Notic :

The Ledger is issued a day late this week on account of waitfor the official returns from Calloway county. These returns tell a story that must be pleasing to a majority of the people of the county. Two questions that were, paramount have been settled decisively by the voters of Calloway. The first question was whether Calloway would vote a bond issue of $40,000 for the purpose of building a court house, and the second was whether stock of any character should run at large within the confines of any magisterial district within this country.

STORY

Garrett Coast, a young man of New York City, meets Douglas Blackstock, who invites him to a card party. He accepts although he dislikes Blackstock, the rea-son being that both are in love with Kath-erine Thaxter Coast fails to convince her that. Blackstock is unworthy of her friendship. At the party Coast meets two named Dundas and Van Tuyl. There is a quarrel, and Hlackstock shoots Van Tuyl dead. Coast struggles to wrest the weapon from him, thus the police dis-cover them. Coast is arrested for murder. He is convicted, but as he bedras his sen-tence, Dundas names Blackstock as the murderer and kills himself. Coast be-comes free, but Blackstock has married Katherine. Thaxter and fiel. Coast pur-chases a yacht and while sailing sees a man thrown from a distant boat. He res-cues the fellow who is named Appleyard. They arrive at a lonely Island, known as No Man's Land. Coast starts out to ex-plore the place and comes upon some dead. > Malthus, the renowned writer on political economy, had mankind badly disturbed is natural selection? in his own day and for a much later period by his plausible theory that the human race would ultimately starve to death.

Malthus laid down the doctrine that the carth's population would increase much faster than the means of subsistence, and he predicted a time of universal famine. He argued well, according to his lights, but he took no account of the increased productiv-ity of the soil through scientific methods of cultivation, nor of the reclamation of vast areas of land, whether by drainage of irrigation. Malthus reasoned that it would be necessary to limit the procreation of the race to avert the greater evil of extinction through the overpopulation of productive areas, and for a long time his theories were accepted. Since his time a vast deal of water has flowed under the bridge, and today instead of a congestion of humanity the greatest peril that confronts civilized nations is the empty cradle. Instead of multiplying, the leading races show an ever-diminishing birth rate.

Every one knows what is happening in France through the unwillingness of its married couples to rear more than one or two children, a condition which, if uncorrected, will lead to the certain downfall of a great and brilliant race.

In England, Ireland and Scotland fewer and fewer children come to the homes of the very class that is best able to care for them, and even in Germany, that once boasted of its prolific mothers, the same tendency to self-effacement, though their statesmen are full of dreams of expansion, oblivious of the futility of wider dominions if the material to fill them is wanting.
