CONGRESSMAN BARKLEY FURNISHES INFORMATION ON WORLD'S CROP

Expresses Opinion That the Weed Will Continue to Sell High.

The Ledger is in receipt of the following exhaustive communication from Congressman Barkley and we are taking the liberty of giving the letter publicity. It is worth the careful reading of every tobacco grower and should be filed for reference:

Washington, Feb. 19, 1917.
Mr. O. J. Jennings, Murray, Ky.
My Dear Jennings: Your favor of February 6th, making inquiry concerning certain phases of the tobacco situation was promptly received.

It has been a little difficult to obtain some of the figures you desire, and this has caused the delay in my reply. Some of the statistics could not be obtained in any printed report but had to be gotten by investigation at the various bureaus of the government, where such information was most likely to be found.

I am sending you the latest report of the leaf tobacco held by manufacturers and dealers, issued on January 1, covering the four dates given therein, and I am also sending you the monthly crop report issued by the department of agriculture, for December 1, 1916, which I have marked at the pages where the information you desire may be found. The latest figures I have been able to obtain of the world's production of tobacco, except of the United States are for the years 1913, and in some cases 1914, and are as follows: Germany, 1913, 56,952,951 pounds; Russia, 1913, 235,451,159 pounds; France, 1913, 35,780,658 pounds; United Kingdom, 1913, not given; Austria-Hungary, 1913, 159,087,904 pounds; Canada, 1914, 11,000,000 pounds; Cuba, 1914, 78,585,000 pounds; Mexico, 1914, 34,711,000 pounds; Brazil, 1914, 59,481,036 pounds; Chile, 1914, 6,282,228 pounds; Italy, 1914, 20,943,700 pounds; Roumania, 1914, 16,970,129 pounds; Japan, 1914, 115,741,500 pounds; Philippine Islands, 1914, 103,024,183 pounds; South Africa, 1914, 14,961,000 pounds; British India, 1915, 450,000,000 pounds.

Figures for European countries could not be obtained later than 1913, because no statistics are available. But it is well known that the production of tobacco in European countries has been very greatly restricted on account of the war.

The statistics show that the total production of tobacco of all types in the United States for the past three years was as follows: For 1914, 1,034,679,000 pounds; for 1915, 1,062,287,000 pounds; for 1916, 1,150,622,000 pounds.

Kentucky's production of tobacco of all types for the same period was as follows: For 1914, 364,000,000 pounds; for 1915, 356,400,000 pounds; for 1916, 435,600,000 pounds. It is a little difficult to separate the export types found in Kentucky, grown in Kentucky alone for the past three years, as shown in the crop report, on Page 132, because those figures include a part of Tennessee in the Clarksville and Hopkinsville districts; but as that is the same type of tobacco which we raise for export and other purposes, it may also be included.

The production of tobacco for the Clarksville, Hopkinsville and Paducah districts, which territory comprises a large portion of the dark or export tobacco area was as follows for the past three years:

For 1914, 133,729,000 pounds.
For 1915, 156,928,000 pounds.
For 1916, 176,725,000 pounds.
The latest reports of leaf tobacco on hand by manufacturers and dealers on the dates below was as follows:

October 1, 1915, 149,833,563 pounds.
October 1, 1916, 122,368,324 pounds.
April 1, 1916, 148,132,869 pounds.
January 1, 1917, 97,055,434 pounds.

This shows that the dealers and manufacturers had less tobacco on hand January 1, 1917, than at any of the three former dates given. This may be in part explained by the fact that perhaps a considerable quantity of the 1916 crop had not been delivered on January 1, but in my opinion this fact does not make up the entire difference that exists, but the fact that last year we exported from the United States nearly 50,000,000 more pounds of tobacco than we exported in 1915, and more than 30,000,000 more pounds than we exported in 1914, would seem to me to account for this fact to a great extent.

The following figures show the amount of tobacco exported from the United States for a period of three years:

For 1914, leaf tobacco, 345,921,768 pounds.
For 1914, stems and trimmings, 43,877,341 pounds.
For 1915, leaf tobacco, 428,296,878 pounds.
For 1915, stems and trimmings, 5,376,019 pounds.
For 1916, leaf tobacco, 477,388,878 pounds.
For 1916, stems and trimmings, 6,596,991 pounds.

You will see from this table that notwithstanding the restrictions placed upon the shipment of tobacco during the war in Europe, we increased our exports during 1916 over the two previous years which is no doubt in part accounted for by the increased demand for our tobacco in the European countries. The following table shows the amount of tobacco which we exported during 1916 to the countries named therein and the value thereof:

France, 75,577,275 pounds; value $6,776,304.
Italy, 33,971,389 pounds; value $3,748,003.
Netherlands, 87,486,326 pounds; value $1,486,810.

