Commissioners, make the total amount of reduction of the assets below the book value, as reported by the Association, $73,335.88. While the mortgage loans, if these valuations are correct, are for a greater amount than the assigned collateral, they are allowed as carried.

To the liabilities as carried by the Association, I have added the following items:

First, $12,500.00 estimated to be the amount of dividends to be paid on the first day of June.

Second, I find that the Association has paid out on certain shares withdrawn, some $15,000 in excess of the book value of those shares at the time of withdrawal. This amount, naving been paid to certain withdrawing members in excess of the book value of their shares so withdrawn, must have been

It was provided by this vote as follows:

"A Permanent Guaranty Shareholders' fund, not exceeding two hundred thousand fund, pre-ferred shares of a par value of one hundred thousand fund, pre-ferred shares of a par value of one hundred thousand shares to the Association.

The said fund, to the amount of one hundred thou withdrawing members in excess of the book value of their shares so withdrawn, must have been

TAKEN FROM THE PROFITS OF THE REMAINING MEMBERS, and is, therefore, a liability to the continuing members, it being a settled principle of law that "dividends improperly declared and paid may be recovered."

However this amount having been once the determined by the Directors of the Association. The said fund, to the amount of said one hundred thousand dollars in eash, shall be kept and maintained as a guaranty fund for the payment of all the legal liabilities of the Association, in case of any insufficiency of its assets.

All moneys received by the Association for expenses, the rate per cent of which per share shall continue as now in force, and all earnings of the Association.

SHAREHOLDERS' FUND shall be credited to said fund and the ried as a liability, it is not extended.

Third, There are outstanding certificates or shares with the same agreement as to withdrawal, which now show a withdrawal liability of $15,000 in excess of their book value. While such contracts the officers and managers of the Association of their book value. While such contracts the officers and managers of the Association as fixed by the Board of Directors. withdrawal liability of $15,000 in excess of their book value. While such contracts in a mutual association might not be enforceable, as such an association cannot legally pay out more than the book value of shares, ascertained under its articles and rules, still as the Association has paid them in the past, and claims the right to do so in the future, and is under absolute contract with its members to so pay in case of withdrawal, this amount has been added as a liability.

Fourth, The Association has carried in its assets about $107,000.00 of gross premiums, the unearned portion of which is not a profit for the purpose of paying dividends at the present time, and that portion, estimated to be fully $65,000.00 has been added to the liabilities.

The following statement shows the Association, so far as its dividend paying properties are concerned, to have an apparent deflicit of $13,029.12, as follows:

STATE TOPICS OF INTEREST.

Frances Willard has received from Hon. Neal Dow of Portland, Me., a letter which she characterizes as remarkable from a man who has half finished his 92d year. He accepts Miss Willards' invitation to attend the Baltimore convention of the W.C. T. U., October 18 to 23.

He says:

"Two or three days ago came the book of Lady Henry Somerset's son. Please say to her it never occurred to me to be remembered in her disposition of that charming volume, and thank her very much for me. I am overwhelmed with work, attending many distant meetings and writing many letters, many of them of little account, but some of them requiring long replies. I went to a campmeeting yesterday forty miles away, and shall attend another 12 miles off and three days after another still, then a great convention in Boston, one that people intend to make the largest of the year, and so many more that I will not en umerate. I am well and not tired, but I cannot foresee how long this can continue.

"Ever lovingly, your friend,

The Derby Mascott.

Tonight there will be a great demand for seats at Portland Theatre to witness the striking racing play "The Derby Mascot". Two car loads of splendid scenery are required for the production of the piece and there are many new mechanical effects introduced. The great Derbysrace scene is said to be wonderfully effective. King Faro's thrilling leap over the gates of a railroad crossing is decidedly thrilling. The buck and ring dancers always bring down the house. A COQUETTE IN CAMP.

A sensation stirred the forest bound epths of Isaac Carey's lumber camp. A wcomer had put in an appearance at John Bailey's house. The men at work on the landing had seen that day as the train stopped at the station at the "siding" a female figure alight and come up the to inquire about home folks, as they were switch which led from the main track to the mill. She was young, she was fairly pretty, and she was a stranger who had evidently come to visit John Bailey's family, and many conjectures were indulged in by the busy workers all the afternoon. in by the busy workers all the afternoon.

