Gomez Speaks on Gildah Stories

BY SARAH STARR
Of The Grizzly

Ursinus students and faculty, as well as local community members, gathered in Olin Auditorium on Monday evening, November 23 to hear author Jewelle Gomez read selections from her most recent novel The Gildah Stories. GALA and the Whittians sponsored her appearance.

A story about a young girl coming of age in a world of vampires, The Gildah Stories fosters Gomez's favorite technique of incorporating mythology into literature. Reminding the audience that our early views of society are molded by myth in the form of fairy tales, Gomez feels that its presence in modern literature has the power to open up readers.

By drawing on mythology as energy for her writing, she has been able to recreate characters that embody qualities that she admired in her family members. She was comfortable in an out-of-the-ordinary environment, saying that she felt a "strong sense of extended family; who was in it--not who was married to who."

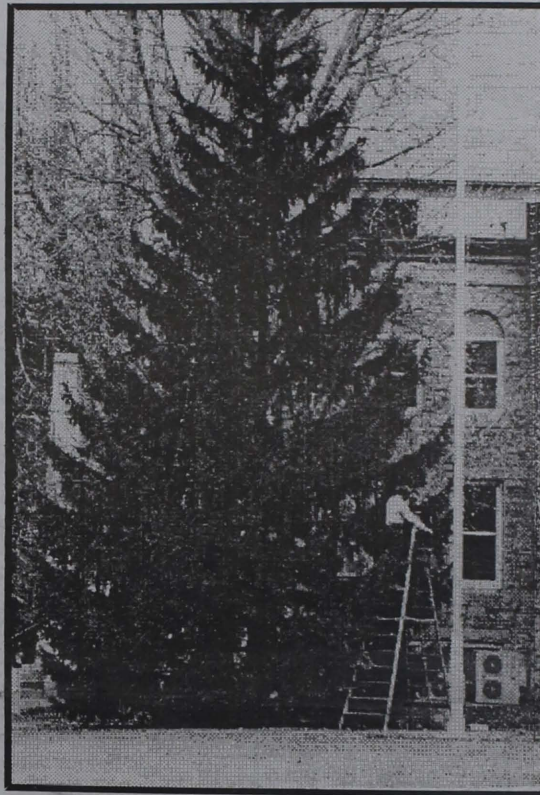

Gomez integrated some personal experience and a bit of her literary and political philosophy between three dramatic readings of sections of her novel. She read just enough to interest the audience, but not too much to spoil a future independent reading.

As a lesbian, feminist activist Gomez is an important member of the political community. She sometimes tires of "being on the line" and constantly explaining herself. Being so visible in this way, one of her goals is to reach people who think they already know her. "A certain smugness comes with political consciousness," Gomez said. "People elevate leaders...I'm still evolving."

Gomez answered questions following the reading of the selection of her novel. However, the audience was invited to join her in the relaxed atmosphere of the coffeehouse for some informal socializing.

Greek Service Projects

BY SARA JACOBSON
Associate Editor

Despite rumors to the contrary, greeks at Ursinus do do more than just party. As a matter of fact, many fraternities and sororities did a number of service oriented projects this past semester. Virtually all greek organizations supported Students and Teachers Against Rape (STAR) for one night of programs in the Wismer Lower Lounge for the Sexual Assault Awareness Week, and showed massive support at the residence life sponsored alcohol meeting. Various other projects were sponsored by greeks throughout the semester.

All sororities were involved in the fall blood drive, the haunted main street program for Collegeville kids at Halloween, and the Clean Up Collegeville project for the service days of sorority pledging.

Alpha Sigma Nu entertained elderly at a geriatric center with bingo and organized the haunted Main Street program. They also volunteered at a haunted hayride. Omega Chi is sponsoring an ongoing paper recycling drive. The sisters of Phi Alpha Psi toured the Salvation Army facilities and in conjunction with this held a clothing drive throughout November to benefit the Salvation Army Shelters over the holiday season. They also volunteered at the haunted woods at St. Eleanor's church, dressing up in costume to frighten little kids and benefit the church. The Phi Psi pledges entertained the elderly in Lansdale as a service project during pledging. Tau Sig held a letter writing campaign during pledging. The pledges wrote to the Prime Minister of England, John Majors, in support of a ban on cosmetic testing of animals, which would result in the ban of products that had been tested on animals within the European Community.

Fraternities have also been involved in service projects. Alpha Phi Omega joined the Walk-for-Life, raising over $1,000 to benefit disabled children in Montgomery County. They also adopted a stretch of Germantown Pike, which they will be responsible for keeping clean. The brothers of Beta Sig worked with Habitat for Humanity. Delta Pi was also involved with St. Eleanor's Haunted Woods, leading children through the forest. They also raised $100 to donate to a food drive for the local homeless.

So, yes the Greek system at Ursinus does benefit the campus and the entire Collegeville community. These countless projects have benefited many. Hopefully such efforts will continue into next semester.

