Alumni Return for Homecoming Celebration

BY STEVEN CHOI

it's also an Ursinus 'family' event." When Billie McBath of the class of 1951 was asked what she thought of the Homecoming festivities, all she could say was, "Well, it's...terrific!"

The brothers of Delta Mu Sigma held a different event to spice up Homecoming. As a fundraising activity for the fraternity, they sponsored the destruction of an old car, which belonged to brother Scott Manz. The donations were one dollar for two swings of the sledge, and the fraternity came away with a sizeable profit.

In the Homecoming football game, Ursinus shut out Gettysburg 20-0, and Megan Chmiel of Tau Sigma Gamma was elected Homecoming Queen during half time.

One of the more "family" oriented events was the Dr. Scuss readings given in front of the Olin building. There were grandmothers, grandfathers, and their grandchildren sitting on the steps listening to the readings. The stories were read by Keith Strunk's Oral Interpretation class.

That evening, the fraternities held off-campus formal events at nearby restaurants and banquet halls. The dinner/dances have been a long-standing tradition among the Ursinus fraternities. Unfortunately, the sororities were in the midst of pledging and missed out on the evening's festivities.

Ursinus College held its annual Homecoming festivities Saturday, October 19, 1991. The day was a great success, a time when Ursinus students and alumni could come together to simply celebrate. There were a plethora of events held throughout the day, including the football game, the Homecoming Queen selection, the field hockey game, the Bear Pack Run, Dr. Scuss readings, and much more. The best turnout, however, was at the tailgating in parking lot "B" behind the tennis courts.

During the tailgating, organizations came together to celebrate. Some groups ran activities, ranging from Delta Mu Sigma's "car bash" to Alpha Phi Omega's mascot "Archie" (a Schnauzer with a blue sweater embroidering the fraternity's letters). When asked about tailgating, Todd McGowan of Alpha Phi Omega replied, "I think that Ursinus should let the fraternities tailgate more often. Maybe again in the spring because there is always a great turnout and

Phi Beta Kappa Charter Approved for Ursinus

FROM COLLEGE
COMMUNICATIONS
Special To The Grizzly

The national Council of Phi Beta Kappa has approved a new chapter of the academic honorary society at Ursinus College. The new chapter, was officially announced at the society's triennial meeting on Sunday morning, Oct. 20.

In an official report to the society, the Phi Beta Kappa Committee on Qualifications said Ursinus attracts "a good student body with a goodly leaven of quite able students." It added that the College provides "a sound liberal arts program," is an institution where both faculty and administration are "student-focused," and that its faculty is committed to teaching, while also being dedicated to scholarly work. "Ursinus College has a healthy intellectual atmosphere," the report said.

"I am pleased and proud that the diligent efforts of our Phi Beta Kappa faculty have been rewarded with this high honor," said Ursinus President Richard P. Richter on hearing the news.

The members of the Ursinus College faculty who hold Phi Beta Kappa keys have long sought the establishment of a Phi Beta Kappa Chapter on campus. Technically, Phi Beta Kappa chapters are sponsored, not by colleges, but by members of Phi Beta Kappa who serve on the faculties of those colleges.

Colleges and universities which wish to establish a Phi Beta Kappa chapter must go through a three-year application and approval process. The Ursinus application filed in early 1988 was one of 48 received by the society, headquartered in Washington, D.C., and one of seven of the original applicants chosen for further consideration.

In 1989, the Ursinus Phi Beta Kappa members seeking the chapter submitted to the Society's Committee on Qualifications a 110-page report containing comprehensive information about the College. Two members of the Phi Beta Kappa Qualifications Committee conducted an on-site review of Ursinus in February of 1990, and in May recommended to the Phi Beta Kappa Senate that the Ursinus application be approved. The Phi Beta Kappa Senate met and voted in December 1990 to recommend approval as well. Then began the long wait until this October, when the Society Council was to hold its triennial meeting.

The Council consists of representatives of each of the society's 240 chapters. An affirmative vote on the part of two-thirds of the chapters is required for final approval of the chapter. Ursinus representatives in Washington for the council meeting were not allowed to be present for the vote, but were told afterwards that the Ursinus application was "overwhelmingly" approved by the Council.

Leading the Ursinus effort to obtain a Phi Beta Kappa chapter was Dr. Jeffrey W. Neslen, associate professor of mathematics, a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Hobart College.

Besides Neslen, other current Ursinus faculty who are members of Phi Beta Kappa, and their undergraduate institutions, are A. Curtis Allen, professor of biology, College of Wooster; Lisa Tremper Barnes, director of the Berman Museum of Art and adjunct professor of fine arts, University of Richmond; Catherine A. Chambliss, professor of psychology, Yale University; Nancy Hagelgans, professor of mathematics and computer science, Goucher College; C. Dallett Hemphill, assistant professor of history, Princeton University; Jeffrey A. Hughes, assistant professor of biology, Whitman College; Richard D. King, assistant professor of history, Michigan State University; Bernard F. Lentz, professor of economics and business administration, Oberlin College.

Also, Margaret L. McMahon, lecturer in psychology, State

University of New York at Buffalo; Elizabeth Moore, lecturer in politics, Smith College; David H. Mill, assistant professor and reference librarian, Bucknell University; William E. Rosenthal, associate professor of mathematics, SUNY Buffalo; Martha Takats, professor of physics, Wellesley College; Victor J. Tortorelli, associate professor of chemistry, Manhattan College; Jon Volkmer, assistant professor of English, University of Colorado at Denver; Margaret Whittaker, lecturer in Biology, University of Delaware; and John Wickersham, classical studies, University of Pennsylvania.

Two members of the faculty who retired in recent years, political scientist F. Donald Zucker, and chemist Charles Levesque, also are members of Phi Beta Kappa.

Phi Beta Kappa was founded in 1776 by undergraduates of the College of William and Mary. A secret society until 1831, it first admitted women in 1875. Membership in the society is based on high academic achievement.

On October 16, a man drove his pickup truck into a Killeen Texas restaurant, emerged from the car and opened fire on the employees and patrons. Twenty-two people were killed. After police arrived and wounded the man, he then killed himself. "This made the total death count 23, the worst mass shooting ever in the United States." Police Chief Francis L. Giaiomozzi said no motive for the shootings are known.

Clarence Thomas will be sworn in as Supreme Court Justice sometime after the funeral of Natalie Cornell Rehnquist, wife of Chief Justice William Rehnquist. Two oaths must be taken before the position becomes official, one taken by all government officials and a judicial oath. The first ceremony took place Friday afternoon at the White House. The second is being altered for Chief Justice William Rehnquist.

The Senate intelligence committee will vote on Friday October 18 to confirm Robert M. Gates as director of central intelligence. Interviews with the committee showed that a majority, at least two democrats and all seven republicans will vote in favor of Gates. This leads officials to believe that the full Senate will do the same in a couple of weeks.

Due to a reduced Soviet military threat, NATO defense ministers supported a 50 percent reduction in nuclear bombs carried by warplanes in Europe. NATO minister also supported President Bush's decisions to eliminate all U.S. ground based tactical nuclear weapons in Europe. These reductions are expected to decrease NATO's nuclear arsenal by 80 percent, almost 2900 warheads.

The Ukraine refused to sign an economic treaty which was part of Mikhail Gorbachev's plans to rebuild the Soviet Union. The Ukraine was unhappy with several points in the treaty, mainly two dealing with preservation of a central bank and a single monetary system. Ivan Plushch, deputy chairman of the Ukraine parliament said the republic wanted to preserve economic ties with other republics but would not join any formal political or economic union with the old Soviet central government.

Two bombings occurred in Ruderpur, India killing forty-one people and wounding more than 140. The first bomb exploded in a large crowd gathered at a Hindu festival and the second went off fifteen minutes later outside the emergency room where victims were being treated. The first bomb killed thirty people and the second killed eleven.

Nephew of the deceased mob boss Angelo Bruno, Michael Grasso, filed bankruptcy for protection from his creditors for the Philadelphia Traffic Court building and the Health Department building he owns. Grasso stated this happened due to his inability to meet the payment schedules on loans involving $40 million in property.

Carol Keeman, a former Philadelphia police detective who sued the city for sex-discrimination was denied a disability pension by the city pension board. She claimed that the turmoil from the trial and the initial ill-treatment by a male supervisor left her psychologically unable to return to work. This disability pension would award her $2,137 a month, tax free, for life. Instead she received an "ordinary disability pension" which pays $1,065 a month.

