GRADUATION '91

This exhibition marks the nineteenth annual graduation of Fine Art Students at Fanshawe College. Historically, visual art departments develop unique styles and philosophies. The relative smallness of fine art programs within the larger context of Community College structure is unparalleled in Post-secondary education in that they provide an alternative. For entrance level students this represents a system which is more accessible. For graduates it marks the culmination of a three-year studio intensive program, combining courses in art history and the humanities. Through exposure to various and diverse approaches to the making of art, students gain an understanding of historical and contemporary processes, both practical and conceptual. The faculty bring together a variety of disciplines, while a vigorous visiting artists program in an already vital art community, result in a progressive, yet disciplined, environment.

Despite financial cutbacks, Fanshawe's Fine Art Program has made a significant contribution to Post-secondary art education. This year's graduates face a country which is currently undergoing enormous political, economic, social and cultural upheaval. To make art part of their collective future is an exciting challenge. These young artists celebrate their achievement with an exhibit of high calibre works, substantiated by conscientious statements