Wellness Center Confusion

BY HOPE RINEHIMER
Of the Grizzly

This year an expense was added to the yearly tuition at Ursinus. This additional cost is called the wellness fee. A question which arose recently is "What does the wellness fee provide for the students?"

The question came about when several students were sent to the pharmacy to have their prescriptions filled at their own expense. Usually the Wellness Center provides these medications at no extra charge, but because of a communication problem with Montgomery County Hospital, the transfer of prescription medication to Ursinus' Wellness Center was stifled.

According to Jennifer Shanahan, coordinator of the center, everything should be back to normal by Monday, December 7. In addition, anyone who did purchase prescription medication in the past two or three weeks may take their receipt to the Wellness Center for a refund.

Other benefits of the Wellness Center this year include a doctor on staff for five extra hours each week, appointments at Trappe Family Practice free of charge or at a reduced cost, care for problematic gynecological issues, and counseling for whatever one's concern may be provided for by Miss Shanahan.

Global Perspectives

INTERNATIONAL

While officials from the United States press Vietnam to help in their search for the 2300 American MIA's, the Vietnamese don't hesitate to add that they have many more missing soldiers than the US, claiming to have as many as 300,000.

A new C.I.A. report concludes that the Iranian city of Teheran has made significant progress on a nuclear arms program and could have a nuclear weapon developed by the year 2000.

The efforts to aid the starving nation of Somalia are temporarily on hold after the shelling of a United nation's vessel and growing threats of violence at the nearby port of Magadishu.

As Japan's economy dries up and bigger companies begin to cut back, studies reveal that women are bearing the brunt of hiring freezes and paycuts.

NATIONAL

Many top executives feel that the nation's recent economic surge is directly related to Bill Clinton's victory in the November presidential election. They do add, however, that the pace of economic recovery will be relatively slow and that unemployment will remain a problem.

The Senate Ethics Committee has ordered its staff to begin a preliminary inquiry into sexual harassment accusations against Oregon Senator Bob Packwood.

Amy Fisher, the Long Island teen-ager who shot the wife of her purported lover has been sentenced to up to 15 years in prison. There has already been a book about the trial, and all three major television networks have plans for a TV movie.

A new project is underway to allow American households to receive up to 500 channels on their television sets. A spokesperson from Tele-Communications Inc. says that customers could watch virtually any movie on demand or choose from among 50 college football games on Saturday afternoons.

LOCAL

Local environmental groups have begun to pressure Philadelphia Mayor Ed Rendell to act upon his campaign promise of a cleaner environment for the city and surrounding area.

Residents of Montgomery County could begin to pay up to 68 cents more per month on their phone bills to pay for the installing of a 911 emergency service.

A new below-ground-level ramp is being planned to ease congestion on Route 202. The ramp would cut down on delays near the Schuykill Expressway exit in King of Prussia. Construction will begin in 1994.

with Gomez. "Jewelle depicted the hardships of being an African-American lesbian really well, but kept it on the positive side. She came to enlighten a lot of people and open doors," Simpson said. He added that he was very impressed to see so many open-minded people in attendance.

Jewelle Gomez is a graduate of the Columbia School of Journalism, and is the current director of the literature program of the New York State Council on the Arts. She is well known as a poet, fiction writer, and literary critic. Soon to be released is a series of new critical essays to add to her previous endeavors, which have appeared in many journals and anthologies. As a journalist, her work has appeared in the New York Times, the Nation and Gay Community News. She has published two collections of poetry, and, most recently, her mythological novel The Gildah Stories.

I hate good-byes, but they always seem to pop up in life. This seems to be another one of those dreaded moments. I have mixed feelings upon early graduation. Relief will hopefully outway all the sadness when I've turned in my last paper and taken my final exam. But for now, I can't help but realize how much I will miss this experience and all of the wonderful people that made it so memorable. I wanted to briefly thank Tom and Sara and all of the editors on the paper for making late hours and obstinent computers bearable. Good luck next semester! I think we've come a long way. I also wanted to thank my PALS for always being there. I am graduating with the confidence that I have made friendships that will last a lifetime. I won't say good-bye because I've promised everyone that I'd visit, but good-luck. The time goes by almost too fast to get the job done that we came here to do. Don't hesitate, it's just around the corner.

Happy Holidays!

What's number one on your Christmas wish list this year?

Sarah Starr-Senior-- I want to pass ESS 100, because if I don't, I don't graduate.

Monica Ardura-Senior-- I want to be able to go to Cancun in March with all my sisters, but for now, I hope everybody has a merry Christmas.

Louisa Schlee-Senior-- I want a man with a big red ribbon wrapped around his...neck.

Diana Brown-Senior-- I want a round-trip ticket to Denmark.

Monica Norris-Junior-- I just want to get through finals so that I can go home and spend time with my family.

Steve Devlin-Senior-- I want to go to Austria and go skiing.

Tina Moukoulis-Senior-- I want a job upon graduation.

Gar Donecker-Junior -- Toys.

