Campus 'Cheers' Policy

BY DENNIS CUNNINGHAM AND JUDD WOYTEK
Of The Grizzly

The new alcohol policy under- went its preliminary test this week- end. Jamie Robson, Assistant Director of Student Life, commented on the opening round of scattered parties: "Compared to last year there was a drastic change. Most of the students were pretty receptive to the new policy."

Changes Pennsylvania law last year made colleges liable for underage drinking on campus. Over the summer, students and administration developed a new policy that restricts the use of alcoholic beverages to students twenty-one and over inside rooms, houses, and suites on campus.

Robson also commented that upperclassmen who attended the college under the old alcohol policy complained the most about compliance. "The students have to realize that the policy will not change if they try to ignore it. Some students were testing the policy and I had to talk with them about it. They must try to work with the policy."

Robson stated that Ursinus' policy tries to serve the needs of the state and students and is rather flexible compared to the policies of other schools. Robson did say that if the students continue to "test" the new policy and make it difficult to enforce, campus security will have to step in. Robson warned that "if the students become difficult to control, we will have to start taking names."

J. Houghton Kane, Dean of Student Life, felt that the students showed a great deal of spirit by participating in all weekend activities. Kane remained on campus Friday and Saturday nights in order to observe campus participation in events which included a film festival, the Welcome Back dance and Reflections. He visited the Reimert complex six times each night to gauge the efficacy of the alcohol policy. In an interview, Kane said that "I'd give an A for co-operation. . . . but I'd give a B plus for trying not to drink in public."

Kane isn't sure whether or not the policy will work and stated, "It's just too early to tell." He did express enthusiasm over a new experiment that might be a useful alternative to Reimert parties." The Delta Pi Sigma fraternity will host a party in the utility gymnasium (located in Ritter Center), carding to ensure no minors are served liquor. The success of this event might pave the way for more activities and lead to revisions of policy.

(Note: Brian McCullough, Director of Security, received a complaint 11:53 Friday night about the noise level of the Welcome Back dance held outside Wismer Hall. Responding to this, officer Ronald Schwindt drove to the area of the complaint, but the noise level was faint. Since the caller lives on the third floor of his building, McCullough speculated that perhaps the noise 'carried.' Robson stated, "It (the dance) was no real problem. We will certainly not put an end to outdoor dances because of a single complaint. The turnout was tremendous. We will just have to work out our differences with neighboring homes.")

Frosh Still Fresh

BY MELISSA KURIGER
Of The Grizzly

While Ursinus has displayed a great outward transformation with regard to its faculty, its use of campus space and the addition of a grandiose structure known as the Olin Building, the arrival of its freshmen might pale in comparison. However, nothing could be farther from the truth. In fact, the diversity the freshman class possesses imbues the College with renewed vigor and strength providing a stunning complement to its proposed metamorphoses.

Indeed, attracting variety among high-school students was foremost in the admissions strategy of the College. Commented Lorraine Zimmer, Director of Admissions, "We want to attract a diverse group of people to the College." Consequently, an overwhelming 43% of the new arrivals live out-of-state; many of these neophytes hail from states as distant as Colorado, Texas, Ohio, Virginia, and Arkansas. The increase in the geographic diversity is due to many improvements in the Admissions Office, some of which include: more high school visitations throughout the year, an increase in the mailing of school literature, more personalized attention, and an increase in the size of the Admissions staff.

Admission counselor Janeen Flamer will continue to be an effective liaison with the minority students. Due to Flamer's remarkable influence, Zimmer states, "We have made more contacts than we've ever made before."

The most impressive fact about the class of 1992 is that the class ranking has been the highest ever at Ursinus. While the average SAT score was 1107, 97 percent of the students were in the top two-fifths of their graduating classes. "That's unprecedented," Zimmer assured.

The class of 1992 will prove to be an intricate part of the Ursinus community. With each new year comes a class full of fresh faces and bright new ideas. To sum up the class, Zimmer says, "They're great! They uphold the standards and goals set by the college."

Past Public Scandal Eludes Press

"If the press and all media didn't cover so much 'bad' news, wouldn't everything be O.K.?" "Is the press trying to 'get' Dan Quayle?" "Was there a conspiracy against Nixon?"

Yesterday's forum speaker, Mr. Bruce Frassinelli, addressed the topic of media manipulation of presidential politics through tracing the history of American politics and media coverage (or lack thereof).

Citizens of the past and present hold vast opinions about the press. Rudyard Kipling though it a "noblist work of God," while Sir Isaac Scott reprimanded his son: "Your connection with any newspaper would be a disgrace. . . ." And today, the public opinion about national coverage (see Roving Reporter page 8) is generally negative; that is, all media sensationalize or unnecessarily report personal matters of the lives of American leaders.

Frassinelli raised a pertinent question: "Are candidates more scandalous, or is the press more probing?" During his one-half hour recitation, the managing editor of the Express cited numerous accounts of moral decay in America's past and gave a sampling of scandals concerning honored presidents Jefferson, Hamilton, Cleveland, Wilson and Kennedy. The country's past is filled with bastard children, mistresses, financial manipulation, sexual blackmail—most of which remained hidden from public eye because the press remained uninformed or decided more important events lessened any impact of a "public scandal." Why?

