The officers of the association are deserving of credit for the evenlent program. Dr. J. P. Brushassociation are deserving of credit for the excellent program. Dr. J. P. Brush-ingham's address on Friday night cap-tured the hearts of all with its thought and spirit. He held that the supreme work of the church and the paster is Evangelism, and the supreme honor roll should be that of souls rather than dollars. The call of a preacher, is not to preach, preaching is a means, not an end; he is called to save souls. The ministers need to be possessed with an intense persuasion and 1903 declared squarely in favor of primary reform, as to all candidates and to cover the entire state.

WOLCOTT IS HOME.

Henry Wolcott, broken and burdened down with a self-imposed sorrow, the so-called murderer of young John Grevengoed, has gone back to his home near Holland to work out the few remaining weeks before he comes to trial before a jury of twelve men to determine whether or not he was guilty of murder in the first degree.

Wolcott does not expect to be acquitted but he announces in his hopeless way that he has left everything to his attorneys. He tells his story simply and with the manner of a man who is telling the truth.

"Murder was fartherest from my thoughts on that day." he stated recently. "I ordered the boys off my land and followed them as far as the fence. There the Grevengoed boy turned and I saw a knife flash in his hand. Then my revolver was harmlessly in my pocket. I expected the knife to pierce my breast and from that I am clear on nothing until I saw vation that made me shoot. I can not express what I would give to bring the

Question of Honor No Longer Exists Between Jap and Russ.

ZAR'S LOSS IS OVER 40,000

Which Put the Total of Both at 60,000 Men-St. Petersburg News Is Sorrowful

Tokio, Oct. 18 .- The Russians fiercely assaulted General Oku and attacked Generals Nodzu and Kuroki on Monday night, but were everywhere repulsed with heavy losses.

Mukden, Oct. 18 .- Throughout the whole of Mukden there can be distinctly heard cannonading in the south, which is raging more fiercely than is now entering on the second week.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 18.—General Sakharoff telegraphs that the Russians Sunday recaptured Lonely Tree hill south of Shakha and captured eleven Japanese guns and one quick-firer. The Japanese losses were enormous General Sakharoff reports that a cannonade was reopened along the whole front Monday morning.

London, Oct. 18 .- A dispatch, dated Mukden Oct. 17, 1:30 p. m. says: "The Russian forces at 11 o'clock this forenoon penetrated the Japanese center, and it is reported captured eleven or thirteen guns and 150 prisoners east of the railway. At another point during the day the Siberian regiments took twenty-four guns. The Russian operations today have been quite successful. The Japanese, after a terrifically stubborn resistance, were compelled to retire along their whole line, losing heavily. All the trenches carried by the Russians were filled with the Japanese dead. In one not very large trench there were counted 600 corpses of Japanese.

Mukden Oct 17-The bettle s renewed and continued throughout last night, being especially heavy at midnight. The Russians retain their position along the Shakhe river and have made frequent attacks upon the Japanese, capturing six of the latter's guns. The eastern army is helping the western forces. There has been very heavy artillery fire today. The fighting is now centered on the plain.

Tokio, Oct. 17.-There is a strong appeal for peace in the appalling tragedy which is now under enactment in Manchuria. Both armies have fought ferociously for a week, and desperate fighting still continues. It is probable that the death roll will be largely increased before the final shot is fired. The preliminary reports indicate that about 60,000 men of both sides have been either killed or wounded, the larger portion of them being Russians, since the armies of the two belligerents closed in combat.

Japs Are Not Jubilating.

Even the Japanese, to whom the great victory is of paramount importance, seem to be shocked by the slaughter of their enemies. The Japanese people are receiving the news from the field of battle calmly, and there can be heard no shouts in the streets proclaiming the victory of their nation. Few flags are displayed. probably later on there will be a procession with the consequent joilification, but there are heard many expressions of opinion that no demonstration of any kind should be held.

World May Demand Peace. A member of the diplomatic corps. in an interview with the correspondent of the Associated Press, said: "I ery interest of humanity demands the army ends. adjustment of the differences between the two nations and the proclamation of peace. The situation between the two belligerents is a delicate one, but what a splendid triumph for diplomacy it would be if peace could be arranged. No Question of Honor Involved.

"It seems to me that the question of honor is no longer involved. If Russia feels that such a question is involved surely the heroic and successful defense of Port Arthur and the valor shown by Russian soldiers on the fields of Manchuria should forever determine the quality of Russian courage. Russians should remember that the distance dividing her strength, and the limitations of her railway, are historical factors in this war. These factors are generally known. They are looked upon as faults."