Chris Bieler-Junior -- I want a white Christmas.

Tom Wilusz-Senior-- I want two new features editors!!

Steve Eck-Senior-- I want an airplane bottle of tequila.

Jenn Wolf-Junior-- I want a new Bursa Sac.

Joy O'Grady-Junior-- I want to know who Scheckie is!!!

Eric Widmaier - Sophomore -- I want an A in O-Chem.

John Barbour-Sophomore -- I want a new accordion, because my old one is out of tune.

It's that time of year again. Time for resting, eating, lots of parties, and gift exchanging. And we can't forget the singing! This is the time of year when, voices or not, everyone can be heard humming, whistling, or singing their favorite carol. From Rudolph the Red-nosed Reindeer to Silent Night, Holy Night, no one can resist this time-honored tradition.

This Thursday, December 10, you can have the opportunity of participating in such festivities. This week's A.H.A., sponsored by InterVarsity Christian Fellowship, will be a holiday celebration. At 8:00, we'll meet in the Parent's Lounge to go carolling around campus. Once our voices get tired, we'll go back to the lounge to have a white elephant gift exchange. What's that, you ask? You find something that you own that you really want to give away, wrap it up, and give it to someone. So, start looking for that set of scented soaps you got last year and have had no idea what to do with them! Come join us as we celebrate this awesome time of the year!

How To Handle Holiday Dysfunction

BY SARAH STARR
Features Editor

Did four days at home with your relatives seem like an eternity? Upon your return to Ursinus, was your response to "How was your Thanksgiving?" a bitter snap like, "Dysfunctional, but thanks for asking,?" Well, mine was, and I know I'm not the only one out there.

To all of the happy people who are just chomping at the bit in anticipation of the holiday season, you have my sincere best wishes. But you should know that I and the rest of the broken home, former latch-key-kid survivors often view the holidays as a series of obligatory familial get-togethers that cause us more pain than joy. Don't write us off as "scrooges" when we growl at your decorations and ask you to turn the carols down a decibel. Instead, call it envy. We wish we could be like you, but some of us are fighting an uphill battle just to get through the holidays, let alone enjoy them.

Here are some helpful hints on handling holiday dysfunction:

1. Play with relatives under the age of two-- they don't talk back.
2. Surround yourselves with your dysfunctional peers and practice the codependent behavior that is your destiny: drinking, over-eating, blaming others.
3. Rent a movie about a psychotic, serial killing Santa Claus.
4. Be mean to someone with a perfect family life-- it will make you feel better.
5. Don't get one job, get three. The less time in the home, the better.
6. Wear all black, lock yourself in your room and write emotional poetry about your dysfunction. Being deep is trendy.
7. Sell your story to Hard Copy, then tour the talk show circuit as a dysfunction survivor.

8. The "Baby Boomers" brought you into their world of weak idealism and sparked the decay of the family structure, causing your dysfunction. Go to the library and research demographics, then laugh sinisterly knowing that there won't be enough space or money for all of them to retire comfortably when they get old. After all, they won't be able to live with you since statistics show that you're destined to be divorced at least twice and chemically dependent in one way or another.

Most importantly, remind yourself that if you've made it this far with all that dysfunction piled up against you, you can handle just about anything. Remember, every holiday that you spend at home brings you one step closer to that eventual day after graduation when you'll finally be on your own. Happy Dysfunctional Holidays!

Scheckie, with one K Scheckie, Scheckie once again returns to bring you vast knowledge from beyond. Believe in Scheckie, Scheckie believes in you.

Aquarius--Scheckie knows you are stressed about upcoming exams. Don't wait until the last minute, start studying now so you won't have to cram later.

Pisces--A friend may develop deeper feelings for you. Be careful not to lead them on if you are not interested.

Aries--Try to keep your opinions to yourself. If someone wants your advice, they'll ask for it.

Taurus--Someone may ask you to lie to cover for them. Don't do it--you may get yourself into trouble.

Gemini--Now is not the time to be running up bills. Cut the spending! Christmas is coming up!

Cancer--A bad deed may come back to haunt you.

Leo--These last few days of class is your last chance to suck up to the professors. Take advantage of it.

Virgo--Don't over-agonize over a recent indiscretion. Everyone makes mistakes. You'll laugh about it later.

Libra--Your friends may have a hard time dealing with your mood swings. Lighten up!

Scorpio--Don't get mad, get even.

Sagittarius--You are quite the social butterfly these days. Leave enough time to do what has to be done.

Capricorn--Keep on top of things this week. Unexpected turns of events may sneak up on you.

Scheckie hopes you get the "Cheers" trivia question correct. Scheckie wishes you luck on finals. Believe in Scheckie, Scheckie believes in you.

Tina Moukoulis

Tina Moukoulis is a star student on campus. She has given back to the college as much as she has received.

Majoring in International Relations and double minoring in Anthropology and History, Tina aspires to someday be involved in cross cultural relations and diplomatic affairs.

