Selected Speakers: Berry and Connolly

From the College's President:

I am pleased to announce that the following members of the Ursinus College community have been selected to speak at the Commencement Convocation on Sunday, May 15, 1988:

FACULTY SPEAKER: Dr. Nicholas Berry, Chair of the Department of Politics.

STUDENT SPEAKER: William J. Connolly III, Class of '88, a major in English.

The student speaker will be introduced to the audience by the President of the senior class, Lynne Y. Edwards.

I thank the members of the senior class for taking an active role in the process of choosing speakers. The many responses and thoughtful comments received by the selection committee contributed greatly to the process of making final recommendations to my office.

I am also pleased to announce that the valedictorian of the class is Debra I. Ritter, a major in Economics and Business Administration, and that the salutatorian is Jeanne M. Radwanski, a major in Psychology. Both will be specially recognized on Commencement day.

This year's graduation will be a break from tradition. I believe that the participation of a faculty and a student speaker from our own campus community will be particularly fitting in this year of self-study, which affirms the concentration of the whole College upon its only reason for existing — the education of the students.

Commencement 1988 promises to be a memorable and gratifying event for the class of '88 and for the whole College community.

Alcohol Abuse Abounds

Two Ursinus freshman women were hospitalized last Friday night, March 19, due to alcohol abuse. Responding to the notification of possible alcohol poisoning were: Security Officer Timothy Michener, Nurse Judy Claycomb, Dean of Student Life J. Houghton Kane, Associate Dean of Student Life Richard Whatley, and President Richard P. Richter.

At approximately 9:30 p.m., the Resident Assistant on duty, Kathy Erle, investigated a report that one of the women on Stauffer I had been drinking and was now unconscious. When Erle saw the woman, she immediately notified Michener, who evaluated the situation, and along with Nurse Judy Claycomb, he called an ambulance and notified the Administration.

The ambulance and police arrived momentarily, and as the ambulance carted the first victim away, the police officers attempted to confiscate the remainder of the alcohol—two bottles of grain and a fifth of vodka. When they returned to the room where the first victim had been found, they discovered another freshman woman, also extremely intoxicated, "Hyperventilating . . . and really upset . . ." as Erle stated. Claycomb attempted to restrain the freshman, but when she became "hysterical" once more, another ambulance was called.

Neither of the girls required over night hospitalization, nor was stomach pumping needed.

When questioned about the incident, Head of Security Brian McCullough stated, "Whether or not to call an ambulance is a delicate situation. . . It's better to be safe than sorry."

Abortion Forum Caused Little Racket

BY ERIKA ROHRBACH
Of The Grizzly

In the open courtroom of Wismer Auditorium, civil rights lawyer Edmund Tiryak defended the use of Anti-Racketeering laws in a case he won representing the Northeast Women's Clinic. Tiryak's lecture, Using Anti-Racketeering Laws Against Right-to-Lifers, delved into the intricacies of his successful application of the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO) against anti-abortion protesters at the women's clinic in Northeast Philadelphia.

Describing his presentation as essentially a "talk about linguistics," Tiryak delicately side-stepped the inflammatory issue of abortion. He focused on the problems adamant Right-to-Lifers caused clinic personnel and patients which forced them to resort to legal action against the demonstrators. The clinic's concern was comprised of three main areas.

The first issue was one of physical harassment. Tiryak explained that protesters were able to generate with relative ease "60-300" supporters to convene at the clinic. These often large groups of demonstrators rallied to the point of inflicting physical injury on clinic workers and patients, and also occasionally damaged medical equipment in the clinic. In addition, the protesters followed workers home, and told neighborhood children that these people "murdered babies."

However, the protesters' most prevalent tactic took the form of verbal assault. To illustrate this point, Tiryak showed the Wismer jury the same videotape of demonstrations at the clinic which served as evidence in Northeast Women's Clinic Vs. McMonagle. This footage graphically revealed the extreme behavior of some demonstrators. The most vivid example involved a woman kneeling on the ground who was using a microphone and shouting, "How many babies have you killed, Katie?" at the clinic's public relations director.

Returning to his focus on linguistics, Tiryak commented that there was a great casualty in the distortion of language used by Right-to-Lifers: "in a very fundamental way, the language I was using was not the same language they were using." He then provided examples of the difference between anti- and pro-abortionist phraseology such as: abortionist vs. clinic physician, abortifacient vs. clinic, and the term "rescue mission" which was used to describe the bodily placement of demonstrators between a patient and the clinic entrance.

Tiryak concluded, "The only way we can survive as a society is to be tolerant of others," while he explained that the results of the trial involved the payment of some $45,000 to the clinic for damages to medical equipment, and also an injunction prohibiting demonstrations on clinic property. Tiryak felt that members of a society based on tolerance should give women of differing beliefs the freedom to execute actions on the conclusions they have reached on abortion.

Conwell is Here!

The Grizzly was founded in 1978, replacing the previous campus newspaper, The Ursinus Weekly. It is published by students thirteen weeks each semester. The Grizzly is edited entirely by students and views expressed in the paper are not necessarily those held by the administration, faculty or a consensus of the student body. The staff of The Grizzly invites opinions from the college community and will publish them as time and space permit.

Editorial

Whatever happened to CONSTRUCTIVE criticism? I am not only referring to the letter printed in this week's edition (page 3: "Track Awards Noted"), but I am also referring to other complaints that The Grizzly is not thorough in its coverage of campus events.

The campus is not aware of the work that is put into the publication of this newspaper. With a limited staff, we are forced to limit our available space. But, The Grizzly is expanding! Before the 1987-88 academic year, issues were usually eight pages; twelve page issues were produced once or twice a month. This year, we have brought you three SIXTEEN page issues—an astounding accomplishment! We cover the most important campus events and features, and have even included a national/international news column. The Grizzly also occasionally includes important national campus news.

We agree that some items are not included; and sometimes the news becomes stale, and is no longer timely to our readers. For this, we apologize.

But, the men's and women's track teams are not justified in their complaint. The winter sports season was tremendous! The accomplishments of ALL of our teams and individual members are too numerous to include in a month of Grizzlies. With this dilemma, we were forced to give preference to our champions: the men's and women's basketball teams, and the women's indoor track team. Apparently, the author's of today's letter failed to read our February 26, 1988 issue where The Grizzly not only celebrated the women's MAC track title, but it devoted a full page spread on the team members and their individual accomplishments. The men's records were recorded on page eight of the same issue, because unfortunately they placed fourth.

It is a practice of this publication to request each sports team to submit weekly articles for print. We do this because we realize that the athlete knows more about his own sport. We have not until now had a problem with this procedure; we hope there will not be other misunderstandings in the future.

The Grizzly welcomes any comments which will improve our weekly product. We just ask that your comments are justified. The track teams' complaint was only based upon what they read in last week's issue, not this semester's issues.

Women More Than Miffed

Dear Editors:

In response to Lora Hart's editorial last week, we, too see the necessity for change regarding the fraternities at Ursinus.

If you are a Quad resident, you may be familiar with being awakened at early morning hours by members of a fraternity screaming, "Wake up, you f---ing c---ts!" Every Tuesday night after their meeting, the members of Beta Sigma Lambda stand in front of the Quad and shout profanities unfit for print. These are just two examples of the many attacks on women that occur throughout campus. If there is a sexual harassment policy and a code of conduct at Ursinus, it has not been followed. And if the University of Pennsylvania can disband a fraternity for having a stripper at a party, Ursinus should also enact severe punishment on those fraternities who sexually harass fellow students.

