AIRBAND 1992 Raises Over $1,200 for Charity

BY A. JUDD WOYTEK
Associate Editor

"Fun, exciting, and a great show!" Those few words sum up the 9th Annual AIRBAND show held this past Friday in the Wismer Dining Hall. The popular lip-sync event is sponsored each year by the college's Resident Assistants and all proceeds raised go to a worthy charity.

AIRBAND 1992 set some records that will be hard to top. The number of acts entered hit an all time high of thirteen and there was an enormous number of prize donations from local businesses in the form of free food and gift certificates. Proceeds raised came to a record amount of over $1,200.00 for this year's charity, the Project Head Start program at Trinity United Church of Christ.

Project Head Start is a program that has been providing services to over 10 million children in all 50 states. Montgomery County Head Start now has 24 classes, serving over 400 three to five year old children each year. The class held at Trinity has a current enrollment of seventeen. Funding for the program is provided through federal grants and community contributors. Most of the students enrolled in the program attended the show along with their parents and the children even put on two performances during the show.

Judges for the evening were selected from the Ursinus College faculty and staff. The nine judges were Lynda Manz, Margot Richter, H. Lloyd Jones, Peter Small, Carla Rinde, Lucia Murphy, Jane Shinehouse, John Pilgrim, and Lisa Tremper-Barnes.

The night began with a welcome from AIRBAND 1992 chairperson Bonnie Gilmour. She informed the audience of close to 500 people that Amanda King, the six year old Collegeville girl with cancer who received the proceeds from AIRBAND 1991 was doing well and that her doctors are predicting a full remission of the cancer. Gilmour then told of Project Head Start and introduced the chief master of ceremonies for the evening Rob Connor.

Connor livened up the crowd with a few jokes and then introduced the first act, The Betans, who performed the song "Turn this Mutha Out." Lead Paul Coppola wowed the crowd with his dance moves and stole the stage away from his comrades in the act.

The next act was Pi Nu Epsilon performing their rendition of "Hand Jive." The act made up of Jeff Smith, Dhinesh Samuel, Jenn Heal, Monica Hauser, Laura Scarola, Julie Tonnessen, Sarah Lee, Dan Barry, Robert Pohl, Jacques LeBarnes, and lead "hand jiver" Chris Torak had their timing down to the second. This was followed by a group calling themselves Rhythmic Limp. Mike Cohen, John "Patch" Leszczynski, Gene Barnes, Bill Sedgewick, Doug Hovey, and Jim Convey showed off their dance moves during a "Five Minute Rap Mix."

Following the Rhythmic Limp, the children from Project Head Start took the stage and did their own dancing, stealing the show away from the college-age performers.

After the children left the stage, the act of Paul & Beth took over. Paul Madson and Beth Buckenmyer did a wonderful rendition of "You're The One That I Want" from the movie "Grease." The duet was followed by Bork & The Banshees who performed "I'm Too Sexy" by the group Right Said Fred, which is currently the number one song in the nation. Burke Morrison and the ladies of Omega Chi rocked the house as they "shook their tushes on the catwalk," and showed everyone that they were definitely too sexy for AIRBAND.

The next act called themselves 1950 Revisited and were scheduled to perform "Just A Gigolo," but some last minute changes saw Tony Barber, Paul Guenther, Shannon Cleary, Cara Console, and Doug Hovey spoof the group Milli Vanilli, who were publicly blasted for lip-syncing all their music at concerts. Barber and Guenther came on stage in full make-up and wigs looking just like the real group. They proceeded to sing "Don't Forget My Number" until the "tape" went bad and changed songs, sped up, and slowed down. Eventually, Hovey revealed himself as the "true singer" hiding under a table and kicked the two "fakes" off the stage. The act, however, met with some controversy after the show from some African-American students who attended the show and did not like that Barber and Guenther had black make-up on their faces.

Alpha Sigma Nu & Co. was the next act to perform. They put on a comical show to the tune "Homecoming Queen's Got A Gun." Queen Laura Zobel gunned down the other performers as Janet Kintz "sang" the story of the horrible massacre. Other performers in the group were Maureen Hessinger, Megan Noyse, Kim Schaninger, Sheila Faix, Carolyn Cooper, Mindy Brandt, Claire Keppley, Megumi Uchiyama, Ming Ming Huang, Laura Lecrone, and Missy Weiss.

Kappa Delta Kappa followed with their rendition of "The Shoop Shoop Song." While Nicole Alu did a wonderful Cher, the rest of the act did not hold up against the better performances of the evening. Phi Alpha Psi then performed "Hit Me With Your Best Shot," with Brian Edens and Cleary Clarke at each other's throats. The other performers were dressed as football players and took some "good shots" at each other in the background.

The Tau Sig Tyrants were next up with their song, "You'd Better Shop Around." While their "costumes" were well done and the cuts on the fraternities made the students laugh, the Tyrants overlooked the fact that the judges would not understand what was going on.

The Smiling Lambs put on an interesting rendition of "Like A Virgin," but the Beta Sig pledges had far to go to be the top act of the night.

Flasher Hits Collegeville

BY SARA JACOBSON
Arts and Entertainment Editor

Everyone always thinks of Collegeville as just a quiet little college town—a place where the closest thing to crime might be a student scavenger hunt or dorm theft. This past week, however, the type of crime that one thinks could never happen here, did. On Tuesday, February 17, at the Collegeville Shopping Center a teenager was almost abducted.

At approximately 5:15 that evening a fourteen year old girl was walking through the parking lot of that shopping center, when she noticed a dark haired, middle aged man masturbating in his car. This man then attempted to grab the teenager by her arm and pull her into his car. Luckily, she managed to escape.

The police may have this man in custody now. A 36 year old resident of Newton Township, Douglas Gentzler, was arrested later that night for exposing himself to a female gas station attendant in Brookhaven later

Tuesday evening. Gentzler later confessed to a similar indecent exposure that day as well in Upper Darby Township.

Gentzler is currently being held in the Delaware County Prison on $100,000 bail. He is being investigated for at least seven other indecent exposure charges including a 1991 incident in nearby Trappe. As Gentzler closely matched the description given by the Collegeville teenager, he is a top suspect in that case, although the license plate number of the car from the Collegeville attempt did not match the license used to track Gentzler down for the Brookhaven exposure. He has been known to use rental cars in the past.

Like the quad shower peeper of last year, this is a stark reminder that Collegeville is not immune to life-threatening crime. Campus Security offers an escort for anyone traveling throughout the campus late at night and encourages students to keep the residence doors locked at all times. It is fortunate that Tuesday's did not end in tragedy.

Exchange Student to Speak

FROM THE MUSSER INTERNATIONAL PROGRAM
Special to the Grizzly

Zhi-Wei Jiang, 22 years old, comes to Ursinus from Shanghai, China. There he attended Jiao Tons University, one of the top three science colleges.

Zhi-Wei decided to major in Computer Science during his college program in the United States. He will share some of his observations on student life in China and in Collegeville on WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 26 from 12:30 to 1:20 P.M. in the PARENTS' LOUNGE, WISMER HALL. Zhi-Wei will be the first speaker in the INTERNATIONAL WEDNESDAYS SERIES this semester.

Traditional Chinese refreshments will be served.