Total value, $49,933,498.
The difference between these total figures and the total exports being made up by the scattering exports to other countries not named in the above.

I am not able to secure the total figures of exports to the above countries for the year 1913, the year before the war, but the department of commerce informs me that they might be able to get them for me, but as it would take considerable time to do so, I did not ask them to procure them, because I did not suppose you wanted to wait possibly several weeks before this information could be obtained in any reliable form.

Notwithstanding the increased production of export tobacco last year, and notwithstanding our great increase in the total exports of last year and other previous years, it is well known that the supply of tobacco in Italy, France, Great Britain and other countries of Europe which consume our tobacco, is exceedingly short as compared with previous years. It is known that Great Britain in the latter part of last year issued a permit to the British-American Tobacco Company authorizing it to import into Great Britain four times the amount of tobacco imported during the previous year, and as the soldiers of France, Italy and England, as well as other countries, have been withdrawn from the production and those who have been left at home have been compelled to confine their energies to producing the necessities of life, it is easy to conclude that the production of tobacco in those countries has been very greatly reduced, if not in some instances entirely discontinued, so there is bound to be a greater demand in Europe for our type of tobacco than there has been for a long time.

ads; value $8,646,303.
United Kingdom, 154,966,896 pounds; value $25,826,630.
China, 11,234,907 pounds; value $1,439,831.
Austria-Hungary, 10,843,070 pounds; value $2,069,717.

British Africa, 10,516,296 pounds; value $1,486,810.
Total pounds, 384,896,159.

Of course it cannot be disputed that if actual hostilities should be engaged in between Germany and the United States it would have some effect upon the means of transporting our commerce to the countries of Europe, in fact, the severance of diplomatic relations has had some effect upon the transportation of ocean cargoes, but this effect can only be temporary, and it can have no effect upon the demand for tobacco in the countries which depend upon us for their supply, and it only effects for the time being the means of supplying it.

Taking all these figures and facts into consideration, it is my opinion that the price of tobacco during recent months has not been higher than conditions justified, but in many cases higher prices than were offered would have been justified by safe business prudence, because, while we produced more dark tobacco last year than in recent years, it was of a decidedly better quality, and there was undoubtedly a greater scarcity of this tobacco in countries of Europe.

The Cadiz Record of last week reports buyers riding Trigg county offering flattering prices, but most of the growers there are still holding for a further advance.

The sales the past week of new dark tobacco in Louisville showed a slight advance over the previous week, good leaf reaching $15.75.

In Hopkinsville the sales the past week also showed an improved market with leaf going as high as $16. This price was paid on the loose leaf floor. Lugs ranged from $9.25 to $11.50.

TOBACCO TIDINGS

The letter published in this issue of the Ledger from Congressman Barkley is of more than passing interest. If the Ledger is interested enough in these matters to go to the trouble to get such information for its readers they should show their appreciation by a careful reading and study of the splendid array of statistics presented. This article is worth several readings, and the more you study it the more you will like it. Such figures as are there presented will enable you to give the lie to lots of false reports that are circulating in order to induce you to sell your crop at less than it is worth on the markets.

The past week has been an unusually quiet one in the local tobacco market. Deliveries consisted of a very few loads, and there being no sale at the loose leaf floor, nothing of interest occurred. Most of the local contractors have about completed pricing the tobacco delivered and but little will be doing in the tobacco district until another season for deliverring.

Out in the country the folks with tobacco in their barns are resting easy in the confidence that market conditions justify a liberal price for the weed and they expect to hold until such prices are offered. A few fellows, and they are mighty few, get a little frightened at every rumor afloat, but have not yet made up their minds to give their crops away.

The Ledger has not been able to secure any information from the Mayfield market this week, the newspapers making no reports. Upon the whole no change can be said to have taken place during the week. On the active markets everything offered is finding ready buyers, while at other places but little was offered.

The Ledger has always been told that "practice makes perfect," and if that old adage holds good there can be no disputing the fact Kenneth Matheny is one of the most capable young officers ever in the county. And when you go to thinking about electing a public official capability should be the paramount requisite. Kenneth served for five years under his father, J. K. Matheny, as deputy circuit court clerk, one year as clerk in the Murray postoffice, two years as assistant cashier in the Citizens bank and for the past two years or more has been connected with the law firms of Coleman & Wells and Wells & Keys. In each capacity he demonstrated his ability and there is no doubt that he would make an efficient county court clerk, the office to which he aspires. Kenneth is a native Calloway boy, born and reared in Liberty district where he resided until his father was elected circuit clerk when he moved to Murray, where he has since resided. He is honest, courteous and has many friends throughout the county who will be glad to support him in his present race. He is a hustler and will make a canvass of the county in the interest of his candidacy and solicits the support of all voters and promises if elected to do his best to make an acceptable and capable official.