Lem Marlow received a peculiar shock that afternoon. Driving his team down the road with a load of logs, which he was hauling from the woods, he had to pass John Bailey's house. At this place the horses were always stopped to rest, and Lem Marlow was considered one of the most careful teagisters at the camp. His horses were not thred out, but the resting horses were not tired out, but the resting laces were numerous and regular along

As he stopped his horses at this point on this eventful afternoon he was startled by seeing a pair of bright eyes, which belonged to a strange face, curiously watching him. A hasty glance proved that the face was pretty, and to Lem's idea the right sort of a face, and immediately the heart of the young teamstar went through a curious revolution. Lem Marlow had the name of being the most susceptible youth in camp, and many an envious companion would declare that "he never seen the like uv that 'er Lem Marlow fer gittin round the gals."

Where the fair unknown came from Lem did not know, but he could easily find out from John Bailey. Suffice it to say she was there and watching him, and thas necessitated recognition of his own graces, at least. His horses needed all sorts of attention immediately, patting and stroking their glossy sides and talking to them in the tone which teamsters often adopt to the animals who are almost as dear to them as human beings.

That night as the crew of workmen gathered in the men's room of the big boarding house after supper the talk naturally turned to the newcomer. Shorty Black looked up with sudden interest when her advent to the Bailey house was

"Was she a real purty sort uv a gal, with black eyes an hair an red cheeks?' he inquired breathlessly in his thin, shrill

Yes, the men could vouch for her being pretty, some could assert to her red cheeks, and one man could swear she had black eyes and hair.

"Well, then, she's Annie Davis, Mrs. Bailey's sister. I know her," responded Shorty, with a satisfied squeak in his voice.
"The dickens ye do," responded Jim Bennett, with a loud guffaw. The other ply because he was so small Shorty was the only name he got. Indeed it was questionable whether the men knew any other name. He had the usual dull, uninteresting features of the average backwoodsman and was good natured, ignorant and plain. Because of his short stature and thick, stocky body Shorty was always laughingly used for an illustration for diminutive

Lem Marlow looked up suddenly from the game of seven up in which he was tak-ing part when Shorty disclosed his inter-esting intelligence. He listened more intently to the conversation than to the game after that and finally threw down his cards and " 'lowed he wouldn't play any more that night."

"What, ye're goin to the barn?" called out Jim Bennett as Lem set his cap jauntily on one side of his head and sauntered toward the door.

"Naw!" he responded. I'm jest goin down to the blacksmith shop to see if Bill Rogers has fixed that sled runner that got Once out of sight of the quizzical gaze of his companions Lem struck out toward the residence of John Bailey. It was nothing unusual for him to drop in of an evening to discuss the affairs of the lumbering interects. He was received with a hearty welcome by the host and given a seat by the kitchen fire, where the two men fell to discussing the happenings of the day. But all through the conversation Lem cast furtive glances toward the sit-ting room, where Mrs. Bailey was talking busily to some one-undoubtedly the ineresting stranger whose acquaintance Lem so desired to make. Finally after a short pause John Bailey suddenly broke out with: "Oh, say, Lem, come on in the room where the women folks is. We've got a visitor to our house."

Lem followed blindly and smiled airily on the women wome on the young woman whom John introduced as "my sister-in-law, who has come up here in the woods to ketch a man. Now, put in yer best licks, Lem," he add-ed, "fer I reckon ye stand as fair a show as any.'

The girl blushed and laughed a little, but seemed in no wise displeased at the look of admiration which the young man took no pains to disguise. A coquette can be found in any sphere, and certainly Annie Davis could shine in that capacity at Carey's camp.

Lem went home that night feeling first rate over his venture. The girl was evidently struck with his appearance and conversation. It seemed plain sailing now for the for the enamored youth to get what his ambitious heart most craved-"a girl." "It ain't best to let her know at first how I'm stuck on her," he mused as he climbed the hill to the boarding house. "Gir's is queer critters. Now, ef I let on to her that I don't keer nothin 'bout her for a spell an that I hav lots of girls round brough the country she will think it will pay a heap more to be good to me." Things progressed very satisfactorily for Lem from that on. Miss Annie was gracions when Lem considered he was not Extract, in hot weather especially. Bathing unbending his dignity too much to pay the children with cold water and Pond's Ex. 385 Congress St., Portland, Me. her the attentions which were considered tract is cooling and beneficial.

cessary toward the girl who was to "keep stiddy comp'ny" with a young man. One night as Lem entered the boarding house before supper he was greeted by an uproarious chorus of voices from the men who had assembled before him. "Oh, say, Lem!" shouted Jim Bennett, a powerful man with a voice in proportion to his size, "what do you think? has been sparkin yer girl on the sly."

