Er...sinus Announces Change in Admissions Policy

BY GRETTA LIFE
Special to The Goofly

A continually evolving admissions policy and the rapidly changing social structure here at Er...sinus have prompted Admissions officials to make major changes in this year's Freshman Orientation program. These changes are bound to have a dramatic effect on next year's campus atmosphere.

Among the most important of these changes will be an easing of age requirements for the incoming Class of '97. "The fact is, it's downright discriminatory for a liberal institution like Er...sinus to deny enrollment to an individual based on that individual's age," said Stew Topless of the Admissions Office.

"Under present guidelines, if you're not at least sixteen years old and a high school graduate, we won't even look at your application," Mr. Topless went on. "So what we have is this great, untapped population of four-, five-, and six-year olds, as smart as any of our freshmen, perfectly capable of succeeding at a school like Er...sinus. And these individuals are just screaming for someone to give them a shot at higher education."

To solve this problem, Admissions has decided to adopt a "Puberty-neutral" application review procedure for next year's incoming freshman class. "With this new policy--the only one of its kind, that we know of--we won't find ourselves in the uncomfortable position of looking at a great application, a potentially great student, and saying, 'We can't take this guy--he's only six.'" Mr. Topless told The Goofly.

The administration has already begun to make the adjustments necessary to the implementation of the "Puberty-neutral" policy. In February, a special Red and Gold weekend was held. Instead of the usual two-day format, though, Admissions decided to experiment with an abbreviated one-day format, interrupted with frequent nap- and potty-breaks. The weekend was met with tremendous enthusiasm by parents and faculty alike.

"Billy simply had a splendid time," said Mrs. Perry Winkle, the mother of one prospective communication arts major. "We were especially impressed with the computer databases at Myrin--after all, Billy is far too short to reach most of the shelved books."

"I was very happy to see that the arts were finally emphasized," added Ted Scayrzus, teacher of fine arts at Er...sinus, referring to an early-afternoon crayon coloring session held in Berman. "Too often, what with Er...sinus's emphasis on the sciences, we find our creative sides neglected."

If all goes as planned, the "Puberty-neutral" policy should increase enrollment in Fall, 1993 by 20%. Not only will this make next year's freshman class the largest in Er...sinus history, but also, certainly, the most diverse. And that is what a liberal education is all about.

Global Disrespectives

BY SHEEZA DUMHOE
Of the Goofly

Unfortunately, it has been a slow week on both the international and national fronts. The Er...sinus campus, however, is just overflowing with news. Let's get right to it!

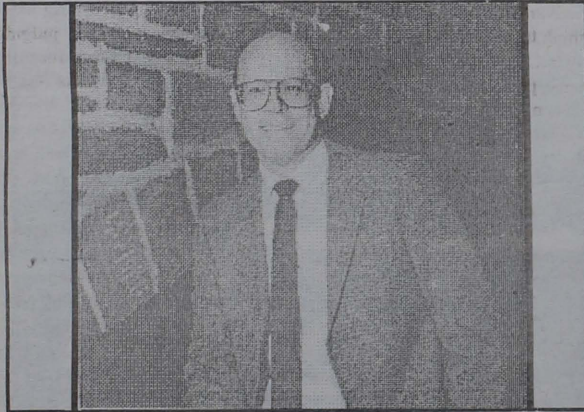

--The physics department suffered a great loss as one of their own, Dr. Luckless Eggy, was struck down in the line of duty. Apparently, Eggy was struck by a stray scud missile from the Persian Gulf War while setting up a lab on the Pfhaler observatory. The incident could have been avoided, however. It seems that Eggy got his days of the week mixed up and should have been downstairs giving a lecture instead of preparing the lab.

--The politics department is searching for a new department chairperson after the dismissal of Dr. Pickleless Cherry. Cherry lost his job after investigations revealed he had hired illegal aliens to work in his home. Er...sinus President Rick Dichter would not comment on possible replacements, but the leading candidate seems to be Russian President Boris Yeltsin. One department spokesman, who requested to be identified as "Ditz," said, "My man Boris is a great choice! It looks like he'll be out of a job shortly, and Er...sinus needs a guy who ain't afraid to cause controversy."