INTERNATIONAL WEDNESDAYS will meet on the last Wednesday of the month, from 12:30 to 1:30 P.M., in the Parents' Lounge. Each month a different country or region will be featured. During the Spring semester, China will be the focus for February, Japan in March, and India in April. After a brief five to ten minute presentation by a foreign student or faculty member from the country, there will be a chance to sample snacks and beverages common to the culture being discussed, as well as time for questions and socializing with Ursinus students from abroad.

INTERNATIONAL WEDNESDAYS is a series sponsored by the Foreign Student Advisor's Office, the Musser International Experience Program, and the Department of Modern Languages.

Good News For Bio Majors

"What do two of the top three and four of the top ten positions have in common?" asked Dr. Peter F. Small, Chairman of the Ursinus Biology Department. "You can receive your undergraduate preparation for them in our biology department!" According to the latest poll taken by this month's Money Magazine, the scientific jobs are in the high ranks when compared to other occupations (see table). The following are seven factors Money used to evaluate 100 jobs, appearing in the order of importance readers placed on them: job satisfaction, quality of work life, earnings, job security, social value, prestige, and ease of entry.

Biologist tops the list. "And there is not just one job called biologist," said Dr. Small, "there are hundreds of specialties. You can't get off the front page of the Philadelphia Enquirer on most days without seeing an article about the environment, gene therapy, rain forests, or the like. This is also gratifying in that we make a deliberate decision to remain a broad-based biology department rather than to specialize in one sub-field." Along with this decision, the addition of many new facilities and recognition to our biology department nationwide. According to the report of Project Kaleidoscope, funded by the NSF, Ursinus ranks 64th of all colleges and universities, and 30th among liberal arts colleges in the United States.

"If we add the position of chemist in at number 12," continues Small, "the science students at Ursinus have a great deal to be pleased about." Ursinus has a very strong chemistry department, a very strong biology department, and as a result it has an equally strong pre-medical program. Clearly, students planning careers in biology, chemistry, or medicine will have a fairly wide open employment field for the years to come, if this survey is accurate. Small concluded by saying, "Students can receive an excellent undergraduate education right here at Ursinus."

The girls from Suite 205 did just that. They put themselves on top with their wonderful performance of "Boogie Woogie Bugle Boy." Kristin Link, Kristin Ullrich, Cynthia Wagner, Jan Bailey, Liz McDonald, and Michelle Macrone came up with a most unique idea. Three of the girls were suddenly "shortened" and danced on a table with shoes on their knees. They looked about three feet tall and their dance moves were in perfect sync.

The final act of the evening was the Resident Assistants performing "We Go Together" from "Grease." In the act were AnJie Mason, Karen Strickler, Marc Lowenberg, Judd Woytek, Sloane Gibb, Steve Grubb, Bonnie Gilmour, Rick Camp, Kathy Keller, Tony Sarvanos, Gina Solensky, Sean Reilly, Rodi Sills, Jean Gaudet, Jacquie Ager, and Chris Foust.

The third place prize went to Bork and the Banshees, while Alpha Sigma Nu & Co. came in second. The grand prize went to the girls of Suite 205. Prizes were donated by Domino's (who offered 25 free pizzas in all), Pizza Box, Lee's Hoagie House, and several other generous businesses in the area.

Lighting for the show was provided at an incredibly low price from Zeo Brothers in Willow Grove. Senior Brian Toleno also contributed time and energy in setting up and running the sound equipment.

The success of the evening was due to the superb organizational skills of Bonnie Gilmour, the AIRBAND 1992 chairperson, and her steering committee made up of Jean Gaudet, Krystyna Kiwak, Sloane Gibb, Judd Woytek, Ellen Sylvester, Dawn Estelle, Heather Groom, Monoca Norris, Rodi Sills, Gina Solensky, Karen Strickler, AnJie Mason, Dan Flickinger, Paul Madson, Steve Grubb, and Scott Taylor. Also giving much of their time were Debbie Nolan, Stephanie McNulty, and Todd McKinney.

The show was quoted by many as the best AIRBAND ever! If you missed the show this year or didn't quite get your act together in time, do not fear. The 10th Annual AIRBAND will be held next year around the same time. Make a goal to raise even more money for a charity next year!

Democratic Candidates

BY ERIKA COMPTON
Of The Grizzly

Super Tuesday is coming up on Tuesday, March 10, 1992. That is the day when the most states conduct their primary elections. Democratic candidates include Edmund G. Brown, Jr., Governor Bill Clinton, Senator Tom Harkin, Senator Bob Kerrey, and Paul E. Tsongas. Patrick Buchanan and George Bush are running for the republican nomination.

The top five democratic candidates seem to agree on issues more than they disagree. All favor more Federal involvement in education and health. They support grants or tax breaks to help develop industries; they believe abortions should be unrestricted. However, they have different opinions on what actions should be taken in areas such as taxes, the military, health and trade.

Brown believes that a 13% tax on all income should replace the current system. Deductions would be allowed for only mortgage interest, rent, and charitable contributions. He wants to cut the military in half in the next 5 years. Brown wants to create a national health insurance system, which would exclude private companies.

Gov. Clinton would like to see a middle-class tax cut by several hundred dollars a year, while increasing taxes on individuals who earn over $200,000 a year. He wants to prohibit businesses from writing off excessive salaries and bonuses. In the military department, Clinton would like to see spending cut by 1/3 over the next 5 years. He wants the production of the B-2 bomber and StarWars missile stopped. As far as health care goes, he believes employers should provide insurance coverage for workers, or pay an additional tax to a public fund. He also wants to set up a board to regulate medical-care prices. On the trade issue, Clinton claims to be "basically a free-trader". One-fourth of the US trade problems can be placed on Japan. If things don't get better, businesses, workers, and the government must compete better in international commerce.

Senator Harkin doesn't want to cut middle-class taxes or reduce the capital gains tax. He wants to provide investment tax credit for certain industries. Military spending and the armed forces' size needs to be cut by over 1/2 in the next 10 years. The B-2 bomber production should also be canceled. Harkin wants to bring several experts together to develop a comprehensive national health insurance. He supports stricter enforcement of current trade laws. He does not want to see free-trade with Mexico.

Taken from USA Today

Senator Bob Kerrey believes that the first step toward economic and social revival needs to come from comprehensive national health insurance. In terms of taxes, Kerrey recommends a two-year refundable tax credit worth 20% of social security and Medicare taxes. Taxes should be increased on incomes over $200,000. A 4% payroll tax on employers and 1% tax on workers should be imposed to pay health insurance. Kerrey wants military spending to be cut, but also wants the armed forces to stay large enough and well-enough equipped in case of an emergency. Kerrey wants to abolish Medicare, Medicaid and employer-based insurance systems. People should choose from a state or private plan meeting Federal standards. Kerrey believes the US should take whatever steps are needed to force open markets in other countries.

Finally, Paul Tsongas believes that the government should work with businesses and not cross purposes. He does not support an income tax cut, but encourages raising taxes on the wealthy. Gas taxes also should be raised 3-5 cents per gallon. Tsongas wants to see military spending cuts, but at overseas bases and not at home. Germany and Japan should bear a larger share of their own defense cost. As far as health care goes, Tsongas wants to enroll everyone in a group and provide a public plan. He wants private insurance companies and HMO's to bid for contracts. Tsongas believes trade restrictions are counterproductive, and says the US must improve the quality of its products. Foreign companies shouldn't be allowed to take over certain strategic industries in the US.