Wilson was saved by the onslaught of World War I; Kennedy's administration was more concerned with the event of the Cold War. The year of the 1988 presidential election, as well as the election four years ago lacks more urgent political issues, and says Frassinelli, "The voters can choose from a greater smorgasbord of scandal. But Frassinelli also believes that today's Americans have a "growing need to find its moral bearing." The public must hear everything that might affect the pursuit of a more perfect life. And the press is the venue by which the people remain informed, because "... it is an institution whose freedom shall not be abridged," reads the United States' Constitution.

In yesterday's forum, the speaker, who is also the chairman of Ursinus' parents' committee, explained that the press' gatekeepers (or persons who decide the printable material) are treating the national news coverage in a responsible and fair manner. Sometimes, however, the investigative reporting methods are slightly hackneyed (such as that in the Gary Hart/Donna Rice controversy)—sloppy reporting raises a larger question.

"Americans can be a very forgiving people, but they loathe denials and coverups and financial mistakes," observed Frassinelli. "The press is a vital institution of democracy—apart from the government—but with a unique role." That role is to keep the American public informed, and let the decision of fate rest on the voters.

U.C. Convocation Coverage

On Tuesday, August 30th, 1988, Ursinus College officially opened the 1988-89 Academic Year with the 2nd Annual Ursinus Day Academic Convocation. The featured speaker was CBS Sports-caster Tom Brookshier, who helped Ursinus celebrate its first 100 years of varsity sports.

Also highlighted was the inauguration of Peter G. Jessup, by President Richard P. Richter, into the Beardwood Chair of Mathematics.

Jessup is Director of Academic Computing at Ursinus and was a past chairman of the Department of Mathematics and Computer Science.

Brian Finger, President of the Class of '89, gave a presentation of "Ursinus Day" traditionally celebrated on the second day of classes, while Diane O'Toole, President of USGA (Ursinus Student Government Association), gave an explanation of the Ursinus colors.

Other events celebrated at the convocation included the Presentation of the Class of '92 and the recognition of last semester's academic honors. Campus minister M. Scott Landis gave the Invocation and the Benediction. President of the Board of Directors, Thomas Glassmoyer presided over the convocation.

The Grizzly was founded in 1978, replacing the previous campus newspaper, The Ursinus Weekly. It is published by students thirteen weeks each semester. The Grizzly is edited entirely by students and views expressed in the paper are not necessarily those held by the administration, faculty or a consensus of the student body. The staff of The Grizzly invites opinions from the college community and will publish them as time and space permit.

Editorial

Is it not a great relief to discover that the media does not really manipulate elections? Each time I read that George Bush maintains his lead in the polls, I breathe a contented sigh. This is not necessarily because I'm a Republican, but because it is rather enjoyable to watch the press suffer a humiliating defeat.

Almost immediately after George Bush revealed his vice-presidential candidate, Americans were sand-blasted with charges that Dan Quayle represents some kind of aristocratic holdover from the eighteenth century. The press attempted to make the electorate believe that his family connections were the only obstructions to his serving in Vietnam. His family was portrayed as pulling strings to get him into the Guard when there were no vacancies (the truth, of course, is that there were Guard vacancies in Indiana). The press in its eagerness to defame Quayle's character suggested that he was no better than Americans who practiced "substitution" during the American Revolution. This practice was one in which a wealthy man who did not wish to fight, hired a substitute (usually a man of lesser economic means) to fight for him.

The media in making these invidious comparisons wishes to show their fallacious belief that America is no longer the land of opportunity but a nation in which the wealthy exploit the poor and have great advantages over the middle class. They, therefore, purport that America is elitist and the doors that were once open to all are now shut to most. A fundamental question arises, however, how can Americans be happy in this deprived state?

The fact of the matter is that Americans are generally happy. The only elite they feel exists in the media that attempts to control not their pocketbooks but their very minds. Each percentage point that shows that the media campaign against Quayle had little effect increases the value of America and its citizenry. It's about time Americans learned to think for themselves.

Tac: L'Amour Tacky

To the editors:
Although not new to the Ursinus community, as a new member of the faculty I was encouraged as I listened to reports of my alma mater at the Faculty Orientation Day in August. I was so pleased to hear of the changes and advancements that Ursinus has been and is making.

At the end of my first week on the other side of the desk, I acquired my copy of the Grizzly. Again I felt proud as I read of my alma mater "striving to raise its standards and to gain national recognition." (Editorial, page 2)

By the time I reached the penultimate page, I was feeling quite proud to be associated with such a fine institution. That is, until I reached Ms. L'Amour's column "Play by the Stars."

I was appalled to read that the same institution that was referred to on page 2 by President Richter as a place committed to "enabling students to develop into independent, responsible, and thoughtful individuals, equipped ... to make a better world," was now being called a "favorite playground." Not only were students (mostly freshmen, by the way I understood it) encouraged to "disregard parental advice," but they were ridiculously presented with the idea that sex is an alternative to alcohol consumption. In addition, the individual "Weekend Forecasts" were not only disgusting, they were degrading to men and women alike.

President Richter, in his Campus Memo, assures that a "new level of quality" is emerging at Ursinus College. He says that he is "as proud as anyone at the progress my alma mater is making in the competitive climate of higher education."

I wish I could say the same; but if that column is a reflection of the "new level of quality" and part of our aim to gain national recognition, I'm not feeling too proud.

Campus Memo

Dreams are sometimes long on college campuses, but many turn into reality sooner or later. That was evident when Dean William Akin recently unearthed a sketch of a master plan of Ursinus College from the year 1918.

The 70-year-old rendering of our campus showed a future library, a future science building, and a future women's residence hall.