Fraternities and sororities have the PRIVILEGE to exist as organizations at Ursinus. If members of certain organizations cannot respect other students, they should not be allowed to exist on campus.

It is appalling that the students and administration of this respected college tolerate this sick behavior. It is also unbelievable that supposedly "educated" 20-year-olds would derive pleasure from verbally abusing women. The purpose of college is to educate students both intellectually AND socially. Something is wrong in the Ursinus education system if students engaging in sexual harassment are allowed to believe that their behavior is permissible in society.

Task Force Wants You

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE URSINUS STUDENT BODY:

Every so often in the life of a community comes a moment when the whole community ought to be focusing its energies, debating in open fora, struggling with contending ideas, and finding a new path along which to move forward. This is such a moment at Ursinus, yet the debate, the struggle, is incomplete. This is a call to all who have not joined the process — TO YOU — to get involved, to make themselves/YOURSELF a part of the struggling whole.

As we all know — and surely by now we all should know? — our college is engaged in a momentous task: a self-study in preparation for the decennial review for reaccreditation conducted by the Middle States Association. Our College will be reaccredited; that is not the issue, and we needn't do anything "momentous" to ensure it. But the fact is that we are engaged in something momentous. In one off those rare conjunctions that societies and communities reach, we of Ursinus are poised to explore some of our most fundamental structures. In the coming months we will all have the opportunity to debate and consider some or all of the following issues: What is an appropriate core curriculum? Can we improve on the present core? and How? What is a major? and Is our present major structure meeting our broader goals of education, or does it interfere with the nature of "liberal learning"? How many courses should students be taking? or should faculty be teaching? Can students take five—six courses and really learn? What is learning? Is it possible for faculty to teach four—five courses and really teach? What is teaching?

These are fundamental questions that strike at the very nature of our experience which you, THE STUDENTS, share together with the faculty, the administration and the staff. Perhaps it is even more YOUR experience than anyone else's, for you are here four finite years while we are here for a career. We can change again, but ANY CHANGE WE MAKE WILL DEFINE YOUR EXPERIENCE FOR YOU. And change, when effected, WILL AFFECT YOU.

Our formal debate has only just begun. It will not end this spring; indeed, in a healthy institution, and ours is healthy, it will never end. But it has begun. Last fall a task force made up all parts of our community including students drafted a new Statement of Mission; already that has touched off heated debate. Last month the Educational Task Force on Philosophy and Goals, made up again of representatives of the whole community including students, published its final report. Now additional task forces, composed again of faculty, administration, staff, AND STUDENTS, have begun to consider issues of curricular structure and student life. THESE TASKS FORCES WILL LEAD TO CHANGE.

The outcome of these several efforts is going to affect every member of our community. Not only will it affect those who are physically here, but it will affect all who have been here and all who hope to come here. IT WILL AFFECT YOU. Yet to date our community remains uninvolved, passive, uninterested. How many are aware of the work that has been done, of who represented the student body — YOU — on the earlier task forces? How many know who represents the student body — YOU — on the new task forces? How many read the report of the Task Force on Philosophy and Goals when it was fully published in The Grizzly last month? How many have any idea what it recommended? I have neither read nor heard a single peep from the student body; it is as if the content was of no concern to those who are going to be most directly affected by the results — YOU.

MY CHALLENGE TO THE ENTIRE STUDENT BODY: Get involved in the debate, exercise your right to have an input, to make yourself heard. YOU, the Ursinus students, MUST TAKE THE INITIATIVE to inject your views, your hopes, your models into the debate. The avenues to do this exist, but they are not used. PUSH your student government; demand that it stay informed and keep you informed. FIND OUT who are the student representatives on the Task Forces on Academic Program and Student Life

Easter Refections on Zacharius

By M. Scott Landis
Campus Minister
Special For The Grizzly

Spring provides a natural stage for the rejuvenation of life. Flowers come alive with the fresh aroma of new life. Birds return filling the air with a new song. These are the pleasant reminders of warmer days ahead. These signs indicate to us that the winter is now past.

Early Christians used this same natural rhythm of life in setting the date for the holy celebration of Christ's resurrection. Easter marks the close of the dark days of Lent with a celebration of new life. Easter is the springtime of the church year with its central symbol, the risen Christ.

Symbols can convey powerful impressions when they are recognized and fully understood. I was recently reminded of an important symbol on our campus upon which I ask you to reflect on during the Easter "spring" season. The statue of our namesake, Zacharius Ursinus, stands confidently in front of Bomberger Hall. The gestures and symbols of the statue were intentionally created by artist Michael Price in an attempt to communicate the timeless message of Zacharius to the Ursinus of today.

We Want Service, too!

Dear Editors:

RE: Zack's Corson Carry-out

"The thousand injuries of Fortunato I have borne as best I could; but when he ventured upon [discrimination] I vowed [to write a letter to the Grizzly]." (Edgar Allan Poe, quoted in The Complete Works of Edgar Allan Poe)

We understand why the beer cans are collected daily for the Corson greensward. We understand why the heat is turned on in Corson on the first cool day in fall. We understand why the air conditioning is turned on in Corson before exam time in May. We understand why hot water gushes from the faucets labelled H in Corson restrooms.

However, we do not understand why the denizens of Lower Slobbovia (Pfahler, Myrin, Helfferich, Fetterolf, Life Sciences, etc.) must slog through thunderstorms, hail, sleet, snow, fire, brimstone and woolly-bear caterpillars to enjoy the delectable daily specials at Zack's.

Bon Appetit, Corson.

Sincerely,
Margaret B. Staiger
Myrin Library

Two important themes which had a profound influence on Ursinus were faith and community. His faith was the substance of his relationship with God. His emphasis on community was impelled by Jesus' words, "Love your neighbor as yourself." Upon these fundamentals Ursinus based his theology of a God who recognizes the sin of the world and who forgives through grace. The person of faith experiences the Easter message of a God who loves and forgives through the life, death and resurrection of his Son.

Through the symbols in the Ursinus statue, Michael Price portrays the Easter story of Ursinus' own Heidelberg Catechism, the primer of religious faith for the German Reformed Church. Ursinus was committed to a faith of experience and knowledge. Our statue depicts Ursinus in a robe symbolic of simplicity and academia. The hands are placed to symbolize the receiving and giving of knowledge through revelation, learning and understanding.

The base of the statue highlights birds symbolizing points along the way of an individual's spiritual pilgrimage. The symbols include the dove representing the comfort of the Holy Spirit, the owl indicating wisdom in making right decisions, the raven which biblically is a "dark" bird representing sin and guilt. The dead bird represents the need to die to self, while the broody hen represents the birth of the new. Finally, swallows building a nest suggest that the life of faith will naturally flow into a life of service and good works.

While there are many more symbols on this statue, maybe reflecting on these will help you appreciate the life and motivation of our namesake. Maybe the symbols will speak to you as the Easter message is heard again.

Track Awards Noted

Dear Editors:

We were glad to see that the Grizzly gave recognition to various members of winter sports teams. Very often outstanding performances are overlooked or just totally ignored. We would like to congratulate those individuals who had such fine winter seasons, and wish much more success in the future. The purpose of this letter, however, is not to praise the Grizzly for its recognition of these athletes, but to ask why several outstanding performances were not even mentioned. In particular, we are referring to the feats of the individuals on the men's and women's winter track teams. Yes, believe it or not, indoor track is a winter sport and this year there were many notable performances that were overlooked by the Grizzly.