The voting opened on Tuesday, February 18, in New Hampshire. Tsongas led the democrats with 33% of the votes, while Bush led the republicans with 57% of the votes. In next week's Grizzly, I will preview the key republican candidates.

Today's Health

BY CLEARY CLARKE
Of The Grizzly

Many people who run, bike, swim, or exercise in other ways say that it makes them feel better—in particular, that it increases their resistance to colds and flues. Yet some experts say that exercise may have a negative effect on the immune system. Moderate workouts may indeed boost your body's ability to fight off colds, but intense and extensive exercise may depress your immune system.

Research has just begun in this area, but one study at the University of California showed that brisk walking (45 minutes 5 times a week for 15 weeks) boosted the activity of natural killer cells, which help knock out viruses in the body's cells. The group did experience colds and flues, but only half as many days compared to a sedentary group.

During the Olympic games there's usually a handful of elite endurance athletes who are stricken with respiratory infections, which is often blamed on overtraining.

Researchers know that high intensity, long duration exercise increases the output of two stress hormones, adrenaline and cortisol, which can depress various parts of the immune system.

Basically, most people do feel better after moderate exercise, and exhausted after overtraining—regardless of what occurs to their immune system. Most of us do not exercise to exhaustion and need not to worry about effects on our immune system. The main problem is that most Americans exercise too little, rather than too much and health risks of sedentary people outweigh the possibility of catching a cold from too much exercise.

Jerusalem(AP)- About 70 Palestinians who will be delegates or advisers at the fourth round of Mideast peace talks left for Jordan Thursday en route to Washington. They had delayed their trip for one day to protest Israel's jailing of two delegates, but the negotiators going are expected to arrive on time for the talks on Monday. The 70 Palestinians were to be joined by 18 others, which would make the delegation the largest since the talks started in Madrid, Spain in October.

Albertville, France- The Olympics come to an end with the U.S. coming in 6th in the medal standings. We received five gold, four silver and two bronze. The closing ceremonies closed the 26th Olympic Winter Games for the year. The Summer Olympics will be held in Barcelona, Spain.

Clifton, N.J.(AP)- A teen-age boy was strangled with an extension chord by a fellow 17 year-old as they and a third boy prayed the "Hail Mary" in the victim's father's car, authorities said. Robert Solomine Jr.'s killing apparently was planned by a group of teen-agers who attended weekly meetings - some that were opened by Bible readings - where they discussed ways to harm him, said Passaic County Prosecutor Ronald Fava. Solomine's body was found in the car in a school parking lot early Monday. Fava said authorities were unsure of the motive for the murder.

New Hampshire -The first primary election took place in New Hampshire on Tuesday, February 18, 1992. Paul Tsongas led the race, receiving 33% of the votes from a field of five voters. George Bush won 57% of the votes while running mate Patrick Buchanan received 41% of the votes.

This Week in U.C. History

BY KRISTIN WHITE
Of The Grizzly

Even with the Temperance Act, Prohibition and many moral activists, the "Roaring '20s" had a reputation as a decade of excitement and wild living. Life at Ursinus must certainly have been upbeat during this decade.

Two alumni banquets were held this week in 1921—one at Kurtz's Cafe in Bethlehem and one at the American House in Reading. Throughout the twenties, the alumni banquets became a popular event at this time of the year. Also in 1921 this week, the college sponsored a sleigh ride for students.

In 1922 this week, the student council held a dance in the gym, while the YM-YWCA sponsored a social in Olevian Hall. Many campus groups began collecting/donating money for "Student Relief" in post-war Europe.

The news of the week in 1923 was the archaeological discovery of King Tut's tomb. Also, in honor of Washington's Birthday this week, the student council sponsored a ball. Odell's orchestra in Pottstown provided the music.

In 1924 this week Ursinus sponsored a speaker, Miss Maude Aldrich, the president of the Temperance and Moral Reform Board of the Presbyterian Church. Miss Aldrich pleaded with students to "take a stand against the prevailing laxity in moral standards in our society".

A tradition of the '20s was an annual Founder's Day Family Dinner which brought the entire campus together in celebration. Throughout the meal there was continual singing of campus songs and hollering of class cheers. The dinner, according to one student this week in 1925, "was not characterized by dignity, but rather by a spirit of joviality".

In 1926 this week, the men's student council took action against certain male freshmen. One student who was found not carrying matches was made to wear a necklace of matchboxes for ten days. Several students who had neglected to sing the campus song on Founder's Day were required to sing it between halves at the next basketball game.

The campus newspaper also featured an article in 1926 on appropriate manners for students, noting the overly casual appearance of some young men who did not wear button-down shirts and ties to class as well as the appalling use of vulgar language.

In 1928 this week, three speakers were featured for women interested in vocations (other than teaching).

Guru Tom

BY GURU TOM

But enough of my ramblings. The time has come for the Guru to discuss the key to the successful job-hunt. Oh, I know what my disciples are thinking: "How can one man hold all the answers to this vast question? And if he knows so much, how come he's unemployed?" Never you mind. I'm the Guru around here, I'll ask the questions.

No man may start down a long road without a destination. None of you may begin the quest for a career without knowing what you want to do. The best way to determine your career destination is to look deep within yourself and discover what you want out of life. Of course, not all of us have the piercing wisdom or honesty to do this alone. I do. And so I have devised the patented Guru Tom Self-Enlightening Test. Simply read on, Mosquito, decide which passage reflects your inner voice, and let the Guru divine your destiny:

1) "I am driven by a strong sense of justice and a desire to serve the community. I like guns. I am familiar with the Constitution in the same way one is familiar with Flint, Michigan--yeah, I know it's there, what's it to me?" Consider a career in law enforcement.

2) "I see beauty in the cosmos: beauty in a stick, beauty in a chunk of rock, beauty in a mishapen lump of steel. Form is not beauty, Reason is not beauty; Chaos is beauty, Money is beauty." You are an artist at heart. Ursinus needs more sculptures...

3) "I am 6'6", two-hundred and eighty pounds, and have a poor grasp of English. I want short hours and lots of money." Sorry, I can't see how you could be happy as anything other than a professional wrestler or a gym teacher.

4) "I am 6'6", two-hundred and eighty pounds, and have a poor grasp of English. I want short hours and lots of money. Oh, I also like guns." Ah, a wide range of career choices opens up to you. Try acting.

5) "I like nothing. Why should I? Life is a cruel joke played upon us by uncaring Fate. Life's road? I'll tell you about life's road..." Hey, do I know you?

6) "Due to a bizarre childhood experience, I am convinced that cockroaches simply do not exist.

Yes! It's all a hoax! What we call cockroaches are really waterbugs--mutated, two-inch landwalking waterbugs, but harmless." Look into an Ursinus maintenance position.

7) "I want nothing more out of life than to sleep 'til noon and suck down brooski's bought with my parents' money. Food, in the cosmic scheme of things, isn't so important--horse, cow, once it's ground up, who cares? Oh, yeah, I can't tell a roach from a waterbug." Sit tight, Ursinus student, you've found the end of your road.

