a sentence of death;
- Credit card numbers, Social Security numbers, account numbers, security codes and other identifying information in the hands of a utility;
- Records of a utility that would identify areas of vulnerability or allow disruption of utility service;²⁷ and
- Certain personal information relative to law enforcement officers, in addition to that made confidential otherwise, when the information is requested for a professional, business or official purpose, and the chief determines there is a reason not to disclose the information.

This list of confidential records found in T.C.A. § 10-7-504 is not exclusive, however, and many other statutes, rules, and the common law dealing with specific subjects can also make a specific record confidential.²⁸ The following is a non-exhaustive list of statutes that designate certain records as confidential:

- All memoranda, work products or notes, and case files of victim-offender mediation centers (T.C.A. § 16-20-103);
- Adoption records and related records (T.C.A. §§ 36-1-102 et seq.);
- Certain information divulged in paternity proceedings that might be used to locate a victim or an alleged victim of domestic violence (T.C.A. § 36-2-311(e));
- Many records regarding juveniles (T.C.A. §§ 37-1-153, 37-1-154, 37-1-155, 37-1-409, 37-1-612, 37-1-615, 37-2-408);
- Certain records regarding the granting of consent to abortion for a minor and other records regarding abortion (T.C.A. §§ 37-10-304, 39-15-201);
- Certain student information (see next chapter);
- Whistle-blowing reports of violations of the Education Trust in Reporting Act (T.C.A. § 49-50-1408);
- Certain records of an employer's drug testing program (T.C.A. § 50-9-109. See Op. Tenn. Atty Gen. 99-126);

- Tax returns, audits, letter rulings and other taxpayer identifying information (T.C.A. § 67-1-1702);
- Business tax statements, reports, audits and returns (T.C.A. § 67-4-722);
- Information or records held by a local health department regarding sexually transmitted diseases (T.C.A. § 68-10-113);
- Patient medical records of hospitals and local or regional health departments (T.C.A. § 68-11-305); and
- Nursing home patient records (T.C.A. § 68-11-804).

Note that this list highlights only some of the other provisions of the T.C.A. that make records confidential. Additionally, the Tennessee Court of Appeals recently held that municipal attorney work product is confidential.²⁹ Also, the Tennessee Supreme Court has ruled that sources of legal authority other than statutes may make a record confidential. For example, the Tennessee Supreme Court has ruled that the Tennessee Rules of Criminal Procedure and Civil Procedure may also designate certain records as confidential.³⁰ The state Supreme Court recently ruled, however, that the common-law law enforcement privilege, which would make certain investigative information gathered by police departments confidential, does not apply in Tennessee.³¹ If you have a question regarding the confidentiality of a specific record not listed above, contact your city attorney or MTAS management consultant.

Maintenance of Confidentiality

Any record that is designated as confidential must be treated as confidential by the agency with custody of the record throughout the maintenance, storage and disposition of the record. This includes destroying the record (if it is eligible for destruction) in such a manner that the record cannot be read, interpreted or reconstructed.³² Once a confidential record has been in existence for more than 70 years, it shall be open for public inspection by any person unless disclosure of the record is specifically prohibited or restricted by federal law or unless the record is a record of services for mental illness or retardation. This “70 year rule” does not apply to adoption records, records maintained by the office of vital records, and records of the TBI that are confidential.³³

Breach of Confidential Personal Information

T.C.A. § 47-18-2107 requires any holder of computerized personal information that is confidential to disclose any breach of the security of the system to any resident of Tennessee whose unencrypted personal information was, or is reasonably believed to have been, acquired by an unauthorized person. If the information holder does not own the personal data, the holder must also notify the owner or licensee of the breach immediately following the discovery. Disclosures must be made without unreasonable delay. The code section establishes procedures for giving the notices.

Other Issues

In addition to this large group of records made strictly confidential by state laws, there is another class of records that may be made confidential by a 1999 law. Chapter 344 of the Public Acts of 1999 amends T.C.A. § 10-7-504 to allow persons who have obtained a “valid protection document” to request certain information that could be used to locate them be kept confidential. Protection documents are defined by the act and include orders of protection and affidavits of directors of rape crisis centers or domestic violence shelters. If the individual desiring confidentiality presents one of these documents to the records custodian for the governmental entity and requests confidentiality, the custodian of the records may choose to comply with the request or reject it. If the request is rejected, the custodian must state the reason for denying the request. If the request is granted, the records custodian must place a copy of the protection document in a separate confidential file with any other similar requests, indexed alphabetically by the names of the persons requesting confidentiality. From that point on, until the custodian is notified otherwise, any time someone requests to see records of the office, the records custodian must consult the file and ensure that any identifying information about anyone covered by a protection document filed with the office is kept confidential before allowing any record to be open for public inspection. “Identifying information” includes any record of home and work addresses, telephone numbers, Social Security number, and “any other information” regarding the person that could reasonably be used to locate an individual. That information must be redacted from the records of the office before anyone can be allowed to inspect the records of the office. Unless you are certain your office can redact all identifying information regarding an individual from all files of your office you should probably reject such requests for confidentiality, citing the administrative difficulty in redacting the records. It is not mandatory for your office to comply with these requests. However, if you do comply and then fail to protect all identifying information, you may create liability for your office.

Student Records

Access to student records is governed by state and federal laws.³⁴ The main purpose of these laws is to protect the confidentiality of these records. If your city has a municipal school system and you would like detailed information about the legal requirements affecting student records, contact your MTAS management consultant.

E-mail and Other Documents — Discovery

The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure³⁵ specifically require employees to retain electronic communications, including e-mail, that is discoverable in litigation. These rules require employees to meet and confer with plaintiffs in employment litigation within 90 days after the appearance of the defendant or 120 days after a complaint has been issued. At that point, each party must disclose a copy or description of all documents, electronically stored information, and tangible things in its possession that it may use to support its claims or defenses. Therefore, these records not only must be retained, but must be categorized and may only be deleted or removed based upon routine operation of a computer system or under an adopted records retention policy.

Records custodians should check with their information technology departments to make sure the municipality has the technical ability to comply with the 90- and 120-day rules mentioned above.

PART THREE: RECORDS MANAGEMENT

THE BASICS

Whether or not you realize it, you already have a records management program. The problem is, it may be doing more harm than good. If your records are filed in a haphazard manner, if you don't know exactly what you have and where you have it, if it takes you too long to find what you need, if your office space is packed to the ceiling with file cabinets and boxes, if records are stored in unsuitable locations, if you throw away records too soon, or if you don't destroy records often enough, you could benefit from spending a little time, effort and resources on implementing a beneficial records management program for your office.

Step One: Evaluate

Your first task is to evaluate your current system of records management. In other words, conduct an inventory of the records in your office.

Appoint a Records Manager/Custodian

Depending on the size of your city, you will need to appoint one or more persons within the office to serve as a records management coordinator. Having a single person responsible for your office's records management efforts who coordinates communication about your records with entities outside your office (the county public records commission, a records center or an archive) can be a key to achieving success. This person should have good organizational skills but, obviously, should not already be overwhelmed with too many other duties to be able to devote the time necessary to records management. Many city recorders are charged with the responsibility for the city's records management.

Inventory

Once you have selected someone to do the inventory, make sure they understand the information you need and the goals of the inventory.³⁶ The general goals of the inventory should include:

- Identifying the various "records series" in each office;
- Describing all record locations and storage conditions;
- Providing dates and other useful information;
- Measuring space and equipment occupied by records; and
- Providing a basis for writing records retention schedules.³⁷

The inventory will be beneficial in a number of ways. Most obviously, it will tell you exactly what records you have and where to find them. Even if you go no further, this alone will increase the efficiency of your office. Another desirable result of an inventory is that it will help you locate records that you can throw out or otherwise destroy.

Using the inventory and the records retention schedules for your office that are located in Part Four of this manual, you will probably discover a number of records that are unnecessarily taking up space in your office or storage area. A third benefit is identifying records that are in danger. Paper records can easily be damaged by water or even excessive humidity or other environmental problems. If your inventory finds evidence of water damage to records, mold and mildew, or signs of damage from vermin, insects or other pests, take steps to remedy these problems before your office loses vital information. See the chapters in this section on Proper Storage Conditions and Disaster Preparedness for advice about dealing with these problems and establishing a safe environment for storing records long term.

Filing Systems

After you have evaluated the inventory of the records your office keeps, spend some time evaluating your filing system as well. If improvements can be made to the way you file records, you will improve administrative efficiency and reduce costs. “If every employee of an agency of local governments spends even five percent of the time searching for hard-to-find information, that time translates into very substantial sums of money, and quality of services is sure to suffer.”³⁸

A good filing system will provide two major benefits to the people using it: “precise retrieval and timely retrieval.”³⁹ Another way of thinking about these issues is to ask, “Can I find what I want when I want it?” If your filing system results in records retrieval that takes too long, that gives you only part of what you want, or gives you back much more than you need, it is inefficient. Poor filing system performance generally is attributed to one or more of seven major factors:

1. Inadequate management attention;
2. Poor organization and structure of files;
3. Poor labeling and indexing procedures;
4. Uncontrolled growth of records;
5. A high incidence of missing, misfiled or lost records;⁴⁰
6. Inadequate and/or poorly trained files personnel; or
7. Inadequate or no formal record-keeping procedures.⁴¹

Filing Equipment

You may think all filing cabinets are alike, but that is just not true. Don’t simply assume that the storage system you have cannot be improved upon. You have options to consider. Movable shelving, color-coded, open shelving systems, and even bar coding have become common in many offices that handle a large volume of records. The old standard vertical-drawer filing cabinet first came into use in the late 19th century, but many records managers consider these cabinets to be functionally obsolete for most modern office applications.

“[The vertical-drawer file cabinet] is the most costly of all filing equipment, since it requires more floor space and more physical time and effort to access the folders. It also does not provide the full benefit of visual retrieval aids, such as special labeling and color coding.”⁴² If you know your filing system is inefficient, consider checking into more modern equipment. Although it will cost money initially, it may save money in the long run by saving floor space in your office, thereby postponing the need for expansion or relocation, and by reducing staff time that is wasted on an inefficient filing system with cumbersome storage units.

