Murray Tigers' Outlook For Winning Team Are Good

COACH CALLS GRID HOPEFULS TO FIELD FOR FALL PRACTICE

Seven lettermen and twenty-two others are candidates for squad

Holland believes prospects for a championship since 1932 when the Tigers were champions of the Little Sixteen conference. Although the big question mark will be the guards with Baker, Outland, and Skags the outstanding candidates, the coach plans to build his team around Clyde Crider, tackle, and James Buchanan, fullback, co-captains of the team and mainstays of 1937's fighting aggregation. "Each of these boys should be at his best this year," Holland said.

AGENTS EXPLAIN SOILS PROGRAM TO COUNTY FARMERS

County Offices Hope For More Operators to Gain All of Soil Allowance

COMMITTEE RECEIVES GROWER APPLICATIONS

County and Assistant County Agents J. T. Cochran and Kelly Cromwell completed Wednesday night a series of meetings dealing with the national soil-building program which carried them into 12 communities in every region of Calloway county.

An average of 27 farmers heard the discussions at each meeting, making a total of 325 persons over the county who attended one discussion group of the series.

The soilized groups were sponsored by the county agent in an effort to influence farmers to earn their soil-building allowance this year, an accomplishment which many have not previously done.

In their discussion sessions, Cochran and Cromwell showed lantern slides depicting advantages to be derived from the growing of legumes and cover crops and from the usage of phosphate and limes in carrying on the crop rotation plan of each farm.

Stressing the fact that limestone could be obtained for use on county farms largely at Government expense, the county agents urged all farmers to avail themselves of all soil building credit they are entitled to; or else the soil payment will not be as large as it could have been.

Cochran advised that a bank as an example, declaring that if persons knew the bank in which they kept their funds would close on a certain date they would make haste to withdraw their money before the closure came. He cited the fact that the final date for soil-building practice is October 31, and applications for phosphate to be used on the program should be made immediately in order to be used before the closing of the program to receive credit on the payment sheets, must be sealed by that date.

Wide interest was shown in the meetings.

The County Soils Committee, which follows behind all other counties, and Cochran a day after their explanations to take applications for phosphate, lime and other soil-building materials under the program, has not yet reported the number of farmers who will comply a hundred per cent with the soil-building program, but will do so this week, according to Cochran.

The county agent hopes to have a 50 per cent increase in farmers who will claim all of their allowance.

Carmon Graham Publishes Article in Peabody Journal

Carmon M. Graham, principal of the Murray Training School, is the author of an article entitled "Critic Teaching Versus Supervision" published in the July issue of the Peabody Journal of Education.

In Graham's opinion, critic teaching and supervision are terms interchangeable used in the training of teachers. It is this interchangeable usage, he suggests, that is responsible for a lack of clear-cut understanding which he alleges critic teachers have in regard to their part in the teacher-training program.

FSA DIRECTOR TO EXPLAIN METHODS OF GETTING LOANS

G. C. Dyer Calls Meeting For September 14 in Circuit Courtroom

FOUR FARMERS HAVE RECEIVED FSA FUNDS

Donald W. Martin, assistant state director of the Farm Security Administration, will meet with farmers in the circuit courtroom in Murray Wednesday morning, September 14, at 10 o'clock to explain methods by which rehabilitation loans may be obtained and methods by which farms may be purchased through the tenant loan program. It was announced here today by G. C. Dyer, area supervisor of FSA.

The farm Security Administration, he said, under the Bankhead-Jones bill recently passed by Congress is making a limited number of loans to farm laborers, sharecroppers, and tenants who can qualify at a 3 per cent interest to buy some farms in 21 counties of Kentucky. Calloway county is one of this number.

According to Dyer, who is supervisor of Calloway, Graves, Fulton, and Hickman counties, all farmers in the county—whether landowners, farm laborers, tenants, or sharecroppers should attend the meeting at 10 o'clock. He will be informed of the loan services available for them if they need credit.

He said the closing date for making applications for the Tenant Purchase Loans is September 17. Dyer himself will receive applications for loans at the WPA office in Murray each Monday morning. Loans to buy farms this year were made to James A. Parker, Kirksey; Otis Darnall, Sinking Spring; Willie B. Emerson, Hickory and Harvey Woods, Almo.

TEAM LEAVES FOR WISCONSIN GAME ON SEPTEMBER 13

Prospects Are Good For Repeating 1937 Championship

STEWART AND MOORE TO DIRECT HOPEFULS

Murray State College's 1938 SIAA championship Thoroughbreds will don the moleskins for their first practice sessions of the new season this afternoon, head coach Roy Stewart said today.

The champions will have only 11 days practice behind them when they leave on September 13 for Superior, Wis., where they will open their campaign with Wisconsin State.

Coach Stewart said this morning his team would reach Superior on Thursday, would possibly acquaint themselves with the Wisconsin stadium in a short practice session, and then begin their schedule against the Superior team Friday night.