This dream of the then President of Ursinus, Leslie Omwake, and the Board of Directors began to turn into reality soon after with the construction in the early '20s of the Alumni Memorial Library—later to be converted into a College Union and now into the Philip I. Berman Art Center.

The science building, our Pfahler Hall, was built as the College and the nation entered the Great Depression of the 1930s.

Financially strapped by the Depression and distracted in the 1940s by a world at war, the College did not realize the 1918 dream of a women's residence hall until 1956, when Paisley-Beardwood-Stauffer Halls were built.

The rate of conversion time from dream to reality has been quicker since Dr. Omwake's time.

In the late '60s and 70s, under the leadership of President and then Chancellor Donald L. Helfferich, the campus as we know it today rapidly took shape. We built Wismer Hall (1965). We connected the men's residence halls, Curtis and Brodbeck, with Wilkinson Hall (1967).

We demolished the original buildings of the College, Freeland, Derr, and Stine Halls (1969), to make way for the new Myrin Library (1971). Reimert Hall was built (1967) to house men students displaced by the demolition of Freeland, Derr and Stine.

The Life Science Building (1970) was made possible by a grant that was our largest to date, $500,000 from the Longwood Foundation.

Then we built Corson Hall (1970) to allow the moving of administrative functions from Bomberger Hall. Bomberger until the opening of Corson housed the Admissions Office, the Dean's Office, and the Business Office.

This period of unprecedented physical plant improvement was climaxed when Helfferich Hall was opened in 1972.

It would be impossible to imagine an Ursinus in 1988 without a Wismer, a Wilkinson, a Reimert, a Life Science Building, a Corson, a Myrin, a Helfferich—not to mention an old library about to be an art center, a Pfahler, a women's quad.

As we shape the Ursinus of tomorrow, we are constantly reminded that the College we know and love is the stuff of the dreams of the Omwakes and Helfferichs of yesterday. And from such reminders comes encouragement to pursue the dreams that, in the mundane present, we call plans.

We laid plans for the Residential Village in 1983, and it is now reality.

The contract for the planned renovation of the old library building into the Philip I. Berman Art Center will be awarded within the month and work will begin; we hope to see the completed art center in the late spring of 1989.

The academic building will be a reality by 1990, thanks to the generosity of the F.W. Olin Foundation.

A basic change in the traffic patterns of the campus will be effected in the months ahead, when we will build a road in back of Paisley and be able to remove through traffic from the center of campus.

We plan for a premier student center in Wismer. The source of funds and the precise designs are yet to be determined.

As we make these and other changes for the better at Ursinus College, students, faculty, and staff should remember the dreamers who preceded us. They owned this campus with the same immediacy and intensity with which we now own it. They were the living generation, charged with dreaming our future, and working to make their dreams our reality. We have the same charge—to make the reality of our successors out of the dream we have today.

Hartlines

BY LORA HART
Grizzly Editor

I was at ACME the other day when I saw one. I was rounding the corner from the soda/snack aisle, in search of ice cream, when I practically crashed into him. He was standing in front of the frozen foods, checking out the Budget Gourmet TV dinners. I could tell it was one just by the way he was eyeing up the offered entrees. He was a mad slasher/psychopathic rapist.

Obviously, I took off as fast as I could. I just grabbed an ice cream without looking at the type. It wasn't until I was in the 5 ITEMS OR LESS EXPRESS lane with seven items that I noticed that I had grabbed Black Raspberry Fudge, but I wasn't going back to switch. I was getting away from the mad slasher/psychopathic rapist as fast as I could.

Friends argue that I see mad slashers/and psychopathic rapists wherever I go and that I'm just paranoid. Maybe I AM paranoid. He was probably just a business man on his way home from work who had stopped off to get something for dinner because the baby had been up all night sick, and his wife didn't feel like cooking. But you just cannot be too careful these days. There are loonies everywhere, even on campus. Why, just look at Reimert after a weekend for proof.

So the other day in my suite, we were scaring each other with "Did you hear what happened to a girl at Penn?" stories before we went to class. All day long I shared the stories with people I ran into on campus. Later that evening Jean and I were working on The Grizzly. It was about 2:00 a.m., and I kept hearing noises coming from downstairs. Jean finally yelled at me.

"Lora! Stop it!" You are SO paranoid!" she admonished.

"I am not, wait, you think I'm paranoid, let me tell you a little story," I said and related one of the more gruesome tales I had heard from my suitemates. After thoroughly scaring her, she agreed to lock the door, and for the rest of the night, whenever one of us had to visit the bathroom, the other accompanied her.

We finished the paper around 4:00 and took it to be printed. Jean dropped me off in front of Reimert, and I was all set to go to bed when I remembered something I HAD to tell her. So, giving her five minutes to get back to Shreiner, I called her room.

No answer. I let it ring 27 times. Still no answer. Okay, I thought, she's probably in the bathroom, considering how many times we decided NOT to go downstairs during the course of the night. I waited five more minutes and called again. Still no answer. I called the downstairs Shreiner phone, in case she was studying or something stupid like that in the living room.

No answer down there either. By now, my paranoia was at its peak.

OH NO! I thought hysterically, she was getting out of her car, and a mad slasher/psychopathic rapist got a hold of her, because knowing Jean, she dropped something and bent over to pick it up and he snuck up on her from behind, and chloroformed her and by now she's half-way between here and Minnesota. . . .