Marietta Oscapinski was charged Thursday with unsworn falsification to authorities and making false reports to law enforcement authorities. These charges pertain to her accusations that a box of Kellogg's Raisin Bran her daughter was eating contained a piece of glass. Oscapinski's attorney stated "The position we're taking is that she wasn't lying, she jumped to a conclusion she shouldn't have jumped to. And once the story got rolling she just couldn't stop it."

This past weekend proved to be a successful Homecoming. The Ursinus community enjoyed a day filled with food, music, alumni and football. The evening of Homecoming was celebrated with many "off campus" Greek fraternity dances.

Gibson to Speak at Ursinus

FROM COLLEGE
COMMUNICATIONS
Special to The Grizzly

Is TV news really news, or is it "showbiz?" Or, is it a mixture of both? "Good Morning America" co-host Charles Gibson will discuss these questions in a special appearance at Ursinus College on Friday, Oct. 25. The public is invited to attend his speech, "When is News Entertainment?" which will begin at 7 P.M. in F. W. Olin Auditorium. Admission is free.

Gibson, whose face is familiar to millions of Americans who watch the weekday morning news show on ABC (WPVI Channel 6, Philadelphia), has been co-host of "Good Morning America" since 1987. Prior to that, he was ABC News' chief correspondent at the House of Representatives for six years.

In recent months, Gibson has anchored "GMA's" coverage of both the 1991 Moscow summit and the 1990 Washington summit between president Bush and Mikhail Gorbachev. Last year he celebrated Thanksgiving with U.S. troops in Saudi Arabia, broadcasting live for a week prior to the outbreak of the Gulf War. HE also interviewed Ronald Reagan for a special series about the former President's life and legacy.

Homosexuality is a subject that sparks deep emotion and can bring out strong feelings either good or bad in both the students and faculty of the Ursinus campus. Is there a need for the Gay and Lesbian Alliance on this campus? That seems to be the question that has come about as a result of all the posters that the campus was bombarded with on October 11th. The letter that was sent to the student body also raised some questions. As junior Ralph Handy said, "I was astonished by the letter, I feel they contradicted themselves by not signing the letter, and then saying that they were coming out of the closet. They also said to contact a faculty member, but they did not say who."

The GALA constitution went before SAC to be passed on Wednesday October 16th and a decision is still pending. Some problems that were addressed at this meeting were how the club was going to be an active part of the Ursinus community, but remain anonymous. As a clause in the constitution, GALA members want to be anonymous and students that are interested would

Charles Gibson, host of "Good Morning America."

Other recent Gibson assignments have included a two-week sojourn in Belfast, Northern Ireland; a series on American "Masters" William L. Shirer, Helen Hayes and George Kennan, former U.S. Ambassador to the Soviet Union; and a PBS documentary on compulsive gambling.

On Capitol Hill, Gibson covered Tip O'Neill and the Democrats' handling of President Reagan's legislative agenda. As a general assignment correspondent for ABC News from 1977 to 1981, he reported on a broad spectrum of major national news, including investigations for the CIA and various economic stories.

Gibson, who lives in New Jersey, was born in Evanston, IL, and grew up in Washington, D.C. He is a graduate of Princeton University, and took his first job in broadcasting as a Washington producer for RKO Network in 1966. IN the 1970s he worked at television stations in Lynchburg, VA., and Washington, D.D., and with a syndicated news service, Television News, Inc. (TVN) before joining ABC News in 1975. One of his first assignments with ABC was covering Gerald Ford's presidential campaign. From 1976 to 1977 he was an ABC White House correspondent.

His appearance at Ursinus is part of the College's Arts and Lecture series.

GALA Seeks Recognition

have to be channeled through a faculty advisor, Dr. Oboler. The committee was trying to determine how they were going to plan events that would involve the whole campus if the members were to be anonymous. One GALA did not want the officers of the club to be listed in the student directory because they were worried about being harassed by other students and the surrounding community. One of the members of the committee asked them if they realized the low opinion of their student peers that they held. This GALA member felt that there is widespread homophobia on this campus and that this campus is just not ready for GALA. Another problem that was addressed was that the GALA constitution stated that alumni could also be eligible to join, but both the committee and GALA seemed to agree to drop this clause.

The members of the GALA that were present at the SAC meeting have done their research and have talked with other groups on campuses in this area. They have attended conferences and have worked with PRISMA on how to go about starting a club. The objectives of the club outlined in the constitution include: having a social outlet for the homosexual population on campus, give emotional support and counseling within the group about the personal issues of being a homosexual, sponsor activities to promote greater self-awareness, and to heighten awareness and combat homophobia within the Ursinus community.

Student reaction across the campus has been diverse, from "I am against homosexuality" to "I am confused and do not know what to think." One sophomore who wished to remain anonymous commented, "It offends me, gay and lesbian acts are private, and I do not approve of the public organization such as GALA that Ursinus would support."

Now it is up to SAC to decide if there is a need for a GALA and if the constitution should be passed. They are debating as to whether the campus will benefit from the organization or if its confidentiality clause will cause too many problems with student membership. As one sorority pledge said, "I think it is a good idea if they realize the pressure they will be receiving from the Ursinus student body. But they do need a support network just like anybody other club on campus."

Thomas Confirmed to Supreme Court

BY ERIKA COMPTON
Of The Grizzly

After the closest Senate vote since 1888, Justice Clarence Thomas was inducted into the Supreme Court as the 106th Justice and first black conservative, on October 18, 1991.

Thomas was accused by Anita Hill of sexual harassment which occurred over ten years ago. Hill, who worked as Thomas's assistant several years ago, told people at the University of Oklahoma that she was "trying to do my duty as an ordinary American citizen."

Hill has claimed that she was the target of sexual harassment while Thomas was her superior at the Department of Education and Equal Employment Opportunity commission. Hill says Thomas asked her for five to ten dates, and talked graphically about his sexual prowess and pornography.

Thomas outright denied these accusations, and said he never had a romantic interest in Hill. He even went so far as to say that the proceedings were a "high-tech" lynching.

Then why did Hill change jobs—following Thomas to the EEOC? She said it was because she was scared she was going to lose her job at the Department of Education. Supporters of Thomas declared that Hill would still be able to keep her job. After Thomas left the Department of Education, Hill says the harassment stopped.

However, Hill continued to contact Thomas even after she left the EEOC and assumed a teaching position at Oral Roberts University in Oklahoma. She apparently called Thomas ten times in the three year period between 1984 and 1987, according to phone logs. She also contacted him two other times, once when he was delivering a speech, and also to ask for a business reference.

One thing working in Hill's favor was that she had no motivation for making up a story. "It would have been more comfortable to stay silent," Hill stated. "But when I was asked by a representative of this committee to report my experience, I felt I had to tell the truth. I could not keep silent."

Some people are questioning Hill as to why it took her ten years to come forward about the accusations. However, Hill did not make the claims public herself. On October 6, she alleged in an FBI report—accidentally leaked to the press—that Thomas sexually harassed her. The White House

U.S.G.A. MINUTES

October 2, 1991

Judd announced the procedures for filing Committee Reports. All U.S.G.A. members should turn in the date and attendance of the meeting they attended along with a brief summary of the meeting.

All U.S.G.A. announcements will be posted on the bulletin board outside of the U.S.G.A. office in lower Wismer. Announcements will include all schedules and reports of meetings, minutes from previous U.S.G.A. meetings and any other important information.

COMMITTEE REPORTS:

The Health Service Committee is trying to revise the Ursinus Health Program. In about a year from now, the Infirmary will close, and a selected group of physicians will be serving students upon illness. Students will be able to choose from eight to ten physicians and decide which one practice they would like to attend. The Committee will be evaluating physicians at their place of practice, in order to determine which physicians will be most beneficial to Ursinus students. The evaluation process will begin this week on Tuesday, October 8, at 5:30 P.M. If anyone is interested in evaluating doctors, please see Ellen or Gina.

Campus life met and discussed pledging proposals.

The Student Activities Committee (SAC) allocated $1500 to WVOU for the year. The organizations that did not show up to receive their allocations at the last meeting include: The Grizzly, the Lacrosse Club, the Ski Club, the Psych Club, and KDK.

The Athletic Committee stated their accomplishments and goals for this school year. The Girls Field Hockey Team was approved to become part of the Patriot Conference. Football scores will be broadcasted on channels 3, 6, 10, and 29. Pamphlets for recruiting athletes were revised. The new scoreboard on the football field was donated by Coca-Cola.

