GLOSSARY | PRINT

Marketing managers today are collecting more information about their customer base than ever before. Managers can capitalize on the value of this information by applying a simple formula to determine the lifetime value of a customer. Customer lifetime value (CLTV) is a formula that helps a marketing manager arrive at the dollar value associated with the long-term relationship with any given customer, revealing just how much a customer relationship is worth over a period of time. Understanding CLTV is a very powerful tool. It becomes extremely useful in considering customer acquisition processes as well as selecting optimal service levels to provide different customer groups.

You might want to determine the lifetime value of a customer for a number of reasons. One is to identify different valuations for customers with different characteristics. Another could be with the goal of influencing the behavior of different customers and consequently changing their LTV.

The CLTV tool will not only help you determine the value of a customer, it will also allow you to modify assumptions regarding the input variables in the formula. As you modify these assumptions, you will understand how each impacts the CLTV result. The CLTV tool enables you to identify different valuations for customers with different characteristics. Moreover, you may ultimately be able to influence the behavior of certain customers and consequently