Get a hold of yourself, Lora, I yelled at me. Give her five more minutes then call again.

Slowly a minute ticked by; then two. Omigod, I realized, the more time you give him, the farther away he could get with Jean. Frantically I dialed her number. . . NO ANSWER!

And so I called Security. I explained to the nice man who answered who I was and why I was calling. He was very concerned too, when I told him she was not answering her phone. He promptly sent another Security guard over to check out the parking lot and Shreiner. I stayed on the phone to get the bad news first hand.

All the while I waited, I kept envisioning all these scenes in my head. Maybe he didn't get her in the parking lot--maybe he grabbed her while she was trying to unlock the front door! Or worse yet, he was probably waiting in her room! I couldn't figure out how I was going to break the news to her parents (I'm so very sorry, Mrs. Kiss, I should have made her stay with me, I shouldn't have let her drive into a dark parking lot without me, I'm so sorry) when the Security guard told me she was in the shower. That little brat, I thought, making me worry for nothing. I apologized to Security and hung up.

She promptly called me back, glad I was so concerned about her, but not too happy that I sent Security into the shower to find her. "Well, Jean," I told her. "When you didn't answer your phone, I imagined the worse."

"I'll talk to you tomorrow, Lora," she told me and hung up. Of course I double-checked my suite for any mad slashers/ and psychopathic rapists that might be lurking around. All was well so I went to bed.

Now every time Security sees Jean, they tell her to call me before she gets in the shower. I, on the other hand, still keep an eye out for mad slashers/psychopathic rapists wherever I go. You just can't tell where they may be lurking.

The Global Perspective

INTERNATIONAL

Voters in the South American state of Chile are gearing up for a plebiscite on October 5 to determine if the country will remain under military rule or call for multi-party elections. A "yes" victory will extend the term for General Pinochet who overthrew Socialist President Salvador Allende in 1973. A "no" vote, on the other hand, will force Pinochet to call elections within a year.

Pro-military groups have centered their campaign on the ruin-provoking policies of socialism under Allende which is an issue many Chileans find most painful. Opposition groups, on the other hand, led by the Christian Democratic Party, speak of the restoration of fairness and democracy to Chile's economic policies. Relaxation of former government controls are allowing the opposition the freedom to pursue their goals. Pinochet lifted all states from emergency status on September 1 which now makes it easier for citizens to assemble though they must still have government permission to rally. Additionally, police powers have also been reduced.

This led to a 150,000 - 200,000 member rally for the opposition last Sunday in the capital of Santiago. This convinces many political observers that Pinochet's defeat is inevitable. What seems to worry the opposition is the fear that a defeated Pinochet will not voluntarily call elections and will merely increase oppression. In the words of Socialist leader Ricardo Lagos, "It's hard to imagine Pinochet leaving power willingly... if Pinochet will not step down, the people will have to stand up to defend their decision."

On September 5, more than 100,000 protesters assembled in Rangoon, the capital of Burma, to call for the overthrow of President U. Maung Maung. Recently, conditions in this chaos-torn country have caused numerous prison break-outs, the virtual collapse of civil administration and several altercations between police and students. Last week student protesters unilaterally re-formed the banned student union of Rangoon University and assembled with 50,000 protesters on the west bank of the Inyn Lake in suburban Rangoon where it has been said that police brutally attacked students which demonstrated peacefully there on March 17.

NATIONAL

Traveling to Boston Harbor after learning about a four-point lead in the polls, Bush severely attacked Governor Dukakis' commitment to cleaning up the environment. Pointing to the pollution evident in the harbor (the most polluted of any bay in the United States), the vice-president charged that Governor Dukakis delayed a massive 6 billion dollar cleanup plan "and the harbor got dirtier and dirtier... Half a billion gallons of barely treated sewage a day." Reports indicate that 70 tons of sewage sludge are dumped in the harbor daily as well. Said Bush, "the amount of sewage dumped into the harbor in 1986 would cover all of metropolitan Boston up to a depth of 17 feet."

Democrats were rather disturbed at Republican allegations. Quipped former Democratic Senator Paul Tsongas, "for George Bush to come here and present himself as an environmentalist, it's like Bonnie and Clyde coming out for gun control." Dukakis, on the defense, refuted the charges explaining that it was his administration that finally took action on the pollution in the bay after years of environmental abuse. Said Dukakis, "the bay has been polluted for hundreds of years, and I'm proud I'm the governor who is cleaning it up."

Bush's attack in Dukakis' home state followed a surprising headline from the Boston Herald: "Poll Shocker: Bush ties Duke in Mass."

Continuing blazes in Yellowstone Park have forced the evacuation of the Old Faithful Geyser area for the first time in the Park's history. The depredations of the fires which have plagued Yellowstone have also brought Park funds down to a low. The Park Service has already spent 190 million dollars this year in their battle with the fires without even reaching the traditional peak season.

Pending on the Congressional floor is an appropriations bill which will provide 125 million dollars for firefighting. However, most of this money will repay last year's loan from the Knutsen-Vanderberg trust fund.

Thirteen fires have destroyed approximately 634,000 acres of the 2.2 million acres that Yellowstone encompasses.

Hocker Anyone?

Intramural sports will take off with giant leaps and bounds when flag football season opens on September 14. The sign up for women's and men's "A", men's "B", and coed teams is taking place NOW. Sign up continues through Sept. 12, and play will begin on September 14.

Flag football teams are composed of seven players with the exception of coed teams which are comprised of six players; three men and three women.