Step Two: Develop RDAs

Your first question is probably “what is an RDA?” In the arena of local governments, we’re used to an alphabet soup of acronyms such as MTAS, CTAS, RFP, TDOT, BEP and even WFTEADA,⁴³ but RDA may be new to you. The acronym RDA stands for records disposition authorization.

At a minimum level, an RDA provides a formal statement of when a record can be destroyed and what authority serves as the basis for its destruction. (An example of a RDA form is found in Appendix E.) But these documents can be much more. A comprehensive RDA becomes a plan for the entire life of a record series from creation to final disposition.

Among other things, a comprehensive RDA should include a basic description of a record series and may tell how the record is created, how it is used, where it should be stored, in what format it should be kept, who should have access to it, how long it is in active use by an office, when to move it into inactive storage, whether it is vital or confidential, and whether or not it can be destroyed.

You may wonder what the relationship is between RDAs and the retention schedules found in Part Four of this manual. Fully developed RDAs differ from records retention schedules in a number of ways. Retention schedules uniformly describe the various records of an office, state whether a record is permanent, identify the minimum amount of time a temporary record must be kept, and state a legal authority or rationale for that retention period. They generally do not tell you where to keep a record, how long the record may be in active use, and when a record can be moved to inactive storage or an archive. Those determinations are office specific based on the resources available to you and the operating procedures of your office.

The retention schedules give you the foundation for writing your RDAs, but you are encouraged only to consider them a starting point. If your office handles a large number of records and a lot of people deal with them, consider putting more than the minimum into your RDAs. While they take a significant amount of work to develop, RDAs are fundamental to an efficiently operating records management program in any office with a large volume of records. Once created, they will need only periodic review to ensure that the plan you laid out for a group of records still makes sense and complies with your needs and any applicable legal requirements.

The following general principles and considerations may be helpful in making decisions about how to manage your records. They are quoted verbatim from the Tennessee State Library and Archives, Tennessee Archives Management Advisory (TAMA) 99-08 entitled "Appraisal and Disposition of Records."⁴

- If a legislative mandate requires permanent or temporary retention of any record, set of records, or class of records, then the record(s) specified in the mandate must be kept at public expense for at least as long as the mandate requires.
- A record or set of records should be retained by an agency as long as it is useful to performance of its routine functions.
- A decision to retain records beyond their active usefulness or legislative mandate is a decision to maintain them so they can be examined readily by the public. Such a decision requires a commensurate commitment of resources to continuous care and custody for the entire term of retention.
- A decision for permanent retention is a decision for perpetual care.
- Records should not be kept beyond their useful life in the public interest.
- No record that is necessary to the public interest should be destroyed.
- Records that are retained beyond their active usefulness to the routine functions of an agency must be of sufficient public interest to justify the expense of keeping and administering them, and the justification should be clearly stated, understood, and agreed to before accepting responsibility for and paying the cost to retain the record(s).
- The following kinds of records may all be appraised as having archival value for permanent retention:
 1. Essential records that are needed to resume or continue operations or to re-create legal and financial status after a disaster, or that are needed to protect or fulfill obligations;
 2. Records that have lasting value as legal and fiscal evidence to account for responsible government;
 3. Records that are of such high evidential and historical value that they should be retained at public expense for the sake of a sound, reliable, and comprehensive understanding of the political, social, economic and historical context of government and culture.

Step Three: Develop Written Policies and Procedures

Both large and small offices can benefit from having written records management policies on certain issues. The policies should adopt the records retention schedules in this manual; incorporate any RDAs developed by your office; and include policies for dealing with inactive records, for allowing public access to records and guidelines for making copies, for responding to emergencies that threaten records, for maintaining confidential records, for keeping records in alternative storage media, and for interacting with the county public records commission, the State Library and Archives, and a records center or archive if one exists in your city. MTAS recommends that personnel records, other than personnel records of undercover police officers, be kept in the central office repository by the records custodian, rather than by the different departments. Having personnel records scattered in different departments can lead to problems, including lost files and parts of files.

If you think your office has had or may have a problem with files being lost, stolen or misplaced, develop a policy and procedures for tracking files as well. Require anyone removing a file from its storage space to fill out a sign-out sheet indicating who they are, what record they are taking, and the dates of its removal and return. This procedure should help your office track misplaced records and cut down on losses. If you have an active records manager in your city, he or she may already have developed policies on some of these issues. In that case, you could simply incorporate those policies into your office procedures.

Municipalities have a great deal of flexibility in adopting the retention schedule recommended in this publication. It can be adopted by ordinance, resolution, motion, citywide policy or a records commission if the city has one; or applicable portions can be adopted as departmental policy.

Step Four: Continuing Maintenance

The best records management program will quickly fall into obsolescence if the office does not make efforts to stay current. Records, particularly government records, grow at an astronomical rate. If you do not take steps regularly to move inactive records to other storage and destroy temporary records when they become eligible for destruction, they will soon fill up your filing equipment, then your office, and bring clutter and disorganization to all operations. Consider implementing an annual “records clean-up day” to reassess the records of the office and identify what can be moved or destroyed. Select a time that is not in the middle of your busy season (perhaps around the holidays), and designate a day for everyone to identify records that can be destroyed, and collect them. Remember, also, that having an appointed records management officer who can designate part of his or her time year round to keeping the office files current will go a long way toward ensuring that your records management program succeeds.

Conclusion

The information in this first chapter on records management should have given you some ideas for addressing problems in your office and improving your system of record keeping. Other chapters in this part discuss related records management issues in more detail, such as the steps you follow to dispose of a record, proper environmental storage conditions for records, developing records centers and archives, the use of alternative storage media such as microfilm and electronic formats, preparing for disasters and protecting your vital records.

ESTABLISHING A RECORDS MANAGEMENT PROGRAM

All cities need to have some system of checks and balances to be sure that records are disposed of on schedule but not destroyed when they may still be needed for administrative, legal or historical purposes.

Cities may want to create a municipal public records commission (PRC) to act as steward of their records. Unlike counties, cities are not required to have a public records commission oversee their records management and disposition. This commission could comprise the following city officials: mayor, city manager, city recorder, city archivist, city judge and a genealogist. This commission should be established by resolution. Of course, the composition of the commission is not mandatory, but cities should strive to choose members who know about the administrative, legal and historical value of the records.

Even a small city that may not be able to marshal a commission should adopt rules and regulations governing the management of the municipal public records. These regulations should establish standards and procedures covering:

- Reproduction of records;
- Security of records;
- Disposal of originals;
- Adoption and dissemination of schedules for the retention and disposition of records; and
- Physical destruction or other disposition of public records.

BECOMING ACTIVE AND PROGRESSIVE

For cities that create a municipal public records commission and desire to become even more progressive, the State Library and Archives recommends the following list of activities and guidelines in one of its Tennessee Archives Management Advisories.⁴⁵ These activities and guidelines were drafted for both municipal and county records commissions and have been edited where necessary for these reasons.

The commission should:

1. Hold meetings at least twice a year or more often as circumstances require.
2. Elect its own officers (at least a chairman and a secretary).

3. Keep records of decisions and transactions.
4. Report at least once a year to the local executive and legislative body on commission activities and the state of records and archives management in the locality.
5. Frame regulations for efficient management of local government records and archives to be adopted as resolutions of the legislative body.
6. Authorize or disapprove requests from municipal offices to destroy original records, using records schedules prepared by MTAS for guidance.
 - Public records commissions may authorize retention of records that are not designated as permanent by MTAS schedules but only if the means to preserve and manage the records for public inspection are assured.
 - Public records commission may NOT authorize destruction of any records that are designated permanent by MTAS schedules unless the records have first been copied onto a durable, archival medium that assures permanent preservation and a readily available means for prompt public inspection.
7. Assure that authorizations for destruction of public records are forwarded to the Tennessee State Library and Archives (TSLA) for review within 90 days of the PRC authorization.
8. Follow-up to assure that
 - TSLA approval of the destruction has been received before records destruction takes place; or
 - If TSLA has deemed the records to be historically valuable, they are properly transferred to TSLA or to another repository designated by mutual agreement of the public records commission and TSLA.
9. Assure the executive and legislative body that actions taken by the commission and local government offices are in accordance with the T.C.A. and with pertinent local resolutions, including the complete destruction of public records that have been authorized for destruction.

10. Review and approve plans by local government offices for electronic imaging or data processing systems to assure that
 - The system employed will protect and preserve records designated as permanent by MTAS schedules.
 - A permanent, archival-standard microfilm of permanent records is produced, and the original camera-image film of any microfilm produced is sent to TSLA for quality control testing and storage in the vault of the state archives.
11. Advise and propose to the local government executive and legislative body the planning, development, site selection, establishment, funding, budget, regulation, and operation of a local central records office and archives
 - For the management and reference servicing of inactive records awaiting final disposition, and
 - For the management of permanent records for long-term preservation and public inspection.
12. Advise and recommend to the local government executive the appointment and removal of personnel, including an archivist as director, for the central records office and archives.
13. Review operations of the local government records office and archives to assure the local legislative body that it meets records management and archives management standards, and satisfies the need of the local government and its citizens.
14. Propose to the local government cooperative arrangements with other local governments or cultural institutions, such as libraries and universities, for storage, management, and public inspection of historically valuable records, including permanent public records of the local government.
15. Work with local government offices and with MTAS, TSLA, and the Records Management Division of the state Department of General Services to draft, review, revise and issue realistic records management schedules for local government records.

16. Review records-keeping practices in local government offices and recommend to the offices and to the local government executive and legislative body remedies to correct faults and improvements to deal with emerging information and records needs.

Lamination

Because lamination too often destroys the documents it is intended to preserve, the Tennessee State Library and Archives recommends that permanent records not be laminated but rather encapsulated in Mylar® sleeves.⁴⁶

Copying Charges

The Tennessee Attorney General has opined that while a government only has to make public records available to citizens for copying, if a government chooses to make copies of its records upon request it can charge a reasonable fee covering the cost of copying.⁴⁷ See also T.C.A. § 10-7-702(b). While it is up to the city's governing body to decide how such revenue will be used, cities may want to consider "re-investing" them in equipment, supplies, or personnel expenses related to records management and records preservation.