SITUATION IS STILL UNCERTACE

org Connot Make It Out he

St. Petersburg, Oct. 17, 8:45 A. M.-The official veil has been lifted from the ghastly tragedy around Shakhe; but even the official account, supplemented by numerous press dispatches, leaves much uncertainty as to the situation. Out of the fragmentary mass of information at hand it is possible only to conclude that the costly withdrawal and retreat from Liaoyang is being duplicated upon an even grander scales, after more desperate fighting and heavier losses.

General Kuropatkin's story leaves the Russians still tensciously holding the north bank of the Shakhe river. but general belief is that this is only the desperate final of one of the greatest military dramas of history, and that the Russian army as a whole is retiring towards Mukden, having suffered at the most conservative estimate a loss of over 30,000. Of the left flank, which was one of the most important points in the line of battle, absolutely nothing is heard, which leaves the inference that it is not in a position to communicate with the remainder of the army.

All the wounded are being carried to Harbin, farther north. It is understood that the correspondents also have been ordered to Harbin, which indicates that the retreat will not even stop at Tie pass. All hopes of the world-heralded advance to Port Arthur have been abandoned. The weather conditions are even worse than duron previous days of the fight, which ing the retreat from Liaoyang. Streams are bank high and fords are impassable; but it is impossible to say how this will affect the final situation. It may prove Russian salvation by preventing a Japanese pursuit. On the other hand, if the Russians are on the wrong side the flooded rivers may only emphasize the completeness of the dis-

> The latest reports from the battle are of yesterday afternoon and evening, when the Russians were carrying on a heavy rear-guard fight, evidently retiring on Mukden, Generals Oku and Nodzu were concentrating for another blow on the Russian right, where the fighting is described as having been furious. Mukden itself remains quiet. though the sounds of battle are plainly heard to the southward.

Although the official account of the battle does not present the disastrous picture that many in St. Petersburg had resigned themselves to see the general feeling here is of the deepest gloom. If the battle has not been Russia's Sedan in fact the moral and political effect could hardly be worse. The result will render the war and its conduct more unpopular than ever at

SITUATION STILL CRITICAL

So Says St. Petersburg, but There Is No

St. Petersburg, Oct. 18, 8:15 A. M.-The news from the front is more reassuring from the Russian standpoint. The situation is still regarded as being critical, but General Kuropatkin is apparently holding the Japanese firmly on his center and right wing. The situation at this date may be described as follows:

General Kuropatkin has slightly advanced his center, reoccupying Shakhe, south of the Shakhe river. Directly behind him at a distance of nine miles lies the Hun river, and across the bridges spanning this stream the Russians must retire in case they retreat on Mukden. General Kuropatkin must continue to firmly hold his center and right flank i norder to prevent the Japanese getting possession of the Hun river bridges. Thus he will cover the withdrawal of his apparently beaten west wing. It is no longer a question of a Russian Sedan, though all hope of relieving Port Arthur must apparently be abandoned. Little hope is expressed that Kuropatkin will be able to continue to advance. The four days' fight of the eastern column was of the same desperate character that marked the operations of the center and right

A heavy Russian column under such leaders as Ivanoff, Rennenkampf, Garngross and Kondratovitch repeatedly assaulted strongly entrenched Japanese positions on heights commanding the passes. The assaults were largely night work. The cannonade was so furious that it was impossible to advance in the light of day. Finally on Oct. 13, when the passes had been actually occupied, came the order to withdraw, probably owing to a critical position at other parts of the believe the world will recoil from the front. Here the story of the operations sickening slaughter of this battle. Ev- of the eastern wing of the Russian

Mrs. M. Shonaker, 256 West Fifteenth street, says: "I suffered from constant heavy aching pains across the smal! of my back so that I could not rest comfortably at night in any position and during the day I felt tired and languid. The kidney secretions became badly affected, irregular, too frequent, scanty and were attended by a good deal of pain besides depositing a heavy sediment. I suffered also from headaches and spells of dizziness so that I either had to sit down or hold on to something from failing. I used a great many different remedies but without obtaining any benefit. Friends advised me to use Doan's Kidney Pills and I get a. box at J. O. Doesburg's drug store and used them. They helped me from the very start. They are the best remedy I ever tried and I have no said: hesitation in recommending them."