The Wellness Committee meeting was canceled.

The subcommittee of Academic Council met to discuss the Academic Honesty Policy. Some changes need to be made concerning the Policy. About 200 surveys, processed by Dr. Gallagher, will be randomly distributed to students so they can express their opinions toward academic honesty.

One sophomore and one freshman representative are still needed for SAC which meets every Wednesday at noon in Wismer 103. Also one representative is still needed for Minority Affairs.

Many students are still complaining about Wismer food. The next Dining Hall meeting will be held Tuesday, Oct. 8, at 5:00 P.M. in the Faculty Dining Room. All members should attend. If anyone else is interested in attending, please inform Lynda Manz in RLO and let her know you will be attending.

WVOU held its introductory meeting. They discussed the idea of getting a small FM tower for about $5,000 to reach the college community. WVOU feels that it will get lots of advertisers and that more students will listen to the station.

Judd met with President Richter to discuss the never-ending parking problem. There still is a problem with night school parking. Night school students supposedly park in lots other than the ones selected for them. They need more restrictions. The parking issue also concerns the Main St. houses. Staff/Faculty parking behind the houses needs to be reevaluated.

NEW BUSINESS:

President Richter agrees with students that the Book Store is overpriced. A committee has been formed to look into other agencies to possibly take over the book store.

Mary Ellen DeWane would like to remind the freshman class that their help is needed to decorate the campus for Homecoming. Freshmen can contact Mary Ellen in the Alumni Office at Ext. 2202.

Sororities and fraternities are encouraged to sponsor events in the Lower Lounge. See Marc Appelbaum for more information.

was informed of the allegation on September 23, and Bush demanded an FBI investigation and "determined that the allegation was unfounded."

The vote on Friday was close, with Thomas winning the confirmation by a vote of 52-48. Thomas, a federal appeals judge was voted for favorably by 41 Republicans, and eleven Democrats. He will replace Justice Thurgood Marshall, the first black justice on the court.

Meanwhile, Anita Hill returned to her Oklahoma classroom and said she hoped her outcome would not stop other people from speaking out against sexual harassment at work. She commented, "I don't think they'll ever leave me alone."

October 16, 1991

Once again, Judd reminded U.S.G.A. members to bring their Committee Reports to Wednesday meetings. The reports include a brief summary and any minutes, agenda, or literature passed out at the meetings. If any literature needs to be copied, the copies can be made by Marc or Jae Hively in SAO.

COMMITTEE REPORTS:

Campus Life met last Tuesday and stated that sorority pledging is going well. They also looked at last semester's grade reports of guys' pledging. Pledging proposals for spring pledging must be turned in to Campus Life before Christmas. The idea of students renting college vans without chaperons was brought up at the meeting. The subject will be addressed at future meetings.

Student Activities Committee allocated $320 to WVOU. Ski Club and Senior Class requests are being postponed. The committee read over the Constitution of GALA. The Constitution must be approved before GALA can officially become an organization. SAC announced that a meeting to discuss GALA would be held on Friday, October 18.

J-Board gave warnings to KDK and Tau Sig for pledging incidents, one of which was alcohol related. A hearing will be held for a student that stole computer equipment from Bomberger.

Student Publications discussed the possibility of getting an answering machine and a larger screen for The Grizzly layout. The committee also discussed the budgets of The Grizzly, The Lantern, and The Ruby and The Grizzly's printing costs. The committee strongly feels that academic credits should be given to students with office/leadership positions of organizations such as The Ruby, Meistersingers, Band, and the Chorus.

The Dining Hall Committee decided on the subcommittees into which it would divide. Scott Smith took student suggestions.

At the last Wellness meeting, Dean Kane drew up a statement that all buildings on campus are to be smoke free. Also surveys will be distributed to students to see how they feel about the Heartland Selections.

The Academic Council will be updating the Academic Honesty Policy in the Student Handbook. They will be surveying selected students about the Academic Honesty issue.

The Arts and Lecture Committee discussed which speakers and entertainers they will bring in for Black History Month. The Arts and Lecture committee is divided into four subcommittees: Lecture Series, Creative and Performing Arts, Departmental Speakers, and Campus/Student Life. Arts and Lecture would like to commemorate the anniversary of The Discovery of America for the next two semesters. There will be art exhibits and various activities.

Alina suggested for Arts and Lecture to have an Ursinus Hall of Fame like area high schools do. Ursinus graduates that are now famous could be invited back to Ursinus.

Musser wants to have an on-campus festival of all international activities. Musser also wants to have a Chinese acrobatic dancer come to campus. A reminder that Musser activities are open to the entire campus. More people are needed to attend these events. Look for Ellen's article in next week's Grizzly concerning Musser activities.

The Wismer Renovation Committee's first proposal to renovate Wismer was not substantial enough to be acted upon. The proposal included ideas of moving the Book Store to Wismer and also getting a MAC machine. A second proposal will be made on Friday, October 18. More student input is needed.

The Health Services Committee has finished evaluating area physicians. Now the committee members and Beverly Oehlert will meet with Dean Kane on Tuesday, Oct. 22, in the early evening to decide on which physicians would be most beneficial to the students.

A sophomore representative is still needed for SAC. If anyone is interested please see Judd of any other U.S.G.A. officer.

CLASS REPORTS:

The senior class has $800 in its account. The class might be selling Medicine Bottles again before final exams begin. Tickets for the Senior Halloween Party on Thursday, Oct. 31, at Birchwood will be on sale Oct. 21-25. Tickets will cost $20 and will include open bar, hors d'oeuvres, and transportation. Buses will leave Reimert at 7:30 p.m.

The junior class made over $600 on their Bagel Bundles sale. Congratulations, Teri, on a job well done!!

The sophomore class needs more representation at U.S.G.A. meetings. Officers also need to think of some fundraisers.

The freshman class made a nice profit from their Popcorn sale. The next U.S.G.A. meeting is scheduled for Wednesday, Oct. 30, at 7:30 P.M. Candy, pumpkin seeds, apple cider, etc. will be served.

Respectfully submitted,

This Week in U.C. History...

BY KRISTIN WHITE
Of The Grizzly

Ursinus history this week included many large steps towards future modernization. This week in 1976, proposals for the Organization of Commuting Students began in order to provide commuters with representation in many campus societies such as the USGA and the Woman's Campus Council. This organization hoped to provide a way for commuting students to become more involved in campus activities.

In 1929 this week, an important revision of the school code took place. It had previously come to the attention of the administration that several secret fraternities had illegally formed on campus. After meeting with members of these groups, the administration changed the laws to read: "Students may organize religious, literary and other societies among themselves for mutual improvement, provided the constitution, laws and workings of the proposed society are approved by the Faculty and are at all times open to its inspection."

Outside of immediate campus life, the electrification of the Pennsylvania railroads created a great stir in 1929. The line from North Philadelphia to Manhattan was in its final stages, while completion from 52nd Street to Norristown was expected by the following year.

In 1913 this week, the Athletic Association voted unanimously to begin a soccer team at Ursinus, with the only other sports at this time being football and baseball. Under coach George Gay, the newly founded team would play against Yale, Harvard, Penn, Princeton and Haverford.

Also in 1913, the Schaff Literary Society sponsored its first freshman/sophomore essay writing contest. Students could win a first prize of ten dollars, a second prize of five dollars and a third prize of two dollars and fifty cents.

Editor's Note: As of publication, the group mentioned in the following article has not been approved by the Student Activities Committee or by the faculty. Their constitution is currently under review by SAC. This article was submitted to The Grizzly by the GALA organization.

BY MICHAEL CYR
Special to The Grizzly

Last week, the newly founded Gay and Lesbian Alliance began its first "visibility campaign" on campus. Letters were sent to all students, to introduce GALA to the student body. Similar letters were also sent to the faculty to elicit their support. And on Friday October 11, over four hundred National Coming Out Day fliers adorned most campus buildings. The message: Gays and Lesbians are a part of this campus, and there are more of us than you think!

The GALA will exist to serve several functions on campus. First, to provide a social outlet for gay, lesbian, or bisexual students. For example, the third Friday of every month, the Gay/Lesbian Student Union (GLSU) at Penn holds dances for the area's large gay student population, which we welcome anyone to attend with us. Second, GALA will locate, attend and perhaps sponsor, events to increase our own self-awareness. Our hope is to educate young gay men and women about the wonderful Gay Culture that exists in the world and to promote a feeling of self-worth and self-acceptance. Third, GALA hopes to act as peer counselors to students who are having difficulty accepting their sexuality.