Disposal of Records

Even the best planned and operated records management program will fail miserably if it never gets rid of records. To find what you need and to preserve what you need to keep, you have to get everything else out of the way. That is where disposal comes in.

CHECKS AND BALANCES

Disposing of municipal records is not as simple as hauling them out to the trash. Because these records can be of great importance to many people, there are a number of procedural checks and balances to go through to lawfully dispose of records, whether the disposition is by destruction or transfer of the records to another institution. For many records, the official who has custody of the record, the municipal public records commission (if there is one), the State Library and Archives, and, for court records, a judge, all need to be involved in determining the final disposition of the record.

WHAT KIND OF RECORD IS IT?

When trying to decide what to do with records, the first step is to identify and classify them. The retention schedules found in Part Four of this manual provide guidance on how long a record should be kept. Find the description in the schedule that matches the record you are considering and see what the table indicates. For disposition purposes, records will fall into one of three classes: working papers, temporary records and permanent records. The procedures for disposing of each of these classes are different.

Working Papers

Working papers are defined as “those records created to serve as input for final reporting documents, including electronic data processed records, and/or computer output microfilm, and those records which become obsolete immediately after agency use or publication.”⁴⁸ This class of records comprises all those little records that come and go in the course of a day that we usually don’t even consider “records.” Whether it’s notes for a meeting or a rough draft of a report, if the record becomes obsolete after you use it, consider it a working paper. The good news about working papers is that they are easy to destroy. Any public record defined as a working paper may be destroyed without retaining the originals of the record and without further review by other agencies. City policies regarding working papers should be liberal and allow city officials to eliminate these records as easily as possible before they become burdensome.

Many working papers generated by city offices are extremely informal types of records. Due to the informal nature of these documents, officials may not find anything in the retention schedules that describes them. Consider whether the record matches the definition above when trying to determine if it is a working paper.

Temporary Records

If a record needs to be kept for some reason after its initial use, then it is at least a temporary record. Temporary records are officially defined as “... material which can be disposed of in a short period of time as being without value in documenting the functions of an agency.”⁴⁹ Financial and payroll records are good examples. Payroll records have fulfilled their immediate purpose once your employees receive their checks. But those records must be kept in order to comply with federal statutes and regulations and are important documents in the case of an audit.⁵⁰

Once a temporary record has been retained for the period described in the schedule, then, like a working paper, it may be destroyed in accordance with the rules and regulations adopted by the city’s governing body or municipal public records commission. These rules should require approval of the city archivist (if there is one), city attorney, city recorder, city manager (if there is one), head of the department and mayor before the records are destroyed.

Alternative Formats for Temporary Records

Generally speaking, if you are keeping a record for only five years or less, it is not cost efficient to microfilm the original paper records or convert them to other media. But certain records that are “temporary” actually have a rather lengthy retention period. Many court records need to be kept 10 years, and employee earning records that may be used for computing retirement benefits are kept for the approximate life of the employee.

Even though these records do not have to be kept permanently, you may find it useful to convert them to other, more compact formats for storage and destroy the paper originals shortly after the alternative format is created.

Microfilming or electronic storage of these long-term temporary records can be ideal solutions to storage space problems. The governing body or municipal public records commission should adopt a policy requiring approval prior to the destruction of original paper documents. It is not necessary to notify Library and Archives of the destruction of original copies of records of temporary value.

Permanent Records

Permanent records are records of such value that they must always be retained in some kind of permanent format. Examples of permanent records are the original process in a civil or criminal proceeding and the minutes of the city's governing body. Some records, such as deeds, are kept permanently because the record continues to have legal significance in perpetuity. Other records are permanent because they preserve certain information about the way we live and conduct government and are, therefore, historically valuable. Still others are useful for statistical or planning purposes. Then there are those that are permanent simply because there are laws that have declared them to be so. All of these need to be kept in such a manner as to preserve them indefinitely.

Photographic or Electronic Preservation of Permanent Records

The state legislature has given county public records commissions authority to permit the destruction of original records required to be kept in a "well bound book" once they have been reproduced through microphotography or stored on computer or removable computer storage media including CD-ROM.⁵¹ Similar authority has been granted to cities in T.C.A. § 10-7-702. The Tennessee State Library and Archives does not accept records in electronic format.

SPECIAL CONSIDERATIONS

The law provides for some special considerations for certain records before they are eligible for destruction.

Audits

One important group of such records is financial records that are needed for an audit. Most city financial records are temporary records that must be kept at least as long as is required for various audit purposes and periods. Regardless of whether or not an official thinks a record has served its useful purpose, it cannot be destroyed if the Office of the Comptroller deems it necessary for audit purposes.

You will notice that most financial records listed in the retention schedules in Part Four of the manual have a five-year retention period. Records that are important for audits need to be maintained through the time of the audit plus about three years afterward in case any problems arise. Formerly, the retention period for these records was three years after the audit was complete. Since it was often difficult for a local official to know when an audit became final, the retention period was changed to five years from the date of creation of the record. This gives the official a definite time period to work from and also allows continuous destruction of financial records rather than lumping all records from a fiscal year together with a single retention date.

Exhibits and Evidence in Court Cases

The law includes a number of special considerations for materials that have become evidence and exhibits in judicial proceedings. Although some of these materials technically are not "records," this information is related to records management for court clerks and is included in this manual for those reasons.

Exhibits are treated differently depending on whether they are documents, some other kind of physical evidence or firearms.

Documents

Unless local rules of court provide otherwise, the clerk can destroy certain records under the direction and order of the judge once a case has been finally disposed of for a period of 10 years. “Finally disposed of” means a final order adjudicating a case has been entered, and the time for filing appeals, if any, has lapsed for all parties. The court clerk has to retain the pleadings, original process and original opinion, original rules, appearance and execution dockets, minute books, and plat or plan books as permanent records. But all other records, dockets, books, ledgers, and documents can be destroyed pursuant to a court order.⁵² In civil cases, a judge may order the clerk to destroy discovery materials, briefs, cost bonds, subpoenas, and other temporary records three years after the final disposition of the case.⁵³

In addition to these procedures, clerks need to comply with T.C.A. § 18-1-204. This statute requires them to notify Library and Archives of the records they intend to destroy and gives them 90 days to examine and remove any significant historical records if they so choose.

For physical evidence other than documents and firearms

There is a more complicated set of procedures for physical evidence, but the good news is that it can be destroyed sooner. If evidence is used in a case, once the case comes to judgment or conclusion and once all appeals have been settled, the clerk is to give 30 days notice to the attorneys of record in the case that they can pick up anything that belongs to them or their clients. After 30 days, the clerk can dispose of the evidence by following the procedures in T.C.A. §§ 18-1-206(a)(2)–(7). This statute requires the clerk to make an inventory of the evidence to be destroyed with references to the case involved and the term of court in which the evidence was used. The clerk then publishes the inventory for three consecutive weeks in a newspaper of general circulation. Parties who want to object to the disposition of the property or make a claim for it have 30 days to file a petition with the court. Once that time passes, the clerk gives the inventory (and any petitions that have been filed) to the court for the judge to approve or reject each item on the list and decide if it should be:

1. Returned to the owner or the owner’s attorney;
2. Be preserved by an organization for historical purposes;
3. Sold; or
4. Destroyed.

The clerk then gives the court order and the items to be disposed of to the sheriff. Depending on the disposition ordered for the item, the sheriff then delivers the items to their owners or to historical organizations, or advertises and sells the items, or destroys them and files an affidavit with the court concerning destruction of the items.

For firearms

If a court clerk has exhibits in his or her possession that are firearms, they should be disposed of in accordance with the procedures spelled out in T.C.A. §§ 39-17-1317–1318.

Original Process

Records and documents of proceedings in a court of record can be destroyed only after a judge has issued an order authorizing their destruction.⁵⁴ Regardless of who approves it, however, the law explicitly prohibits the destruction of any original process in a civil action or criminal proceeding.

City Hospital and Other Health Records

Special rules apply to medical records. They generally are governed by T.C.A. §§ 68-11-301 et seq. The definition of “hospital” used in these provisions is broad enough to include city hospitals and health departments.⁵⁵ Certain hospital records are not public records.⁵⁶ Generally, the law requires that a hospital or health department is required to retain and preserve records that relate directly to the care and treatment of a patient for 10 years following the discharge of the patient or the patient’s death during the period of treatment within the hospital.⁵⁷

Mental health records are treated differently. Hospitals and health departments are given the option of retaining records for a longer period if they wish.⁵⁸

Proper Storage Conditions

Like everything else on this planet, records must be in the proper environment to survive. Most of the time, the records that your office uses on a regular basis are kept in the same area in which people work. This is good because, generally, the conditions that are comfortable for humans are also acceptable for storage of records of most formats.

Unless conditions are very severe, temperature and humidity are not factors affecting records scheduled for destruction in a few years. ... Wide fluctuation in temperature and high humidity can result in severe damage to these records. Ideally, the temperature range should be 65 to 75 degrees, and the humidity should be kept at 45 to 55 percent.⁵⁹

These conditions, at least the temperature ranges, are similar to those in the typical office environment. Unfortunately, the records we use most regularly and keep close around us in our offices are often those that we need only temporarily. Concerns about storage conditions become more important the longer you plan to keep a record. The problem is, those long-term or permanent retention records that need better care are often the ones we use less often, so they get moved out of the way into conditions that are less hospitable.

City halls and county courthouses, with their attics and basements, were never designed to accommodate this ever-increasing volume of semi-active and inactive records. This records growth, plus inadequate records programs, has resulted in the misuse of existing office and storage areas and the use of unimproved warehouses, jail cells, fire stations, abandoned school buildings, and hospital rooms as inactive records storage sites, including storage of records of archival value. The undesirable features of these kinds of storage facilities and inadequate programs become apparent once it is necessary to obtain information from records in storage. It takes only a few unsuccessful attempts to locate records in poorly maintained areas to discourage further use. Time, neglect and lack of maintenance will take their toll on records stored there.⁶⁰

For these reasons, cities should consider setting up facilities designed specifically for storing records on a long-term basis. Rather than using basements, attics, or whatever space is available, the city may want to establish a records center for its inactive temporary records and an archive for its permanent value records.