Tina is active in several clubs and causes. She is a member of the College Democrats, the International Relations Club, STAR, the Ursinus Service Club and the Model UN. Tina also played a key role in bringing the AIDS quilt to campus.

Tina has earned three academic scholarships. They include the W.W. Smith Scholarship, the Four Jays Scholarship and the Robert Scirica Scholarship.

When asked to reflect on her years at Ursinus, Tina had many thoughts about the student body. "Three are some very interesting, intellectual people on campus," she said, "and I was always able to be friends with people in the Greek system, even though I chose not to be Greek." Looking back on her classes, Tina believes she has received a very "well-rounded education."

WISMER'S CHRISTMAS DINNER

BY MEGAN MENDTE
Associate Editor

Following the annual tree-lighting ceremony on Wednesday, December 2nd, a special dinner was held in Wismer Center. Students brought their favorite teachers to dinner, giving them a "taste" of the Wismer experience.

Of course, the "Wismer experience" was drastically changed to suit the needs of the older clientele for the evening. Red and green tablecloths adorned each table, along with festive candles. Frosty the Snowman, reindeer, and even Santa smiled down on the faculty from the walls of the transformed Wismer.

Two long serving tables piled high with sumptuous holiday eats awaited the teachers, who hungrily gripped the tickets which would allow them to partake of either one piece of roast beef or a heaping spoonful of shrimp.

While uninvited teachers paid dearly for their culinary delights ($5.75), students and their guests rejoiced in the extravagance (that had previously paid been for by the students activities fees). Students also had the enjoyment of watching their confused professors aimlessly walking around the caf searching for the condiment table. Dr. Volkmer, Professor of English, was Claire Erfle and Dave Billitto's guest. Holding his red tray full of food, he asked, "Why don't you have a tray? Aren't they cool?"

Dr. Volkmer caught on to some of the Wismer rules quicker than others. Some never caught on at all. But no one seemed to care. Even President Richter was seen partaking of the festivities. Overall, the mixing of students and faculty during meals didn't cause too much havoc, and it turned out to be a fine dining experience for all.

RUSSIAN ROCK WITH YURI

BY TOM WILUSZ
Editor-in-Chief

On Wednesday night, December 2, Delta Mu Sigma sponsored guitarist/vocalist Yuri Naumov in the Wismer Lower Lounge. Yuri, a Russian expatriate, performed two hours of original instrumental pieces and folk-inspired songs for the pre-exam gathering. Afterwards, we had an opportunity to talk with the artist about his music and his culture.

Yuri pointed out the influence that such Western bands as Led Zeppelin played in his music—and his life. "Western rock and roll was one of the greatest forces turning youth away from Communism...it let us see, hey, look, how can the West be so bad when it produces this wonderful music?"

Of those who saw Yuri, some responded with fascination with his mesmerizing music, while others were most interested in the story he had to tell. Senior Chris Whalen (responsible for bringing Yuri to Ursinus) is more erudite: "He's a freak! He knows 27 tunings!" What more is there?

BY CHRISTIAN SOCKEL
Of The Grizzly

Two weeks ago, Senior Fellow at the Hudson Institute and former Education Secretary and Drug Czar William Bennett made a statement during his speech at the D.C. based Heritage Foundation, saying, "...if 700,000 Americans have $50 dollars to go out and buy Madonna's Sex book, then we don't have an economic problem in this country, we have a much deeper problem...a cultural one." This recondite statement by this Republican Statesman illustrates clearly that America is indeed in the wake of a cultural war, a war that is being waged between functional values of decency that are rooted in integrity, morality, and a clear sense of goodness and the liberal, no-responsibility, limitless behavior, which is rooted in anarchistic and anti-religious beliefs.

Standards for behavior and decorum have been on the decline in America. A timely example of this national deterioration was the impugning of character and family values as not being 1992 election issues. These two monumental issues were lambasted for their religious extremism and irrelevance to leadership today in America, where alcohol, drugs, guns, sex and condoms, and rap music have become the new Pillars of Education.

American society is losing its religiosity and spirit by allowing itself to be persuaded that morality, virtue, and standards for behavioral decency should be defined by individual choice. "Morality cannot be defined by individual choice," says talk radio icon Rush Limbaugh, and he is right on target. When flexible boundaries are set upon one's own behavior and are not rooted in a moral code (be it Catholic, Lutheran, or Buddhist), there is no standard by which to act and no limit upon one's actions. You can never be wrong and always have the hackneyed excuse that you were "just experimenting" or "having fun." For our American society to be the greatest and most prosperous that it can be, we must affix attitudes to our actions which endear and urge excellence, decency, and propriety.