Preacher Accused of Assault

Hopkinsville, Ky., Feb. 26.—J. A. Claxton, the Tennessee preacher and prohibition worker charged with attempting to assault the 8 year old daughter of James Owen, a railroad employe, was taken last night to Madisonville for safe keeping. Feeling here against the preacher was so strong that officials deemed it best to remove him from the Hopkinsville jail.

Prices Menace Coming Crop.

Henderson, Ky., Feb. 26.—Farmers who have planned to plant a large potato crop this year are being deterred because of the exorbitant price for seed potatoes, now quoted at $4 a bushel on the local market. Last year seed potatoes sold at $3 a bag of two and a half bushels. Now the price is $10. It requires ten bushels to the acre, making the seed cost $10 an acre.

The ladies of the missionary society of the Methodist church burned the paid note of $500 during the morning service last Sunday. The note represented the last payment of a debt of $1,500 contracted by the society in the building the basement and purchasing the heating plant. The amount was collected in a week's campaign, commencing with a special service the preceding Sunday.

"Feed the Mule That Pulls for You" Is the Slogan of a West Side Friend.

Murray, Route 4, Feb. 27.
Editor O. J. Jennings.

From reading the articles in your paper and hearing it talked a great deal I am sure you will be a candidate for sheriff, and I want to solicit you to run. Some of us farmers are selfish enough to want you to stay as editor of our county paper, and if you run for sheriff and are elected I hope you will continue to run the Ledger. I was talking with a neighbor last Sunday about you running and he was of the same opinion as myself. Still I am one of the kind that always did say, "feed the mule that pulls for you." You certainly are the friend of Calloway people and I believe they owe you as much as they do their farm mules, and we are going to feed you in the August primary O. J. Come on with that announcement so we

DEPARTMENT ISSUES A WARNING

The new Kentucky seed law was enacted nearly a year ago and has been in effect since September 23, 1916. Everybody concerned has had ample time to comply with it, yet it seems that there are people who are not familiar with it, and some who intend to defy its provisions.

Briefly stated, it requires that all field seed such as those of clover and oats, must bear a label giving a percentage of purity and germination, and that sealed packets of vegetable and flower seeds shall bear the date of filling and the percentage of germination. Failure to label seeds properly renders the seller liable to a fine of from $25 to $100 for each violation. This law was enacted for the protection of Kentucky farmers and seedsmen, and this open letter is an appeal to them to uphold it by insisting that it be complied with.

Do not accept seeds that are not labeled as the law requires.

Buy only of people who comply with the law.

Insist that field seeds be honestly labeled with the approximate percentage of purity and germination.

Insist that sealed packets of seeds bear the date of filling and the percent of germination in large type.

If you find dodder, sour dock or wild onion seeds among field seeds, send us samples for testing. It will be done free.

Secure a copy of the law in Circular No. 5 of the Department of Entomology and Botany, and read it carefully.—H. Garman, head of division.

Farmer Josh Ellison, of the east side, was in town Monday looking as healthy as an old river bottom coon. Josh came to town to deliver the bad news to his customers that all the cabbage plants in the south were killed during the late freeze. The firm of whom he orders lost sixty acres of plants.

Your friend,
A STICK BROTHER.

(I want to assure my friends and the patrons of the Ledger throughout this good county that it is not my intention to give up the newspaper work if I am so fortunate as to be elected the sheriff of this county. In the now nearly twenty years I have been laboring here with you and for you has more firmly fixed the determination in my mind to make a more strenuous endeavor to serve you better in the future in every way possible. However, my good friend, I am going to agree with you that it is about feed time and the mule is ready. One good feed will put old back in shape for another twenty years of work, so put the feed in the trough and open the stall door and let him in.—O. J. Jennings.)

J. Walter Crisp for Assessor

The above is a likeness of J. W. Crisp. He wants to be your next assessor. Although it is not realized by many people of Calloway county this office is an important one and should be filled by a man who is thoroughly competent, reliable and substantial. Is there anyone who doubts the intelligence, ability or integrity of ex-teacher J. W. Crisp to fill this office? His honesty, his depth of thought, his efficiency as an office are best known by those who know him most intimately. Let the people of Calloway county awake to the necessity of an assessor possessing these meritorious qualities. Mr. Crisp will thank you for a searching inquiry regarding his fitness.

To the whole people of Calloway county:—
I am asking you to help me to be your next assessor. I believe in a fair and equal taxation of all property. I regard the office of assessor as an important one, because upon the proper discharge of its duties depends the financial resources of our county and state. Many of you have entrusted to me, in part, the education of your children, and I feel that by honest effort, I have in some degree, been instrumental in the making of some of the best and most useful men and women of our county. But my card is growing long. I hope to be able to write you a love letter in the near future. I will then thank you.—J. W. Crisp.