RECORDS CENTERS

A records center is essentially a central area for storing records. It is a place where all city officials can send their inactive records as an alternative to keeping them in their own offices where they take up valuable space and interfere with operations. By default, the basement or bell tower of the city hall may have become an ersatz records center, but the city should consider investing in a true one. A well-run records center can result in significant savings of both time and money while it protects and preserves records. “The effectiveness of a records center is based upon (a) its use of low-cost equipment which makes maximum use of space, (b) its ability to provide an orderly arrangement and control of records, and (c) its ability to employ procedures which assure prompt and efficient handling of records.”⁶¹

Setting up a records center may sound like a project that only large cities might try to tackle. But small- and medium-sized governments also can benefit from saving money. One federal government study on cost avoidance estimated that “... for every cubic foot of records stored in a records center there is a savings of $16.08.”⁶² When you consider the reams and reams of records in local government offices, including the school system and the court system, the savings can add up quickly.

A records center does not have to be a separate building. “A small government can usually convert an existing room quite easily since less space is required. There are many cities, towns, or counties that need no more than 1,000 cubic feet of records storage space. A records center of that capacity can be placed in a room about the size of a two-car garage.”⁶³ If your city likes the idea but still thinks it doesn’t have a great enough need to justify the expense of a records center, consider doing something radical: cooperate with other local governments. If the county, the school system, and all the municipalities within a county worked together through an interlocal agreement to establish a records center, costs would be spread among them, and enough inactive records should be found to justify establishing the center.

The Rome/Floyd County Records Program is an excellent example of a cooperative venture supported by four Georgia local governments (population 81,250). This innovative records management program serves Floyd County, the city of Rome and two school districts (Rome

City Schools and Floyd County Schools). Each government partially funds the program. Service features included a records center with a capacity for 18,000 cubic feet (providing for records transfer, reference, selected microfilming and records disposal) and technical assistance (a records management officer) on the proper management of records. These four local governments, by combining resources to create a professional program which none could individually afford, achieve most of their essential records management goals. All records placed in the records center still remain the property of the respective originating governments, however. The program has received the National Association of Counties achievement award, and it saved over $68,000 for the four local governments in 1990.⁶⁴

ESTABLISHING ARCHIVES

In addition to or in conjunction with setting up a records center, your city should consider establishing a city archive if one is not already in existence. An archive differs from a records center in that the records center generally keeps inactive records temporarily before their final disposition. An archive usually is dedicated to preserving records of such historical value that they should be maintained permanently. The two may be located in the same facility and be virtually indistinguishable to the public, or they may be separately located and operated facilities. An archive provides many of the same benefits as a records center, namely, removing records that are not regularly used by an office from expensive and cluttered office space and providing proper storage conditions for the records.

An archive also serves an important role in preserving the history of our country and our communities and provides a valuable resource for members of the community researching our past. By providing another location for this research, the archive indirectly helps city officials by allowing them to refer genealogists, students, and other researchers to another office rather than diverting time and effort from their daily tasks to assist those people in accessing the older, historical records of the city.

SPECIFICATIONS

Since the primary purpose of the archive is to preserve records permanently, environmental conditions for the archive are even more important than those for a record center. The following considerations for archival space are recommended by the Tennessee State Library and Archives.⁶⁵

Archives Storage and Management Space

The following archival standards should be met to preserve local archives for future use. The closer local archives come to meeting these standards, the more likely the records will survive.⁶⁶

- Distinctly exclusive space.
An entirely separate building is desirable, but not essential, and some cities may not be able to afford it. In an existing building, a separate, exclusive space that can be secured from unauthorized entry and that meets the general specifications that follow is the minimal requirement to assure proper maintenance. The space should not be combined or confused with any other use.⁶⁷
- A strong, durable building that is earthquake and storm resistant.
Heavy (i.e., masonry and steel) construction is desirable, not only to resist storm and earthquake damage, but also to help meet the standards below with greater economy of operating costs.
- Secure against theft and other hostile intrusion.
A safe and secure locking system is highly desirable. Entry to and exit from the space should be controlled by official staff so that patrons are not free to come and go without surveillance, so as to assure that documents are not stolen or removed without proper authorization.

- As damp proof as possible with a consistently moderate relative humidity.

The best relative humidity for archival materials is a constant RH of 45 percent to 55 percent; excessive ranges and changes in humidity tend to speed deterioration of archived materials. Leaky roofs, walls, and foundations that invite seepage and mold are natural enemies of archives. The site of the archive space should be chosen to protect it from flooding, either from nearby rivers or from excessive ground water during heavy rains. Care should be taken to see that water pipe systems that serve the space are sound and leak free.

- Consistently moderate temperature.
The best temperature for archival materials is a constant temperature between 65 degrees and 70 degrees Fahrenheit. Excessive ranges and temperature swings tend to speed deterioration.⁶⁸
- Free of pollutants.
As much as possible, air circulation systems should be filtered to remove contaminating acids, dust and other airborne dangers to archive materials.
- Free of biological pests.
As much as possible, the archive should be protected against and free from insects, rodents, mold and other biological dangers to records.
- Free from ultraviolet light.
As much as possible, sunlight and other sources of ultraviolet light, such as fluorescent tubes, that tend to damage film and paper documents must be excluded from the archive by shielding and filtration.⁶⁹
- Fireproof.
To the greatest extent possible, construction materials should be of masonry, steel, and other fire-retardant or fire-resistant materials. Care should be taken to see that heating and electrical systems that serve the space are not likely to cause accidental fires.

- Protected by a reliably tested fire suppression system.

The most commonly recommended system is a reliable water sprinkler system with proper drainage for the water to be eliminated readily. Desirable fire protection includes rapid response by local fire fighting teams and briefing and orientation of local fire departments by local government officials on the nature of the archive and the need to preserve the content materials.⁷⁰

- Shelves and other containers should meet archival specifications.

Shelving should be of strong, baked enamel steel construction.⁷¹ Enough space should be left between shelves for convenient access and to inhibit the spread of fire. Shelves should be deep enough so that there is no overhang of boxes. Oversized materials (such as engineering drawings) should be in oversized shelving or metal cabinets.

- Filing and boxing of records.

To the extent possible, records should be kept in acid-neutral paperboard boxes and folders (available from archival suppliers). This often requires removing records from original folders and boxes to new ones and labeling the new containers.

- Disaster plan.

A well-devised disaster plan for actions to take in case of fire, flood, water leakage, earthquake, theft, bomb threats or other dangers to archives should be written. There are good models of disaster plans already in existence. Local archives can acquire one of these and adapt it to local conditions.⁷² Archive staff should be trained in its provisions and should know what to do in any emergency.

TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE

The Tennessee State Library and Archives is making an active effort to encourage the development of local and regional archives across the state. It is an excellent source of technical assistance and advice in developing an archive. The State Library and Archives has produced a series of Tennessee Archives Management Advisories that provide a wealth of information on a number of topics. Much of the material in this chapter has been adapted from those publications, but it only scratches the surface of the information available from the State Library and Archives on archives and preserving records. A listing of the archives management advisories is in the appendix to this manual under Sources of Additional Information. For further information, contact Dr. Wayne Moore, assistant state archivist, Tennessee State Library and Archives, (615)253-3458 or wayne.moore@state.tn.us.

DISASTER PREPAREDNESS

By their very nature, disasters are unexpected events. Severe weather, earthquakes, floods or fire can strike anywhere at any time with little or no warning. Disasters can irreparably change individual lives and halt the normal commerce of business, industry and government. Disasters cannot be prevented, but you can prepare for them and mitigate their impact.

To lessen the impact of a disaster, every city should do two things:

1. Develop a disaster contingency plan; and
2. Institute a vital records protection program.

Contingency Plans

Contingency plans should be detailed and instructive, and address the specific needs of every office of city government. They should anticipate the various types of disasters your city might face. Response to a flood will be different from response to a fire, earthquake or tornado. In addition to officials and staff having copies of the plan, duplicates should be stored off site in case of disasters of truly catastrophic proportions. The best recovery plan is no good if the only copy is locked inside a file cabinet in an office that is on fire.

A good disaster contingency plan will:

- Designate who is in charge of recovery operations and who will be working on recovery teams. It should include all necessary information for contacting these people at any hour of the day or night;
- Anticipate the types of disaster the city may face and provide basic instructions for the first responders to an emergency to ensure that everything possible is done to minimize damage and preserve the safety of individuals responding to the disaster (e.g., evacuation plans, directions for shutting off electrical current in case of a flood, locations of shut-off valves in case of a broken water line);
- Include an inventory of supplies and equipment that are available for use in salvage efforts. The inventory should identify locations of important supplies and equipment — everything from heavy machinery to fire extinguishers to mops and buckets;
- Identify alternative office space and other facilities that might be used if the city needs temporary space for relocation or salvage operations;
- Include current contact information for experts in emergency management such as those at the Tennessee Emergency Management Agency (TEMA), the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA), and other governmental entities, plus commercial entities that can provide expertise in recovery and salvage if the disaster is too large for the city to handle by itself; and
- Plan for acquiring replacement office equipment and supplies quickly and efficiently. This will be essential if computer equipment is damaged.

Vital Records Protection

A companion to the disaster contingency plan is the vital records protection program. The records of a local government are one of its most vital and vulnerable resources. If steps have not been taken to protect important records prior to a disaster, the resumption of regular operations after a disaster will be far more difficult and costly.

Whereas a contingency plan will provide instructions on how to respond immediately after a disaster, a vital records protection plan will inform government offices of ongoing practices to preserve the important information of the office. Records protection plans will vary depending on the volume and format of the records to be protected, the resources available to the city, and the technology present in offices. Any plan should, at a minimum, provide procedures for identifying, duplicating and safeguarding vital records.