Of course, these aren't all your possible options. Many more are open to you--and to learn them all, just dial 1-900-ASKGURU! That's right, finally a Hotline to Destiny! Don't wait, call now! And coming soon, it's 1-900-GURUBABES, sensual naked psychic astrologers who want to talk to you! Until then...

GRIM THOUGHT OF THE WEEK: Ann Landers gets paid to do this.

ASK MR. COLLEGE

Q. Dear Mr. College, I have a ten page paper due next week and there's no way I'll be able to finish more than seven pages in time. Oh Mr. College, what should I do?—Stup fied

A. Dear Stupfied; Go ahead and finish the first seven pages of the paper, ending the last page in mid sentence as if there should be a page following it. Then hand the paper in as if nothing is wrong. Your professor will assume the last few pages were lost. By the time he or she asks you about it, you'll have had time to finish the last three pages.

Q. Dear Mr. College, Whenever I paste down clippings from magazines, the glue gets all over my hands. When I try and scrape it off it causes chafing. Any suggestions—lchy

A. Dear lchy; You need to write to "Ask Mr. College". Happens all the time.

Every week, I will be asking you, students, a controversial question that deals with your life at Ursinus College. Hopefully, this will give you an outlet to express your views about your school!

This week's question is:

Do you think that condom machines should be placed on campus and, if so, where do you think they belong?

RODD HEARSEY- sophomore: Yes, they should be in every suite bathroom and in the main bathrooms of the Quad and in Old Mens.

BILLY HENDERSON sophomore:

No, because if people are old enough to take the responsibility to have sex, they should be prepared to use the condoms in the machines as likely to get old.

MIKE LEVENGOOD-junior:

Yes, there should be a few in the bathrooms in the Quad and Old Mens and in the mail room in Reimert.

KRYSTYNA KIWAK (RA)-junior:

Yes, I would put them in the hallway next to 200 in Reimert. They should also put a few in the Quad and Old Mens.

SUSIE JONES-sophomore:

Yes, they should be in the bathrooms of the Quad and Old Mens and also in the laundry room of Reimert.

BRIAN EDENS-sophomore:

Yes, they should have them in the lobby of Reimert and at the desk in the Quad and also by the vending machines in Old Mens.

AUDRA BOETTCHER-junior:

Yes, they should be in the bathrooms of Old Mens and the Quad. They should also be in the laundry room in Reimert.

MARIA ROJAS-junior:

Yes, one on each hall in the Quad and Old Mens-one in each house and in the RA suites in Reimert.

JENN SCHEFFLER-junior:

Yes, I think they should be on campus because they're not going to stop people from having sex on a college campus. This way they could encourage people to have safe sex because of the fear of spreading diseases. I think they should be by the vending machines in Reimert and there should also be one in Old Mens and in the Quad.

CARL BRANDRETH-sophomore:

Yes, they should put them next to all the vending machines in the Quad, Old Mens and Reimert.

EVELYN KOUSOUBRIS (RA)-junior:

Yes, they should be in the stairwell going up to 200 in Reimert and in the bathrooms in the library.

MIKE HENNESSEY-junior:

Yes, on the first floor of Commonwealth and in the bathrooms of Wismer and also in the mens bathroom in the Quad.

SCOTT BOGDAN-sophomore:

Yes, I feel that it's our choice if we decide to have sex and our responsibility to have safe sex. I think the college would only be helping us if they placed them on campus. I think it's important for them to be strategically placed and to be appropriately used but not abused. I think they should be in the common bathroom in the Quad and in the stairwell by 200 in Reimert.

TANYA KONONOV-junior:

Yes, I think that they should be distributed to everyone through their mailboxes once a month.

BETH BUCKENMEYER-junior:

Yes, I think that they should be in the library bathrooms.

BRIAN SCHMIDT-sophomore:

Yes, they should be in the Wismer and library bathrooms.

A Century of Environmental Main Street Notes

MEGAN MENDTE
News Editor

BY KRISTIN WHITE
Of The Grizzly

On September 8th, Phi Alpha Psi Sorority had the opportunity to meet Jeanne Anne Huber, the daughter of Mabel Hobson Fretz. She talked to the girls about the memories she has of her days growing up in Hobson and about her mother.

The following is a compilation of memories from her mother of her days on Main Street before all the houses were bought by Ursinus, nearly a hundred years ago:

Excerpts from a paper written by Mabel Hobson Fretz:

"Not many persons nowadays can boast of living almost their entire lives in the place where they were born.

I can claim this privilege; therefore, I thought it might interest some present-day citizens of Collegeville to know a little of what it was like a century ago, and my part in the life of the community.

Across Fifth Avenue where the Commonwealth Savings and Loan now stands, was our country store. It was, before my time, owned and operated by my paternal grandfather, Frank Hobson. As I was growing up, this store was called 'Fenton's Store'.

In my early days, the elder Hobsons lived in what is now Maples Men's Dormitory, next to the store.

The cows were pastured down 'The Lane' (now 6th Avenue) in the meadow by the Run where, incidentally, the Hobson and young Spangler children spent many happy days bathing in the muddy water.

My father, about 92 years ago, purchased the lot at Main Street and 6th Avenue from Captain Fetterolf and built the present brick structure, now the dormitory for girls known as 'Hobson House'. This was a partial gift to the college by my husband 29 years ago when he retired.

Next to the present Shriner Hall is the house where my brother, sister and I were born, Duryea. All three houses--Hobson, Shriner, and Duryea had the large porches added about 1895. Every week these porches were thoroughly washed, rugs, chairs and all porch furniture carried into the yard until they dried.

May I conclude that the Gay Nineties were a happy, satisfying, wonderful way of life. If I could though, I'd exchange the fast, traffic-blocking, accident-causing automobile for the old-fashioned

I am sure that you hear many environmental tips--recycle aluminum, recycle paper, don't use aerosol cans. At some time, you have probably been told not to use styrofoam, but why?

Styrofoam, or polystyrene foam, is injected with gases that make it into a foam product. Unfortunately, the gases usually used are CFCs, which help to cause the depletion of the ozone layer. Alternatives to CFCs are not much better: HCFC causes 95% less damage but is still harmful to the ozone, while pentane and butane contribute to smog.

In addition to harming the ozone layer, polystyrene foam is completely non-biodegradable; styrofoam products will never disappear from the earth. Due to their structure (which contains large amounts of air), styrofoam products take up valuable space in over-packed landfills. Americans alone produce enough styrofoam cups a year to circle the earth 436 times; including all foam products from several countries, that's a lot of non-biodegradable material to be covering our earth.

Polystyrene foam can also be deadly to marine life and other animals. For example, if a sea turtle eats styrofoam, the buoyancy of the material will keep it from diving and will clog its system.

There is no such thing as a "safe" polystyrene foam--the only way to protect our environment is to avoid it and protest. Avoid buying products packaged in styrofoam (groceries, appliances, etc.) or styrofoam products cups, ice chests). CFCs are not only released into the air during manufacturing, but when a styrofoam product breaks or crumbles as well. In addition, let restaurants and stores know how you feel about styrofoam--eventually the comments will have an effect!

dobbin (I have good reason for this since I never learned to drive a car). But as elsewhere, the new replaced the old on Main Street."