Behavior needs limitation, it needs morality, and it needs standards with a prescription of positive direction. An election to live a whimsical and irresponsible life is an admission that morality and standards are too difficult to follow and that one cannot have fun if rules are followed and values are set above the indulgence of physical and mental pleasure. Morality and values cultivate character and self-respect. Morality and values cultivate excellence and achievement. Morality and values cultivate high standards. Standards that descend from religion are the most functional because they outline essential moral actions and values which do create living standards that breed respectable love, understanding, congruity, and excellence. Religious functional values as well define the ills of a promiscuous and experimental life. One does not need to smell the roses to discover that abusing drugs is debasing.

There are consequences to all of our actions. The problem with a liberal life-style of limitless behavior and promiscuousness is that it fails to enforce responsibility for choices made. Standards require responsibility for actions and behavior because a life of standards respects authority and the ideas behind responsible and positive involvement.

Madonna's book and the pornography culture literally illustrate a decline in the standards and morality that America is experiencing as a result of liberal views on socially acceptable and beneficial institutions. This book and those videos are not art, they are not free expression (because too many women are victimized), they are not entertainment. They are deviant, they are perverse, and they are wrong. American society should recognize the deleterious effects that such vice bears upon the youth and the status quo by skewing what is acceptable and what is not.

Rap songs such as Ice Tea's Cop Killer and Paris' Bush Killa (both grandeurize violent abdication of authority and wanton murder) have fallen into the murky depths of free expression and the 1st Amendment quagmire. There should be no debate on the artistic and free expression of these infectious and harmful songs. It is worthless and only reflects our waning ability to distinguish right from wrong. This speaks directly to the standards that our society needs to re-define under the aegis of decency in our pursuit of excellence and values. Opting not to listen to such rap music yet still maintaining that it's acceptable under the 1st Amendment is shirking the issue of standards and decency.

It is your hard work, your morality, your ambition, your attitude, and your behavior standards of decency and decorum that shape your destiny in life. And the shape and value of your life is something of which you should be proud, not a limitless engagement in dalliance that only satisfied your curiosity or your 1st Amendment rights.

A Lack of Preventive Aid

BY DAVID VAN BENTHUYSEN
Of The Grizzly

World AIDS Day occurred on Tuesday, December 1st and was received with little attention on the Ursinus Campus. Unfortunately, this comes as no surprise to those of us who have been waiting for some form of protection to be readily available on campus. Protection from STDs on a campus as small as ours should be given priority not red tape.

I remember the "experimental" school year of 1990-91, when condoms were distributed free through the resident assistants. Apparently one of three things occurred during the summer between this year and 1991-2. Either we cunningly destroyed the virus and others like it, thus rendering Ursinus a permanent disease-free zone, or we caused the distribution program to go broke through our all too frequent sexual exploits (explaining the extra $1,000 on our 1991-92 tuition bill.) Finally the roadblock which probably has been causing the most harm to the practice of safe-sex on campus, the moral minority. Sad but true, there still are some conservatives lurking in the shadows after that glorious day in December, and their inability to separate church and state; private beliefs from public compassion, causes the toll to rise exponentially.

I have spent almost three years at Ursinus College looking for a condom machine, wondering when our recently inefficient health center will stop making us beg for condoms. I don't anticipate this day in the near future since we now even have to beg for cough drops only to be told, "Well, I can write you a prescription for some but we're a wellness center now, not a dispensary." You'll have to pay even more money now if you want good health." The strange truth is that I saw a grocery bag full of condoms in the health center not one month ago. Upon inquiry I was told that these were for demonstration purposes only. Why was the grocery bag full then? How many demonstrations could have possibly been given? Maybe they were keeping it a secret from the moral minority who surely would have been outraged knowing such a large number of disease protection concentrated in one bag.

Ursinus College, land where students have to beg for fire escapes, grovel to the "compassionate" maintenance staff for wheelchair accessibility and wait for years for fabled condom machines to appear somewhere, anywhere on campus. How about trying another experiment this year. We could fill a large fishbowl with STD protectors and place it in the wellness center. This way students would have 24 hour availability in an environment which is constantly supervised by staff who would guard against abuse/vandalism. Something should be done soon, ignorance is not a solution no matter how good it feels.

Some disturbing news was realized on World AIDS Day: the AIDS quilt is now too large to transport in one piece. This is just the American AIDS quilt; many countries have their own personal version and they are miles wide and growing. Help destroy the possibility that Ursinus may one day have its own personal quilt.

Greetings from France

I just wanted to write to say that I hope all is well at UC. Here in France, things are great! I'm learning tons of French and meeting lots of interesting people, too! As far as the States go, I've really learned what it is like to be an American in another part of the world. For example, in France, I find that people are a bit more reserved with us, whereas in other countries around Europe, such as Spain, they seem to absolutely love Americans! So far, I've travelled to Amsterdam, Holland; Munich, Germany; Salzburg, Austria; Barcelona, Spain; throughout Switzerland; and around most of the south of France, like Nice, Cannes, St. Tropez, Monte Carlo, etc. I'm living and studying in a town called Aix-en-Provence, which is also in the south of France. The weather here is beautiful--rather warm compared to there in Collegeville, probably. This past weekend in Barcelona for example, it was gorgeous and extremely warm! Kathy (Chetkowski) and I got to see all the sights of the Olympics there. It was really neat!