No office can afford to expend the amount of resources it would take to ensure the protection of every record in the office. For that reason, it is important to determine which records are truly vital and which are not.

Records management experts divide records into four classes:

1. Nonessential records — those that if lost would not really be missed. Most convenience files, internal memos and many routine papers of completed transactions fall into this category.
2. Useful records — records containing information that if lost would cause some difficulty but that could easily be replaced.
3. Important records — records that cannot be dispensed with and that can be replaced only through the expenditure of substantial time, money or manpower.
4. Vital records — those records that are essential and cannot be replaced. Vital records contain information essential to the continuity of operations or to the protection of the rights of the government or of individual citizens.⁷³

Begin by protecting records that are indispensable. Since you cannot anticipate and prevent every possible disaster, the best course of action is to make sure there are off-site archival quality copies of the city's most important records.⁷⁴

If some records are stored in electronic format, state laws require that certain back-up procedures are followed to prevent loss of data.⁷⁵ For obvious reasons tape or disk backups of electronic data should not be stored in the same location as the computer system itself. While less fragile than electronic records, paper records and microfilm also must be properly stored and cared for in order to prevent destruction of the records in the event of a disaster or by the ravages of time. Wherever possible, a city should archive its permanent records in a location or facility that is designed for records preservation.⁷⁶

If you need assistance in developing these plans for your city, both MTAS and the Tennessee State Library and Archives can help. Copies of contingency plans and other publications on records protection are available upon request. In addition, there are a number of commercial, nonprofit, government, and educational sites on the Internet that provide a wealth of contacts and links to valuable information. The following Internet sites are places you might want to start:⁷⁷

Recovery of Stolen or Misappropriated Records

While they usually don't reach disastrous proportions, there are also certain human behaviors for which a prepared response is necessary. If records are inappropriately removed from the office where they belong, the official who has custody of the records is not without remedy. Of course, criminal theft charges can be brought against someone who steals city documents. Tennessee law makes it unlawful for any person to intentionally and unlawfully destroy, conceal, remove, or otherwise impair the verity, legibility, or availability of a governmental record. A violation of that law is a Class A misdemeanor.⁷⁸

What may prove to be a more practical remedy is to pursue an action to recover personal property.⁷⁹ This action, also known as replevin, is a judicial proceeding whereby property that is in the wrong hands can be returned to the rightful owner or custodian. It is initiated by filing a complaint in the circuit or chancery court or by causing a warrant to issue in the general sessions court.⁸⁰ Ultimately, the proceeding may result in the issuance of a writ of possession that directs the proper officer to take the property from the defendant and return it to the plaintiff.⁸¹ If you need to pursue such an action to recover misappropriated city records, contact your city attorney.

Alternative Storage Formats

Paper is not the only medium in which records can be stored. As has been mentioned in earlier chapters, many offices are choosing to store records in either photographic (microfilm, microfiche, etc.) or electronic media. Each medium offers different advantages and disadvantages. Cities should thoroughly research either system before investing revenue and entrusting its vital records to different storage media.

MICROFILM⁸²

Microfilming can offer as much as a 98 percent reduction in storage space over storing records in their original paper format.⁸³ And by having a back-up copy of microfilm stored off site, a government can almost immediately recover from any disaster or occurrence that damages its vital records. Produced correctly, microfilm is considered to be archival quality, meaning it is a suitable format for storing permanent retention documents.

But microfilm has disadvantages. No alternative format is going to be a perfect solution for all your records management problems. Microfilming is not cheap. It is a labor-intensive process that requires expertise of the person doing the work. Additionally, if microfilm is not properly produced, developed and stored, it will not stand the test of time.

State Microfilming Program

The law provides that the State Library and Archives is charged with providing trained staff and appropriate equipment necessary to produce and store microfilm reproductions of official, permanent value bound volume records created by county and municipal governments.

To implement this security microfilming program, the state librarian and archivist are authorized to develop a priority listing of essential records based on retention schedules developed by the UT County Technical Assistance Service and the UT Municipal Technical Advisory Service. This priority listing of essential records may be revised from time to time to accommodate critical needs in individual counties or municipalities or to reflect changes in retention schedules. The camera negative of the microfilmed records shall be stored in the security vault at the State Library and Archives, and duplicate rolls of these microfilmed records shall be made available to county and municipal governments on a cost basis.⁸⁴

Technical Guidelines

The following guidelines for producing and storing microfilm are considered crucial by the Tennessee State Library and Archives:⁸⁵

- Microfilm must conform to national archival processing and storage standards if it is to survive.

Tennessee law requires that “photographic film shall comply with the minimum standards of quality approved for permanent photographic records by the National Bureau of Standards (now the National Institute of Standards and Technology), and the device used to reproduce such records on film shall be one which accurately reproduces the original thereof in all details.⁸⁶

- Good preparation of records to be filmed is crucial.

If needed, records should be cleaned and flattened before filming. You must film the records in their correct order and arrangement. At the beginning of each group, series and sub-series, identify the records by filming descriptive “targets” that also include notes on physical condition and arrangement of the records.

- All records in a group or series, regardless of condition, must be filmed in proper orientation, order and focus.

If a page is omitted or improperly filmed and the original destroyed after filming, there is no way to recover the permanent record that should have been preserved.

- Archival quality silver-gelatin film must be used for the camera-image negative film, and it must be processed according to archival standards.

Diazo film and other inexpensive process films will not endure. Residual chemicals on film from poor processing will destroy film. However, reference copies may be on any sort of commercial film that is convenient and affordable. It will have to be replaced from time to time, since heavy use in readers will wear out the film.

- The original negative (camera-image) film must be reserved in archival storage conditions and should be kept at a site removed from the main archives.

Only positive copies of the original negative should be used for reference, otherwise the original may deteriorate. High humidity and changes in temperature that are wide or frequent tend to hasten the destruction of film. The original negative (camera image) film must be used only to produce reference copies as needed. Indeed, it is still better to have a second negative copy from which to produce reference-use positives, so that the camera-image negative original is itself preserved. Off-site storage under archival conditions offers the best chance for survival of the original negative film. The Tennessee State Library and Archives is a good storage option for counties and municipalities that wish to preserve their original camera-image, negative film.

Technical Assistance

For more information on microfilming, contact the National Association of Government Archives and Records Administrators, and request a copy of its publication entitled Using Microfilm by Julian L. Mims, CRM, issued in February 1992. Contact information for that organization is in the appendix.

You also may wish to contact the Restoration and Reproduction Section of the Tennessee State Library and Archives if you have questions regarding the microfilm services it provides to local governments. For further information, contact Carol Roberts, director of restoration and reproduction, TSLA, (615)741-2997 or carol.roberts@state.tn.us.

ELECTRONIC RECORDS

City governments can now use computers as a tool for both creating and maintaining original records and for reproducing existing paper records onto other storage media. Any records required to be kept by a government official in Tennessee may be maintained on a computer or removable computer storage media, including CD-ROMs, instead of in bound books or as paper records.⁸⁷ But in order to do so, the following standards must be met:

1. The information must be available for public inspection, unless it is required by law to be a confidential record;

2. Due care must be taken to maintain any information that is a public record for the entire time it is required by law to be retained;
3. All data generated daily and stored within the computer system must be copied to computer storage media daily, and computer storage media more than one week old must be stored off site (at a location other than where the original is maintained); and
4. The official with custody of the information must be able to provide a paper copy of the information to a member of the public requesting a copy.⁸⁸

These standards, however, do not require the government official to sell or provide the computer media upon which the information is stored or maintained.

Caveats and Concerns

All of these new technologies bring our offices new capabilities but also new problems and dangers. As the provisions regarding each of these new developments indicate, extra safeguards are necessary with electronic records. If you consider for a moment the true nature of electronic records, you can see why precautions are necessary.

Fragility

Computer records are nothing more than magnetic impulses embedded in a chemical medium.⁸⁹ Doesn't sound like something that's going to last through the ages, does it? The truth is, electronic records are much more convenient to use, but they are also more fragile than paper records. Like paper records, fire and water can destroy them, but so can magnetic impulses, power surges, heat and moisture. Unlike paper records, a little bit of damage goes a long way. A spilled cup of coffee may ruin a few papers on your desk, but spill the same cup onto your computer and the equivalent of volumes and volumes of information can be destroyed in a moment.

Another manner in which computer records are unlike paper records is the possibility of damaging the records through use. Continuous use over a long period of time may cause the deterioration of a bound volume, but that in no way compares to the amount of damage that can be done to a disk of computer records by a negligent or malicious user.

Computer Records Are Not “Human Readable”

When you use computer records, you need a third party involved, namely, a computer. If something happens to your computer system, you can't access the records until it is replaced. If the problem is a lightning strike that knocks out a few PCs in your office, it's no big deal. They may be expensive to replace, but they are definitely replaceable. If the problem is a bug in a proprietary record-keeping software package and the company that wrote your software is out of business, you may have an insurmountable problem. No matter how well you preserve the computer media containing the data, you can't read it without a program.

Data Migration

If you still think computer records are safe and reliable for long-term use, consider this: Even if you have your magnetic tapes and computer disks and CD-ROMs in 10 or 20 years time and they have been perfectly preserved in pristine condition, will you still be running the same computer? This is a problem that may prove to be the most serious technological issue of the next century. Imagine the difficulty of finding a way to access computer records that are 30, 40 or — in the not too distant future — 100 years old.

To avoid falling victim to rapid changes in technology, you must have a system of data migration. Whether you use a computer for keeping the current financial records of your office or you are using an imaging system to capture information on old records, you must anticipate and plan on being able to transfer that information from one computer system to the next as you upgrade your equipment and software. Failing to recognize this need will lead to disaster.