The true dairyman who thoroughly knows his business is never fooled by the dual purpose animal notion, and the man whose interest is in beef will not, if he knows his business, have anything of the dairy type on his land, says Professor F. W. Massey in Practical Farmer. Half and half animals, neither the best for milk nor the best for beef, need a half and half farmer, who is neither one thing nor another, but who keeps cows to stand on the lee side of a straw stack in winter and whose chief idea in keeping cattle is to try how little he can keep them alive

When I was a boy there were wonderfully deep milkers in what we then called the Durhams. But the modern Shorthorn has been so continuously bred to beef points that this old strain has almost disappeared, though here and there we hear of dairymen who are keeping Shorthorns exclusively for ING. The Dairy Sire. There are a good many things which farmers must quit doing if they are to succeed in increasing their profits on the dairy side, says Wall ce's Farmer. They must quit buying bulls for good looks. The unfortunate thing is that even the dairy farmer will not buy a young bull at a sale, public or private, unless it carries a good deal of flesh and is a good looker. It is quite natural that farmers should do this. They have an eye to beef. Their main business is fattening cattle; hence they have beef form in their minds, and it is difficult for them to realize that the extreme beef form, even if it does not carry much surplus flesh, is not the

PRIMARY REFORM.

As is well known, the Republican party in its state conventions of 1902 and 1903 declared in favor of a primary they can find. They have simply, by election law, applying to the nomination of ativism, run back on the old Durham and have got their cows into entire state; and the enactment of a entire state; and the enactment of a law in harmony with these two platforms, declarations would of course cated real primary reform, or did he cover the entire state and apply to all do so simply because he believed it to candidates. It is also well known that candidates. It is also well known that law in harmon the last Republican legislature refused the point I have so often tried to im- to pass such a law, and the same was defeated through the influence of the machine men-the very same combination that forced the nomination of metrically opposed to each other, just Warner and are now making such as different as breeding a setter for frantic efforts and piteous appeals to hope of electing him. All over the state, among the rank and file of the Republican party, and indeed including nearly the entire party, excepting only the machine bosses, there was a pervading and almost unanimous demand for a genuine primary reform law-such a law as would require all candidates for office. from governor down, to be nominated by the direct vote of the people. In short, to apply the principles now applicable to elections, under the Australian ballot system to the nomination of candidates. The State League of Republican clubs favored it. Public opinion was so strongly in favor of such a law that many politicians favored it, none with more seemingly earnestness than William Alden Smith.

It was a popular proposition in his congressional district and throughout the state. When the Republican state convention met at Grand Rapids, May 19, 1904, the machine men were in control, and through their efforts William Alden and true primary reform were defeated. The convention declared for a sort of local option law, but giving municipalities the right to say whether they would have such a law or not, and retaining the state convention to nominate state officers. The resolution adopted May 19, 1904, is a miserable subterfuge, a burlesque on primary reform, and under it there might be as many different methods of nominating candidates and electing delegates as there are countles in the state, as it leaves to each municipality how it would nominate candidates and elect delegates. Besides, it retains the state convention with all the opportunities it affords for machine manipulation and conuption.

The Republican state convention held in Detroit, June 30, 1904, reaffirmed the action of the Grand Rapids convention of May 19, 1904, thus repudiating the former pledges of the party and insulting the intelligence of every ing the pail between the knees. The honest Republican by attempting to honest Republican by attempting to palm off a spurious subterfuge in place of the genuine reform promised.

In the last convention, June 30, William Alden, being a member of the committee on resolutions, and being out-voted by the machine members of the committee, made a minority report favoring a law substantially as the Democrats now favor and demand. His report was voted down by the machine men in the convention, and the subterfuge, as it now stands in the Republican platform, was adopted.

Now what does William Alden do? He falls meekly into line and defends Warner and his clan. His opinions seem to change with the vote of the convention. Now the Warner-Doherty-Navin brand of primary reform is the kind he is advocating; now he is working "tooth and nail" to elect the massing the country of Ottawa.

Ought you to indorse a man whose convictions of public duty rests on so flimsy a foundation? One who seems perfectly willing to outrage and defy the wishes of the rank and file of his party rather than lose the prestige and favor of the machine. It seems to us that he has shown himself to be but a shifty politician, and that no selfrespecting Republican and no friend of primary reform should give him a vote. To do so is to reward one who places party regularity above honesty, and whose political independence fails him when it is most needed.—Ionia Standard.

Directoire styles are to have great vogue this season, and when all the characteristics of this mode are not employed in a single frock there will be little hints of the directoire in most of the up to date costumes.