This was the first of a series of articles about the houses on Main Street. If you have any information regarding the house that you live in please contact Tom Wilusz at 489-5179, Eric Foellmer at 454-0388, or Megan Mendte at 584-4506. Thanks!

Greetings, gossip hounds! Sorry about the nonexistence of last week's column, but things were a bit slow in the ol' industry (that is, unless you call Mike Tyson getting what he deserves unusually exciting). Well, enough of that; here we go...

All ye' deadheads, gather round—it's time to press your best tie-dye and polish up your quartz crystals - on February 28, Grateful Dead drummer extraordinaire Mickey Hart will lead what is being billed as the world's largest drum circle at the College of Marin in Kentfield, Kentucky. The event benefits the Rhythm for Life Project, and other participants include: Carlos Santana, Sheila E., Airo Moreira, and Florim Purim. This one should definitely prove to be interesting (and lest this editor forget to make note of the Dead's upcoming visit to the Spectrum in March)...

It's time to cry, metal fans, for after 11 years and sales of 20 million albums, Motley Crue is splitting up with lead vocalist Vince Neil and are now searching for a replacement. Apparently, Vince got the boot because he didn't possess the same enthusiasm he used to in the good old days. That, and he was spending too much time race car driving...

Once again, here's your weekly entertainment fun fact/column filler: You've heard the song endlessly at every Reimert party within the past month and a half, but who exactly is responsible for the "I'm Too Sexy" phenomenon? For those of you who don't know, it's Right Said Fred, a group that was formed in London by bald brothers Richard and Fred Fairbass, who were working as gym instructors when they created their musical satire of vain fashion models...

And lastly, turning some more attention to the music industry, the North American Concert Promoter's Association has taken the time to compile a list of tours that lost the most money (grand total= 6 million dollars) for promoters last summer. In order of unsuccessfulness: 1) Operation Rock-n-Roll (Alice Cooper, Judas Priest, Motorhead, Metal Church, Dangerous Toys); 2) Whitney Houston (what's the deal with her & Bobby Brown, anyway?); 3) David Lee Roth/Cinderella; 4) Huey Lewis & the News; 5) Diana Ross (don't feel bad—I too missed this one); 6) Steve Winwood; 7) The Club MTV Tour; 8) The Doobie Brothers; 9) Amy Grant; and 10) Alabama. Blame it on the recession...

Well, that about does it for now, my friends. Stay tuned for later developments, and...that's entertainment.

Wayne and Garth

Big Hit in Wayne's World

BY SARA JACOBSON

Arts and Entertainment Editor

Sometimes one can find the answers to life's highly profound existential questions. For example, the new movie "Wayne's World" presents us with the solution to this problem:

"Wayne, what do you do when you see a really hot babe who makes you want to hurl?"

"I say hurl. If you blow chunks and she comes back, she's yours. But if you spew and she leaves, it wasn't meant to be."

Such wisdom coming from a public access television show!

"Wayne's World" is a movie based on the life of Wayne Campbell of Aurora, Illinois, whose claim to fame happens to be that he has his own T.V. show, which he runs from his basement on Aurora's Public Access network. It seems like almost the perfect life—living at home, no responsibilities, plus the fame and recognition of one's own T.V. show. Unfortunately, for our heroes Wayne and Garth things soon run amuck.

One of Wayne's goals in life is to do Wayne's World, his T.V. show, for a living. When the sleazy producer Benjamin (who better to play the villain of the '90's than Rob Lowe?) offers Wayne and Garth $5,000 a piece to do the show for him—it seems too good to pass up. Problems arise when the show is forced to bow to its sponsor and artistic tensions flair.

Further conflict comes in over the lead singer of a local heavy metal band - Cassandra, quite a babe. Wayne is more than interested, but Benjamin can advance her career. How can Wayne compete with the opportunity of a music video and a love-pad, penthouse? His jealous tantrums seem justified.

This is the funniest flick I have seen in years. Granted, I did have to brave the pre-pubescent teen crowd who came to see it as well, but that was well worth it to see the comedy of Mike Myers (Wayne) and Dana Carvey (Garth). You will leave this movie, if not enlightened, then in a much better mood than when you went in. The one liners are hysterical and the take offs on various T.V. shows and movies (everything from Laverne and Shirley to T2 and Scooby Doo) are excellent. If you miss this movie, you are missing out.

Zoo News

Early this March the Philadelphia Zoo (America's first zoo) has planned many activities for anyone interested in off campus animal entertainment.

From March 4th through May there will be an exhibit of photographs taken at the zoo sponsored by the Zoo Camera Club. On March 4th, 7th, and 8th Zippy Zoo, a hands-on program designed for youngsters will allow visitors to touch the animals. Advanced registration is required for this program. Also on March 8th Danger Signals, a talk about how one knows if an animal is upset or how animals sense danger, will be presented.

The Philadelphia Zoo is located at 34th and Girard Avenues and only half an hour from Ursinus. Open year round, admission is $5.75 for all adults. Call 243-1100 with any additional questions.

Granite Column and Marble Bench

BY PEPE BYRMON

Of The Grizzly

The exterior of the Berman Art Museum has recently been graced with two new stat...er, sculptures. The inspirationally entitled "Granite Column" (that one is the granite column) and "Marble Bench" (the one that is a bench and made out of marble) were installed during the first week of February. The addition of these works has created quite an intellectual stir on campus.

"Granite Column," a rising rectangle of (you guessed it) granite, has been said to resemble a gigantic ruler with its uniform horizontal markings rising along the side of the sculpture. Others have speculated that these marks are just inadvertent mistakes left by the blasting to shape the statue. Trusting, as always, in the Ursinus artistic tradition of art with purpose one must go along with the ruler theory. Rumor has it, though, that the sculpture was actually installed in anticipation of the "great snowstorm that wasn't" of two weeks ago. All were chagrined when the storm only sputtered instead of spewing. NO doubt this scientific/artistic device will be used instead to measure the precipitation of all of the further frequent blizzards that hit Collegeville.

"Marble Bench," however, may be pandering to the new bench art fad at Ursinus. When the bench art in front of LSB (sorry THOMAS) hall mysteriously disappeared, following the completion of renovations of that building, a general uproar over the loss of this artistic bench went up from student body. Could this be the administration's reaction to the reactionaries? Lisa Tremper Barnes, director of the Berman (who?) Museum of Art, was recently quoted by College Communications as saying of the bench/art, "It is utilitarian; it is meant to be used." I for one would have never thought I would see the day when Ursinus College would bow to a fad such as the bench art craze on campus. Where does it end? What's the next step? Keg art? (Oh, sorry not on campus—none of that devil's work here). Next thing you know they'll be bulldozing the student center in Wismer and installing one big (artistic) bench.

At least it is nice that the school has finally admitted that this stuff is functional and not just here to decorate and fill space. Assuredly the grand tradition of purposeful st- (whoops) SCULPTURES will continue at Ursinus long after we are all long gone.

Jazz Quintet & Clifford Jordan to Perform

FROM COLLEGE COMMUNICATIONS
Special to The Grizzly

Jazz legend Clifford Jordan and his quintet will present a program of bebop, swing, and other classic jazz in Ursinus College's Bomberger Auditorium at 8 P.M. on Wednesday, Feb. 26. The program is free and open to the public.

