THE SCIENCE OF LIFE; OR, SELF-PRESERVATION.

More Than One Million Copies Sold. Gold Medal Awarded to the Author by the "National Medical Association" March 31st, 1876.

"The untold miseries that result from indigestion in early life, may be alleviated and cured. The Medical Work published by the Peabody Medical Institute, Boston, Mass., entitled 'The Science of Life; or, Self-Preservation,' is a most valuable and practical treatise on the errors of youth or too close application to business, and the means of restoring and preserving the system. It contains a most valuable model work treating of indigestion, Catarrh of the Stomach, and Nervous Diseases; elegant engravings, bound in substantial material, only 25c. Rarely enough to say for printed matter."

"The 'SCIENCE OF LIFE' is also considered MORE THAN FIFTY VALUABLE MEDICAL PRESCRIPTIONS, each one of which is worth the price of the book."

THE PRESS. SATURDAY MORNING, SEPT. 30, '76

We do not read anonymous letters and communications of any kind, and the address of the writer are in all cases indispensable, not necessarily for publication but as a guarantee of good faith.

We cannot undertake to return or reserve communications that are not so.

EVERY regular article of the PRESS is furnished with a Card certificate counterstamped by Stanley T. Pullen, Editor. All railway, steamboat and hotel managers will confer a favor upon us by demanding credentials of every person claiming to represent our journal.

NEW JERSEY is boasting of a peculiar apple tree. A quarter of a century ago William Babcock took a bud from a tree which bore sweet apples. Cutting them in half he placed the sour and sweet halves together and budded them to a tree. The result is an apple half sweet and half sour. They ought to call it the Tilden and Hendricks apple.

SOME one is anxious to call H. G. Apple "Newton's Channel." But the people will not suffer the old name to pass away; it is too picturesque and expressive to be discarded. It is a corruption of the Dutch Hout Gatt or wharf-passage, but time and popular pronunciation have given it a larger meaning.

THERE is some curiosity in regard to the attendance on the State Greenback Convention at Auburn next month. If all men followed their convictions not a few of the followers of Tilden and Hendricks in this State would be present.

RUTHERFORD B. HAYES, OF OHIO.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT, WILLIAM A. WHEELER, OF NEW YORK.

The Centennial Awards. The system on which awards are made at the World Fair in Philadelphia does not seem to be generally understood. It differs in many respects from those adopted at previous exhibitions. Heretofore there have been gold, silver and bronze medals given indicating by their relative value the degree of merit of the article in its class. At Philadelphia the medals are all to be of bronze and of equal value, so they do not show whether the persons to whom they are awarded have received first, second or lower premiums.

Several awards upon the same or different articles have been given. Each medal when granted is to be accompanied by a report setting forth the reasons why the exhibit is deemed worthy of an award. This report, which is signed by the judge and by as many in the examining group as concur in it, is furnished to the exhibitor and he may make what use of it he chooses. Thus in place of the former anonymous verdict the exhibitor possesses the written opinion of the jury, to which his signatures are attached, setting forth the reasons why the exhibit is awarded a medal. The judges submit their reports to the Bureau of Awards, and if found in proper form and conformity to the rules they are made public. The medals are delivered at a later day. The number of exhibitors is 30,864. The number of awards will aggregate 14,000. Of these 4,000 remain to be announced.

The awards may be given in the same class of articles, based upon the same or differing qualities. The judges are directed to make an award whenever they find a meritorious article. The award does not set forth that the article is the best of its class, but simply its praiseworthy qualities. The reports are based upon considerations of originality, invention, discovery, utility, quality, skill, workmanship, fitness for the purpose intended, adaptation to public wants, economy and so forth.

It will be noticed that our Maine exhibits receive frequent and gratifying mention. For what qualities the products are commended we shall learn as soon as the full reports of the judges are printed.