Round robin tournaments will be featured for every team category. T-shirts will be awarded to league winners.

To play: 1. Organize a team NOW. 2. Select a coach/manager. 3. Have the manager pick up entry forms between now and September 12 at the Intramural Office, Rm. 29, Helfferich Hall. 4. Return the signed forms before 4:00 p.m. on Monday, Sept. 12, to either the Intramural Office, Tim Seislove, or Allison Sedwick.

That's not all, folks! There is a new and exciting sport hitting the Intramural scene. The newcomer is HOCKER. It is a pass, throw, catch, run game of few rules and lots of fun. Unlike football, no physical contact is involved. Also, no exceptional skills are needed. The game is exciting and filled with action. It is fun and fitness rolled into one.

To play: 1. Get a team of six players together—male, female or coed. 2. Choose a coach or manager who can attend an organizational meeting. 3. Have your coach pick up the easy-to-learn rules for Hocker and entry forms. 4. Turn entry forms before Monday, Sept. 12. 5. Start league play. DON'T WORRY IF YOU'VE NEVER PLAYED BEFORE. No one else at Ursinus has ever played before either, so everyone starts out EQUAL! Tutors are available from the I.S. Office if your team wants help preparing for the first game. If there are any question, please contact Dr. Laura Borsdorf, Director, at 489-4111, ext. 2456.

Have fun, get acquainted, and relieve tension. Join a Flag Football or Hocker team today.

New Reign for King

BY STEPHEN GALL
Of The Grizzly

I knew from meeting Dr. Richard King in history seminar that he was suspicious of giving interviews. He told me later that if he ever had the opportunity to give a press conference, he would ask some questions himself. "I would like to see public officials start doing that," he said with a smile.

King is an alumnus of the University of Illinois. Like many of the historical figures in his area of expertise (Russian and Soviet history), he has travelled extensively. While originally from Chicago, King attended two years of high school at Upper Moreland here in Montgomery County.

King was very much relieved to land at Ursinus. His previous teaching job at Middlebury College in Vermont was the last of a series in short-term positions. He hopes that his latest position will last for more than one year.

To King, Ursinus is "very, very small." While his frame of reference is from large universities primarily, he regards Middlebury's student body of 1900 as "just large enough so that everybody didn't know everybody else."

Interestingly, King did not aspire to be a Russian historian until his senior year of college. Until that point, he had not had any courses in the area. King feels that the period of the 1960s when he was attending school was full of disillusionment with the US self image and that the inability of Americans to love up to our own national myths posed "stark alternatives" with regard to the Soviet experience.

Much of King's little free time is spent reading. He also enjoys music, especially that related to his profession. "I did like Russian music, even as a kid," he explained.

He also plans to frequent the Philadelphia Museum of Art just as he used to frequent the Art Institute of Chicago. King is interested in European painting from the Renaissance to the present. Maybe with a little luck, Ursinus will have an art museum that King will be interested in.

Field Hockey Eyes Possible Post Season Tournament

Playoff fever is sweeping the Delaware Valley. On every newsstand, papers and sports' magazines are crying out: "This is the year of the Eagles" or "Buddy's Boys will be Super Bowl bound." The ground work is laid. The dues have been paid. The Eagles are ready to fly.

The Eagles are not the only team ready to fly this season. The Ursinus Lady Bears are also ready to lift their once invincible field hockey machine off the ground.

It has been three years since the Lady Bears have qualified for post-season play. It has been two years since the team's last national ranking. It has been two years since the team's last winning season.

But that was then. This is now. The Lady Bears of 1988 plan to change all of that.

Led by senior co-captains Sandy Diction and Barb Wenny, the field hockey team wants to be focused on the season's short-term and long-term goals.

"We feel that it's important to be focused on these goals," Wenny explained. "I think it will help the team's play in the long run if we're all striving for the same thing. It has hurt us in the past to be divided, or unsure, on the team's goals."

Uncertainty is one thing Wenny should have no problem with in the defensive backfield. Wenny returns for a third straight year as a starter along with Diction (Academic All-American as a junior) and two-year veteran senior Kelly Ames.

That stalwart senior trio will be clearing the ball up to a midfield unit led by the sure stick of senior Suzanne Thomas. Thomas (a Philadelphia All-Star as a junior) will team up with sophomore center half-back Trina Derstine and sophomore left link Amy Ward. These three players will offer quick support to a young, but promising, forward line of sophomore Natalie Chandler, junior Dawn Griffin, sophomore Janet Crutcher, and freshman Jen Harpell. Also vying for position on the forward line are freshman Stacy Boegly and Toni Wenger, and sophomore Kelsy Hammond.

This exciting blend of rookies and veterans should make for a very competitive squad. Whether or not the team can unify and get enough to win consistently will only be answered throughout the course of the season....a season that hopes to end in a post-season tournament.

Gridders Anticipate '88 Kickoff

BY CHUCK SMITH
Grizzly Sports Editor

At Ursinus, the start of the fall season means the beginning of the sports schedules. The 1988 season for the men's football team will be watched very closely for the first time in recent years due to the new head coach, Steve Gilbert.

Gilbert inherits a team that was 3-6 last season and that has question marks all over it. Due to graduation, academic standards and lackluster recruiting (because of the time lapse between Sterling Brown resigning and hiring Gilbert), this team is going to have to reach down a little deeper to produce what it takes to make this team competitive.