Familiar for his tenor saxophone performances with Charley Mingus, Al Foster, Art Farmer, Grady Tate and other major jazz artists, Jordan also delights genre aficionados as a band leader, composer, and recording artist. Columbia, Blue Note, Jazzland and other recording labels have recorded and catalogued his work for more than 30 years.

The Jazz Heritage Society 1990 CD "Live at Ethels/Clifford Jordan," showcases Jordan in virtuoso performance and as quartet leader. The album's titles include "Blue in Advance," a Jordan composition.

Other recent albums featuring Jordan solos and compositions are Contemporary label's "The Art Farmer Quartet/Blame It on My Youth," "Art Farmer/PH.D.," and Disc Union's "Four Play/Richard

Movie Review - Dying Young

BY ERIK MOORE and GAR DONECKER
Of The Grizzly

A reader of the "Grizzly" movie reviews has requested that we implement a rating or ranking system. This would save the busy (or less literate) reader from having to read lots of words before deciding whether to watch a movie. Therefore, we will be interrupting this review with helpful rankings, capitalized for your reading convenience.

Betrayed by her lover, Hillary (Julia Roberts) packs her bags and goes home to her mother. She responds to a want ad and ends up as aide/nurse to Victor Getty (Campbell Scott), a young, wealthy, terminally ill patient. As you might guess, she falls in love with him and must struggle with both her love and his disease. Predictability: 3 OUT OF 4 CRYSTAL BALLS. Incidentally, the R-Rating of the movie stems not from any sexual encounters (Explicitness: 1/2 OUT OF 2 BREASTS) but from the adult language (Repetitive Cussing: 4).

Roberts' acting falls short of her performances in "Pretty Woman" and "Flatliners," but this is the script's fault; Hillary is a simplistic and unrealistic character. It's natural for nurses to become involved with their patients, but a romantic relationship is inappropriate at best. Also, Hillary is so unfamiliar with Victor's disease that she lets him leave the county in the middle of his chemotherapy program. Both Roberts' and Scott's best performances are near the beginning of the movie when Victor is suffering from the side effects of his treatment. Their mutual pain and frustration are distressing to watch. Acting: 2 OUT OF 4 HANKIES.

The directing is smooth and mostly unnoticeable except for two series of montages in the hospital and in Victor's home that are apparently designed to elicit sympathy without developing any characters. These sequences are examples of how the movie often tries to invoke cheap emotional responses instead of actually developing the relationship between Hillary and Victor. Directing: 2 1/2 OUT OF 4 CUTS.

The writers have chosen to stray from the original ending in Marti Leimbach's novel. The ending of "Dying Young," along with the rest of the movie, is unsurprising. The climax is well executed and performed, but it continues to uphold the movie's overall simplicity. Satisfaction: 2 OUT OF 4 COLONIAL SANDWICHES (MODIFIED WISMER SCALE). Joel Schumacher's "Dying Young" lives up to its name. Its concept has potential, but the potential is unrealized as the movie falls into a contrived, predictable formula. Overall: 1 1/2 OUT OF 4 STARS.

Americans Need to Lighten Up

BY STEVEN GRUBB
Opinions Editor

If the attitude of the United States was somehow combined into one person, a psychiatrist could have a field day. By watching what people have been saying about two major news stories of the past two weeks, the Winter Olympics in Albertville, and the New Hampshire primary, it seems this country has a serious identity crisis. From what I have been hearing and reading we live in a nation that needs symbols of our worth. Whether it be winning gold medals or proving our worth in a war, America comes across as an insecure nation.

I've always been intrigued by our country's reaction to our performance in the winter Olympics. Every four years instead of sitting back and watching the pageantry and the thrill of competition, our country goes into a national panic that our athletes are not as good as the Russians, Germans, Austrians, Finns, Italians, or even the Norwegians. After the Calgary Olympics in 1988 we went so far as to appoint that great competitor himself, George Steinbrenner, to investigate exactly what was going wrong with our athletes. And last week's Grizzly had two shots at our Olympians. One columnist said, "... I'm a little peeved that we haven't won more medals. It just seems to me that athletes who train all of their lives for these Kodak moments, not even bothering to go to school. . . should be able to bring home a few more medals." In a wittier frame, another wrote, "The fearless competitors of the U.S. generally finish between 8th and 100th (closer to the latter), yet they still give it everything they have got (yeah right)." Maybe our Olympians are not at the top of their sports, but should we feel insecure or cynical as a nation because our athletes do not perform well? Yes, we all love it when the Americans do well, no one will ever forget the 1980 United States hockey team, but when we lose, there is no reason to think we are slipping as a nation. Sports should not be a measure of our national worth.

The New Hampshire primary, held last Tuesday, also makes me wonder how secure we are as a nation. Besides George Bush's poor showing, the major issue of the primary was that draft-dodging Bill Clinton. There is a widely held notion that our leaders must be warriors. And Bill Clinton paid for his decision not to be a warrior.

What much of the public got from the letter Mr. Clinton wrote to his R.O.T.C. supervisor was that he was a coward, unwilling to defend his country against the vile North Vietnamese. Those that read Mr. Clinton's letter would see that Mr. Clinton could hardly be considered that type of man. He did not have problems with the draft if the country was being threatened, but in times when the nation was not being threatened, like Vietnam, Mr. Clinton did oppose the draft. And if what I have learned in history class is any indication, he was not the only one to object to being drafted. In fact, public opinion polls show us that a majority of the people in the late 60's opposed the draft.

Mr. Clinton wrote that he despised the war with "a depth of feeling (he) reserved solely for racism in America before Vietnam." He also states that "there was a time when not many people had more information about Vietnam at hand than (he) did." Bill Clinton was a well-informed objector to the war, not a coward. He did research and sincerely hated America's role in Vietnam. This was not a man who feared being shot or did not want to defend his country. But because Bill Clinton did not serve, he has suffered in his bid for the Democratic nomination.

America seems to have a need for its leaders and athletes to prove themselves. Those that risk their lives in some way or win a gold, silver, or bronze medal will reap the rewards and be heroes. Those that fail or back away from war have only limited futures as leaders in the United States no matter how intelligent or how good of a leader they are. Perhaps Americans should base their decisions on more rational things. War or Olympic glory does not make a great man or leader. intelligent or how good of a leader

Campus Memo

BY RICHARD P. RICHTER
President of the College

SCHOLARSHIP INTERVIEWS: The campus was alive with a large group of prospective freshmen and their parents on Saturday, February 22. The high school seniors were invited to be interviewed by faculty members for scholarships focused on their academic interests.

The faculty members with whom I talked after the interviews were impressed by the high quality of the candidates. They found them in the main curious about academic expectation in college and committed to serious academic goals. Additionally, several faculty members said how much they enjoyed the process of interviewing the best and brightest in the crop of candidates for admission next fall.

Another round of interviews is coming up, and we hope for a similarly positive experience for all.

Along with Richard DiFelicianantonio, Director of Admissions, and the rest of the Admissions staff, who have orchestrated the interviews, I am extremely grateful to all the faculty, staff, and students who are giving so much time and effort so willingly to our scholarship interview program.

A BULLISH BOARD: At its February 21 meeting, our Board of Directors decided to go forward with plans for a new capital fund-raising campaign.