Lastly, the GALA hopes to heighten awareness on campus, and to combat homophobia. Plans are already underway to bring speakers to campus and run workshops.

For students interested in contacting the GALA, we have formed a network of faculty contacts. Interested students can approach any of these contacts, who will pass your name and telephone number on to the

Modern Medical Imaging

BY NAIMISH PANDYA
Science Editor

Last Tuesday night, Brownback-Anders Premedical Society sponsored Dr. Harry G. Zegel as a guest speaker. Dr. Zegel has been appointed as the Vice Chairman of the Department of Medical Imaging, as well as the Director of its Radiology Residency/Fellowship Program at the University of Pennsylvania and Thomas Jefferson University. A graduate of Ursinus College (Class of 1971) and Thomas Jefferson University (Class of 1975), he is nationally known in the field of medical imaging.

Last Week he described the current technological advancements radiology has taken in the past decade. He briefly described how MRI (Magnetic Resonance Imaging) and CT scans (Computer Tomographic scans) provide physicians with enormous amounts of information that enables them to correctly diagnose the patient's ailment. Dr. Zegel showed exactly how an MRI works by describing the physics of the instrument and how it rearranges the chemicals in the body to provide a cross-sectional view of the body. Then one looks for abnormalities among the MRI's and the normal MRI's to determine the disease.

Dr. Zegel also discussed the valuable results given by angiography, which shows cross-sectional and longitudinal views of the blood flow in our circulatory system. This fascinating instrument actually shows the flow of blood on the computer, and one may be able to spot any fatty deposits that blocks the arteries. He also briefly discussed the effects of ultrasonography. Sound waves are emitted by this instrument, which flow into the body and reflect back when hit by a disturbance. The different frequencies of the sound waves are picked up by the computer, which then allows the physician to pinpoint the location of the disturbance.

Dr. Zegel appeared enthusiastic about his work, and was proud of the accomplishments of his field. He mentioned the fact that current medicine would be worthless if not for the valuable data obtained by medical imaging. He is on the cutting edge of radiology, and advised the premed students to work hard and be ambitious in order to achieve their goals.

Beware of Bad Moods

BY NAIMISH PANDYA
Science Editor

Have you ever noticed that the mood you are in is affected by the people that surround you? If you run into a grouchy person on a day that everything has gone right, you tend to be less enthusiastic and more concerned about your friend's worries. "Emotions are contagious," wrote the Swiss psychoanalyst Carl Jung. The new data depict moods as akin to social viruses, with some people having a natural ability to transmit them while others are more contagious to mood swings. Moods seem to perpetuate themselves by leading a person to do things that reinforce the feeling, no matter how unpleasant it may be.

The transmission of moods seems to occur instantaneously and unconsciously as one person mimics, for example, the facial expressions of another person. "Emotional contagion happens within milliseconds, so quick you can't control it, and so subtly that you're not really aware it's going on," said Dr. Elaine Hatfield, a psychologist at the University of Hawaii. The more emotionally expressive people are, the more apt they are to transmit their moods to someone they talk with, said Dr. John Cacioppo, a psychologist at Ohio State University. On the other hand, people who are easily affected by the moods of the others tend to unconsciously mimic someone who is highly expressive.

Women report being in negative moods about twice as often as men, according to Dr. Ed Diener, a psychologist at the University of Illinois, even though over all women say they are as happy as men. "One reason seems to be that women's moods tend to be more intense than men's," Dr. Diener said. "While they may have unhappy moods more often, they also report more intense joy than men, so it averages out about the same."

Emotions also pass from person to person the timing of the passage. It appears that a feeling of harmonious interaction between two peoples is achieved when they synchronize their moods, and this

The Vision of Science Through Art

COMPILED BY ERIC BLEICKARDT

The Berman Museum of Art presents "At That Moment....I Began" and "Scales and Balances: A History of Development" from October 22, 1991 to January 5, 1992 in the Upper Gallery.

The coalescence of research, philosophy, the artist's innate feelings and the study of Zen painting led Liz Munro in the creation of "At That Moment....I Began." She relates the formation of the Earth from a void, or black hole, through various higher levels of development, including humanity.

Liz Munro spent ten years developing the series. During this time, she studied scientific theories, facts, and used a variety of resources from the Franklin Institute to National Geographic magazine. Coupled with legends handed down over the centuries, she assimilated information and formed her own conceptualization, waiting for the elements and images for each work to come from her subconscious. She made each painting 'ala prima,' with no preliminary drawings or studies completed to direct the compositions. Liz Munro says that the title of the series, "seemed to embrace the essence of each individual canvase, and provide a common theme that would introduce the viewer to the entire concept of the series." The exhibit produces the thought provoking impact that the author intended for all viewers to experience and was first shown in Harrisburg, Pa. in May of 1987. Subsequent showings verified its success and broad appeal to all ages and intellects. Each painting is titled to reflect the stage of evolution, utilizing the latin roots ascribed to these events as written history and scientific analysis has defined them. The nine paintings in the collection are:
Noosphere - The world was a 'void,' or 'black hole'
Transfiguration - The "Big Bang"; the implosion of matter
Hydrosphere - Most of the earth's

Woman Fixing Her Hair?

BY PEPE BYRMON
Of The Grizzly

The modern art at Ursinus is not only limited to beautifying the outside of campus. Walk into the library and you will be greeted by the inspirational "Woman Fixing Her Hair," by Michael Price, which was donated by, guess who, Philip & Muriel Berman.

This Statue is perfect for the library. A more appropriate title for it, though, might be: "Woman Pulling Knowledge from Her Head" since that is what the statue appears to be doing. What better place for such a representation of the hardships mankind faces when attempting to retrieve past learning. Since the 'brary is the place where any actual learning might take place at Ursinus, it is only appropriate that such a tribute to the struggle of the student stands in the ever-helpful Myrin.

The statue, however, has more inner meaning than simply the grim reality of an 8:00 Spanish midterm the next day. Her grim expression, scant dress, and flip-flops frozen in a moment with arms upraised seems to cry "aren't you glad you use dial? Don't you wish everyone did?"

I mean the statue is that neat color of dark brown that overused, underwashed athletic socks turn after a game in the rain & mud.

So, yes, the newly retitled "Woman Pulling Knowledge from Her Head" stands as a testament both to the rigors of academic achievement and the merits of good personal hygiene. What better place for such profound art than the Myrin Library, the ultimate building of inspiration at Ursinus?

The Fisher King

BY SARA JACOBSON Arts and Entertainment Editor

What would you do if, at a fashionable bar in New York, your spouse was brutally gunned down before you in a senseless slaughter? Some people might react to such horror by going crazy and creating a fantasy world for themselves.

"The Fisher King" is the story of a man who suffers such a shock and the world he creates for himself. Robin Williams does a tremendous job as the Fisher King, seeking the Holy Grail (bet you didn't know the holy grail was in New York City), pursuing his true love from afar, and avoiding the evil red knight. Jack, played by Jeff Bridges, meets the Fisher King when Williams's character saves Jack's life from hoodlums who are trying to set him on fire. This is ironic because Jack used to work as a radio talk show host, and his radio show influenced the man who killed the Fisher King's wife.

Does this sound complicated? Well, it is. The rest of the movie is about Jack trying to make amends by helping William's character with his quests. At times the movie gets bogged down with its complicated plot, and that makes it hard to follow. It is, however, both funny and touching. Personally, I never would have guessed that a group of institutionalized people singing "I love New York in June" could be a happy ending. If you don't mind having to think about what you are watching and concentrating on understanding what is going on, then the Fisher King is a witty movie about reality, fantasy, love and happiness—and it is the movie for you.

Sleeping With the Enemy

BY ERIKA COMPTON News Editor

"Sleeping With the Enemy" is a movie that must be seen, even if you have already seen it. It stars the beautiful redhead Julia Roberts, Kevin Anderson, and Patrick Bergen and is filled with excitement and adventure.

The movie begins with the happily married couple beginning their life together in a house on the beach. However, Julia Roberts, who plays the upset wife, is not very happy with her husband, played by Patrick Bergen. He is overbearing, and makes her do everything a particular way. She must tell her husband every time she goes somewhere. At one time, he starts to beat her, and then forces her to have sex with him.

Finally, she gets tired of her husband's treatment of her, and decides to do something about it. She teaches herself how to swim, and one night while they are out on a boat with their friends, it begins to storm. Julia Roberts's character jumps from the boat and fakes her death. She is on the run from her husband, who will do anything he can to find her.