In the last game of the season at Murray last year, the Stewartmen trampled Paquette, Gentile and company 26-6.

Coach Jim Moore arrived from his home in Connecticut yesterday to take over his duties as line manager.

Although not so pessimistic as usual, Stewart was noncommittal as to how many games he expected to win this year, but there was a smile on Jim Moore's face when he said the Thoroughbreds are always champions.

The head coach said he would stress line plays and pass formations in drills this week. Since such a short time is available for practice before the opening game, Stewart said that fundamentals, although a part of the program, would be subordinate to regular football maneuvers.

The SIAA champs have stellar pass flingers in antelope-footed Claude McRaven from Missouri, and Tommy Atwell's glue-fingers are beautiful to the eyes of the coach. With John Jasper, since with might and main to smash the opposition's line after Pete Gaudasuk and Ed Donoho and others have wedged the center.

Murray's backs are light, but they are fleet. Charles T. Yarbrough, co-captain, runs like a mountain sheep in a broad field, and Jug Mitchell, bullet-headed senior, is the man to pick when definite yardage is needed.

Dale Decker, rangy co-captain and end, will solve many of Stewart's problems on his flank, and Craddock and Brandes stand out like the Colossus of Rhodes.

Coach John Miller will begin freshman practice today also, it was reported here. According to information received from the campus, the freshman crop is one of the best, prospectively, that Murray State College has had to date in years. Many are all-state men, hailing from eight states.

After the Wisconsin game September 16, the Thoroughbreds go to Murfreesboro, Tenn., to compete with Middle Tennessee's Raiders on September 24, and on October 8 play Morehead at Morehead. They return to Murray for homecoming October 15, when they take on Birmingham-Southern; go to Paducah for an inter-sectional clash with Hardin-Simmons University on October 22; play Union University at Jackson, Tenn., on October 28; are hosts to Southwestern University on November 4; meet Howard College at Murray on November 11; and wind up the season at Murray November 19 with Western.

Storm Damages Local Property

City is Without Lights for Hour; Tobacco Crops and Homes Injured

A severe wind and rainstorm, increased in intensity by flying hailstones, swept over Calloway county about 7 o'clock Friday evening.

Wind blew limbs from trees; toppling even some of the trees; blowing a chimney off the home of Mason Evans; a roof off the tobacco barn of L. D. Outland East of Murray, and did damage to other buildings.

A field of tobacco belonging to Bert Hodges—having thus far escaped rust or disease, and said by many to be one of the best tobacco crops in the county, was completely riddled by hail and wind and made practically valueless.

In Murray, two power lines were crossed, burning one in two, and the city was without light for an hour.

LET'S PLAN FOR THE FAJR

The value of fairs as a whole is to place on exhibit as nearly as possible the better things produced by the area the fair represents. They act as spur, influencing producers to try to excel next year exhibits on display this year.

Fairs then both demonstrate and motivate progress. Calloway County's agriculture and community fair last year was successful insofar as the realization of funds over expenses was concerned, but it was infinitely more successful in another way.

It showed, as few other demonstrations could have done, what the county is doing agriculturally. And the people of the county were proud of what they saw.

But they can see more this year. Last year, the fair idea was more or less new. Its idea was conceived swiftly and carried out swiftly, which speaks marvelously well for the sponsors who so ably directed it.

This year, it will be easier, but it should be broader too. It is time now for every person to start thinking of what he will place on exhibit at the fair. The Farm Bureau has announced it will be held in October. That is slightly more than a month away. But it is ample time for us to get farm and home exhibits ready.

There were no school exhibits last year, no interscholastic contests. Such adds immensely to the merit of any demonstration of county progress, because the schools almost as much as the farms are the determiners of growth.

This year let's have school exhibits too. Let's plan for the fair!

From Little Acorns Grow

To Vienna in 1911 came a youth of 17 with an herald of painting which he hoped would find merit in the eyes of Austrian art critics. He had ambition to be a great artist and he had put his soul into his paintings.

From Vienna he received praise but no market. He had, however, a boundless confidence and in the meantime he must live. He sought out work among the laborers. Unused to toil from birth, he found the effort he now exerted was work to make a man. It broadened him. And his mind that had, originally created its impressions through art now found the urge to write, and in the long evenings thoughts flowed from him like water, empancinating themselves on the white surface of a page.

To him in time came union supporters asking him to join. His ideals held no room for unions. He refused. The romance and mystery of ages of literature were with him now. On a dark night men came and bound him and with whips threatened him because he was a union violator. The smile that played on his lips they did not understand.

He went to Munich. Without funds he managed to live, and to write. He started a book that later was to become famous. The war broke out. He fought as a corporal for Germany and came out with higher ranking. Followed then years of reconstruction, of revolution and bloodshed, and the German nation stooped lower and lower under the weight of the Versailles treaty.

The youth saw it, and he hated it. The war years had made iron of him, but his dreams, the romance of him, still lived. Red terrorism from Russia swept the state. He hated Russia, its unions, its socialism. He formed a little organization, a group of men whose purpose it was to rebuild Germany. From prison cells he often directed his followers.