Andrew Wilson for Magistrate.

Fellow Voters of Concord Magisterial District:—
I take this method of announcing myself as a candidate for magistrate of Concord district, subject to the action of the August primary. I intend to make the race on my own merits and not the demerits of anyone. You that don't know me please make inquiry and if you can see fit to vote for me no one would appreciate it more than myself. If elected I will do my best to make you a good magistrate and treat everyone alike. I will sincerely thank you for your vote and influence. Thanking you in advance for anything you may do for me, I remain
Your friend,
ANDREW J. WILSON.

W. N. Willis for Magistrate.

To the voters of Hazel Magisterial district:—
I take this method of announcing myself as a candidate for re-election to the office of justice of the peace of your district, and in so doing wish to express my sincere thanks to each voter of the district for the support given me four years ago. I have endeavored to show my appreciation by doing my whole duty as near as I could. I have tried to deal out justice to all men fair and impartially, regardless of friendship, and have endeavored to handle the finances turned over to me for road work in your district in an economical manner as I could, with the single view of getting full value for every dollar expended. But this is for you to decide after you have examined the records. As to the present financial condition of the county I want to earnestly ask that every taxpayer and voter go to the records of the court of which I have been a member for four years and compare the present condition with the condition we found four years ago, and if you fail to find any improvement it would be and is your duty to cast your vote against me. But, upon the other hand, if you find that I have given you a square

I tell you, before I heard of "Gets-It," I used knives and other things that ate off more of the toe than they did the corn. It makes the corn shrivel and get so loose that you can just pick it right off, with your finger.

Mrs. Sallie J. Swan.

Mrs. Sallie J. Swan, age about 81 years, died Tuesday morning at the home of her son, W. S. Swan, on Institute street, this city, after an illness covering a period of several months of the infirmities incident to her age. Funeral services were announced for Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock but owing to inclement weather was postponed until Thursday afternoon. The services were conducted by Elder Motley, pastor of the First Christian church, of which deceased was a member, assisted by Elder Matthews, after which the burial took place in the City Cemetery.

Mrs. Swan was a native of Henry county, Tenn., her maiden name being Sallie Frasier, a member of one of the most influential and prominent pioneer families of Western Tennessee. She was first married to Mr. Campbell McGehee, who met his death on the battlefield while serving in the ranks of the Confederate army. To this union one daughter was born, the late Mrs. Camie Baker. Later she was married to Ellhu Swan, who preceded her to the grave some thirty years ago. One son, W. S. Swan, by this union, and one brother, Henry Frazier, of Henry county, survive her.

Mrs. Swan was a woman of rare attainments, a very lovable character and was held in the highest esteem by a large circle of admiring friends. For many months she suffered uncomplainingly, and as the lamp of her life grew dimmer the brilliancy of her gentle character became more pronounced, until the fragile silver thread snapped and the soul of this sweet mother winged its flight. Peace unto her ashes, and comforting sympathy be with the bereft son.

Due to the infirmities of age, she became quite feeble, and for the past month her death has been only a question of a short while.

Mrs. Coleman was a native of Trigg county and was 93 years of age the first day of November. She was a daughter of Perry Thomas, deceased, and was one of eleven children, the following brothers and sisters still living: Allison W. Thomas, of near Bethel; Starkie Thomas, of Calhaway county; Mrs. Elizabeth Futrell, of near Linton, and Chilton A. Thomas, W. Scott Thomas, Mrs. Etna Turner and Miss Josephine Thomas, of the Donaldson county.—Cadiz Record.

W. Gilbert Blakely, known to many friends as "Gip" Blakely, aspires to the position of jailer of the county, and this week instructs the Ledger to place his announcement before the voters for the position. Mr. Blakely is one of the well known young farmers of the county, a native born son of old Calloway and who has lived the greater part of his life in the Almo district. For the past two years he resided in the Concord district where he made many friends, and only recently moved to a farm a few miles northwest of Murray. Gip is a big, healthy, husky, ugly somebody, but one of the cleverest fellows you ever met, and should be the lucky man in this contest. You may think the county a most capable official. Gip is of Irish descent, and this fact naturally carries with it the guarantee of courage and efficiency. He will actively campaign the county in the interest of his candidacy in order to personally present his claims to as many voters as possible before the August primary. He solicits your vote and support and will thank you for any favors shown him in this race.