For the women, freshman Yvette Denis [sic] set no fewer than 5 school records. She holds records in the 60 yd. dash, 400m, 200m, 4x400m relay, and the 300 yd. run. At the MAC Championships in February she won 2 golds and placed in three other events, helping the women win their second straight indoor title. Sophomore Dorothy O'Mally broke school records in the high jump (5'4") and the long jump, as well as finishing 8th in the high jump at the NCAA Division III National Championships. Freshman Sue Wehner set a school record in the 800m (2:23), while sophomore Monica Santangelo set a school record in the shot put.

For the men, junior John Wood was named to the All-American team for his 4th place finish in the shot put at the NCAA Championships. Wood also set a new school record for the shot (52'9") and has already qualified for the outdoor NCAA meet. Senior Dean Lent set a new school record in the 1000m and finished 9th in the 800m at the NCAA Championships. Lent also wound up his indoor career with 5 school records. Senior Rick Lowe set a new school record in the high jump (6'8") and won the MAC high jump crown. Freshman John Martin turned in near record performances in the 5000m (15:28) and 3000m (8:48).

We feel that these performances warranted attention and would hope that in the future The Grizzly would be a little more thorough in its coverage of All the athletic teams.

Thank You,

The members of the men's and women's track teams

Campus Memo

When the Forum program centers on a controversial topic, feelings often become heated and rational discourse suffers. We have seen this particularly with the topic of abortion. Guests who are not members of the campus community often add yet more heat to the fire that we ourselves generate.

The Forum program on March 21 dealt with the legal action that has surrounded civil disobedience by those opposed to abortion. Because of past experiences, I felt that it would be helpful at that gathering to make a prefatory statement about the general purpose for future reference.

The Forum program is designed to bring ideas and issues to the attention of students in the pursuit of a broad liberal education. The College is here to help students to develop their own independence, responsibility, and thoughtfulness. By thinking about the difficult and important problems of the times, in a setting where reasonable discourse prevails, they become better equipped to judge for themselves what ought to be valued in their lives and in the society at large.

To permit this process, the College is committed philosophically to the openness of inquiry.

An invitation to a person to speak at the Forum does not imply that the College endorses the point of view expressed. It is offered to persons who know something about the issue and who will contribute to our educational process, which thrives on the free examination of issues and ideas.

It should go without saying that the format of the Forum presupposes reasonable discourse between the speaker and the audience. It is amazing how much insight can be gained from good-humored difference of opinion, expressed with mutual respect by the participants. Conversely, it is distressing when a very strong feeling of commitment to a position blocks out good humor and rationality.

Happily, at the Forum on March 21 reasonable discourse reigned and, I trust, the students who attended took a step forward in their understanding of a controversial issue in contemporary life.

There are worse things than being sick with the flu. You could be dead. Actually, I could be dead. I certainly felt like I died this week.

There is nothing worse than having the flu while being stuck here at U.C.. No mother to hover over me and force-feed chicken noodle soup down my throat. No comforting dog who comes in just to wash my face in hopes that a slobbered-on-face will make me feel better. No little sisters to order around, getting me all the creature comforts a dying woman could possibly need. No father—who really should have gone for a medical degree—poking me in the tummy and diagnosing my illness.

So while I was wasting away dying from the worst illness known to mankind, my friends tried to make up for the lack of family. Jen fed me carrot sticks and fruit cups for dinner. P. made sure I didn't fall in the toilet while I lost the dinner Jen fed me. Erika covered the Forum I was supposed to cover and checked on me for signs of life. Jean managed The Grizzly without me. But the real trooper and pal was Carol (or "Sambu, the slave woman") as she ended up running all errands, making sure I had everything school related done, and holding a mirror in front of my face to make sure I was still breathing, which was difficult to discern from hour to hour as I lay in an almost coma.

Carol might as well have just put on my clothes and called herself "Lora", for all the things she did for me this week. She typed all my papers, tried to make me eat, made me go to the doctor, and cheered me up when I was at my deathbed. Picture this scene:

Me, sitting in the floor of my room, every drug on the free market surrounding me, typewriter in my lap. There's a knock on the door and Carol walks in. She looks pointedly at the empty bed and then at me, fury growing in her face.

"What ARE you doing?" she yells at me.

"Typing a paper," I mumble weakly, cowering at her wrath.

"I TOLD you I would type it," she storms, grabbing the typewriter out of my hands. "Now get in bed!"

"My mom's nicer to me than you are," I grumble, crawling into bed, humiliated at having been caught typing.

"Now," Carol says, pounding away at the keys of my typewriter, "Did you eat?"

Developing Student Life

BY MICHELLE L. GRANDE
Grizzly Copy Editor

In preparation for Ursinus' 1989 Middle States Evaluation, another task force has been formed as a result of the report filed by the Task Force on Educational Philosophy and Goals. This new task force, Student Development Outside the Classroom, is chaired by J. Houghton Kane, Dean of Student Life, and includes President Richard P. Richter, two members from the Office of Student Life, one additional administrator, four faculty members, and three students.

The members of Student Development Outside the Classroom are in the process of meeting and must complete a report by June, 1988 for the self-study. Dr. John Pilgrim, Professor of Economics and chairman of the Campus Planning Group, will then receive this report and will incorporate its contents in the approximately 150 page Ursinus self-study document.

Student Development Outside the Classroom has four purposes: First, it must compare the current goals of student development from the Office of Student Life with the goals established by the Educational Philosophy and Goals report. Next, this new task force must recommend changes in goals if inconsistencies exist. Third, the members need to suggest practical strategies for implementing goals, and fourth, a system of evaluation for measuring the success or failure of meeting these goals is necessary. "What happens to the student at Ursinus is an extremely important part of the college," Kane stated. "We need to agree upon what are the goals for student life...what should they really consist of?"

Kane also cited several levels of emotional and mental development that student life should encourage. He stated that first, and most importantly, students should learn to identify and to examine their values and to go "beyond the shallow level of emotion to ask 'why?'" He emphasized that the college's purpose is not to tell students what their values should be but to encourage students to develop values after careful consideration of the alternatives.

Student life also serves in promoting a "cross-cultural, multi-cultural awareness" so that diversity within people can be fully appreciated. Group organization and behavior is consequently examined in relation to individual behavior. In addition, the concept of "wellness" in coping with stress, disease, and failure is also crucial to proper student development so that students may learn how to benefit from change.

Another crucial skill that student life promotes is problem engagement, or conflict resolution. Problem engagement encourages individuals to identify issues, to attempt to resolve differences in a nonthreatening way, and to create conclusions.

Additional issues that the members of Student Development Outside the Classroom must face are the problems of housing students in limited space and creating more and better common space. The contributions of fraternities and sororities to social life also need to be discussed in relation to non-Greek activities.

The decisions of this task force will undoubtedly influence the nature of residential life at the college, even though some decisions may not immediately influence the current student body.

Scott Klee, a senior at Ursinus College, has been involved in an independent study in computer algebra for the last two semesters under the direction of Professor Nancy Hagelgans.

On Saturday, February 20th, Klee gave a speech at the Moravian College Student Mathematics Conference. Others who attended were Tracey Hitchner, Kim Caldwell, Trevor Feldman; Professors Hagelgans, Jessup, Neslen, Rosenthal, and Shuck.

His speech was entitled, "Algorithms For Computing Integer Greatest Common Divisors." Klee discussed how "fast algorithms for finding the greatest common divisors have become important with the advent of the computer. Euclid's algorithms generally enables us to find the GCD's rather quickly. However, because of the slowness of division algorithms, other GCD algorithms can be faster under certain conditions on the size of the number involved."