--Speaking of new faculty appointees, Er...sinus has announced the following new staff members for the 1993-94 academic year:

Biology Professor: Dr. Jack Kevorkian
Campus/Family Counselor: Woody Allen
Education Professor: Dan Quayle
Public Speaking Professor: Admiral Stockdale
Campus Minister: David Koresh

Senior Citizen's Profile: Houston Pane

The folks at Madison Avenue may be convinced that it's "A Young World," but don't try telling that to this week's Senior. At 88 ("And a half!" the spunky senior is quick to note), feisty Houston Pane is living the life most of us only dream of--and he's doing it his way.

"Sinatra is still the king, say what you will. Oh, I get out to see all the hip shows in the city--your Billy Jewel and BeeGees and Dead Leopards--but no one will ever croon like Ol' Blue Eyes," the gregarious geriatric told The Goofly.

But don't think that this is just another swingin' senior! Aside from his efforts at Er...sinus, Pane is a dedicated environmentalist who has adopted at least two stretches of Route 113. "We've just got to keep this ol' world clean!" is this recycling retiree's refrain.

When he's not raising heck in Center City or doing his part for the planet, Pane can be found at his

Roommates Arrested

BY IREEK N. CAMDEN
Someone Near and Dear to the Goofly

On Saturday night, two roommates were arrested for disorderly conduct. The two girls shall remain anonymous due to the fact that it would ruin their reputation if people knew what happened.

The two girls had an argument over which one was going to have dibs on Guru Tom. Both girls have lusted after him since they found out his true identity. They both stated that they love his long, flowing hair and his quirky smile. They both commented on his g-d-like features and his cool personality. He was one thing that the roommates could agree on.

Their fight broke out quickly when each wanted to go after Guru Tom. The fight looked like a rendition of Laverne and Shirley; the way they run around in circles, saying, "Come on!" At first, innocent bystanders thought it was all in jest until punches were thrown, hair pulled, and even biting.

A friend that would like to also remain anonymous also broke up the fight just as the police entered. Fortunately, the friend sustained minimal injuries: a broken leg and front tooth (it was knocked out). This was not your normal girl fight.

The final straw that got them both thrown in jail was when one roommate bit the police officer. Now, both of them are sitting in the same jail cell still arguing over who will get Guru Tom. Their parents will not bail them out of jail because they do not want to admit that the girls are their children because of the extreme embarrassment.

Creamery Condo Unit--where his neighbors nickname him "Partyin' Pane."

"Oh, he's a wild one!" says Virginia Goldstein, Pane's (strictly platonic) neighbor. "Why, some nights he'll be up watching those Sinatra videos until well after eight o'clock. I know because that's when Wheel of Fortune comes on--the old one, with Pat and Vanna, not that nasty new one. The host on the new Wheel just isn't nice like Pat."

So hats off to Houston Pane--senior citizen, adventure seeker! Senior Citizen Profiles salutes you!

Should Er...sinus liberalize its drug and alcohol policy?

Amey Flemming, Senior--Yes.

Kate Phillips, Senior--Yes.

Timothy Creech, Senior--YES.

Jennifer Woodbury, Junior--Yes.

Brent Baldasare, Senior--Er...sinus's current fermentational doctrine, coupled with a constrictional/prohibitional attitude toward those chemo-organic substances (re:narcotics) is definitely congruent with natiofederal dictum; concomitant is the corollative response that Er...sinus's policy should remain intransitive.

Peter Senescu, Senior--Yes.

World Ends, But Er...sinus Carries On With Classes

BY S. FARVERGNEUGAN
Of Volkswagen and the Open Road

Despite the curious and dire events of Tuesday evening as the world itself came to an end, Er...sinus College declared that it will remain open through this week and until the earth itself crashes and burns into the sun, an event that has been predicted for next Thursday morning.

Although many Er...sinus students and faculty perished in Tuesday's initial turmoil, the administration has made it clear that classes will be held. In a special and uncharacteristic demonstration of kindness the school did declare Wednesday to be a special "End of the World Day" and that any students who were unable to make it to classes due to the earthquake down Main street that left a crack at least 69 miles deep and forty feet across where the street used to be would be allowed to make up the work. Those students, however, are expected to arrange their own transportation in time for Thursday's classes.