The picture is of a dainty little costume of cream colored voile with modified touches of the directoire style to be seen about the cape collar revers and cuffs of black taffeta. GRACEFUL CLIMBERS.

Cheerful Foliage and Blossoms Beau tiful In Form and Color. Bew flowering plants can rival the clematis as a graceful and rapid climber, wreathing walls, latticework or wires with exquisite sprays of delicate greenery and myriads of flowers. This is especially true of Clematis montana criticised the Armour refrigerating which will cover many feet of wall in a season and flowers profusely in May, its creamy white starlike blossoms falling into beautiful natural wreaths, if not too much interfered with.

But the ordinary gardener, who is so terribly fond of the use of the shears the same dead level of tidiness, is too apt to commit sad havoc among the clematises. Flowering alone on the wood of last season, as many of them do, the careless pruner is apt to destroy all hope of flowers by cutting off most of the young growth yearly, and this is the common though unsuspected cause of failure to bloom among many of these plants. Clematis montana is one of these; its shoots, therefore, which are so rapidly produced during the summer, should not be destroyed with the knife, but only thinof the wall or arbor which needs them. It climbs best when allowed its own way on wire netting stretched a few inches from the wall, clinging to this by means of the footstalks of its young leaves. Clematis paniculate, the Japanese virgin's bower, is one of the choicest of climbers. The plant is of strong, rapid growth, with small, dense, cheerful green foliage, giving it a grace and elegance possessed by no other hardy greatest profusion during August and continue until late in the fall, are of a white color and most deliciously fragrant.

Pruning the Keisfer.

Dr. Ward: "The way I have done with my Keiffers, I take about one-half of eye, he laughed himself and replied: this year's growth out so as to keep the trees down. The natural tendency is to spread and grow long branches, and by such trimming it is easy enough to keep them down and also to keep them close to the ground."

Charles Black: "My practice always has been with the Keiffer pear to keep it well pruned back and to not leave over a foot or fifteen inches on the new growths and then thoroughly thin it out. Keeping that practice up for the first six or seven years, I get a close, compact tree. The last few years I changed my tactics a little. I find that if you get your tree too dense the trouble is a good deal more with the rusts on the pear, and so for that reason you must have an open head, but you must keep the trees down or they will grow way up with long arms and break down with the weight of the Madrid, Oct. 18.—The Infanta Maria fruit. > Bulb Planting. Bulbs should be planted in open ground during October and November, and on the approach of severe frost the bed should be covered over to the coarse manure, leaves or litter, which must be carefully removed on the approach of mild weather in the spring, to avoid ruining the spikes as they push up. In planting, the tops of the bulbs should be placed from one and a half to four inches beneath the surface, according to the size of the bulb -i. e., hyacinths may be planted four inches and tulips three inches deep, while one and a half to two inches deep is enough for crocuses and snowdrops.

Plants For the Window. Petunias and other border plants should be dug up and potted just before frosts for the winter window garden. Keep them cool and shaded for about two weeks; then cut down new and thrifty growth.

HER CHRISTIAN NAME BEVERLY SMITH

CILENCE was-to quote from Jimmie Spencer—Henry Walcot's "long suit."

There was a great bond of friendship between the two; perhaps they followed in this the law that opposites attract each other. For Jimmie Spencer was the reverse of Henry Walcot in almost every particular. Where Henry was tall and dark, Jimmie was rather the medium height, and so inclined to rotundity of figure that his face, beaming always with good humor, inevitably suggested to an observer the qualifying adjective "chubby."

"Why do I like Henry so well?" said Jimmie one day in reply to a question. "Because he is such a jolly fellow and knows how to keep his mouth shut. Say, do you know," growing suddenly enthusiastic, "Henry can speak English, German and Spanish, but, by Jove! he knows how to keep quiet in about 14 other languages, not counting dialects and slang."

'Why do I like Jimmie?" said Henry, musingly. "Because he is a jolly good fellow and knows how to talk, I sup-

So they sat now in front of a cheerful fire in Walcot's room, smoking and talking. Jimmle was chatting away as usual, but there was something a bit distraught in his manner, which did not escape the keen eye of his friend. By and by, even Jimmie's fund of small talk seemed exhausted, and each sat smoking and musing.

It was Henry who broke the silence. "Sit up, Jimmie, and talk out like a man," said he, with a laugh. "You know you never tramped all the way up here in the snow and then climbed three flights of stairs just to have a chat. Out with it, man! What have you got on your mind?"