Klee presented a survey of these algorithms and gave an impressive discussion of the speed of the division. According to Hagelgans, "Scott was extremely well prepared and gave excellent answers to questions raised by other professors who attended the conference. It was a great experience for him and he did a great job.

The Moravian College Student Mathematics Conference was sponsored by the Pennsylvania Omicron (Moravian College) chapter of Pi Mu Epsilon, the national mathematics honorary society. Klee is presently pursuing an honors project in computer algebra and is waiting to hear from graduate schools. In addition to his scholastic endeavors, Klee is also a skilled golfer and participates in golf at Ursinus.

Jazz!

Attention jazz fans. On Saturday, March 26, the Anthony Branker Sextet and the Ursinus College Jazz Ensemble will present an evening of music meant just for you.

Free of charge and open to the public, the Ursinus College Forum program will begin at 8:00 p.m. in Bomberger Auditorium.

New compositions by Anthony Branker, instructor of music at Ursinus and prize-winning jazz composer, will begin the program. The Anthony Branker Sextet will perform his pieces.

The sextet is composed of Glenn Cashman, alto and soprano saxophones; Scott Olson, tenor saxophone; Laurie Altman, piano; Brian Glassman, bass, and Greg Bufford drums. The musicians combine a wealth of experience as teachers, performers, and recording artists to develop the sextet's musical style.

The Jazz Ensemble, conducted by Mr. Branker, will also play from its repertoire of classic jazz compositions and improvisation with solos by guest artists. Selections will include "Jeanine," by Duke Pearson, and "Tell Me A Bedtime Story," by Herbie Hancock.

The first formal agreement between the contras and the Sandinista government in seven years of battle was made Wednesday night. Negotiators on both sides signed an accord for a 60-day cease-fire that will begin April 1. During the cease-fire, negotiations for a permanent truce will be made. In the 60-day period, the Sandinista government said it will grant gradual amnesty to the contras. In addition, all political exiles will be allowed back in the countries. The contras, in turn, have agreed to accept only humanitarian aid from the U.S. and to move into specified zones in Nicaragua.

President Reagan announced on Wednesday that he will meet with Mikhail Gorbachev in Moscow for summit talks. The fourth summit between the two leaders will run, from May 29 to June 2.

French leader Francois Mitterrand on Tuesday finally announced his plans for seeking a second seven-year presidential office. The 71-year-old Socialist said that he would be a candidate in the presidential election that culminates on May 8th with a runoff vote. Mitterrand's main challengers are Prime Minister Jacques Chirac and former Prime Minister Raymond Barre.

An "indefinite general strike" was called on Monday in Panama by opponents of Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega. Stores and factories were closed, putting additional strain on an already failing economy. Leaders of the National Civic Crusade, the opposition coalition against Noriega, said that the strike proved 95 percent effective in the capital. The civic Crusade brings together over 200 firms and civic groups.

National

On Tuesday, Congress overrode President Reagan's veto to expand the reach of federal anti-discrimination laws. Congress has been trying for 4 years to reverse the effects of a 1984 Supreme Court ruling that put a limit on the enforcement of civil rights. To enact the Civil Rights Restoration Act over Reagan's veto, the Senate voted 73 to 24 while the vote in the House was 292 to 133.

After a long dispute between several states and the insurance industry over reducing or eliminating liability coverage for local governments, New York, California and six other states filed anti-trust suits on Tuesday.

The charges contend that Lloyds of London, Insurance Services Office Inc. and others conspired with 4 major insurance companies to get rid of all coverage for environmental damages caused by pollution and to reduce all liability coverage to public firms and non-profit organizations. The four large agencies involved are the Hartford Fire Insurance Company, Allstate Insurance Company, Aetna Casualty & Surety Company, and the Cigna Corporation.

MAC Honors Outstanding Student-Athletes

BY VERONICA ALGEO
Of The Grizzly

Who says a person can only be a jack of all trades and a master of none? Recently, four of Ursinus College's standout winter athletes were honored for their play in the classroom to accompany with their outstanding contributions in the athletic arena. The Middle Atlantic Conference (MAC) recognized senior wrestler Chuck Odgers, senior swimmers Pete Smith and Tiffany Faye Brown, and junior woman hoopster Mary Bridget Algeo for their academic diligence as they were named to the 10-member MAC Winter All-Academic Team.

It is impressive for any one school of the 26-school conference to get even one athlete on the prestigious team with only 10 openings, but for a school to place four scholar-athletes on it is almost impossible.

Odgers, who was an academic All-American for the Division III Grizzly Bear football team the past two seasons, was named to this All-MAC squad for the second consecutive year. Odgers holds a 3.7 grade-point-average (GPA) as a chemistry major.

He finished his wrestling season with a 25-4 record at 190 lbs., and he captured the bronze medal at the MAC Championship Tournament after settling for the 4th place finish for three consecutive years prior at 177 lbs.

Pete Smith owns a 3.5 GPA in his major of Economics and Business Administration. He capped his swimming career in successful fashion at the MAC Championships with gold medals in the 100-yard freestyle (48.9 seconds) and the 100-yard backstroke (55.73). He also took bronze medals in the 200 freestyle, the 400 free relay, and the 400 medley relay.

He ended with 11 career medals at the MAC Championships and 8 school records. It is Smith's first appearance on this All-Academic squad and, besides his athletic and academic qualities, Smith displays leadership qualities on the campus through his responsible position as a resident assistant.

Also making her debut on the 10-member scholar-athlete team is Tiffany Faye Brown. Brown helped captain the swim team this past season while partaking in the setting of school marks in both the 200-yard (1:44.21) and 400-yard (3:52.0) freestyle relays at the MAC Championship Tournament. Brown finished her career with 5 MAC medals and a share of 3 Ursinus records. She is a political science major and owns a 3.5 GPA in her studies.

Brown shows her leadership qualities through other diversified means as she is also the president of her sorority Tau Sigma Gamma.

The youngest Ursinus entry of this group of well-rounded individuals is Mary Bridget Algeo. Algeo was the captain and leader of the women's basketball team which had a share of the division title for 1987-1988. Algeo, who earlier this year won the Bruins Scholar-Athlete award and was also named Academic All-American in Division I field hockey, holds a 3.6 GPA in her major field

Baseball Pitches Win

BY TONY TARONE

When the Ursinus Bears take the field scoring runs is never a problem. Their pitching, on the other hand, sometimes is. On Tuesday the Bears managed to put 13 runs on scoreboard in a losing effort against MAC rival Muhlenberg. One would expect 13 runs to be a big enough cushion for a win, however the pitchers struggled to find the target and wound up walking 12 batters for the game.

The Bears jumped out in front 2-1 after the first inning, but in the top of the second the pitchers had trouble with their control and the Mules took advantage, reeling off nine runs in the frame. The Bears came back with 5 in the bottom half of the inning, 3 of those runs came off a monstrous home run by senior 1st baseman Mike Troemel.

In the bottom of the ninth, with the score 14-9, the Bears mounted a comeback that fell one run short, finally losing 14-13.

Wally Tittelmayer quickly silenced all doubts about Ursinus pitching with an outstanding performance against Elizabethtown on Thursday afternoon. Tittelmayer earned the win in the 10-6 victory with his first complete game of the year.

He gave up 16 hits, but the hits were spread out and the Bears were never in any serious trouble.