For long-term retention, permanent-value municipal records must be in a durable format such as paper or microfilm. Scanned or digitized records do not meet national archival standards for viability after 15 to 20 years, much less for permanent storage. T.C.A. § 10-7-121 does, in fact, authorize the keeping of permanent-value records on “computer or removable computer storage media, including CD-ROMs, instead of bound books or paper records” if the records are available for public inspection, can be reproduced in paper form, and are backed up in off-site storage. See also T.C.A. § 47-10-112. These laws, in our view, leave officials vulnerable to losses of vitally important records for whose long-term safekeeping these same officials are legally responsible. Despite what these laws allow, records cannot be safely maintained solely in digital form for long periods of time.

Consider these issues seriously, seek technical assistance for working with technology, and question vendors thoroughly about these problems when considering any technology purchase.

CONCLUSION

The preceding materials should provide city officials and city public records coordinators with enough ammunition to begin the battle of records management. It is our hope that, whatever the level of records management currently present in your city, you found something of use in these chapters. The rest of this manual comprises the retention schedules applicable to city governments, as well as appendices of statutes, guidelines, forms, sample resolutions and a list of sources of additional information.

PART FOUR: RETENTION SCHEDULES

USING THIS RETENTION SCHEDULE

Records in this schedule are grouped by topic. The records under each topic constitute a records series. Each record in the series is given a number consisting of the series designation plus a number designating the order in which the record is listed within the series. For example, Activity Reports under Animal Control are in Record Series A and have the record number A-1. The series designation and the record number should be useful in referring to records during both storage and disposition.

You may notice that there are topics that appear not to be covered. We have attempted to use general topics to the extent possible to keep the schedule from being too voluminous. If you have a record that appears not to be covered, you should look for the record in a related topic that is included in the schedule. For example, a contract involving the airport authority would have the same retention period as other contracts noted under the General Administration topic. We also have attempted to use the index at the end of the schedule to help you find retention periods for records for which there is no separate topic or series.

Under T.C.A. § 10-7-702, records manuals compiled by MTAS must “be used as guides by municipal officials in establishing retention schedules for all records created by municipal governments ...” Since this manual is a guide rather than the final word, a municipality may add more records or records series to the retention schedule if needed.

The following schedules have been reviewed by MTAS staff, the State Library and Archives, and several city officials. We recommend their adoption. The retention periods marked with asterisks are required by state or federal law. All other retention periods are based on the record’s administrative, legal and historical value.

As noted, municipalities have a great deal of flexibility in adopting the retention schedule. It can be adopted, with any needed modification, by ordinance, resolution, motion, citywide policy, or by a records commission if the municipality has one; or applicable portions can be adopted as a departmental policy.

If you have questions about a record and cannot find it in the schedule, contact your MTAS management consultant. If there is any way this manual or retention schedule can be improved, let us know.

A. Animal Control

DESCRIPTION OF RECORD	RETENTION PERIOD	LEGAL AUTHORITY/RATIONALE
A-1. Activity Reports. Monthly reports showing the activity of the animal control operations.	Retain 2 years, unless there is no annual report. If no annual report, retain as permanent record.	Keep to aid in planning.
A-2. Adoption Contracts. May include agreement to have animal spayed/neutered when it is 6 months old.	Retain 4 years.	Keep to show proof of ownership/patterns of behavior of animal or owners.
A-3. Annual Reports. Annual reports showing the activity of the animal control operations.	Permanent record.	Keep to aid in planning.
A-4. Bite Reports. Documents investigations of dog bites.	Retain 4 years.	Retention period based on likely time of complaint or legal action.
A-5. Complaints, Record of. May contain date; time of complaint; complainant's name, address, and telephone number; owner's name and address; animal's license number; and details of problem.	Retain 4 years or until resolution of any litigation, whichever is later.	Record may be used in litigation. Retention period based on statute of limitations for actions for injuries to personal property plus 1 year. T.C.A. § 28-3-105.
A-6. Controlled Substances, Log of.	Retain 3 years.	Tenn. Admin. Rule 1730-4-.09.
A-7. Dispatching Logs.	Retain 4 years, unless legal action is pending.	Retention period based on likely time of complaint or legal action.
A-8. Euthanasia Report. Must be kept for each animal euthanized; includes date, estimated age, breed, weight, sex, amount of euthanasia solution administered, and description of verification of death.	*Retain 3 years. May want to retain 4 years if 4-year retention period adopted for other animal control records.	Tenn. Admin. Rule 1730-4-.09.
A-9. Field Reports (Daily). Report of officer's daily activities.	Retain 1 year.	Used to compile activity reports.
A-10. Impound Log. Log of all animals brought into the animal shelter and whether animal was adopted or euthanized.	Retain 4 years.	Keep as part of history of animals and owners and to track activity at shelter. Can be useful in returning lost animals to owners.

* Indicates a mandatory retention period based on state or federal law.

A. Animal Control (cont'd)

DESCRIPTION OF RECORD	RETENTION PERIOD	LEGAL AUTHORITY/RATIONALE
A-11. Rabies Certificate. Rabies vaccination is required by T.C.A. § 68-8-104. Certificates are forwarded to animal control by veterinarians.	Retain 4 years.	Keep to provide proof of vaccination and to facilitate return of lost animals to owners. Rabies vaccine lasts 3 years.
A-12. Return to Owner, Record of.	Retain 4 years.	Keep to prove ownership of animal and assign liability to owner if the animal is ever in violation of ordinances or statutes.
A-13. Spay/Neuter Deposit, Record of. Deposit is required by T.C.A. § 44-17-503 for every animal not already spayed or neutered that is adopted from an animal shelter.	Retain 4 years.	Keep as part of history of animals and owners.
A-14. Surrender of Animal, Record of.	Retain 4 years.	Keep to defend against liability for taking animal. Based on statute of limitations for offenses against property plus 1 year.

B. Cemeteries, City-Operated

DESCRIPTION OF RECORD	RETENTION PERIOD	LEGAL AUTHORITY/RATIONALE
B-1. Deed Books. May contain deed number, purchaser's name, deed date, lot number, etc.	Permanent record.	Establishes property rights.
B-2. Interment Records. May contain name of the deceased, burial permit number, dates of death and interment, sex and age of deceased, place of death, location of grave, date and place of birth, owner of lot, deed number, and removal information.	Permanent record.	Keep for historical purposes.
B-3. Perpetual Care Records. Records regarding funds for the continued upkeep of the cemetery.	Permanent record.	Keep for historical purposes.

C. Courts

DESCRIPTION OF RECORD	RETENTION PERIOD	LEGAL AUTHORITY/RATIONALE
C-1. Affidavit of Complaint. A written statement alleging that a person has committed an offense and alleging the essential facts instituting the offense charged made upon oath before a magistrate or court clerk.	*Permanent record.	T.C.A. § 18-1-202(a).
C-2. Appeal Dockets. Record of cases going to appellate courts showing style of case, date, and ruling of the court; may show court costs.	*Retain 10 years after last entry.	T.C.A. § 18-1-202(a).
C-3. Appearance and Rule Dockets. Record of first appearance of all causes in court, showing date filed, names of attorneys, style of case, security, and action taken.	*Permanent record.	T.C.A. § 18-1-202(a).
C-4. Appearance and Bail Bond Records. Bonds and recordings of bonds executed by defendants and sureties showing defendant's name, name of person serving as surety, amount of bond, and signatures of the accused and sureties.	*Retain 10 years after final judgment.	T.C.A. § 18-1-202(a).
C-5. Attachment and Injunction Bonds. Bonds executed in attachment and injunction cases insuring defendant against damages likely to occur as a result of wrongful suing, showing date of bond, names of principal and sureties, amount of bond, condition of the obligation, and signatures of principal and sureties.	*Retain 10 years after final judgment.	T.C.A. § 18-1-202(a).
C-6. Attachments on Personal Property. Writs issued during court action to seize the personal property of the defendant to be held as security for the satisfaction of such judgment as the plaintiff may recover.	*Retain 10 years after final settlement of case.	T.C.A. § 18-1-202(a).

* Indicates a mandatory retention period based on state or federal law.

C. Courts (cont'd)

DESCRIPTION OF RECORD	RETENTION PERIOD	LEGAL AUTHORITY/RATIONALE
C-7. Attachments on Real Property. Writs issued during court action to seize the real property of the defendant to be held as security for the satisfaction of such judgment as the plaintiff may recover.	*Retain 10 years after final settlement of case.	T.C.A. § 18-1-202(a).

Appendix A: STATUTORY PROVISIONS GOVERNING MUNICIPAL PUBLIC RECORDS

TENNESSEE CODE ANNOTATED

TITLE 10. PUBLIC LIBRARIES, ARCHIVES AND RECORDS CHAPTER 7. PUBLIC RECORDS
PART 7 — MUNICIPAL RECORDS
(Current through end of 2004 regular session)

SECTION

10-7-701 Public records — Temporary records.

10-7-702 Retention schedules.

10-7-701. Public records

All documents, papers, records, books of account, and minutes of the governing body of any municipal corporation, or of any office or department of any municipal corporation, within the definition of “permanent records,” “essential records,” and/or “records of archival value,” as defined in 10-7-301, constitute “public records” of the municipal corporation. All documents, papers, or records of any municipal corporation or of any office or department of the municipal corporation that constitute “temporary records” and/or “working papers” within the definition set forth in 10-7-301(13) and (14) constitute “public records” of the municipality, except that “temporary records” may be scheduled for disposal as authorized in this part.

10-7-702. Retention schedules

- (a) The Municipal Technical Advisory Service, a unit of the Institute for Public Service of the University of Tennessee, is authorized to compile and print, in cooperation with the state library and archives, records retention manuals which shall be used as guides by municipal officials in establishing retention schedules for all records created by municipal governments in the state.
- (b) Notwithstanding any provision of law to the contrary, the governing body of any municipality may by resolution authorize the disposal of any permanent paper record of the municipality when the record has been photocopied, photostated, filmed, microfilmed, preserved by microphotographic process, or reproduced onto computer or removable computer media, including CD-ROM disks, in accordance with § 10-7-121. Other records of the municipality may be disposed of when the retention period that is prescribed in the retention schedule used by the municipality has expired. For purposes of this subsection (b), disposal includes destruction of the record. A municipality may adopt reasonable rules and policies relative to the making, filing, storing, exhibiting, copying and disposal of municipal records.