"K"

A thrilling mystery story about a man who lost his courage and the girl who helped him to find it again

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

Perhaps no other career tests the quality of womanhood so relentlessly as trained nursing. It calls for many qualities, spiritual and physical. The reward is not large, and while many seek them, but few are able to win the big prizes the service offers. Sidney Page, age eighteen, is taken in at the hospital as a probation nurse through the influence of young Dr. Max Wilson. The Pages—Sidney, her semi-invalid mother and her Aunt Harriet—had taken in K. LeMoyné, a strange young man, as a roomer in order to help meet expenses. His very mysterious but charming, and Joe Drummond, Sidney's high school sweetheart, becomes violently jealous. Immediately Sidney enters hospital service her threads of life begin to tangle. You get first sight of this in the installment printed here.

"Fred!" He adopted the gentle, almost tender tone that made most women his slaves. "A little. It is warm." "What are you going to do this evening? Any lectures?" "Lectures are over for the summer. I shall go to prayers, and after that to the roof for air." "Can't you take a little ride tonight and cool off? I'll have the car wherever you say." "A ride and some supper—how does it sound? You could get away at seven—"

"Miss Gregg is coming!" With an impressive face, the girl turned away. The workers of the operating room surged between them. But he was clever with the guile of the pursuing male. Eyes of all on him, he turned at the door of the wardrobe room and spoke to her over the heads of a dozen nurses.

"That patient's address that I had forgotten, Miss Harrison, is the corner of the Park and Ellington avenues." "Thank you."

She played the game well, was quite calm. He admired her coolness. Certainly she was pretty, and certainly, too, she was interested in him. He went whistling into the wardrobe room. As he turned he caught the intern's eye, and there passed between them a glance of complete comprehension. The internes grinned.

The room was not empty. His brother was there, listening to the comments of O'Hara, his friendly rival. "Good work, boy!" said O'Hara, and clapped a heavy hand on his shoulder. "That last case was a wonder. I'm proud of you, and your brother here is indelicately exalted. It was the Edwardes method, wasn't it? I saw it done at his clinic in New York."

"Glad you liked it. Yes, Edwardes was a pal of mine in Berlin. A great surgeon, too, poor old chap!" "There aren't three men in the country with the nerve and the hand for it."

O'Hara went out, glowing with his own magnanimity. Doctor Ed stood by and waited while his brother got into his clothes. He was rather silent. There were many times when he wished that his mother could have lived to see how he had carried out his promise to "make a man of Max."

Sometimes he wondered what Max would think of his own untidy methods compared with Max's extravagant order of the bag, for instance, or the dog's collar in it, and other things. On these occasions he always determined to clear out the bag.

"I guess I'll be getting along," he said. "Will you be home for dinner?" "I think not. I'll—"

the expenses of the house on the Street. "Sorry, old man; I've made another arrangement." They left the hospital together. Everywhere the younger man received the homage of success. The elevator man bowed and flung the doors open, with a smile; the pharmacy clerk, the doorkeeper, even the convalescent patient who was polishing the great brass doorplate, tendered their tribute. Doctor Ed looked neither to right nor left.

Sidney, after her involuntary bath in the river, had gone into temporary eclipse at the White Springs hotel. In the oven of the kitchen stove sat her two small white shoes, stuffed with paper so that they might dry in shape. Back in a detached laundry, a sympathetic maid was ironing various soft white garments, and singing as she worked.

Sidney sat in a rocking chair in a hot bedroom. She was carefully swathed in a sheet from neck to toes, except for her arms, and she was being as philosophic as possible. Someone tapped lightly at the door. "It's Le Moyné. Are you all right?" "Perfectly. How stupid it must be for you!"

"I'm doing very well. The maid will soon be ready. What shall I order for supper?" "Anything. I'm starving."

"I think your shoes have shrunk." "Platter!" She laughed. "Go away and order supper. And I can see fresh lettuce. Shall we have a salad?"

K. Le Moyné stood for a moment in front of the closed door, for the mere sound of her moving, beyond it. Things had gone very far with the Pages' roomer that day in the country; not so far as they were to go, but far enough to let him see on the brink of what misery he stood. He could not go away. He had promised her to stay; he was needed. He thought he could have endured seeing her marry Joe, had she cared for the boy. That way, at least, lay safety for her. The boy had fidelity and devotion written large over him. But this new complication—her romantic interest in Wilson, the surgeon's reciprocal interest in her, with what he knew of the man—made him qual.

From the top of the narrow staircase to the foot, and he had lived a year's torment! At the foot, however, he was startled out of his reverie. Joe Drummond stood there, waiting for him, his blue eyes recklessly afloat. "You—you dog!" said Joe.

There were people in the hotel parlor. Le Moyné took the frenzied boy by the elbow and led him past the door to the empty porch. "Now," he said, "if you will keep your voice down, I'll listen to what you have to say."

"You know what I've got to say." "You falling to draw from K. Le Moyné anything but his steady glance. Joe jerked his arm free and clenched his fist.