The Bears were led by a balanced offensive attack as every starter got a hit, and all but one starter scored a run. The team pulled away in the fifth, scoring 4 runs and taking a commanding 7-1 lead. It was all Tittelmayer after that as he cruised through the E-town lineup.

The Bears added 3 more insurance runs, one being on a solo blast by 3rd baseman Todd Blue.

If the pitching resembles, in any way, the performance of Tittelmayer, then Saturday's match-up versus Farleigh Dickinson University should not pose much of a problem.

Lady Bears Steel Show

BY VERONICA ALGEO
Of The Grizzly

If any lacrosse critics questioned the abilities of the defensive unit—which received much preseason fanfare—to carry the Ursinus Women's Lacrosse team, all skepticism was laid to rest with authority in the team's opening two games. Like the Steel Curtain that shut down opponents for the NFL's Pittsburgh Steelers in the late 1970's, the Lady Bears have also found a way of casting blanket after blanket on their competition.

With the perfect blend of quickness, communication, and fundamentals—not to mention experience and confidence that can be overwhelmingly intimidating—the Ursinus defense gave up only four goals in their opening two games this past week. The team helped sophomore goalie Kim Piersall capture an opening game shutout versus Glassboro State College (18-0), and had another strong defensive game yesterday in the home-opening win over Gettysburg College (14-4).

"The defense is playing excellent," said junior attack wing Suzanne Thomas. "They are the strength of our team. And the attack is really coming together, too."

The attack is certainly "coming together." With great balance and complementary diversity, the offensive unit may be the most potent in all of Division III. Behind junior 1st home player, Heather Simons, the team led early against both Glassboro St. and Gettysburg and never looked back. After the first two games, Simons leads the Lady Bears in scoring with 8 goals and 5 assists; she is followed by senior attacker JoAnn Schoenherr and junior attack wing Rachel Rambo, both with 5 goals and 1 assist; and Nancikate Sarcinello, a junior attacker, who is third in scoring for the team with 5 goals. All of Sarcinello's goals came in yesterday's win over Gettysburg and was a personal best for the junior in a single-game effort.

Yesterday's game brought some other interesting developments, but not so positive as Sarcinello's accomplishment. Schoenherr took a stick on the knee and, consequently, left the game with a contusion at the 16:00 minute mark of the 1st half. She had scored two goals already at that point of the game. Thomas also left the game in the 1st half with a continuing problem with her quad muscles.

Junior defense wing Bridget Algeo is battling a throat infection and junior attacker Laura Letukas is also fighting an infection; both players left the game prematurely yesterday afternoon. These four players must be healthy if the team is going to continue to dominate its opponents.

All opponents will be gunning for the 2nd-ranked team in the nation. The Lady Bears are behind in the polls to nemesis Trenton State College. But this is just fine with the Ursinus players, who were ranked #1 in the polls for the entire 1987 season but failed to bring home the national championship trophy at the end of May. They would rather have the roles reversed in 1988.

"We're going to win the national title this year," predicted Simons confidently.

With the stalwart defensive unit of Jill Johnson, Bobbie Sue Copley, Barb Caffrey, Algeo, Lisa D'Am brogi, and Dawn Griffin—who is showing her abilities with an ever-growing confident air—the team will be tough to beat.

Goalkeeper Piersall will make scoring that much harder for opponents, taking into consideration her 2.0 goals-against-average and 66.6% save ratio into Saturday's 1:00 p.m. contest against visiting Division I opponent Old Dominion University.

The team is playing with confidence and taking it one game at a time...but, if anyone's interested, the national title game is only fifty-seven days away.

Bears Make Tracks

Although the weather outside is more suitable for indoor activities, this weekend marks the beginning of the men's outdoor track season. The Bears hope that they can repeat the success of last year, when they won the MAC outdoor title by upsetting five-time champion, Susquehanna University. The key for the Bears this season is the performance of the sprint team. If the sprinters can hold their own against the rest of the MAC, the Bears will once again be threats for the title. Throw in the strength of the field and distance squads and the Bears could claim their 25th winning season in 26 years, which includes 8 winning seasons in a row. Coached by Richard Whately and Dave Symonds and Co-captained by Rick Lowe and John Wood, the team is loaded with potential.

Junior All-American John Wood's performance in the field events is crucial. Wood, last year's gold medalist in the shot put, discus and javelin, has already thrown the shot put farther than any other MAC competitor and is looking good in both the discus and javelin. Seniors John Edwards, Joe Ricci, and Bob Shoudt will also be competing in the shot put and javelin.

Co-captain Rick Lowe, coming off an outstanding indoor season, hopes to continue as MAC champion. Lowe has already jumped 6'8" this year and has his sights set on qualifying for the NCAA meet. Senior Rob Cordes needs to have his best season as a Bear. Cordes, a 6'5" jumper, has the potential to be one of the best in the conference. Freshman Jim Hennessy gives the Bears another solid jumper. In the pole vault, the Bears are relying on Steve Grim and Ken Sprinkle to give the team its first medals in four years. Both vaulters should be able to clear 12'.

The runners look just as impressive as the field men. Leading the way on the track will be seniors Dean Lent, Rich Kobylinski, Paul McNally and Rich Dunlap. This quartet will most likely make up the 4x400m relay. Dunlap is the Bear's hope for medals in the 100 and 200 meters as well as running laps on the 4x100 and 4x400m relays. Kobylinski will run the 200 and 400 meters and both relays, while McNally will be hurdler for the team and could see action in the 4x400m relay. Sophomore Lou Haenel should be a threat in the 100m and will compete in the long jump and 4x100 relay.

Lent is hoping that this year will be the year he breaks out of his 4th place slump. In his three previous MAC Championships, he has claimed 4th in the 800m all three times. Coming off his second trip to the NCAA meet indoors at 800m, Lent looks better at that distance than he has in the past. He will also see action in the 1500m and will run in the 4x400m relay. Sophomores Jim Doyle and John Mellody, and freshmen Matt Becker, Mike McMullin, and Todd Hershey give the Bears much depth at 800 and 1500 meters. In the longer races, the Bears look good with a young group. Leading the way is freshman John Martin and sophomore Jim Heinze. These two should give the Bears a 1-2 punch in the 5000 and 10,000 meter runs. Joining Martin and Heinze at 5000 meters will be freshman Brian Drummond and Sophomore Rob Hacker. Hacker will also be the Bear's big gun in the 3000m steeplechase. He finished 7th in last year's MAC meet as a freshman and looks even better this year. Freshman Neil Schafer will see action in the 10,000m as well as trying his 6'6" frame at the triple jump.

The season is long and it may be too early to predict the outcome, but if people perform according to their abilities, this team can go far. The season opens tomorrow at F&M and comes home Wednesday against Swarthmore.

Gym-Nastics

Even though the record may not show it, the gymnastics team finished up with one of its best seasons ever. In division III meets, the team had a record of 7-5 compared with its 8-12 overall record.

In their final meet of the season, the gymnasts came up short in a very tough competition with three division I teams, with sophomores Robin Barry and Michele Benfer sitting on the sidelines with stress fractures.

Senior Debbie Benner ended her college career on a high note and freshman Becky Evans showed what the team can look forward to in the years to come.

Benner finished this season by breaking three school records, the last of which came Saturday with her 8.55 on beam.

Tricia Curry tied her career high on bars while Dawn Denison earned a career high in the same event.

Mary Sabol tied her season's best on beam and floor and Evans

Lax is Ready!

BY JOHN SCHMID
For The Grizzly

As the men's lacrosse team plunges into the 1988 season, they have a stiff challenge of replacing five key players who were lost to graduation. That challenge began last Sunday with an 8-4 loss to the Budweiser Lacrosse Club, which definitely took advantage of the inexperienced Ursinus squad.