While much of the administration perished in the horrible fire that spontaneously erupted from the center of the earth Tuesday afternoon and thus were unavailable for comment on the situation, The Goofly managed to track down Er...sinus President "Tricky" Rick Dichter at his luxurious mansion on the Jersey Shore. Seconds before phone lines were brought down by the torrential hail that plagued Ma Bell and the entire East coast for seven hours early Tuesday evening, this reporter was able to obtain the following comment from Dichter: "Yeah, of course Er...sinus will hold classes Wednesday morning. Our students can handle it. We encourage them to be tough. I believe that there's even a group from our camping class that at this very moment is out roughing it in the foothills of the Poconoes. I'm sure that they will particularly learn a lot about dealing with crisis and the great outdoors during this week. So, yes, Er...sinus will remain open for business come Hell or high waters!" At this point the connection was abruptly cut. Unsubstantiated rumors have claimed that at this point Dichter's estate was beaten in by massive tidal waves and flooding and that Dichter himself was claimed as yet another victim in what will no doubt become known as "The End of the World as We Know It '93."

No word was available on the condition of the camping class.

John Bolaris has, contrary to Er...sinus policy, repeatedly urged that everyone stay inside as Pennsylvania has declared itself in a state of emergency and as the earth falls out of its orbit. Er...sinus students, as the world hurtles toward the sun and massive destruction is imminent, will have to make up their own minds.

Roomates' Retchings (aka Advice)

Dear Nikki and Vikki,

I have a serious problem! My Politics professor, Dr. Dick Herry, and I have been having a torrid affair. I didn't think it was a problem at first. In fact, I was very much enjoying our time together. My friends are jealous and I love it! But I didn't expect to receive preferential treatment in the classroom for my extracurricular activities in his office. How do I know if I'm getting my 'A' for my academic ability rather than for my position. I don't want to end the affair. HELP!!!

Politically Correct

Dear Politically Correct,

Your problem is a common one for college students. College professors begin looking at students as adults and as companions rather than as students. Some people don't agree with it, but if it's okay with you then go for it. As for your grades it's not how you get them, but what you get. Safe sex is another issue of concern. Both of us are currently involved with professors, who's names will remain anonymous due to spouses on campus. From our involvement we have learned that the professors really get around. Use a condom!!! Also remember to try not to get too attached to him; from what we hear about his reputation... he's heartbreaker! Be careful! But have fun (that's your number one priority--it's ours!).

N&V

Dear Nikki and Vikki,

I am very disappointed in the college. When I chose to come here I expected to find a greater population interested in alternative behaviors. I just can't seem to find a girl who will allow me to perform my sexual tricks on her. I will be the first one to admit they are out of the ordinary, but I think that if others gave it a chance they would also enjoy it. I'm suffering from sexual deprivation at the moment because of this. How can I advertise my desires to the campus women (and men if they want to join in)?

Loves Handcuffs, Loves to Whip

Dear Loves Handcuffs, Loves to Whip,

Well, you've already begun your advertising, but you now need to identify yourself to the campus. We think that you'll find that many will be interested in these extraordinary antics... we are! Sometimes we all get a little bored with the regular horizontal position and we become very eager to experiment. To all our readers, men and women, students and professors: Come on, let's have a little bit of fun... who knows, maybe this will lead to a new campus club "UCSM" (Ursinus College for Sadomasochism.)

Sgt. Gee- Wizz: Just the Facts

8 March 1993 at 9:00 A.M. Security notices that no students are around on campus on Monday morning. No one is going to classes. Cindy then remembers that it is Spring Break and almost everyone is home, and that no classes are being held.

15 March 1993 at 9:00 P.M. Security is called to break up a fight in a Reimert suite. They decline, however, citing that it is a "Winter Weather Day."

BEWARE THE IDES OF MARCH!!!

18 March 1993 at 11:30 A.M. The stolen golf carts were recovered in a house in the Residential Village. No one is being held responsible.

21 March 1993 at 2:00 A.M. Security receives a call from concerned students about a certain sports editor of the Grizzly. He apparently locked himself in the bathroom for 24 hours, repeating "NOBODY likes the HAVEN!!!" Security contacts the individual's Mommy, who resolved the situation.

23 March 1993 at 12:30 A.M. It takes Security 2 hours to respond to a call concerning two roommates fighting over Guru Tom. The local police got to the Reimert suite before Security did (see related article on page 1). The investigation continues...

ATTENTION STUDENTS: NO MATTER WHAT THE WEATHER MAY BE LIKE AT HOME OR IN COLLEGEVILLE, URSINUS COLLEGE WILL STILL CONDUCT ALL CLASSES. TWO FEET OF SNOW IS NO EXCUSE FOR NOT COMING BACK TO SCHOOL AFTER SPRING BREAK. EVERYONE SHOULD HAVE RETURNED, REGARDLESS OF THE WEATHER.