"He had her out sleigh ridin last night. He's been to see her lots when ye warn't round," exclaimed another, with exciteround," exclaimed another, with excitement. "Ye thought ye stood alone in that section all right, but we've just found out Shorty stands in, too, an has kept mum about it. Oh, he's a sly one, Shorty is. Ye about it. Oh, he's a sly one, Shorty is. Ye want to watch out."

Lem turned away with an easy laugh. Lem turned away with an easy laugh.

"Bosh," he said good naturedly. "D'ye think she's goin to take up with that little sawed off? Most girls requires a man to suit 'em, not a half a one like Shorty. Shorty knows better'n to fool round me none. Somebody might get hurt."

As Lem sauntered out of the room with a conceited smile on his face one of the man remembed with a spice of envy. "Lem

men remarked, with a spice of envy: "Lem thinks every girl is stuck on him. I'd give my old hat if Shorty would cut him out." Lem had no fears of Shorty, and when to inquire about home folks, as they were both from the same place. So Lem dis-missed all fears and again basked in the paradise which was lighted by Annie's bright eyes and heated by her smiles.

One night Lem was later than usual getting in from the woods. Things had gone wrong that day. A bitter wind had blown all day, bearing little snow flurries that cut like steel. A peevie had snapped in two while he was rolling a log, causing him to take a heavy fall, which had bruised and jarred him considerably and ruffled his temper also. Coming down with the last load of logs that night, one of his horses stepped in a hole in the plank road. which tore the skin from the creature's leg and lamed him severely. Lem had to stop and roll the logs from the truck, as the herse was unable to assist the other to pull the load to the mill. Then much time had to be consumed attending the herse's wounds before he could go to his supper.

The men were in the dining room when Lem entered the men's room. He wondered at the sound of unusual commotion which struck him before entering the dining room. Some unwonted excitement had taken place he was sure. As he opened the door the roar of laughter which greeted his appearance caused him to pause in bewilderment upon the threshold. Each man evidently tell him something, but laughter forbade, and howls and shrieks of mirth rent the air the like of which had never been heard at Carey's camp.

"What is the matter with ye?" Lem de manded angrily of a man who sat near, gasping and choking over mirth and

"Oh, Lem," he shrieked between the paroxysms of laughter, "Sh-Sh-Shorty's gone with Annie Davis to git married." For an instant a howl greeted the dis-closure which almost made the walls sink out, then a deathlike stillness reigned. The men fairly held their breaths, awaiting the explosion which was sure to follow, for Lem could swear in the true lumberman's style.

Lem stared around for a few seconds

the embodiment of ludicrous bewilder-ment. Finally he gasped in a low, halting tone, as if for once the power of speech—tern Milt could see a dejected expression on Lem's face. A slight feeling of com-miseration crept over him, and he sup-pressed the grin which had begun to over-spread his features. He sat down and pro-ceeded to give Lem the details of the story. Shorty and Annie had been lovers f-a some time away back at their own homes, and this was only the result that had been intended when she came to visit her sister. She had simply smiled on Lem to throw the other men off their guard and give them a surprise. Shorty had planned it and approved of her conduct all the way through through. Poor Lem's heart burned flercely against her-not so much at the loss of his sweet heart as at the thought of being duped a he had been. And then to be beaten by Shorty! "Ef it had been any one but that durned little runt, I wouldn't keer," he groaned to Milt Flynn. "But that was the gosh durndest trick ever played on a feller. But I'll git even with 'em ylt, see of I don't." He did not stop to conside that Shorty had only bided his time and paid back with interest some of the prac-tical jokes Lem had always been so fond of playing on him. Lem Marlow took up the burden of life again, feeling that he had been inclosed and whitewashed in the bargain. But life was unendurable for him at Carey's camp. The men were merciless in their teasing. Lem stood it awhile in dogged silence un til human nature could stand no more. One night he hunted up old Isaac Carey settled his account and informed him h was going to leave next day. Then he went into the meh's room and settled his accounts with them there. The worm had turned, and the men did not forget for a long time the profanity and maledictions poured out upon them. The next morning Lem Marlow left, and Carey's camp saw him no more.—New York Advertiser.