The offense had many problems last year because of injuries and predictable play calling by Brown. Last season the offense scored 95 points all season and ranked second to last in the Centennial Conference. But the offense hopes to turn things around as it returns eight starters.

Kevin Parker will be directing the offense as he takes over the quarterback position from Cliff Repetti, lost because of academics. Parker was 40-85 with four touch-down and four interceptions. Parker is also a smart runner which will be needed in the option-sprint out attack the team will be using this season. Sophomore Brian Thomas and junior Kevin Meehan will be the backups.

Ursinus returns both leading rushers from last year's squad in Mark Lovallo and Joe Zirpolo. Zirpolo rushed for 279 yards and amassed 403 all purpose yards. Sophomore Bobby Wiggins is also slated to see plenty of action.

When Ursinus puts the ball up in the air, there will be three very talented pairs of hands to catch it. Kevin Ross, Joe Czechowicz, and John Hodge will provide much excitement when Parker throws them the ball. Czechowicz led the team with 32 catches and Ross led all Ursinus scores with five touchdowns.

Dave Clark returns as tight end. Bill Montgomery and freshman Scott Flannery provide a more than capable number two man.

Last season there were many problems with the offensive line but this year the Bears look to the area as being one of its strongest areas. They return 4 of 5 starters led by co-captain and a pick on last year's all-conference, GTE, Ron Matthew at right tackle. Matthew will be lining up with four other seniors. Rick Yohe will round out the right side at guard, while Jim Wright and John Love will do the chores on the left side. Pat McCurdy anchors the line at center. The only problem in this area is depth as sophomore Todd Leta, freshmen Dan Nicastro, and Dave Ragone will be providing backup.

Last season the defense was very stable as it ranked 4th over all in the Centennial Conference. Only four starters return this year so that leaves some big shoes to fill.

Co-captain John Lang, the squad's leading returning tackler, and Brian Kohute who had 4 1/2 sacks last season, will lead the defense. He will be joined on the defensive line by senior Frank Hargadon and sophomore Pat Thompson. The line will be aided in a couple of weeks when Keith Aleardi returns from a preseason knee injury.

A big question mark is placed on the linebacking corps. Last year this was perhaps the strongest area of the defense with Chuck Odgers and Glenn Worgan, but they have graduated and left the job in some inexperienced hands. Junior Adam Zoga and sophomore John Eitzen look to the starters. Mike Heath and Tom Love (who will be back when he recovers from a separated shoulder) will be waiting to see some action.

Seniors Steve Sacco and Fred McAlpin will help stabilize the defensive backs at the cornerback position. Bill Chipman and Dave Matey will start at the Griz and Rover position while Bill Zoldi takes over at the free-safety. Backing them up will be Lou Haenel, David Kovach, and Joe Tarquini, will double as the team's punter.

One area the Bears won't worry about is kicking. Senior Dave Lockhart will supply the leg as he

Runners Sweep Classic

By Dorothy O'Malley
For The Grizzly

Both the men's and women's cross country teams began their seasons last Friday in the second annual Golden Bear Classic held here at Ursinus. Both teams looked very impressive.

In a field of nineteen, all seven Ursinus men runners finished in the top eleven. Unfortunately, a first place trophy eluded our runners, but the next four places belonged to the Bears. Joe Kershner, a freshman, captured second place with a time of 29:22. He was followed by another freshman, Brad Meister, in third. His time and that of sophomore, Mike McMullin, were the same, 29:46.

Right behind them were Brian Drummond in fifth (30:07) and Tim Driscoll in seventh (31:04). Rounding off the pack was Mark Wilhelms, ninth place (31:36) and Neil Schafer, eleventh place (33:02).

The women's team did an even more amazing feat. Not only did they beat Dickinson by six points, they also took the top three places out of a field of thirty-five runners.

Gwen O'Donohue and Kris Wagner finished with identical times of 21:30.3. They were followed by Sue Wehner, 21:42. Teresa Springer came in seventh with a strong time of 22:33. But, the key performance of the women's race was by Chris Dvorsky. Running in her first cross country race, she rounded off the scoring by placing eighteenth.

The Bears compete next Tuesday at Belmont Plateau in the Philadelphia Metro.

Soccer Starts Season

The Ursinus men's soccer team is hoping to turn things around after last season's disappointing 9-10 record and 5 straight losses to close the season. This year, under captains Rob Walder, Dennis Quinn and Rob Carmigiani, and seniors John Spaltore and Pat Costello, the Bears are looking forward to a wonderful campaign. Ursinus was gifted this year with a group of freshmen who will definitely add some scoring punch and defensive stability to an already young squad. Freshman Buddy Hollingsworth, Jay Jackson, Matt Horrar and Rob Woodruff are all promising prospects in addition to sophomore transfer Marty Owens. With only five seniors on the squad, much responsibility will fall on these young players to help stabilize the team.

This past weekend, Ursinus ventured to Lynchburg, Va. to compete with Maryville, Tennessee, Lynchburg and Dickinson. In its first game against Tennessee, Ursinus was stunned with a 4-0 defeat at the hands of a well disciplined squad. Ursinus then met Dickinson (which lost to Lynchburg) in the consolation match. After a number of injuries, including goalkeeper John Spaltore, Ursinus ended with a 1-1 double overtime tie. Ursinus went ahead with approximately 5:00 remaining in the second overtime, when Horrar broke through the defense and neatly lofted the ball over the goalkeeper's head. Dickinson came back two minutes later with a controversial goal in which U.C. goalie Dave Anentz was seemingly shoved into the net while holding the ball. At the end of 110 minutes of play, nothing was settled.