Jimmie looked up queerly, and, catching the friendly gleam in the other's

"No dodging you, you sly dog! I believe you are a mind reader, anyhow." "Perhaps I do a bit in that line now and then," answered Henry, with an assumption of great mystery, "and to prove it to you, I will tell you that you came up here for no other purpose than to tell me that you have gone and got yourself engaged." '

"Now, how in thunder did you know that?" asked Jimmie, sitting up in astonishment.

"You look guilty," answered Henry, with one of his peculiar, almost inaudible chuckles.

"But I never told you that I was even paying attention to the girl whom I am to have the honor of marrying," declared Jimmie, protestingly. "You could not have had any idea of it."

"Now, Jimmie, my boy, do give me credit for using my powers of observation occasionally," protested Henry. "So!" said Jimmie, "then maybe you have used them far enough to tell me the name of the girl." "I undoubtedly can," averred Henry, solemnly. "Stunted as my powers of observation may be, they have been sufficiently powerful to enable me to declare that the young lady in question is none other than Miss Preston."

This prescience was too much for Jimmie, who simply stared open-mouthed at his chuckling tormentor. "That's the worst of you close-mouthed people," said he, presently, with an air of deep disgust. "You sit around and don't say a word, and all the while you are keeping close tab on everything and everybody. Then when a fellow comes around to tell you a piece of important news you take the wind all out of his sails with your air of world-wide knowledge and consciousness of his most intimate thoughts. I must say that I think you might have pretended ignorance. Now, I'll just keep quiet about the matter." And Jimmie resolutely shut his mouth and turned again to his cigar. "Now, Jimmie," said Walcot, with dignity, "don't be any more of a chump than usual. You know you are so full of the subject that you have just got to talk. So fire away."

And Jimmie did fire away presently, the subject having got the better of his resolve.

"But, Henry, all natural prejudice aside, I just can't believe my good luck. To think that she should accept me, when she might have had any manwhy, she might have married you, old chap, couldn't she?"

"Did she tell you so?" "Nope," said Jimmie, cheerfully, "but I can't see how it is that you haven't fallen in love with her." "Maybe I was in love with another woman," said Walcot, slowly.

There was something in his tone that made Jimmie look up quickly. Walcot was gazing into the cheerful fire and there was such a smile upon his face as Jimmie had never seen. The mercurial youngster was on his feet in an instant and rushed over to Walcot. "By Jove, old chap, so you have been indulging in a love affair and didn't even take me, your best friend, into your confidence! I call that shameful of you, but I am deuced glad to know that you are in love, after all. Take my word for it, old chap, there's nothing like it in all the world." "Easy, boy, easy," said Walcot, with a quiet smile that may have concealed some embarrassment. "I haven't confessed to any love affair yet. And as for confidences, remember that you told me nothing of yours until you were actually engaged. Even good friends like you and me don't talk over such affairs. However, I may have-I hope to have-some good news to tell you soon."

"How soon?" "Who can say?" "Have you proposed to her?"

"No, but I intend to do so." "Good boy! Go in and win. If you want a certificate of good character, call on me. I am always ready to tell a lie in the sacred cause of friendship." And Jimmie's infectious laugh took all sting away from the remark.

Once more fell a period of silence, and Jimmie broke it with:

"Did you ever notice the color of her eyes, Henry?" 'Yes," answered Henry, with an air of amusement. "They are blue, aren't they?" "No, indeed," said Jimmie, somewhat indignantly. "They are a wonderful deep gray; almost black.". "Is that so?" was the somewhat indifferent reply. "Then she has the same color of eyes as her cousin. I know that she has wonderful deep gray eyeswonderful eyes." This last was very

"Not at all, stupid," said Jimmie, vexed at so much stupidity. "Her cousin's eyes are blue. I'll be blessed if you ever observe anything." Jimmie himself was not observing anything, but was sitting with his gaze fixed on the hearth of the flames and his mind lost in a happy reverie. He did: not see his companion look up with a quick terror in his eyes and a face drawn with emotion. Nor did he hear a question addressed to him. Indeed, Walcot's voice was very thick, and he hardly knew himself whether he had spoken the question aloud or merely in his anguish voiced it to himself. "Then you are engaged to Kate Preston?" he finally managed to say, loud enough to make his companion hear. "Certainly," said Jimmie, in astonishment. "Whom did you think I was engaged to-certainly not to Annie Preston? "I didn't know," said Walcot, weakly. "So your mind reading wasn't so good, after all!" exclaimed Jimmie, in triumph. "Well, I must be going-so long!" And he was gone. For a long time Walcot sat before the fire, though his cigar went out unnoticed and was not relit. Then he slowly walked to his desk and took out a letter, addressed in his own firm handwriting. Opening it, he stood in front of the fire and read it through twice. It was a proposal of marriage, simple, straightforward and winning in its declaration of great love. The letter fluttered first to the fire and the envelope followed it, Walcot standing quietly to watch them burn. One might have read the address on the envelope, even after it was caught by the flames, and that address was:

excessive rates of fare. Where with honest and capable management a fare of two cents might pay all expenses and interest on the cost of the plant, as in Glasgow and in various other foreign cities, five cents has to be charged, as in Detroit.