Pandemonium could be considered quiet compared to the uproar that followed. Benches were kicked over, men rolled over the floor or slapped one another on the back in the ecstasy of their mirth. To think that Lem had been cheated out of his girl, and by Shorty of all persons!

The Dogs of the Conciergerie. We seem to hear the baving of deep moutned, great, flerce dogs-shepherds dogs, as one might say, since their office is to guard the sheep for slaughter. Several of these faithful canine animals were employed in the prison, but one of them, named Ravage, was distinguished for ferocity and sagacity. Jailers slept at night near the cour de preau, and Ravage kept watch there with his master. Some prisoners attempted to escape by boring a hole in the wall.

Their chief danger of detection consisted in the watchfulness of Ravage, but, strangely enough, he was silent. His silence was explained on the following morning by an assignat of 100 sous, which was tied to his tail, together with a little note, on which was written, "On peut corrompre Ravage avec un assignat de cent sous et un paupet de pieds de mouton.' The deprayed dog walked about publish ing his own infamy and was hailed with shouts of hughter. He was immured, as a punishment, for some hours in a cachot and emerged with an air of deep humiliction. -Quarterly Review.

A stranger stood on the sidewalk curb of Congress street yesterday. He stood there a long time because he had observed the poles and troller wires and expected the arrival of a trolley car. He waited direction he wished to take and then he said to a passerby: "When will a trolley car come?" "Oh in about two weeks," was the reply. The passerby meant what he said, but the passerby meant what he said, but the stranger took it that he was sarcastically referring to the unfrequency of the trolley cars. Therefore he waited till three more horse cars went by and then concluded that the passerby might have been in earnest and moved on himself.

This may be taken as somewhat significant of the public preference for the trolley car.

OBITUARY.

George H. Starr.

Mr. George H. Starr died in this city last evening after a brief illness, although he had evidently been out of health for some time past.

Mr. Starr was a native of Halifax, N. He was trained to business pursuits and upon removal to this city became He was at the time of his death, and had been for a great portion of his life, vice consul at this port for great Britain, and recently in addition to his consular and business duties added that of passenger agent for the Dominion line of steamers. He was a strong Episcopalean, a warden of St. Stephen's church, and a member of the standing committee of the Episcopal diocese for Maine. Mr. Starr leaves a widow and two children, Mr. H. G. Starr of Cumberland Mills, and Miss Eliza Starr of Portland. Mr. Starr was a man of most genial disposit ion and deservedly popular with all who

Capt. Robert Soule.

Capt. Robert Soule died at his residence on Main street, Freeport Thursday morn ing at 7 o'clock, at the age of nearly 89 years. Capt. Soule had been retired from active business many years, but was at one time one of the prominent business men of the village. He was known as a genial and quiet citizen, with appleasant face and kind words and marvelously smooth and easy manners, with a pleasent word and greeting for everybody. His last days were peaceful and happy. He leaves one son, Edward S., in business in Mallet's block, Mrs. His wife, an estimable lady, died about three years

The James H. Hamlen.

Mr. James C. Hamlen, owner's agent for the James H. Hamlen, states that the article in yesterday's PRESS, taken from the Boston Journal, was incorrect. Mr. Hamlen says: "The James H. Hamlen sailed from Trapani, Sicily, on the 27th of June, '95, and consequently when spoken was 81 days out from that port, bound to Boston; nothing out of the ordinary passage when considering the contrary winds and boisterous weather which has been for a long time prevailing on the Western ocean. The supplying of the vessel at sea with provisions, is a very usual occurance and is oftentimes called for under such circumstances as a precaution."

Corner Middle and Cross Sts.,

PORTLAND, ME.

The transformation is complete. An ancient landmark, familiar to the people of maine for more than Thirty years, as headquarters for bargains in ladies' dry goods, has been transformed, as if by marie, into headquarters for bargains in male attire.

The location is the same, the appearance wonderfully improved; more imposing, more attractive, more convenient, more modern.