24 March 1993 at 11:00 P.M. Two male professors were found sneaking into Reimert on Friday night. When asked as to the nature of their venture, the professors stated, "We just wanna get laid! This is where all the chicks shower, isn't it?"

25 March 1993 at 7:30 A.M. Several maintenance workers report to Cindy, the Security woman, that their favorite issues of Juggs were stolen from their bicycle baskets over the weekend. The investigation continues...

25 March 1993 at 7:35 A.M. Ron apologizes for the inconvenience and returns magazines to their respective bicycle baskets.

REMINDER: ALL STUDENTS ARE REMINDED OF AND EXPECTED TO. THANK YOU.

OOPS!

BY YAN KAN KOWNT
Of The Goofly (Chinese Bureau)

Much to the chagrin of Er...sinus administrators and to the overwhelming surprise of students this year's Mr. Ursinus Pageant went off without an ounce of controversy. The name announced by CAB representative Louie dePalma, the nomination of the Student Parkers, Chris Whalen, was actually the correct name of the winner.

A shocked judge was overheard by a Goofly reporter as saying, "I can't believe it. That was really who was supposed to win. How could they announce his name if he really was the real winner? What is this school coming to?" Students were equally shocked. One innocent spectator, Adrian Burko, proclaimed, "Wow, I actually believe that Chris might have been the winner! I even had a good time, although I do kind of miss that sick feeling in the pit of my stomach when they announce the name of the winner and I know deep inside me that it just can't be true or when they announce that they were just kidding about the first name they announced and that somebody else is the winner. Why, I almost feel like I know what's going on around here. Something must be terribly, terribly wrong."

Perhaps the uncharacteristic sudden spurt of integrity originates from the new computer judging system that Er...sinus recently installed for these events due to recent controversy. No doubt the $2.2 million investment will pay off in the long run when, for years to come, the students of Er...sinus will know for sure who has really won their all-important social contests. Future plans include hooking up the central computer to terminals near Hellfrick so all sports events can be monitored as efficiently as future...say, Homecomings, or Air Band competitions. Since the computer doubles as a modern art, students can respect the monitoring system in a culturally elite multifaceted-ish kind of way.

The only unfortunate side effect to this surefire judging system was that during the show a large portion of the audience and several contestants fell asleep. For his efforts, Chris will receive three free slices of pizza from Marzella's and a $5 gift certificate to Schwanbacks restaurant. Chris is a alcohol abuse major who plans to go into a career in modeling.

Mandatory Semester Abroad

BY IWANNA VACASHUN

The Best Writer for the Goofly (NOT)

As most students are registering for classes or planning for graduation, the junior class is preparing for a journey. Each and every member of the Class of '94 will be spending next semester abroad. This is to compensate for the influx of freshmen this year.

The students will all be studying at the same school in Cancun, Mexico. A typical day will consist of many activities. First, the students MUST be out of bed by 11:00 A.M. so as to not miss their first class, Introduction to Sunbathing. The sun is stronger in Cancun, and the students need to learn to take care of their skin, since they will be lying on the beach all day. Dean Snakeskin will teach the class.

The next class students must attend is Introduction to Drinking. In Cancun, people do not drink The Beast, they drink real drinks. Each junior must sample each type of drink available, and do at least one shot of every kind of liquor before their studies are over.

An optional class for students is Barhopping Seminar, 444, arranged by Dean Squatley. This hour of instruction will include tips for handling the natives, hints on avoiding beer-goggling, and advice on which bars to patronize and which to stay away from. If one wishes to avoid rowdies, then this class is recommended.

Other than attending the two mandatory classes, students have no other guidelines to follow. All other activities are highly encouraged.(!) Juniors, remember to check "Cancun" on your registration form, and make sure you buy lots of suntan lotion and summer clothes, and have a GREAT time.

Crap Wine Me, Dine Me, ESS 69 ME?

BY YADA YADA
Of The Goofly

Recent success and popularity of the Ursinus CPR class in conjunction with the blatant failure of the ESS 100 attempt at a Liberal Arts requirement has spawned a change in the UC curriculum. Now instead of mandating that students sleep through an entire semester of ESS 100, probably the most useless class in the entire Ursinus history (which is saying a lot), students need only attend the half semester once a week class that will be lovingly called CPR-SEXED, or ESS 69.