Eventually, she meets another man, and after a while becomes very close to him. Her husband has tracked her down, and begins to terrorize her. The ending is eventful, and full of drama and action. SO, come to Wismer this weekend to see "Sleeping with the Enemy."

Giggles Night Club Comedians

BY MELISA MILLER Of The Grizzly

On Thursday, October 17, comedian Sue Kolinsky performed at "Giggles" comedy club in the Wismer Lounge. Some of Sue Kolinsky's credits include hosting Short Attention Span Theater on the Comedy Channel, appearing on Comic Strip Live, and this fall she will be appearing on The Tonight Show. Touring for almost two years and working with a dead audience as well as a few hecklers, Sue handled herself perfectly and did not let anything rattle her. The Red and Gold Day students seemed to enjoy her performance and it helped to show them the other events that take place instead of just parties and drinking.

Kier, the rock impressionist/comedian, performed this past Saturday, October 19, in the Wismer Lounge. This event was sponsored by CAB and geared towards freshmen or people that did not have relatives coming up for homecoming. Kier's credits included playing at over 1,000 colleges coast to coast, performing with Reba McIntyre and the late Roy Orbison, and he was also nominated nine times in the past few years for Campus Entertainer Awards. His impressions started with older singers such as Neil Young and James Taylor, and continued with the Beatles, Prince, Bruce Springsteen, and ended the show with U2's "Where the Streets Have No Name." Everyone that attended enjoyed themselves and some went up afterwards to talk to Kier. As Junior Christian Loc (who attended both shows) commented, "Both performers were excellent and very talented, it was just a shame that the audience was not as responsive to their performances."

Harassment Response

To the Editor:

I read with concern Megan Mendte's article regarding the behavior of construction workers on the LSB project.

The College does not condone verbal abuse of students or staff members by anyone. We make this clear to the construction crews prior to the start of each project and regularly remind all of our staff members of the same policy.

The heads of the two construction crews working on LSB have received copies of Ms. Mendte's article and been reminded that the College will not tolerate this type of behavior. I ask that any student who is subjected to this type of verbal abuse bring this to my attention immediately so that I can take further action.

Assistant Opinions Editor

"The older I become, the more I realize that men and women are like apples and oranges!" my boss said in response to a comment made concerning her somewhat annoying, often difficult husband. Being an idealist of sorts, I try to cling to the notion that there exists between men and women a bond which makes them either both apples or both oranges. As biology illustrates, men and women are genetically different, separated by one differing chromosome pair. Yet, because men and women are both human beings, we all share some essential similarities such as we need love and seek happiness in each other. Therefore, because men and women often pursue each other in order to obtain happiness, it is necessary for both sexes to appreciate rather than disparage their differences.

I have lost count of the times I have heard myself (I am certainly guilty) and other women remark on the lack of quality males on campus. Another common complaint is that "all of the good ones are taken" when in reality it is just that the "good ones" qualities are just more noticeable because of their current relationship. Often, I think that men and women are too hard on each other and want members of the opposite sex to live up to the impossible standards of the "superman" or "superwoman". For men, this "superwoman" may include expecting a woman to look good at all times, act feminine, and also be educated in the game of football. Women, on the other hand, many times want a "superman" who is the perfect mixture of virility and sensitivity. While these generalizations may vary for each individual, there is a definite unwritten code that exists which makes men and women unsure of where they fit within the guidelines.

Often, instead of recognizing the differences between the sexes as positive aspects of male/female relations, men and women forget the distinctions in their backgrounds and depreciate each other. Psychology tells us that men and women are socialized differently from birth which can be one main reason why men and women act so dissimilarly. Somewhere in my past I traded my Nerf football for a more passive game of house with my sisters. Therefore, the fact that I have recently begun learning the rules of the game is a big deal for me since it was not part of my upbringing. For my guy friends who grew up with football, the game is not as big a deal. Because of this difference in our backgrounds, guys often laugh at my seemingly dumb question of why the ball is started on the twenty yard line when it has been downed and jokingly ask me "do you pick your teams by mascot or uniform color?" While I know that they are joking, I cannot help feeling defeated by their attitude especially when I've given up my favorite television show for

Monday night football. Similarly, women want men to be more open and sensitive in relationships when men most likely grow up repressing their emotions. Many times I have teased a guy for expressing emotion without thinking about how hard it might have been for him to do. It is these differences and the way that they are treated by both sexes that make men and women appear to be fruits of different trees.

The way to remedy the situation is not as difficult as the problem appears to be. Communication is one major factor. Many times, men and women spend more time talking at each other rather than to each other. Society's constant reminder of how greatly the sexes differ also works to promote communication blocks by making us feel like aliens from separate planets. Appreciation rather than belittlement is also another great factor which promotes stereotypes between men and women. If men and women refrained from stating that "all males/females are alike" both sexes could try to look at each person individually and in a more positive light. Also, if society's tendency to socialize men and women from birth lessened, we might find ourselves without some of these existing problems. By appreciating what we do have and by not creating impossible standards, we may realize how much we do have in common or at least realize why we are deficient in the areas we are.

Dining Turf

BY KATIE JONES
Of The Grizzly

What if you took all of APE's tables, plus brothers and moved them into the Wismer alcove? APO has decided to switch their dining location with Tau Sig and sit adjacent to POD. Sig Rho and Sig Nu are now greeting the feasting community in Phi Psi's spot. Demas and the swim team eat with O'Chi. Delta Pi in APes, Phi Psi at Delta Pi, Beta Sig, along with KDK have moved to eat with the dining hall staff next to the tray bussing line.

The thought of these changes may make one laugh, cry, become disgusted, or shocked by its very ludicrousness. But, this is the point I'm trying to get across. The very fact that this scenario seems so strange should be an embarrassment to us all. Some may say, "hold on, this is ironic, here is the president of Omega Chi ragging on the very practice which she and her sorority sisters enjoy everyday. I know, I too am at fault—WE ALL are at fault.

Wismer is more than a dining establishment. I'd like to go even further to say that it sadly represents the very essence of Ursinus social life. Wismer seating has been the same as long as I can remember. As a freshman, mealtimes can be a dreaded activity until you figure out where you can and should eat a Crabby Joe. Here is a question to my Greek readers—what happens when an outsider has sat down at YOUR tables before your group has arrived? I know that this situation has occurred to us all. What did you and your colleagues do? Probably you all make some comment like, "what the hell are they sitting here for?", "where are we going to sit?", "there is not enough room for all of us to sit together." As a freshman, I sat in the alcove, because there I would be free of dirty looks and feeling ostracized in a cafeteria of all places.

This is pathetic!!! This essay is not urging for Wismer liberation. This essay is not asking for E.O.S. rights (equal opportunity seating rights). I'm only imploring that we take a look at the system we have created. As a pledge, you look forward to the time when you have earned the right to sit at your fraternity or sorority tables. I just hope that this all is worth it. I pray that after graduation I will not find this socio-dining structure which has followed me from grade school to college. I wonder if the same holds true for the Ursinus faculty. Do they have their departmental "turfs" in the staff lounge? Does the language department eat far away from the others because they aren't speaking the correct language?

Surely, you all see that I am jesting greatly in this piece. I do, however, see that much can be said of the Wismer segregation we all have created. God forbid one does not have a place to sit in the back of the cafeteria.

Campus Memo

H U Z Z A H F O R H O M E C O M I N G : I can remember few Homecoming weekends more gratifying than this year's.

On Friday evening, we held a reception in the Berman Museum and dinner in Wismer for the President's Circle, made up of fall alumni, Board members, and friends who gave $1000 or more as a gift to the College in 1990-91. Their support helps Ursinus remain financially accessible to students. Also at the party were some senior students and some faculty members who won awards in 1990-91 or who hold endowed professorial chairs. Judging from the comments of those attending, I feel that the evening brought a new sense of Ursinus community to these key groups of people.

On Saturday, we seemed to have more alumni back on campus than ever. Alumni returned to attend Alumni Association meetings, to renew friendships with classmates, to visit with their former professors, to look over the improvements in the buildings and grounds, to compete against some of today's sports teams, and to see the Bears go against Gettysburg in football and against American University in women's field hockey. The good feeling around the campus, enhanced by victories in both contests, was palpable.

I spent much of the day in one-to-one conversation with alumni from near and far. A few of them:

—Bill Searfoorce, '66. He is now Very Reverend Matthew Searfoorce. Bill told me that when he graduated, he not only joined his wife's Russian Orthodox faith but also went to seminary in Leningrad and became a member of the priesthood.