With its record now at 0-1-1, U.C. looks toward next week's games. The Bears will travel to Western Maryland on Tuesday, September 13, and then will play its home opener on Saturday, September 17, against Franklin and Marshall.

Gridders From P. 5

hopes to increase upon his total 27 points from a year ago. He was perfect on extra-point attempts and was 6-9 in field goal tries. This helped him get Honorable Mention All Conference.

The 1988 team looks to have enough talent to be a winner. Hopefully the more experienced players can help lead the young members of the team so that they can erase all of the question marks.

The answers will start coming this Saturday when the Bears host the Georgetown Hoyas. This will Bon Fire Tonight!

The first bon fire 'in what must be years' will be part of the celebration tonight to kick off the opening season of fall sports here at Ursinus. Head football coach Steve Gilbert, his staff, the team members, cheerleaders and even the Ursinus Bear will lead this year's pep rally—an event for everyone to attend. According to the college's new Sports Information Director, Dave Sherman, the pep rally is only one of many events planned for this year—in hopes to maintain college enthusiasm and support of the athletic teams.

Tonight, a panel of judges will select and award the "most spirited group" of participants. Let's begin the year in the correct fashion! 10:00 p.m. TONIGHT! at the site of the old tennis courts.

Sergeant Grizz Sez: The Bear Facts Are:

NOTE: The Bear Facts is an ongoing report of events and incidents in which the Ursinus Security Department and its officers become involved on campus and within the Residential Village. Each week the column will feature some incidents which have taken place the prior week that are of interest to the entire college community. It is not the intent here to embarrass anyone—we just report The Bear Facts.

September 2, 1:20 a.m.: A student reported a suspicious looking character to security. The character went first into Bomberger Hall's front door and then into Old Men's dormitory. The Security officer finally caught up with the culprit on the second floor of Reimert where his roommates identified him as a student. If the student had had his Ursinus I.D. in his possession, it would have saved him possible embarrassment.

September 3, 1:30 a.m.: After becoming belligerent, three uninvited and unregistered male guests were ordered by a college official to leave Ursinus property. All three received letters of warning cautioning them that if they return to campus, they would be arrested for trespassing.

September 4, 10:55 p.m.: An Ursinus security officer played an important role in the arrest of a hit and run driver. While patrolling, the officer heard a noise that sounded like a vehicle colliding with something on Main Street. Two traffic signs were knocked flat and the automobile was seen traveling west on Main Street at a high speed. After following the vehicle until it turned into a driveway and parked, the officer then notified the Collegeville police.

September 5, 12:30 p.m.: An officer offered assistance to a limping female student. She explained that she had been walking barefoot behind the Quad and thought she had slivers of glass in her foot. She was directed to the infirmary and the nurse on duty was called. (NOTE: Sergeant Grizz suggests that no one walk around barefoot. One never knows what one could step in or on.)

The Collegeville police are in receipt of a complaint of a missing loft from a room in Beardwood. The student had received permission from the Office of Student Life to leave the loft in her room over the summer. When she returned to campus on August 28th, the loft was missing. (NOTE: The Student Handbook states that the college shall not be directly or indirectly liable during the academic year or during vacations, for the loss or theft of any personal property of students or their guests.)

Tuition Hikes Cause Concern

(CPS)—The price students pay to attend college has increased faster than the general inflation rate for the eighth year in a row, the College Board says, and many students say they'll have to scramble to find the money.

"My parents pay for my tuition," University of Virginia senior Susie Bruce said. "My mom is a nurse, and she's working extra shifts until I graduate to pay for my tuition."

"I know it's going to hurt me," said University of Illinois junior David Dunphy, whose tuition rose $306, from 2,092 to 2,398. "I'll be able to make it. A lot of my friends won't. I'll work in a record store or McDonalds."

"I worked 20 hours a week last year. I don't know how I'll be able to work more, but you do what you can to make up the difference."

The average student will pay 7 percent more for tuition and fees this academic year, the College Board found in its annual tuition report released in mid-August. Inflation, as measured by consumer prices, was 4 percent since last fall, 1987.

Prices for the average public four-year school increased an average of 4 percent, to $1483. At private four-year schools, tuition and fees shot up an average of 9 percent, to 6,457.

At two-year colleges, the average charge for tuition and fees rose 5 percent, to $750, at public schools, and 9 percent, to $4,415, at private institutions.

The good news, noted Bob Aaron of the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges, is that such jumps are smaller than the double-digit increases of the early 1980s.

"The trend is a decrease in the increase."

Whatever the trend, it hasn't kept students out of class. While official numbers aren't out yet, many campuses received record numbers of applications for the fall term, indicating that Americans are willing to pay more for college.

"People want to get a college degree and will pay whatever it takes to get it," said Bruce Carnes, deputy undersecretary of education who believes colleges are charging more because they know their consumers—students—can simply turn around and borrow more from the federal government. "Under those circumstances, there are no constraints (on price)."

University of Rochester researchers, for example, determined that lowering tuition doesn't necessarily draw more students to campus.

"There was no evidence that a tuition drop would improve market position," research consultant Beverly Joyce said.

"The public doesn't view shopping around for college like (it does) for other consumer items," said Rochester Vice-President Jim Scannell. "They're looking for quality, and they're not willing to trade that off."