"What did you bring her out here for?" "I do not know that I owe you any explanation, but I am willing to give you one. I brought her out here for a trolley ride and a picnic luncheon."

He was sorry for the boy. Life not having been all beer and skittles to him, he knew that Joe was suffering, and was nervously patient with him. "Where is she now?" "She had the misfortune to fall in the river. She is upstairs." And, seeing the light of unbelief in Joe's eyes: "If you care to make a tour of investigation, you will find that I am entirely truthful. In the laundry a maid—"

"She is engaged to me—doggedly. Everybody in the neighborhood knows it, and yet you bring her out here for a picnic! It's—"

Perhaps never in his twenty-two years had young Drummond been so near a thrashing. Fury that he was ashamed of shook Le Moyné. For very fear of himself, he thrust his hands in the pockets of his Norfolk coat. "Very well," he said. "You go to her with just one of these ugly insinuations, and I'll take mighty good care that you are sorry for it. If you are going to behave like a bad child, you deserve a licking, and I'll give it to you."

An overflow from the parlor poured on the porch. Le Moyné had got himself in hand somewhat. He was still angry, but the look in Joe's eye startled him. He put a hand on the boy's shoulder. "You're wrong, old man," he said. "You're insulting the girl you care for by the things you are thinking. And, if it's any comfort to you, I have no intention of interfering in any way. You can count me out. It's between you and her."

Joe picked his straw hat from a chair and stood turning it in his hands. "Even if you don't care for her, how do I know she isn't crazy about you?" "My word of honor, she isn't." "She sends you notes to McKee's?" "Just to clear the air, I'll show it to you. It's no breach of confidence. It's about the hospital."

Into the breast pocket of his coat he dived and brought up a wallet. The wallet had had a same on it in gilt letters that had been carefully scraped off. But Joe did not wait to see the note. "Oh, damn the hospital!" he said—and went swiftly down the steps and into the gathering twilight of the June night.

CHAPTER VII.

Sidney and K. Le Moyné were dining together at the White Springs hotel. The novelty of the experience had made her eyes shiar like stars. She saw only the magnolia tree shaped like a heart, the terrace edged with low shrubbery, and beyond the faint gleam that was the river. The unshaded glare of the lights behind her in the house was eclipsed by the crescent-edge of the rising moon. Dinner was over. Sidney was experiencing the rare treat of after-dinner coffee.

Le Moyné, grave and contained, sat across from her. To give so much pleasure, and so easily! How young she was, and radiant! No wonder the boy was mad about her. She fairly held out her arms to life. Ah, that was too bad! Another table was being brought; they were not to be alone. But what roused in him violent resentment only appeared to Sidney's curiosity.

Carlotta Harrison came out alone. Although the tapping of her heels was dulled by the grass, although she had exchanged her cap for the black hat, Sidney knew her at once. A sort of thrill ran over her. It was the pretty nurse from Doctor Wilson's office. Was it possible—but of course not! The book of rules stated explicitly that such things were forbidden.

"Don't turn around," she said swiftly. "It is the Miss Harrison I told you about. She is looking at us." Carlotta's eyes were blinded for a moment by the glare of the house lights. Then she sat up, her eyes on Le Moyné's grave profile, turned toward the valley. "Lucky for her that Wilson had stopped in the bar, that Sidney's instinctive good manners forbade her staring, that only the edge of the summer moon shone through the trees. She went white and clutched the edge of the table, with her eyes closed. That gave her quick brain a chance. It was madness, Jung-madness. She was always seeing him, even in her dreams. This man was older, much older. She looked again.

She had not been mistaken. Here, and after all these months! K. Le Moyné, quite unconscious of her presence, looked down into the valley. Wilson appeared on the wooden porch above the terrace, and stood, his eyes searching the half-light for her. If he came down to her, the man at the next table might turn, would see her—

She rose and went swiftly back toward the hotel. All the gaiety was gone out of the evening for her, but she forced a lightness she did not feel. "It is so dark and depressing out there—it makes me sad." "Surely you do not want to dine in the house?" "Do you mind?" "Your wish is my law—tonight," he said softly.

After all, the evening was a disappointment to him. The spontaneity had gone out of it, for some reason. The girl who had thrilled to his glance those two mornings in his office, whose somber eyes had met his, fire for fire, across the operating room, was not playing up. She sat back in her chair, eating little, starting at every sight. Her eyes, which by every rule of the game should have been gazing into his, were fixed on the oilcloth-covered passage outside the door.

"I think, after all, you are frightened!" "What sort of disgrace is K. LeMoyné trying to live down? A threat? Wife desertion? A betrayal? Or would you say he has been disappointed in love?" (TO BE CONTINUED)

A new method of cold storage insulation, invented in England, is to use slabs of cork expanded to over twice their normal size.

