

Editorial

The Editorial Board of Caribbean Journal of Philosophy (CJP) will like to place on record our appreciation of the patience our contributors; the process of blind peer review, especially when the process is non-stipendiary, and the Journal Editors engage in a hands on approach to ensure speedy and efficient review can be tasking for everyone. Our pool of Editorial Advisors are commended for the unstinting diligence in ensuring we get feedbacks which assist our contributors in improving their submissions, even while many of them are carrying a full load of teaching, administrative and supervisory roles. The technical challenges that in the past delayed issues being released are becoming a thing of the past. Going forward, we will continue to fulfil our mandate of being the vehicle for the dissemination of diverse perspectives in philosophical and intellectual discourse.