Students in ESS 69 will learn a variety of skills simultaneously. While discovering the proper way to perform mouth to mouth in a manner which may save a life, students will learn the best way to pick up a date without resorting to those old tired 70's retro lines. As is demonstrated in the picture below, Ursinus students will practice many proper techniques. Dr. Prick Cravenson, head of the ESS department was quoted as saying, "Our department hopes to have the most well sexed student body on the East coast. These students will practice, under my close personal supervision, until they get every part perfect. I will be extending my office hours to accommodate any special individual tutoring needs."

Student reaction to the change has thusfar been wholly positive. One girl, who wished to remain anonymous, was quoted as saying, "I am really impressed to see that the school is trying to accommodate the students interests. I recently came to a whole new understanding of the connection between sexuality, physicality, and the meaning of life over my spring break. I think this class has a lot to offer and should definitely be required for everyone to take. In fact I would even take it if it were an elective." Ursinus President Hick Flickeder said, "Gee, I wish we had had something like this back when I went to school. It could have explained a lot." His wife agreed.

ESS 69 will boast a few more features than the old HPER 100 class. It will promote safe sex while offering birth control as well as providing each student with a resuscitation Annie-type blow up doll to practice on at home. It will require a lab once every two weeks, and the final will be taken on South Street in Philadelphia. Students pass by either becoming certified in CPR or shacking out their roommate three weekends in a row with different partners.

Lab partners engaged in supervised experimentation-- just one aspect of ESS 69.

That Musser Spirit

BY LOB'N'ROY, ECONO INVESTIGATORS
Of The Goofly

It seems that since the beginning of the semester, there has been some sort of unnatural presence wandering throughout Musser, the international house. There have been sightings all over the house, but most notably in the main lounge, the TV lounge, and in the second floor hallway. Naturally, due to the wandering nature of this spirit, a definite description was difficult to procure. While everyone seems to know of the spirit, his rather ordinary appearance seemed to be about the most distinctive feature. Aside from that, the only noticeable thing about the presence was its headgear. Never was there a sighting reported without mention of its furry blue cap.

After quite a while, it was decided that the matter had gone on long enough, and an investigation was done. The results are rather amazing. Evidently, there is nothing to be worried about. The spirit (who has been dubbed "Poorkilt" by the Musserites) is a Celtic philosopher who lived on that land before ancient Celtic witticisms. He is a harmless being who is just looking for a place to rest, so if you should happen to come into contact with him, just be friendly and he will no doubt charm you as he has everyone else. There is one measure of precaution, though, and that is to beware of his short temper in regards to the environment. Do not throw a recyclable cup away or you may experience his wrath; however, under any other circumstances, he is really quite a jovial fellow. The next time you visit Musser, keep an eye out for the Musser spirit.

Prison's No Place For Criminals

BY RUSH THINBOWL
Of The Goofly

Each night the television brings us stories of murderers, rapists, child molesters, and pro-life vigilantes. Each day, the Philadelphia Department of Corrections shuttles these miscreants through Collegeville to Graterford via Route 29.

Most of us are here at college to prepare for jobs that will enable us to pay taxes to support these prisoners' lives. However, another solution to the burden of their existance lies in a plan just introduced to Congress by Sparrin' Lecter (R-Penna), in which he offers that "persons convicted of any Class 1 Felony be set afloat together, on a barge of compacted garbage" into the Atlantic and that "each be armed with the high-gauge automatic weapon of his or her choice."

Lecter claims that allowing the prisoners to discuss their problems with each other will result in fair and swift justice. The arms would be provided as a last resort for unsettled disputes. He further feels that prisoners would benefit from "the free exercise of judgement" and will enjoy their long-standing wishes to be "free of prison guards' harassment."

Lecter is garnering tremendous public support for his legislation, which he said was inspired by 1992 presidential candidate Brawn Slancy's promise to "clean up garbage and crime in one swell foop...Hey!" Slancy was distraught over the threat Graterford prisoners posed to Er...sinus students and promised to "blow'em to heck" if elected.

For now, the House Committee on Slaughter has stalled on the constitutionality of such legislation. Opponents fear that the floating garbage pool will create a new continent of inbreds with a limited gene pool and too few matriarchal role models.

