

Innovative Methods for Engaging People Living with Dementia in Public Health Research

Mrs Jean Daly Lynn<sup>1,2</sup> Professor Assumpta Ryan<sup>3</sup>, Professor Brendan McCormack<sup>4</sup>, Professor Suzanne Martin<sup>2</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Engage With Age, Belfast, Northern Ireland

<sup>2</sup> School of Health Sciences, Ulster University, Newtownabbey, Northern Ireland

<sup>3</sup> School of Nursing, Ulster University, Magee, Northern Ireland

<sup>4</sup> Head of Division of Nursing, Queen Margaret University, Scotland

For further information please contact: j.daly-lynn@ulster.ac.uk

This is Us

At Home with Scrabo

'You know you are home when you see Scrabo and we see it every day'

East Side Dinners

No Stitch Cushions

Birds of a Feather Flock Together

The American Patchwork Quilt

No matter where we go in the world, it's good to be home again

Art based research presents new opportunities for people living with dementia to engage and express themselves without a focus on language. To explore the lived experience within technology enriched housing for people living with dementia, sixty-four participants took part in forty-eight art-based focus groups across eight housing schemes within Northern Ireland. The output of the qualitative research is illustrated in this poster.

Connections Independence Safe Family Pets Privacy Staff Belonging Choice Activities Freedom Space Relationships Community Friendship Autonomy

What is it like to live in technology enriched supported accommodation?

An art workshop guide was developed from the findings. Please contact us for a copy.

Hands of Time

Inside out and outside in