I was happy to hear about Clinton winning the Presidential election. Here, in France, his picture was "plastered" all over every newspaper; the French are very much into their politics, that's for sure! It was also exciting to be here in Europe during the voting of the Maastricht Treaty. I really learned a lot!

Presently, I am working with a class of French students in their last year at a Catholic school. I do mainly English activities with them, and I also find that they are very interested in American life. It's amazing how much they know about different countries, too. For instance, one of my French friends speaks five languages! I also took a course on wine-tasting. Needless to say, it was a lot of fun, and I learned how important wine is to their culture.

Well, I guess that's about all for now. I would strongly suggest to everyone, no matter what your major is, to try to take the opportunity to study abroad because it has definitely been the best experience of my life! Oh, and thanks to all of you who managed to write to me! Hope you all have a great Thanksgiving and Merry Christmas! See you in January!

A Bientot,
Janene Paist

Response to Disabled Accessibility

I'm writing in response to recent articles in The Grizzly about accommodating the disabled on campus. There were some issues in those articles that I would like to discuss.

I think the topic of accommodating the disabled on campus is an important topic, and I'm glad to see that it's being given attention.

Campus Memo

BY RICHARD P. RICHTER
President of the College

PHILANTHROPY AND STUDENTS: On three occasions last week I took part in gatherings of merit scholars and the donors of their merit scholarships--the meeting of minds and money, as it were.

One occasion took place at the Merion Cricket Club in Haverford on the Main Line. The hosts were the family and trustees of the W.W. Smith Charitable Trust. The guests were seniors in colleges and universities in our area who are holders of W.W. Smith Scholar awards, accompanied by their presidents. Our two W.W. Smith Scholars, Jennifer Janco and Wesley Lipschultz, met not only the Trust's representatives but also their peers from places such as LaSalle, Haverford, Widener, Philadelphia College of Textile and Science, Temple, Delaware Valley, and the like.

Mr. Peter Havens, speaking for the Trust, in a short speech, told us why the Trust hold this annual reception. It allows Mrs. Mary Smith, widow of Mr. W.W. Smith, who created the Trust, and other members of the family to meet face to face the many students who benefit from the scholarships awarded by the Trust. And it allows the students to see that "philanthropy" is not an abstract concept but a very human process by which charitable impulses are translated by the people who run the Trust into material aid to the students because of their high academic potential. It's a sort of "people to people" exercise.

Mr. Havens serves as a member of the Board of Directors of Ursinus.

Our own development office at Ursinus organized two receptions for the student recipients of endowed merit scholarships. This year, for the first time, we also invited the donors of the scholarships or other interested persons to come and meet the student who holds their particular scholarship.

One group gathered at Dean Akin's home on the evening of December 4. Another group met with Mrs. Richter and me on December 6 in the Berman Museum.

Many people ask me how I like the part of my job that requires me to ask alumni, friends and others to give money to help Ursinus. I have to tell them that it is sometimes stressful and fraught with the danger of being disappointed; but it is also, in the end, immensely rewarding--especially when one sees the beneficial results of gifts that make a direct contribution to the education of the students of quality. It was with such a sense of reward that I attended these recent gatherings of donors and scholarship recipients.

THE SEASON: The advent of the holidays and the appearance of the last Grizzly of the semester prompt me to express my good wishes of the season to students, faculty, staff, and friends of the College.

The view from my perch has persuaded me that we have enjoyed an upbeat semester. It has had its fill of student crises and faculty concerns, to be sure. But what semester does not? I have personally felt good about the semester because of the deliberate resolve to be around and to be in touch; this enabled me to share in the interests and concerns of many individuals and faculty.

I thank one and all for helping, each in his or her own way, to make Ursinus a rewarding place to be and hope all of us have a restorative break. May we as a college community find fulfillment and a renewed sense of common commitment in the new semester and the new year.

I am one of few disabled students of campus. Although I do not consider myself to be handicapped, I do not mind the use of the term "disabled." I do prefer the term "physically challenged" over either of the other terms, however. I think Ellen Sylvester's use of the term "physically challenged" was correct. Since I use a motorized cart to get around campus, and I also use crutches, I do face many physical challenges during any given day.

I am aware of the fact that some people on this campus feel that Ursinus is not accessible, or that it is not as accessible as it should be. As a physically challenged student on campus, I feel that Ursinus is very accessible. When I began to consider colleges a few years ago, the colleges that I visited or received information from were not nearly as accessible as this one. I was referred to Ursinus by the mother of a friend who also uses a cart to get around. Since he graduated from Ursinus about five years ago, at least some changes had to be made then. I have always thought that before the ADA was passed, only state schools had to be made accessible to the handicapped. If that is the case, then I believe Ursinus should be given credit for something they did not have to do in the past, but chose to do anyway.