The strength of this year's team is at attack, where junior Joe Zirpolo, senior Todd Barringer, and sophomore Paul Antinori will be expected to score the bulk of the goals. Last year Zirpolo and Barringer finished second and fourth respectively in overall scoring.

This season, the midfield will be manned by seniors Bill Fox, John Schmid, Jeff Bass, Steve Glueck, and sophomore Mike Misher. Also making his return to the club after a year's absence with a knee injury is junior Mike Grawl, who will add needed experience to the young squad.

Defense and goal keeping are the two areas where the team was devastated at last year's commencement ceremony. 1987 graduates Mike Maratea and George Fresolone will be sorely missed.

Trying to fill their shoes are senior defensemen Doug Carl, Tony Fiore, and Dave Ricci. Two others who will see plenty of action at defense are converted midfielder Glenn Worgan and newcomer Bob Enderlein.

At goalie, the position will be a battle between junior Chris Lamplough and freshman Jeremy Trinidad.

Others who could also see plenty of action this season are attackmen Joe O'Toole and Mark Dumscomb, and midfielder Paul Hutchinson.

The 0-1 Laxmen continue their season this weekend with games against Temple (Sat. 2:00 p.m.) and Millersville (Sunday 2:00 p.m.). Both games are hosted by Ursinus and will be played at the Rockpile.

On Friday, March 18, the 2nd annual Mr. Ursinus competition was held in the Wismer Auditorium. Campus organizations were asked to nominate candidates whom they believed best represented Mr. Ursinus. The candidates were judged on casual wear, talent, formal wear, and the answer they gave to a question posed by the judges.

There was no runner-up this year, and last year's champion Arvind Srinivasan crowned this year's Tau Sigma Gamma Frank Hennessey.

Berry: Up Close and Personal

BY STEVE GALL
Grizzly News Editor

Dr. Nick Berry probably has one of the smallest offices of any department head on campus. Unlike his counterparts, such as Dr. Shuck and Dr. Doughty, Berry's box-like office is in Bomberger Hall's basement. His tiny office has very little natural light or pieces of art. The walls are in fact bookshelves, filled to capacity with scholarly works, pamphlets, and folders. As a matter of fact, much of this material has overgrown his desk and floor. Little of it has been transplanted into boxes. To the uneducated eye, such paraphernalia is nothing but clutter. But to the rest of us who know academia in one way or another, such things are marks of a true scholar.

Unfortunately, Berry will not be teaching here next year. Berry, you see, is going on sabbatical. As a result, another Ursinus educator will occupy his office.

Berry, who has taught at Ursinus since 1983, plans to take time to write a monograph (or small book) on the effect of foreign policy on the press. Although he has never left for this long a period before, Berry did leave in the spring of 1986 to teach in New Zealand.

"Teaching is an all-consuming priority," said Berry on March 1. Certainly many of his colleagues would agree. Few can do research while doing the best they can as instructors, he believes. Berry finds summers and sabbaticals the perfect time for research. He also believes it integral to the educator's professional growth. "You lose your quality as a scholar," Berry stated.

Berry's love of learning and inquisitiveness have led to his desire to take a sabbatical next year. Ah, so he does read all those things in his office! The thesis for his research is that the foreign policy process shapes the press. He pointed out that this thesis runs counter to the standard belief, that is, that the press influences foreign policy.

"The press plays it safe," believes Berry. He feels that their ability to check U.S. policy is minimal. Citing press attacks on Truman, Johnson, and Carter when their respective foreign policies failed, Berry hopes to prove that the press remains somewhat passive until a foreign policy foul-up. "I don't think they can anticipate failure. They want to report the news," said Berry of the American press.

"I've got to do a lot of data collecting," said Berry from his hodgepodge office. Since part of his research will include analyzing The New York Times, The Washington Post, Time, and Newsweek, some of it will be done here at Ursinus. He will also be doing research in the District of Columbia. In addition, he may attempt to intern at a newspaper, though not necessarily a large one. This will enable him to find out how newspaper staffs feel about the subject of foreign policy.

Berry, incidentally, is no outsider to journalism. He currently writes a column in a small newspaper and occasionally submits opinion-editorial pieces. And if he gets his own office as an intern, he should feel right at home. It will most likely be small just like his here at Ursinus.

While he is gone, Dr. Gerard Fitzpatrick will act as department head. Berry's replacement (who may or may not like small offices) will be M. Kenneth Campbell, who accepted the post on February 29. Campbell, whom Berry describes as having a "lively teaching style," is currently finishing up his Ph.D. at Temple University. According to Berry, Campbell's experiences as a soldier in Vietnam should make him an interesting contributor to the campus. Campbell also hopes to teach a course dealing with the war.

As the interview with Berry ended, he was in the uncomfortable position of phoning those candidates who were not asked to join his department, something that he does not have to do often but must be done nonetheless. Fortunately for Dr. Berry, he is not faced with the chore of packing up his office very often. On the other hand, at least he can take a sabbatical every so often for his intellectual reinforcement, much as he uses the many resources in his office.

McCullough's Safety Tips

We are told by many that we are living in a violent society. We have anxieties about our safety at home, on city streets, in fact wherever our social activities take us. We are all concerned about what we can do to lessen our exposure to violence and what we may expect in any new situation.

For many students and their parents, these are concerns that, while often not expressed, call for facts. What we have tried to do with this communication is explain some things about campus living as it relates to personal safety.

First, each of us is responsible to a large degree for our own safety. We firmly believe that the question of individual safety rests with the individual. Neither Ursinus College nor society in general can accept the responsibility for providing a totally secure environment. Individuals for the most part are not powerless in this regard and must participate in procedures to ensure their own personal safety and that of others in their community.

Ursinus College has made a commitment to enhance the campus citizen's awareness of safety. We maintain a Security Department that patrols the campus twenty-four hours a day, seven days a week. Security employees are mature, qualified, trained and experienced persons. Additionally, during certain periods at night, selected student security staff is used to increase the patrols of the campus and college housing. Is this enough? Is this too much? We will probably never know, but the effort represents our response to a perceived need for the safety of our community.

It is college policy to provide a variety of residential experiences for our students. Some housing is in buildings accommodating as many as 272 students; others hold as few as nine. All housing is visited by security personnel on a regular basis all night, with walk-in inspections where warranted, and exterior door checks in all cases.

Exterior doors on all the residence halls have locks. All interior doors have locks as well, and each resident is issued a key to his/her room and to the building. Signs on exterior doors remind residents of the importance of keeping the doors locked at all times, and security personnel make regular checks during the night to determine if the doors are closed and locked.

Campus Security provides escort service between academic buildings, such as Myrin Library, and residence halls as requested by students.

Every college or university would be delighted to boast a totally crime-free campus setting, but this is an unrealistic situation. We at Ursinus College are proud of our commitment to a campus-wide safety and security endeavor that recognizes that the effort must include every member of our community. We welcome and encourage the active participation of each of our number to work toward providing a safe environment.

Specific questions or concerns about campus security may be directed to Mr. Brian McCullough, Director of Security, at 489-4111.

Organ Virtuoso to Perform

Louis Robilliard, French organ virtuoso, will appear in concert at Ursinus College on Friday, April 8.

His program will include the works of Charles-Marie Widor, Antonio Vivaldi, and Johann Sebastian Bach.

Free and open to the public, the concert will take place at 8:00 P.M. in Bomberger Auditorium.