UP to Saturday last the Philadelphia Exhibition had been open 115 days, and $4,071,315 paying visitors had passed through the turnstiles. The receipts from this source were $1,864,534. The attendance and the receipts so far have exceeded those of any other exhibition, even that at Paris in 1876. The estimated expense of the Philadelphia Fair was four million dollars, requiring an attendance of eight million visitors if reliance be had on the former attendance. But as large sums have been received for trading concessions and expenses have proved less heavy than anticipated a smaller number of visitors will be required to pay the expenses. If the present average attendance is maintained to the close of the Exhibition, receipts will be considerably in excess of expenditures. The Fair is to be open in all 160 days, closing on the 10th of November.

SUICIDE and simulations of suicide appear to be a favorite recreation with a certain grade in the United States Navy. Not long since Claude Avenue, discharged apothecary, made a dramatic exit from this world of trouble, apparently for the sole reason that his wife was in Portland, and it was too much for him to visit her; he sent her word to meet him in another world and hastened there himself. Now another man of the Navy, name and rank not given, comes to Saco, discovers that his wife is going to the great show at Philadelphia with the individual generally known as "another," and pretends an attempt at suicide, making himself however good and well, and not for the hospital. If his wife is a woman of spirit she will not lose her trip on account of her husband's play-acting.

On Monday the Connecticut town elections are to be held. Six proposed constitutional amendments will also be voted upon; the first providing for the new towns of less than twenty-five hundred inhabitants shall be attached to the parent town for representation in the house of representatives; the second that votes for state officers shall be canvassed in November; the third that common judges be appointed for four years and city judges for two years; the fourth that probate judges shall be elected for two years; the fifth that compensation of members of the general assembly be limited to $300 and mileage to the same; the sixth that "white" be erased from electoral qualifications.

THE PRESS.

(From Mackworth's Magazine)

John's Hero.

The book, in which you take so warm an interest, is a work of fiction; and yet, as you judiciously observe, it is one without any of the usual faults of a novel.

"I want to thank you for all the good which I have got from your writings." The great man looked at him suspiciously; he thought he was going to be asked for an autograph.

"I hope that I have not been wrong in coming to you; but would you tell me what to do?" "What to do?" repeated the other, on whose open countenance was a strange mixture of embarrassment and dawning gratification.

"I mean, what to do with my life?" "Live it," said Mr. Damon, on the spur of the moment and with a happy reminiscence of one of his early sayings. It sounded well, and he repeated it. In a despondent tone, "Live it," he said, "but I will make an impression on my friend. He thought it over. Then, as he saw his host in a somewhat embarrassed attitude, and settle himself in his chair, he felt that he had established his footing, and prepared to enlarge on his difficulties.

"I can teach nothing," said he; "but, if I am going to learn." "Do you know him?" I asked. "No; but I shall be in less than two hours. I am going to him, because he is the only great man, to tell him that I have need of him. I will do anything for him, from blacking his boots to carrying his baggage."

"Or rubbing his back?" I ventured to suggest. "I cannot aspire to do so much honor," said John. "We breakfasted alone in silence. My friend was evidently nervous; and I was glad to be swallowed a powerful stimulant, which he would have given me, had he not been so nervous."

"I beg your pardon," said John. "You can leave the bill, you know." "You are an unskilful beginning. As the two men looked at each other, the man gradually clear to the elder that the gallant young fellow before him was neither his slave nor his master, but a man of his own rank and station."

MEDICAL.

MURRAY'S LAXATIVE AND PURIFYING Bitters!

This medicine has been before the public most of the time for the past thirty years, and has given excellent satisfaction to all who have used it. It is the original inventor, and is confidently recommended by the medical profession, especially for all those difficulties and ailments which are connected with the bowels.

Indigestion or Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Loss of Appetite, Headache, Constipation, Colic, Flatulency, and all diseases caused by the stercoraceous state of the bowels. Any number of recommendations might be published, but the article is so well and favorably known that it is deemed unnecessary to repeat the same.