Those years formed the crucible from which came Adolph Hitler. But they were forming others whose destinies were to be world-wide too. There were Lenin, Trotsky, and Stalin in Russia, and over on the Italian peninsula was another youth.

He was a disciple of the teachings of Karl Marx. "Das Kapital" he carried in his pocket always. He worked with the laborers. He urged the new political theory of Communism. Karl Marx was his ideal.

The war changed him. Fighting in the trenches, he learned the nature of men. After it was over poverty stalked him. He worked in the wheat harvest. While he sweated and swung his scythe, he saw that individual enterprise is unequal, and that rewards for labor are unequal proportionately with accomplishment. Communism was not the thing for the people of Italy.

In an era in which Russian anarchy tore the State, the youth dared to oppose it. His following at first was small. Like the youth Hitler, he knew the inside of prisons. But Rome again sits looming on the world's horizon because of Benito Mussolini.

Nineteen years ago, when guards brought them food in prison, little did the youth dream that war or peace in 1938 would depend on the decisions of these two men. Adolph Hitler was still of the greater Germany, Austria and Hungary, already have come to him, and while his military might looks with arrogant and covetous eyes on Czechoslovakia. Across the Brenner Pass, Mussolini's legions wait and watch, and slyly aid Franco in his war in Spain.

But Hitler watches England. As long as the British Lion is undisciplined he can move. When Britain stiffens, Hitler will have to decide whether his forces are powerful enough to take on the work again. And in the meantime a million soldiers march in war maneuvers across the German soil, he looks toward Czechoslovakia and toward France.

On this side of the Atlantic is another scene that has grown: Democracy. Continent-wide and broad, it stands as the disciple of peace. But Hitler's heretofore stand alone. In a war-minded Europe stand those Gibraltar of Democracy, England and France. And voting approval of their aims for peace is the support of vast America.

The Democracies are big with the biggest of united peoples. Only the oak that grew from acorns in Germany, Italy, and Russia are perishable ones.

Obituary

Nancy Orr Milstead, widow of the late G. T. Milstead, was born Dec. 24, 1860, departed this life Aug. 7, 1938, she having lived 77 ### years, eight months and 13 days.

She professed faith in Christ when 22 years of age and united with the Methodist church at South Pleasant Grove and lived as a devoted member until God saw fit to call her home. She was always found in her place in church when health permitted—a faithful Christian—soldier holding high the banner of her Lord.

She was a kind and loving mother, grandmother, sister and friend. She admonished her loved ones to meet her in heaven. Her life was such a beautiful one that words fail us; her mission here was that of helping her fellowman and she performed her task well. This was expressed by the many many friends who visited her in her late illness.

She was left a widow to rear her children 27 years ago. A few years later little Riley left. Then later Jesse passed on. A happy reunion for her but she longed to meet her Savior and Redeemer first of all.

She leaves one son, Conley; one daughter, Mrs. Helen James; 8 grandchildren, one great grandchild; 3 brothers, 2 sisters and a large number of relatives and friends to mourn her departure.

God there to await the resurrection morn; asleep in that blessed sleep from which none ever woke to weep.—Written by one who loved her.

CARLSON SAYS MAKE MOST OF FARM OPPORTUNITY

"Make the most of all the land you have," says Henning Carlson, forester, of the Soil Conservation Service area near Murray. Many farmers, he points out, are following a program of careful management in their woodlands to bring out the full value of these often neglected areas both of timber production and erosion control.

One sign of a healthy woods, according to Carlson, is a deep layer of leaf litter—lying undisturbed beneath the trees. Another is a dense shrubby undergrowth, which flourishes especially near the woodland borders. To preserve these two valuable assets, many farmers in the Calloway county area are protecting their woods against fire and grazing. After having abandoned the practice of woodland burning, they build fences to prevent livestock from destroying the undergrowth and litter by grazing and trampling.

Another phase of the woodland management program is known as the selective harvest, which consists of treating the trees as a crop almost like corn or wheat. At this time of year, plans for cutting the winter supply of fuel and other timber products can be made by designating the straightest, healthiest, and most properly spaced trees with a band of paint or some other conspicuous mark.

This system of marking, Mr. Carlson explains, will enable the farmer to remove the remaining trees, including those that are slow-growing, diseased, or improperly spaced, as they are desired for fuel wood or for other purposes. In other words, the stand can be relieved of its most undesirable specimens in the very act of harvesting. Such improvement of ting will stimulate the growth of crop trees, produce a valuable yield of timber, and still leave the land protected against erosion.

I understand that Perry Cortham, who was educated at Murray and Freed-Hardeman colleges, will conduct a protracted gospel meeting at Hazel the week of September 4. Also Luther Pogue and Curtis Doran are in a big meeting at Coldwater under the large Christian tent about 400 were present at one of the sessions.

The latter meeting will close September 6.