BY richard p. rich
President of the College

LINDA: Many of you are wondering, "What happened to Linda, the affable card-slider who brightened so many of our high-stress days for the last few years?"

Linda has signed a major contract with the Jenny Craig weight-loss centers, where she models as an "After" in their successful "Before and After" ad campaign. She traded in her Wismer smock for the large stretch pants this past December.

Although she has moved on to holding up large garments in front of her, she has not forgotten Ursinus. She said that she "misses all the college students...especially guys." Not to worry about her loneliness, though. Her hands are full with roofing foreman and boyfriend Brian Rafael and their beautiful 3-year-old, Vanessa.

In fact, Linda's parents are in Japan. I have been advised that she will be holding a "Wierd Science"-style party at their residence during finals time. I will keep the campus community posted on this not-to-be-missed event.

CAMPUS ELEPHANTS: In response to the teams of elephants that trampled Studio Cottage last week, the administration has decided that Graterford prisoners should dig a thirty foot trench around the campus (more on that later). In addition, the silos of peanuts will be removed from behind Wismer.

ABSTINENCE FROM DRINKING WEEK: Ursinus will be observing the dry policies of its liberal arts counterparts next week. Wismer will accomodate this policy by removing all drinking apparatus from the service lines, including iced teas, spring water, and milk. The campus community is strongly encouraged to test out the policy by not bringing sodas or bottled water onto campus through Saturday. This policy has proved itself on other campuses, so I encourage you to abide by it.

RAZING OF RESIDENTIAL VILLAGE: Students of main street houses are reminded to have all possessions out by Sunday. The houses are being levelled as "the first step" of Graterford Prison's co-op with Ursinus. The prisoners will be dropped off early Sunday morning and equipped with sledgehammers and heavy machinery. The program was devised by myself as an "outlet for the incarcerated" whose fully creative potential "was not being realized in the correctional system."

The prisoners have requested that sororites arrange dates with them for Sunday night. If there are any questions, please feel free to call my office before Saturday.

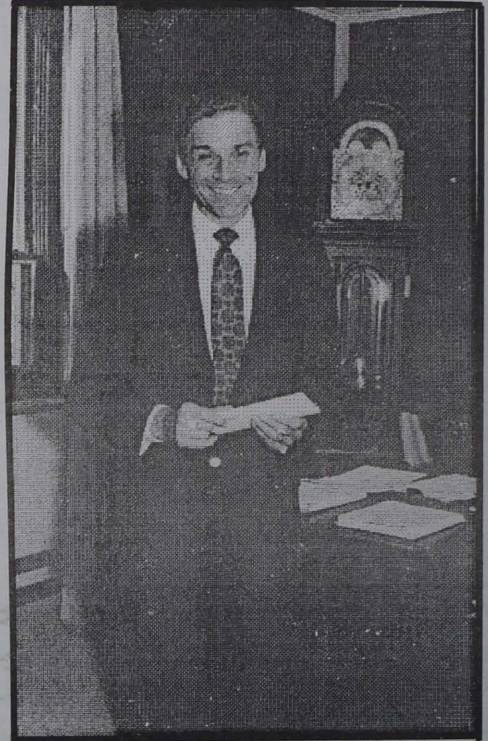

TUNNELS BELOW CAMPUS: It has come to my attention that maintenance workers have been using the service tunnels below campus. Be aware that this is in direct violation of campus policy. These tunnels were built solely for students' enjoyment and for the exploration of their layout. If workers are spotted sneaking around in them, please call Security immediately.

Scientists at the General Foods laboratory have revealed research that may save millions of American lives. Their study, which was revealed yesterday, declares that ingesting a tablespoon of Crisco before and after each meal may reduce the risk of heart disease.

The crowded news conference was held in the Shortening laboratories of General Foods' Development and Propoganda office. The team of researchers stated that "Contrary to popular myth, the benefits of direct slippery grease consumption are too numerous to mention. Take our word for it: buy lots of Crisco and eat it straight, in massive quantities."

The findings support the petroleum companies' recent defense of their byproducts. Last week the Texaco corporation announced that American homes would benefit from opening up quarts of motor oil and releasing the contents into their wells.

In an unrelated incident, chief proponent of the Crisco research and team leader Dr. Neil Paydoff collapsed and died after the press conference. He was 32. Colleagues expressed shock at the untimely death and were anxious to continue his efforts at enlightening the American public.