The campaign will be the next step in the long effort to fulfill the potential for greatness at Ursinus. Our previous capital campaign, completed in 1988, added nearly $22 million to the resources of the College, not counting the $5.37 million given by the F. W. Olin Foundation for our new building. The Board will be seeking even more in the new campaign, which it hopes to complete by the end of 1994. The College will seek gifts from foundations, corporations, and individuals. Among the main goals will be the improvement of Wismer Center and additions to our permanently endowed funds. We are looking especially for major donors who will endow new scholarship funds to give students greater access to Ursinus.

In the campaign the College also will seek to continue the flow of annual gifts for operating support. This year we are expecting to raise $1 million from alumni and friends through the Annual Fund and hope to see that grow annually in the context of the new campaign.

We are fortunate to have a Board of Directors willing to start an ambitious fund-raising campaign at this economically uncertain time. It demonstrates their bullish assessment of the future of our College.

Participation in Class: Intimidating or Not?

BY JEFF BROWN
Of The Grizzly

An awkward silence fills the room as the teacher's question falls on seemingly deaf ears. The students squirm in their seats and look at each other from the corners of their eyes. Finally, one student raises her hand and attempts to answer, only to be rewarded with the snickers of her classmates.

While some of you may have been reminded of high school while reading this, the scenario described actually happened in an Ursinus classroom last week. It seems that willingness to be an active learner in the classroom has decreased on the Ursinus campus. Several classes I have observed have had long periods of silence following a professor's question, and in one case, I heard a student mumble "shut up" under his breath when another student answered a question.

There are a number of reasons which might keep students from participating in class. One such factor seems to be class size. Large classes may intimidate some students, as senior Amy Curran believes: "[Participation] depends on the size of the class. A large class is carried by two or three people, while a small class is not a lecture, and there's a better opportunity to participate."

Fear of ridicule is another reason class discussion is stifled. Junior Senta Bamberger feels that "people aren't willing to participate [for] people may perceive them to be the smartest person in class and snicker behind their back." While some students worry about being regarded as too smart, others fear coming across as stupid. Senior Chris Keohane believes that "some people worry about saying the wrong thing."

Finally, a lack of participation may signify a lack of preparation. Senior Steve Grubb notes that "people who do the reading participate, while people who don't, do not participate." Sophomore Tom Ervin states that in "some classes people are less willing to raise their hand and help out, unless they're on top of it."

Whatever the reasons for not participating may be, students must realize that the verbal exchange between the professor and the student is an essential part of the classroom experience. Through discussion and debate, material that was difficult or confusing becomes clearer, while helping the professor realize the points she should re-teach, emphasize, or skim over. In a truly academic setting, fear or ridicule should not even be a consideration. Students should regard classmates as fellow learners who are all equally capable of excelling or failing, and recognize class participation as a means of learning, not as a way to be a "throat" or a class joke. Participation is a vital part of learning, and should not be seen as optional. Education (especially yours) is much too important for that.

To further the intellectual atmosphere and bring about positive change on the Ursinus campus, the expression of opinion is vital. The opinions section of The Grizzly is an open forum for the necessary expression of opinion from all facets of the college community.

Opinions on campus, local, national and international issues are encouraged to attract discussion and guarantee a wide range of responses. It is preferred that opinion pieces be 200 to 400 words, typed and double spaced. Articles received by Thursday can be printed in the next Tuesday's issue of The Grizzly. Submissions can be delivered to the student publications room on the 3rd floor of Bomberger.

Men's Basketball Stumbles to an End

Ursinus attempts to score through the defenders.

The men's basketball team finished its season this past week with losses to Swarthmore and Widener to finish with a record of 3-20.

On Wednesday the 19th U.C. travelled to Swarthmore to try and avenge a three point loss to the Gannet earlier in the season. The game marked the return of senior center Andy Leshner who decided to play the last two games with a stress fracture in his femur.

The first half was a very close hard fought affair. Swarthmore came out red hot from three point land as they made 7 of their 14 attempts, but the Bears were able to keep close with some good shooting of their own (50% in 1st half)

At halftime Swarthmore led 40-38.

In the second half Swarthmore slowly increased their lead and went on to win 82-72.

Freshman Jim Gilmartin scored a career high 22 points to go along with 5 rebounds and 5 assists. Senior Marc Cataldi scored 19 points while hauling down 7 rebounds and dishing out 4 assists.

On Saturday the 22nd UC faced Widener in Helfferich Hall. The game marked the end of 4 careers as seniors Glenn DelSignore, Marc Cataldi, Andy Leshner and Brendon Sharpe were all honored before the game.

UC came out fired up and ready to play hoping to give the seniors a win in the last game. The score was close for the entire half but a couple of costly mistakes right before halftime allowed Widener to take a 30-24 lead at the half. Leshner scored 10 in the 1st half.

In the beginning of the 2nd half Widener went on a 12-2 run and led 42-26 with approximately 15 minutes remaining in the game.

The Bears came roaring back though. A three pointer by Cataldi and two three pointers by Sophomore guard Jamie Hildebrand allowed the Bears to come all the way back.

With just over a minute left and the Bears trailing 54-52 freshman Todd Long hit a three to put the Bears on top 55-54.

Widener came right back and scored with 17 seconds left to go up 56-55.

UC came down shot and missed, but Cataldi grabbed the rebound and was fouled with 3 seconds left.

He calmly sank the 1st free throw to tie the score, but missed the second.

The Bears had one more chance to win when a Widener turnover gave them the ball back under their own basket. Leshner took a turnaround jumper as the buzzer sounded but it fell just short.

The game went to OT, but Widener pulled away and won 69-60.

Cataldi led the Bears with 13 points, Leshner scored 12, Gilmartin added 10 and Hildebrand finished with 9.

Although this season was a little disappointing, the four seniors are to be congratulated on four outstanding careers.

The Ursinus College Gymnastics team hosted the Eastern College Athletic Conference Gymnastics Championships (ECAC) on Saturday.

The Cortland State Dragons captured 1st place with a 177.6, yet the Ursinus Bears put forth a good showing and finished with 156.05.

The Lady Bears had a good meet considering the tough competition. sophomore Melanie Glick received an 8.8 on her handspring on-full twist off on the vault.

and Ja Kim also performed strong floor routines including double twists, and earned 8.5 and 8.1 respectively.

The meet was an exciting one to watch since all four events competed simultaneously. Many different moves were performed during the day, including double-back tucks on the floor exercise, sukaharas on the vault, as well as many giant handstands on the uneven-parallel bars.

Ursinus competitors, Melanie Glick and Kristen Cornell have both qualified for the National Championships in Cortland, New York.

The Ursinus gymnastics team would like to thank all those who helped out at the meet, as well as everyone who came out to support the lady bears. This weekend the team will travel to their last two meets of the season, with Longwood, Virginia on Saturday and Temple University on Sunday night.

On Sunday the Olympic torch was extinguished as the XVI Olympic Winter Games came to an end. Even though the athletes returned to their respective countries and the world is no longer focusing on Albertville, France, the recognition, medals, and glory the athletes brought to their countries will live on.

Germany led in the medal count winning 26 medals, 10 of them gold, 10 silver and 6 bronze. The United Team won 22 medals with a chance for its 9th gold medal in ice hockey against Canada.