Appendix B: TENNESSEE ARCHIVES MANAGEMENT ADVISORY (TAMA) 99-007

From: William W. Moss, Assistant State Archivist
To: Records Keepers in State and Local Government Agencies
Subject: Guidelines for the use of digital imaging for permanent records
Date: 13 June 1999

- State and local government officials hold public records in trust. They are legally obliged to protect public records and to make them readily accessible regardless of the records' storage media. These guidelines will help public officials design responsible digital imaging systems for creating and maintaining long term archival records.
- The guidelines are good advice. They are based on national technical standards, established practices, and research in the professional literature. The guidelines identify critical issues in designing, selecting, implementing, and operating digital imaging technologies. These issues are especially important for systems used for mission-critical records or for long term archival records.
- Digital imaging is the ability to capture, store, retrieve, display, process, and communicate or disseminate records electronically using a variety of hardware and software components. Digital imaging technology continues to change rapidly, but with proper planning and design, an agency can significantly improve its business operations without endangering records or procedures because of technology obsolescence.
- Maximum potential benefits of digital imaging systems can best be achieved through an agency planning process. This process examines the information needs and records requirements of the agency as a whole rather than a single, isolated application.
- The guidelines are listed in order of their recommended implementation.

CAVEAT: Electronic records are not permanent.

The following guidelines do not guarantee the assured survival of permanent records, essential records, or records of archival value as defined in T.C.A. § 10-7-301. They do offer the best chance that records will survive transitions from one digital information system to another and from one generation to another of the same information system.

The only media that will assure long-term survival of essential, permanent, or archival records are still carbon-based ink on acid-neutral paper and archival quality silver gelatin microfilm created and kept under conditions that meet archival standards. Records keepers should identify such records, appraise their value, and, if found to be worth permanent retention, should take steps to preserve them in archival media.

GUIDELINES

PROJECT PLANNING

Recommendation 1: Prior to selecting a digital imaging system, conduct a records and workflow analysis to determine and to make a reliable record of existing and planned agency information needs.

The examination of existing workflow patterns and records is the crucial first step in determining the need for a digital imaging system. A records analysis assesses existing operations to determine what records are best suited for digital imaging applications. A workflow analysis assesses the processes of records creation, access, and retrieval to determine areas where re-engineering can improve operational efficiency. This reorganization of business or work processes may be simple or extensive. Implementing a digital imaging system significantly affects the current work processes because personnel create, retrieve, use, and store documents differently from the traditional paper records process. The detail and complexity of re-engineering the process affects the project schedule, cost justification, and Invitation to Bid (ITB) requirements.

The Records Management Division, Department of General Services, and the Office for Information Resources of the Department of Finance and Administration can help analyze an agency's record-keeping systems.

Recommendation 2: Prior to selecting a digital imaging system, conduct a cost benefit analysis to determine the cost justification of a system purchase and to determine the possible benefits to the agency with its implementation.

Cost justifying a digital imaging system allows a financial comparison between the current and proposed record-keeping systems to help in making a procurement decision. The cost justification goal of a digital imaging system is to offset the cost of the equipment and software by reducing personnel and storage costs or by allowing the existing staff to process more work through the improvement of work processes; and, it must do so without degrading the integrity or evidential value of the records.

To determine a cost estimate, the following components should be considered:

- System hardware;
- System software;
- Application software;
- Communications hardware and software;
- System maintenance;
- Training;
- Project management;
- Facilities upgrades/site preparation;
- Staffing costs;
- Other miscellaneous costs.

A typical cost justification includes the following major areas:

- Study of current operations;
- Proposed system architecture;
- Equipment pricing;
- Financial indicators, including
 - Payback period;
 - Net present value;
 - Rate of return.

The Office for Information Resources of the Department of Finance and Administration can help analyze the costs of implementing a digital imaging system.

System Specifications and Selection

Recommendation 3: Require an open systems architecture for digital imaging applications, or require vendors to provide a bridge to systems with non proprietary configurations.

An open systems architecture permits future component upgrades with minimal degradation of system functions and without significant risk of records loss. It supports importing and exporting of digital images to and from other sources. It allows long term records to be accessed and transferred from one hardware or software platform to another. Adoption of non-proprietary standards is crucial to achieving an open systems architecture.

Recommendation 4: Where data longevity or records integrity is a primary concern, use a recording medium that is NOT rewritable.

The storage capacity of optical disks versus paper is a primary advantage to the use of digital imaging systems. However, optical disks are not the only option. Other storage solutions that can be used with digital imaging systems include output to microfiche or microfilm, digital tape, and magnetic disks. The selection of storage media may depend on budget considerations for the agency.

When selecting optical storage media, the issues of data longevity and integrity must be considered. A medium that is NOT rewritable helps protect the integrity of the records. There are a variety of optical disks on the market today:

- Write Once Read Many (WORM)
- Compact Disk Read Only Memory (CD ROM)
- Compact Disk Recordable (CD R)
- Computer Output to Laser Disk (COLD)

Each has its own advantages and disadvantages, with rewritable and non-rewritable options. These media offer a high level of data security because you cannot alter the data without destroying the medium itself. If a record is no longer needed, software may allow the pointer to the data to be disabled, preventing normal access. Because the data cannot truly be deleted, however, it may remain accessible by other means.

Recommendation 5: Use a non proprietary digital image file format. If using a proprietary format, provide a bridge to a non proprietary digital image file format.

A digital image file format is a structured container for information about each digital image and the image data. Information about the digital image file includes, but is not limited to, its name, width, length, resolution, and compression techniques. The computer requires this information to interpret the digital image. It is essential to use a commonly available, non proprietary image file format to ensure the ability to transfer successfully digital images between different systems or to a new system when a system is upgraded or modified.

American National Standards Institute (ANSI)/Association for Information and Image Management (AIIM) MS53 1993, Standard Recommended Practice — File Format for Storage and Exchange of Images — Bi Level Image File Format — Part I details a standard definition for file formats. Despite the existence of a standard, there is not yet an agreed upon, industry wide image format standard. Many digital imaging systems use the Tagged Image File Format, or TIFF. Because different versions of TIFF exist (TIFF 5, TIFF 4, etc.), there is still no absolute guarantee that images can be transported seamlessly from one system to another. Comprehensive documentation of the digital image file format, including TIFF, is recommended.

A number of other file formats exist, such as Graphics Interchange Format (GIF), Joint Photographic Experts Group (JPEG), and Bitmap (BMP). These file formats are commonly used in conjunction with hypertext markup language (HTML) for Internet and intranet applications. Many systems or third party graphics packages will convert images from one to another, although often with unpredictable results.

Recommendation 6: Use International Telecommunications Union (ITU) Group 3 and Group 4 compression techniques or have the vendor provide a bridge to these techniques.

The typically large file sizes of typical scanned documents require digital image compression to support data transmission and to promote storage efficiency. Today most digital imaging systems use standard compression algorithms to “shrink” images. Standard compression techniques are instrumental in ensuring a migration strategy for records needed for long term use. Two international standards are currently available. Using compression techniques conforming to either of these specifications will increase the likelihood that the images can be used with other technologies or migrated between systems.

Recommendation 7: When determining document-scanning resolution, considering data storage requirements, document scanning throughput rates, and the accurate reproduction of the image. Validate vendor claims using a sampling of the agency’s documents.

A digitized image consists of black and white dots or picture elements (pixels) measured in dots per inch (dpi). The higher the number of dpi, the higher the legibility of the reproduced image. Images scanned at higher dpi rates, however, use more storage space on the disk and may require longer scanning times. The selection of scanning density involves a trade off between image clarity, storage capacity, and speed. When selecting a scanner, ask the vendor to perform a quality test on a broad sampling of documents at various dpi settings so that an appropriate end to end throughput rate and resolution can be determined.

For good quality images in scanning modern office records, use a scanning density of at least 300 dpi. A higher scanning density (600 dpi or higher) is appropriate for deteriorating documents, older handwritten documents, and documents with a visual element such as engineering drawings, maps, or documents with background detail. The display resolution of the inspection/verification monitor and printer should match the scanning density of the document scanner. When scanning continuous tone images, such as photographs, maps, and illustrations, use grayscale or color imaging technology.

Recommendation 8: Select equipment that conforms to the standard methodology for media error detection and correction. The system should provide techniques for monitoring and reporting verification of the records stored on a digital optical disk, and the system administrator should actively follow the status of the monitors.

Careful review and quality control of scanned images is essential to assure the accuracy and completeness of material scanned into imaging systems. Digital imaging technology uses two methods within the Error Detection and Correction (EDAC) system to minimize digital image recording and retrieval errors. The first method uses error correction codes to detect and correct automatically any errors in reading data. The second employs correction code software to determine if and when the use of error correction codes is approaching a critical point. Monitoring the error correction status information provides an audit trail to measure the progress and degree of disk degradation. Tracking error correction trends will indicate an appropriate timetable for recopying disks.

The Association for Information and Image Management's Standards Committee has developed a standardized methodology for reporting the error rate data to the operating system for user evaluations. ANSI/A11M MS 59 1996, Media Error Monitoring and Reporting Techniques for Verification of Stored Data on Optical Digital Data Disks, describes these standards.

Another precaution against losing long term records because of defective disks is to require the use of digital optical disks with a guaranteed minimum shelf life of five years and a minimum post write life of twenty years.

Recommendation 9: Specify that the small computer system interface (SCSI) command "Write and Verify" is used when writing data to digital optical disks.

The "Write and Verify" command, available within the SCSI, is valuable for assessing how accurately the scanned information is transferred from the central processing unit of the computer to the digital optical disk. "Write and Verify" requires verification from the system that the digital image is correctly written to the disk and provides additional protection for continued access to long term records.

Recommendation 10: Use an indexing database that provides for efficient retrieval, ease of use, and up to date information about the digital images stored in the system. The indexing database should be selected after an analysis of agency operations and user needs.