"Terribly." "A little danger adds to the zest of things. You know what Nietzsche says about that." "I am not fond of Nietzsche." Then, with an effort: "What does he say?" "Two things are wanted by the true man—danger and play. Therefore he seeketh woman as the most dangerous of toys."

"Women are dangerous only when you think of them as toys. When a man finds that a woman can reason—do anything, but feel—he regards her as a menace. But the reasoning woman is really less dangerous than the other sort."

This was more like the real thing. To talk careful abstractions like this, with beneath each abstraction its concealed personal application, to talk of woman and look in her eyes, to discuss new philosophies with their freedoms, to discard old creeds and old moralities—that was his game. Wilson became content, interested again. The girl was nimble-minded. She challenged his philosophy and gave him a chance to defend it. With the conviction, as their meal went on, that Le Moyné and his companion must surely have gone, she gained ease.

It was only by wild driving that she got back to the hospital by ten o'clock. Wilson left her at the corner, well content with himself. As he drove up the Street he glanced across at the Page house. Sidney was there on the doorstep, talking to a tall man who stood below and looked up at her. Wilson settled his tie, in the darkness. Sidney was a mighty pretty girl. The June night was in his blood. He would have had no kissed Carlotta good night. He rather thought, now he looked back, she had expected it.

As he got out of his car at the curb, a young man who had been standing in the shadow of the tree-trunk moved quickly away. Wilson smiled after him in the darkness. "That you, Joe?" he called. But the boy went on.

Sidney entered the hospital on a probationer early in August. Christine was to be married in September to Palmer Howe, and with Harriet and K. in the house, she felt that she could safely leave her mother.

The balcony outside the parlor was already under way. On the night before the went away Sidney took chairs out there and sat with her mother until the dew drove Anna to the lamp in the sewing room and her "Daily Thoughts" reading.

Sidney sat alone and viewed her world from this new and pleasant angle. She could see the garden and the white-shaded fence with its morning glories, and at the same time, by turning her head, view the Wilson house across the Street. She looked mostly at the Wilson house.

K. Le Moyné was upstairs in his room. She could hear him tramping up and down, and catch, occasionally, the bitter-sweet odor of his old brief pipe.

Too Sick To Work

Many Women in this Condition Regain Health by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Convincing Proof of This Fact. Ridgway, Penn. — "I suffered from female trouble with backache and pain in my side for over seven months so I could not do any of my work. I was treated by three different doctors and was getting discouraged when my sister-in-law told me how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had benefited her. I decided to try it, and it restored my health, so I now do all of my housework which is not light as I have a little boy three years old." — Mrs. O. M. Rhineas, Ridgway, Penn.

Mrs. Lindsey Now Keeps House For Seven. Tennesse, Ga. — "I want to tell you how much I have benefited by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. About eight years ago I got in such a low state of health I was unable to keep house for three in the family. I had dull, tired, dizzy feeling, cold feet and bands nearly all the time and could scarcely sleep at all. The doctor said I had a severe case of ulceration and without an operation I would always be an invalid, but I told him I wanted to wait awhile. Our druggist advised my husband to get Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has entirely cured me. Now I keep house for seven and work in the garden some, too. I am so thankful I got this medicine. I feel as though it saved my life and have recommended it to others and they have been benefited." — Mrs. W. E. Lindsey, R. R. 3, Tennesse, Ga.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

ACTRESS TELLS SECRET. A well known actress gives the following recipe for gray hair: To half pint of water add 1 oz. of Barbo Compound, and 1/2 oz. of stearine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Full directions for making and use come in each box of Barbo Compound. It will gradually darken streaks, faded gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off. Adv.

IS CHILD CROSS, FEVERISH, SICK Look, Mother! If tongue is coated, give California Syrup of Figs.

Children love this "fruit laxative," and nothing else cleanses the tender stomach, liver and bowels so nicely. A child simply will not stop playing to empty the bowels, and the result is they become tightly clogged with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sour, then your little one becomes cross, half-sick, feverish, don't eat, sleep or act naturally, breath is bad, system full of cold, has sore throat, vomit, diarrhoea, or diarrhea. Listen, Mother! See if tongue is coated, then give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the system, and you have a well child again. Millions of mothers give "California Syrup of Figs" because it is perfectly harmless; children love it, and it never fails to act on the stomach, liver and bowels.

Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Adv.

What Is Uric Acid? Everyone has uric acid in the system, but naturally in small quantities. Excessive amount is caused by eating too much meat and foods that ferment in stomach. The kidneys, being the filters of the blood, are supposed to separate and throw the poisons out of the system. Weak, tired and overworked kidneys fail to do this, hence the uric acid accumulates and the uric acids are carried by the blood to the solid tissue structure, causing backache, lumbago, rheumatism, dropsy, drowsiness, and tired feeling.