Herman (Red's) Bassman, '36. Red's was the player who kicked the Ursinus Bears to our historic football victory over the University of Pennsylvania Quakers in 1934. A member of the Ursinus Hall of Fame for Athletes, he was on campus with other Hall of Famers to be recognized at halftime.

—John ('56) and Pat (Jones, '57) Hottenstein. John and Pat were one of many alumni couples who met on campus as students and married. We talked about John's work as a professor of communications at Syracuse University. He said that Syracuse is "downsizing" its academic operating budget by a hefty percentage because of the real and anticipated decline in enrollment. Pat was back in her hometown of Collegeville, where her mother still lives.

On Saturday evening, there was an urgent knock on our front door. Professors Jeffrey Neslen and Victor Tortorelli had just returned from the national Council meeting of Phi Beta Kappa in Washington D.C. The official results of the secret balloting would not be announced until Sunday morning. But they had learned on good authority that the Ursinus application for an active chapter of Phi Beta Kappa was approved.

What a moment of fulfillment for all those who worked so hard for recognition by this prestigious national academic society. The best and brightest Ursinus seniors now will receive the full recognition that their peers at other top colleges receive. It was a fitting climax to a great day.

In Defense of Harley

Dear Dave Brown,

This letter is a response to your piece in last week's "Opinions" section. I thought you exhibited extremely poor taste and it is my sincere hope that you were just trying to be funny, albeit unsuccessfully. However, since you submitted it in a serious and formal way, I am left with little choice but to take you seriously.

There are several reasons why I think your letter was in poor taste. Foremost, "Harley's Haven" may or may not be somewhat presumptuous at times, but Harley himself will be the first to admit that his column is primarily for entertainment. Secondly, I am not saying that criticism of a column is unacceptable, but discretion is advisable. Simply put, your letter was devoid of tact. Lastly, and what I feel most strongly about, I think people who are trying to contribute something to this campus deserve a little credit. Instead of ridiculing their efforts, perhaps you could offer suggestions for improvement. For example, you could improve your mastery of the English language.

The next time you decide to "rip" on someone, Dave, maybe you will think before you act. I do not know if you were just trying to be funny, but even if that is the case, I thought you came across obnoxious. If you want to criticize that strongly, be prepared to take it. Write your own column and say what you want instead of tearing someone else's down.

Sincerely,
Daniel Bubb

An Appeal for the Trees

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to an article published in the October 8th issue of the Grizzly entitled "What About Recycled Paper?" I agree with the author's point that a reason to recycle "is to reduce the volume of garbage sent to landfill." It is true more than half of our cities will exhaust their current landfills by the mid 90's and 90% of our rubbish is simply dumped in landfill sights and buried. This makes it obvious that there needs to be a major move towards recycling.

However, the paper recycling issue does NOT stop there. The author states "The recycled paper issue is not about saving trees... there is no shortage of trees." Well, in the words of the mighty LORAX and Dr. Suess (may he rest in peace) I feel compelled to "speak for the trees, for the trees have no tongues." I feel the recycling issue is 100% about saving trees.

One may be persuaded to believe there are plenty of forests left and that hopefully they are protected. But, in the 1950's and 60's private industries, having overcut their own land, looked to the U.S. Forest System and the Bureau of Land Management (who claim to manage the forestlands) for help. They agreed to allow these private industries increased cutting on all public unprotected forestlands far beyond long-term sustainable levels. Now the large timber companies are deforesting the U.S. at the fastest pace in our history. In fact, only about 5% of our nation's public uncut native forests are left and more are unprotected.

Now the timber companies are advancing on our National Forests with bulldozers, saws and axes. One may assume that our government would protect our National Parks and Forests, but our country's National Park System is in real trouble right now. Yellowstone...Yosemite...Mt. Rainier...The Grand Canyon— All the wilderness and wildlife in these parks are being destroyed by forest clearcutting.

The EARTHWORKS GROUP estimated that 1.5 billion trees are cut annually in the U.S. This is equivalent to 86 football fields a day. Furthermore, The Native Forest Council states that between 1950-80 the forested surface of the earth was reduced by 25. In California, trees are being removed at four times the replacement rate. The recycling issue has A LOT to due with saving trees!

It is time for us to stop being naive about this problem. We tend to abuse the land because it seems like a commodity belonging solely to us. Nothing could be more far from the truth. In the eloquent words of Chief Sealth, "All things are connected like the blood which unites one family... Man did not weave the web of life, he is merely a strand in it. Whatever he does to the web he does to himself." The interdependence between trees and humans and animal life is fundamental and simple. We require oxygen and produce CO2, trees and plants require CO2 and produce oxygen. Any significant loss in forested land directly affects the Earth's atmosphere for all forms of life.

Moreover, the forests are a remarkably balanced and beautiful ecosystem that mitigate global warming, provide abundant clean air and water, and offer a home to all wildlife. To continue to clearcut them needlessly is a hazard to this planet's life and a selfish act. Recycling is the answer!!

You do not have to go out and become an extreme activist to save some trees— although it wouldn't hurt! You do not need to wrap yourself around a tree to help save one. Recycling is easy and makes good sense. Making new paper from old paper uses 30-50% less energy than making papers from trees. As the article stated "Each American uses 600 pounds of paper annually." We all have to start changing our attitudes before we find ourselves tree-less. You can help reduce your personal paper intake by:

1. Recycle your computer and notebook paper on campus. OLIN, WISMER, CORSON, and MYRIN LIBRARY have dark-blue, beautiful paper recycling bins now!
2. Bring your newspapers to: A.K. Catagnus Inc. 1299 W. James St., Norristown 275-5328 "Paper of all descriptions"
3. Buy recycled paper and notebooks and look for the recycled symbol on products you purchase.
4. Bring your own bags to Clemens— or use your backpack.
5. Stop your useless junk mail by writing to: MAILING PREFERENCE SERVICE DIRECT MARKETING SERVICE 11 West 42nd St. P.O. Box 3861 New York, NY 10163-3861.

Request that your name not be sold to large mailing list companies.

6. Write on the front and back of all paper you use.
7. Take one napkin at Wismer, not 5-10!
8. Encourage your friends, family and profs to do the same! Plus join U.S.E.A.C. (Thursdays 6:30 in the Meditation Chapel or on the museum steps—if it's sunny!)

Doing something is better than nothing! Thanks!

HOW MUCH WE HAVE LOST!

The Northwest's temperate rainforest were once dominated by huge, healthy, douglas fir, cedar and spruce up to 2,000 years old. With the exception of a few isolated remnants, virtually all of these have been cut down. The remaining native forests in the Northwest are now largely 150 to 500 year old teenagers. These last remnants absolutely must be preserved and protected in their natural state.

Bears Blank the Bullets in Homecoming Game

BY LAURA ZOBEL
Sports Editor

With the season more than halfway over, the Bears currently post a 3-3 record. Last week, the Bears travelled to Baltimore, MD to face John Hopkins, which has a 3-3-1 record. John Hopkins dominated the game and soundly defeated the Bears 28-0. Hopkins held Ursinus to only 83 total yards rushing. This loss makes the Bears' road record 0-2. So far this year the Bears have only scored 3 points while on the road.

On Homecoming, the Bears avenged last week's loss by holding Gettysburg scoreless in a 20-0 victory. The offense came to life and out rushed the Bullets 277 yards to their 28 yards. Sophomore running back, Bill Sedgwick was the Bears' leading rusher with 37 carries for a total of 212 yards. Sedgwick broke the record for total yards rushing, set by Mark Garcia in 1983. Sedgwick is this week's Centennial Conference Offensive Player of the Week and he is also ECAC Division III South Offensive Player of the Week. Sophomore quarterback Matt Kennedy had a good day as he completed 6 out of 15 passes. Senior wide receiver Mike Cohen led the team in receptions with 4 for a total of 18 yards.

Defensively, the Bears effectively stopped Gettysburg's offense. The defense recorded 3 sacks for a total loss of 25 yards, including one by Junior defensive lineman Brent Baldasare for a loss of 10 yards. The Bears prevented the Bullets from moving the ball up field, by pressuring the quarterback and breaking up passes, including one by sophomore linebacker Brian Edens. Again penalties hampered the Bears' performance. Ursinus racked up 11 penalties for a total loss of 99 yards.

The Bears started strong by scoring on their first possession. The Bears' long scoring drive ended with Junior running back Dave Billitto's 5 yard touchdown run.