Reliable access to scanned images depends on an accurate, up to date index database. Indexing a digital image involves linking descriptive image information with header file information. Normally, index data are manually key entered using the original documents or the scanned images, either at the time of image capture or later in the production process. Index data verification, in which database entries are compared with the original source documents for completeness and accuracy, is crucial because an erroneous index term may result in the inability to retrieve related images.

Recommendation 11: Provide specific plans for an ongoing process of migrating long term and archival records from older to newer hardware and software platforms.

Agencies must ensure that their long term and archival records are continually accessible. Permanent records of high evidential value should be printed out onto acid-neutral paper with permanent, carbon-based ink to assure their long-term preservation. Systems as physical devices could be operational for ten years or more, but system technology often is superseded within two to three years. If the system stores records with retention periods exceeding the life span of the hardware and software, it is essential that the administrator plan for future data migration. A migration strategy documents how an organization will transfer long term and archival records from one generation of hardware and software to another generation without losing system functionality and without losing the integrity of the records. The strategy should be written and available with current system documentation.

Current strategies for migrating digital imaging system records include:

- Upgrading equipment and software as technology evolves and periodically recopying disks as required;
- Recopying optical disks based upon projected longevity and/or periodic verification of the records;
- Transferring the data from an obsolete generation of optical disks to a newly emerging technology, in some cases bypassing the intermediate generation that is mature but at risk of becoming obsolete.

Recommendation 12: Integrate into the system design a comprehensive records retention and disposal schedule for the entire system.

The retention of records in electronic systems is complex because both the structures and data (content) can be changed over time. When either the data contents or the structure of a database is changed, the record is altered. This is necessary to the conduct of business.

Changes should be managed in accordance with records management principles.

- When changes in the logical structure are made, documentation of the superseded structure should be maintained for as long as it is necessary to maintain any records to which the superseded structure(s) applied.
- When major redesign efforts are undertaken, the record(s) applicable to the database should also be reviewed.

Articulate and integrate requirements for archival records (records for permanent retention) at the conception stage, when the record-keeping system is being designed.

- Devise and use a records retention plan, based on appraisal of the record contents, that will be effective across changes in technology over time.
- Systematically identify and protect material that must be retained permanently whenever it appears in the operations of records creation within the system.
- Operational (administrative) and legal requirements for records retention should be incorporated into the system design.

For permanence, the system design must assure preservation of the availability, accessibility, and understandability of the content records, including their provenance and working context. The entire database system, including inputs, outputs, and necessary metadata and documentation should be scheduled for retention or disposal together.

System Implementation

Recommendation 13: Assign a permanent staff member as systems administrator, and require the vendor to provide a project director during the installation and training periods.

Assignment of a qualified staff member with systems administration experience is crucial to effective implementation and maintenance of a digital imaging system. The systems administrator should be responsible for overall project management, and the development and maintenance of written system documentation that describes the requirements, capabilities, limitations, design, operation, and maintenance of the digital imaging system. The systems administrator should also assure that steps are taken to assure the optimum chances of long-term survival of essential, permanent, and archivally valuable records. Making a vendor representative responsible for installing the equipment and training the systems administrator and other appropriate agency staff will help to ensure successful implementation of the system.

Recommendation 14: Establish operational practices and provide technical and administrative documentation to ensure the future usability of the system, continued access to long term records, and a sound foundation for assuring the system's legal integrity.

It is the responsibility of office administrators, rather than vendors and manufacturers, to maintain written documentation of system procedures, also called standard operating procedures or SOPs, including access and security policies and procedures. Security and access policies should be developed to protect the system and the records from alteration or unauthorized use.

In regard to legal admissibility and trustworthiness, records stored on a digital imaging system should be treated no differently than records stored on magnetic disk or tape. The key is for the systems administrator to become familiar with how the rules of evidence apply to such records. Procedural controls should be established and followed to protect the integrity of the records.

These procedural controls should be documented and should reflect requirements for the legal acceptance of records as outlined in AIIM TR31 1992, Performance Guideline for the Admissibility of Records Produced By Information Technology Systems as Evidence. This AIIM performance guideline stresses the importance of specifying the processes used to create the records, demonstrating that records are produced and relied upon in the regular course of business, establishing quality control and audit procedures, conducting formal training programs, and providing written documentation for each procedure. Case histories indicate that system requirements for good archival maintenance are consistent with the requirements for the admission of records under the “rules of evidence” laws. Records administrators should be familiar with how the rules of evidence apply to Tennessee’s public records. Policies and procedures should be followed to protect the integrity of long term records.

Recommendation 15: Perform a visual quality control evaluation of each scanned image and related index data. Write the scanned image to optical media only after the evaluation is completed.

To help ensure the integrity of long term and archival records stored on the system, staff members should perform a visual quality evaluation of each index entry and scanned image before writing the digital image to optical media. Overall system quality control is best when the scanned image is stored temporarily on magnetic media, permitting corrections through rescans as needed. Depending on the system configuration, corrections may be performed at the scanner capture station or at designated inspection/rescan workstations. Training and supervision of the operations staff is a key factor in maintaining acceptable image and index quality as well as user satisfaction with the system.

When the system is operational, a routine scanning quality test, as outlined in ANSI/AIIM MS44 1988 (111993), Recommended Practice for Quality Control of Image Scanners, should be performed on a weekly or monthly basis.

Recommendation 16: Design backup procedures to create security copies of digitized images and their related index records.

System component reliability is critical to system success. Prolonged or repetitive downtime can seriously affect office operations. Creating a duplicate copy of records in another format or another system is an effective way to ensure access to long term information. Backup copies also support system integrity and legal admissibility requirements. The government office may select the backup storage media (optical, magnetic, paper, or microform) that best meet the office’s requirements. Security copies of the records should be stored in an offsite, environmentally controlled location.

Recommendation 17: Provide adequate environmental conditions for the digital optical disks.

Even in an optimum environment, digital optical disks are susceptible to deterioration. Adverse storage conditions, especially high humidity, can cause rapid deterioration of the media. A prudent storage guideline for digital optical disks is to adhere to the temperature and humidity levels recommended for magnetic media storage. Technical specialists recommend a stable environment, with a temperature between 65 and 75 degrees, and a relative humidity between 30 and 50 percent. Digital optical disks should never be stored in direct sunlight nor placed near sources of heat.

Digital optical disks are affected by dust, debris, and fingerprints. Plastic cartridges should never be removed, nor should the cartridge shutter be opened to expose the digital optical disk's recording surface. To protect disks from warping, they should not be subject to pressure and should be stored in an upright position when not in the disk drive.

Agency officials should request that the vendor supply specifications for the storage of digital optical disks and ensure that office conditions meet these specifications during installation of a system.

Recommendation 18: Budget annually between 15 and 20 percent of the original system acquisition cost for upgrades, training, and maintenance.

Administrative managers should be aware of the high cost of maintaining and upgrading digital imaging systems. Unless these costs are factored into the continuing support of system maintenance and improvement, the system is in danger of becoming obsolete and requiring a far greater expense to restore its effectiveness. Also, records stored in an outdated system tend to be at greater risk than those in a well-supported system. Continued planning and budgeting for the migration of long term and archival records, as discussed in Recommendation 11, are essential for the success of any digital imaging project.

Recommendation 19: Long-range planning and budgeting should include provision for replacement of existing systems at least every 10 years.

Information management and imaging systems technology changes rapidly, making existing systems obsolete in a few years. Information processing and records-keeping requirements of offices also change with changing circumstances. Experience in many government offices and business enterprises suggests that existing systems need to be replaced substantially, if not entirely, somewhere between five and 15 years of the time of their initial installation. The optimum replacement time seems to be between seven and 12 years. Prudent management requires planning and budgeting for such replacements.

IF YOU NEED ASSISTANCE

The Records Management Division of the Department of General Services and the Office for Information Resources of the Department of Finance and Administration provide assistance to state and local government agencies regarding records administration considerations affecting the design and implementation of digital imaging systems. Direct questions or comments concerning digital imaging technologies, or this technical leaflet, should be sent to the Tennessee State Library and Archives, 403 Seventh Avenue North, Nashville, TN 37243-0312, (615) 741-2561. For technical assistance concerning the design and implementation of digital imaging technologies contact the Office of Information Resources, Department of Finance and Administration, State Capitol, Nashville, TN 37243-0285, (615) 741-2401.

NAGARA series The Daily Management of Records and Information, by David O. Stephens, CRM (November 1991). This publication contains helpful and informative discussions of various “nuts-and-bolts” topics relating to records management, including filing and record-keeping systems and equipment, daily operation of active and inactive records systems, maintenance of inactive records storage facilities for local governments with less than 1,000 to 2,000 cubic feet of records to store, automated records management, and related topics. The author compares available methods and equipment and offers suggestions on their proper use. The booklet also contains sample forms and worksheets.

NAGARA, in cooperation with the International Institute of Municipal Clerks (IIMC), publishes a series of technical bulletins on records management for local government officials. They contain excellent bibliographies. These bulletins are available free of cost on the Internet at http://www.nagara.org/rmbulletins/bulletins_toc.htm or can be ordered from the address above at $10/bulletin.

- 67 In the past, some people have regarded archives as “dead” storage and put valuable records into rooms with old furniture, cleaning equipment, or fuel stores, or into fire-trap attics and basements with dirt, vermin, and the like. That kind of negligence endangers the very evidence that public interest needs to save and protect.
- 68 There are stricter archival standards, with narrower ranges of tolerance for ideal conditions. Some materials may also require slightly different optimum temperature and humidity. However, these present standards are tolerable for local archives that do not have the resources for highly sophisticated environmental control systems.
- 69 Incandescent lights do not produce strong ultraviolet rays, but fluorescent lamps do, and they must be shielded with ultraviolet ray filters if they are used.
- 70 Much damage has been done to records when local firefighters treat archives as they would any other storehouse of replaceable goods.
- 71 Wood is flammable, and it often gives off gasses and oils that may damage archives.
- 72 The University Library of Tennessee Technological University in Cookeville has a well-developed disaster plan that may be used as a model. Other models are available from TSLA and MTAS. For more discussion on disaster contingency planning and vital records preservation plans, see the next chapter.