To overcome the trouble is but a matter of toning up the kidneys, and this is best done by a treatment with Anuric, three times a day. Anuric is a recent discovery of Dr. Pierce of Buffalo, N. Y., and can be obtained in any drug store. Experience taught Doctor Pierce that Anuric is a powerful agent than lactic in dissolving uric acid, and is as clean carried out of the system.

FARM LOAN ACT.

III. Amortization—How Loans Made for the Farm Loan Act Are Designed to Be Helpful to the Borrower.

(By Frank H. Wilson, Federal Loan Director, Washington, D. C.)

It has always been recognized that the most effective aid one can get is that which enables him to help himself.

These critics of the Federal farm loan act have charged that this act makes it too easy for farmers to get into debt, and that there will be a tendency to overborrow.

A careful reading of the bill will show that this objection is met by very carefully limiting the use to which the borrowed money may be put and by the requirement that farmers gradually each year must reduce their indebtedness.

The farm loan act was designed to be helpful to the farmer of average operations who has heretofore been denied adequate credit.

The use of the money is carefully limited to the purchase of land, to pay off existing indebtedness, to purchase live stock, or to make any productive improvement such as fencing, drainage, buildings and machinery.

Is Really an Investment. When money can be borrowed cheaply for productive use, a mortgage becomes an investment rather than a handicap.

The farm loan act creates a form of indebtedness which benefits the farmer's needs. It recognizes that the farming business is one of slow returns.

So, it provides that a mortgage made under the act be paid on the amortization or installment plan through a long or short period of years.

Table of Payments. To give the prospective borrower an exact idea of the size of the payments required annually to wipe out a mortgage in a given period, amortization tables have been prepared.

Table of Interest. To give the prospective borrower an exact idea of the size of the payments required annually to wipe out a mortgage in a given period, amortization tables have been prepared.

So it will be seen that the farm loan act, in addition to providing a way for the farmer to borrow to the limit of safety, provides that he must put his borrowed money to productive use, and furnishes the machinery to get him out of debt in an honorable and businesslike way.

CONGRESSMAN BARKLEY

tries using it than there has been in recent years. In addition to all these facts, the further fact that tobacco has not been shipped into Germany or Austria-Hungary from the United States since last July, warrants the conclusion that there must be a scarcity of tobacco in those countries, because they have depended largely upon the United States for their supply in the past. While this fact cannot have an immediate effect upon the price of tobacco, so long as shipments are prevented into Germany, it does not indicate that whenever commerce is opened up with the Central Empires, whether at the end of the war or by some amicable arrangement during the war, there is bound to be an increased demand for our tobacco on account of inability to obtain it in sufficient quantities during recent months.

We are all hoping that war with Germany can be honorably avoided, but if we are compelled to go to war it would perhaps temporarily interfere with our commerce with European nations so long as Germany could persecute her submarine warfare against innocent commerce without restriction, but even this condition of affairs would not in my opinion justify our people in sacrificing their tobacco unnecessarily, because when the situation does clear up it seems to me that the price of tobacco will go even higher than it has been during the past several months, because if our tobacco has been bringing the prices which were paid for it up until the difficulties of this country with Germany became acute, with no tobacco whatever being shipped into Austria and Germany, it is apparent that when tobacco can be shipped to all countries the price will go higher according to the increased demand and the increased facilities for obtaining it.

Whether this desirable state of affairs will be reached in the near future or after much delay no man can now predict. If our country gets into war with Germany it will necessarily bring about a readjustment of our commercial relations with European countries, which will to some extent, of course, affect the price of our products. If Germany should be able to cripple our commerce on the high seas it would naturally have a depressing effect upon our exports, but even with these temporary unfavorable conditions existing, I cannot help but believe that in the long run our tobacco will necessarily bring a higher price than it has in the recent past, but whether individual farmers are in a position to hold their tobacco and await more favorable conditions is of course something that will appeal to different men in different ways.

I hope that our farmers who for so many years have fought so valiantly to obtain a living price for their products may be able to withstand against any temptation or pretense that may be used as an excuse for unnecessarily reducing the price of tobacco.

I hope the figures which I have been able to obtain will be of service to you. As for my opinion, I think in the condition that obtains throughout the world, one man's opinion is about as good as another, but if you think them of any value I am glad to give them to you for whatever you may think them worth.

Assuring you of my best wishes for your success and happiness, and assuring you of my desire to be of service to you in any way possible to the good people of Calloway, and other counties which are interested in this subject, and hoping, as we all hope, that our nation may be spared the necessity of war, if it can be done with honor and self respect, I beg to remain, Sincerely your friend,