In the 2nd quarter the Bears continued to put the pressure on the Bullet's offense, and forced them to miss a 32 yard field goal attempt. With 11:31 left in the 1st half, Gettysburg fumbles a punt return, which Ursinus recovers on Gettysburg's 46 yard line. The Bears take advantage of this opportunity and increased its lead to 14-0. Kennedy ran the ball in from the 1 yard line for the touchdown.

In the 3rd quarter both teams were scoreless, but in the 4th quarter with :54 seconds left in the game, Thomas Mastrangelo rushes 2 yards for the touchdown, which sealed the Bears' victory. The defense continued to play well. Senior defensive back Todd Klinedinst intercepted a pass at the Bears' 19 yard line. Sophomore defensive lineman, Steve Worth recorded the Bears' 2nd sack for a 10 yard loss.

Next week, the Bears hope to improve their record to 4-3 when they meet F.D.U at home.

Cross Country Runs to Victory

BY DAVID WEISS
Of The Grizzly

On Friday, October 12, the men's cross country team traveled to compete with the Drew Invitational, featuring 12 teams. The men's team was very upbeat and enthusiastic in running on Drew's course, since it was the flattest and fastest course the team had run on all season.

Despite the muddy and wet conditions Friday's rainstorm brought to the area, the men's cross country team fought through these adverse conditions on Saturday, the day of the race. Thanks to the effort of all 6 men on the team, the Bears were able to capture first place. The Ursinus team finished with 32 points, outdistancing runner up Delaware Valley who had 55 points.

Flying to his first place finish of the season was Mike McMullin, with a time of 26:02. Mike outdueled teammate Joe Kershner, who finished right behind him in a time of 26:05. David Weiss fought off Drew's top runner in the last hundred yards of the race to capture third place for the Bears, in a time of 27:15. Good racing performances were turned in by Daniel Bubb and Brian Havrilla, whose 13th and 16th finish enabled the Bears to be crowned champions. Freshmen Ryan Savitz also contributed to the team's first place showing by placing 29th.

This Friday, the men's cross country team will try to race to victory again when they square off to race to victory again when they square off against Widener and Williamson Trade. If you would like to see the men's team in action, come out and see them this Friday at 3:30 P.M. Your support will be greatly appreciated.

Nick's NFL Notes

BY NICK BACCINO
Of The Grizzly

As the Philadelphia Eagles football season comes to its midpoint, it is time for me to take advantage of this off-week and play the role of critic. So I present to you the first Nick's NFL Notes Eagles Report Card.

QUARTERBACKS: This has been, no doubt, the biggest topic of discussion in these parts. Randall Cunningham began his season—and ended it—in Green Bay on opening day. Jim McMahon replaced him and played well—until he went down. Brad Goebel didn't set the world on fire, or even warm it up, but remember, he's still a rookie with many years ahead of him. The acquisition of Jeff Kemp last week should help tie together the QBs for the balance of the season. MID-TERM GRADE: C-

RUNNING BACKS: Where are they?!? When Cunningham went down, the Eagles needed somebody to take up the slack on offense, and so far, haven't gotten anyone to do just that. Head Coach Rich Kotite says he has what the Eagles need at running back, though many tend to disagree. The best day rushing for an Eagles' back was Heath Sherman's 89 yards in Tampa Bay. Come on, Rich, pick up someone—maybe local boy Paul Palmer, huh? MID-TERM GRADE: F.

RECEIVERS: These guys are probably the bright spot of the offense. Wide Receivers Fred Barnett, Calvin Williams, and Roy Green have done all they could do with what they have had at QB. The same could be said for the tight ends. Despite the loss to New Orleans last week, Keith Jackson had his best day of the season. Mickey Shuler is also very dependable receiving as well as blocking. MID-TERM GRADE: B.

OFFENSIVE LINE: They have been together for a few years now, but they're still making mistakes that shouldn't be made. Kotite wanted a more disciplined team than in the Ryan era, but the Eagles are on a pace to easily reach triple figures in penalties—most of which come from the O-Line. Rookie Antone Davis is an excellent lineman, but he's not ready to start. The leader here is Center Dave Alexander, but look for veteran Ron Heller to try to turn the line around. MID-TERM GRADE: C.

DEFENSIVE LINE: Incredible. Absolutely incredible. Starters Reggie White, Clyde Simmons, Jerome Brown, and Mike Pitts, as well as Mike Golic have compiled the most sacks in the league. Under new defensive coordinator Bud Carson, the line has come together for great performance after another, including an eleven-sack day in Dallas. MID-TERM GRADE: A+.

LINEBACKERS: Once again, a great group of players. Carson, who had the likes of Jack Lambert and Jack Ham in Pittsburgh's glory years of the 70's, has players such as Byron Evans and Seth Joyner leading the Eagles to the second-best rushing defense in the NFL. They're good defending the pass as well. MID-TERM GRADE: A-

DEFENSIVE BACKS: This is the weakest point of the defense, but they're not weak at all. Eric Allen has had another Pro-Bowl type season at cornerback and safeties Wes Hopkins, Andre Waters, and Rich Miano have played at the top of their games. The DB's have not been burned as much as in recent history, and to top it off, the Eagles lead the NFL in interceptions. MID-TERM GRADE: B.

SPECIAL TEAMS: Kicker Roger Ruzek has made 11 out of 13 field goal attempts (85%). Jeff Feagles and Rod Harris are among the NFC leaders in punting and punt returns, respectively. The Eagles, however, need a big play in this somewhere down the line—a blocked punt or a field goal, a kick return for a touchdown—to help them win a game. MID-TERM GRADE: B-

The Eagles have played through a lot of adversity already this year so I don't think they will be fazed by any other unexpected happenings. If Jim McMahon makes his expected return next week against San Francisco and stays healthy for the rest of the season, I think the Eagles will finish 9-7 and earn a playoff spot.

Field Hockey Strikes Back, Raises Record to 5-5-2

BY CLAIRE ANN ERFLE
Of The Grizzly

If you haven't yet gotten a chance to see our hockey team in action, now is definitely the time to do so. In the past two weeks the girls have played four extremely difficult games, but have proved that they truly possess what it takes to come out on top.

Here on October 9, psyche sheets that donned the message "Vaporize Villanova!" were strewn up and down our hockey team's bench. Another reminder on the psych sheet was to control "possession," and this is how the girls really won the game. Villanova scored the first goal of the game, but it was their only goal. Captain Toni Wenger tied the score with a beautiful shot from a short corner pass. it remained 1-1 and there was less than a minute remaining in the game. With twenty-four seconds in the game, Sophomore Alison Burns nailed in a shot that flew right over the goalie's head and into the goal. They beat Villanova 2-1, and evened out their record to 4-4-1.

The girls spent their Fall Holiday battling against Syracuse here on October 12. In a scoreless second half, Syracuse ended up winning 3-0.

A tremendous turnaround from the previous game, the girls may have reached the highlight of their season when they tied Penn State (ranked #2) at home last Wednesday, Penn State's first goal of the game was soon matched by Senior Jenn Harpel's shot scored from a penalty stroke. The game continued and the excitement grew when Penn State scored again and came ahead 2-1.

Junior Stacey Zeller had "probably one of her best games so far," said Coach Gros, "She's so coachable, you know she always there giving 100%." Two key starters received the brunt of the bout against P.S.U. Evelyn Kousoubri received 35 stitches in her forehead after a ball that was less than ten feet away from her was chipped up from an opponents stick. Senior Cleary Clarke collided with the Penn State goalie, and hurt her head on the helmet. Even without these two crucial players, the second string didn't seem to have trouble filling their shoes. This says a lot for the quality of talent by the girls on the team.

Once again giving it her all, sophomore Annmarie Leukens scored and tied Penn State, the team ranked second in the nation in Division 1. The game went into double overtime followed by sudden death. Still no one scored and Ursinus tied Penn State 2-2.

Penn State University has had a winning season all except for the one loss to Old Dominion. Ursinus is the only school who has tied them. The national rankings come out every Tuesday, so be sure to look for Lady Bears as they may be ranked in the top ten.

Coach Gros and the hockey team rolled over American University 3-0 on Homecoming. Coach Gros spoke highly of the team, "We played 18 players today and didn't miss a beat!" Still without Clarke and Kousoubri because of their injuries, the team played very well especially in the first half. Toni Wenger scored within the first five minutes of the game. Annmarie Leukens and Jenn Harpel boosted the score to 3-0, which remained as the final score.