"Investing in a college education for oneself and one's children may well be the second largest consumer purchase, second only to buying a house," said Kathleen Brouder of the College Board.

Tuition increases, of course, varied from school to school. Public schools like the University of Michigan and George Mason University, for instance, increased tuition 12 percent. Penn State and Michigan State raised tuition by 9.7 percent while the University of Virginia raised tuition about 7 percent.

Orange Coast Community College students will pay 51 percent more for tuition this year: the California school raised last year's $100 tuition to $151. Students at Blackfeet Community in Montana will pay $1,305, $370 more than last year.

California's Loma Linda University, a private school, raised its tuition by almost 6 percent this year.

That increase, however, seems moderate compared to other small private colleges. The College of Idaho raised its tuition 31 percent, from $6,150 last year to $8,032 this year. Stevens Institute of Technology in New Jersey raised its tuition $1,475 to $12,025.

Some schools didn't raise their prices, and some even reduced them. New York's Sullivan County Community College, for one, reduced its tuition from $1,510 to $1,430. The University of Mississippi held its tuition at $1,780. Eastern Arizona College kept its tuition at $500.

A few campus observers think such prices have hit a limit.

"There's a feeling out there among the electorate that college costs are going beyond their reach," said Jennifer Afton of the Education Commission for the States.

Afton and others believe states, banks and governments will have to develop pre-payment tuition plans, savings bond programs and other ways to keep students registering in the future.

They think tuition may keep climbing faster than inflation in the near future. "I don't have a crystal ball," Aaron said, "I can't project what costs will be. But I don't see anything on the horizon that will change anything."

This year's increase has not changed Reagan administration criticism that prices are rising

Cucumber, anyone? During our brief summer interlude Lucinda asked that question almost as frequently as the only relevant question: What's your sign? Yes, Lucinda La Greengrocer did the vegetable scene (Not literally darlings, although the temptation crossed my mind often). Move over Joe Carcione, RIP, Lucinda's here with her tip for the day!

Have you ever shopped for tomato plants? And, excepting all plant physiologists out there, have you ever thought of a tomato as a sexual object—as in being male or female? Well, apparently some seedy tomato growers have. When in the market for those juicy red orbs, there are a few things of which one should be aware. A mere Beefsteak tomato does not a salad make, especially when one could be savoring the likes of a juicy Golden Gal. And why wait around 'til August for a tasty, but small Italian tomato, when you can have an Early Girl in June? Lucinda personally delights in larger, more substantive fruit such as the Better Boy. And finally, when making that fresh garden salad for two, having a Big Boy is an absolute must...that is until those Hothouse growers perfect the Real Man. Virgo female undoubtedly will be the first in line on that historic occasion.

More so than any other sign, Virgo woman can be described as a hidden treasure miserly hoarded in a nearly impenetrable safe. Her emotions are the same as those of other women, but she keeps them under a tighter rein. Her secret longings are likely to remain that way. She tends to be rather serious and dignified, and you won't find her boasting about her achievements. Her energy is enough for two or three women; she will tackle any task with the conviction that no one can perform it more efficiently than she. She also has no illusions about sex and wishes everyone would not magnify its importance. Patience is her premise in relationship building, but once you've broken ground, she won't stop until you've erected a tower!

WEEKEND FORECAST:

ARIES: Weather will be perfect for water sports! Invite the whole gang over and make it a team effort.

TAURUS: Avoid horny toads...you may get warts where you don't want them.

GEMINI: This is your time to score! So be prepared and on the lookout this weekend with your telescope for celestial arrangements indicating the likelihood of a play of the big bang theory.

CANCER: Your love-sting is lethal to all admirers. Appreciate your power and harness it, lest your sensuality kill a budding relationship.

LEO: Don't get caught in the stampede to the meat market. Dare to stray from the herd to other grazing territory. The change will be worth the move.

VIRGO: Currents and water temperature are ideal for mass spawning upstream; so go get out of your crevice and check out the school.

LIBRA: Forego the symphony this weekend and spend some time with that special someone. You'll soon be making your own music.

SCORPIO: Watch for the seventh inning stretch at the ball game. Stick with hot dogs and buns, and avoid the beer—a double header's scheduled for Saturday: you'll need your strength.

SAGITTARIUS: Come out of your shell! There's plenty of fun to be had at the beach. Weather may be stormy, but not to fret—tidal waves are heading your way.

CAPRICORN: Weekends were made for stalking, but be wary of the prey you lure back to the den. She/he might not have a feast of the flesh in mind.

AQUARIUS: Success will outweigh failure this weekend. Two choices hanging in the balance? Don't be prudish—take them both!

PISCES: No eclipse of the heart heading in your direction. The Milky Way is full of moons and comets just waiting to be explored by your gaze.

NEXT WEEK: Gemini woman and a licentious weekend forecast.

Tuition From P. 7

mostly because colleges are waste-ful, because they need to support bloated bureaucracies, because too much aid is available to students and because high tuition makes them seem prestigious.

"We are, of course, not at all surprised by these increases," Carnes said. "We have stated that, so far as we can see, the price of college is going to go up at this rate forever. We don't see anything in the immediate offing to exert very much restraint on these increases."

College officials argue they need more money to replace aging facilities, increase faculty salaries to stop professors from leaving for higher-paying jobs in private industry and to provide more financial aid for low-income students.

Campuses need to get the money from students, moreover, because state and federal governments generally have cut the amount of money they appropriate to colleges.