Limited reserved seating is available by contacting the College Communications Office at 498-4111, ext. 2238.

Mr. Robilliard will perform on the College's Heefner Memorial Organ, a 62-rank pipe organ crafted by Austin Organs.

Hailed by critics for his flawless memory, perfect knowledge of all sources of sound, and art of registration, Mr. Robilliard has performed for numerous European festivals, including those in Geneva, Avignon, and Paris. Since 1979, Mr. Robilliard has conducted annual concert tours in the United States, and has played at regional conventions of the American Guild of Organists.

A professor of organ at the Conservatoire National de Region, Lyon, and organists of the Church of St. Francis-de-Sales, Lyon, Mr. Robilliard received his formal training at the Paris conservatory. He has also recorded the works of Liszt, Reger, Schoenberg, and Widor for Arion records.

In addition to his work as a performing artist and teacher, Robilliard has been a member of the Commission Nationale Superieure des Orgues Historiques of France. He has been awarded a grand Prix du Disque and a Prix du President de la Republique.

BY PEGGY HERMANN
Grizzly Layout Editor

A new face in the music department this semester is Mr. Donald Nally. He replaced Dr. John French who is on sabbatical this semester to finish his doctorate degree.

Nally, originally from Hilltown, PA, was previously head of the music department at the Performing Arts High School in Chicago. He received his master's degree from Westminster Choir College in Princeton, NJ.

On his impression of Ursinus, Nally stated, "I was pleasantly amazed at the hospitality of students, both those in and out of the choir. It's good to see this interaction between people in a world that is becoming less and less people-oriented."

Nally's responsibilities here include teaching Music History and directing the College Choir and the Meistersingers.

AUSTIN, TEX. (CPS)—There is now an official nudist student group at the University of Texas.

UT's Campus Activities Office granted official student group status Feb. 22 to NUDE, which hopes to sponsor trips to nude beaches, naked volleyball tournaments and hot tub parties while distributing "naturist" literature on campus.

In fact, it was to qualify to staff a literature table on the campus's West Mall that the group petitioned to be recognized as an official student group.

The person who hands out the literature on the mall will be clothed, explained NUDE President Michael Fabrizio.

Fabrizio stressed the group was serious about promoting a "clothing optional lifestyle."

"People would be a lot more open-minded if they were exposed to it," Fabrizio told the Daily Texan, UT's student newspaper. "There is nothing wrong with wearing clothes, and there is nothing wrong with not wearing clothes." He added the group's name "NUDE stands for nude."

IF YOU'RE THE VICTIM OF A CRIME...

Report the crime to the local law enforcement agency immediately to prevent others from being victimized. BUT, when you undertake this responsibility, you as a victim are entitled to certain rights.

1. A right to be treated with dignity and compassion.
2. A right to protection against intimidation from your attacker.
3. A right to information about the progress of your case.
4. A right to be informed about victim services and victim compensation laws in your community.
5. A right to equal treatment in court, such as being consulted about bail, plea bargaining, and when you will be needed to testify.
6. A right to the prompt return of your property if it is recovered by police.

BE AWARE that any victimization is a traumatic event. Psychologists have identified three stages common to most victims.

- IMPACT — The victim feels vulnerable and out-of-control immediately after the crime.
- RECOIL — The victim constructs defenses to cope with the trauma, including the development of phobias or denial of emotions — anger, fear, guilt — produced by the victimization.
- REORGANIZATION — The victim finally works through these painful and contradictory feelings and gradually becomes less absorbed with the crime.

TAKE ACTION: Testify in court. Join a local crime prevention organization. Talk to friends and neighbors about the crime and ask them to accompany you to court. Contact your local victim assistance program or community mental health center for help.

'89 Reaganomics to Benefit Students

(CPS)—About 250,000 more college students will receive grant money from the federal government if Congress approves President Reagan's 1989 budget.

The Reagan administration's proposed 1989 budget includes a 4 percent increase in the U.S. Department of Education spending, a dramatic turnaround from past funding proposals that sought to decrease it.

The Education Dept., of course, administers most federal school and college programs.

A hefty jump for student aid was included in the proposal, which the president sent to Congress Feb. 18.

"We welcome the 9 percent increase in student aid," said Becky Timmons of the American Council on Education. "Last year the administration sought to cut student aid by 46 percent. This is a remarkable election year turnaround."

The administration, which for 7 years has sought to cut Education Dept. spending, agreed to increase funding during December's budget "summit" with Democratic congressional leaders.

"We have an agreement with Congress," said James Miller, head of the Office of Management and Budget, which wrote the proposal. "Our numbers are their numbers, and their numbers are our numbers. That removes a point of contention."

Also, amendments to last year's Gramm-Hollings-Rudman deficit reduction law canceled a low fiscal 1989 deficit ceiling that would have required deep cuts.

The 1989 fiscal year will begin Oct. 1, 1988, and end Sept. 30, 1989.

Although most observers applauded the proposal — which Congress now must approve — Jerry Roschwalb of the National Association of State Universities and Land Grant Colleges said the budget reflects a president who is "treading water."

"Nothing will happen this year. The summit locked things in," said

Roschwalb. "Nobody is moving. The atmosphere in Washington is paralyzed."

He had hoped for a budget that attacked loan defaults — which Roschwalb says are fueled by loaning money to unprepared students and a lack of adequate post-secondary tutoring — but got one he feels throws good money after bad.

Yet Roschwalb's objections were uncommon, as most campus lobbyists grudgingly approved of the proposals from a president they still couldn't bring themselves to praise.

"It represents congressional priorities more than the administration's priorities," said Mary Preston of the United States Student Association (USSA). "It's the first time the president has not requested deep cuts. He decided to make a politically good move to keep Republicans in the White House. Nevertheless, we welcome the change."

Budget to Spend More

"There is more money available for more students," said Education Department spokeswoman Victoria Tripp.

"The president has made education a priority for this administration and in this budget," Secretary of Education William Bennett said at a Feb. 18 press conference. "Our budget for 1989 does spend more, but it also spends better."

The administration proposes increasing aid to college students from $15.6 billion this year to $16.5 billion in 1989. Some $751 million of the increase would go to the Pell Grant program. The maximum grant would rise $100 to $2,300, and the number of grant recipients would only climb by about 250,000 to 3.4 million students.

would deemphasize the Perkins Loan program, which each campus administers for its own students. Perkins funding would drop from $211 million to $22 million. The deep cut would have little impact, the Education Department says, because the program uses a revolving fund in which $718 million is now available for higher education.

Also slated for deep cuts is the State Student Incentive Grants (SSIG) program. Campus aid officials like SSIG's, a federal matching fund program, because they can be flexible in awarding the grants.

"There's more money in those funds than is needed to meet their needs," Tripp maintained.

College Work-Study funding would increase by $12 million to $600 million and Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants would rise by $8 million to $416 million.

"That barely meets inflation," said Preston.

Citing the budget's proposal to freeze Trio programs for disadvantaged students at their 1988 levels, Roschwalb grouched, "If the administration were serious about solving higher education's problems, it would deal with those problems. Universities should be helping us deal with our problems instead of just fighting to stay alive."

USSA's Preston, though, was willing to concede, "There are things we'd do differently, but

Not Dishonest, Just Poor

Education Dept. officials also hope to see the Income Contingent Loans (ICL) program — which students at the 10 campuses where it's now on trial have shunned — grow, but abandoned last year's $600 million request for a $50 million proposal for 1989.

"We'd like to see ICLs replace Perkins Loans," said Tripp.