"Homecoming is always a nerve-racking time," said Gros, "We even have two 'Queens' on the squad." Senior teammates and Hobson roommates, Captain Alison Sedgewick and Cara Console had to leave the game with five minutes to play so they could prepare themselves for their Homecoming Court nominations. Both girls made it on time for the football halftime, and no one would have suspected that shortly before this they were busy attacking American U.

Coach Gros found it difficult to find one player in particular who led the team against American, everyone had done their part so well. "This was clearly a team win, it's hard to pick one person. But I'd have to say Toni [Wenger] was the catalyst who got things really moving."

The girls play St. Joe's at home this Thursday. Come out and show them that you are proud of their present record of 5-5-2.

Volleyball Spikes Cabrini

BY PATTI BUNT
Of The Grizzly

The past two weeks have registered one win and two losses for the Ursinus Volleyball team. The Lady Bears received a long over-due win when they hosted Cabrini on Wednesday, Oct. 9. The Lady Bears shut them out in a best-of-five match, 15-7, 15-3, 15-5.

The Friday of fall holiday the team travelled to Stockton, this time to be the one shut out. Ursinus lost three straight, 8-15, 7-15, 5-15.

Tuesday, Oct. 15 Lady Bears hosted Albright for their only competitive match of the week. Again, Ursinus was shut out with scores of 10-15, 9-15, 11-15.

Aside from competitive matches, the ladies' volleyball team took on some volleyball alumni in a Homecoming match. Despite the returning talent, including coach Robin Asplundh, the Lady Bears took the match 3-1 with scores of 15-13, 15-12, 8-15, 15-6.

Lady Bears Cruise to 1st Place

BY DAWN WARNER
Of The Grizzly

The Lady Harriers travelled to Madison, New Jersey, on October 11 to compete in the Drew Invitational. The Bears placed first as a team out of a field of twelve schools. The competition was close, but the team worked hard to pull ahead.

For the 3rd straight week, outstanding runners Kris Wagner and Jen Orehowsky crossed the finish line together to tie for first place! Dawn Warner finished the course in a time of 21:23 for a twelfth place finish. Continuing to improve with each race, Stephanie Horling and Rebecca Beacher her placed 22nd and 23rd respectively.

This meet the Lady Harriers posted their best times of the year as individuals and ran their best race as a team. The team will be travelling to Cedar Crest college on Saturday to compete in the PAIAW Championship.

Winds Fill Ursinus' Sails

BY RANDY LEISER
Special to the Grizzly

Eight Ursinus sailors traveled to Annapolis, Maryland over the weekend of October 12th and 13th to compete in the McMillain Cup Eliminations, hosted by the United States Naval Academy. The crew sailed new Navy 44's alongside some of the area's finest sailing schools.

Conditions were light on the first day of the regatta and Cornell, Penn State, University of Delaware, Navy, Ursinus, and others spent a great deal of times waiting for steady wind, allowing the Ursinus crew to practice maneuvering the unfamiliar boat. The Ursinus team got off to a poor start when the breeze did finally blow, but improved as the first day of racing continued.

The second day of racing saw heavier winds and close racing between all teams. Skipper Randy Leiser, Kim Brown, Rick Camp, Mike Frederick, Tom Koester, Sheri McCloskey, Tony Saravanos, and Christian Sockel all had their borrowed boat, Bold, sailing swiftly with the fleet. The upwind performance demonstrated by Ursinus' crew was impressive -- the team rounded the first mark in fourth place, tied with Navy.

Shaky spinnaker handling, due to a lack of practice and experience, led to a loss of that position on the downwind leg of the course, but Ursinus managed a respectable seventh place finish.

Crew members had an enjoyable weekend, learning a great deal and improving tremendously over the two-day regatta. Ursinus sailors are currently preparing for their upcoming regattas, two dinghy events hosted by the University of Pennsylvania and Princeton University, respectively. The crew is also hoping for some additional practice before returning to competition at the Naval Academy next year.

Soccer Bounces Back with Three Straight Wins

BY HEINZ BUCHLER
Of The Grizzly

The Ursinus Bears soccer team finished a week of competition with a 3 and 0 record. The Bears traveled to Lebanon Valley on Thursday and left as 1-0 winners. The Bears' goal was scored by Walt Zeller and assisted by Heinz Buchler. It was Zeller's 4th goal of the season. Chris Heinzinger registered his first shutout of the season with the help of Erik Boergesson, Kent Wenger, Troy Gehret, and "Peach" Short. Thom Chester and Mike O'Donnell contributed to the Bears offense for the win.

The Bears then traveled to Delaware Valley College for their Homecoming. It was no Homecoming for Del Val as Ursinus came from behind to win 2-1. The Bears battled all game but fell behind later in the game 1-0. Mike O'Donnell led the comeback with his first collegiate goal and five minutes later Thom Chester was tackled in the box and awarded a penalty kick that Victor Gil slotted home for the late comeback win. It was a bittersweet victory for the Bears.

The Bears third game of the week was played at home against Washington College. Ursinus shut out Washington 3-0 in a wet weather battle. Walt Zeller created the first goal by being fouled in the box as he tried to get a shot off. Victor Gil scored the penalty kick to give the Bears a 1-0 lead at half time. The second half was controlled by Ursinus as Vern Boergesson and Al Snyder dominated and denied the Washington offense. The Bears' second goal came as Mid-fielder Heinz Buchler took apart the defense for his first collegiate goal and Jay Jackson scored the third goal for the Bears on a feed from Al Snyder with under a minute to play. It was Jackson's third goal of the season. The game was Heinzinger's second shutout in just three games. On Saturday, the Bears played the Alumni, a competitive game that ended in a 2-2 tie. Tom Chester and Victor Gil each scored goals. For the alumni Steve Vighetti (class of 1991) scored both goals. This week the Bears face the ranked team of Scranton on Wednesday, at 3:30 at home.

Harley's Haven

BY HARLEY DAVID RUBIN
Assistant Sports Editor

Hey, sports fans, I love ya! Welcome to one of the most widely-read sports opinion columns written by a short guy in a small college! While we're on the subject of reading, I'm glad to see that someone out there is reading this garbage I spew forth every Saturday afternoon. Although Dave's comments of a week ago were somewhat harsh, I was glad to at least hear from someone out there. I dare somebody out there to write in a positive comment about The Haven. The first person to get in their favorable opinion of my opinion will win a all-expenses paid trip to the Publications Room on a Saturday afternoon so they can see the author in action.

Enough babbling about that. Now, to babble about the world of sports. So how about those Eagles? There's a word in Yiddish that can sum up the Birds' season so far—fashtoonkanah (see author about pronunciation). Ooh, but wait! Norman Bramer (the owner, for those of you who don't know) just got a backup to Jim McMahon, and Jimbo will be ready to play in a week...STOP!! I can't take it anymore. The season is over. Period. The only reason to watch the rest of the games is to see how badly they get beat. And as for my esteemed RA and Editor-in-Chief, well, his Redskins may have the division wrapped up, but their name is not politically correct, so there Eric!

The Sixers have begun preseason play, and so far they've won three out of four games. There are still some questions to be answered before the regular season starts: Will Tharon Mayes beat out Brian Oliver for the backup guard spot? Is Johnny Dawkins as good as he was before his knee injury? Can Charles Shackelford and Manute Bol be an effective center platoon? How will the author survive with only seven regular season games on free TV? We may never know the answers to these questions...at least for a month or so.

Wowee! The Flyers have won a few games! But they're going to have to continue blending as a team in order to continue this winning trend—any team that has been overhauled the way the Flyers were is going to have trouble playing together for a while. However, Andrei Lomakin looks like the real thing, and Steve Duchesne looks to be all he's cracked up to be, so we'll just have to wait and see.

Before I get out of here, there's one last thing I have to say to a close personal friend (you know who you are, Pirate fan extraordinaire). The Braves won the National League Championship by playing great fundamental baseball. Granted, the Pirates' outfield (Bonds, Bonilla, and Van Slyke) were 0 for 33 with runners in scoring position, but you've got to give credit to Atlanta's pitching. So Jamiel, your apology better be good, because not only did the Braves win, they won by shutting out the Pirates at home!

OK—last thing. The answer to the last Cheers question: Allyce Beasley. And presenting this week's Clamer House Of Champions/Cheers Trivia Question: What was the full name of Carla's second husband, who was killed in a freak Zamboni accident? That's it from here, sports fans, and remember: The Ursinus Baseball Team is selling raffle tickets, so give 'til it hurts!