The city grants the franchise for tothing, and then the citisens are taxed to pay dividends upon it at a high valuation. A few men make their time the tariff on foreign steel was $7.84 per ton and our American manu-$7.84 per ton and our American manu-facturers were thus enabled to add that amount to what they would otherwise amount to what they would otherwise charge were there free competition. And yet steel is made in this country as cheaply as it is made abroad. In 1897 congress reduced the tariff to $6.72 per ton, but even at this rate the product of the Carnegie mills, if all sold in this country, placed a tax on the rail-ways and other consumers of over $17. 000,000 per annum in excess of a fair price for the commodity. Thus for lib-eral party contributions in 1888 Mr. Carnegie was simply permitted indefinitely to levy a tax of $17,000,000 a year on the industries of the country.

Then there is lumber. A tariff of $2 per 1,000 feet is imposed, not so much as a source of revenue to the government as to enable lucky holders of pine lands to make vast fortunes. Two dol-lars per thousand is added to the price of all American produced lumber over what consumers would have to pay if benefit, by the politicians who sell their there were no interference for the benefit of the great lumber barons; and this is simply a tax on everyone who uses a board or occupies a house, purely for the benefit of a favored class. It is simply a franchise to private interests to tax the community. It is a very profitable thing and not difficult of accomplishment. All that is necessary is to secure the control of congress, and this is far nore easily done than would at first be supposed. It is accomplished by combination between a number of interests alike seeking special privileges. Thus the quinine people will control one or more members' votes, the steel men certain others, the lumber interests their quota, and so on all along the ine-sugar, tobacco, pulp, coal, beefevery interest having men in the house or senate whom they can depend on. 72 years. can well afford to.

In this way, by expending hundreds of thousands of dollars to secure the election of friendly congressmen and senators, millions are reaped in return, and this is one of the ways in which great fortunes are rapidly made. Congress is full of representatives of private interests, and it comes about from money being so necessary a factor in politics. Particular interests put up the money for the candidate's campaign expenses and thus bind him with cord of personal obligation. It is to get rid of the necessity for using so much money in gaining nominations and elections that good citizens he country over are now addressing themselves, and it is this the primary election law is designed to cure.

Another means of making money at the expense of the people is practiced by great corporations in gaining control of the taxing power of the several states by specious campaign contributions, and then getting their own assessements placed at greatly disproportionate values as compared with the assessments of private citizens. Thus it is no secret that the railways of lichigan put up tens of thousands of their favor. Some of the members of the commission have even taken sides keys and a pair of pinchers with him. against the state, whose servants they are, in litigation pending to secure equal taxation. Still another method of amassing great wealth at the expense of the purblind citizen is in getting from ignorant or corrupt officials valuable franchises which can be turned into millions of dollars of profit. in which political power may be turned in which political power may be turned into hard cash.

One of these is by procuring from congress or a state legislature or a municipal common council the power to levy taxes upon one's neighbors. It is levy taxes upon one's neighbors. It is often done.

Our hypothetical railway now has $20,000,000 to pay interest or dividends upon, and to earn sufficient revenue for the purpose it is forced to charge excessive rates of fare. Where with honest and capable management a fare taxed for it.

Franchises would be less frequently granted if it were not for the corrupting use of money in politics. The whole broad of franchise seekers are a continual corrupting influence.

It must never be lost sight of that a franchise is simply a privilege granted to tax the public for private benefit.

In all these ways, and others, there is an army of private interests looking to the rapid making of fortunes by manipulating the machinery of government. How it may be checked is the great problem before the American people today. It must be checked, or the whole system of popular government will prove a failure. And this is what the movement for direct nominations or primary elections means. It is opposed by the trusts, by the railways, by all holding franchises to tax the people for their own services and by a class of Republican newspapers which would sell their very souls for the annual tax printing. Ai true citizens are earnestly for it.