One of the buildings people frequently mention when talking about accessibility on campus is Bomberger. Since I can walk, when I want to go to the first floor or the basement of Bomberger, I can use the steps. Getting to the second or third floor, however, is difficult because of the time and energy I would need to reach those areas. I realize that a person who cannot walk would not be able to reach the commuter lounge. I also realize that putting an elevator in Bomberger would cost a lot of money. I think one thing people have to realize is that Bomberger was built not only long before laws like the ADA were passed, but also at a time when people who were handicapped often died early in life because of a lack of advanced technology. At that time, many handicapped people who survived were put in institutions. They either did not have, or were not given, the kinds of opportunities that physically challenged people are given today.

Another thing that was mentioned in the recent articles was the fact that it is difficult for "normal" people to think about the feelings and difficulties that handicapped people face. Some handicapped people might get upset with that, and although I sometimes wish that "normal" people would think more about my challenges in life, I realize that it is very hard to understand a situation unless you are in it. I don't blame people for not thinking of every little difficulty I might run into. I can guarantee that if I was "normal," I wouldn't think of every problem a handicapped person might face. I'm human, like everyone else.

Please understand that this is just my opinion, and that I do have a motorized cart and crutches, which have influenced my opinion on this topic. I'm sure certain things about accessibility which bother some people might not bother me because I have been physically challenged for my entire life. I have at least partially, if not completely, adjusted to and gotten used to the challenges I face on an everyday basis. I encourage students, faculty, and staff to try to become aware of the obstacles in the everyday life of physically challenged Ursinus students.

I realize that I will have at least some obstacles wherever I go. Humans are not perfect. Therefore, the world cannot be perfect.

UC SNAPS LOSING STREAK; PICKS UP THREE WINS

BY JEFF ECKERSON
Of The Grizzly

Ursinus Men's Basketball coach Jack Spinella wasn't sure how quickly it would happen. He knew that his team would eventually win some games. So many talented players could not exist on the same team, Spinella surmised, and not be successful at some point during the season. Then again, something in the back of the coach's mind told him that teams whose rosters are mostly freshmen don't usually do very well. Fortunately for Spinella and the Bears, the victories came sooner rather than later. After opening the season with lopsided losses to Dickinson and Hampden Sydney, the Bears rattled off three straight wins last week, to give the team a winning record for the first time in over two years.

On Tuesday, the team traveled to Albright to meet the 2-0 Lions in an interdivisional battle. The Bears looked like a much different team from the one which had come back from Dickinson with two losses the previous week. Using a disciplined offense and a tenacious defense, Ursinus jumped to a 19-5 lead which it never relinquished. With the help of 15 points from senior guard William Briggs and 14 points and 11 rebounds from freshman center Jim Zurad, the Bears went on to win 58-45. Coach Spinella was very happy with the team's effort, especially defensively. "We just held an excellent team to forty five points," Spinella said. "They are picked to win their division and to come in here and beat them like we did is an excellent effort."

After that confidence-building victory, the team cut its Thanksgiving break short to participate in the Griffin Invitational Tournament at Gwynedd Mercy College. Friday night saw the Bears matched up with the home team. An excellent all-around effort allowed the Bears to open up a 20-point halftime lead and then coast to a win.

The tournament's championship game had Ursinus pitted against St. Joseph's College of New York. Ursinus again charged out to a large halftime lead. In the second half, however, St. Joseph's roared back to cut the lead to 58-54 with ten minutes to play. The Bears were able to hold off the comeback and gained a hard fought win.

Following the championship game, Ursinus freshman guard Bernie Rogers was named the tournament's most valuable player. He was joined on the all-tournament team by another member of the Ursinus backcourt, junior Steve Renzi.

When asked about the tournament, Coach Spinella was not at a loss for words. "I am obviously very pleased with our winning streak. This team works very hard and has a lot of heart. I have no doubt, however, that we can play better. My goal is always to improve with every game and I hope we continue to do that."

SPORTS EDITOR'S NOTE:

Due to time constraints, the following information could not appear in the above article:

-On Wednesday, December 2, the Bears beat Phila. Pharmacy 56-55. UC won on a last-minute lay-up by Will Briggs in Helfferich Hall.

-Over the weekend, UC participated in the Greene Classic at Juniata College. The Bears lost the first game to Washington & Jefferson, 80-76. The score from Sunday's consolation game was unavailable.

LADY BEARS RECAP

BY BETSY LASKOWSKI
AND ELLEN COSGROVE
Of The Grizzly

Three weeks and six games into their season, the Ursinus Women's Basketball team has compiled a 2-4 record. The Bears opened their season at the Johns Hopkins Tip-Off Tournament in Baltimore, Md. A disappointing buzzer-beater left the team one point shy of a victory in the consolation round.

Once back in Pennsylvania, Ursinus was able to break their two-game losing streak with a win on the road at Swarthmore in their first MAC game. Betsy Laskowski led the way with 14 points. Ellen Cosgrove scored 13, and Jeannine Fleming added 10.