Alberto Tomba became the first alpine skier to successfully defend a gold medal, but was denied his fourth gold medal, as he finished in 2nd place in the slalom, behind Finn Christian Jagge of Norway.

Winter Olympics Comes to a Close his second run, which put him temporarily in first place, but Jagge finished .28 seconds ahead of Tomba to take the gold.

Cathy Turner of Rochester N.Y won two medals in speed skating. On Thursday, she anchored the U.S. team in the 3,000 meter relay to a silver medal.

Kristi Yamaguchi became the first American woman to win the gold in figure skating, since Dorothy Hamill in 1976. No one skated a clean program, but her performance earned her the gold, as her chief rival, Midori Ito settled for the silver.

The United States hockey team failed to win a medal as Czechoslovakia defeated the U.S., 6-1 to earn the bronze. It is the first medal for the Czechs since the 1984 Olympics, where they won the silver.

other team earning the silver. The U.S. Bobsled Team extended its medal drought which dates back to 1956, but finished in an impressive 9th place.

Even the Olympics had its share of tragedy, as a Swiss speed skier died in an accident, while warming up for his final run.

Despite the one tragic incident, the Olympics will be remembered by not only the athletes who competed, but also by those who watched it.

Hey, sports fans, I love ya! (And I have very discriminating taste!) We're still hip-deep in Olympic action, and the U.S. is doing moderately well.

SEVEN REASONS CBS' COVERAGE SUCKS ROCKS

- 7. Those little "filler" bits about how skis are made are really boring.
6. The hockey commentators on CBS have dull names like Mike and John; on TNT, there's a guy named "Jiggs".
5. If I see one more "All Those Who Love Great Comedy, Say "Eye" promo, I'm gonna hurl.
4. Scott Hamilton, although a fantastic skater, should not be allowed near a microphone...
3. They hype up the most ridiculous events--why do we need to see "Curling" anyway?
2. Tim McCarver isn't even a good baseball announcer--he sure isn't any good as an Olympic commentator.

1. (Courtesy of The Guru) Walter Cronkite just doesn't look good in those figure skating tutus.

Ladies and gentlemen...SPRING TRAINING HAS BEGUN! Pitchers and catchers reported the other day, and I'm totally psyched. By the way, did anyone else see the article in the Sunday paper about how the Mets may not be the invincible demigods that the Noo Yawkers think they are.

The Flyers (which probably should have been the lead story...I apologize for that) pulled off a huge deal that sent team captain Rick Tocchet, 6'8" defenseman Kjell Samuelsson, and backup goalie Ken Wregget to Pittsburgh for 100-point scorer Mark Recchi.

people say that a team shouldn't deal in their own division, but I'm not sure about this one. Tocchet and Samuelsson are getting older, and Wregget is erratic. Recchi is a "proven scorer" (what a great term) who is only 24, while 25-year-old Benning should provide good defense. Thumbs up from here.

Oy vey, those Sixers are sinking faster than a matzah ball in a ten-gallon drum of chicken soup. The shoddy play in the pivot has done them in again, especially since Jayson Williams (a decent player, but not a legitimate center) took over there. Even Charles Barkley hasn't been up to his usual stuff, and his scoring is suffering.

The moment you've all been waiting for is here: last week's Cheers Trivia Answer--Coach led the league in HBPs (Hit by pitch). Quoting Coach himself, "I really made a science out of it, Diane. I became a master." Quite a feat indeed. Anyway, here's this week's C.H.O.C.R./Cheers Trivia Question: Name the father of one of Carla's children (Frasier's mentor) who used to do A&P commercials.

Well, sports fans, that's it for this week. Remember--I'm Harley David Rubin, and my contract is for $30 million dollars over five years, so the heck with Bobby Bonilla!

The Woman's basketball team ended the regular season by winning their last four games. Last Monday the Lady Bears defeated Widener by two, 70-68 in an exciting home game. With the win, Ursinus clinched second place in the MAC southeast conference and earned a playoff spot in the MAC's where the team will face Franklin & Marshall in the 1st round.

The lady bears beat Wesley 71-67 on Tuesday. The team continued its rampage as it defeated Allentown, 62-58 to become the PAIAW champions. Megan Chmiel scored 12 points and Toni Wenger also had 12 points and 10 rebounds to contribute to the victory.

Ursinus finished the regular season the a 100-35 win against Eastern in front of a home crowd. Three players scored career highs. Chmiel scored 26 points, Wynique Reed had 18, and Betsy Laskowski posted 16 points. Ellen Cosgrove broke the freshman scoring record with 324 points formally held by Trina Derstine.

Ellen Cosgrove scores two points to help her break the freshman scoring record.

Wrestlers Finish Strong Season

With the regular season now over, the wrestling team is focusing on the MAC Championships next week at Swarthmore college, where the team hopes to at least equal its 4th place finish from last year. The Bears finished the season with a 15-4 record, winning three of the last four meets' of the season.

Last Saturday the Bears travelled to face Johns Hopkins and host Swarthmore in a trimeet. It was an easy day for Ursinus as it defeated Swarthmore 33-13 and Johns Hopkins 39-6. The whole team wrestled well, which contributed to the sweep. Ed Markowski helped Ursinus to take the lead with a 7-1 win over Albert Kimo of Swarthmore. Chris Schipira was a 2 match winner, pinning Ahmad-Ali Arabshabi of Swarthmore in 1:05 and defeating Pete Tucci from Johns Hopkins by decision 12-6. Terry Gallagher won both his matches by 1st period falls. He decked Swarthmore's

Alan Bennet in :53 seconds and pinned Scott Drewes of Johns Hopkins in 1:00. Todd Klinedinst dominated both his opponents. He defeated his opponent from Swarthmore by a major decision 13-6 and earned a technical fall in his match against Johns Hopkins. Billy Smith defeated Swarthmore's Wes Rochette in a close and exciting 5-2 decision, but controlled his next match which ended with a pin in 4:50. Sean Mitchell finished the meet on a dramatic note, with a close 9-7 match.

The Bears weren't so fortunate in the next match where they fell to King's. Several of the Bears put in fine performances. John Traverso came back from a 2-6 deficit in the 1st period to win the match 8-6 with 2:45 in riding time. Gallagher won his 7th straight match by a 7-2 decision and Scott Flannery wasted no energy as he quickly pinned his opponent in 1:52.

The team ended the season with a decisive 32-19 over Scranton. Klinedinst finished the season on a positive note with a major decision 13-4 over Kevin Phelps. This win increased his record to an impressive 13-3-1. Gallagher continues to dominate his opponents and should be a serious contender at the MAC's. He ended the season with an easy 13-3 victory, leaving him with an 18-2 record, eight of those wins by falls. Josh Carter pinned his opponent in 6:18. Brian Edens ended the season in style pinning Tom Falzure in 3:50 in the 2nd period for his 6th pin of the season. Flannery also won by a fall, decking Juan Teamon in 4:13 in the 2nd period finishing the season with a respectable 13-3 record as he looks forward to MAC's where he was runner up to Kenneth Tallman of Lycoming in the HWT division.

Come and cheer for your favorite wrestler at the MAC Championships at Swarthmore College on February 28-29th.