The administration, while increasing direct aid to students,

(CPS)—Students who tend to default on their Guaranteed Student Loans aren't dishonest, they're just poor, a General Accounting Office (GAO) report issued last week claimed.

The GAO—which audits federal spending programs—is trying to draw a "profile" of a typical GSL defaulter, agency official William Gainer told the House Postsecondary Education Subcommittee, and is finding so far that dropouts, students who support themselves and students who are stuck in lower-paying jobs make up the bulk of the nation's defaulters.

More than half—56 percent—of the former students in default did not graduate, Gainer said.

He added the GAO's "preliminary results" agreed with the testimony at a January loan default "summit" of student aid officials increasing education funding is a totally new idea for Ronald Reagan. It's not a tremendous commitment to education but, all in all, we welcome it." "By and large," Timmons added, "it's a very workable budget."

from around the country, organized by Rep. Pat Williams (D-Mont).

Many campus aid directors asserted defaulters were not deadbeats, but people who were simply unable to afford to repay their loans.

The GAO's emerging profile of the typical defaulter "raises serious concerns about forcing needy students to take out loans, rather than (get) grants" that don't have to be repaid, American Council on Education official Charles Saunders said.

In its prior new budget proposal, released last week, the Reagan administration suggested raising the amount of money the government gives out in grants.

In its prior 7 proposals, the administration had sought to reduce student's reliance on grants—which are much more expensive for the government—in favor of loans.

Now and Zen Up and Coming

Artistic turnabouts are not rare in the rock world. Bob Dylan and Sting are two artists whose careers reveal distinct changes of direction. One should also add Robert Plant to this corps of artists, as Now and Zen (Es Paranza) proves that in many ways he has left his heavy metal background further behind than on his previous solo efforts.

But has he? Now and Zen relies more heavily on digital sampling and drum programming than before, something which Led Zeppelin's producer (and, of course, guitarist) Jimmy Page never used, and which Plant used only moderately on his three previous solo releases. On the other hand, this is the first of Plant's post-Zep endeavors on which Page appears. Note, however, that one of these appearances is the retrospective "Tall Cool One," which is really a skeleton of Zeppelinish words adorned with guitar riffs from Zeppelin's "When the Levee Breaks," "Custard Pie," and "The Ocean."

Plant has always concentrated more on vocal delivery than lyric writing. While he still comes through with his characteristically charismatic singing style (which some may tire of quickly), he and keyboardist Phil Johnstone have put together some decent words, certainly not qualitatively less than before.

Instrumentally, the album has some high points. "Helen of Troy" and "Ship of Fools" feature some fine guitar work by Doug Boyle. As with Plant's other solo efforts, the keyboards tend to mellow rather than drive the album.

Like his last release, Shaken 'n' Stirred, however, Now and Zen seems to lack some of the punch of 1981's Pictures at Eleven and 1983's Principle of Moments. Like his 1985 release, the album borders on being artistically redundant and tiring. The selections from S n' S have virtually disappeared from airplay, as none really stand out in one's memory. To the contrary, "Burning Down One Side" (1981) and "In the Mood" (1983) have become fairly standard. Look for Now and Zen to follow the path of Plant's last release rather than that of the other two.

Fortunately, when Plant tours this year he will have enough material to keep his audience happy. He will also perform Zeppelin staples for the first time since he has been on his own. Till then, however, we will just have to make do with this latest endeavor. Now and Zen earns an overall grade of B-

The Zoo's the News

BY MICHELLE L. GRANDE
Grizzly Copy Editor

When was the last time you thought of going to the zoo? If you attended the Forum Lecture presented on Tuesday, March 15, perhaps you will be visiting soon. William V. Donaldson, president and executive director of the Zoological Society of Pennsylvania, presented an interesting program relating to the past, present, and future of the Philadelphia Zoo.

In discussing the zoo of the past, Donaldson cited primitive men in Africa, Asia, and the Middle East who often raised and domesticated various wild animals. In 2000 B.C. the Chinese had "gardens of intelligence" in which they collected and trained animals so that they could learn more about how animals related to each other. Donaldson later said that in the nineteenth century animals were systematically studied in terms of how they related to one another both physically and psychologically. He cited Charles Darwin and Thomas Huxley as the motivators for creating nomenclature for the study of animals. In addition, the first zoo was organized in London in 1833, and the Zoological Society of Philadelphia, created in 1859, opened after the American Civil War.

Today the zoo attracts approximately 1,350,000 visitors each year and is actively involved with research, animal education, and inbreeding to avoid extinction. It has a program in conjunction with the University of Pennsylvania that involves veterinary medicine training and is upgrading its resources to provide additional information to visitors about the animals in the zoo. Biomedical research, which currently includes a study of AIDS (Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome), is crucial to preventive care, and Donaldson stated, "We don't do any experimentation that is invasive to animals... We just observe." Animal behavior is also being studied through a series of activities that are designed to approximate the life in the wild.

Inbreeding and preventing extinction are two major concerns of the zoo, for 40% of the world's species are currently endangered or otherwise threatened, and some species become extinct at the rate of two or three an hour. While the zoo holds 630 species, the zoo populations are nonetheless relatively small. Donaldson said, "We have learned some lessons at the zoo... There really isn't a wild (left) in the world."

The zoo's vision for the future includes major reconstruction, particularly in the public's facilities, and programs that encourage visitors to understand and to explore more of the natural world. If more people viewed animals as friends and not as adversaries, Donaldson said, they would "get very attached [to] animals... [They might even] start to assign them personalities." The ongoing goals of the zoo include preserving the animal population, educating the public, and managing the animals.

The next time CAB (Campus Activities Board) sponsors a trip to the zoo, you may want to take advantage of the opportunity. But remember, the animals enjoy their yearly supply of $12,000 worth of maggots, $25,000 worth of crickets, and $65,000 worth of mice, not your popcorn or peanuts.

Play by the Stars

BY LUCINDA L'AMOUR
Grizzly Columnist

Ever read a novel—I'm talking the Real McCoy here, not any Harlequin crap—which entices you to get caught up in the swell of the characters' passion? Half the time, when I fall upon a work of literature which has even tamey erotic ideas in it, I am so amazed by the fact that there are unaesthetically exciting elements in the book, that I skim over the aesthetically important parts just to see what happens. Such was the case with the novel I'm presently plodding through. The author wonderfully created two beautiful characters who were having a forbidden relationship, and who you were dying to see get together. After 200 pages of unfulfilled desire, these characters finally satisfied their longing. After 200 pages of graphic, arousing detail, I was ready for another 200 pages describing the fulfillment of their desire. The author didn't even give them 200 letters. All he wrote was, "She wanted to be taken and she was." No fireworks, no bells ringing, no crashing waves, no adjectives, period. I almost burnt the book on the spot. I will spare you additional agony by not mentioning the title of the book, and instead provide graphic, arousing details about Aries male. . . .

The man born under the sign of Aries exudes sex. He has a dominant personality impatient with rules and conventions. You'll get all the excitement and pleasure you want and perhaps a little more than you can take. Jealous, he expects your fidelity, even if you can't have all of him. He is impatient in his aggressiveness, but he won't leave you disappointed. You'll probably have a night that you won't forget very soon. Underneath his trailblazing exterior lies a vulnerable small boy. Anyone who sees through his surface glitter knows how to win his heart. Also anyone who starts nibbling on his ear will soon have Aries in the palm of her hand. A light kiss on the closed eye for some reason will send shudders and spasms up his Aries spine.