In their next MAC matchup at Muhlenburg, UC headed into the locker room after a strong first half with an 11-point advantage. In the second half, the Mules capitalized on the Lady Bears sloppy play and stole away an Ursinus victory.

Once more on the road, the team travelled to Albright and picked up their second MAC victory, upping their conference record to 2-1. After a seemingly even matchup, Ursinus pulled way ahead in the last five minutes to drub the Lady Lions 83-59. A special thanks to Ellen Cosgrove, who poured in 36 points and pulled down 19 rebounds.

In their home opener last weekend against Delaware Valley, UC was handed their fourth loss of the season. Despite a valiant effort in the first half and a seven-point halftime lead, the Lady Bears turned over the ball more than 30 times and allowed Del Val to win the game by ten points. (After the disappointing loss, a crazed mob of Lady Bear fans were escorted from Helfferich Hall after dismantling the bleachers and hurling the pieces at the Del Val bench. Donations are being accepted in order to post bail for the mob leader, Heather Colvin's father, currently in the Collegeville jail.)

There are a few things to note about the Lady Bears' team. Four seniors graduated from the 1992 team, leaving this year's squad young and inexperienced. The lone senior, team captain Betsy Laskowski, has provided the leadership Ursinus has needed both on and off the court. Juniors Heather Colvin and Jeannine Fleming also helped the young team with their upperclass experience. On the court, Cosgrove leads the team in scoring, averaging just under 20 points per game. Freshmen Laura Coulter and Kristin Wallin have both stepped into starting roles.

HARLEY'S HAVEN

BY HARLEY DAVID RUBIN
Hanukkah Harry's Grandson

Hey, sports fans, I love ya! Since this is "the season to be jolly," I had planned on making this a Happy Haven. But the pathetic performances of the Philly teams recently has made me feel like last year's holiday fruitcake--old, stale, and even a little rank. So in keeping with an age-old tradition (giving the Haven a theme), I'm going to ask Santa Claus/Hanukkah Harry/Kwanzaa Kim/or Guru Tom for help over the break...

Oh great icons of the holiday season, please grant the Flyers a healthy Eric Lindros with a Get-Out-of-Jail-Free Card. The 19-year old center (I can't get over that age thing) was in a restaurant/nightclub in Canada when he allegedly pushed around a woman and spit beer on her. Two things:

how on Earth did he get served (then again, if I was a bartender, I'd serve the 6'5" brute), and why haven't the Flyers appointed somebody his constant guardian to keep him out of trouble? Seems to me they should be protecting The Franchise from hurting himself or others. One last note about young Eric--I wonder if his behavior would be noticeable in a Reimert suite on a Saturday night.

Dear Santa/Harry/Kim/ Guru Tom: I want a better 76ers team. I don't care how you do it, just get it done. If you have to actually go to the locker room and actually light a fire under them, do it. I am really surprised that new head coach Doug Moe hasn't been able to inspire the team to set new goals, to have a good time, to win a damned game. Maybe if just one guy (preferably team captain Hersey Hawkins) opened his mouth and gave a motivational speech, the Eighty-Sixers could climb out of the Atlantic Division cellar.

The Eagles. Oh boy. From a 4-0 Super Bowl lock to a second-place team with hopes of a wildcard playoff berth. Santa & Co., we need to continue the kind of play we saw in the second half of the 49ers game and in Sunday's 28-14 win over the Vikings. I only hope the coaches let Randall play his game for the rest of the season, like they did on Sunday. He rushed and passed for over 100 yards each and made his own two fumbles inconsequential. I also hope Da Iggles can overcome the inconsistency shown during this season and get to the playoffs (GUTSY GUESS: They will.)

I want I want I want. I want the Phillies to sign a big-name free agent (ex.: Joe Carter). More realistically, I want general manager

Lee Thomas to make a statement to the press, saying exactly what direction this team is taking. Are we going to stick with the players we've got and hope it works, or are we going to make some trades at the winter meetings and mix things up? Personally, I don't know which would be better. The division is in a state of chaos--the NL East Champion Pirates lost MVP Barry Bonds and ace pitcher Doug Drabek to free agency, and most of the rest of the division stinks. (Side note: Bonds is going to make over $45 million dollars over the next six years with the San Francisco Giants. Remember that I would play for free.)

Well, this has been quite a self-indulgent Haven (aren't they all?). Anyway, on to last issue's Trivia Answer: Frasier and Dr. Simon Finch-Royce (John Cleese) were in "The Mikado" in school; Frasier was "Yum-Yum." And so is this week's C.H.O.C.R.'"Cheers" Trivia Question: How much money did Cliff wager on "Final Jeopardy" and what was his question? (I loved that episode. OK, I love them all.) Well, I'm outta here. Remember, I'm Harley David Rubin, and I know who Scheckie is and you don't. (P.S.: Congratulations to my brother, who has made All-State in soccer, was elected homecoming king of his high school, and just received his driver's license. That's one hell of a month.)
